(e) Caſaubon. not. ad Spartian. vit. Adriani c. 5. p. m. 47.

grounds himſelf upon the Emperor Hadrian's abandoning three Provinces, and Diocletian's ſtreightening the bounds of the Empire. Diocletianus ——— auguſti præceptum, Hadrianique exemplum ſecutus, imperii fines à meridie ſupra Ægyptum arctavit: auctor Procopius in Perſicis. Idem Imperator reliquit & Daciam à Trajano conſtitutam, ſublato exercitu & provincialibus; deſperans eam poſſe retineri, Vapiſcus ait. But Valeſius (g) ſhews a great difference betwixt what theſe Emperors and Jovian did. The latter gave up ſome Provinces by a Treaty of Peace, and as it were by way of Ranſom; the others Voluntarily abandoned a Country, the keeping of which was too chargeable. This was to follow the Maxims of Prudence, and not like Jovian to ſubmit to the Laws of the Conqueror. And therefore there was no Reaſon for Cenſuring Marcellinus's Words, as Caſaubon, Lindenbrog (h), and (i) Coqueus have done; and 'tis certain that Jovian introduced a Novelty. 'Tis generally agreed (k) that it was Scandalous: the Chriſtians and Heathens did not Diſpute on that Point; but only differ'd with Relation to this Emperor's Juſtification. The Chriſtians endeavoured to clear him, and the Heathens to condemn him. We have ſeen (l) above that a Heathen Hiſtorian Cenſures him, not for conſenting to the Treaty of Peace, but for obſerving the Conditions of it. This is an unjuſt, and abominable Cenſure. If neceſſity obliged him to make a Peace, as this Author and all others Acknowledge, he ought to be excuſed; for neceſſity has no Law.

Neceſſitas (m), cujus curſus tranſverſi impetum
Volvunt multi effugere, pauci potuerunt.

And when once he is juſtified upon this Point, the reſt goes off of it ſelf. The exact Obſervation of a Treaty of Peace ſolemnly Sworn, deſerves not to be Condemned. Ammianus Marcellinus is a more dangerous Cenſurer than Eutropius; he was an Eye-Witneſs, and relates things in ſuch a manner, as to give to underſtand (n) that Jovian unneceſſarily Ingaged himſelf in that neceſſity, and that the Confuſion the Perſians had reduced him to, was not ſo great, but that it had been better to have tried the Fortune of the War, than to accept theſe Ignominious Conditions. He accuſes him of down-right Cowardiſe, and of lending an Ear to the Flatterers who Diſcouraged him. (o) Et cùm pugnam deciès exoptaret, ne bonum quidquam dederetur: adulatorum globus inſtabat timido Principi, Procopii metuendum ſuſpirans nomen, eumque affirmans, niſi rediret, cognito Juliani interitu, cum intacto milite quem regebat, novas res nullo renitente facilè moliturum. Hac perniciosa verborum ille aſſiduitate humia ſuccenſus, ſine cunctatione tradidit omnia quæ petebantur. Agathias (p) charges him plainly with the ſame weakneſs. The Chriſtians, to excuſe Jovian, carefully obſerved, that Julian the Apoſtate was the principal Cauſe of all this Misfortune, ſince his Raſhneſs was ſo great, as to Burn all the Veſſels, that ſhould have ſerved to Tranſport the Proviſions; for hence proceeded that horrible ſcarcity, which obliged Jovian to a ſhameful Capitulation. (q) Cujus vanis deditus oraculis erat, (Julianus) quando ſpretus ſecuritate victoriæ naves quibus victus neceſſarius portabatur, incendit. Deinde ferendæ inſtans immodicis auſibus & mox merito temeritatis exceſſu, in locis hoſtilibus egenum reliquit exercitum, ut aliter inde non poſſet evadi, niſi contra illud auſi eum Dei Termini, de quo ſuperiore libro diximus, Romani imperii termini moverentur. Ceſſit enim Terminus deus neceſſitati, qui non cederat Jovi (r). You ſee in theſe Words of St. Auſtin all the Fault laid upon Julian, and moreover a Jeſt upon the Heathen Religion, in that the Immoveability of the God Terminus (ſ) had proved falſe upon that Occaſion. The Pagans might have ſaid, that it was no wonder that this Deity had not Acted in favour of Jovian, as being a Rebel againſt the Gods of Rome; but that Subterfuge might eaſily have been refuted: for it would ſtill be true, that it was a Fallacious Pro-

(g) Valeſ. in Amm. Marcell. l. 25. c. 9. p. m. 430. 440.

(h) Lindenbr. in Amm. Marcell. ibid.

(i) Leonardus Coqueus in Auguſt. de civit Dei l. 4. c. 29.

(k) Poſt... pudendæ pacis ita fœdera. Amm. Marcell. l. 27. c. 12. See alſo Zoſimus l. 4. Socrates l. 3. c. 22. Zonaras, &c.

(l) In the Remark B. Letter g.

(m) Labeonius apud Macrobium Saturn. l. 2. c. 7.

(n) Amm. Marcell. l. 25. c. 7. p. 433.

(o) Id. ib. p. 434.

(p) Agathias l. 4.

(q) See the 2. Oration of Gregory Nazianzen againſt Julian the Apoſtate. See alſo Socrates l. 3. c. 22. p. 190.

(r) Auguſt. de civitate Dei, l. 5. c. 21. p. m. 554. See alſo l. 4. c. 29.

(ſ) See Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus l. 3. c. 92.

the Fathers of the Church have ſaid † concerning the Peace of Jovian. I add, that he was a very tall Man, (E) Zealous for Orthodoxy, but very much Addicted to Wine and Women. Thoſe are rather to be believed, who ſay he wanted neither Activity nor Prudence and Knowledge, than ſuch as make him Effeminate, * very Ignorant, and Stupid; for he ſhewed his Vigilance § in preventing the Tumults and Competitions, which he feared the News of his Election might raiſe in the Weſtern Provinces of the Empire. The Meaſures he took for it were well Concerted, tho' he could not hinder the true News of the ill condition of the Eaſt from coming before (F) the falſe News he ordered to be ſpread every where, to Conceal the Advantages obtained by the Perſians. His Father who ‖ had left the Service in order to live quietly in his Houſe, had not time to riſe to the Dignity which was deſigned for him; he Died before Jovian ¶ had Executed his Reſolution of making him his Colleague

† See the Remark D.

* See the Remark B. towards the end.

§ See Ammianus Marcellin. l. 25. c. 5.

‖ Amm. Marcell. l. 25. c. 5.

¶ See Valeſius in Marcell. l. 25. c. ult.

(c) Eutropius ubi ſupra. See alſo Ammianus Marcellinus ubi ſupra p. 443.

(d) Alii odore cubiculi, quod ex recenti tectorio calcis, grave quieſcentibus erat: quidam nimierate primarum, quas gravi frigore adoleri mulcas juſſerat. Id. Eutrop. ib. See alſo Amm. Marcellin. ibid.

(e) See Valeſius in Amm. Marcell. ib.

(f) Sozomen. Hiſt. Eccleſ. l. 6. c. 6.

(g) Suidas ubi ſupra.

(h) When he ſet Fire to the City of Perſepolis. See Quintus Curtius l. 5. c. 7.

(i) See the Remark B. of the Diſſertation concerning Libels at the end of this Dictionary.

(k) Amm. Marcell. ubi ſupra c. & p. 436.

(l) Ib. id, p. 437.

(m) Fama malum qua non aliud velocius ullum Mobilitate viget, viresque adquirit eundo. Virgil. Æn. l. 4. v. 174.

ſiſſe, which the Romans pretended the God Terminus had made, that the Boundaries of the Empire ſhould never be leſſened. Now this is what St. Auſtin deſign'd to prove againſt the Heathens.

Note by the bye, how prudent the Conduct of the Antient Romans was: They deſign'd to make Conqueſts; and there is nothing more neceſſary for ſuch a Deſign, than not to reſtore by the Concluſion of a Peace, what was got in time of War: for in vain you take Towns and Provinces, you will never be the greater for it, if you are obliged to reſtore them by a Peace. The Romans, to ſucceed in the Project of forming a vaſt Empire, Spurred their Generals by Motives of Glory, and Scruples of Religion, to gain new Countries, and not to loſe the Conqueſts they had once made. They never granted a Triumph (t) to ſuch as did no more than Recover what the Enemy had taken, and they gave out, that it was Violating the Religion of the God Terminus, and his Sacred Auſpices (v) to yield up the Frontiers of their Territories. The Turks Propoſing to make vaſt Conqueſts, and to lay the Foundation of a great Empire, have more particularly brought in Religion into that deſign; for they ſaid that it did not permit 'em to Reſtore a Town, wherein there was a Moſque, to its firſt Poſſeſſors. For which Reaſon they made great haſte to Build a Moſque in their new Conqueſts. This was to ingage themſelves to keep 'em in making Peace, and to oblige the Governours of a Town to defend themſelves by a Principle of Conſcience, with extraordinary Obſtinacy (w). But they have lately experienced the Uſeleſneſs of this nice Policy. The Treaty of Carlowitz Concluded in the year 1698. has expoſed them to the ſame Raillery, that St. Auſtin made uſe of againſt the Roman God Terminus, who gave way to neceſſity under Jovian the Emperor. The Sultan has been obliged to yield up abundance of Places with Moſques in them, to the Chriſtian Princes. In vain 'twas repreſented to him that this was offending againſt the Maxims of his Religion; there was a neceſſity of doing it, and of two Evils, the leaſt was to be choſen.

(t) See the Remark B. Lester a.

(v) See St. Auguſtin de civit. Dei l. 4. c. 29.

(w) The preſent State of the Ottoman Empire B. 2. c. 3.

(E) A very tall Man, Zealous for Orthodoxy, but very much addicted to Wine and Women.] (x) Incedebat motu corporis gravi, vultu latiſſimo, oculis cæſiis, vaſta proceritate & ardua, adeo ut diu nullum indumentum regium ad menſuram ejus aptum inveniretur. Et amulari malebat Conſtantium, agens ſeria quædam aliquoties poſt meridiem: jocarique palam cum proximis adſuetus. Chriſtianæ legis idem ſtudioſus, & nonnunquam honoriſicus, mediocriter eruditus, magiſque benivolus, & perpenſius, ut apparebat ex paucis quos promoverat, judices electurus: edax tamen, & vino venereique indulgens: quæ vitia imperiali verecundia forſitan correniſſet. Zonoras, who was a Chriſtian and a Monk, took from Ammianus Marcellinus the beſt part of this Character, ſpeaking of this Emperor. Ὅμως Ἰοβιανὸς, ſays he, Εὐσεβὴς ἦν περὶ τὸ δόγμα τῆς ἀναβαπτίσεως. οἶνῳ δ' ἔτυπτο καὶ ἀφροδισίοις καὶ τῶν εἰς ταῦτα ἀναλισκομένων ἐδεῖτο, καὶ γαμετὴν ἐκ Δακίας ἔσχε. Jovianus quidem religioſus fuit erga Chriſtianam fidem, & benevolus. Vino tamen, venereique indulgens. Procerus ſtatura, nec litterarum expers. Here then you ſee an Emperor very Religious as to his Opinions, but a great Drunkard, and a Whoremonger. He gave two Proofs of his Zeal for the Goſpel, before he Aſcended the Throne; for in the firſt place, he ſhew'd himſelf very ready to renounce his Poſt, rather than his (a) Religion, when Julian commanded the Officers of his Troops to Embrace Paganiſm, or to Reſign their Employments. In the ſecond place he would not (b) accept of the Empire, till having Declared that he was a Chriſtian, and that he would not Command Heathens, the Soldiers had declared that they were Chriſtians. He had then the power of Renouncing for the love of God, not only a ſmall Imployment, but alſo the greateſt Dignity, that was then in the World. He was capable of preferring his Religion before the Roman Empire; but his Conſcience, which was ſo nice in this Reſpect, could not move him to leave off Drinking and Women. What an odd thing is this! What a Combination of good and evil in the ſame Man! There are in all Ages many who leave their Country for their Religion, their Eſtates, their Imployments, and their Friends and Relations, who yet can't bring themſelves to Renounce Venus and Bacchus. Never believe that Jovian's Orthodoxy was imperfect; but be perſuaded that he very well knew, that Drunkenneſs and Lewdneſs are forbidden by God, and that the ſame Religion which Condemned the Heathen Idolatry, Condemned Drunkenneſs and the Love of Women. Note, that he was as great an Eater as he was a Drinker; and it has been ſaid, that he Died of Eating too much. (c) Multi exanimatum opinantur nimia eruditate: inter cænandum enim epulis inhalſerat. Other Reaſons of his Death (d) were Alledged, viz. the Vapour of a Chamber over-heated, Poyſon, (e) &c. But this was Alledged by the Chriſtians themſelves. (f) Ἐκκαιόμενον, ὡς ἀπεῖπον, ὑπὸ τῶν λίθων ἀναθυμιάσεως, ἢ ὑπὸ τῆς ὀσμῆς τῶν νεοτοίχων. Obiit ſive quod intemperantius, ut quidam ajunt, cænaverat, ſeu prægravi odore cubiculi. Have you obſerved Marcellinus's Conjecture? He ſays, that Jovian would perhaps have Corrected by the conſideration of his Imperial Dignity, his Intemperance and Wantonneſs. This is a judicious Thought, tho' conſidering things in groſs, and according to experience, the Sovereign Power does not ſeem to be a good School of Sobriety and Continence for ſuch as Naturally love Senſual Pleaſures: on the contrary, it ſeems much more proper to increaſe the Diſeaſe than to cure it, the means of Satisfying ones Pleaſures, being greater and more numerous. But if it be true, that exceſs in Eating was the Death of Jovian, and if what we Read in Suidas be not Fabulous, Marcellinus's Conjecture is very doubtful. Suidas (g) Relates, that Jovian at the inſtigation of his Wife, cauſed a very fine Temple to be Burnt, which Hadrian had Conſecrated to Trajan, and the Library which the Emperor Julian had ſet up in it. He adds that Jovian's Concubines put Fire to it, and Laughed at it. This Action is very much like the Debauchery of Alexander (h) and Thais the Curtezan.

(x) Amm. Marcell. l. 25. ſub fin. p. m. 443.

(a) Socrat. l. 3. c. 22.

(b) Id. ib.

(F) From coming before the falſe News he ordered to be ſpread every where.] 'Tis one of the moſt neceſſary Artifices of Policy to deceive (i) the People with falſe Relations, when there is no good News to tell them. 'Tis a difficult thing, I confeſs, to ſtop the Courſe of bad News, when it is but too true; but one muſt do what can be done, and Jovian did not forget that Stratagem. (k) Juſſum eſt autem ad implenda hæc perrecturis, extollere ſeriem geſtorum in melius, & rumores quaquà irent verbis diffundere, continentibus procinctum Parthicum exitu proſpero terminatum—(l) Hos tabellarios fama prægrediens, index triſtiorum caſuum velociſſima, per Provincias volitabat & gentes; maximèque omnium Niſibenos acerbo dolore perculſit, cùm urbem Saporî deditam comperiſſent. Theſe Words of Marcellinus are Remarkable, fama index triſtiorum caſuum velociſſima; They inſinuate that Fame never flies ſo ſwift, as when it has unlucky things to Relate; and therefore it deſerves with greater Reaſon to be Characterized (m) as it has been.

(A) A

segue in the Conſulſhip. This Dignity was Conferred ξ on a Child, viz. Varronian the Son of Jovian and of Charis † the Daughter of Lucillian. Jovian's Empire was very ſhort; for it laſted but eight Months.

IPRES or Ypres, an Epiſcopal Town in the Earldom of Flanders, had its Name from a River that runs through it. It was at firſt but a Caſtle. The Normans having deſtroy'd it, Earl Baudouin the ſecond of the Name, ordered it to be Repaired in the Year 880. Earl Arnold Fortified it in 901. and Earl Baudouin III. enlarged it many Years after. New Additions were made to it from time to time; ſo that in the Year 1473. the Town of Ipres included within its Walls 1173. Meaſures, each whereof was 14 Geometrical Feet. It was Beſieged by the Inhabitants of Ghent, and by the Engliſh, in the Year 1373. nine Weeks together. Its Stone-Walls were built in the Year 1388. by the conſent of Philip the Bold *. The Manufactures and Dying of Wool were in good Perfection there at the end of the XII*th.* Century, as appears by the Teſtimony of Guilelmus Brito ‡. The French took it in the Year 1648, and loſt it in the Year following. They retook it in 1658, and reſtored it to the Spaniards by the Pyrenean Treaty. They retook it once more in the Year 1678, and the Spaniards gave it up to 'em by the Treaty of Peace concluded at Nimegen the ſame Year. The Diſputes of Janſeniſm have render'd the Name of Ipres famous; Janſenius being ſcarce ever mentioned without obſerving that he was Biſhop of that Town. The Relation betwixt that Town and the Controverſies of the Janſeniſts with the Jeſuits, is by this means known to all the World; and hence doubtleſs came that Witty Fancy of Forging a pretended (A) Letter of the French King to Mr. Arnauld, Dated from the Camp before Ipres in 1678. Many Copies of this Letter were handed about; and I remember that many Perſons, who were thought to have a very good Judgment, found it Ingenious: It was aſcribed to Mr. Roſe Secretary of the Cabinet. I don't believe it has been Printed, and therefore I am willing to Publiſh it.

IRNERIUS † a German Civilian, lived in the XII*th.* Century. He is ſaid to be the firſt, that renewed the Profeſſion of the Roman Law, interrupted ever ſince the Invaſion of the Barbarians. He had a great Intereſt in Italy with the Princeſs Mathild, and having perſuaded the Emperor Lotharius to order the Code and Digeſts to be Read in the Schools, he was the firſt that exerciſed that Profeſſion in Italy. His Method was to Reconcile the Anſwers of the Civilians with the Laws, that ſeemed contrary to one another. He Died about (A) the Year 1190. and was Buried at Bologna ‖ where he had been Profeſſor. The thing is carried farther; for 'tis ſaid that Lotharius Abroξ Amm. Marcell. lib. c. 10.

† Id. ib. c. 8. p. m. 436.

* Taken from Valerius Andreas in Topographia Belgica p. 43. 44.

‡ Ipra coloradis gens prudentiſſima lanis. Will. Britto Philippid. l. 2.

† He is call'd Wernerus, or Guarnerius.

‖ Ex Forſtero Hiſt. Juris Civil. Rom. l. 3. c. 6.

(A) A pretended Letter of the French King to Mr. Arnauld.] Here it is according to the Copy I took of it, at the time it went about as a Piece intirely new.

'A Letter of the King to Mr. Arnauld about the Siege of Ipres.

'MOnſieur Arnauld, We are going to begin a Siege, in which you may do us much Service with your Intereſt. I have five Propoſitions to make to the Gentlemen of Ipres. The firſt is, that I am come into Flanders to do good to every Body. The ſecond that the Command I give 'em to ſurrender the Town, is not impoſſible. The third, that it is in their Power to Merit or not Merit my Favour. The fourth, that I have Forces with me more than ſufficient to make 'em Obey my Orders; and the fifth, That tho' they be never ſo much Neceſſitated to ſurrender themſelves, they will do it with an entire Liberty. The Queſtion is therefore to make 'em Sign theſe five Propoſitions, which include all the Treaty of Grace, that I deſign to ſhow 'em. I don't think, that they can Elude my Orders by the diſtinction de Jure, and de Facto. As to the Right, I have taken all along ſo many Towns, that time alone might ſerve me for a Preſcription in the Low-Countries, were I deſtitute of ſo many other undiſputable Rights. They can therefore only inſiſt upon the Fact, and I will convince 'em of this by a Train of thirty Cannon, to which I defy 'em to Anſwer effectually; for they will pierce through all Difficulties. By this you may judge that I ſhall not be ſo long, in making them Sign my five Propoſitions, as you have been in ſigning thoſe of the Pope. Wherefore I Order you to Summon the Ban and Arriereban of the Janſeniſts, and to leave Paris immediately to come to the Head of them, in order to Sing Te Deum, upon the Tomb of Janſenius as a Thankſgiving to God, for the happy Succeſs of my five Propoſitions. You may for a Bon-fire bring a hundred Copies of the Miroir de la pieté Chretienne, to caſt theſe good Flemings into a Holy Deſpair of ever belonging again to Spain. Afterwards you ſhall go into England to manage there the Lower Houſe, which is little inclined to a Peace. To Conclude, I like your Politicks, and more ſtill your Money, with which you uſe ſo Advantageouſly to perſuade People to what you have a Mind to. Hereby I am ſure we ſhall have a Peace with England and Spain, before you have it with the Jeſuits. At the Camp before Ipres the 17*th.* of March 1678.

(A) About the year 1190.] I can hardly believe that he lived till that time; for in the firſt Place Lotharius II. lived but till 1138. at moſt: which plainly ſhews that Forſterus has been ſomewhat unexact; for he ſays (a) that the Reſtoration of the Roman Law happened about the year 1150. Why then ſhould we think that he has been more exact in his Calculation about Irnerius's Death? In the ſecond Place (b) this is ſaid to have been done in the year 1133. Now who can believe that a thing of that Importance could be Executed by the Counſels of a Young Man? 'Tis a hundred times more Probable, that Irnerius was Succeſsful in his Counſels by reaſon of the great Authority he acquir'd by his Learning and Wiſdom; and therefore he muſt have been at leaſt 40 years of Age. From whence it follows, that if he had lived till the year 1190, he would have been near 100 years Old, and in that caſe Forſterus would be inexcuſable for not taking notice of ſo uncommon an Age. To which I add, that a Chancellor of the Emperor is always ſomewhat Elderly. Forſterus would be hard put to it, if one ſhould maintain, that Mathilde with whom he ſays Irnerius had ſuch an Intereſt, was that Counteſs, who was ſo liberal to the Popes, and who Died in the year 1115. or that Queen of Italy who died (c) in the year 1101. and who was the Wife of Conrad, the Son of the Emperor Henry IV. and the Daughter of Roger King of Sicily.

During the Diſpute that aroſe betwixt Doctor Calixtus, and Bertold Nihuſius, to know whether our Irnerius renewed the Study of the Law, by the Authority of the Counteſs Mathilde, or by that of the Emperor Lotharius II. the Univerſity of Bologna was Conſulted, and Anſwered in favour of Nihuſius. We find in their Anſwer, that 'tis a conſtant Tradition that Irnerius began to teach the Law of Bologna in the year 1128. This Tradition abrogated all other Laws, and ordered that Justinian's (B) Law should resume its ancient Authority at the Bar. The famous Calixtus, Professor of Divinty at Helmstadt, maintains [y], that this is false, and has been followed in this by the Learned Conringius, his Collegue. But Bertold Nihusius wrote for the contrary [z] Opinion, and rudely handled Doctor Calixtus. 'Tis certain that the latter had not Tradition on his side; and that it makes Irnerius (C) the first Restorer of the Roman Law. 'Tis said moreover, that 'twas he who moved the Emperor Lotharius, whose Chancellor he was, to introduce into the Universities the Creation of Doctors, and that he drew up the Form of it; from whence it came, that at that very time, Bulgarus, Hugolinus, Martinus, Pileus, and some others who began to interpret the Roman Laws, were promoted to their Doctor's Degree. It was at Bologna that these fine Ceremonies began; they were admitted by the other Universities, and proceeded from the Faculty of Law, to that of Divinity. 'Tis pretended, that the University of Paris having adopted this Custom, made use of it the first time in behalf of Peter Lombard, who was made Doctor of Divinity †.

(a) Incidit haec revocatio & reſtitutio Juris Civilis in annum Chriſti 1150. Forſterus, Hiſt. Juris Civil. l. 3. c. 6.

(b) See the following Remark.

(c) Mathias Theatr. p. m. 902.

ISAACITES *. This is the Name that is given to Rabbin Salomon Jarchi, in the Bibliotheca Rabbinica of Father Bartolocci. I may therefore put under this Head, what is wanting in the Article JARCHI. I shall therefore observe that the Sirname Rasci, which was given him, was composed of the Initial Letters of his Names ||, as we learn from Father Bartolocci ‡. He adds, that this Rabbin was born at Lunir (Y), a Town in the Province of Aquitain; but that some make him a Native of Troies in France, and place his Birth in the Year 1105. Isaacites began his Travels at Thirty Years of Age. He saw Italy, afterwards Greece, Jerusalem, and all Palestine, and then he went into Egypt, where he saw the Rabbin Maimonides. He proceeded into Persia, Tartary, and Muscovy, and other Northern Countries, and at last came into Germany, from whence he returned into his own Country. He spent Six Years in these Travels. He was married, and had Three Daughters, who were married to very Learned Rabbins, who wrote many Books. Some of his Commentaries upon the Scripture

[y] In libello de moralî Theologia.

* Consult the Preface to his Origo Juris Germanici, printed in 1643.

[z] See the Book which he entitled, Irnerius, published in 1642.

† Mathias, Theatr. historic. in vita Lotharii II.

* Constantin l'Empereur. not. in itinerar. Benjam. Tudel. pag. 149. says, that Solomon Jarchi was call'd Isaacides, because he was the Son of Rabbin Isaac.

‖ R. Solomon Isaacites.

‡ Bartol. Bibl. Rabbinica, part. 4. pag. 378.

is supported by the Inscription of Irnerius's Picture, which amongst many others, is to be seen in the College of Bologna: Irnerius omnium primus leges commentatus est anno MCXXVIII. Nicolas Alidosi in the Preface of his Book Intituled, Li Dottori Bolognesi di legge Canonica è Civile, affirms, that this Doctor teaching Philosophy at Bologna, received Orders from the Emperor Lotharius II. to teach the Law, and that he began to do it about the year 1128. However there is some Ground to believe, that he did it of his own Motion, some years together, and that he was not Authoriz'd by the Emperor's Order (d) till the year 1137. 'Tis certain he Died before the year 1150, and not in 1190, for 'tis known (e) that James de Porta Ravegnana was Irnerius's Successor in his Professorship of the Civil Law, and that he taught it Publickly at Bologna in the year 1150. See the Author whom I quote (f).

(d) See Nihusius in Irnerio pag. 13.

(e) Otto Morena in Chronologia Laudensi apud Baronium, ad ann. 1158.

(f) Nihusius in Irnerio, where he has inserted the whole Answer of the University of Bologna.

(B) Ordered that Justinian's Law.] Here is what Mr. Heiss says of it in his History of the Empire under the year 1133. This Solemnity being over, the Emperor returned into Germany, where by the Advice of one Werner Ursperg, otherwise Irnerius (g) who was very well Skilled in the Civil Law, he Ordered that Justice should be done in the Empire according to the Digests or Code, which had been out of use for five or six hundred years: so that this Law was introduced into Italy and Germany, and afterwards into France and Spain, where the People before made use of their own Particular Laws and Customs. (h) Calvisius, without mentioning our Werner, says under the year 1137. That Lotharius found in Apulia the Roman Laws, that he gave 'em to the Pisans, and Ordered they should be explained, and put into practice in the Tribunals of the Empire. He adds that this Book was afterwards carried into the Library of Florence. Another Historian (i) says, this happened when that Emperor marched against Roger King of Sicily, about the Year 1135, and observes, that the Manuscript of the Roman-Laws found in Apulia, needing an Interpreter, Irnerius was commissioned for that purpose.

(g) The Dutch Edition says Irnervis.

(h) Antea homines Jure incerto utebantur, Jure nempe Romanorum corrupto, Jure item Longobardico & lege Salica. Christ. Mathias Theat. who quotes

(C) First Restorer of the Roman Law.] This is what an Author before cited (k) says of him. Irnerius primus legibus glossas apposuit, & suo exemplo cæteris illuminandi juris exemplum dedit: unde LUCERNA JURIS dictus fuit, & instaurator legum Romanarum cognominatus. Many Writers say the same thing.

(k) Antea hominum Jure incerto utebantur, Jure nempe Romanorum corrupto, Jure item Longobardico & lege Salica. Christ. Mathias Theat. who quotes histor. pag. 921. (i) Christ. Mathias, ib. pag. 920. Chrytheus in Chronol. pag. 309. Mathias ubi supra,

(Y) Was born at Lunir, a Town of the Province of Aquitain.] Bartolocci (a) adds, that it is a Town in which there were Jews, as St. Gregory witnesses in the 21st. Epistle of the 3d. Book. All this is full of Faults; for in the first Place he should have said Lunel, and not Lunir. Secondly, Lunel is not in the Province of Aquitain. 3. Pope Gregory does not speak of Lunel, or Lunir, but of Luna, an Episcopal See in Italy. Here's another Blunder. (c) Ibidem (that is in the Catena Cabalæ) Rabbi Joseph Ischijà Auctor dicit quod natus sit anno ab Orbe condito—— 4865. Chr. 1105. in Urbe Trevis, seu Trecis in Gallia in provincia Narbonensi, vel in Linguadoca. Which is to pretend, that the Town of Troies is in Languedoc, than which nothing can be more ridiculous. Note, that according to some Rabbins, our Isaacites died in 1105; but we have seen, that according to some other Authors, this was the Year of his Birth. Chronological Exactness was never the Talent of the Jewish Writers; and 'tis a strange thing they have so ill fixed the Time of their most famous Doctors. Benjamin Tudelensis (e), who died in the Year 1173, highly praises the Jews of Lunel, and names some of their Learned Men, and amongst other Rabbi Solomon. Some say, that he means (f) Solomon Jarchi; and if you object, that this Solomon died in the Year 1105, they'll answer, that Benjamin Tudelensis does not pretend that all the Doctors he mentions, speaking of what he saw at Lunel, were alive. I don't like this Solution. It seems plain to me, that he speaks of a Solomon that was then alive: We must therefore suppose either that 'tis a mistake to place the Death of Solomon Jarchi in the Year 1105, or that Solomon mention'd by Benjamin Tudelensis, is not our Isaacites. I could easily believe, that Constantin l'Empereur is mistaken, when he says, that Benjamin meant Solomon Jarchi. If he had spoke of a Doctor so famous as this was, he would have done it with great Praises, which he does not. If you would have an instance of the bad Chronology of the Jewish Authors, you need only consider, that the same (g) Book, which makes Rabbi Solomon Isaacites to be born in the Year 1105, affirms that Maimonides was born in Spain, in the Year 1135, and that these two Rabbins had an Interview in Egypt, though Solomon did not go thither till he was about Thirty Two Years old (h). Note, that some (i) maintain, that Rabbi Solomon Isaacites has not the Sirname of Jarchi in the Jewish Books, and that it would be a difficult thing to find the Time, the Subject, and occasion of that false Sirname, and that the Jews laugh at the Christian Authors for using it.

(a) Bartol. Bibliotb. Rabbin. parte 4. pag. 378.

(c) Id. ib.

(e) Benjamin. Tudel. itiner. pag. 6.

(f) Const. l'Empereur notis in itinerar. Benjam. Tudel. pag. 149.

(g) Catena Cabalæ. See Bartolocci ubi supra pag. 378.

(h) See Bartolocci ibid.

(i) Andreas Acoluthus in tractatu de aquis amaris maledictionem inferentibus, pag. 3.

(Z) Some

ture (Z) have been translated into Latin by some Christians. 'Tis said, that he was well skilled in Physick and Astrology, and in many Languages, and that he died at Troies, being Seventy Five Years old. His Body was carried to Bohemia, and buried at Prague in the Year 1180 a.

YSE (Alexander D') Minister of Grenoble, and afterwards Professor of Divinity at Die in Dauphiné b, was a Natural Son in a Family —— of which * at present is James d'Yse de Saleon, Counsellor in the Parliament of Grenoble. This Minister wrote a Discourse for the Reunion of the Two Religions, in which he does not differ much from the Principles of the Roman Church †. I shall give (B) some Extracts of it. He would have been deposed for that Work, if the Circumstances of the Times had not obliged the Synod of that Province (B) to observe some Temper. The Protestants were satisfied * with the Declaration that M. d'Yse made before he died. The Law-Suit that was entered against him, on Account of the Money, which had been raised for the Vaudois, was not a Taken from Bartoloccii ib. & p. seq.

b Allard, Biblioth. de Dauphiné, p. 223, 224.

* See Allard published this in 1680.

† Ib. pag. 224.

* See the end of the Rem. B.

(Z) Some of his Commentaries —— have been translated into Latin by some Christians.] His Commentary upon Joel, and the Canticles, has been put into Latin by Genebrand. He published at Paris, in 1563, the Version of the Commentary upon Joel, and in 1570, that of the Commentary upon the Canticles. Arnaldus Pontacus is the Author of the Latin Translation (k) of the Commentaries upon Obadiah, Jonah, and Zephaniah. Henry Aquinas published the Commentaries upon Esther (l), with Notes, at Paris, in the Year 1622.

(k) Printed at Paris in the Year 1556. in Quarto.

(l) Taken from Bartoloccii supra, pag. 380. 381.

(A) I'll give some Extracts of it.] This Work is intituled, Propositions & moyens pour parvenir à la reunion des deux Religions en France. The Impression was finished the last of August, 1677. It contains 608 Pages in 4to, and is divided into two Parts. The Author inlarges in the first, upon Five Considerations, which tend to incline the Parties to mutual Abatements, and the Second gives a long Catalogue of the Articles which they might agree in.

(m) He cites (n) a Lutheran, who maintain'd that the Calvinists fight with a Shadow, when they confute a local Presence of JESUS CHRIST, and a natural Manducation in the Lord's Supper. He cites another (o), who denies the same Presence and Manducation, and maintains, that the Body of JESUS CHRIST enters into the Mouth, but not into the Stomach. This Lutheran confesses, that the Calvinists receive the Saving Fruit of the Sacrament, provided they be morally in an invincible Ignorance of their Errors, but not if they continue in them against their Conscience, and with Obstinacy. Mr. d'Yse makes many Reflections upon the pacifical Method of Father Maimbourg, and upon this Objection, viz. that it follows from the Doctrine of the Calvinists, that all the Christians, who have not followed Peter Valdo, John Hus, &c. are damned. His Answers are almost the same with those of Mr. Jurieu (q), both with respect to the Expedients of Salvation, afforded to many Persons, who inwardly renounced their Errors, and with respect to the Consequence that is drawn in Favour of those, who inwardly rejecting the false Doctrines of Popery, remain still in its Communion. To which purpose he speaks of the Permission granted to Naaman, and of a National Synod held at Paris in the Year 1559, which forbids to follow ones Master into the Popish Church, tho' one does not bend the Knee, and yet declares, that those may be tolerated, who like Naaman and the Duke of Saxony, publickly express, 'that they will not prostitute and defile 'themselves with the Idolatries, which are 'committed in the Temples they frequent (r). He says, that according to the Reformed, the Universal Church cannot err so far as to overthrow the Articles of Faith that are absolutely necessary to Salvation, and that if the thing be well considered, it will be found, that the Roman Catholicks, whatever Noise they make about it, ascribe a lesser Infallibility to the Church, than the Protestants; for, says he, Cardinal Richelieu, Book 2. cap. 2. insinuates, that the Universal Church may err in Fundamental Points. He imputes to some Protestant Divines an Error which he calls a Fundamental one, which is not to receive St. John's Revelation, as a Canonical Book, and he confesses, that the Primitive Church did not receive it as Canonical. 'Tis true, he pretends, that that Church erred out of Ignorance, and not knowing the Truth, but not out of Obstinacy. The Church according to that Cardinal, has been ignorant of some Truths, which She came to know in Time, and defined afterwards as Points of Faith. The Author adds, that in the References of the second Session of the Council of Trent, this Question is to be read, 'Whether General Councils 'lawfully assembled, may err in Points of Faith. The Answer was, 'Tis a doubtful Thing. Touching again upon this in the 441st. Page, he says, that several Doctors are there cited for the affirmative, and others for the Negative. He had said (s) before, that the Councils of Latran in 1180, and 1215, and some others, have been held pro Ecclesiâ reformanda in fide & moribus. (t) He observes, that the Monks promising, according to the Roman Pontifical, to observe a perpetual Continence, as far as humane Frailty will permit, 'tis a Proof that their Vow is conditional; so that when the Frailty of their Nature will not permit 'em to preserve their Continence, they may marry without breaking their Vow. (u) He boasts of alledging nothing that is condescending on the part of the Catholicks, but what is grounded on the Doctrine of Thomas Aquinas, and other grave Doctors, and that the Condescension he uses on the part of the Reformed, is grounded on what has been confest by Calvin and some other famous Writers. From whence he infers, that private Persons in both Communions, who would not submit to the like Condescensions, would be unreasonable. He produces hereupon the Praises that some Popes, and some illustrious Societies have bestowed upon Thomas Aquinas's Doctrine; and as for the Doctors, who have praised him, he refers us to a Book, intituled, Les Disputes du College de Sorbonne sur la Logique. He mentions also the Approbations given to Cardinal Richelieu's and the Bishop of Condom's Books, and proves, that Calvin, Thomas Aquinas, &c. have made the Concessions he speaks of. He shews, that Calvin, Rivet, and Du Can, held the Probability of the Doctrine of a Guardian Angel; and as for what concerns the Possibility of Celibacy, he cites the National Synod of Rochelle, 1571, which advises the Wives of Ecclesiasticks relapsed into Popery, to have no Commerce with them. That of Vitrai 1588, does not approve that a Man whose Wife is become Leprous, should marry another. They advise him to pray to God, and to contain himself during his Wife's Life.

(m) Propos. & moiens, pag. 145.

(n) Alb. Graweri c. 3. polemicæ fac.

(o) Tobias Wagner, Doctor of Divinity at Tubingen, Inquisit. Theolog. in acta henotica.

(p) See Page 526. of the Propositions & moiens.

(q) In his Systeme de l'Eglise.

(r) Propos. & moins, pag. 331.

(s) Ibid. pag. 220.

(t) Ibid. pag. 330.

(u) Ibid. pag. 379.

Tho' this Book was printed with the Consent of many considerable Persons, the Monks failed not to obtain, that the Copies of it should be carried to the Rolls of the Chatelet. They had seen some of them at a Binder's and they made a great Bustle about it. 'Tis at least a piece of News, which was written to me in the Year 1678, by a curious Person, who was well informed of what concerns the Republick of Learning.

I make no doubt, that the Fragments I have inserted in this Place, will be acceptable to the Readers, because it is a Book but little known, and almost impossible to come by.

(B) Obliged the Synod of that Province to observe some Temper.] The D'Yse, 'who had been a Minister at Grenoble, and who was actually Professor of 'Divinity at Die, writ a Treatise upon this Subject, 'and imagined he had found the means of a perfect 'Reconciliation. But his People had not the good 'Luck to please the Synod of this Province, which 'forbad him to publish or communicate it. D'Ize 'prepossest with the Flatteries of President de not attended with the ſad (C) and diſgraceful Conſequences, that a Catholick Writer has publiſhed. I learnt from a Letter which I received in 1678, that Mr. Cregut had publiſhed an Apology (D), in which he painted this Miniſter in very black Colours.

(b) Hist. de l'Edit de Nantes tom. 2. fueillet [illegible] pag. 1177.

'Rosiere

ISLEBIANS,

' Berchere, who filled him with Hopes of great
' Rewards, and mighty Things, would not believe
' the Synod. He made a Journey to Paris with ' many Recommendations from the Preſident to the ' chief Members of the Council. The Miniſters of ' the Place having had Notice of his Deſign, in-' deavoured to have a Sight of his Book, in order
' to diſcourage him from publiſhing it. They could ' obtain nothing. D'Yſe would not communicate it
' to them, but ſhewed it to the Biſhop of Condom.
' That piece could not pleaſe the Catholicks, be' cauſe the Author made 'em too condeſcending; and
' under other Expreſſions, kept moſt of the Articles
' of the Reformed Doctrine: ſo that he returned
' without any Approbation and Recompence; ha' ving ſcandalized his Brethren without gaining the ' good-will of their Enemies. Nay, he was like to ' be perſecuted for his good Intentions; but the Pre' ſident his Protector, ſpoke for him. As for the ' Synod, they durſt not meddle with him upon
' that Account, at a Time when it was believed
' the Court would be diſpleaſed with it.
' Without depoſing him therefore, a Treaty was ' made with him, by which he was ſuffered
' to enjoy his Profeſſor's Salary, but by way of Diſ-
' charge, he was deprived of the Functions. He di' ed ſome time after, and repaired the Fault he had ' committed on that occaſion, by a Declaration of his ' Sentiments, which was very edifying.

(C) Was not attended with the ſad and diſgraceful Conſequences which a Catholick Writer has publiſhed.] M. (c) Bernard affirmed, that when the Duke of Savoy made War with his Subjects of the Valleys of Piemont, the Reformed had raiſed a Sum of Six or ſeven hundred thouſand Livres, which D'Yſe had received, and diſtributed; that he did not well diſcharge that Adminiſtration; that he was proſecuted in the Chamber of Grenoble to bring him to an account; that the Conſiſtory, to put an end to the Noiſe that was made about it, were forced to depoſe him; that they made him Principal of the College of Die, and named four Miniſters to reviſe his Accounts. There's nothing true in all this, except this one Article, that D'Yſe had received the Money deſigned for the Relief of the Inhabitants of the Valleys, and that they took this Opportunity to bring him into Trouble, out of Reſentment and Revenge. You'll find the Sequel of this Affair in the Hiſtory of the Edict of Nantes. I ſhall only mention Three or Four Particulars out of it. (d) D'Yſe gave up his Accompts towards the end of the Year, 1656. Preſident Periſſol proſecuted him in the Year 1665. This Proſecution was carried on by Degrees to the Court made up of Proteſtant and Catholick Judges. D'Yſe had his Cauſe pleaded in the Court, and gained his Point. The Preſident, enraged at this Affront, proſecuted the Cauſe ſtill more violently, and his Menaces, which neither the Intreaties of his Colleagues, nor the Remonſtrances of the Conſiſtory, nor the Solicitations of all the Church, could put a ſtop to, obliged the Conſiſtory not to depoſe D'Yſe, but to ſend him to Die in Quality of Profeſſor of Divinity. He had already performed the Duties of that Place whilſt Cregut was forced by the Perſecution of the Biſhop, to leave his Profeſſorſhip. In the mean time the Cauſe was removed into the Court of Caſtres; and the Preſident incited as much as poſſible the Inhabitants of the Valleys to carry on the Action againſt him. The Conſiſtory made him give a new Account, to put an end to that Scandal; and they found but one Article, amounting ſcarce to a Denier per Livre of the whole Sum, which he could not well account for. But his Honeſty appeared, &c. The Words which I ſuppreſs, inform us, that he was only guilty of a little Negligence; which was well for him, and he ought to be accounted a happy Man for having failed only in that; for the handling of ſuch publick Gatherings is ſo dangerous an occaſion of ſtanning, that a wiſe Man ought never to engage in it, before he has made a frequent Trial of his Strength. The Cuſtody of this Money is perhaps more difficult than that of a Beauty. The Compariſon betwixt Money and Pitch, which is ſo common even among Countrymen, is a very good one; one can hardly handle that baleful Mettal, any more than Pitch, without ſoiling ones Fingers. There was a terrible out-cry (e) againſt the bad Management of the immenſe Sums (f), which were raiſed for the Vaudois; and I believe, that in all ſuch Caſes, there is, and there will be ſo occaſion to cry out; O how rare a thing it is to find a Man (g), who is not made of Iron with reſpect to that Loadſtone. We may ſeek him with Diogenes's Lanthorn, and if we deſign a Crown for him, we ſhall keep it long enough before we can find a Man that deſerves it.

(b) Regnum & diadema tutum
Deferens uni, propriamque laurum;
Quiſquis ingentes oculo irretorto
Spectat acervos.

(D) That Mr. Cregut had publiſhed an Apology in which he painted.] It fell into my Hands but a few Days ſince: The Title of it is: Apologia neceſſaria non minus quàm aquiſſima Antonii Cregutii, contra accuſationem impraviſam, inexpectatam & iniquam Friderici Spanhemii Profeſſoris Leydenſis. It was printed at Amſterdam, in the Year 1678, and contains 48 Pages, in Octavo. Mr. Cregut (i) ſhews, that after the Death of Stephen Blanc, who had been Profeſſor of Divinity at Die, the Academical Senate charged M. d'Yſe, the Miniſter of the Place, to fill the Vacancy of the deceaſed till the next Synod. M. d'Yſe did it. The Synod of the Year following convened at Die, choſe Antony (k) Cregut, Profeſſor of Divinity. This Choice was Conditional, and became definitive at the end of the Year, by the Judgment of the Synod of Pragelas. M. d'Yſe, who did the more earneſtly deſire that Place, becauſe he had diſcharged the Duties of it for ſome time, thwarted as much as poſſible the Election of another; but not ſucceeding, he grew extreamly jealous of Mr. Cregut, and ſought all imaginable Means to prejudice him, tho' he always pretended to be his Friend. He contributed by his Intrigues to put a ſtop at Geneva, to the Impreſſion of a (l) Latin Book of Mr. Gregut, under Pretence, that the Doctrine of it was falſe, and very dangerous. The Author of it deſired, that the Examination of his Book ſhould be made only by the Profeſſors of Geneva, that the whole matter might be tranſacted with leſs Noiſe, and more Judgment and Expedition; but his Demand was rejected, and his Work was examin'd in the Aſſembly of all the Miniſters. He expected no good from it, and remembred the Complaint of the Emperor Hadrian. ' The Multitude of Phy-
' ſicians has deſtroy'd me. Turba medicorum me perdidit. They condemned two or three of his Doctrines: this Condemnation was communicated by his Adverſary to the Miniſters of (a) Greſivaudan aſſembled in a Body, and from that time, Prejudices grew ſo violent againſt the Author, that he was threatned with Depoſition the next Synod, which was to be held at Die. Mr. d'Yſe not doubting that the Quality of Moderator of that Synod, would powerfully inable him to execute his Reſolutions, deſired to obtain it, and actually did. The firſt Acculation, concern'd the Aſſertions about Grace, which M. Cregut had publiſhed. He offer'd his Reaſons, and thought he had nothing to fear, when he ſaw the end of that firſt Proceeding; but he was miſtaken; for ſome Days after M. d'Yſe having declar'd to the Synod, that the Miniſters of Geneva had cenſured ſome Articles of the Revelator Arcanorum of M. Cregut, put ſome Queſtions to the Author about the Doctrine of the Imputation of Adam's Sin. M. Cregut was going to explain that matter; but he was preſently interrupted, upon Pretence, that there were ſome other Affairs which could not be put off. He waited for another Opportunity to explain himſelf in the following Seſſions, in caſe that Diſpute ſhould be ſet on foot again; but he waited in Vain. M. d'Yſe plaid his part ſo maliciouſly, that he got his Adverſary condemn'd, of the Synodal Province of Dauphine, for the without

(c) Bernard, explication de l'Edit de Nantes apud hiſt. de l'Edit de Nantes ubi ſupra, T. 11. pag. 60. ann. 1666.

(d) Hiſt. de l'Edit. de Nantes ubi ſupra, pag. 61.

(e) See Mr. Leti, critique ſur les lettres, part 2. pag. 108. & ſeq.

(f) The Author of the Hiſtory of the Edict of Nantes, denies that the Money raiſed in France, amounted to Six or Seven hundred thouſand Livres, as Bernard will have it. It was almoſt, ſays he, but the third part of all the ſeveral Sums, and all the Sums did not amount to Five hundred thirty thouſand Livres. M. Leti, ib. p. 110. ſays, they amounted to three Millions, and thoſe of Piemont to ſeven hundred fifty thouſand Livres.

(g) Abſtinens ducentis ad ſe cunctis pecunia. Horat. Od. 9. lib. 4.

(h) Id. Ode 2. lib. 2.

(i) Cregutus Apol. neceſſar. pag. 11. & ſeq.

(k) He was Miniſter at Montelimart.

(l) Intituled, Revelator arcanorum.

(a) A Country near Grenoble, and one of the Colloques Proteſtants

ISLEBIANS. Thus they are called, who embraced the Opinions of a Saxon Divine, named John Agricola, a Native of Islebia, and a Diſciple and Countryman of Martin Luther. I have ſpoke very largely † of this John Agricola. He taught for ſometime a very falſe Doctrine concerning the uſe of the Moſaical Law. He took the wrong way St. Paul's Diſpute againſt the Jews, and the oppoſition this great Apoſtle ſo often made betwixt the Oeconomy of Works, and the Oeconomy of Faith. Luther did ſo vigorouſly oppoſe the Errors of Agricola, that he forced him to recant. Every one may know, why the Name of Antinomians was given to the Followers of this Man. Their Opinions have not been faithfully repreſented by their Adverſaries; and there's no doubt but that Prateolus has much exaggerated (A) them. But this is nothing, if compared with (B) Garaſſe's Scurrility in his Account of the pretended Hereſies of the Iſlebians.

† See his Article.

ITA-

without giving him an Opportunity to plead his Cauſe. There was a famous Diſputation in the Philoſopy School. The Jeſuits of that Town, and many other Perſons of the Romiſh Clergy, were preſent at it, and it was very neceſſary that M. Cregut, as Rector of the Univerſity, ſhould be there. M. d'Iſſe took that Opportunity, drew up an Act of Condemnation, and got it approved at the end of the Synod. Part of the Miniſters were already gone, and the reſt were very deſirous to ſtay no longer. If the Abſence of ſome Members is favourable to thoſe who have an ill Deſign, the Diſpoſition of the reſt who deſire to go home, is ſo too; for being in haſte to finiſh what remains, every thing is carried on in a hurry. Thus you ſee how Innocence was oppreſs'd, as M. Cregut pretends. (b) Illo tempore (c) me abſente, inaudito, juſſo deputatis ſilentio, ſub finem Synodi, dum omnia tumultuario fiunt, Paſtoribus tunc vel abſentibus, vel abiturientibus Dixius ipſe bellum illum articulum non mihi, ſed ſibi ludibrium propinans, fabricavit, aſſumpto in tanto facinore ſuo Abbate Rainaudo, digno patella operculo. He adds, that they ordered Abundance of Copies of that Act to be made, to communicate them to all the Proteſtant World. (d) Verum illis non ſufficiebat calumnioſus articulus intra privatos parietes fabricatus ab inimicis, haud potuit ſatiari invidia malitioſa, niſi per totum Orbem Reformatum exemplaria illius articuli mitterentur, tam in Galliam quàm exteras nationes, Helvetiam, Germaniam, Hollandiam, &c. Pædagogis ſuis jugiter occupatis ut plura Apographa deſcriberent. In fine, he ſays, that his Book having been ſold, without any Alteration made in it, ruined the Trophies of his Enemy, and convicted him of having Extracted ſomething out of it, that manifeſted his Envy and Rathneſs. (e) Paulo poſt libro meo edito abſque vel apiculi immutatione, abortivus ac furtivus ille Dixii articulus cecidit coram meo Revelatore, ſicut Dagon coram arca fœderis. Et ne plura exempla proferam, unum Rev. Antiſtitis Eccleſiæ Bernenſis D. Hombrii erit mihi pro cunctis, dum eſſem Bernæ in illius Muſæo promere è ſua Bibliotheca meum Revelatorum Arcan. & Dixi prave & ſtolidè articulatum articulum urbi tritâ laborantem, & dixit, ſe contuliſſe cum locis Revelatoris, quem tunc præ manibus habebat, unde factæ etiam inter nos collationi non poterat fatis mirari ſuperem, virus & invidiam compilatoris. He ſays (f), that having explained in ſome Letters, the Senſe of his Propoſitions, and offered new Explications, if thoſe already publiſhed were not ſufficient, the Gentlemen of Geneva permitted the Impreſſion of the Revelator Arcanorum, and took off the Prohibition of Selling the Theſes maintained at Die. He is contented to mention in General; the great Trial above-mention'd (g); but he ſays that M. d'Iſſe, being ſhamefully expelled from the Church of Grenoble, was admitted again into that of Die. (h) Ex Eccleſia Gratianopolitana turpiſſimè ejectus —— Ut Dixius fuerat potius intruſus quam vocatus, ita detruſus fuit. Non inquiro de crimine quod objiciebatur, eſſet piaculare. Deus novit. Acta ſunt publicè in Parliamento litigata, quæ ad has uſque Oras pervenerunt —— Ille Maris & Naufragio ſervatus, Galli noſtri vulgo dicunt, d'un coup de vent ou de tempeſte, priſtinas ſedes recuperavit, in Portum Dienſem appellens ubi antea Miniſter fuerat, ibi cum ſuo Rainaudo, juvat meminiſſe laborum præteritorum.

I don't vouch for the Truth of theſe Matters of Fact, alleging them only as a Proof of my Text, viz. that M. Cregut has painted M. d'Iſſe in very black Colours.

(b) Cregut ubi ſupra, p. 24.

(c) That is, whilſt he was preſent at the publick Diſputes, as Rector of the Univerſity.

(d) Id. ib.

(e) Id. ib. pag. 27.

(f) Id. ib. pag. 30.

(g) In the Rem. C.

(h) Id. ib. page 30, 31.

(A) Prateolus has much exaggerated them.] He did not go to the Fountain Head, but only copied Staphylus, Hoſius, and Lindanus. What he copies from Staphylus, may be reduc'd to this (i), that according to John Agricola, the Law of God is altogether uſeleſs, that it is neither neceſſary before nor after our Juſtification, and that Men under the Goſpel are not obliged to good Works. What he takes from Lindanus, is much harſher: viz. that according to John Agricola, Men may be righteous againſt their Conſcience; and that an Adulterer, an Uſurer, a Fornicator, or any ſuch great Sinner ſhall be ſaved, provided he believe (k). Antinomi à Johanne Iſlebio Lutheri olim ac diſcipulo exorti. Hi dogma ſequuntur legibus divinis contrarium (ait Querela Lutheri) legem operum rejicientes, ſingunique homines contra conſcientiam juſtos eſſe. Aiunt enim, teſte Luthero lib. de Conciliis; ſi es Adulter, Scortator, Uſurarius, Avarus, aut aliis pollutus peccatis, ſi tantum credis, ſalvus es. Hactenus Lindanus. I can't believe this is a faithful Account of Agricola's Opinions.

(i) Prateolus, in Elencho Hæreticorum, voce Antinomi, p. m. 41. He ſays, Staphylus took this from Agricola's Notes upon the Goſpel of St. John, and from Luther's Antinomian Diſputes.

(k) Prateolus, ib.

(B) Garaſſe's Scurrility.] 'Tis an uſeful thing to let the Reader ſee how bold ſome Men are in their Slanders; and therefore the length of this Paſſage will not hinder me from inſerting it here. (l) ' The ' Iſlebians or Antinomians, otherwiſe called Nomomachi, foraſmuch as they oppoſe the Law of Moſes, ſaying in their Articles of Faith, that it is ' the Torment of our Souls, are the Diſciples of a ' certain Labourer, called Joannes Iſlebius, who ' coming from the Plough, Triduo ſe Theologum profeſſus eſt, as Melanchthon ſpeaks, writing againſt ' him. The Principal Fooleries of thoſe Wretches ' are to be found in the Book de Libertate Chriſtiana, written by Doctor Paulus Crellius, who was ' one of the chief Supporters of that curſed Sect. ' I will only produce three of the moſt remarkable, ' taken Word for Word from their Articles of ' Faith. The firſt Imports, that the Goſpel, and ' the Old Teſtament, unleſs they are preached vivæ ' voce, ſunt veteres calcei in angulo derelicti, are like ' old Shoes thrown by in a Corner, when they can ' be no longer worn. But when the Goſpel is preached, then it becomes like the Shoes mentioned in ' the Canticles, Quam pulchri ſunt greſſus tui in ' calceamentis tuis, filia principis; and in the ' CVIIth. Pſalm: In Idumæam extendam calceamentum meum. That is, according to Beza's Expoſition:

' Contre Edom peuple glorieux
' Je jetteray mes Soldats vieux.

' So that in their way of ſpeaking, Preachers are ' Coblers, the Holy Scriptures are old Shoes; the ' Pulpit the Shop wherein they are kept, and Lent ' and Advent the Old Shoes-Fair. The ſecond Propoſition of the Antinomians is ſtill more horrible; ' and I am very ſorry my Words can't expreſs the ' Weight of my Thoughts: It is expreſſed in theſe ' Terms by Doctor Crellius: Qui quærit ſalutem in ' veteri lege quærit PEDICULAM IN SCABIE. He that ſeeks his Salvation in the Law of ' Moſes, and the Old Teſtament, ſeeks a Louſe in a ' Scab —— I want Words to expreſs my ' Aſtoniſhment. (a) Their Third Maxim is quoted by Doctor Crellius, in theſe Words, Moſes ad eos habeat cum lege ſua, nam ſi non reſipunt eſt dimit-

(l) Garaſſe, curious Doctrine, Book 5. Sect. 16. p. 557.

(a) Id. ib. pag. 557.

ITALICA, a Town in Spain, was ſo called when Scipio Africanus gave it the Form of a City. It grew very conſiderable, and was the Birth-place of Trajan and Hadrian. It injoyed a long time the Privileges of thoſe Towns which were called Municipia, and afterwards it deſired to be Qualified like thoſe, which they called Colonies. Hadrian was amaz'd it ſhould deſire this Change; for he looked upon the Privileges of a Municipium, as preferable to thoſe of a Colony. Nothing remains of Italica but the Ruins of it. Some Authors place its Situation near Seville in a Place which at preſent is called Sivilla la Vejа *. I have ſaid in another Place, that it did not appear to me, that it could be prov'd there ever was ſuch a Town in Italy as Italica. I do not Retract what I ſaid, tho' I know a very ſpecious Objection (A) may be made againſt it.

JUBA. Hiſtory makes mention of two Princes of this Name, whereof one was the Father of the other. Moreri has ſpoken of them; but he has committed (B) ſome Faults, which it is not improper to take notice of. I ſhall Rectify but a very few Faults (C) of other Authors.

JUDEX (Matthew) one of the principal Writers of the Centuries of Magdeburg, was Born † at Tippolſwald in Miſnia * the 22*d*. of September 1528. He ſhewed a great Inclination for Learning, upon which his Father permitted him to go and Study at Dreſ- ‘ natus ad omnes Diabolos. I Appeal from the Sentence of the Antinomians, as being Moſes's Advocate, and I find the Antimonian Madneſs far exceeding that of the Manichees; for when they rejected Moſes, they pretended to have more honourable Pretences, as St. Auſtin relates in the 15*th*. Book againſt Fauſtus. Being asked why they rejected the Old Teſtament and the Law of Moſes, they Anſwered with ſpecious Words, and well adjuſted Phraſes, that they therein Practiced the Command of Jeſus Chriſt, who forbad his Apoſtles to put new Wine into old Veſſels: And that their Church was like a Young Damſel, who receives no Letters or Billets doux from her old Lovers, that indeavour to Corrupt her by Promiſes: That is to ſay, their Church neither receives nor acknowledges the Old Teſtament, which is an Old decayed Wine, an Old Piece of Tatter'd Cloth, an Old Caſt-off-Lover. And then they added, as in Triumph and inſulting our Church: ‘ Vos quidem pergite agere ut cœpiſtis, rudem pannum veteri veſtimento commiſtite, novum vinum veternoſis utribus credite, duobus maritis nulli placituri ſervite, Chriſtianam fidem Hippocentaurorum facite, nec equum perfectum nec hominem: Nobis ſoli Chriſto ſervire permittite. Thoſe who hear theſe charming Words, would perhaps think that they are Pious and Holy Men; but it appears at the bottom, that the Manichees were meer Scoundrels. 'Tis true that as great Scoundrels as they were, they had not ſo many Lice, as the Antinomians.

(A) A very ſpecious Objection may be made againſt it.] 'Tis grounded upon a Paſſage of Strabo, where we find that ſome People of Italy Riſing and Confederating to make War with the Romans, made Corfinium their Place of Arms, and named it Italica. (b) Μετωνομασεν Ιταλικην, Italicæ nomen indiderunt. Note, that Corfinium was the Capital Town of the Peligni, and that this War was that which was called Bellum Sociale or Marſicum, or Italicum, and which began in the year of Rome 662 (c). 'Tis very Probable, that in theſe Words of Diodorus Siculus (d), την κοινην αυτων Ιταλιαν ονομασαντες, it ought to be Read (e) Ιταλικην, and not Ιταλιαν. Thus you ſee two good Authors, who Witneſs, that the Town of Corfinium was called Italica, when theſe People Confederated againſt Rome. Velleius Paterculus might be alledg'd as a third Witneſs, caput imperii ſui Corfinium legerant, ſays he (f), quod appellarent Italicum. There are ſome Criticks (g), who Read quod appellarunt Italicam. Others (h) keep to Italicum. It matters nothing to me; the Anſwer I have to make, does not want the more favourable Reading; for this is what I have to ſay. The name of Italica, which the Allies gave the Town of Corfinium, laſted no longer than the War: They call'd it ſo, when they choſe it their common Metropolis. They Eſtabliſhed in it (i) a Policy like that of Rome, whereby they ſhew'd not only their Emulation for the Capital City of the Roman People, but alſo their Reſolution to make themſelves Independent. Since then the new name of Italica was a Conſequence and a Monument of their Conſpiracy, 'tis not likely that the Romans would ſuffer it to remain. Corfinium reſumed its former Name, when the War was finiſhed in the year of Rome 664. and we don't find that it was called any thing elſe ſince that time. Whence the Error of thoſe appears, who pretend that the Poet Silius Italicus was a Native of Corfinium, and for that reaſon Sirnamed Italicus.

(B) Moreri——has committed ſome Faults.] I. He ſays that Juba the Father was King of Mauritania. This is falſe. In this Juba's time, the Mauritania Cæſarienſis belonged to Bocchus, and the Tingitana to Bogud. Sometime after, that is, in the year 716. Bocchus poſſeſt himſelf of the Tingitana. After his Death his Kingdom was reduced into a Province in the year 721. as Numidia had been under Julius Cæſar (k). II. He ſays, that Juba the Son was Reſtored by Auguſtus to the Kingdom of his Father, that is to ſay, to Numidia. He ſhould have ſaid with Dion (l), that Auguſtus gave him ſome Parts of Getulia, and the two Mauritania's; and that the beſt part of Numidia remain'd ſtill a Roman Province. 'Tis true that Strabo (m) affirms that Auguſtus reſtored Juba to the Kingdom of his Father, and that moreover he granted him Mauritania; but this Geographer limits the Roman Province and the Kingdom of Juba in ſuch a manner as ſhews that Numidia belonged to the Romans. III. Moreri makes Pliny ſay, that Juba the Son found an Herb, which his Phyſician Euphorbus called by his Name Euphorbia. This is not what Pliny ſays; his Words are: (o) Invenit & patrum noſtrorum ætate rex Juba, quam appellavit Euphorbiam Medici ſui nomine. The meaning of which is that Juba found an Herb, which from the name of his Phyſician, he called Euphorbia. It would be ſomewhat ſtrange that a Phyſician to the King ſhould have been ſo bad a Courtier, as to give his own Name to an Herb, which the King his Maſter had found. Yet this is what Pliny affirmed, if we believe Moreri. It would be much leſs ſtrange, that a King, who diſcovers an Herb ſhould Chuſe rather to give it the name of his Phyſician than his own. Which is what Juba did, if we depend on the Teſtimony of Pliny whom I have cited; but there is reaſon to believe, that Pliny has not been ſo exact here as he ought to have been. What he ſays in another Book is more Credible, Namely that Euphorbia was ſo called from the Name of its Diſcoverer, who was the Phyſician of King Juba. He adds a thing, which well deſerved that Moreri ſhould take notice of it: Which is, that Juba made a particular Treatiſe upon this Herb, in which he beſtowed many Praiſes upon the ſingular Vertues of it. (p) Juba Ptolemæi pater, qui primus utriuſque Mauritaniæ imperavit, ſtudiorum claritate memorabilior etiam, quam regno, ſimilia prodidit de Atlante: præterque gigni ibi herbam Euphorbiam nomine ab inventore medico ſuo appellatam. Cujus lacteum ſuccum miris laudibus celebrat in claritate viſus, contraque ſerpentes, & venena omnia, privatim dicato volumine. IV. I might let down for one Fault Moreri's falſe Quotations (q).

(C) But a very few Faults of other Authors.] It ſeems Joſephus ſays that Juba the Son's Wife was Glaphyra, the Widow of one of the Sons of Herod. See this Woman's Article (a) where we Confute this.

* Appian. in Iberico p. m. 464.
† Id. ib.
‡ Aulus Gellius l. 16. c. 13.
§ Id. ib.
‖ See Ludovicus Nonnius in Hiſpania c. 17. p. m. 64.
* Id ib. p. 65.
† 'Tis a Place two German Leagues diſtant from Dreſden.
* Andreas Schoppius ubi ſupra ſays that it was on St. Matthew's Day: and therefore he ſhould have ſaid the 21. and not the 22.

(b) Strabo l. 5. p. m. 167.
(c) See Sigonius in faſtis ad ann. 662.
(d) In excerptis l. 37. apud Photium.
(e) See Caſaubon. in Strab. l. 5. p. m. 94.
(f) Vell. Paterc. l. 2. c. 16.
(g) Gerard. Voſſius not. in Paterc. ibid.
(h) Sigonius de ant. jure Italiæ l. 3. c. 1. fol. m. 100. Boecler. in Paterc. ib.
(i) See Sigonius ubi ſupra.

(k) You'll find all this proved in Father Norris's Cenotaphia Piſana p. 235.
(l) Lib. 53. ad. ann. 729.
(m) Lib. 17. p. 70.
(n) See Father Norris ubi ſupra.
(o) Plin. l. 25. c. 7. p. m. 400.
(p) Plin. l. 5. c. 1. ſub. fin. p. m. 327.
(q) He quotes Dion l. 4. & ſeq. But he ſhould have quoted the 43. He quotes Pliny c. 1. Book 25. he ſhould have quoted the 7. Chap. He quotes the 8. Book of Athenæus, which mentions only a Greek Epigram of Juba: He ſhould have quoted the 3. and 4. Books. He ſhould have quoted the 17. Book of Strabo, and the 2. Book of Voſſius.
(a) In the Remark B.

Dresden. He ſtaid not there long, but choſe rather to Study in the College of Wittemberg, and afterwards in that of Magdeburg: He was in a wretched Condition, when he came to this laſt Town, being over-run with the Itch, and without Money. The way he took to Live, was to beg an Alms by Singing from Door to Door; but after he was known to be a hopeful Young Man, he was preferred to a Tutor's Place in the Houſe of a Lawyer, who ſent him with his Son to Wittemberg in the year 1540. He there took his Maſter of Arts Degree, in October 1549. After which he returned to Magdeburg, and there taught the ſecond Claſs ſome years; and then he was Miniſter of the Church of St. Ulric till the year 1559. He quitted not that Employment till he went to be Profeſſor of Divinity, in the Univerſity of Jena. He continued in that Profeſſorſhip but eighteen Months; for his Place was taken away from him, by Order of John Frederick Duke of Saxony in the beginning of October 1561. He ſtay'd ſtill half a year at Jena; and then ſpending almoſt as much time at Magdeburg, he Retired to Wiſmar. He Died the fifteenth of (A) May 1564, at Roſtock, whither he went a few Days before to Aſſiſt at the Promotion of Scholars. He was a Man (B) of good Morals, Laborious, Zealous, Learned, and he wrote many Books. He this. Father Salian thought that Juba Died in the 759th year of Rome. Father Noris has invincibly (b) Confuted him by this Obſervation: Strabo wrote his thirteenth Book a little after the year 771. Now in his ſeventeenth Book he ſpeaks of Juba, as of a Prince lately Dead; Juba therefore did not Die before the year 772. or there abouts. The ſame Strabo ſays elſewhere (c) that Juba lived under the Empire of Tiberius. Now Tiberius began his Reign but in the year 767. It ſeems that one may infer from a Paſſage of Tacitus, that Juba was ſtill Alive (d) in the year 776. Noldius was miſtaken in ſuppoſing, that Dion ſays that Auguſtus gave Ægypt to Juba, beſides the Kingdom of his Father (e). There's nothing in Dion's Words, that obliges us to refer the Word ταύτην to Ægypt, and 'tis certain it muſt be referred to the Word Cleopatra. Dion's Tranſlator has miſerably Blunder'd. (f) Η τε Κλεοπάτρα τῷ τε Ἰόβᾳ καὶ ἐκείνην, τότε γὰρ ὁ Καῖσαρ τοιαῦτ᾽ ἐποίησε, καὶ συνεξέπεμψεν οἱ ταύτην τε καὶ τὴν θυγατέρα ἔσχε. Cleopatra autem Jubæ Jubæ filio in matrimonium tradita eſt. Hunc Jubam Cæſar in Italia educatum, ac ſuam militiam ſecutum, hoc (regno Read ea, Cleopatra ſcilicet) & paterno etiam donavit. Noldius citing the Paſſage, in which Dion ſays (g) that Juba, inſtead of his Father's Kingdom, received of Auguſtus ſome parts of Getulia, and the States of Bocchus and Bogud, obſerves that Pliny has juſtly Subſtituted in the room of thoſe States, both the Mauritania's. Pro quibus rectè Plinius Hiſt. nat. V. c. I. utramque Mauritaniam ſubſtituit, hoc eſt Cæſarienſem & Tingitanam. Which is clearly to inſinuate this fallity, viz. that theſe two Mauritania's and the States mention'd by Dion, were not the ſame thing.

(A) He Died the 15th. of May 1564.] I ſhould not make a Remark upon this, if it were not to ſay, that Authors are very careleſs with reſpect to the Dates of Death, and Calculations. I find in Paul Freherus's Theatrum (h) that our Judex Died the 11th. of June 1564. This Date is Alledged upon the credit of the Nomenclator Profeſſorum Icenenſium, written by Hadrian Beyer. Mr. Sagittarius (i) citing the ſame Nomenclator, places Judex's Death in the ſame Day as Paul Freherus: But I ſee in Micralius (k) this Death placed in the year 1587. which was the 79th. of the Deceaſed. There is in the Margin, Freher. p. 202. 'Tis hard to conceive, how ſuch an unfaithful Quotation could creep into that Place; and Note, that Judex would not have lived 79 years, tho' he had lived till 1587. for he was Born in 1528. 'Tis affirmed in his Life, (l) that his Death was the more Regretted, becauſe he had not lived above 37 years. This Calculation is not right; for ſince his Birth was placed on the 22*d*. of December 1528. and his Death on the 15*th*. of May 1564. it ſhould have been ſaid that he was not 36 years Old.

(B) A Man of good Morals——and who wrote many Books.] He was of that Sobriety, as not to eat ſo much in a Week, as others but of a Moderate Stomach, Eat in two Days; and his beſt Friends could never obtain of him to Drink more than to ſatisfy his Thirſt (m). He was ſo Averſe to Pomp and Luxury, that on his Wedding-day he would not conſent, that his Wife ſhould Dreſs her ſelfſtinely, and obliged her to content her ſelf with very ordinary Cloaths (n). His Chaſtity was ſo great, that before he Married, ſome People thought, that he was of a frigid or inſenſible Conſtitution; and he confeſt privately to his intimate Friends, that he believed the cauſe of his ill State of Health, or at leaſt, that what increaſed his Infirmities, was his ſtaying too long before he Married. (o) Ante legitimum conjugium adeò pudicè vixit, ut à nonnullis frigidus ſit judicatus, ac ipſe intimis ſit confeſſus, ſe judicare originem aut certè non leve ſuæ adverſæ valetudinis incrementum inde exiſtere, quod non prius duxiſſet uxorem. Yet he was Married at 26. years of Age, (p) when he was made Miniſter of the Church of St. Ulric at Magdeburg. He Married a Maid of fifteen or ſixteen years of Age, who was not Rich. Some of his Friends were Angry, that he had Married a Wife, who had neither Years nor Money enough; but he Anſwered 'em, that he had always beg'd of God a Wife, inexperienc'd in evil Things, tractable, free from Pride, &c. (q) Ægrius tuere Unicorum quidam, quid juvenculam & minùs dotatam ſibi jungeret virginem, ſed ita reſpondit, ſe ab adoleſcentia aſſiduè potiſſe à Deo, ut puellam bonis prognatam, honeſtè educatam, virtutibus & pietate ornatam, malarum rerum ætate adhuc imperitam, & morigeram potiùs, quam natalibus claram, delicatâ & blandâ educatione ac converſatione malâ depravatam, ſibi dare dignaretur, ac ſe voti ſui compotem factum in Dei providentia adquieſcere. He lived Pioully and Comfortably with his Wife a little above ten years, and had ſix Children by her. (r) She Married the ſecond time (ſ) Andrew Schoppius.

I ſhall now Speak of the Books he wrote. He Tranſlated into Latin the German Book of Luther concerning the Literal Senſe of the Words, This is my Body. He Dedicated that Work to the Senate of Ratisbonne, and confuted in the Epiſtle Dedicatory the fifteen main Arguments of the Zuinglians. The Title of a Book he Publiſhed in the year 1559. runs thus: quod augere peccata ſeu contemnari pœnitentiam ſit proprium legis & non Evangelii proprie dicti, rationes & argumenta. His Treatiſe De typographiæ inventione, & de prælorum legitima inſpectione, was Printed in the year 1566. His Enarrationes Epiſtolarum Dominicalium came out in the year 1578. He Publiſhed ſix Books of his own Compoſing in High-Dutch. He and Wigandus jointly Publiſhed ſome Pieces, as (t) Reſponſio ad confeſſionem Majoris de Juſtificatione & bonis operibus. Reſponſio ad ſcurriles & blaſphemos fœtidi Rambocchi Rythmos Witebergæ impreſſos. De Adiaphoris ex ruptelis in magno libro Actorum Interimiſticorum, ſub conficto titulo Profeſſorum Wittebergenſium edito, reperti, Admonitiones. Corpus Doctrinæ ex Novo Teſtamento. De Victorini Strigelii declaratione ſeu potiùs occultatione. Andrew Schoppius adds thus: Item cum Illyrico. Muſæo & Wigando miſit Epiſtolam ad quoſdam pios fratres de cauſſa Victorini. Et cum iiſdem ſe purgavit de ficta rationibus dimiſſionis Jenenſis, quas charta [illegible] referebat (v). He afterwards gives the Titles of ſome German Books, and of ſome Latin Pieces that have not been Printed. He obſerves (w) that Judex was well ſkill'd in Muſick, and had ſome Knowledge of the Mathematicks. He was not ignorant of Aſtrology, and Calculated ſome Nativities, Judicia nativitatum ſibi, liberis ſuis & Emldenis (x) nonnullis compoſuit, atque figuras cœli, quas vocant, aliis rebus ac-

(b) Ubi ſupra p. 238.
(c) Lib. 6. circa fin.
(d) See the Article Glaphyra (e) Noldius de vitâ & geſtis Herodum, p. 176.
(f) Dio, l. 54. p. 520. Lieucla-vius takes notice of this Fault of Xyphilin in his Edition of Dion Caſſius.
(g) Id. lib. 54. pag. 589. ad ann. 729.
(h) Page 202.
(i) Sagittar. introd. in Hiſt. Eccleſ. p. 247.
(k) Micral. Hiſtor. Eccleſ. p. 770. Edit. 1699.
(l) Andr. Schoppius Orat. de vita Matth. Judicis apud Cranium anim. phil. & Hiſt. parte 6. p. 71.
(m) Schoppius ib. p. 58.
(n) Id. ib. & p. 59.
(o) Id. ib. p. 57. 58.
(p) Idem p. 58.
(q) Id. ib.
(r) Id. ib.
(ſ) Id. ib. p. 50.
(t) Ex 1558.
(v) Taken from Andrew Schoppius p. 63. & ſeq.
(w) Id. ib. p. 56.
(x) He was Tutor to the Children of Levinus Emdenius a Civilian of Magdeburg.

He had many Perſecutions and Vexations (C) to go through, during the Courſe of his Miniſtry *.

JUDITH, A Jewiſh Woman, delivered her Country Invaded by Holofernes. You'll find this Hiſtory in Moreri, with ſome Obſervations upon the Perplexity, in which it involves the Commentators. Of all the Books that the Proteſtants have Rejected as Apocryphal, there is none that better deſerves that Blot than this; for the beſt thing that can be ſaid of it is, that it is (A) a Pious Romance. 'Tis not many years ſince, a Learned Benedictin (B) wrote a Book to ſolve the Difficulties, that are raiſed commodatas exercit. He had Studied ſome time the Civil Law at Wittemberg: He could make Latin and Greek Verſes, and he had a deſign to Compoſe an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory of his time (y). Every Body knows that he had (z) a Hand in the ten firſt Centuries of Magdeburg, and that it was a very great Labour. He Died very Young, and had a bad State of Health (a) for fifteen Years together, and therefore it can't be doubted that he was very Studious and Laborious.

I ſhall Occaſionally relate a thing, which may ſerve as a Supplement to what we have ſeen (b) above concerning the Hiſtory of theſe Centuries. The three laſt were never Publiſhed, tho' the Centuriators had proceeded very far in them, and the Marquiſs of Brandenburg, Duke of Pruſſia, had given Orders to Andrew Stangewald to put the laſt Hand to them, that they might be Printed. Andreas Stangewaldus——fibi ab inclyto Marchione Brandenburgenſi, Duce Boruſſiæ tum temporis negotium datum eſſe confirmabat, ut reliquas tres centurias Eccleſiaſticæ Hiſtoriæ Magdeburgenſ. ab autoribus affectas jam penèque perfectas, perpoliret, atque ad editionem accuratè præpararet. Mr. Crenius (c) has Publiſhed the Letter, out of which I have taken this Paſſage. It was found in a Poſthumous Work of Conrad Schluſſelburgius Printed at Roſtock in the year 1624. He wonders how Mr. Sagittarius forgot this Particular; and he mentions another which he read in a Work (d) of the Civilian Francis Baudouin: Namely, that (e) a French Tranſlation of the Centuries of Magdeburg was made at Geneva, with the ſame unſincerity, that appeared in the French Tranſlation of Luther's Comuentary upon St. Paul's Epiſtle to the Galatians.

(C) He had many Perſecutions and Vexations to go through.] He was one of thoſe that drew up the Diſcipline of the Church of Magdeburg, which was Printed in the year 1554. He ſhewed himſelf very exact in the Execution of it, and refuſed the Sacrament to ſome Impenitent Perſons. Hereupon he was threatned (f) to be Beaten and trampled under Foot. He was very much abuſed in the Satyrs, that were made at Wittemberg againſt the Centuriators. (g) Scurriles Nemini ſtæ & Acolaſti Witebergenſes in famoſa illius laboris reprehenſione & acerba invectiva D. Judicem vocabant Judam & pullum filium aſinæ ſubjugalis. He ſtoutly oppoſed the Synergiſts, whilſt he was Profeſſor of Divinity at Jena. It was a powerful Party, that Paſquin'd him, in an Inſolent and Slanderous Manner. They made uſe of Stones too; for there was a Gang of Rogues, who all the Night long committed Riots about his Houſe, and his Windows. He was deprived of his Imployment, after having Exerciſed it in the midſt of many Troubles eighteen Months. The pretence (h) alledged for it was the Publication of a German Book, De fuga Papatus; but one of the true Cauſes was his Oppoſition to the Party, which was favoured (i) at Court. This Party was that of Strigelius, a Profeſſor, one of the Heads of the Synergiſts, or Sticklers for Humane Liberty. They did not fail to give out many Reaſons or Pretences for the Depoſing of Matthew Judex, which were all Confuted. He was accuſed, amongſt other things, of having diſperſed ſeveral Copies of Balthaſar Winter's Life, and he was required to diſcover the Author of that Satyr, and to recover all the Copies, and ſend 'em to Court. He Anſwered that this Work was no Libel; that it was only the true Narrative of the Life and Death of a faithful Servant of God, that it was neceſſary to oppoſe the Calumnies which the Enemies of that Pious Man had ſpread, and to Communicate it to the Widow, and ſome others to Comfort them. He did not think himſelf obliged to name the Author; but he offer'd to Anſwer to that Affair before impartial Judges, made up of Laymen, and Eccleſiaſticks. His Adverſaries did not care for ſuch a Tribunal (k). Leaving Jena he retired to Magdeburg with his Friend Wigandus, and did not long enjoy the Permiſſion the Senate granted him to ſtay there. Some Miniſters were Arreſted, others were expell'd by Night from the Town. He did not approve that Conduct of the Magiſtrates, and adviſed theſe Afflicted Miniſters to Patience. He expoſed himſelf by this means to many ill Uſages, and a Burgher received Orders not to let him his Houſe. His Father-in-Law had a ſhare in the Outrages, becauſe he had Lodged him in his Houſe. At laſt the Senate commanded Matthew Judex to depart immediately from Magdeburg. His Wife melting in Tears, intreated the firſt Burgo-Maſter to permit her to ſtay at her Father's with her five Children, till the Rigour of the Winter ſhould be over. She repreſented to them that her Eldeſt Son was but eight years Old, and that the Youngeſt was but three Months, and beſides was Sick. All her Intreaties and Remonſtrations proved ineffectual; depart they muſt, and retire to Wiſmar thro' the Snow (l). The Roman Catholicks have been well pleaſed with the ill Treatment of the Centuriators of Magdeburg. I will only alledge the Reflection of a Jeſuit. As for the four firſt Authors of the Centuries, ſays he (m), their Fortune was very different from that of Baronius; for ſoon after they had Publiſhed their Work, they were Baniſhed by the Lutherans themſelves, who could not ſuffer among 'em ſuch Wicked Men.

(A) That it is a Pious Romance.] Dom. Bernard de Montfaucon (n) obſerves that the Proteſtants, to Extricate themſelves out of all Difficulties, have ſaid that this Book is but a Fiction or a Parable, and that ſome of them have affirmed it to be a Tragedy. I think the Proteſtants don't trouble their Heads with removing theſe Difficulties; for 'tis their Intereſt they ſhould ſubſiſt and multiply in the moſt perplexing Manner. By this they ſhew they have reaſon to reject this Book, and that the Church of Rome falſly takes it for a Canonical Book. I believe then that the Author in ſaying this, did not conſider the Syſtem of the Proteſtants; he thought they were no leſs concerned than the Catholicks to maintain the Authenticknes of this Book. When it cannot be maintain'd by reconciling a thing with Hiſtorical Truths, 'tis uſual to have recourſe to Allegories, Parables, the myſtical Senſe, &c. And this the Proteſtants would do if they believed this Hiſtory to be Divinely Inſpired; but becauſe they don't believe it, it does not concern them to ſay that it is a Parable.

(B) A learned Benedictin writ a Book.] You'll ſee his Name, and the Title of his Book in the foregoing Remark. The method he has taken to Vindicate the Hiſtory of Judith is more Inſtructive and Edifying, than that which is made uſe of by the Roman Controverſiſts. The latter generally are contented to retort the Objections. They indeavour to ſhew, that the difficulties raiſed by the Proteſtants againſt the Apocryphal Books, may be alledged againſt the Cononical. But Dom Bernard de Montfaucon touches very ſlightly upon this, and makes it his buſineſs to give a direct Anſwer. Its whole Recrimination is contained in theſe Words: (o) Are there not many Stories in the Sacred Text, in which we find theſe and even greater Difficulties, and yet for all that, no Body goes about to deny the truth of 'em in the Litteral Senſe? Is not the Hiſtory of Eſther full of Confuſion and Difficulties, which it's hardly poſſible to get clear of? Did ever * Taken from Andrew Schoppius in oratione de vita Matthæi Judicis. It is to be found at the end of the 2d. Part enarrationis Epiſtolarum Dominicalium Matthæi Judicis, Iſlebiæ 1578. in 8vo. Mr. Crenius has inſerted that Speech in the 6th. part of his animadverſiones philol. & hiſtor. p. 49. & ſeq.

any

(y) Id. ib.

(z) Note, that he had a Hand in the German Tranſlation of the three firſt Centuries.

(a) Annis quindecim valetudine afflictiſſima. Id. ib.

(b) In the Article of Illyricus (Flacius.)

(c) Crenius animadv. parte 6. p. 72.

(d) Viz. His Anſwer to Beza under the name of Michael Fabricius

(e) Id. ib. in addendis p. penult.

(f) Ipſi verbera & concuſationem fœdiſſimam minati ſunt quòd eos ad Baptiſmum & uſum Cœnæ non admiſerat. Andr. Schoppius ibi. p. 62. (g) Id. ib. p. 67. (h) Id. ib p. Court of the Duke of Weimar.

(i) The

(k) Id. ib. p. 68.

(l) Id. ib. p. 69.

(m) Maimbourg, Hiſt. du Lutheranſme. tom. 2. p. 159. Dutch Edit.

(n) In the Preface to the Verité de l'hiſtoire de de Judith, Paris, 1690. in 12. The 2. Edition came out in 1692.

(o) Pag. 283.

raiſed againſt this Hiſtory. If he has not removed them, he has at leaſt ſupplied us with ſome uſeful Illuſtrations. I have ſeen a Diſſertation †, wherein, amongſt other Arguments this is inforced, that a Book cannot be ſaid to be Canonical, when it Authorizes Aſſaſſination. This puts me in Mind of a thing (C) concerning the Aſſaſſin of William I. Prince of Orange. Some Body has Obſerved, that it is a very ſignificant Commendation of Judith to ſay that ſhe was never ill ſpoken off (D).

† Intituled Fides Judithæ &c. at Verona in the year 1614. and written by Mirabilis de Bonacaſa, wherein the Author ſhews 1. that the Book of Judith is Apocryphal, 2. that Judith's Attempt was a Wicked one, and that Roſſæus Mariana, and other Enemies of Monarchy have no reaſon to take Advantage of it. The true Name of this Mirabilis de Bonacaſa, was Eberard de Weihe; he was Chancellor to Prince Julius Duke of Brunſwick. See Placcius de Pſeudonym. p. 166.

JU-

any one ſhew clearly and certainly, who is the Ahaſuerus mentioned in that Book, and in what time that Hiſtory ought to be placed? Is it not as difficult to fix the time of the Hiſtory of Ruth, and of the Ruin of the Tribe of Benjamin? And yet no Body dares ſay, that they are Parabolical or Ænigmatical Hiſtories. I do not know whether he had ſeen Raynoldus's Objections, who of all the Proteſtant Writers, has handled the Controverſy of the Apocryphal Books with the greateſt force.

(C) Concerning the Aſſaſſin of William I. Prince of Orange.] I mean that Villain Balthazar Gerard, who killed him; for there were other Aſſaſſins, who did but Wound him. (a) Tho' he was an arrant Catholick, he craftily pretended to be a Proteſtant. He went to Sermons, and Evening Prayers, he had always Marot's Pſalms in his Hands, or ſome other Proteſtant Book. He read alſo du Bartas's Poetical Week; and 'twas found that the Place moſt worn out, was the Story of Judith Murdering Holofernes. There's no doubt but this Woman's Example may perſuade a great many People that 'tis a Holy Action, by means of a thouſand Lies to get ones ſelf admitted to a Prince who oppreſſes Liberty and Religion, in order to Stab him as ſoon as an Opportunity offers. In a Word, this Hiſtory being taken for a Canonical one, incourages Aſſaſſins to attempt upon the Life of Kings, whom they hate, and furniſhes Orators with a Crown of Glory, to put upon the Head of the Clement's and Ravaillac's. Obſerve this Paſſage of Maimbourg. The Leaguers (b) Publiſhed alſo in their Books Printed at Paris and Lyons, that an Angel had declared to James Clement, that the Crown of Martyrdom was prepared for him, when he ſhould have delivered France from Henry de Valois; and that having acquainted a Learned Monk with his Viſion, that Monk approved of it, aſſuring him that in ſtriking this Blow, he would be no leſs acceptable to God, than Judith was in killing Holofernes. And becauſe his Prior, named Father Edme Bourgoing, was accuſed of being, of all the Preachers of the League, the moſt Paſſionate Panegyriſt of that Abominable Parricide, Directing his Diſcourſe to him in the Pulpit, and calling him the Bleſſed Child of his Patriarch, and the Holy Martyr of Jeſus Chriſt, and comparing him to Judith; it was not doubted but it was he, with whom this young Man, who was under his Tuition, had adviſed; and that he had afterwards Confirmed him in his execrable Deſign.

(a) Hiſt. d'Alexandre Farneſe Duc de Parme Book 3. p. 209. Printed in 1692.

(b) Maimbourg, Hiſtoire de la Ligue p. 358.

(D) She was never ill ſpoken of.] The thought I ſpeak of, is to be found in an Extract (c) of a Panegyrick. The Abbot de la Chambre making the Funeral Oration of the late French Queen (d), took his Text in theſe Words of the Book of Judith, She made her ſelf famous, famoſiſſima, in all things, and there was none that gave her an ill Word; for ſhe feared God greatly. 'Tis perhaps the fineſt Commendation that ever was given to a Woman; For tho' notwithſtanding the prodigious Deſtraction that has prevailed ſo long in the World, there are ſome Women, that remain untouched by that implacable and inſatiable Monſter; yet this good Fortune rarely happens to thoſe who have otherwiſe a ſhining Reputation, and who are, as the Text ſays, famoſiſſimæ: ſo that we may boldly Challenge all the Greeks and Romans to ſhew us a Paſſage in their Books, that in ſo few Words gives us ſo great an Idea, as that which the Book of Judith gives us in the Words before mentioned. The Addreſs that Homer made uſe of, to give his Reader a great Notion (e) of the Beauty of Hélena, is certainly inferior to the Plainneſs and Simplicity of this Jewiſh Author; and that which is moſt excellent in his way of Praiſing, is, that he has included in his Elogy the true cauſe of the Virtue here deſcribed: ſhe had, ſays he, a great Reputation in all things, and was ſecure from every evil Tongue, becauſe ſhe was ſenſibly touched with the fear of the Lord. 'Tis upon this happy Expreſſion of Judith's Panegyriſt, that the Abbot de la Chambre built his Funeral Oration of the Queen.

(c) In the Nouvelles de la Repub. des lettres, December 1684. art. 8. p. 1041.

(d) I write this the 20. of Auguſt 1693.

(e) See above Helena, Remark A.

Anſonius places it among the Sentences of one of the ſeven Wiſe Men of Greece, that a Chaſt Woman frights away Calumny:

Quæ (f) dos matrona pulcherrima? Vita pudica.
Quæ caſta eſt? de qua mentiri fama veretur.

He ſuppoſes that Bias had two Queſtions to Anſwer. The firſt was, What is the nobleſt Portion of a Woman? He Anſwered a Chaſt Life. The ſecond was, What Woman is Chaſt? He Anſwered, ſhe whom Fame dares not Slander. Theſe Rules are ſevere, will ſome ſay; for they Condemn all Women that have been expoſed to the Bitings of Obloquy; and yet 'tis certain that there are moſt Virtuous Women, who have not been able to avoid them. It muſt be owned that this Maxim of Bias cannot ſerve as a general Rule without Exception; but generally it is a ſign of a very Wiſe Conduct, both as to the inſide and the outſide, to enjoy the Reputation of a Chaſt Woman without any Oppoſition or Contradiction whatſoever. (g) Magnus eſt pudicitiæ fructus pudicam credi; & adverſus omnes illecebras atque omnia delinimenta muliebris ingenii eſt veluti ſolum ac firmamentum in nullam incidiſſe fabulam. This is what the Orator Porcius Latro ſaid, pleading for a Husband, who accuſed his Wife of Adultery, becauſe a Rich Foreign Merchant had made her his Heir, and gave as the reaſon of it, his not being able to Debauch her. The Advocate drew from thence one of his Arguments: He maintained, that a Woman became juſtly ſuſpected, when once her Honour was Attempted; for if ſhe was very Chaſt, her Refuſal might be read in her Face, and her outward behaviour would baffle the hopes of a Gallant, and diſcourage him from diſcovering his Paſſion. She would refuſe him at leaſt with ſo much ſeverity, that he would never be ſo bold as to make a ſecond Attempt. If ſhe is not afraid to be thought capable of the Fault, ſhe will not fear to commit it. (h) Matrona qua ſe adverſus ſollicitantes aviam volet, prodeat in tantum ornata, ne immunda ſit: habeat comites ejus ætatis, qui impudicos, ſi nihil aliud, verecundia annorum removeant: ferat jacentes in terram oculos: adverſus officioſum ſalutatorem inhumana potius quam inverecunda ſit, etiam in neceſſariam reſalutandi vicem multo rubore conſuſa longe ante impudicitiam neget ore, quam verbo: in hac ſervanda integritatis cuſtodia, nulla libido irrumpet. Prodite mihi fronte in omne lenocinium compoſita, paulo obſcœnius quam poſita veſte nuda, exquiſito in omnes facetias ſermone, tantum non ultro blandientes, ut quiſquis vicerit, non metuat accedere. Deinde miramini, ſi cum tot argumentis pudicitiam proſcripſerit, cultu, inceſſu, facie, aliquis repertum eſt qui incurreret, & reæ adulteræ ſe non ſubduceret. Internuntium, puto ſollicitantis ſe, arripi & denudari juſſit, & flagella & verbera, & omne genus cruciatus popoſcit in plagæ deterrimi mancipii: vim imbecillitas muliebris manus continuit. Nemo ſic negantem iterum rogat———(i) Qua poteſt non timere opinionem adulterii, poteſt non timere adulterium. Theſe Maxims are too rigid and too ſtrained, and we ſhould frequently be very unjuſt, if we ſhould direct our Judgments by them. But the Advantage, Happineſs and Glory of our Judith, raiſe her Virtue and good Conduct to the higheſt degree. I ſhall occaſionally obſerve that the Morality of ſome Heathens was ſo Auſtere, that they would not have a Woman to give matter either for Praiſe or Reproach: That is, they would have her true merit to conſiſt in this, that ſhe ſhould not be talk'd off, and that no Body ſhould ſpeak well or ill of her. Plutarch diſlikes this

(f) Auſon. in ſeptem ſapientum ſententiis ſeptenis verſibus explicatis p. m. 288.

(g) Seneca Controv. 7. l. 2. p. m. 187.

(h) Seneca ibid. p. 186.

(i) Id. ib. p. 187.

JULIUS II. created Pope the Night between the 31st of October, and the first of November, 1503, was Nephew to Sixtus IV. and was called Julian de la † Rouvere. 'Tis said that he had been a Water-man (A). There was something very remarkable (B) in his Election; for, properly speaking, it preceded the Entrance of the Cardinals into the Conclave.

† The Italians write it Ruvere.

Maxim, as we see from the Exordium of one of his Books: '(l) I am not of Thucydides's Opinion—— concerning the Virtue of Women; because he reckons her the most virtuous and the best, who is the least spoken of, whether well or ill, imagining that the Name of a Woman of Honour ought to be as much confined as her Body, and never go abroad. I think Gorgias was more reasonable, who would have the Fame, and not the Face of a Woman to be publickly known. And in my Opinion the Law or Custom of the Romans was very good, which ordered, that Women, as well as Men, after their Death, should be publickly honoured at their Funerals with the Praises they deserved. St. Gregory Nazianzen was of Thucydides's Judgment. Fear the Praises of Men, said he, speaking to a Woman; this Fear is the Ornament of your Sex.

(l) Plut. parall. de mulier. virtutib. pag. 242.

(m) Gregor. Nazianz. περὶ καλλωπιζομένου γυναικῶν.

Ἄλλην (m) τὰ τοιαῦτα, σὺ δ' ἄζου χαλινὸν ἀνδρῶν,
Καὶ καλλωπίζου, πότνα γυναικὶ κλέος.

Lingua aliis vana: at labiis vereare virorum
Commendari etiam, hoc fœminæum decus est.

(n) Synes. Ossirim orat. I. de providentia.

To which may be added these Words of Synesius, (n) Μίαν ἀρετὴν Ὄσιρις ἤσκει γυναικὸς εἶναι, τὸ μήτε τὸ σῶμα αὐτῆς, μήτε τὸ ὄνομα ἐξιέναι τῶν οἴκων. Unam virtutem Osiris muliebrem esse censebat, ut neque corpus, neque nomen mulieris è vestibulo exires. What Synesius ascribes to Osiris is at the bottom the same thing that Plutarch ascribes to Thucydides. Some have given it out as the Opinion of Pericles. See these Words of John della Casa. (a) Cujus quidem mulieris (Victoriæ Farnesiæ) modestia ac pudor ingenium illud profecto præstitisse, quod Pericles ejunt dixisse, primam in muliere laudem esse, ut ne de virtute quidem illius ulla ad viros fama emanet: sed nulla ratione occultari tanta primaria fœmina virtus potest, quin ad viros quoque emergat, ac suo ipsa splendore prodat. But though an Hundred Persons, as illustrious as these three (b), had vouch'd this Maxim, we should not be obliged to approve of it. This would be condemning Women to a more rigid Life than that of the Carthusians; it would be imposing on them the Inclosure and Silence of those Monks, and forbidding them to receive any Visit in their Cells. Now this is more than is imposed upon the Carthusians.

(a) Joh. Casa in vita Petri Bembi, pag. 143. collect. Bateffi.

(b) Osiris, Thucydides, Pericles.

I conclude with this Observation. The Reputation of Judith, that Reputation I say, clean and free from Suspicion, and secure against evil Fame, is an admirable Proof of Virtue and Prudence. But it must not be from thence concluded, that every Woman who has not that good Fortune, and is ill spoken of, is at least guilty of Imprudence. It may be true that a Woman has a regular Conduct, and yet because she has for some good Reasons put off her waiting Woman, her Chamber-Maid, &c. scandalous Stories shall be quickly forged. The disgrac'd Creature being malicious and revengeful, will apply to her Mistress's Enemies, and give them mysterious Insinuations, as the Spirit of Slander shall suggest. These Lies shall be heightned, whisper'd about, flourish'd and enlarged on; nay, they shall be printed; and thus a Person really innocent, shall not have the Reputation of being so; so true it is, as I have said in another Place, that the Appearance is sometimes more difficult to obtain, than the Reality. This depends upon our selves, the other depends on many Causes that are not in our Disposal. The Poet Plautus represents this Thought very naturally in a Scene, wherein he introduces two old Blades, Callicles and Megaronides talking thus:

(d) Plautus in Trinummo, act. 1. sc. 2. 41. v. m. 732.

Me. (d) Quia omnes bonas, bonasque accurare addecet,
Suspicionem, & culpam, ut ab se segregent.
C A. Non potest ut unquæ fieri. M E. Quapropter? C A. Rogas?
Ne admittam culpam, meo sum promus pectori:
Suspicio est in pectore alieno sita.
Nam nunc ego si te furtipisse suspicor
Jovi coronam de capite, è Capitolio,
Quod in culmine erat summo; si id non feceris,
Atque id tamen mihi habeat suspicarier:
Qui tu id prohibere me potes, ne suspicer?
. . . . . .
C A. (e) Exspecto, si quid dicas. M E. Primumdum omnium,
Male dissimulatur tibi volgo in sermonibus:
Turpilucricupidem te vocant cives tui.
Tum autem sunt alii, qui te volturium vocant:
Hostesne, an cives comedis, parvi pendere,
Hæc cum audio in te dicier, excrucior miser.
C A. Est, atque non est, mihi in manu; Megaronides,
Quid dicant; non est: meritò ut ne dicant; id est.

(e) Id. ib. v. 61. pag. 733.

This Conclusion is excellent: It does not depend upon me, answered Megaronides, to prevent being ill spoken of; it is only in my Power, that it be not done deservedly. Note, that there are an hundred Accidents that may give Birth to the same Consequences, as the Malice of a Servant turned out.

(A) 'Tis said, that he was a Water-man.] Erasmus has inserted this Tradition in his Adages. A remo ad tribunal, says he (f), Dici solitum, ubi quis repente ab infima conditione provehitur ad honesti muneris administrationem. Id quod haud scio an ulli contigerit felicius quàm Julio secundo. Nam fama est, hunc juvenem ad stipem scalmum remo subigere solitum, & tamen à remulco non solùm ad tribunal, verumetiam ad summum illud rerum humanarum culmen evectus est. Nec contentus hoc fastigio, pontificia ditionis pomeria multùm protulit; longiùs etiam producere licuisset. Father Theophilus Raynaud is mistaken, in saying (g), that he makes mention of the same thing in the Explication of the Proverb, è scapha in triumphalem quadrigam. 'Tis not he, but Hadrian Junius (h), who explained this Adage, and says: Efferri potest de quovis è fœce hominum ad magnas opes dignitatesque provecto, quemadmodum Julius Ligur post sedentariam operam inducendo scalmo diu navatam, Sixti Pontificis beneficio insignibus Ecclesiasticorum honorum ornatus, tandem ad Pontificatum maximum emersit. Anastasius Germonius, Archbishop of Tarentaise has maintained, that all the Stories concerning the Birth of Sixtus IV. and Julius II. are false; and that Leonard de la Rouvere, Father of Sixtus IV. was a very noble Knight, and that before the Exaltation of this Pope, the Family of la Rouvere was in a flourishing State. (i) Sixtus IV. falso jactatus est à plebeiis & piscatoribus oriundus cùm patrem haberet Leonardum de Rovere, Equitem nobilissimum, ut observavit Anastasius Germonius, exponens indultum Hieronymi Cardinalis de Ruvere §. Sixtus num. 28. qui etiam §. Magnis, de genere Ruverea antiquo, (etiam ante Sixtum) splendore, egit diffusissimè.

(f) Erasm. Adag. Chil. 3 centur. 4. n. 86. pag. m. 758.

(g) Theophil. Raynaud. Hagiol. Palatin. Mophebeæ, sect. 2. sæc. 3. cap. 1. p. m. 303.

(h) Hadr. Junius, Adag. centur. 6. n. 43.

(i) Theophil. Raynaud. ibid. pag. 304.

Mr. de la Monnoie (k) pretends, that Anastasius Germonius, who only copies Onuphrius, can't stand 'against Philelphus, Baptist Fregosus, Volaterranus, 'Corio, Erasmus, Machiavel, Chassaneus, Bandel, 'du Perron, Masson, and so many others cited by 'Spondanus, in his Continuation of Baronius, on the 'Year 1471. n. 10. Bandel affirms, that Julius II. boasted that he had steer'd a little Vessel. (l) Giulio secondo Pontefice, anchorchè di bassissima gente fosse discesso, e non si vergognasse spesse fiate dire che egli da Arbizuola, villa del Savonese, havesse con una barchetta più volte, quando era garzone, menato de le cipolle à vendere à Genova, fù nondimeno huomo di grandissimo ingegno e di molto elevato spirto.

(k) In a Manuscript Remark, which he has imparted to me.

(l) Bandel, Novel 31. of the 1*st. part, fol.* 219. verso. Mr. de la Monnoie, has acquainted me with this Passage.

(B) There was something very remarkable in his Election.] He was sure of his Election before the Cardinals entred the Conclave; so that he came into it Pope. He was an Exception to the common Proverb (m), that he who enters the Conclave Pope, comes out Cardinal, Chi entra Papa, esce Cardinale. He

(m) Memoires des intrigues de la Cour de Rome, printed at Paris, 1677. pag. 20.

Conclave. He had gain'd the Faction of the Duke of Valentinois, by (C) giving him to understand, that he was his Father, and promising to treat him as his Son. He did afterwards just the contrary. No Man had ever a more Martial Spirit (D) than he. He was in Person at the taking of Towns (E), and appeared more eager than those who commanded his Armies. Abundance of Writers affirm, that he once threw St. Peter's

He had so well secured his Faction, by so many Promises, and that in his Power so many Means of enriching such as would serve him, that it was not possible for him to miss of the Papal Dignity. Besides the Riches which he had already gotten, he kept in his Hands those of others: Every one was apt to offer him Money, and even his Benefices; so that he saw himself in a Capacity of promising more than was asked. Thus you see the unjust way by which he rose to the Pontificate. 'Tis not a Protestant, but an Italian Author that says it. (n) Ma molto più velo promossono le promissioni immoderate, & infinite fatte da lui a' Cardinali, a' Principi, a' Baroni, & a ciascuno, che gli potesse essere utile a questo negotio, di quanto seppono dimandare: & hebbe oltra ciò facultà di distribuir danari, e molti beneficii, e dignità Ecclesiastiche, così delle sue proprie, come di quelle d'altri: perche alla fama della sua liberalità molti concorrevano spontaneamente ad offerirgli, che usasse a proposito suo i danari, il nome, gli uffícii, & i beneficii loro: ne fu considerato per alcuno essers molto maggiore le sue promesse di quello, che poi Pontefice potesse, o dovesse osservare: perche haveva lungamente havuto nome solo d'huomo libero, & veridico, che Alessandro Sesto, nimico suo tanto acerbo, mordendolo nell' altre cose; confessava lui essere huomo vorace; laqual laude, egli sapendo, che [illegible] più facilmente inganna gli altri, che chi è solito, & ha fama di mai non gl'ingannare; non tenne conto, per conseguire il Pontificato, di macolare. If he had not made use of this Simony, how could he have induc'd the Cardinals to give him their Voices? He, who (o) had always discovered such a turbulent and terrible Temper, and got many Enemies. Money brings every thing about; it made a Pope, before they had met for the Election: A thing never known before. Il Cardinale di San Pietro in Vincola potente d'amici, de ricchezze, haveva tirati a se i voti di tanti Cardinali, che non havendo ardire di opporsegli quegli, che erano di contraria sentenza, entrando in Conclave già l'Papa certo, e stabilito; fu con essempio incognito prima alla memoria de gli huomini, senza che altrimenti si chiudesse il Conclave, la notte medesima, che fu la notte dell' ultimo giorno d'Ottobre, assunto al Pontificato (p).

(C) By giving the Duke of Valentinois to understand that he was his Father.] I have read this no where but in Varillas. This (c) Historian relates, that the French accused Julius II. 'of having ascended St. 'Peter's Throne by two irregular Ways, to wit by 'Simony (b), and Deceit. To prove the Simony 'they instanced upon the Benefices, and Legations 'promised in the Conclave, and given after the E'lection to the Cardinals, who were Heads of the 'Factions, and they specified the Sums of Money, 'which the other Cardinals had finger'd for the 'Price of their Voices. To demonstrate the Deceit, 'it was remonstrated to the same Pope, that the 'Spanish Cardinals being engaged by Oath not to 'give their Voices to any other, than him who was 'proposed by the Duke of Valentinois, the Cardi'nal of St. Peter in Bonds, who was sworn Enemy 'to this Duke, subborned some Persons to persuade 'him, that he was his Father; that he had kept 'his Mother when she seemed only to be devoted to 'Cardinal Borgia, who was afterwards Alexan'der VI; that the Jealousie the same Borgia con'ceived against him, was the only cause of the 'Persecution he had suffered from him for Ten 'Years together; but the Business at present being 'to chuse another Pope, if he would lend him his 'Interest, he would treat him as his Son. The 'Duke of Valentinois gave Credit to the Secret that 'was told him, so far as to consent, that the Car'dinals of his Faction should elect the Cardinal of 'St. Peter in Bonds, who failed not immediately af'ter to deprive him of all Romagna and Venetia, in'stead of acknowledging him for his Son.

(D) A more Martial Spirit than he.] Here is what John le Maire Historiographer to Lewis XII. says of him. '(c) Let us farther declare another won'derful Difference in the end of this Work; I 'mean the Graciousness and Affability of the Sultan 'to the most Christian King, in Comparison of the 'Rigour and Obstinacy of the present Pope, who 'being always in his Armour, as if he would have 'his terrible and warlike Actions spoken of, as 'those of the great Tamerlan, Emperor and Sul'tan of the Tartars, will continually carry on the 'War, which becomes him as little, as dancing does 'a hooded Monk. Yet he must not expect to make a 'new World wholly Monstrous, as he is attempting; 'for Hogs will always feed on Acorns, Oaks 'will be deprived of their Leaves in due time, and 'Wood will be applied to such an use as properly 'belongs to it. But the glorious Stelliferous Crown, 'and the Eagle of Jupiter, which are bright ce'lestial Luminaries, fixed and unmoveable, as A'strologers witness, will shine in the Firmament: s 'long as the World lasts. William Budaus called him a Bloody Ringleader of Gladiators (d), and stoutly represented the Scandal that Pope gave, who at Seventy Years of Age appeared in a Warlike Habit, whilst the People were going in Procession to beg Peace of God. (e) Cum sacerdos septuagenarius Christi, Pacis conditoris & parentis Legatus, Bellona sacris operaretur, cui cum generis humani luculento dispendio litare contendebat. Idque tum, cùm profanum vulgus ad delubra pacis & concordiæ miserabili specie supplicationes mibat. Enimverò visendum spectaculum, Patrem non modo sanctissimum, sed etiam senio & canitie spectabilem, quasi ad tumultum Gallicum Bellona famâ suos evocatos cientem: non trabea, non augustis insignibus venerandum, non Pontificiis gestaminibus sacrosanctum, sed paludamento & cultu barbarico conspicuum; sed furiali, ut ita dicam, confidentia succinctum, fulminibus illis brutis & inanibus lucidum, eminente in truci vultu cultuque spirituum atrocitate. This is but a small part of Budaus's vehement Declamations against this Pope. You may see 'em at large in Flacius Illyricus, in the 20th. Book of his Catalogus testium veritatis.

(E) He was in Person at the taking of Towns, and appeared more eager.] Du Plessis Mornai adds nothing to the Expressions of Guicciardin, when he says (f), 'being resolved to attack Ferrara, he was 'advised first to take Mirandola, and being tired 'with the slow Progress of that Siege, which went 'not to his Mind (a thing not expected, and never 'known before) the Vicar of Christ on Earth was 'there in Person against a Christian Town, says 'Guicciardin, 'and tho' old and sick, was so obstinate 'and impetuous in a War that he himself had raised 'against the Christian Princes, that nothing was 'done soon enough, he was always calling to the 'Captains in a Fury, having his Quarters so near 'the Battery, that two Men were killed in his 'Kitchin, notwithstanding the Remonstrances the 'Cardinals made to him of the Disgrace he brought 'both upon himself and his See. Monstrelet (g) says, 'he deserted St. Peter's Chair, to take the 'Table of Mars the God of Battle, to display his 'Three Crowns in the Field, and to sleep in a 'Watch-Tower; and God knows what a fine Fi'gure these Mitres, Crosses, and Crosiers made, 'fluttering in the Camp; for Benedictions were 'too common. Guicciardin does very well repre'sent what concerns the Siege of Mirandola; for he observes, that this Pope had no regard to the horrible Cold of the Season, which retarded the Works of the Besiegers. (h) Partì il secondo di di (i) Gennaio da Bologna accompagnato da tre Cardinali, e giunto nel campo, alloggiò in una casetta d'un villano, sottoposta a' colpi dell' artiglierie de' nimici; perche non era più lontana dalle mura della Mirandola, che tirì in due volte una balestra comune: quivi affaticandosi, & essercitando non meno il corpo, che la mente, e che l'Imperio, cavalcava quà con inusitata bora quà, bora là per il campo, sollecitando che si desse perfettione al piantare dell' artiglierie, delle quali infino a quel giorno era piantata la minor parte, essendo impedite quasi tutte l'opere militari da' tempi asprissimi, (n) Guicciardin, lib. 6. fol. m. 165. verso.

(o) Il quale era notissimo essere di natura molto difficile, e formidabile; e ciascuno; & il quale inquietissimo in ogni tempo, e che haveva costumato l'età in continui travagli; haveva per necessità offeso molti, & essercitato odii, e nimicitie con molti huomini grandi. Id. ib.

(p) Id. ib. fol. 165.

(a) Antidotes de Florence, pag. 229. 230.

(b) As to the Simony, for what I have quoted out of Guicciardin, above in the Remark B.

(c) John le Maire de Belges, Prologue to his Treatise of Schisms, pag. 2. of the Edit. of Lyons, 1549. in Folio.

(d) Cum interim sub ipso laniста sanguinario. Budaus de asse, apud Hotting. Hist. Eccles. tom. 5. pag. 545.

(e) Id. ib. apud eumdem Hottinger. ib. pag. 540.

(f) Du Plef. Mystere d'Iniquité, pag. 578.

(g) Mr. du Plessis quotes Monstrelet in the new Additions; but it is a Mistake; for Monstrelet died before the Pontificate of Julius II. and is not the Author of those Additions.

(h) Guicciard. lib. 9. fol. 262.

(i) Of the Year, 1511.

Peter's Keys (F) into the Tiber, that he might only make uſe of St. Paul's Sword: But as theſe Writers copy one another, without citing any good Original Author, I would not adviſe any Body to vouch for the Truth of it. However, it may be ſaid, that if this Pope wanted the Qualities of a good Biſhop, he had at leaſt thoſe of a * Conquering Prince. He had a great Courage, and a Political Head, by which he formed Leagues, and broke them, according to the Exigency of Affairs. He made a moſt formidable one againſt the Republick of Venice, and paid them off, among other Things, with the Thunder of his Excommunications; but when he ſaw that the Victory which the King of France, one of the Principal Confederates, obtained over the Venetians, did too much weaken that Republick, he forſook his Allies, and reunited himſelf with it. The Emperor, and the King of France equally diſſatisfy'd with him, indeavoured to bring him to Reaſon, by a way which was always formidable to the Popes; which was, by the calling of a Council *. But he was not daunted at that, he proceeded ſeverely againſt this Council, and called another himſelf, which had the better of it, to which at laſt the King of France ſubmitted (G), in a cringing manner. 'Tis true, that Julius II. was then dead. The Sacred League which he formed in Italy, received a terrible Check by the Battle † of Ravenna; and if they had known how to make uſe of that Advantage, they would doubtleſs have humbled this haughty

* It was convened at Piſa, and then transferred to Milan, and at laſt to Lyons.

† On Eaſter-day 11th. of April, 1512.

aſprisſimi, e dalla neve quaſi continua. Complaining of his Captains, he incouraged his Soldiers with the hopes of Plunder; for he promiſed them not to capitulate with the Town, but to ſuffer them to ſack it. (k) Stette alla Concordia pochi giorni riconducendolo all' eſercito la medeſima impatienzia, & ardore; il quale non raffredo punto nel cammino la neve groſſiſſima, che tuttavia cadeva del Cielo, nè i freddi coſi ſmiſurati che a pena ſoldati poſevano tollerargli: & alloggiati in una Chieſetta propinqua alle ſue artiglierie, e più vicina alle mura, che non era l'alloggiamento primo, nè gli ſatisfacendo coſa alcuna di quelle, che ſi erano fatte, e che ſi facevano; con impetuoſiſſime parole ſi lamentava di tutti i Capitani, eccetto che di Marc' Antonio Colonna, il quale di nuovo haveva fatto venire da Modena; nè procedendo con minore impeto per l'eſſercito, hora queſti ſgridando, hora quelli altri confortando, e facendo con le parole, e con i fatti l'officio del Capitano. Prometteva, che i ſoldati procedevano virilmente, che non accetterebbe la Mirandola con alcuno patto; ma laſcierebbe in poteſtà loro il ſaccheggiarla. Mezerai (l) ſays, that the Town being taken by Compoſition the 19th. of March (m), the Pope went into it through the Breach.

(k) Guicciard. ib. fol. 263.

(l) Abregé Chronolog. Vol. 4. pag. 455. ad ann. 1511.

(m) He ſhould have ſaid the 20th. of January.

(F) That he once threw St. Peter's Keys into the Tiber.] Hitherto I have found no Authority for this, beſides this Latin Epigram of one (n) Gilbertus Ducherius Vulto, Aquaperſanus.

In Gallum ut fama eſt, bellum geſturus acerbum,
Armatam educit Julius urbe manum:
Accinctus gladio, claves in Tibridis amnem
Projicit, & ſavus, talia verba facit:
Quum Petri nihil efficiant adpralia claves,
Auxilio Pauli forſitan enſis erit.

It muſt be confeſs'd, that this is a very weak Foundation; for when a Poet has a pretty Thought, and finds no proper Subject, that he may apply it to, he makes no Scruple to ſupply the want of it, by his Amplifications and Fictions; and he will diſpenſe with the Truth, rather than loſe a witty Saying. (o) Poëta modo aliquid argutè vel acutè dicere videantur, plerumque verumne ſit an falſum, propemodum non curant. Be that how it will, this Action true or falſe of Julius II. is to be found in many Authors. One of the lateſt Writers, in whom I have read it, relates it thus. (p) Percuſſo cum ipſis (Venetis) fœdere exercitum ſuum adverſus Imperatoris confœderatos Ferrarienſem & Ludovicum XII. Regem Francorum, iniquiſſimus & perfidiſſimus (q) bellator eduxit, cum ea voce, qua ipſum non S. Petri, ſed perditiſſimi & ſceleratiſſimi latronis ſucceſſorem eſſe commonſtravit. Cum exercitu enim Roma egreſſus, Petri clavem furibundus in Tiberim jactavit, adeoque, uti ingenioſe Bibliander concluſit, omne, quod à Sancto Petro ſe habere finxit jus, Tiberino flumini reſignavit; additis hiſce verbis: Quia clavis S. Petri amplius nil juvat, (evaginato gladio) valeat gladius S. Pauli. I muſt not omit, that Hotomanus relates the ſame thing upon the Credit of Arnold du Ferron a Catholick Hiſtorian. Is eſt Julius ſecundus, ſays he (a), de quo & Arnoldus Ferronus, vir imprimis doctus, & Galliæ noſtræ hiſtoricus, & Burdegalenſis quondam Parliamenti Senator, itemque alii complures memoriæ prodiderunt: quòd cùm exercitu comparato Roma in Galliam, infeſto in Regem noſtrum animo, contenderet, ſuaſque armatas copias ipſe loricatus ex urbe per Tiberis pontem educeret, multis hominum audientibus hæc pronuntiavit: Quando nobis claves Petri nihil proſunt, age, gladium Pauli diſtringamus: ſimul claves, quas ſecum attulerat, in Tiberim projecit, gladiumque vagina eduxit. Quæ de re notum illud vetus carmen eſt (b).

(n) Du Pleſſis, pag. 580. quotes only that Author, and calls him Gilbertus Ducterius. He was of Aigueperſe in Auvergne. His Epigrams were printed at Lyons in 1538.

(o) Pipyr. Maſſo in vita Leonis X.

(p) Joan. Henricus Heidegger. Hiſtoria Papatus, pag. 192. 193.

(q) Du Pleſſis, p. 580. ſhould not have placed that Expedition ſoon after his Election to the Papacy.

(a) In Bruto fulmine, p. 110. 111.

I could never have believed, that Hotomanus could have been guilty of the Unfairneſs of which I am going to convict him. I have conſulted Arnold du Ferron, and don't find that he relates Ducherius's Epigram, as Hotomanus ſeems to ſay. The Verſes he relates are quite of another Nature, and he adds to them the Anſwer which Laſcaris made, in Favour of Julius II. I don't deny that he tells the Story of St. Peter's Keys being thrown into the Tiber; but he queſtions whether it be not a Fiction. Quin vulgatum eſt, ſays he (c), JOCONE CONFICTO an vero, quando Romani pictores Petro Claves, Paulo enſem tribuunt, illum in Gallos emiſſurum copias enſe accinctum & clavibus ad Tybrim profectum in aquas annamque projeciſſe claves, hæc inferentem, quandoquidem nihil Petri claves prodeſſent, Pauli enſem (quem mox eduxerat) auxilio futurum. Is it conſiſtent with Sincerity to build ſuch a Story upon the Authority of a great Catholick Magiſtrate, and to ſuppreſs the Declaration he made, that he knew not but it might be an Impoſture? Moſt Books are full of the like Quotations, and one cannot be at the Pains of proving oftentimes, whether they who quote Authors, do it ſincerely, without contracting a Miſtruſt, which will incline one to believe only his own Eyes. If ſo famous an Author as Francis Hotomanus gives himſelf ſo much Liberty, what won't little Authors do, who have nothing to loſe? We muſt then argue juſt contrary to him who cried out:

(d) Quid Domini facient, audent cum talia fures?

(b) 'Tis Ducherius's Epigram above-mention'd. Hotomanus gives it at length.

(c) Arn. Ferronus in Ludovico XII. fol. m. 52. verſo.

(d) Virgil. Ecl. 3. v. 16.

(G) Submitted in a cringing manner.] This confirms what I have ſaid in another Place (e), that Princes hardly ever ended their Quarrels with the Popes, but to their own Confuſion. Lewis XII. had called an Aſſembly of the Gallican Church at Tours, in the Year 1510. to know whether he could in Conſcience make War with Julius II. He was informed by that Aſſembly (f) 'that his Arms were 'juſt, and that the Pope's were not, and that he 'might Proceed to the Offenſive part in his own De-'fence. At his Requeſt, and the Emperor's, and (g) in Execution of a Decree of the Council of Conſtance; ſome Cardinals had ſummoned a general Council at Piſa; he and the Emperor had approved by their Letters Patents (h) the calling of this Council. He had protected the Fathers that compoſed it, and who declared Julius (i) 'ſuſ-'pended from the Adminiſtration of the Pontifi-'cate, and forbad Obedience to him. He had protected them, I ſay, againſt this Pope, who excommunicated and degraded them in his Council of Lateran. Nevertheleſs, this ſame King ſome time after declared, that he looked upon the Aſſembly of Piſa,

(e) In the Article of Gregory VII.

(f) Mezerai, Abr. Chronolog. Vol. 4. pag. 453.

(g) Id. ib. pag. 457.

(h) In July 1511.

(i) Ibid. pag. 462.

haughty Pontif, whereas they permitted him to recover himſelf (H) from that Blow by the little uſe they made of that Victory, to which the powerful Diverſion made in his behalf contributed very much. He obtained great Succours from the Swiſs, and was very Liberal of (I) Titles, and many Marks of Honour towards the Cantons. He Died of a Sickneſs, full of vaſt (K) Deſigns, the 22*d.* of February 1513. He was a lover of (L) Wine and Women; and he is accuſed even of (M) the Unnatural Sin-

Piſa, as a pretended Council. His (Proxies, they are the Words of the Act (k),) 'having in their 'Hands the Letters-Patents of the Moſt Chriſtian 'King, ſealed with his Seal, and ſigned by him, 'and diſpatched by his Command, after the Reve'rence and Humility required in ſuch Caſes, have 'entirely departed from the pretended Council of 'Piſa, and abſolutely renounced it, and freely 'adhered to the moſt holy Council of Lateran, 'as to the only true and Lawful one. And far'ther, according to their aforeſaid Procuration, 'they have promiſed that from thenceforth the moſt 'Chriſtian King ſhall not give any Favour or Aſ'ſiſtance in any Manner whatever, to the ſaid pre'tended Council of Piſa: Nay, that all thoſe, who 'ſhall be found in his City of Lyons, or other Parts 'of his Kingdom, Territories and Lordſhips belong'ing to him, perſiſting in heir Adherence to the pre'tended Council of Piſa, ſhall be forced by him to 'retire in a Months time; and if any of whatever 'State, Degree, Dignity or Condition they be, 'whether Seculars or Eccleſiaſticks, do obſtinately 'refuſe to Obey, he will expell 'em, and repute 'them Schiſmaticks, and as ſuch upon any order of 'the aforeſaid Holy Father, purſue 'em with main 'Force, if there is occaſion. And farther, the ſaid 'Proxies have promiſed that the aforeſaid moſt 'Chriſtian King ſhall effectually cauſe ſix Prelates, 'and four Doctors or moſt Eminent Graduates a'mongſt thoſe, that were in the pretended Council 'at Piſa, to be deputed to our aforeſaid Holy Father 'the Pope, in the name of the ſaid pretended Coun'cil of Piſa, and repreſenting the body of all thoſe 'who Adhered to it, to appear betwixt this Day and 'the firſt of January in Perſon before his Holineſs, 'in order to renounce and abjure the ſaid Council 'of Piſa, after having asked and received the Re'miſſion and Abſolution from his Holineſs Humbly 'and in a ſuitable Form. And over and above, 'that they will Adhere and Incorporate themſelves 'with the ſaid Council of Lateran, as the true 'and undoubted one, both in their own Name and 'in the Name of their Adherents. But if they 'ſhall refuſe to do this, the aforeſaid King ſhall 'give no Succours, Aſſiſtance, or Favour againſt 'the Authority of the Holy Apoſtolical See, to any 'of thoſe that ſhall be found to favour or have fa'voured the ſaid pretended Council of Piſa: On the 'contrary, he ſhall with all his Power cauſe the 'Sentences, Decrees, and Cenſures of our Holy 'Father to be Executed, even with force of Arms, 'if there be occaſion, without any Fraud or Diſſi'mulation. This is what the Prelates get who Adhere to the Intereſt of their Prince in his Quarrels with Rome: They are made a Sacrifice to the Pope, when their Quarrels are ended. 'Tis a wonder to me, that there are ſo many, who prefer their Temporal before their Spiritual Prince.

(k) It is to be found intire in Coeffeteau's Anſwer to the Myſtere d' Iniquité p. 1221. &c ſeq.

(H) They permitted him to recover himſelf from that Blow.] He recovered ſo well, that the ſame year the French were forced to abandon the Milaneſe. Nothing was ſo Prejudicial to Lewis XII. as the Superſtition of Anne de Bretagne his Wife. She filled her Head with ſo many Scruples, about the War that France made with the Pope, that ſhe retarded all the good Deſigns of her Husband (l).

(I) Very Liberal of Titles——to the Cantons.] (m) 'Whereas his Predeceſſors gave ſeveral 'Privileges to the Mendicant Friars, this Pope gave 'em to the Swiſs Cantons, who were the Principal 'Executors of his lofty Enterprizes, to whom he 'gave the perpetual Title of Defenders of the Eccleſiaſtical Liberty, with many Bulls and Standards, 'and a Sword, and a Cap of Gold, and other Preſents to oblige 'em to perform all his Com'mands.

(K) He Died of Sickneſs full of vaſt Deſigns.] This is what Guicciardin witneſſes. (b) In queſti tali e tanti penſieri (that is of Engaging the King of England to make War with France, and of Depoſing *Lewis XII*th. and of giving the Kingdom to the firſt that ſhould Conquer it) e forſe ancora i mag-tri più occulti e maggiori (perche in un animo tanto voce non era incredibile concetto alcuno, quantunque vaſto, e ſmiſurato) l' oppreſſe dopò infermita di molti giorni la morte——Principe d' animo, e di coſtanza ineſtimabile, ma impetuoſo, e di concetti ſmiſurati, per i quali che non precipitaſſe, lo ſoſtenne più la riverenza della Chieſa, la diſcordia de' Principi, e la conditione de' tempi, che la moderatione, e la prudenza: degno certamente di ſomma gloria, ſe fuſſe ſtato Principe ſecolare, ò ſe quella cura, & intentione, che hebbe ad eſaltare con l' arti della guerra, la Chieſa nella grandezza temporale, haveſſe havuta ad eſaltarla con l' arti della pace nelle coſe ſpirituali: e nondimeno ſopra tutti ſuoi anteceſſori, di chiariſſima, & honoratiſſima memoria, maſſimamente appreſſo a coloro, iquali, eſſendo perduti i veri vocaboli delle coſe, e confuſa la diſtintione del poſſe veramente, giudicano che ſia più uffitio de' Pontefici, aggiugnere con l'armi, e col ſangue de' Chriſtiani, imperio alla Sedia Apoſtolica, che l'affaticarſi con l' eſſempio buono della vita, e col correggere, e medicare i coſtumi traſcorſi per la ſalute di quelle anime, per laquale ſi magnificano che Chriſto gli habbia conſtituiti in terra ſuoi Vicarii &c.) How Judicious is this, and what an admirable Cenſure upon thoſe impatient Doctors, who believe all to be juſt, as long as the Temporal Grandeur of the Church is provided for! This in particular hits Cardinal Palavicini, who ſpeaks ſo ſoftly of Julius the II's Faults, and excuſes them by reaſon of the Temporal Advantage they brought to St. Peter's Patrimony. Fu dotato, ſays he (c), di ſpiriti eccelſi, à tal che ſe foſſe ſtato principe di dominio ſol temporale, meriterebbe d' eſſer cenſato frà gli Eroi——Certamente ſenza una tal furocia non harebbe ricuperato egli alla Chieſa il più e'l meglio del ſuo dominio.

Paul Jovius (e) witneſſes that Julius II. Died having a vaſt Deſign upon the Kingdom of Naples. (f) Hæc ingenti animo verum ægro corpore cogitantem, diuturnus fluentis alvi morbus intercepit. It was thought that the Title of Deliverer of Italy, with which he ſuffered himſelf to be flattered, was but an empty Name, whilſt the Spaniards Domineered at Naples: If God give me leave, Anſwered he, ſtriking his Stick upon the Ground, this ſhall not laſt long. (g) Ad quod Pontifex quaſſato ſcipione quo innixus pavimentum infrendendo pertundebat, reſpondit brevi futurum, ut Neapolitanam non tam ſuperis externum jugum eveniret.

(L) He was a lover of Wine and Women.] We are told of an Exclamation of the Emperor Maximilian: (h) Good God! What would become of the World, if thou didſt not take a particular care of it under the Reign of ſuch an Emperor as I am, who am but a poor Hunter, and under that of ſo Wicked and Drunken a Pope, as Julius II. Some Hiſtorians obſerve, that this Pope invented a new Name to accuſe the French of Drinking too much Wine, and diſcharging it immediately by Urine; and they add, that this was his great Failing. (i) Gallos in univerſum novo nomine augens Romanam ſupellectilem, Micturivinos vocavat, quaſi immodicos vini potores quod mox emittendum eſſet, quo vitio ipſe maxime laborabat. I proceed to his Incontinence. He had a Daughter who was Married to John Jourdain des Urſins, and he is brought in ſaying in a Dialogue with St. Peter (k) that he had had the Pox.

Note, that there is a Fault in the Words of Arnold du Ferron before-cited. He ſuppoſes that the Pope invented the Latin Word Micturivinos to ſignify the Drunkenneſs of the French; but it was not in that Language that Julius II. Expreſt himſelf, but in Italian, and the Word was Piſciavini. 'Tis ſaid that one of his Officers, a Norman by Nation, told him one Day, Faith, Holy Father, you are then a true French-Man; for you are one of the greateſt Wine-Piſſers on the Earth (l).

(M) Of the Unnatural Sin.] 'Tis certain that Julius II. is accuſed of this horrid Crime. '(n) We

(l) See Mezerai, ubi ſupra, p. 457. 460.

(m) Du Pleſſis Mornai ubi ſupra, p. 580. See alſo Heidegger. ubi ſupra.

(a) Varillas, Hiſt. de Louis XII. B. 10. p. m. 217. & ſeq. mentions ſeven.

(b) Guicciard. l. 11. fol. 385.

(c) See a Paſſage of Mezerai in the Remark O.

(d) Iſtius del Concilio l. 1. 1. 3. 5.

(e) Jovius in vita Alfonſi Ferrariæ Ducis p. m. 353. 354.

(f) Id. ib. p. 354.

(g) Id. ib.

(h) Deus æterne, niſi vigilaresquam male eſſet mundo! quem regimus nos, ego miſer venator, & ebriotus ille ac leleratus Julius. Du Pleſſ. p. 580. who quotes Joachim Curæus Freiſladienſis in Annal bus gentis Sleſiæ.

(i) Arnoldus Ferronius in Ludov XII. f. l. 52. verſo.

(k) I ſpeak of that Dialogue in the Remark N.

(l) I have this Remark from M. de la Monnoye.

(m) Du Pleſſis, Myſtere d'iniquité p. 581.

Sins and there is no ſort of Crime, but he is Charged with in a Dialogue which (N) he was feigned to have with St. Peter at the Gate of Paradiſe. The hatred he conceived againſt France, where he had found a good Sanctuary under the Pontificate of Alexander VI. was ſo exceſſive (O), that he commanded to kill all the French that could be met with, and promiſed a Recompence to whoſoever ſhould execute this Order. We are not to believe, that the Wine and Gammons which he ſent to the King of England, were (P) the true Cauſe of the War of the Engliſh againſt France. I don't know whether it is poſſible to find a certain Speech, in which he was very ill treated.

(n) Wolfii Lection. memorab. tom. 2. pag. 21.

(o) In his Etat de l'Egliſe, ad annum 1513. pag. m. 512.

(p) Page 61. of the 2d. Volume.

(q) Remarques ſur la Reponſe au Myſtere d'iniquité, 2. part. pag. 034.

(r) Joan. Zuinger, de feſto corporis Chriſti, pag. 140.

(ſ) In the Edition of Wolfius there is in the Title F. A. F. Poetæ Regii libellus de obitu Julii ſecundi.

(t) A Deſiderio ERASMO Roterodamo conſcriptus eſſe diverſorum teſtimoniis confirmatur apud Melch. Adam. in vitis Theologor. Germ. p. m. 96. (it ſhould be 97.)— & pag. 167. (it ſhould be 197.) in vitis Medicor. Germ. Placcius de anonymis n. 239. pag. 72.

(u) Eraſm. epiſt. 1. lib. 12 pag. 575. 576.

(w) Mezeray, Abr. Chronol. tom. 4. pag. 464. add ann. 1513.

(x) Convitava il Re d'Inghilterra alla guerra: aliqui haveva ordinato che per decreto del Concilio Lateranenſe ſe trasferiſſe il nome del Re Chriſtianiſſimo: ſopra laqual coſa era già ſcritta una Bolla, contenendoſi in eſſa medeſimamente la privatione della dignità, e del titolo di Re di Francia, concendendo quel Regno a qualunque lo occupaſſe. Guicciard. lib. 11. fol. 325.

'read in a Book of our Divines of Paris, of two 'young Gentleman abuſed by him, whom Queen 'Anne, the Wife of King Lewis XII. had recom-'mended to Cardinal de Nantes to conduct them in-'to Italy. Probably du Pleſſis gives us here a Tranſlation of theſe Words of Wolfius. (n) Legitur in Commentario Magiſtrorum Pariſienſium, de Julio ſecundo Papa, quod duobus nobiliſſimi generis adoleſcentibus, quos Anna Galliarum Regina Nanetenſi Cardinali informandos commiſerat, & aliis multis diabolicæ rabiæ (probe facimus) ſtuprum intulerit. This Quotation ſeems too indeterminate; he ſhould have told us where, and in what time that Book of the Paris Doctors was printed. John Crepin undertaking to relate this Adventure, has fallen into an Anachroniſm: We read, ſays he (o), in a certain 'Commentary of the Doctors of Paris, againſt the 'Lutherans, that this Julius, inflamed with a 'Diabolical Rage, had his Will of two young Gen-'tlemen of a noble Family, whom Queen Anne of 'France had ſent to Robert Cardinal de Nantes, to 'be inſtructed by him. The Doctors of Paris would have had a care of inſerting ſuch a thing in a Controverſial Piece againſt the Lutherans; if they inſerted it any where, 'tis in the Writings they publiſhed againſt Julius, under Lewis XII.

(N) A Dialogue which he was feigned to have.] 'Tis a moſt Satyrical Piece. Wolfius has inſerted it in his Lectiones memorabiles (p). Rivet (q) affirms, that it was printed at Paris with the King's Licence, in the Year 1612, at the end of the Acts of the Council of Piſa. The Subſtance of it is this. 'Paulo poſt ipſius mortem Vir quidam doctus in 'lucem emiſit Dialogum, quem inſcripſit, Julius, in 'quo Pontificem hunc horrendorum criminum in ſimu-'lat, nim. quod fuerit homo palam ſceleroſus, 'temulentus, homicida, Simoniacus, Veneficus, 'perjurus, rapax portentoſius libidinum generibus 'undique conſpurcatus, denique ſcabie, quam vo-'cant Gallicam, totus coopertus (r). Some ſay, that Fauſtus Andrelinus was the (ſ) Author of that cutting Piece. Some have aſcribed it to Eraſmus; Mr. Placcius affirms, that many Authors witneſs it in (t) the two Places of Melchior Adam quoted by him. I have conſulted thoſe two Places, and have found no other Teſtimony than that of Leo Juda. Thus Mr. Placcius deceives us. Eraſmus was very much troubled, that ſuch a Piece ſhould be aſcribed to him: He juſtifies himſelf very ſeriouſly in a Letter. Dialogi cujuſdam ſuſpicionem mihi moliuntur impingere. Is ut ex argumento ſatis conſtat, ſcriptus eſt in odium divi Julii Pontificis Maximi ſchiſmatis tempore, ſed à quo incertum, ante quinquennium deguſtavi veriùs quàm legi. Poſt reperi in Germania apud quoſdam deſcriptum, ſed variis titulis. Quidam teſtantur Hiſpani cujuſpiam eſſe, ſed ſuppreſſo nomine, rurſus alii Fauſto Poëta tribuebant, 'alii Hieronymo Balbo. Ego quid de his conjectem non habeo, ſubodoratus ſum quoad licuit, verum nondum perveſtigavi, quod animo meo faceret ſatis. Inceptiis quiſquis ſcripſit, at majore ſupplicio dignus, quiſquis evulgavit. At minor eſſe qui ſolo Styli argumento mihi obtrudere parent, quum nec mea ſit phraſis, niſi prorſus ipſe mihi ſum ignotus, nec mirum ſit futurum, etiam ſi qui in oratione nonnihil referunt Eraſmicum, quum verſer in manibus omnium, & referimus fere, in quorum aſſidua lectione verſamur (v).

(O) His hatred —— againſt France, —— was ſo exceſſive, that he commanded to kill.] '(w) Julius' Rage had no Bounds; he had made a Decree 'in the Name (x) of the Council to transfer the 'Kingdom of France, and the Title of Moſt Chriſtian, to the King of England. As he was upon 'the Point of publiſhing it, Heaven taking pity of 'him and of Chriſtendom, called him out of the 'World the 23d. of February. He died of an He-'ctick Fever, cauſed, as was ſaid, by the Uneaſi-'neſs he was under, that he could not bring the 'Venetians to come to an Agreement with the Em-'peror; ſo furious were his Paſſions, and more ſuit-'able to the Sultan of the Turks than to the com-'mon Father of Chriſtians. As for his Order of 'murthering the French, I have read it only in the 109th. and 110th. Pages of Francis Hotomanus's Brutum fulmen. Si qua patrum memoria, ſays he, in hoc regno contigerunt recordari volumus, primum hoc reperiemus: Ludovicum XII. (at, quem Regem? qui Patris patriæ nomen ſummo bonorum omnium conſenſu adeptus eſt) urbes aliquot Italiæ, bello captas, Papæ Julii ſecundi ditioni adjunxiſſe. Papam interjectis aliquot menſibus hanc Regi pro accepto beneficio gratiam retuliſſe, ut non modo eum ſchiſmaticum & hæreticum pronuntiaret, proſcriberet, diris ſuis excommunicationum fulminibus infeſtaretur, verum etiam Gallos omnes hoſtilem in modum cruciandos interficiendoſque curaret: præmium etiam percuſſoribus polliceretur peccatorum omnium veniam, & impunitatem, ſi quis vel unicum Gallum quoquo modo trucidaret —— Quo nuntio (a) Julius accepto, tanto dolore atque iracundia exarſit, ut non modo Gallis omnibus aqua & igne interdiceret, verum etiam obvium quemque maſtari, trucidarique imperaret: præmiit etiam, ut dixi ficarios ac percuſſores invitaret.

(P) The Wine and Gammons —— were the true cauſe of the War.] Spondanus has been ſo unjuſt as to inſinuate this, and to jeſt upon it; and he pretends that Polydore Virgil ſaid nothing of it, to ſave at once the Honour of Italy and England. Polydore was an Italian, and lived in England; he was therefore concerned in the Glory of both theſe Nations. Now he thought it unworthy of Italy to win People by ſuch Allurements, and unworthy of England to ſuffer it ſelf to be caught by ſuch a Bait. Theſe are the Words of the Annaliſt. (b) Feſtivum eſt quod refert Guicciardinus, appuliſſe hoc tempore in Angliam Pontificiam longam navem Falerno vino, caſeis, ſuminibuſque onuſtam, quæ nomine Pontificis Regi ac Principibus, Antiſtibuſque donata, ab omnibus miro applauſu accepta ſunt: & plebem, quam plerumque non minus levia quàm gravia movent, ad eam navem videndam ſumma cum voluptate accurriſſe, gloriantem antea nunquam in Inſula navim ullam cum Pontificiis vexillis conſpectam. Quibus bellam gentem nobis depingit, Guicciardinus, & vini acutique guſtûs appetentem, quibus ſciret Pontifex eam facile in partes ſuas trahi poſſe; ſicuti olim Narſes feciſſe dicitur (1), ut Longobardos in Italiam alliceret; omnis generis Poma, aliarumque deliciarum irritamenta, quorum Italia ferax eſſet, mittens, ut pauperrima ſua rura deſerentes ad occupandam regionem cunctis refertam divitiis venirent. Eam verò rem adeò inſignem, & Regi, principibuſque, & antiſtitibus, ac populo maximè acceptam gratamque, cùm Polydorus Virgilius ſua hiſtoria Anglicana non inſeruerit; exiſtimamus, eum ut Italum, & in Anglia commorantem, utriuſque nationis gravitati parcere voluiſſe. Mezerai comes much nearer the Truth; for he obſerves, that the Pope ſpurred on Henry VIII. with the Ambition of protecting the true Church. 'The 'Engliſh, ſays he (c), were upon the point of break-'ing with the King. For the Pope had made 'im 'drunk with the Vain-glory of defending the Holy 'See, and with the Fumes of delicious Wines of 'all ſorts, with which he had ſent them a great 'Ship laden, together with Gammons, Sauſages, 'and Spices, to make them reliſh it the better. According to Varillas (d), it was out of a Motive of Religion, that an Engliſh Biſhop founded an Alarm for

(x) That is, that he had been ſuſpended by the Council of Piſa, transferred to Milan.

(b) Spondanus ad ann. 1512. n. 3. p. m. 289. where theſe Words have been placed as a Summary, Quibus illiciis Pontifex ſibi Anglos benevolos reddiderit.

(1) Paul. Diacon. de geſt. Longob. lib. 1. cap. 5.

(c) Abregé Chronol. tom. 4. pag. 459. ad ann. 1512.

(d) Varill. Hiſtoire de Louis XII. B. 8. pag. 81.

treated. Varillas, who ſpeaks of it, is liable to Cenſure (Q). The Hiſtory of Venice, written by Cardinal Bembo, is ſufficient to ſhew the Paſſion, Treachery, and Prodigious Ambition of Julius II. tho' this Hiſtorian be leſs Prolix upon it than Guicciardin.

This Pope was ſo diſcouraged with the Plaiſters that his Surgeon put to no purpoſe upon an Ulcer, that he would no longer ſuffer him to dreſs it. The Surgeon, who had promiſed with an Oath not to uſe any more that Remedy, tricked (R) the Pope, and cured him. Blandel tells a Story (S) that is pleaſant enough. I have juſt now read in a French Writer, that this Pope was ſo malicious, as to invent a Fable prejudicial to the Memory of Gaſton de Foix, Duke of Nemours, and which might increaſe the Superſtition of the People, to the Diſadvantage of France. The Story was, that a Serpent had been ſeen to come out of the Duke of Nemours's Tomb. The Author, who tells this (T), ſpeaks very ill of this Pope.

JU-

(e) Henry VIII. gave that Entertainment.

for War the Day after the Feaſt (e), where the chief Members of the Parliament were treated with the good Wines and excellent Cheeſes which the Pope's Ship had brought to London. This Prelate repreſented, that Lewis XII. was a Perſecutor of the Church, and that it 'would be an eternal Diſ-'grace to the Engliſh Nation to live in Peace with 'the Perſecutors of the Holy See. Varillas ſhould have a little better explained all the Reaſons of this Prelate, and not have been contented to give us to underſtand, that ſome Political Reaſons were added to thoſe Religious Motives. The Engliſh Prelate urged no doubt, that Lewis XII. would depoſe the Pope, only to create another in his room, who would permit him to conquer Italy. This certainly was the true Spring that put Henry VIII. in Motion; he plainly perceived, that if no Oppoſition was made to Lewis XII. would reap all the Glory of deposing Julius II. the Scourge of Chriſtendom, and of Creating a new Pope at his Pleaſure, and of ſubduing all Italy. Humane Policy and Jealouſie do not ſuffer a Prince to conſent to ſuch an aggrandizing of the Glory and Power of his Neighbours; and for this Reaſon Lewis XII. law the Forces of England, Switzerland and Spain againſt him.

(f) Varillas, Hiſt. de Louis XII. l. 8. pag. 8. ad ann. 1511.

(g) Ibid. pag. 10.

(Q) Mr. Varillas is liable to Cenſure.] He ſays (f), that Pompey Colonna, and Antony Savelli, underſtanding, that the Pope was fallen into 'a ſort 'of a Swoon, that laſted Four Hours, and gave 'occaſion to believe he was dead——— (g), called then Friends together, run through the Streets, 'incouraged the Townſmen to a Sedition, and led 'them to the Town-Hall, where Colonna, the moſt 'eloquent of the Two, pronounc'd the moſt Satyrical Speech that is extant, againſt the Popes in 'general, and Julius in particular. He pretended, 'that they had moſt of them uſurped the Sovereign 'Authority, ever ſince they had uſurpt it; and 'reckoning up the Towns that had heretofore been 'under Tyrants, he concluded, that not one of 'them had been ſo ill treated as that of Rome. He 'entered into the Particulars of the Conduct of the 'Popes, and dropt ſome Things upon that Subject, 'which it is not decent to relate. Mr. Varillas adds (h) 'that Guicciardin had written this Speech upon 'the Memoirs of two or three Perſons that heard 'it; but it has been taken out of the Body of his 'Hiſtory. Nevertheleſs 'tis to be found printed apart 'in Italian; and the French Tranſlator who recovered it, reſtored it to the place it was taken from. I have occaſion for another Paſſage of this Author, before I make my Criticiſm: Here is the beginning of his Preface (i). 'When, ſays he, I cauſed 'the 8th. Book of this Hiſtory to be printed, I 'thought that the Speech of Pompey Colonna, to 'the principal Citizens of Rome, to oblige 'em to 'ſhake off the Pope's Yoke, was a very rare Piece. 'And indeed, I had never ſeen it, except in the 'King's Library. But I have known ſince, that 'it has been reprinted by the care of the late 'M. de Wickquefort, at the beginning of the Book 'he publiſhed with the Title of Thuanus Reſtitutus, 'and conſequently 'tis not hard to recover. It is 'true however, that the ſame Mr. Wickquefort has 'acquitted himſelf, in that reſpect, but of one part 'of his Duty to the Publick, ſince he has not 'mentioned the Motives which occaſion'd that 'Speech, which is the moſt inſolent that can be read; 'and whereas Guicciardin has been as negligent to 'relate them, the curious will not be diſpleaſed, if 'I ſupply the Deficiency of theſe two Hiſtorians. 'The firſt Motive, &c.

(h) Ibid. pag. 13.

(i) Of the 3d. tome of the Hiſtory of Lewis XII.

I can neither affirm nor deny that this Speech is in the French King's Library; but I can ſay, that Guicciardin has not inſerted it in his Hiſtory. He only ſpeaks by the bye (k) of the Tumult theſe two Perſons endeavoured to raiſe; and he does not ſay, that it was Pompey Colonna, who made that Speech, as being the moſt Eloquent. 'Tis not true, that the French Tranſlator has reſtored this Speech to the Place from whence it was taken. If it was ſo, it would not be a rare Piece, the French Tranſlation of Guicciardin being a Book common enough. It is true, that it was reprinted by the care of Mr. de Wickquefort at the beginning of Thuanus Reſtitutus; but this doubtleſs miſled Varillas. They have left out of the Fourth Book of Guicciardin a long Diſcourſe concerning the manner how the Popes became Temporal Lords of part of Italy. The Proteſtants (l) have preſerved this Diſcourſe, and publiſhed it by itſelf a great many Times. It is to be found (m) in Latin, Italian, and French, at the end of Thuanus Reſtitutus, printed at Amſterdam, in 1663, and 'tis in the Place where it ought to be in the French Tranſlation of Guicciardin, done by Jerom Chomedey, and printed at Geneva in the Year 1593, with Summaries and Marginal Notes (n), which breathe a true Proteſtant Spirit. Varillas having heard ſomething of the Story of this Diſcourſe, and ſomething concerning the Speech of thoſe who endeavoured to diſpoſe the Romans to an Inſurrection in the Year 1511, has confounded one with the other.

(k) Guicciardin, l. 10. fol. 282. See alſo Paul Jovius in vita Leonis X. p. m. 18. See the Abridgment of Guicciardin.

(l) With how much Pleaſure Perſons of that Religion read this Diſcourſe, one may ſee by the Preface of Simler to his Edition of Guicciardin, and by what is ſaid of it in the Hiſtory of the Council of Trent, Book 2.

(m) Where it is to be found.

(n) Numerous Paſſages of Scripture, Paſſages of the Fathers, Hiſtorical Remarks, &c.

(R) Tricked the Pope, and cured him.] Kondé brings in this Example in a Diſſertation, where he enquires whether a Patient ought to be cheated. Is celeberrimus Chirurgus Jo. mes de Vigo dum nodum carnoſum Julii ſecundi contumacia cum natura fier, & Pontificem omne genus remediorum conſpernentem reſpuere animadverteret, novam quandam medendi rationem meditatus eſt. Papyros ſiquidem cerates ſuffitibus conſperſas non cum panis ſigneri mica molliore, & aromati ſubtilioris in aqua roſarum & plantaginis excepti fomento, ad tertias ſolis horas decoxit, expreſſisque demum illis, & pauxillo melle admixto, quod nullis doloris unguentis ſe non naturam jurejurando recepiſſe, brevi ſumma cum omnium admiratione Pontificem a gravi & moleſto affectu liberavit (a).

(a) Islandel tells a Story that is pleaſant enough.

(S) Islandel tells a Story that is pleaſant enough.] The Germans, ſays he, 'having aſking to have leave 'to eat Fleſh upon St. Mark's Day (which is a 'Faſt Day); Julius would not ſtaly to grant 'that Favour, but granted it on Condition they 'ſhould drink no Wine the ſame Day. It was the 'ſame thing as a Refuſal; there being more to be 'loſt than gotten by ſuch a Courtely.

(T) The Author who tells this Story ſpeaks very ill of this Pope.] I begin with the Story: Nondum ſive qui prædicarent ſuperſtitioſa fonda tractabantur mendacio fibrum exuere, & humanæ ſortis naturam ab ipſarum ſape aliquid fidei non habentium, ſed Phyſicorum notione. Note by the way, that he ſays the Friers were the principal Promoters of the Story, and that 'tis a common thing with them to coin Prodigies. I omit his Criticiſm of Ariſtotle and Plutarch (d), who will only take what ſuits their Deſign.

(d) Lib. de Oraculorum defectu.

Vita Julii II. apud Rer. Italic. tom.

JULIUS III. created Pope the 7th. of February 1550, was called John Maria del Monte. He was of mean Birth, and a True Soldier of Eccleſiaſtical Fortune. He roſe Step by Step (A), till he came to be Preſident of the Council of Trent. He was a very voluptuous (B) Man, and paſſionately loved a Young Boy (C) very ugly and mean. When he was made Pope, he gave him (D) his Cardinal's Cap, and made a pleaſant derat incrementum. He relates afterwards how this Pope deceieved Cardinal George d'Amboiſe, and made Rome ring with the Sound of Arms; and how he was delighted with Satyrical Verſes againſt France. He forgave a Poet many Crimes, and ordered him a good Sum of Money for a Diſtich, which we ſhall ſee below (f) Verſiculis ad Gallorum ignominiam ſpectantibus mirè delectabatur: adeò ut poetæ ſtateres aureos ducentos numeravit, præter delictorum abolitionem, qui hos vulgaſſet:

(f) Id. ib. pag. 556.

Julius evulſit Gallis cythereius alas:
Martius hic priſco Cæſare major erit.

Foracatulus my Author, in this Remark, oppoſes to theſe Two Verſes a Satyrical Diſtich that was made againſt this Pope. (g) Eminuit in contrarium non inelegans Diſtichum, dignum, opinor, quod Catulli eſſet, non autoris incogniti:

(g) Id. ib.

Fœx Ligurum Romam, ponti fex concutitit armis
Julius, huic Brutum Gallia fortis alit.

Some (continues he) obſerv'd, that the Time was come in which another Julius, by Proſuſion of borrowed Money, obtained the Pontificate, and ſupplanted his Competitors; but that this new Julius had nothing common with the other, as to Learning, Clemency, or Honeſty; nor with the Apoſtle St. Peter, no, not as to the Fiſher's-Boat, ſince the Apoſtle imploy'd it for an honeſt Livelihood, but Julius in Piracy. (h) Nonnulli adjiciebant rediiſſe pro certo Julii ſeculum, quo ille numirum profuſa largitione Pontificatum indeptus fuerat conflato multo ære alieno, ſuperatiſque, ut Tranquillus (1) ait, duobus competitoribus ætate & dignitate potioribus

(h) Id. ib.

(1) In Julio, cap. 13.

——Julius demum qui nihil doctrinæ cum illo primo & perpetuo Dictatore commune habuit, nihil fidei & benevolentiæ, nihil cum Apoſtolo Petro ſanctitatis & prudentiæ, nihil morum (niſi forſan quod Petrus in mari innoxiam piſcationem exercuit, ille aliquandiu, ut ajunt, piraticam) poſt novenne imperium, & ſi quid menſium excurrit, obſtinatum in Gallias animum ad Manes tulit.

(A) He had roſe Step by Step.] Not to ſpeak of his firſt Advancements, I ſhall firſt Obſerve, that he aſſiſted in the Council of Lateran, and made a ſolemn Speech at the Concluſion of it. He was Archbiſhop of Siponte, Auditor of the Apoſtolical Chamber, and twice Governor of Rome. He was given for an Hoſtage when Rome was ſacked by the Troops of Charles V, and after his Promotion to the Cardinalſhip, he was frequently Legate in the principal Provinces of the Eccleſiaſtical State, and at Bologna. ' He took the Name of Julius, in Memory of ' Julius II. who had rais'd his Family by the Promotion ' of Antony del Monte his Uncle, to the Cardinalſhip, ' and from whom he obtained the Archbiſhoprick ' of Siponte. He was born at Rome, in that part ' of the Town called del Parione; but his Family ' was originally of Monte San-Savino in Tuſcany, ' from whence he took the Name of Monte, inſtead ' of that of Ginecchi, which he bore before. (k) He obtained of the Duke of Tuſcany, the Inveſtiture of Monte-San Savino for his Brother: he could not deny himſelf the Pleaſure of ſeeing his Family Lord it in that Place. (l) Impotens ſibi temperandi ab eâ voluptate quâ ſuos adſpiceret in illis dominantes inter quos educati fuerant æquales.

(i) Taken from Palavicini Hiſtor. Concil. Trident. lib. 13. c. 10. n. 8.

(k) Amelot de la Houſſaye, in the Margin of his Tranſlation of Father Paul, p. 280. ex Onuphr.

(l) Palavicini, ib.

(B) He was a very voluptuous Man.] Here is what Thuanus ſays of him. (m) Sub id tempus Julius III. intemperantia vitæ magis quam ſenio effœtus fato conceſſit, qui Joanne Baptiſta Balduini fratris F. Mortuo, cum non ita a Fabiano juniore Baptiſtæ fratre, ſollicitaretur, totum ſe voluptatibus mancipaverat, parato ad delicias nobili illo ſeceſſu, ſtructura & operibus antiquis admirando, in quo fere reliquam vitam à negotiis vacuus cum amicis ſui ſimilibus, inter ludos, aleam, commœdias, & quæ talia comitari amant, facto faſtigio indigna oblectamenta, continuatis noctibus diebusque tranſegit.

(m) Thuan. lib. 15. pag. 300.

(C) A young Boy very ugly and mean.] Some ſaid it was his Son, others denied it, and told how Cardinal del Monte having found this Lad playing Tricks with a Monkey in the Streets, took him into his Service, becauſe there was no Body but he that durſt play with that Creature. This was the Foundation of a Kindneſs which afterwards grew an irregular Paſſion. This Lad had nothing in him but what was diſguſting, only he had gotten a Cuſtom of Buffoonry. Thomas Eraſtus is the Author of this; theſe are his own Words. (n) Habet puerum quendam, nigrum, impem, arrogantiſſimam beſtiam, ineptam, ignorantem & planè inertem, niſi quod nonnihil eorum quæ ſcurræ, dicteriorum in ore habet. In ſumma, corpore & animo monſtrum. Quis, unde, aut cujus ille puer ſit, tam variæ ſunt hominum Sententiæ & opiniones, ut nemo exploratum habere videatur. Animadverti ego quoſdam, qui filium arbitrabantur; & qui filium negabant, ingeniosè aliorum dicta refutare, atque in plateis repertum eduxiſſe è parvulo, propter ſimilitudinem, cum qua præter illum nemo hominum ludere audeat. Ea re Cardinalem (aut Epiſcopum rum) ita delectatum, ut pro ſuo habuerit. Hunc puerum, miſer, ita amat perditè, ita deperit (dicitur autem alios omnes vincere vel audacia) ut nihil poſſit dici vehementius. Thuanus ſays a thing which confirms part of this: as firſt, that this Boy was called the Ape, even when he had obtained the Cardinal's Cap. In the ſecond place, that he had his Name, becauſe of his Employment with the Cardinal his Maſter, which was to look after an Ape. (o) Soluti ad omnem licentiam animi homo: they are the Words of this great Hiſtorian, which give a very ill Character of Pope Julius III. Statim adepta dignitate qualis eſſet, omnibus manifeſtum fecit. Nam cum antiquæ conſuetudinis ſit, ut novus Pontifex galerum, cui velit, ſuum largiatur, eum juveni cuidam cui Innocentio nomen, quique, quod in familia ſimia curam gereret. Simia etiam poſt adeptam dignitatem nomen retinuit, cognomine etiam ſuo atque inſignibus attributis donavit. See the Notes upon the Confeſſion Catholique de Sancy, page 249. of the Edition 1699.

(n) Thomas Lubertus (qui Eraſtus poſtea voce Græca appellari amavit) in epiſtola ad Pelicinum, apud Hottingerum Hiſt. Eccleſiaſt. tom. 5. pag. 572.

(o) Thuanus, ib. 6. pag. 121. col. 1.

(D) He gave him his Cardinal's Cap.] We have juſt ſeen in Thuanus, that Cardinal del Monte finding himſelf Pope, immediately conferred his Cap, his Name, and his Arms (a) upon a young Fellow that was called Innocent, and had the Charge of a Monkey. Eraſtus, whom I have already cited, gives us a more particular Account. This Boy was left at Bologna, ſo that Julius III. who would not bring him to Rome before he had made him a Cardinal, and who wanted a little time to make that Promotion go down, was very uneaſy at his abſence, and endeavoured to find a remedy for it. He was never brisk and pleaſant, but when he heard of his Innocent. He ordered him to come near Rome, that he might have an Opportunity to go and ſee him; and having ſent for him once ſecretly into the City, he expected him at the Windows with all the Impatience a of Man, to whom his Miſtreſs has promiſed a Night. He was heard ſay, that the chief Reaſon why he rejoiced for being Pope, was becauſe it gave him an Opportunity of ſerving Innocent; and that he thought himſelf leſs indebted to the Cardinals for making him Pope (b), than for having conſented to the Promotion of Innocent to a Cardinal's Hat. He appointed him his principal Miniſter, and Interceſſor for all thoſe that would purchaſe his Favours. (c) Dum Roma poſt electionem commoraretur, (manſerat autem Innocentius, id ei nomen, Bononiæ) dicitur nunquam lætus fuiſſe, niſi dum aliquid de Innocentio intelligeret. Et audivi ego à gravibus viris, inter tam multos Bononienſes, qui Romam ſint profecti, neminem eſſe reperiri, quem ſciret cum Innocentio, aut ſuſpiceretur fuiſſe, qui non interrogatus ab eo eſſet, quid, & quom do Innocentius ageret. Poſt aliquot menſes propius Romam accedere juſſit, ut ad eum deambulatum aliquando Roma exire poſſet. Non enim potuit adduci, ut pateretur eum ingredi Romam, niſi galero rubeo eſſet ornatum turpe caput. Ab hac re plurimi Cardinales videbantur pleaſant Anſwer (E), when the Unworthineſs of the Perſon was repreſented to him. His Diſcourſes had but little Gravity in them, as appears from the Reflection he one Day made (F) upon the Anſwer of two Cardinals. The want of Gravity was not his greateſt Fault: 'tis ſaid that his Diſcourſe proceeded ſometimes to Profaneneſs and Blaſphemy; as when he excuſed his Paſſion (G) by the Anger that God expreſs'd againſt Adam for an Apple. During the Conclave in which he was Elected, ſome of his Letters were Intercepted, which made it conjectured, that this future Pope would be a Lewd Man; for thoſe Letters (H) were ſtuffed with the moſt extravagant Obſcenities

(a) See the Remark M. in the Margin, Let. b.

(b) Compare with this what is ſaid in the Remark M. Numb. (2.)

(c) Eraſtus apud Hottingerum, ubi ſupra.

videbantur abhorrere, minimeque paſſuri, ut in Cardinalium numerum cooptaretur, quem ne hominem quidem eſſe cognoviſſent. Accerſivit igitur noctu aliquando in urbem clam, atque ita in feneſtris expectabat, ut ii ſolent, quibus amica, qua nihil habent in vita charius, pollicita eſt noctem. Dicitur dixiſſe, ſe lætari, quod in ampliſſimam illam poteſtatem eſſet collocatus, non tam ſua cauſa, quàm quòd poſſet bene de Innocentio mereri. Et tandem factus Cardinalis dixit, ſe pro beneficio magis Cardinalibus obſtrictum eſſe, quàm quòd ſe Pontificem eſſe voluerint. Præterea, ut qui aliquid à ſe velint, id per Innocentium eſſe impetrandum. Quamobrem Legati Civitatum, Principum & Regum ad puerum concurrunt, illi ſua negotia exponunt, ut is de rebus ſuis graviſſimis etiam ad Papam referat. Some Satyrs were Publiſhed at Rome, in which it was ſaid that this Favourite, as ugly as he was, was another Ganymede. The Pope made no Myſtery of it; but ſometimes told the Cardinals ſome Stories of this Boy's Laſcivious Tricks. (d) Roma fama erat, & libellis quoque perſcriptum fuit, à Jove Ganymedem foveri, licet deformem: ſed nec ipſe Pontifex hoc ad reliquos Cardinales diſſimulare, & per jocum fertur aliquando commemorare, quàm ſit laſcivus adoleſcens & importunus. I ſhall ſpeak again of the Fortune of this Man in the Remark M.

(d) Sleidanus, Hiſtor. l. 21. fol. m. 609. verſo.

(e) Bodin, de la Republique l. 5. c. 4. p. m. 748.

(f) Adjungis Plutarchi eum (Ciceronem) cum Murænam Conſul defenderet, quemcumque accuſaſſet Cato, ſcite exagitaſſe ſententias & præcepta Stoicorum in Catone, unde riſus ingens à corona pervenerit ad ſubſellia, ſubriſiſſe porro ipſum Catonem leviter atque ad conſeſſum dixiſſe, quam ridiculum, Judices, habemus Conſulem. Vavaſſor de ludicra dictione p. 329.

(g) John Creſpin, de l'eſtat de l'Egliſe, ad ann. 1550. p. m. 551. ex Paulo Vergerio.

(E) A pleaſant Anſwer.] I will make uſe of John Bodin's Words. (e) 'The Prince who Exalts 'a worthleſs Creature above Men of Merit, or that 'ſets him in the Rank of the greateſt Perſons, in 'doing good to one, does injury to all the reſt: 'As it was repreſented by the Conſiſtory of Cardinals to Pope Julius del Monte, when he gave his 'Cardinal's Cap, to the young Lad he Loved; that 'it was a great Diſhonour to admit him who had 'neither Virtue nor Knowledge, nor Birth, nor 'Eſtate, nor any other Quality to deſerve, as they 'ſaid, to arrive to ſuch a Dignity. But the Pope, 'who was very Facetious, Addreſſing himſelf to 'the other Cardinals; What Virtue, ſaid he, what 'Nobility, what Knowledge, what Honour have 'you found in me, to make me Pope? Was not 'this to make a Jeſt of the Sacred College? And 'might not Cato's Exclamation be applied to this Pope '(f) What a Ridiculous Conſul have we? Some report Julius's Anſwer thus: 'Pray what 'have you found in me, to do me the Honour of 'making me Pope without deſerving it? Let us 'Advance then this young Man, and he will deſerve it (g). Theſe laſt Words are a ſly Jeer, and reprove a very common Fault. When a Man is poſſeſt of an Imployment, he finds a thouſand Flatterers, who give out, he has very well deſerv'd it. Montagne ſays ſomewhere, that Ariſtheneus once made the Athenians ſenſible of the Abuſe committed in the promotions to Publick Poſts; he adviſed 'em to give order, that their Aſſes ſhould be made to Plough as well as their Horſes. It was Anſwered him, that that Animal was not made for it; 'It's 'all one, replied he, all depends upon your Decree; 'for the moſt Ignorant and Unqualified, that you 'imploy, as Commanders in your Wars, fail not 'immediately to become highly Meritorious, becauſe 'you imploy them.

(F) Upon the Anſwer of two Cardinals.] They found him in the Court of his Palace in a very indecent Poſture; for by reaſon of the Heat he had put off his Cloaths, and was Walking in his Drawers. He obliged them to do the like, and afterwards aſked them, what the People would ſay of them, ſhould they go and ſhew themſelves in that Figure in the Field of Flora, and the Streets of Rome? They would take us, anſwered they, for Rogues, and would throw Stones at us. Therefore, replied he, 'tis to our Cloaths we are obliged for not being thought Rogues: How much then are we indebted to our Cloaths? (h) Cum aliquando exutis veſtibus, diploide & caligis tantùm indutus, in aula, quod ferveret tempeſtas, ambularet, venerunt Cardinales duo, collocuturi cum ipſo. Quos ipſe ad exuendas veſtes ſuas, & deambulandum ſecum urgebat, mox autem nudos interrogabat: Quid ſi in Campo Floræ, aut per plateas nudi ſic deambularemus, quid oro populum exiſtimatis de nobis judicaturum? Responderunt: Judicarent nos eſſe nebulones, & conjicerent in nos rudera atque lapides. Excepit Pontifex: Ergo quòd non habemur pro nebulonibus, id acceptum ferre debemus noſtris veſtibus. Quantum igitur, ô fratres, debemus illis noſtris veſtibus?

(h) Cum aliquando exutis veſtibus, diploide & caligis tantùm indutus, in aula, quod ferveret tempeſtas, ambularet, venerunt Cardinales duo, collocuturi cum ipſo. Quos ipſe ad exuendas veſtes ſuas, & deambulandum ſecum urgebat, mox autem nudos interrogabat: Quid ſi in Campo Floræ, aut per plateas nudi ſic deambularemus, quid oro populum exiſtimatis de nobis judicaturum? Responderunt: Judicarent nos eſſe nebulones, & conjicerent in nos rudera atque lapides. Excepit Pontifex: Ergo quòd non habemur pro nebulonibus, id acceptum ferre debemus noſtris veſtibus. Quantum igitur, ô fratres, debemus illis noſtris veſtibus? (ii) Bullinger in vita MS. Julii III. apud Heidegerum Hiſt. Patatus p. 235.

(G) He excuſed his Paſſion by the Anger that God Expreſſed.] The thing is thus, related in John Creſpin's Book. '(i) He loved amongſt other 'Diſhes, to Eat Hogs Fleſh, and Peacocks: But 'his Phyſician having cautioned him againſt Eating 'Bacon, becauſe it was naught for the Gout, with 'which he was often Tormented, he could not abſtain from it; ſo that the Phyſician ſecretly adviſed 'the Steward to give Orders that no Hogs-Fleſh 'ſhould be ſerved in. As therefore it was Omitted 'for ſome time, and the Pope perceived it, he aſked 'the Steward, where was his Diſh of Pork? The 'Steward Anſwered, the Phyſician had ordered that 'none ſhould be brought in. Upon which he Exclaimed in this manner, bring me my Diſh, (a diſpetto di Dio)——Seeing one Day a Peacock 'at his Table, which no Body touched, keep, ſaid 'he, this Peacock cold for my Supper, and lay the 'Table in the Garden, for I ſhall have ſome Company. As he was at Supper, and ſaw other hot 'Peacocks brought to Table, but not his cold one, 'which he had order'd to be kept for him, flying 'into a Litter Paſſion, he uttered an execrable 'Blaſphemy againſt God. Upon which one of the 'Cardinals who ſate at Table with him, ſaid, your 'Holineſs ought not to be in ſo great a Paſſion, for 'ſo little a thing. Julius replied, if God could be 'ſo very Angry for an Apple, as to turn out firſt 'Father Adam out of Paradiſe; why ſhould it not 'be Lawful for me, who am his Vicar to be in a 'Paſſion for a Peacock, ſince a Peacock is much 'more than an Apple? They who will Read this Story in two Languages, may Satisfy their Curioſity by caſting their Eyes on what follows: (a) Sæpiſſimè nequiſſimus ipſe homo blaſphemus illis uſus fuit, quæ impuriſſimis lenonibus aliiſque deſperatæ malitiæ hominibus tunc temporis frequentiùs in ore fuerunt, ad quæ animus totus quamvis exhorreſcit, vid. Al diſpetto di Dio, in contemptum (b) Dei, & Potta di Dio, i. e. ad vulvam Dei &c. exemplum hujus rei proponit Auctor libri cui titulus, Lectura ſuper Canone de conſecr. diſt. 3. ajens: 'Intellexi, portatam fuiſſe in Civitatem Paduæ quandam hiſtoriam, impreſſam Latinè, Italicè, Germanicè, & 'Gallicè, in qua narratur, quòd Sanctiſſimus Dominus noſter Papa Julius III. proximis diebus valdè 'fuit iratus cum Epiſcopo Ariminenſe, ejus Magiſtro domus, propter certum pavonem, & quam 'ſua prælibata Sanctitas bis blaſphemaſſet, primo 'dicendo, Potta di Dio, deinde, al diſpetto di 'Dio, quod fecit tanquam Johannes Maria de Monte, '& ſic tanquam homo, non tanquam Julius III. 'Papa, & Vicarius Chriſti, de quo ſupra dixi. Et 'quùm unus Cardinalis illi dixiſſet, quòd non debe'ret iraſci propter unam tam parvam rem, id eſt, 'propter unum pavonem, unus Praelatinus D. Papa 'reſpondit; Si Deus ſuit tam turbatus, & in magna ira & colera, propter unum pomum, & tanta 'mala fecit omnibus hominibus; quare non poſſum 'ego, qui ſum ſuus Vicarius in terris, iraſci in 'meo Magiſtro domus propter unum pavonem.'

(i) Vid ſupra p. 553.

(a) Joann. Zuingerus, in tractatu Hiſtorico-Theologico de feſto Corpor. Chriſti p. 142.

(b) The word con temptus, does not expreſs the force of the Italian word diſpetto; It ſhould have been ſub invito Deo.

(H) Theſe Letters were ſtuffed with the moſt Extravagant Obſcenities.] They were Written the 26th. of January 1550. to one Annibal Cenſ.

* Poſt longam Cardinalium in conclavi diſceptationem, cùm, teſte in Muſæo Hiſtorico Johanne Imperiali, ambigeretur Papa jam electus eſſet Reginaldus Polus, eamque electionem promulgare nocte appetente inauſpicatum duxiſſent iidem; nocte tranſacta & mutatis rationibus aureis Julius Papa ſubitò emerſit. Heidegg. Hiſtor. Papatus p. 233.

† Spondanus ad ann. 1555. n. 4. but Palavicini Hiſt. Concil. l. 13. c. 10. n. 7. ſays he was 70. years Old.

(c) Sleidanus, Hiſt. l. 21. fol. m. 609. verſo. This is alſo to be found in Thuanus of the Francfort Edit. 1625. l. 6. p. 121.

(d) Joan. Zuingerus ubi ſupra.

(e) Heidegger. Hiſt. Papatus p. 238.

(f) Spondan. ad ann. 1555. n. 4. p. 550. ex Onuphrio Panvinio. Mr. de Thuanus relates the ſame thing l. 15. p. m. 300.

(g) Mart. Epigr. 39. l. 7.

ties. 'Tis thought * his Money fruſtrated the Election of Cardinal Pool, which had been concluded on, and the Publication whereof was only deferred, becauſe they were afraid it would be an ill Omen to notify it in the Night. The Medal which he ordered to be Coined after the Death of Edward King of England, had for its Motto (I) a Scripture Paſſage, the Application whereof proved Falſe in a little time. This Pope Died the 20*th.* of February 1555. being about † 68 years of Age. He pretended (K) to be Sick; and the better to deceive the World, he reduced himſelf to a Courſe of Phyſick, which brought upon him a real Diſeaſe, of which he Died. 'Tis ſaid, that there was ſo great an Intimacy betwixt him and Cardinal Creſcentio, that they had Miſtreſſes (L) in common; and that they maintain'd in common the Children they got by them, for want of knowing who was the true Father. Each of them alſo paid his Quota for the Maintenance of theſe Women. Cardinal Pallavicini extenuates as much as he can (M) the Faults of this Pope, but he do's not Confute what Father Paul ſays of him. I have forgot to by Camillus Oliva a Conclaviſt of the Cardinal of Mantua, and Accompanied with a little Poem, in which the Author filthily deſcribed his Paſſion, and the vehement Ardour, that made him wiſh to have his Friend again. John Sleidan tells this Story. (c) Dum in Conclavi res agitur, intercepta fuerunt literæ, quas ex Cardinalis Mantuani familiaribus quidam, Camillus Olivus, ad quendam ſuum Annibalem Continum, Januarii die XXVI. ſcripſiſſe ferebatur, & ſimul carmen lingua populari ſcriptum, ubi de ſua locutus affectione, & abſentis deſiderio, tàm pudendis utitur verbis, ut ſine flagitio vix ea recitare liceat. Hinc jocus illorum, qui Pontificem dicebant aliquem obſcænum prænunciari, qui proditurus eſſet ex eo Conclavi, quod ejuſmodi literas daret. An Author above cited do's not relate this Paſſage without having firſt ſaid, (d) Vir doctus anonymus in Epiſt. ad amicum narrat, ex eo Conclavi, in quo creatus eſt Julius, interceptas fuiſſe literas alicujus ex Conclaviſtis, i. e. ex illis, qui ſolent aſſidere Cardinalibus Papam electuris, quibus quidem literis non putet ullâ memoriâ unquam ſcriptas fuiſſe ullas obſcœniores, ſceleratioreſque. Nudis enim nefandiſſimiſque verbis illic agi cum cinædo, ſalvo honore. Has, fateri, ad ſe primùm in Germaniam fuiſſe miſſas, ſed dare typis excudendas (ut multi voluiſſent) nunquam quidem ſe voluiſſe. Paulo pòſt addit, Julium III. valdè malè audire in hoc obſcœniſſimo genere, (Sodomitici nim. criminis) ita ut neque à Cardinalibus abſtineat.

(I) A Scripture Paſſage, the Application whereof proved falſe.] They expreſt an extraordinary Joy at Rome for the Death of young Edward; becauſe the Princeſs Mary who Succeeded him, Reſtor'd England to the Obedience of the Pope; but the Reaſons of that Joy did not laſt long. Queen Elizabeth Re-eſtabliſhed the Reformation, and rendered that Iſland one of the moſt flouriſhing Kingdoms in Chriſtendom; ſo that the Prediction of the Medal was a meer Chimera. (c) Eo infamiæ Julius pervenit, ut in perpetuam rei memoriam exeudi curaverit monetam, cujus altera pars ejus imaginem tricorniferam oſtentavit, altera inſcriptionem ejuſmodi habuit: Gens & Regnum, quod non ſervierit tibi, peribit. Sibi ſtolidè vindicans, quod Chriſto Eſaias. Sed diuturnum & ſtabile gaudium neutiquam fuit.

(K) He pretended to be Sick.] The reaſon of it was, becauſe he diſcovered, that the Cardinals would refuſe to conſent to the Demand, which his Brother preſt him to make. His Brother Paſſionately deſired the Poſſeſſion of a Town, and importuned the Pope perpetually on that Account. That he might therefore have a pretence not to hold a Conſiſtory, he pretended to be Sick. And to play this Trick more Artificially, he Eat but little, and choſe ſuch Food, as is fit for Sick People. This change of Diet, they ſay, brought on him a Diſtemper of which he Died (f). This puts me in Mind of Martial's Calius:

Diſcurſus (g) varios, vagumque manè,
Et faſtus, & ave potentiorum,
Cum perferre patique jam negaret;
Cœpit fingere Calius podagram.
Quam dum vult nimis approbare veram,
Et ſanas limit obligatque plantas,
Incedit que gradu laborioſo;
(Quantum cura poteſt, & ars doloris!)
Deſit fingere Calius podagram.

Some ſay that the change of Diet, was indeed the cauſe of his Illneſs; but not that he reſolved upon it, in order to deceive the World: They ſay he hoped to deliver himſelf thereby from the intolerable Pains of the Gout. Others pretend, that an Old Diſtemper was the cauſe of his Death, and Acknowledge, that he was a Man addicted to his Pleaſures, who thought more of Injoying than Exerciſing his Pontificate. (b) Sunt etiam qui dicant, eum veterano interiiſſe: cùm, ut idem etiam auctor narrat, externa quæque parum curans, fruendo potiùs quàm regendo Pontificatui incumberet, totuſque eſſet in extruendâ elegantiſſimâ ad voluptarios ſeceſſus extra portam Flaminiam Villâ Juliâ, cujus inſanire ſtudio videbatur; in quâ conviviis potiùs quàm publicæ procurationi vacabat.

(L) That they had Miſtreſſes in common, and that they maintain'd.] This I have from Thomas Eraſtus. Julius III. Pontifex, ſays he, (i) & Creſcentius fere omnes meretrices communes habuerunt, propriiſque ſumptibus neuter, ſed communibus aluerunt, atque ut breviter dicam, omnium ſcelerum ſocii [illegible] Suſceperunt ex quadam muliere, honeſti viri Viterbienſis filiam, quam, quod neuter ſuam eſſe dicere ore derque poſſet, ut matrem, ita filiam quoque communibus ſumptibus educandam tradiderunt, nuptuique dederunt Nobiliſſimo hujus urbis adoleſcenti, & inter Principes hujus urbis, qui ſunt 40. conſtitutum voluerunt. Here's a great Exemption from Jealouſy, which is a rare thing in that Country.

(M) Cardinal Pallavicini Extenuates——the Faults——but do's not Confute.] He owns that this Pope loved to Divert himſelf, but he adds, that (k) he equally loved Application to Buſineſs; he grants that he Died being little Eſteemed and Loved (l); but he pretends, that his too Free and Familiar way of Acting was the cauſe of it, becauſe not getting the publick Veneration, he made it believed that he was not a good Pope. He adds (m), that this Judgment was unjuſt, and that if the Faults of Julius III. were more Conſpicuous than his good Qualities, they were not perhaps of ſo much Conſequence as his Virtues. As to the promotion of the young Lad, he is contented to ſay (n) that it diſhonoured the firſt Days of his Papacy. He Acknowleges that the Birth of this Man was ſo Obſcure that it was ſtill unknown: But he pretends the Affection Cardinal del Monte had for him, was founded upon this, that he look'd upon him as the Son of his Judgment. The meaning whereof is this: Whilſt the Cardinal was Legate at Piacenza, he was pleaſed with the pretty Carriage of a little Boy, who often came near his Table. He took this for a ſign of Wit, and reſolved to raiſe this young Plant at his own charge: And ſeeing the Boy made a Progreſs, he loved him more and more. He Applauded himſelf for his happy Conjecture; he looked upon him as the Son of his Judgment, a ſort of Creature which we ſet a greater value upon than upon a Child of our Body. (a) Oblectatus ex eo herus, ſibique plaudens, quod ſuâ quaſi perſpicacia plantam eximiam, adhuc minutulam, & in luto, diſcreviſſet, majori in puerum benevolentia incaluit, quâ illum proſequebatur veluti ſui judicii prolem, cujus filii pluris quam corporis ſoboles æſtimantur. He would have his Brother to Adopt him; and when he was Pope, he rais'd him to the Dignity of a Cardinal, May 30*th.* 1550. He had made him ſtay till then in a Village a Days Journey from Rome. He gave him an Income of twelve thouſand Crowns: But did not then entruſt him with the Adminiſtration of Affairs. This New Cardinal was ſcarce ſeventeen years of Age; he ſhewed himſelf wholly unworthy of this Honour, and it was neceſſary under

(b) Spond. ib. ex eod.

(i) Apud Hottinger. ubi ſupra. p. 574.

(k) Pronus ad laxamenta; ſed æque etiam ad negotia. Palavic. Hiſt. Concil. Trid. l. 13. c. 10. n. 8.

(l) Æſtimatione tenus, nec majore benevolentia mortuus eſt. Id. ib.

(m) Nihilominus ut mea fert opinio, hæc de illo exiſtimatio fuit iniqua: ipſius quippe vitia majora fuldem ad ſpeciem erant quam virtutes, ſed non fortaſſe ad pondus. Id. ibid.

(n) Id. l. 11. c. 7. n. 4.

(a) Id. l. 11. c. 7. n. 4.

to obſerve, that the Court of France offered (N) this Pope's Nephew a Princeſs of the Blood, and that this Alliance was refus'd.

JULIA, Wife of Septimius Severus Emperor of Rome, and Daughter of Baſſianus (A) Prieſt of the Sun, was Born in Syria. The Aſtrologers (B) had foretold that ſhe ſhould Marry a Soveraign; for which Reaſon Severus, before he came to the Empire, Courted, and Married her. He pay'd great Deference to Aſtrology; and therefore believ'd that ſuch a Marriage would be his Security for aſcending ſome time or other to the Throne. She was a Woman of great Parts, and capable of great Things. Some ſay, that (C) her Husband gave her a great ſhare in the Government, though he was not

(b) Palavicini l. 11. c. 7. n. 4. ſays that it appears from the Journal of Maſſarellus Secretary to the Council, that the young Boy was abſolutely adopted, when he was one of the Actors of a Paſtoral the 2. of March 1549.

(c) Palavicini ib. ſays it was not at Bologna, as Father Paul will have it, but at Piacenza.

(d) Fra-Paolo l. 3. ad ann. 1550. p. 282. of Amelot's Tranſlation.

(1) Qui occupationibus totus intentus Cardinalis, veluti furtim, voluptates ſequebatur, Pontifex factus, votorum jam omnium compos, abdicata rerum cura, hilaritati & genio ſuo nimium indulſit. Onuphr. in Vita.

(2) Onuphrius relates, that Julius ſaid he had been Promoted to the Pontificate for the care he had taken of that Child. Affirmans ſe ad tanti honoris decus evectum, ob ea beneficia quibus illum puerum affeciſſet.

der the following Pontificates to Chaſtiſe him for his Debaucheries. This is all that Palavicini obſerves. He has cautiouſly forborn to Criticiſe on Father Paul; who has moſt plainly notified that the World look'd upon this Minion of Julius as his Catamite: Prudence would not permit him to Revive thoſe Ideas. Wherefore he does not Accuſe Father Paul of Malicious Slanders, but is contented to ſay, that he is miſtaken as to the time (b) of the Adoption, and as to the Place (c) where this young Man firſt began to be Loved. Let us ſee what Father Paul ſays. ' (d) Julius immediately ' gave an earneſt of his future Government, by ' ſpending whole Days in Walking in his Gardens, ' and contriving the Building of Pleaſure Houſes; ' and by diſcovering a great Inclination to the ' Pleaſures of Life, and very little for Buſineſs (1), ' eſpecially for ſuch as he found difficult to Manage. ' The Ambaſſador Mendoza well obſerving this ' Humour, wrote to his Maſter, that it would ' be eaſy to ſucceed in all his Negotiations ' with this Pope, who being only for Mirth ' and Pleaſure, would turn any way, if he was ' put in Fear. The Opinion that was enter- ' tained of him, that he would prefer his private ' Intereſt and Affection before the publick Good, ' was ſpeedily confirm'd by the promotion he made ' of a Cardinal the 31ſt. of May, to whom he gave ' his Hat, as is Cuſtomary with the Popes. When ' he was but Arch-biſhop of Siponte, and Governor ' of the Town of Bologna, he took into his Houſe a ' young Boy, a Native of Piacenza, whoſe Original ' is not yet known. He took an Affection to him ' as if he had been his own Child, and brought him ' to Trent, where he had like to have loſt him by a ' great Fit of Sickneſs. But ſending him by the Phy- ' ſicians Advice to Verona, for change of Air, In- ' nocent, (for that was this Minion's Name) reco- ' ver'd his Health, and ſome time after return'd to ' Trent. The Day that he was to come the Legate ' went out of Town, as to take a Walk, Accompa- ' nied with a great many Prelates, and meeting ' him, receiv'd him with all the exceſſive Teſti- ' monies of Joy and Affection. Which gave much ' occaſion of Diſcourſe, whether it was an acciden- ' tal Meeting, or a thing Deſign'd to take him in ' the way. The Legate us'd to ſay, that he loved ' him, as being the Author of his Fortune (2), for ' as much as the Aſtrologers had Predicted great ' Wealth, and High Dignities to this Child, which ' could never happen, but by his Exaltation to the ' Popedom. He was ſcarce made Pope, but Inno- ' cent was Adopted by Baudouin del Monte his ' Brother for his Son: and afterwards having con- ' fer'd on him many Benefices, he made him a Car- ' dinal, as I have ſaid: Which afforded matter e- ' nough for Paſquils, and gave the Courtiers an ' Itch to ſpeak out the true cauſe of ſo ſurpriſing an ' Action upon ſeveral Conjectures drawn from ' paſs'd Accidents.

(N) This Pope's Nephew a Princeſs of the Blood.] The Pope Anſwer'd that Marriages between Perſons of ſo different a Rank could not be happy; and as he Acknowledg'd the Royal Houſe of France to be the nobleſt in the World, he Acknowledg'd his own to be the meaneſt upon Earth. However he did not give the true reaſon of this Refuſal; for that which induc'd him to refuſe ſo glorious an Alliance, was, the deſire of Marrying his Nephew to the Great Duke's Daughter: Which was more uſeful to him for the Execution of what he was Projecting in favour of his Family. This we learn from Thuanus. Julius (ſays he), (e) ad Scurrilitatem uſque ſe- ſtivus, & alienam ab innata deceſſoribus Pontificibus ambitione mentem præ ſe ferens, cum tamen interea Coſmi, ut proximi & ſuorum rebus utiliſſimi principis affinitatem ultra modum expeteret, & Cornelium principatum Fabiano deſtinaret, ut conjunctionem tam amplam eluderet, ſic Lanfacum urgentem dimiſit, ut diceret, quam ex nobiliſſima omnium, quæ unquam fuiſſent, familia rem prognatus eſſet, tam ſe ab ſuis omnium, qui viverent, mortalium ignobiliſſimos agnoſcere; proinde nuptias, quæ inter pares melius coirent, inter inæquales adeo perſonas commode contrahi non poſſe. Note, that one of the Daughters of Coſmo Duke of Florence, was Betrothed to Fabian del Monte, who was Baudouin's Son, and not yet Marriageable. See Thuanus, Book 13. Palavicini in the place above cited, obſerves, that Fabian was Baudouin's Baſtard.

(e) Thuan. l. 14. circa init. p. m. 280. ad ann. 1554.

(A) Daughter of Baſſianus Prieſt of the Sun.] Which may be inferred from theſe Words of Aurelius Victor. (f) Caracalla Severi filius —— Baſſianus ex avi materni nomine dictus —— (g) Hujus (Heliogabali) mater Semea cum Baſſianus nomine, fuerat ſolis ſacerdos, quem Phœnices unde erat, Heliogabalum nominabant. Semea (h) was the Daughter of Maſa: Now Maſa was Siſter to Julia (i); therefore Baſſianus the Prieſt of the Sun muſt be Julia's Father. We can't poſitively affirm whether Emeſa or Apamea was Julia's Native Country: For according to ſome Authors (k) her Siſter Maſa was of Emeſa: But according to others, ſhe (l) was of Apamea. Lampridius (m) calls Julia nobilem Orientis mulierem; but Dion (n) makes her a Plebeian. [illegible] è genere plebeio.

(f) Aurel. Victor in Epitome p. 211.
(g) Id. ib. p. 212.
(h) Father Soranie, according to Herodian, l. 5. c. 3.
(i) Herodian. ibid.
(k) Herodian. ib. Julius Capitolinus in Macrino p. 79.
(l) Dio l. 78. p. [illegible].
(m) Lampridius in Alexandro Severo c. 5. p. 899.
(n) Dio l. 78. p. 899. Edit. 1606.

(E) The Aſtrologers had Foretold.] Spartianus will beſt acquaint us, what Enquiries Severus chiefly made, when he was to Marry again; he did not inform himſelf about the Merit of the Perſon, but the Promiſes of her Horoſcope. Quum amiſſa uxore aliam vellet ducere, genituras ſponſarum requireret, ipſe quoque matheſeos peritiſſimus: & quum audiſſet eſſe in Syria quandam quæ ad genitura haberet ut regi jungeretur, eandem uxorem petit, Juliam ſcilicet, & accepis interventu amicorum, ea quæ ſtatim patri facius eſt (o).

(o) Spartian. in Spartian. Severo c. 3. p. m. 594. tom. 1. See alſo Lampridius ubi infra.

(C) Some ſay that her Husband gave her a great ſhare in the Government.] ' (p) She had the charge ' of his Memorials, Letters and Petitions of whate- ' ver Conſequence they were, ſays Dion in the Life ' of Caracalla. Which ſhews her great Capacity: ' For ſhe gave her Advice upon all important Af- ' fairs: And yet he neither lov'd her much, nor ' ſhe him, (as we ſee in Dion and Herodian,) though ' ſhe commonly received this Honour from him, to ' be named in his Letters with Praiſe and Com- ' mendation, and even when he wrote to the Senate, ' inſerting her Name with his own and that of his ' Armies, according to the Style of that time. She ' kept her Rank very well, paying no more Deference, ' nor ſaluting with more Reſpect the greateſt Perſons ' of the Empire than Severus or Caracalla did. ' However Caracalla coming to the Empire, ' leſſen'd her Authority, no ways yielding to her ' Counſels, eſpecially when the fancy took him to ' put any one to Death. But as to Severus her ' Husband, he was very much ſway'd by her good ' Advice and Senſe. This is what Trifan ſays: But 'tis certain that he is miſtaken, taking the Father for the Son. For what he relates, has no Reſpect to Julia under the Reign of her Huſband, but ought only to be underſtood of her, as under the Empire of Caracalla. There is no difficulty in the thing, if we conſider the Words of Xiphilin. (q) [illegible]

(p) Trifan Comment. Hiſtor. tom. 2. p. 112.
(q) Xiphilin. in Epitome Dionis, in Caracalla p. m. 357.

not very fond of her. She Cultivated (D) Philoſophy, and ſpent much time in hearing the Diſcourſes of the Wits that made their Court to her. 'Tis pity it cannot be ſaid, for the Honour and Advantage of Learning, that her Virtue equall'd her Capacity; for the Hiſtorians witneſs (E) that her Adulteries were a Blot on the Life of her Husband Severus. Some Authors ſay, that after the Death of Severus ſhe contracted an

(a) Triſtan ſhould not therefore ſay that ſhe was intruſted with the Petitions, tho' they were never ſo important. He ſhouldhave made this Exception, as Mr. de Tillemont does, Hiſt. des Empereurs tom. 3. p. m. 189. unleſs it was about a very important thing.

(b) Capitolinus in Clodio Albino, c. 3. p. 689.

(c) In Sept. Severo p. 330.

(d) Philoſtratus in vitis Sophiſtarum, in Philiſco.

(e) Salmaſ. ad Spartian. in vita Severi. c. 18. p. m. 625.

(f) Philoſtrat. in vita Apollonii l. 1. c. 3.

(g) Εἰς τῶν ἐκείνου [Ἰουλίαν] καὶ τὸν Τρύφωνα καὶ τὴν γραμματικὴν τὴν Ἰουλίαν τὴν περὶ αὐτὴν τιμῶσαν Βασιλίδα. Unus illorum Rhetorum & Grammaticorum, qui Juliæ Imperatrici frequentes adeſſe ſolebant.

(h) Stephanus le Moyne in Prolegomenis Variorum Sacrorum fol. * 25.

(i) Tzetzes ubi ſupra.

(k) Amore Marci quem fuiſſe vel fratrem ſuum dicebat, & cujus Philoſophiam literarumque inſtitutionem ſemper imitatus eſt. Spartian. in Geta, cap. 2.

(l) Aurelius Victor in Cæſarib.

(m) Spartianus in Severo, cap. 18. p. 625, 626.

(n) See Triſtan, tom. 2. pag. 121.

βιβλίων ἐπιτροπὴν ἐμοὶ τῷ τε ἰδίῳ καὶ τῷ τῶν ἐντευξομένων, ἵνα σώζωμαι, μᾶλλον ἐπιτήδειον πολλῷ γεγενῆσθαι. Τί γὰρ δέδιλεγμαι, ὅτι καὶ ἐπιτρέπεται δημοσίᾳ πάντας τοὺς πρώτους καθάπερ καὶ ἐμοὶ τοῦτο. Qua in re cæteriſque omnibus minimè obtemperabat matri juſta & utilia monenti, licet ei curam libellorum atque epiſtolarum utriuſque generis, (d) prætèr admodum neceſſariæ, commiſiſſet, ejuſque nomen pariter cum ſuo & exercitus nomine poneret cum maximis laudibus in epiſtolis quas mittebat ad ſenatum, dum omnes valere ſcriberet: nec opus eſt referre ab hac omnes primarios viros ſalutari non ſecus quam ab illo conſueviſſe. I obſerve that it was at her Requeſt, that her Husband undertook the War againſt Pescennius Niger, and Clodius Albinus (b).

(D) She Cultivated Philoſophy.] Immediately after the Words juſt read, Xiphilin Affirms that Julia Philoſophized notwithſtanding ſo much Buſineſs. Ἀλλ' ἡ μὲν ἐς μετὰ ταῦτα ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐφιλοσόφει. Sed ea nihilo minus philoſophabatur. He had ſaid in another Place (c) that, being Perſecuted by Plautianus, who had a prodigious Intereſt, ſhe began to Cultivate Philoſophy, and to ſpend whole Days with the Sophiſts: Καὶ ἡ μὲν αὐτὴ τὰ φιλοσοφεῖν διὰ παντὸς ἤσκησε, καὶ σοφισταῖς συνημέρευεν; Quæ dum ob eam cauſam philoſopharetur, & tempus cum Sophiſtis tranſigeret. Philoſtratus call'd her a Philoſopher: Ἀντωνῖνος, ſays he, ſpeaking of Caracalla (d), ἦν ὁ τῆς φιλοσόφου παῖς Ἰουλίας. Antoninus vero filius erat Juliæ Philoſophæ. Thus it ought to be read, according to the lucky Conjecture of the Learned Salmaſius (e). He has Corrected another Paſſage of Philoſtratus, wherein we learn that the Sophiſt Philiſcus obtain'd a Profeſſorſhip at Athens, by Julia's Intereſt. 'Twas ſhe that order'd Philoſtratus to write the Life of Apollonius, as he ſays himſelf (f), and he obſerves at the ſame time that this Lady was a great Lover of Rhetorick. Tzetzes mentions the Society of Learned Men that were about Julia. See the Margin (g).

Mr. Le Moyne has made two Remarks which deſerve to be mention'd. He wonders, 1. That Scaliger who had ſuch bold Conjectures, durſt not venture upon any about Antoninus, Julia's Son, ſpoken of by Philoſtratus. 2. He has confirm'd by Tzetzes Salmaſius's Correction, which he ſeems never to have heard of. This is what he ſays as to Scaliger: 'Sic Philoſtratus in vitis Sophiſtarum, in Philiſco, 'Ἀντωνῖνος δὲ ἦν ὁ τῆς φιλοσόφου παῖς Ἰουλίας. Antoni- 'nus erat Filius Philoſophi Juliæ. Ad quæ verba 'harens & attonitus Scaliger, Antonino Philoſopho 'alius filius quam Commodus, alia uxor præter 'Fauſtinam? Niſi legamus ὁ τῆς Σεβήρου παῖς ἦν Ἰουλίας, 'Hoc etiam temuit ancipitem Tzetzem, nec mihi 'minorem movit admirationem. Quæ nos proponi- 'mus Chronologis eruditis, & Antiquitatis in- 'veſtigatoribus, ut quærant, & nos doceant, quæ 'ingenue nos neſcire profitemur. Sed mirum hic 'verſum Scaligeri acumen, & moratam iſtam feli- 'cem audaciam, quæ loca, hoc multo difficiliora, tam 'ſtrenue & alacriter ſuperaverat (h). As for the Paſſage of Tzetzes, he makes uſe of it to ſhew that Philoſtratus did not ſay ὁ φιλοσόφου; for if Tzetzes had read this in Philoſtratus, he would not have ſaid this Author does not ſhew who the Empreſs Julia was Married to. (i) Διζήσῃ δ' αὐτὸν ὁ φησὶ τίνων ἦν βασιλεύς. Non dicit vero cujus Imperatoris illa fuerit conjux. He might eaſily have underſtood that this Julia's Husband was either Marcus Aurelius, Surnam'd the Philoſopher, or Septimius Severus, who was very much given to Philoſophical (k) Studies, in Imitation of Marcus Aurelius. (l) Philoſophiæ, declamandi, cunctis poſtremo liberalium deditus ſtudiis. (m) Philoſophiæ ac dicendi ſtudiis ſatis deditus; doctrinæ quoque nimis avidus. Mr. le Moyne gives moſt times to our Julia the Surname Severa, according to ſome Inſcriptions (n).

(E) Her Adulteries were a Blot on the Life of her Husband.] Severus had acquir'd a great Reputation both by his Warlike and Political Actions; but he blaſted it by indulging his Wife's Debaucheries. Nay, 'twas ſaid, that he was not Ignorant, that ſhe was engaged in a Conſpiracy that was form'd againſt him. (o) Hinc tanto domi foriſque uxoris probra ſummam gloriæ dempſere: quam adeo famoſe amplexus eſt, ut cognita libidine ac ream conjurationis retentavit. This is what Aurelius Victor teſtifies: And Spartianus (p) ſays no leſs. Triſtan (q) does not think it probable, that ſhe ever Conſpir'd againſt her Husband: His reaſon is, that ſhe had too much Senſe, not to know, that ſuch an Attempt muſt have been fatal, both to her ſelf and her two Sons. But it may be Anſwer'd: Firſt, that we frequently Act againſt our true Intereſts, when we have a mind to ſatisfy a violent Paſſion; as ſuppoſe the deſire of revenging an Affront offer'd to Julia by her Husband, or the deſire of delivering her ſelf from an intolerable Oppreſſion. Secondly, That Julia might have ſo managed things, that the Murderers of Severus would have given the Empire to her Son. This is not without Precedent. Be it how it will, it can't be denied, but ſhe found herſelf Oppreſs'd. Severus had ſo Extravagant a kindneſs for Plautianus, that his Intereſt was viſibly greater than his Maſter's (r). Now Plautianus obſerved no Meaſures with Julia: He ceas'd not to blacken her; he caus'd informations to be made againſt her, and look'd for Witneſſes to prove her Guilty. He look'd for them, I ſay, by putting many Women of Quality to the Rack. (ſ) Ὥστε καὶ τὴν Ἰουλίαν τὴν Αὐγούσαν πρὸς τὸν Σεβῆρον δεῖ σιλλαλῆσαι, ἐμζητάσεώς τι κατ' αὐτῆς, ἢ βασάνου κατ' εὐγενῶν γυναικῶν πεισθῆναι. Ut etiam apud eum Juliam Auguſtam ſemper calumniatus ſit, & in eam ac de matronis nobilibus tormentis quæſiverit. The Hiſtorian that informs me of this, does not ſay that the Empereſs ſought her Deliverance by any Conſpiracy againſt her Husband; but only that this was the Reaſon of her Studying Philoſophy. She can't but be prais'd for taking that method of Conſolation. The miſery of it is, that whilſt the Favourite too inſolently abus'd his Power, She afforded him perhaps too many Reaſons to accuſe her of Adultery. I ſhall ſet down the Anſwer that was made to her in Great Britain. She had followed (v) her Husband thither, and obſerving that the Women of that Iſland Communicated their Favours to many Men without any Shame, ſhe made a ſharp Reflection upon Argentocomus's Wife, who thus Anſwer'd her: We better ſatisfy the Cravings of Nature than you Roman Ladies; for we Publickly beſtow our Favours on the worthieſt Men, whereas you Secretly lye with the baſeſt Fellows. Μικρὰ ἀντίκα Ἀργεντοκόμου τινὸς γυνὴ Καληδονία πρὸς τὴν Ἰουλίαν τὴν Αὐγούσαν ἀπομνημονεύει τι πρὸς αὐτὴν μιᾶς τῶν συνόντων ἐπὶ τῇ ἀνδρὸς σοφίᾳ πρὸς τὴν ἐξήγησιν συνουσίᾳ, εἰκῇ λέγουσα ὅτι πολλῷ ἄμεινόν ἐσμεν ἡμεῖς τὰ τῆς φύσεως ἀναπληροῦμεν ὑμῶν τῶν Ῥωμαίων, ἡμεῖς γὰρ φανερῶς τοῖς ἀρίστοις ὁμιλοῦμεν, ὑμεῖς δὲ λάθρα ὑπὸ τῶν κακίστων μοιχεύεσθε (w). Urbane imprimis Argentocomi Caledonii uxor, Juliæ Auguſtæ quæ ipſam mordebat, initis foederibus, quid ipſa impudenter cum maribus verſarentur, dixiſſe fertur, Nos (inquit) multo melius explemus ea quæ naturæ poſtulat neceſſitas, quàm vos Romanæ. Nam aperte cum optimis viris habemus conſuetudinem: vos autem occultè peſſimi homines conſtuprant. If any one aſks on what Account the Hiſtorian makes mention of this Anſwer, I ſay it was on occaſion of the Law the Emperor had made againſt Adultery; the Execution whereof he was forc'd to neglect, becauſe the Multitude of the accus'd (x) made the Courts unwilling to meddle any longer with theſe Trials. It muſt be confeſs'd that this Barbarous Woman unluckily Anſwer'd the Empreſs's Railleries: But let us have a care not to believe that the Impudence of theſe Iſlanders was leſs blameable than the ſecret Adulteriess of Rome. They who commit an Ill Action in ſecret

(o) Aurel. Victor in Cæſaribus.

(p) Domi tamen minus cauſus, qui uxorem Juliam famoſam adulteriis temuit, etiam conjurationis conſciam. Spartian. in Severo p. 626, 627.

(q) Ubi ſupra p. 18.

(r) Xiphilin. in Severo p. m. 329. 330.

(ſ) Id. id. p. 350.

(v) In the year 208.

(w) Xiphilin in Severo, p. 343.

(x) Three thouſand People had been Indicted for Adultery.

an Inceſtuous Marriage, by Marrying Caracalla (F) her Husband's Son: But 'tis (G) a Falſity. She was no leſs the true Mother of Caracalla, than of Geta. She had the Misfortune * not to be able to keep Peace betwixt her two Sons. Her Induſtry, as great as it was, proved deficient in that Reſpect. Geta was killed by Caracalla, in the Arms of his Mother, who was wounded, and durſt not afterwards expreſs the leaſt Grief. If I miſtake not, the beſt Expedient Caracalla made uſe of to comfort his Mother,

* Herodianus, lib. 4. cap. 3. & Xiphilin. in Caracalla, pag. 348-349.

Secret, retain the Ideas of Virtue, and pay ſome Homage to them. But they who Sin without Shame, have no regard to Juſtice, either in the Theory or Practice (y).

Brantome relates a Circumſtance that I have not read in the ancient Hiſtorians. It contains the Reaſon why Severus ſo patiently bore with his Wife's Incontinence. Theſe are his Words. ' (a) The Emperor Severus was not much concerned for the ' Honour of his Wife, who was a publick Whore, ' ſaying that her Name was Julia, and that therefore ſhe ought to be excuſed, for as much as all the ' Women that bore that Name from all Antiquity, ' uſed to be great Whores, and to make their Huſbands Cuckolds; as I know many Ladies, bearing ' certain Chriſtian Names (b), which I will not ' mention out of Reſpect to our Holy Religion, who ' are commonly more ſubject to ——— than other ' Women of other Names, and few have been found ' that were free from it.

(y) See the Article Jonas (Arngrimus) p. 1054.

(a) Brantome, Dames Galantes, tom. 1. pag. 33.

(b) Theſe two Verſes of Rutilius Numatianus, may be applied to this Subject.

Nominibus certos credam decurrere mores,
Moribus an ponis nomina certa dari?

(F) By marrying to Caracalla.] This Falſity is not a Story of a late Invention, but I found in Spartianus, and Aurelius Victor. See how Brantome relates it. ' (c) We further read of Julia, the Step-Mother of ' the Emperor Caracalla, that being one Day, as ſhe ' were, by Careleſsneſs, half naked, and Caracalla ' ſeeing her, ſaid only theſe Words; how, Lady ' Mother, if I might. She ſuddenly anſwered, Yea ' may if you pleaſe; Don't you know that you are ' Emperor, and that you are to give Laws, and not ' receive 'em? Upon this fine Saying, he married ' her, and lay with her ——— (d) She muſt needs ' have been a great Whore, ſince ſhe loved and married him, who ſome time before had killed her ' own Son in her Arms. She was doubtleſs a great ' Whore, and had very mean Thoughts, but 'tis a ' great matter to be an Empreſs, and for ſuch an ' Honour all is forgotten. This Julia was very ' much beloved by her Husband, tho' ſhe was far ' advanced in Years; but ſhe had loſt nothing of her ' Beauty; for ſhe was very handſome, and very ' courteous, as it appears from her Words, which ' highly encreaſe her Grandeur. That we may ſee whether this Story has been flouriſhed, we ſhall ſet down the Words of the Latin Authors who have mentioned it. Intereſt ſcire, ſays Spartianus (e), quemadmodum novercam ſuam Juliam uxorem duxiſſe dicatur. Quæ quum eſſet pulcherrima, & quaſi per negligentiam ſe maxima corporis parte nudaſſet, dixiſſetque Antoninus, Vellem, ſi liceret: reſpondiſſe fertur, Si libet, licet. An neſcis te imperatorem eſſe, & leges dare, non accipere? Quo audito, furor inconditus ad effectum criminis roboratus eſt: nuptiaſque eas celebravit quas ſi ſcivet ſe leges dare, vetare ſolus prohibere debuiſſet. Matrem enim (non alio dicenda erat nomine) duxit uxorem, ad parricidium junxit inceſtum: ſiquidem eam matrimonio ſociavit cujus filium paulo ante occiderat. Aurelius Victor repreſents more clearly the Artifice ſhe made uſe of. She was not ſo unpolitick, as to undreſs her ſelf openly before Caracalla; ſuch an Impudence might have diſguſted the young Man; ſhe ordered it ſo, that it might paſs for a Surprize; ſhe pretended not to know that Caracalla could ſee her in that Poſture; ſhe pretended to be ignorant of his being where ſhe was undreſt. (f) Pari fortuna, & eodem matrimonio, quo pater; namque Juliam noverean ——— forma captus, conjugem affectavit: cum illa ſubſtrictos, affectui adoleſcentis, præſentia quaſi ignara, ſimet dedidiſſet, nitido corpore, afferentique, Vellem ſi liceret, ut: petulantius multo (quippe pudorem velamento exuerat) reſpondiſſet; Libet? plane licet. I don't know where Vigenere found what he ſpecifies, as to the Circumſtance of the Place. The Empreſs Julia, ſays he (g), was doubtleſs Severus's Wife; for Antoninus Caracalla married her afterward, tho' ſhe was his Step-Mother; and this Inceſt came from his ſeeing her one Day naked in the Hot Bath, through a private Window, where he manifeſted himſelf; and ſhe asking him what he thought of it, he anſwered, I like you ſo well, that I ſhould be glad to have you, if it could be done lawfully. Are you, replied ſhe immediately, ſo ignorant as not to know, that every thing is lawful to you, who are the Lord of the whole Earth? And hereupon they proceeded to their Tranſgreſſion.

(c) Id. ib. pag. 205.

(d) Id. ib. pag. 206.

(e) Spartianus in Caracalla, c. 10. pag. m. 730.

(f) Aurel. Victor in Cæſaribus, p. m. 144. See alſo Eutropius, lib. 8. & Oroſius, l. 7. c. 18. who mention that Inceſt.

(g) Vigenere, Preface to Philoſtratus's Pictures.

(G) But 'tis a Falſity.] It has been ſo clearly made out, that Moreri is inexcuſable, for having told this ſtory as a certainty. If he had read Tillemont's Commentaries, he would have ſeen ſufficient Proof of its Falſity; though it muſt be granted, that all the Arguments of this Author are not demonſtrative.

His (h) firſt Proof is taken from the Silence of the Greek Authors, who have exactly deſcribed Caracalla's Actions, without the leaſt Flattery. Dion Caſſius lived at that time, and had great Offices: he could not then be ignorant, whether Caracalla had or had not married Julia; and if he had known ſuch a Marriage, he would certainly have ſpoke of it, the better to defame this Emperor, whom he does not appear to have deſired to ſpare in any thing. Since then he do's not mention it, 'tis a certain Argument of the Falſity of this Marriage. Herodian's Silence confirms the ſame thing; Herodian I ſay, who relates many particular and diſgraceful Things, and who lived much nearer that time, than they who vouch this pretended Marriage.

(h) Triſtan. Commentaires Hiſtoriques, tom. 2. pag. 113. & ſeq.

(i) Ibid. pag. 114.

(k) The likelieſt a Fault of Impreſſion for 18.

(l) He cauſed his Wife, Daughter of Plautianus, to be put to Death, after he had put himſelf rid of Geta. He took, lib. 4. c. 12. (m) Herodian, lib. 4. c. 13. (n) Triſtan, ibid. pag. 119. 148. (o) Ibid. pag. 114.

(p) Id. ib. pag. 114.

(q) See the Remark, I

The ſecond Proof is drawn from our Julia's Age. Triſtan (i) ſuppoſes, that at the time when they ſaw her Beauty made Caracalla marry her, ſhe was at leaſt Forty five Years old; for he muſt have been Seventeen or Fifteen (k), when ſhe married Severus: and as ſhe had Caracalla the firſt Year of her Marriage, and Caracalla was Twenty ſeven Years old when 'tis ſuppoſed he ſaw her naked, it follows, that ſhe was Forty four or Forty five Years old. This Author has reaſon to ſuppoſe, that Julia was not the Step-Mother, but the true Mother of Caracalla; no good Objection can be made againſt this. Thoſe that might be made to leſſen the Age of Julia, and againſt the Conſequences that Triſtan draws from her being Forty five Years old, would be more conſiderable. Nothing hinders, will ſome ſay, but that Julia might be but Fifteen Years old, when ſhe married Severus, and 'tis probable that Caracalla married her the Year after (l) his killing Geta. Now Caracalla reigned Six Years (m) after the Death of his Brother, and lived but Twenty nine Years (n) in all; he might therefore marry Julia, when he was but Twenty four Years old, which being added to the Sixteen of his Mother, when he was born, make but Forty. Triſtan (o) will have Forty four or Forty five Years ' not to be an Age, in which ' there could be ſo much Luſtre, Vigour, and Beauty, as to move him ſo powerfully to love her, that ' he was obliged to marry her, in order to ſatisfie ' his Paſſion. One might alledge ſome Women, who at ſuch an Age, and even older, have made Princes paſſionately in love with 'em; but he might anſwer, that thoſe Women made not their Conqueſts all at once, by appearing naked. The Charms of Converſation, the Artifices of Love, and a Thouſand pretty Ways were their ſtrongeſt Arms to conquer; and then I know not what addreſs of Body and Mind, enabled them to keep their Conquests. The bare ſhew of a Body, that has undergone the Influences of above Forty Years, is not a good Expedient; it is not appearing with the beſt Side; and therefore there is no Probability, that ſo cunning a Woman as Julia ſhould have taken this Method to gain the Love of Caracalla, or that if ſhe did, ſhe found her Account in it. I go farther: I believe this may be replied to; the Reaſons that may be alledged upon ſuch a Subject, being not of ſuch a Nature as to leave no room for doubting.

Let us ſee the 3d. Proof. Dion (p) obſerves, that when Julia ' knew of the Death of her Son, ſhe ' ſtruck her breaſt (q) to cauſe her own Death, by reviving

Mother, was to give her a good Share (H) in the Government. This was a wonderful Charm for this Lady; and if she had a Mind to kill her self, when she heard that Caracalla had been assassinated, it was not so much out of Grief for her Son's Death, as because she feared to see her self reduced to the Condition of a private Person †. And therefore she thought no more of Death, when she observed that Macrinus, who succeeded Caracalla, dealt well by her. But as soon as she understood (I) that he resented the injurious Words she had uttered against him, when she heard of the Assassination of Caracalla, she starved her self to Death. The Title of Domna (K), † Xiphil. in Macrino, pag. 362.

(f) Funus Getæ accuratius fuisse dicitur quam ejus qui à fratre videretur occisus. Illatusque est majorum sepulcro, hoc est Severi. Spartianus in Geta cap. 7. pag. m. 744.

(g) Urnulam arreum—— Severi reliquias continentem eamdemque Antoninorum sepulcro illatam. Id. in Severo, c. ult. pag. 640.

(h) Id. in Caracalla, cap. 10. pag. 730.

(i) Capitolin. in Macrino, cap. 5. pag. 753.

(k) Herodian. lib. 4. cap. 13.

(l) See Salmasius in Spartianum, c. 20. pag. 633. & Mr. Spanheim de præst. numismat. pag. 628.

(m) Spartian. in Geta, c. 5. p. m. 736.

(n) See the Remark L.

(o) Aurel. Victor in Epitome, pag. 212.

(p) Heliogabalus dictus Caracallæ ex Semea CONSOBRINA occulte stupratæ filius. Id. ibid.

(q) Ulpian. lege ultima de Senator. apud Tristan, p. 117. (r) Xiphilin. in Caracalla, pag. 357. Herodian. lib. 4. c. 13. (t) Xiphil. in Macrino, pag. 362.

of

(r) Sc[illegible] ... ... ...

(K), which is given her, was a Sirname of a Family. There are ſome Difficulties (L) about the Time of her Marriage with Severus. There are ſome Inſcriptions *, in which ſhe is called the Mother of the Camps, the Mother of the Country, and the Mother of the Senate.

* They are to be found in the 2d. Vol. of Triſtan's Commentaires Hiſtoriques, pag. 117. 118.

JU-

of killing her ſelf. (v) Ἐπειδὴ δὲ ἐπί τε τῆς βασιλικῆς ὑγιείας ἐφρόντισε τῶν ἰατρῶν περὶ αὐτῆς φασάντων ἀλλοπρόσαλλα, ἢ ἐκείνῃ χρηναι τὰ αὐτῆ ἐπίφορα, ἀπεῖπεν, ὡς οὐ δυνάμενα ἐπιβοηθῆσαι πάθεσιν. Sed poſtquam ille non modo nihil de regio famulatu ejus, aut de ſtipatoribus quos ſuum habebat cuſtodiæ cauſa immutavit, verùm etiam multa ad ea percommode ſcripſit, cæpit bona ſpe injecta deſiderium mortis deponere. But when he underſtood, that ſhe had furiouſly inveighed againſt him, and formed Factions, to make her ſelf Sovereign in that Country, like Semiramis and Nitocris; he gave immediately Orders for her Departure from Antioch, and permitted her to retire whither ſhe pleaſed. Then Julia would live no longer; ſhe feared more than Death the Condition of a Woman without Authority. Some (w) doubt whether her Death was voluntary; but Dion does not ſpeak of it doubtfully. He affirms (x) that ſhe ſtarved her ſelf to Death, which ſhe the eaſier effected, as having inflamed her Cancer, by ſtriking her Breaſt. Triſtan believes, that ſhe ſtruck her Breaſt to advance her Death, by enraging her Cancer; but I do very much queſtion whether this is the Hiſtorian's meaning. I believe that Dion (y) meant no more than this, viz. that this Lady ſtriking her Breaſt, whilſt ſhe was lamenting the Death of her Son, angred the Cancer. The general Cuſtom of Women upon the News of ſuch Loſs like this, was not only to make Lamentations, but alſo to beat their Breaſt. Julia did as the reſt. But probably it was not with ſuch Blows, as to deſign directly to die of them. Since ſhe is compared to Semiramis, ſhe muſt have been looked upon as a moſt ambitious and cunning Woman. This laſt Quality ſhe did not want, if we believe Dion Caſſius (a).

(v) Id. ib.

(w) Herodian. ubi ſupra.

(x) Xiphilin. ibid.

(y) See the Fragments, page 890, of Dion's Edition, 1606.

(a) Ἡσίοδος δὲ τὴν Σεμίραμίν φησι τὴν τῶν Ἀσσυρίων βασίλισσαν, τὴν μάλιστα τῶν γυναικῶν ἐπὶ τὸ ἄρχειν ὁρμήσασαν, καὶ τὴν Νίτωκριν τὴν Βαβυλωνίαν ἐπιβουλεύσασαν τοῖς ἀνδράσιν. Inerat ei fraus & malitia mattis, & Syriorumque ex quibus illa orta fuerat. Xiphilin. in Caracalla, pag. 349.

(K) The Title of Domna ——— was a Sirname of a Family.] Triſtan (b) proves it moſt learnedly, and cenſures Ritterſhuſius (c), who thought that in this Verſe of Oppian, τυμπάνων μεγάλα φυσήματα Δάμνα Σεμέλης, the Word Δάμνα is an Epithet borrowed from the Latin Domna, and that the Poet making it Greek, inſerted it with the Licence of the Eliſion of the Iota. He criticiſes another Fault of the ſame Ritterſhuſius, which is his believing that Oppian ſpeaks of Martia, Severus's firſt Wife. See (d) Menage, who cenſures (e) Gentilis, who was guilty of Ritterſhuſius's firſt Fault: See alſo Mr. Spanheim (f), who finds the ſame Fault in the Notes upon Nicephorus Bryennius.

(b) Ubi ſupra, pag. 119. 120.

(c) Not. in Oppiani Cynegetica.

(d) Amen. juris cap. 25. p. m. 139.

(e) Lib. 2. Paregorum juris, cap. 22.

(f) Spanhem. de præſtant. numiſmat. pag. 620.

(L) Some Difficulties about the time of her Marriage.] Dion (g) affirms that Fauſtina, Wife of Marcus Aurelius, prepared the Nuptial Chamber for Severus and Julia, in the Temple of Venus, which was in the Palace. Now Fauſtina (b) died in the Eaſt, about the end of the Year 175. Therefore Severus's and Julia's Marriage was not later than that Year. Julia was quickly a Mother; 'tis not known whether Caracalla was the eldeſt of her Children, but that might well be. According to Spartianus, who makes him live Forty three Years, Caracalla was killed in the Year 217, according to which reckoning he muſt have been born in the Year 174. If you object to this Author, that Caracalla's and Julia's Marriage muſt be placed about the Year 212, ſince it happened after the beginning of Caracalla's Reign, which laſted but Six Years; and if you conclude from thence, that this Marriage is a meer Fiction, ſince Julia was then above Fifty Years old; he will anſwer you, that Julia was not the Mother of Caracalla, and he will maintain, that ſhe was not married to Severus, till long after the Year 174. And yet Dion affords us a ſtrong Proof that Julia muſt have been at leaſt Fifty Years old, when 'tis pretended that her Nakedneſs did ſo charm Caracalla. From what he ſays, we ought to ſuppoſe, that ſhe was married before the Death of Fauſtina, and conſequently, that ſhe was at leaſt Twelve or Thirteen Years of Age, in the Year 175. I am going to ſhew, that it is impoſſible, that Caracalla ſhould have been born the firſt Year of Julia's Marriage, if it be true, that this Marriage happen'd before Fauſtina's Death.

(g) Spartianus ſays (i), 'that Caracalla was but Five 'Years old, when his Father was Governour of 'Illyricum, (which we can't ſuppoſe before the Year '190) and that he received the Toga virilis 'when he was deſigned Conſul (that is at the end 'of the Year 201, and ſo he was not then at moſt 'but in the beginning of his Fifteenth Year). He 'every where acknowledges, that Caracalla was 'very young, when Severus came to the Empire. 'He repreſents him as a Child of Two or Three 'Years of Age at moſt at the Birth of Geta, which 'was the 27th. of May, 189. All this is inconſiſtent with the Forty three Years he gives this Emperor, when he was killed in 217. He therefore contradicts himſelf. Dion (k) affirms, that Geta lived but Twenty two Years and Nine Months, and that Caracalla (l) lived but Twenty Nine Years. Now Caracalla lived but Six Years (m) after the Death of Geta, and he was killed in the Year 217. Geta therefore muſt have been born in the Year 189, and Caracalla in 188. Therefore there muſt have been many Years from Julia's Marriage to Caracalla's Birth; if Fauſtina prepared the Nuptial Bed, as Dion relates it; and yet, according to Spartianus, Julia's Marriage was quickly fruitful, and gave a Second Son to Severus, a few Years after the Birth of the firſt. (n) Ex qua (Julia) ſtatim pater fuſtus eſt. A Gallis ob ſanctitatem & bonificentiam & abſtinentiam, tantum quantum nemo dilectus eſt. Deinde Pannonias proconſulari imperio rexit. Poſt hoc Siciliam proconſulatum ſorte meruit, ſuſceptaque Romæ alterum filium. There is a great deal of Confuſion in all this. I know not whether a Conjecture which I adventure at a venture, will be approved. Dion does not ſeem to me to ſay, that Fauſtina actually prepared the Nuptial Chamber, but that Severus dreamt ſhe had prepared it. This Hiſtorian relates Seven Preſages of Severus's Exaltation; and after having mentioned the Six firſt, he adds, that they appeared to him in his Sleep (o); and afterward he ſpeaks of the 7th. as of a fortunate Action, done when he was awake. In relating the ſix firſt, he does not always obſerve upon each particular, that it was a Dream; but he does it three or four times. This might have deceived the Interpreters; for he does not obſerve it, as to Fauſtina's Function, which is one of the Six Preſages: he relates it, as a Reality, I mean without cautioning, that it was a Dream. Now ſince he does the ſame with reſpect to ſome of the other Omens, which were manifeſtly a Dream, and ſince, before he relates the Preſage, which conſiſted in a real Action, he gives notice, that all the preceding ones were but Viſions; I think it may be concluded, that he makes the Preparation of the Nuptial Bed in the Temple of Venus, by Fauſtina, to be only a Man's Dream. I don't know whether ever the Nuptial Chamber of any Perſon was prepared for him in a Temple. It is eaſier therefore to come to Dion's Aſſiſtance, than to bring off the other Hiſtorian; nevertheleſs, ſome Contradictions are objected to the latter, without any ground. This I am going to examine, obſerving firſt of all, that Mr. de Tillemont ought not to have preferred this Paſſage of Dion, to the Hypotheſis that Spartianus leads us to (p). This Hypotheſis is to ſay, that Severus married Julia, whilſt he commanded in Gallia Lugdunenſis, in the Year 186. Some Hiſtorians tell us (g), that Caracalla was born at Lyons.

(i) Id. ib. pag. 389. 390.

(k) Xiphil. in Caracalla, pag. 340.

(l) Id. ib. pag. 358.

(m) Herodian. lib. 4. cap. 13. See alſo Xiphilinus ibid. pag. 358. who ſays that Caracalla reigned Six Years, two Months, and ſome Days. Two Days according to the Edition of Dion Caſſius, in 1606.

(n) Spart. in Severo, cap. 4. pag. 594.

(o) Ἑπτὰ ὄψεις τοιαύτας ἐν τῷ ὕπνῳ ἐθεάσατο. Ἑκάστη δὲ τούτων ἐνυπνίου μὲν ἦν, ἐπὶ δὲ τοῖς ἐσομένοις ἐφαίνετο. Quæ omnia quum ex ſomniis intellexerit Severus, tum id revera evenit, quod quum adhuc eſſet plebeius, conſedit in ſella principis per imprudentiam. Xiphilin. in Severo pag. 310.

Triſtan (r) alledges as a Proof of Spartianus's Contradictions, theſe words of Caracalla's Life. Hic tamen omnium duriſſimus, & ut uno complectar verbo, parricida, inceſtorum rerum, patris ater & fratris inimicus (ſ). But I don't think that can hereby be convicted of Contradiction, and of forgetting his Hypotheſis; he might maintain, that he takes the Word Mater, according to the Notion he ex-

(p) See Tillemont, tom. 3. pag. 389. & Spartianus in Severo, cap. 3. & 4. pag. 594.

(q) Aurel. Victor in Cæſaribus, pag. 211. Caracalla.

(r) Triſtan ubi ſupra, pag. 119. (ſ) Spart. in fub fin. p. 732.

JULIS, a Town of the Iſle of Cea, in the Ægean Sea. In this Town were born † the Poets Simonides, and Bacchylides his Nephew, the Sophiſt Prodicus, the Phyſician Eraſiſtratus, and a Philoſopher (A), call'd Ariſto. Valerius Maximus ᵖ, relates a very ſingular thing, which he was witneſs of, when he paſſed through Julis in the Retinue of Sextus Pompeius, who was going into Aſia, to exerciſe his Proconſulſhip. I ſpeak of it elſewhere ᵠ. When the Four Towns of this Iſland were reduced to two ʳ, Julis was one of them. It was built upon a Mountain three Miles from the Sea. The Native Country of ſo many great Men, ought not to have been omitted by Moreri; nor left out in the Dictionary of Charles Stephens, by Mr. Lloyd, who had done better to rectify this Article (B) than to throw it out.

† Strabo, Lib. 10. Suidas, Stephanus. Lib. 2. cap. 6.

ᵖ In the Article Zia.

ᵠ Strabo ubi ſupra.

ʳ See la Croix du Maine, pag. 101.

JUNCTIN (Francis), in Italian, Giuntino, one of the famous Mathematicians and Aſtrologers of the XVIth. Century, was of Florence, but ſpent a good part of his Life in Lyons ˢ, where he publiſhed (C) many Books. His Quality of ᵗ Doctor in Divinity, did not hinder him from being extremely addicted to Judicial Aſtrology, and that with great Credulity. I don't know in what Year he died. He was Fifty Six Years old ᵘ when he publiſhed his Commentaries upon Sacroboſco's Sphere, in the Year 1577. Deduce from thence the Year of his Birth. He deſcended ſometimes from the Region of Heaven, to divert himſelf with humane Diſcoveries; for he compoſed a Diſcourſe upon ˣ the Epoch of Petrarch's Amours. I have elſewhere ʸ, ſpoke of his Horoſcope of Luther. We ſhall ſee the Particulars (D) of his Life, publiſhed by Poſſevinus.

ˢ Id. ib.

ᵗ Voſſius de ſcient. Mathem. pag. 164.

ᵘ See the Title of it in the Remark A.

ˣ See the Epitome of Gaſnerus's Bibliotheque.

ʸ This Word refers to commentaria.

JUN-

(t) Triſtan, ibid.

plains two Pages before. Mirum enim (non alio dicendi erat nomine) duxit uxorem. And we ſee he does not forget the Inceſt, in the Words related by Triſtan. (t) 'The ſame Spartianus mentions the 'Reaſon, which Caracalla ſaid he had to kill his 'Brother, namely, that he deſpiſed their Mother, 'and did not pay her the reſpect that was due to 'her. Which makes it manifeſt, that Spartia- 'nus, or he that he took it from, acknowledged her 'to be their common Mother. For he would have 'had no reaſon to be ſo enraged with this Irreve- 'rence of his Brother towards Julia, if ſhe had not 'been his Mother, and the Pretence had been as ri- 'diculous, as it appeared Barbarous, notwith- 'ſtanding all the other Reaſons he alledged to palli- 'ate his Violence and his Crime. This Objection is good for nothing: for in the 1ſt. Place, theſe Words (w) matri eum irreverentem fuiſſe, ſignifie only, that Geta did not reſpect his Mother; and they ought to be tranſlated as if Caracalla meant, Geta does not reſpect our Mother. 'Tis thus however, that Triſtan has underſtood 'em, which is his Fault. In the 2d Place, 'tis a very ſpecious Pretext to extenuate a Murther, to ſay, that the Perſon killed uſed his Mother ill. An Uſurper, who ſhould dethrone a Prince inſolent to his Mother, would not fail to charge him with this Crime, tho' he were no Relation to the Family dethroned. Cromwel and his Party would have exhauſted all the common Places of Rhetorick, if they could have reproach'd Charles I. with ſuch an Irreverence. Much more would this Pretence be alledged, if a Man was the Son-in-Law of a Lady, ill treated by her own Son. Such a Man would ſay, that he thinks himſelf obliged to defend the Rights of his Father's Widow, againſt all Oppoſers whatſoever. In a Word, he would alledge a hundred plauſible Reaſons, and ſuch as might make an Impreſſion; and I wonder Triſtan ſhould call this a ridiculous Pretence.

(w) Spart. in Geta, cap. 2. pag. 709.

Here's a ſtronger Objection againſt Spartianus. He ſays (x) that Caracalla being in his Thirteenth Year, was proclaim'd by the Soldiers, an Aſſociate in the Empire, upon the taking of Teſiphon. He adds, that Severus returning into Syria, gave the Toga virilis to Caracalla, and nam'd him his Collegue in the Conſulſhip, which they enter'd upon immediately. This Conſulſhip falls in the Year 202, and the taking of Teſiphon, in the Year 198. 'Tis not therefore poſſible, that Caracalla, who was killed in the Year 217, ſhould have lived ſo long as this Hiſtorian affirms, that is, Forty three Years.

(x) In Severo, cap. 16, pag. 616. 617.

(A) A Philoſopher called Ariſto.] 'Tis thus we ought to ſay, and not with Moreri, the Philoſopher Ariſto (a); for this Expreſſion induces one to believe, that either there was but one Philoſopher of that Name, or at leaſt, that he who was born at Julis, was incomparably more eminent than all the other Ariſto's, both which things are falſe.

(a) At the Word Cea.

(B) To rectify this Article.] Charles Stephens had done well not to ſay ſo abſolutely, that the Iſle of Cea was indifferently called Cia or Cos, and to examine better what he ſays, that there was a Law in Julis, which ſentenced all People to Death that were above 60 Years of Age, the end of which Law was to prevent the want of Proviſions for the reſt. See what we ſhall ſay upon this in the Remarks of the Article Zia.

(C) Where he publiſhed ſo many Books.] He publiſhed there in 1570, his Tractatus judiciali revolutiones nativitatum, in Octavo. Three Years after he publiſhed his (b) Speculum Aſtrologiæ quod attinet ad judiciariam rationem nativitarum, item annuarum revolutionum, cum nonnullis approbatis Aſtrologorum ſententiis. This Work was in Quarto, but in the Edition of 1581, it came out in Folio, by reaſon of the Commentaries which were added to it, in duos poſteriores Quadripartiti Ptolomæi libros innumeris obſervationibus (c) referta, & certiſſimis Aphoriſmis (quatenus ex ſiderum poſitione liceat Chriſtiano more aliquid conjicere) ex probatiſſimorum Aſtrologorum ſcriptis depromptis, inſignita. His Latin Commentaries upon Sacroboſco's Sphere, came out (d) in 1577. There was printed at Cologne in 1580, a Book, intituled De Divinatione quæ fit per aſtra diverſum ac diſcrepans duorum Catholicorum ſacræ Theologiæ Doctorum judicium, ſcilicet Franciſci Junctini ac Joannis Lenſæi. There are Two French Tracts of Junctin, viz. A large Diſcourſe upon the things wherewith the Comet that appeared in November 1577 threatens many Princes, Countries and People of Chriſtendom. At Paris for Gervais Mallot, 1577 (e), and at (f) Lyons, for Francis Didier, 1578, in Octavo, and a Diſcourſe upon the Reformation of the Year, made by our Holy Father Pope Gregory XIII. with the Reaſons of his taking away Ten Days, and the Golden Number. At Lions 1582. in Octavo. He printed in the ſame City, in 1580, in Octavo, Diſcorſo ſopra il tempo dello innamoramento del Petrarca. Con la ſpoſitione del Sonetto, Gia fiammeggiava l'amoroſa ſtella (g).

(b) See the Epitome of Gaſnerus's Bibliotheque.

(c) This Word refers to commentaria.

(d) Printed at Lyons, apud Jo. Tornæſium. Voſſius mentions only that Edition; Du Verdier Vau-Privas mentions only that of 1578. apud Symphorianum Beraud.

(e) See la Croix du Maine, pag. 101.

(f) Du Verdier Vau-Priv. ubi infra.

(g) See the Bibliotheque Françoiſe of Du Verdier Vau-Privas, pag. 404. 405.

(D) The Particulars of his Life publiſhed by Poſſevinus.] I knew him in France, ſays he (h), where he lived in Exile; he applied himſelf ro the pernicious Speculations of Aſtrology. He was a Fugitive Apoſtate; he had been a Carmelite, and promoted to the Prieſthood, and even to the Office of Provincial: he forſook his Vows, and his Profeſſion, and the Catholick Religion; but by the charitable Advice of devout Perſons, he was in ſome manner brought back into the right Way. He publickly abjured his Hereſies in the Church of the Holy Croſs at Lyons. And he gave reaſon to believe for ſome time, that he deſigned to labour for the Advantage of the Catholick Church. However (i), he did not retract the Works he had made upon prognoſticating Impieties; he was one of thoſe who putting their Hand to the Plough, and looking back, are not fit for the Kingdom of Heaven. He dealt in Letters of Exchange, lent Money upon Intereſt, and by that means got Sixty thouſand Crowns, no Footſteps whereof were found after his Death. He had made a Legacy of Three thouſand Livres to the Junta's, to whom he had been Corrector of the Preſs. That Teſtimony of his Friendſhip did 'em no Kindneſs. (k) Juntis bonetiſſimis Typographis (in quorum ædibus ſæpe librorum correctionibus operam Lugduni

(h) Poſſevinus biblioth. ſelecta, tom. 2. p. m. 245.

(i) Non vidimus eum libros tuos de impietate divinatrice retractaſſe. Id. ib.

(k) Id. ib.

JUNGERMAN (Godfrey) made himself known by his Learning in the beginning of the XVIIth. Century. He was born at Leipsick, where his Father (A), Gaspar JUNGERMAN, was Professor of the Civil Law. His Mother was the Daughter of the famous Joachim Camerarius of Bamberg *, Professor likewise at Leipsick. Godfrey Jungerman understood the Greek Tongue to Perfection. The Publick is indebted to him for the first Publication of Julius Cæsar's Commentaries (B) in Greek. He had already published his Latin Version of Longus's || Pastorals, with Notes. He printed in 1609 (C) some Remarks upon the Treatise de Equuleo, which Magius had written in Prison. We have also his printed Letters. He died † the 16th. of August, 1610, at Hanaw, where he had been a long time Corrector of the Press (D) to Wechel's Heirs.

JUNGERMAN (Lewis) born at Leipsick the 4th. of July 1572, and Brother to the foregoing, was an Excellent Botanist. He betook himself early to the Study of Plants, and got such a Reputation by it, that he was offered in England, the Place of the famous Matthias Lobel, who died at London in the Year 1616; but he chose rather to live in Germany. He had already distinguished himself by contributing very much to the Work, intituled, Hortus Eychstetensis, which contains the Figures and Description of all the Plants of the Bishop of Eichstet's Garden; and he made a Catalogue of all those that grow about Nuremberg, the Impression whereof was taken care of by Gaspar Hofman, in the Year 1615. He was made Professor (A) of Physick at Giessen, in the Year 1622, after having planted a Garden, which did very much contribute to the Scholars Proficiency. He spent Three Years in that Professorship, and afterwards he had such another with that of Botanicks at Altdorf, in the Year 1625. He continued in them to his Death, which happen'd the 7th. of June 1653, and during the 28 Years of those Employments, he took such care of the Physick Garden, that he made it famous even in Foreign Countries. He had the more time to spend in this Function, because he neither marry'd, nor had any amourous Avocation: which has given occasion to say *, that he can't be praised for his Continence, since he had no occasion for a Woman; for Continence is a Virtue, which according to Aristotle, ought to cause a Conflict, of which there appeared no sign in Jungerman's Life. The Panegyrist of a Monk would have given the matter another Face. This Professor left his Library to the University of Altdorf. I must not forget, that he took a wonderful Delight in making (B) Anagrams. I know not whether he was fond of judicial Astrology; but in the Programma, from which I take this Article, it is very seriously observed, that the Humour (B△) of an Erefipelas stopping on a sudden, when Mars was Retrograde, produced

* In the Remark B. of Luther's Article * Bipontinus.

I add this Link to distinguish this Camerarius from his Son Joachim Camerarius, who is surnamed Norimbergensis.

|| You may see a Fault of Moreri, concerning Jungerman, in the Article Longus.

† Diarium Biographicum. Hamingi Witten.

* In quo (celibatu) non est necesse continentiam praedicari, quia nulla in ejusmodi rebus esset, ubi tam enormi circumfluxa, Aristoteles eadem, conjuncta, cujus invictum nullus quam inquam in hoc genere emineret fluxus, praeter animadversa. Adam Tribbech. Theol. & Phys. P. 1. & Rector Francof. ad Oder. in programmate apud Hamingi Witten Memor. Medicorum.

(b) Theatr. pag. 138.

(c) It seems that this Word Hinc, which an the Press, the Order

(D) Bibliotheca classica, pag. 716.

(m) Ibid. pag. 1507.

(n) Epitome Bibl. Gesneri, pag. 258.

(o) See the French Epistles written to Scaliger, pag. 368.

(p) Of the 2d. of March, 1665. pag. m. 182. Dutch Edit.

(q) See the Collection of the Letters to Goldart, printed at Francfort, in 1688. and Gudius's Letters published at Utrecht, in 1697.

(a) Origine de l'Imprimerie de Paris, pag. 195. 196.

duni posucrat) mille aureos nummos cum moriens legasset, si mihi fuisset fuit, eos uti reliquos evanuisse; nimirum omnia perdita fuisse quæ perditus ille anxie hinc inde corraserat.

(A) His Father Gaspar JUNGERMAN.] 'Tis probably he who was the Author of some Disputes upon some Points of Law, which Draudius (l) makes mention of, and of a Poem de custodia angelica, mentioned by the same Draudius (m) and Similerus (n).

(B) Julius Cæsar's Commentaries in Greek.] He added to that Version, ascribed by some to Planudes, the Manuscript thereof, which was in Mr. Petau's Library, had been communicated to him by Rongars (o); I say, he added to it, not only his own Remarks upon the Greek Translator, but also those of many Learned Criticks upon Julius Cæsar's Commentaries. This Edition of Francfort, in the Year 1606, in Quarto, is very much esteemed.

(C) Some Remarks upon the Treatise de Equuleo.] The Journal des Savans (p) spoke of these Remarks with Contempt, as if most of 'em ran only upon Trifles; for Example; to know whether it ought to be said Equuleus, or Eculeus: But this Censure is too hasty; for though this little Point of Orthography has been somewhat largely discussed by Jungerman, the Journalist should not have judged of all the Remarks by this, which besides is not useless to the Subject, nor unfit to please many Persons.

(D) Corrector of the Press to Wechel's Heirs.] This we learn from some Letters (q) he wrote to Goldast. Wherein we find also that he was writing upon Julius Pollux; but this was known before, from the Preface of his Edition of Herodotus. He enriched that Edition, with many Pieces, and amongst others, with many Fragments of Ctesias. Mr. Chevillier might have put him into the Catalogue of (a) Learned Men, who have been Correctors of the Press.

(A) He was made Professor of Physick at Giessen in the Year 1622.] The Rector of the University of Altdorf has a little perplexed the Chronology, in his Programma. He pretends that Jungerman got so great a Reputation during his Professorship at Giessen, that he was invited into England to succeed the most famous Botanist Lobel. This is to confound the time; for Lobel died the Year 1616, and Jungerman was not Professor at Giessen, but from the Year 1622, to 1625. What likelihood is there that the English should have left Lobel's Place vacant Six or Seven Years? Doubtless they designed it for Jungerman a little after it was vacant; he had therefore acquired before his Professorship at Giessen, the Reputation that procured him that great Mark of Esteem the English had for him. Paul Freherus (b), who has given an Abstract of the Programma, has on one Hand better specified the Date, but on the other, thus serves only more clearly to discover the Error of his Calculation. Doctor Med. says he, creatus, & ad Professionem Med. publicam promotus est A. 1622. Hinc (c) per triennium ea omnium celebritate præfuit, ut in Angliam quo celeberrimo Botanici Matthiæ Lobelii successor fieret invitaretur A. C. 1616. sed ille Germaniæ conditiones præstabat. Ad descriptionem etiam Horti Eichstettensis per Germaniam celebris laudabilem nec vulgarem operam contulit. This Garden of Eichstet was printed in the Year 1613. Judge if these things are placed according to their time. Mr. Witten's Diarium Biographicum supposes that our Jungerman was Professor at Leipsick, and afterwards at Altdorf. Read Giessens interest of Lipsiensi.

(B) In making Anagrams.] He published a Collection of 'em at Giessen, in the Year 1624, intituled, Aulæum Academicum, in Quarto. We have two other Works of his, namely, the Catalogue I have mentioned in the Text of this Article, and another like it, intituled, Cornucopiæ Floræ Giessensis, &c. Giessæ 1624. in Quarto.

(B△) The Humours of an Erefipelas.] These are the Words of the Programma: Cum (erefipelatis) swers the Word cum in the Programma, is a Fault of for Hinc. But this Fault of the Printers has not put observed by the Author in a worse Condition.

produced a Scorbutick Gangrene in the Extremities of his Feet. Godfrey and Lewis Jungerman, had a Brother named Gaſpar, who was a Man of Letters. See the Notes of Godfrey Jungerman upon the 4th. Chapter of the Treatiſe de Equuleo.

JUNIUS (Hadrian) Born at Horn (A) in Holland the firſt of July (B) 1511. was one of the moſt Learned Men of his Age. He was the Son of a Burgomaſter (C) of great Worth; and he Studied firſt at Haerlem, afterwards at Louvain and Paris, and at laſt at Bologna in Italy, where he was admitted Doctor of Phyſick. Being returned into his Country, he went into England † in 1543. and was Phyſician to the Duke of Norfolk, and afterwards to a great Lady. He there wrote ſome Books, and amongſt others a Greek and Latin Dictionary, in which he added above 6500 Words. He Dedicated it to King Edward in 1548; and becauſe he gave him the Title of King, they brought him into trouble for it a long time after at the Court of Rome. He was very much Afflicted with that Perſecution; for we ſee in his Letters ‖ to Lindanus Bishop of Ruremond, and to Cardinal Granvelle, that he Paſſionately deſired that Diſgrace might be taken off, with which he had been Branded, ſince the Cenſors had put his Books in the Catalogue of Prohibited Writings. He wrote to the Pope about it, by the Advice of Arias Montanus; and he prepared an Apology, where Proteſting that he had been always a good Catholick, he ſhewed that he could not avoid giving Edward the Title of King ?. As he was a very good Poet, he Publiſhed in 1554, * an Epithalamium upon the Marriage of Philip II. with Queen Mary. This perhaps would have been a conſiderable Fortune to him, if England had remained quiet. He left (D) it during the Troubles, and confined himſelf at Horn; but the King of Denmark quickly ſent for him, to make him Præceptor to the Prince * his Son. Junius not being able (E) to reconcile himſelf either to the Climate, or the Genius of the Inhabitants, re-† See his Apology among his Letters p. 392. where he ſays that he went thither, when Charles the Fifth was before Landrecy.

‖ Pag. 388. 469.

? See his Letter to Vulcanius p. 124. where he boaſts of having ſlighted that Diſgrace.

* Ibid. p. 214.

* See the Remark E.

fluxus conſueti ſubito ſubſiſtentes, gangrænam ſcorbuticam ante trimeſtre (circa motum Martis in loco Lunæ natalitio oppoſito tardum & retrogradum) in extremitate pedum pepererunt. The Phyſicians of that time were wont to Aſcribe much to the influence of the Stars, in Diſcourſing upon Diſtempers.

(A) Junius——Born at Horn in Holland.] Moreri in the Article of Hadrian Junius, ſays, that his true Name was Jonghe or Du Jon; and afterwards when he ſpeaks of Francis Junius Profeſſor at Leiden, he makes only his Vulgar Name to be Jonghe. There is nothing exact in this; for in the firſt place he ſhould have ſaid de Jonghe, and that only with Reſpect to Hadrian Junius, ſince it is falſe, that in the Dutch Tongue his Name could be indifferently either de Jonghe or du Jon. In the ſecond place 'tis falſe, that the Vulgar Name of Francis Junius was any other than Du Jon. It is ſaid in Thuanus's Tranſlation, (d) that Horn the Native Place of Hadrian Junius is a Village of Guelderland. 'Tis a great Blunder, which I don't find in Thuanus of the Frankfort Edition 1625. If the Tranſlator found that Fault in his Edition, he is excuſable; but here is another thing to be Cenſured. He ſays, that Junius leaving Haerlem becauſe of the Siege, went to Armuyden near Middleburg, where having in vain uſed great Diligence and Pains, to afford ſome Remedy to the Miſeries of that Beſieged Town, he was ſo troubled with the change of Air, &c. 'Tis plain that that Beſieged Town neither Relates to Middleburg nor Armuyden, but to Haerlem. Now 'tis very falſe that Junius thought of relieving that Beſieged Town, when he was at Armuyden; for he went not thither till Haerlem was taken. Thuanus (e) cannot be well excus'd for this miſtake: For tho' in Writing in Latin, there's no neceſſity to clear a Period according to the ſtrictneſs of the French Grammar; yet he would never have expreſſed himſelf as he did, had he thought that Junius did not go into Zeland, till after the taking of Haerlem. It can't be ſaid that he there ſpeaks of the Siege of Middleburg or Armuyden, ſince theſe two Places were not Beſieged whilſt Junius lived in Zeland. Melchior Adam has Tranſcribed Thuanus's Fault. They ſhould have known that this Phyſician ſtaid ſome time at Delft, after the taking of Haerlem, before his going into Zeland.

(d) Apud Teiſſier Addit. aux Eloges tom. 1. p. 479.

(e) Ad Armuydam juxta Mildeburgum in Mattiacis ſe contulerat, ubi cum fruſtra conſilio & diligentia ſua concivibus laborantibus opem ferre conatus eſſet, ex cœli mutatione.. in letalem morbum incidit. Thuan. l. 62.

(B) The firſt of July 1511.] This is what we find in the Life of Junius, prefixed to his Epiſtles, vitam hanc orditur Kalendis Julii, anni 1511. Some Pages after, we read that he Died Die 16. Junii anno 1575. cum [illegible]LEVISSET annum ætatis 63. qui magnus climactericus annus Medicis vocatur. Which ſhews that Thuanus and Melchior Adam are miſtaken, who make him Die in his Climacterical year. But becauſe this Life of Junius is not very exact, and the Edition (f) of the Epiſtles to which it is prefixed, is ſaid to have been Printed in the year 1552, tho' it contains the Epitaph of the Author who Died in 1575, and ſome of his Letters Dated in 1574, I would not Condemn the Chronology of Meurſius, who places the Birth (g) of this Learned Man to the year 1512. That which makes me ſay that his Life (b) is not exact, is, that beſides the two Dates I have mention'd out of it, I there find his Epitaph; which imports that he lived 63 years. If the Author of this Life thought the Epitaph was right, he was in the wrong to place Junius's Birth Day on the firſt of July 1511. and to ſay that on the 16*th.* of June 1575. he had compleated the 63*d.* year of his Age. On the other Hand, when a Man is full 64 Years Old within fifteen Days, 'tis a great negligence to ſay, that he is 63 years Old, or above. But whether there be little or much Negligence in it, it is certain, that Moreri, Freherus, Melchior Adam, Sir Thomas Pope Blount, and thoſe who place Junius's Birth in the year 1513. are all thereby Confuted. The Edition of his Letters is not very Correct; and beſides they are not placed according to the time in which they were Written, and no care has been taken to diſcover and ſupply the Dates where they are wanting, which very often happens. Theſe two Faults are but too common in ſuch ſort of Collections.

(f) I make uſe of an Edition of Dol: apud Vincentium Caimax in 12.

(g) Valerius Andreas Bibl. Belg. & Bullart Academ. des Sciences do it alſo.

(b) I can't tell whether it be that which Beverwijck promiſed in a Letter to Voſſius, Dated the 12th. of June 1626. See the Letters written to Voſſius n. 78. p. m. 47.

(C) Son of a Burgomaſter of great Worth.] The Father of our Junius had not only been Secretary, and afterwards five times Burgomaſter of Horn, but alſo twice Deputed to the Court of Denmark, and once to Sweden, and other Places. He was a Man of Learning, and wrote (a) a Latin Book, which was never Printed, containing the Original and Growth of Horn.

(a) Boxhornius Theatr. Hollandiæ. p. 373.

(D) He left it during the Troubles.] For want of a better Guide, I have followed the Life of Junius, which is prefixed to his Letters; tho' I am not Ignorant that Exactneſs will not ſuffer us to make this Author Live in England from the firſt time of his coming thither, till the Troubles that happened after the Marriage of Mary with Philip II. for I ſee ſome of his Letters are Dated (b) from Haerlem or Horn in the year 1552, and at the beginning of 1554. which beſpeak a Sedentary Man. Many of thoſe who have written Lives have ſtood very much in need of Advice.

(b) Pag. 339. 345. 348.

(E) Not being able to Reconcile himſelf.] This appears from the 385*th.* Page of his Letters, where he thus ſpeaks to Sambucus: Liberet mihi volydori exemplo ejumpere in hæc verba, adſum profectus Danica è caligine, niſi longinqui ac moleſti itineris cum partus recordationem obliteraſſet jucundus amicorum reduci quotidie gratulantium——occurſus. He adds ſeveral Reaſons for his refuſing the Salary, which retired in so abrupt a manner, as not to take his leave of the King. 'Tis probable, this was in 1564 †. He settled (F) at Haerlem, where he practiced Physick, and Married, and was made Principal of the College. The States of Holland Commissioned him to write the History of that Province; of which he would have acquitted himself Honourably, and with greater exactness than he did, if he could have put the last Hand to the Work, which came out after his Death, under the Title † of Batavia. When the Spaniards Besieged the Town of Haerlem, he found a way to escape out of it, to attend the Prince of Orange, who desired to use his Remedies. The Town being taken in 1573. his Library was Pillaged, where he had left many Works, which had cost him a great deal of Pains, and by which he hoped to Immortalize himself. He might have put them quickly in a Condition to be Published; which increased his Grief. He went into Zeland, where the Prince's Recommendation procured him a publick Salary, for practising Physick in Middleburg: But the Air of the Country was very disagreeable to him. He there got some Distempers, which together with his Grief for the loss of his Library, killed him the sixteenth of June 1575. being 64 years Old within some Days. His Body was carried from Armuyden to Middleburg, where his eldest Son had him decently Buried, and composed (G) his Epitaph. We have many (H) Books of his making. I'll say something of 'em in the last Remark. He was pitch'd upon (I) for a Professor's Chair at Leiden, where the University was, as it were, just Born, when he Died. I have not yet had time fully to Evidence whether (K) he at last turned Protestant.

† See his Letters p. 385.

† Vossius de Scient. Mathem. p. 259. Pontus Heuter. l. 2. de vet. Belgio c. 25.

It appears from one * of his Letters, that he put himself into a great Passion, when he heard that one of his Scholars had accused him of Commanding his Boarders not to go to Church. He protests on the contrary, that he forc'd 'em to go upon Holy Days; for he Condemned to considerable Fines those who Neglected to go. Elsewhere

* Epistol. p. 387.

(c) It was a Salary of four hundred Riksdalers p. 409.

(d) Ibid.

which was no inconsiderable one (c), which he might have enjoyed at Coppenhagen. In another Letter (d) he says, that he and his Wife abhorred that Country. In another he desires an Augmentation of his Salary. I find there, that he was invited to be Physician to the King, but not to be Tutor to the young Prince.

(f) Pag. 179. See concerning his Mistress p. 109.

(g) In this Article.

(F) He settled at Haerlem.] The Author of his Life has not well distinguished the Times. He says that he settled at Haerlem, and Married after his return from Coppenhagen. But I have proved that he returned from thence in the year 1564. and we see by a Letter (f) which he wrote in 1559. that he had fixed himself at Haerlem a long time before, and that he was Married to a handsome Woman who brought him a Fortune. The Epistle Dedicatory of his Treatise de Anno, that of his Tract de coma, and that of his Animadversorum are Dated from that Town in 1556.

(G) And Composed his Epitaph.] Boxhornius having added an Appendix to his Theatrum Hollandiæ, for the Omissions he thought were to be supplied, amongst other things inserted this Epitaph in great Letters, but he let three Faults creep into it, velint instead of meruit, 64. instead of 63. and 15. instead of 16. Vixit ann. LXIIIX. obiit die XV. &c.

(H) We have many Books of his making.] His chief Works besides those already (g) mentioned, are, Animadversorum libri sex. Commentarius de Coma. Adagiorum (h) ab Erasmo omissorum centuria octo cum dimidia. Appendix ad Epitheta Textoris. Copia eorum, sive Occasus enarrationum Homericarum ex Eustathii commentariis collectus in unum volumen. A Nomenclator. Commentarius de anno & mensibus. Many sorts of Latin Verses. The Translation of Eunapius de vitis Sophistarum. That of Hesychius Milesius, that of Plutarch's Table Discourses (i), that of the Question, relating to Physick of Cassius Iatrosophista, made and Printed at Paris in 1541. ('Tis I believe the first of his Works.) I mention not a great number of Authors, whom he has Illustrated with Notes, as Nonius Marcellus, Plautus, Seneca, Pliny (k), Virgil, Horace (l). He had been a long time upon Suidas, and designed to Dedicate it to the Prince of Orange's Son, as he owns (m) to an English Lord, whose good Offices he desires with that Prince, in order to be Gratified with a Present before Hand; for he understood as well as any Body else how to make the best of an Epistle Dedicatory.

(h) This Book is placed among those of Francis Junius, Professor of Divinity at Leyden, in the Catalogue of the Bodleian Library.

(i) Mr. Huet de claris Interpretib. speaks of those Translations with great Contempt.

(k) See his Life prefixed to his Epistles, and in Melchior Adam.

(l) See his Letters p. 5. & 6.

(m) Epist. p. 173. See also p. 116.

I have something to observe concerning three of his Works. I. The Author of his Life says that the Animadversorum libri sex were lost, when Haerlem was taken: But they were Published by the Author himself, and Dedicated to Antony Perenot Bishop of Arras in the year one thousand five hundred and fifty six. Gruterus has inserted them in the 4*th.* Volume of his Thesaurus Criticus. II. As for the Appendix ad Epitheta Textoris, it may be said that Junius handled that Matter with another sort of Learning than Textor, who committed very gross Faults in it. See some of them in Junius's Letters (a). He looked upon it as a most profitable and painful Work (b). III. His Nomenclator is in its kind an excellent Book. The choice of Words in eight Languages is no less a Proof of Junius's Learning, than of his indefatigable Patience. 'Tis said (c) that he understood eight Languages very well, Greek, Latin, Italian, French, Spanish, High-Dutch, English and Dutch. His Travels had done him great Service on that Account: I find he had been in France, Italy, Germany, and England, but not in Spain, as (d) Valerius Andreas, Moreri, and Freherus Affirm. Colomiés has Published (e) a little Story, which he had from Isaac Vossius; it shews that Junius neglected nothing to perfect his Nomenclator, and that he stooped to Drink with Carters to learn the Terms of their Trade: I think it appears from one (f) of his Letters, that he did not think it a great Crime to Drink plentifully without being Drunk.

(a) Pag. 406.

(b) Ibid. p. 116.

(c) Meursius Athen. Batav.

(d) Bibl. Belg. p. 12.

(e) Opusc. p. m. 132.

(f) It is written to a Bishop, p. 460.

(g) See what Cremius animadv. phil. & histor. parte 1. p. 33. & seq. quotes out of Gronovius, &c.

When I say that this Nomenclator is an excellent Book in its kind, I don't pretend to deny, that there are Faults in it, and very gross ones (g); I only mean that the good things that are in it exceed those that are wrong. Now in Works of this Nature, where 'tis impossible not to mistake, Perfection do's not demand that an Author should be free from all Faults. Such a Book is like Man: He is the most perfect that has the least Faults. (h) Vitiis nemo sine nascitur, optimus ille est qui minimis urgetur.

(h) Horat. Sat. 3. l. 1.

(I) He was pitch'd upon.] 'Tis Meursius who says this: Sub mortis tempus, says he (i), Academiæ nascenti inter primos professores destinatus, sed inter ipsa initia morte abreptus inchoare munus non potuit. Freherus (k) who Transcribes this, without adding what University is meant, throws his Readers into the Dark, or into an Illusion; one would think that he means Middleburg, of which he had, been speaking, and that an University had been lately founded there. I shall observe on this occasion, that nothing causes a greater Obscurity in Books than the not taking Pains to add the necessary Supplements to what is taken out of other Authors. A thousand things are clear in the Originals, which are unintelligible, when they are Nakedly removed into another Place.

(i) Athen. Batav. p. 93.

(k) Theatr. p. 1270.

(K) Whether he at last turned Protestant.] That which holds me in suspence is, a Letter (l) that he wrote to the Bishop of Haerlem in 1573, to give him an Account of the Endeavours he had used to hinder this Prelate's House from being Plundered. He tells him, where * he complains of his Poverty, and that being loaded with Debts, and obliged to Equip himself, he had no Money in † his Pocket.

(l) Pag. 457.

JUNIUS † (Francis) Professor of Divinity at Leiden, was Born at Bourges the first of May 1545. He was (A) of a noble Family. His Father who was a Man of the long Robe, found himself exposed to many Persecutions for being suspected of Lutheranism (B). He exposed his Wife to horrid Slanders, because (C) she

* Ibid. p. 140. See also p. 254.

† His true Name was Du Jon, and not Jonghe, as Moreri will have it.

† And not a Civilian, as Father Jacob says in his Bibliotheca Pontif. p. 460.

(m) Pag. 381.

(n) Pag. 476. Edit. 1667. in fol.

(o) In curiolia & equili ... Ludovici XII. ministravit Franciscus Junius in vita sua, tom. 1. Oper. p. 6. col. 1.

(p) Hinc ab avo solennis literarum quas Dionysio filio mittebat, & falsa inscriptio, Dionysio dilecto filio misso ad studendum, pro eo quod alii vulgo inscribunt, studenti. Id. ibid.

(q) Taken from Junius's Life.

(r) Id. ib. col. 2.

(f) Et Franciscanorum arte, & plebis imprudentia odioque maximo pressus est sub religionis specie & Lutheranismi ... acculatus, subornata ad eam rem ancilla quæ domi serviverat. Ea patrem à se visum, quum diebus vetitis carnes ederet, pro testimonio dicebat falso, ut matrem sæpe audivi confirmantem. Id. Ibid.

him, that he preserved this Depositum, as well as he could, and that he gave it not up to the Plunderers till he was over-powered, being threatned with immediate Death, with a Pistol to his Breast. He adds that the impunity of these Miscreants obliged him to ask leave to retire out of the Town, which he obtained. 'Tis certain he stoutly complained to the Magistrates (m) of the Violence that had been done him, and that he told 'em the Spaniards would hardly be guilty of the same Excesses, if they were Masters of the Town. That which I don't understand, is what he told this Prelate, that to preserve his House, it had been necessary to drive away the French, who Paophan'd every thing with a cruel Rage, excludendo barbaram & crudelem Gallorum omnia profanantium rabiem. I don't take the Index librorum prohibitorum & expurgandorum, wherein (n) he is call'd a Calvinist, and an Author damnatæ memoriæ, to be a convincing Proof.

(A) He was of a Noble Family.] William du Jon his Grandfather Seigneur de la Boffardiere near Issoudun, was ennobled for the good Services he had done in the Expedition into Navarre, when endeavours were used to Restore John d' Albret unjustly depriv'd of his Kingdom by Ferdinand of Aragon. He had also been a Servant (o) to the King. He left three Sons, the last whereof call'd Denys, Studied the Civil Law, and took his Degrees at Toulouse. He performed his Studies but ill (p); for as he had a great Spirit, he was always engaged in Quarrels with the Scholars. In a word, he was a great Duellist. He obtained the Office of Councellor to the King at Bourges, as a Reward of a bold Action he had done. We shall see it in the following Remark. He had nine Children, of which our Francis Junius was one (q).

(B) For being suspected of Lutheranism.] The Superior of the Cordeliers of Issoudun Preached so impudently against Margaret Queen of Navarre, Dutchess of Berry, and Sister to Francis I. as to say, that because she was a Lutheran, she deserved to be tied up in a Sack, and to be thrown into the Sea. The Magistrates of the Place advised him not to be wanting in the Respect, that was due to that Princess; but he Laughed at their Advice, and went on Preaching in the same strain. Informations were made against him, and sent to the King. The King being resolved to punish him with the same Punishment, to which he had adjudged the Princess, Ordered the Monk should be brought to him. The Queen of Navarre interceeding for him, obtained that the Punishment should be Moderated. The Difficulty was to Seize that Monk, who had the Mob on his side; so that the Magistrates of Issoudun durst not undertake the Execution of his Majesty's Orders. Denys du Jon, being returned from the Schools where he had Fought so many Duels, Declared that if his Majesty would give him a Commission to take the Monk, he would punctually Execute it. This Commission being Dispatched for him, he put himself at the Head of the Archers, and in spite of the Populace, he took the Preacher out of the Cloister, who was sent to the Gallies for two years. Du Jon by this ingratiated himself with Francis I. and the Dutchess of Berry; but he incurred the Hatred of the People, and of the Cordeliers, and found himself exposed to many Calumnies, and Threatnings, and involved into Law Suits, which ended at last in a cruel Massacre, committed on his Person. (r) Hæc prima fuit actio, qua ingratiam Regis, sororisque Reginæ insinuavit patrem: sed apud illam inconsultam plebeculam & Franciscanorum ordinem odia perpetua conciliavit; indignissimasque calumnias, minas, criminationes, persecutiones, damna, cruentam denique eadem patri apportavit. He (f) was Accused of Lutheranism, and his Maid was Suborned to attest that he did not observe Fasting Days. He betook himself to Flight, being unwilling to trust himself with such Passionate People: They seized on his Estate, and the Queen of Navarre was obliged to supply him wherewithal to Subsist for near a year. At last by the King's Authority the Accusations were brought to nothing, and then Du Jon obtained a Place of Councellor, &c. (t) Liberatus ab accusatione pater auctoritate Regis, patrium solum repetit, atque immigrat in Biturigum metropolin, ubi cum laude ad exitum usque vitæ Consiliarii Regii & pro Tribuno militum honoribus à Rege collatis defunctus est: præter alia commoda honoraria, quæ à Regina sorore illius & Biturigum Duce acceperat. Hear how he was killed. On Corpus Christi Day, the Catholicks of Issoudun, without any regard to the Treaty of Peace, which had been just Concluded, committed a thousand Violences against the Reformed. The King dispatched a Commission to Denys du Jon to inquire into that Insurrection, and to punish the Authors of it. Du Jon repaired to Issoudun, accompanied only with three Archers; he dispersed the rest in several Places, before he enter'd the Town, it being necessary to use Prudence in so nice an Affair. His Precautions did him no Service; it was Conjectured upon what Account he came; the People seized the Gates, and Besieged the House of the Commissioner. They broke into it, Killed Du Jon, threw him out at the Window, dragged him along the Streets, exposed him to the Dogs, and Publickly (a) forbad to Bury him (b). The King's Council out of Indignation against this Insolence, Ordered that the Walls of Issoudun should be Demolished, but Cipierre and some other Lords got the Decree chang'd, especially because the Murthered Commissioner had been suspected of Lutheranism above 24 years. The Widow of the Deceased desiring to Prosecute the Murderers, got the Hatred of [illegible] many People, and ruined her self. (c) Hæc consilium Regis commovit plurimùm: & de [illegible] infectis muris totius oppidi in eo [illegible] atrocitatem facinoris, & periculosissimum [illegible] consilii. Sed postea conversa est factionibus [illegible] consilii: tum propter Sipierrii Gubernatoris [illegible] nullorum ex nobilitate procerum inveterata odia, tum propter religionis Pontificiæ Zelum, cujus [illegible] ind. sinenter flagravisse inde ab annis duplius viginti quatuor criminabantur patrem. Itaque eadem illam necesse habuit mater in Regis consilio persequi ex eo tempore: quo facto, cum ipsa in se multorum concitavit odia, tum omnia fermè commoda quæ ex bellica licentia, furtis, rapinis, grassationibusque restabant ipsi, in hac persecutione occupavit.

(t) Id. ib. p. 7. col. 1.

(a) However a Woman Buried him in the Night. Id. ibid.

(b) Taken from the Life of Franciscus Junius p. 14.

(c) Id. ib.

(c) Felicius certe utiliusque politicos honores gesturo, & Remp. administraturo, si post tam forte assum honesta & cauta migrationis, quam sæpe fieri Navarrena Regina & nonnulli Proceres cupiverunt, ut alibi Reip. inserviret patefi, sibi prospexisset. Id. ib. p. 6. col. 2.

AN IMPORTANT Reflection upon the Effects of false Zeal.

I need not put any Body in Mind of the ill effects of a Religious Zeal. Those who are possest with it, justify a Murther, and disapprove the Conduct of a Woman, who desires that those who have Murthered her Husband should be Punished. But I desire my Readers to give Attention to one thing. Religion, which is looked upon all over the World as the strongest support of the Sovereign Authority, and which would be actually so, if it was well understood and practis'd, is commonly that, which most enervates the same. There was nothing more just than the Decree of Francis I. against the Preacher of Issoudun; a Man who had the Impudence to treat the King's Sister so Barbarously in the Pulpit. And yet not one Magistrate durst Execute the King's Orders against this Mutineer, and when a Gentleman has the Courage to execute 'em, he exposes himself to a thousand Persecutions, and becomes so Odious, that his Murtherers are openly protected. The Queen of Navarre (d) was the first who Advised this Gentleman to leave his Country, since the Execution of his Prince's Orders would expose him to the hatred of the Bigots. An evident Proof that the Court did not think it self strong enough to protect its good Servants persecuted by Churchmen. 'Tis commonly said that the Ministry of the Gospel est ipsis Angelis tremendum; we may add & ipsis quoque Regibus. Read the History of the Roman Church,

She (C) proved with Child, whilſt he was thought to have ran away, and it was not known that he came once ſecretly to ſee her. Our Francis Junius was carefully Educated, and became a very Learned Man, to which his Natural Modeſty (D) together with his great Ambition, did not a little Contribute. He began to Study the Civil Law under Hugo Donellus at thirteen years of Age. Some years after he was ſent to Lyons, in order to joyn the Ambaſſador, whom the King of France ſent to Conſtantinople: But not Arriving till after the Departure of the Ambaſſador, he ſtaid at Lyons, and applied himſelf to his Studies with an incredible Induſtry. Bartholomew (E) Aneau, who was Principal of the College of that Town, gave him good Advice about the right Method of Studying. The young Gentleman found himſelf expos'd to two very different Temptations, to that of Love, and that of Impiety. He vigorouſly oppoſed the firſt; for he gave a Box o' th' Ear, (F) to a young Woman, who came to Careſs him: But he yielded ſo tamely to the Sophiſtry of a Libertine, that he found himſelf (G) a perfect Atheiſt, upon lending an Ear to him for ſome Days. He did not remain long in that miſerable Condition; a Tumult about Religion, which obliged him to run away, in order to ſave his Life, afforded him an occaſion of Reſuming his

(c) Compare what has been ſaid in the Article Abdas, Rem. B.

(f) Virgil. Georg. l. 1. v. 514.

(g) Profugus pater clam ad matrem ſemel redierat; hinc gravida facta mater proſcindebatur à vulgo, tanquam ſi proſtitura ſuiſſet pudicitia illius. Usque hoc incommodo ſanctæ illius fœminæ animus oppugnabatur, objicientibus maligne quam plurimis tum Franciſcæ illius revolutionem, tum gravidatem, ut ajebant, impudicam. Junius, ibid. pag. 7. col. 1.

(h) Ex pudore hæc conſequuta ſunt inde à puero quod mihi ſemper ſim diffiſus, quod aliorum factis audiendis, ſermonibus obſervandis & advertendis in uſum meum ſtuduerim. Id. ibid. col. 2.

Church, and you'll find that the greateſt Princes have had more Reaſon to fear the Paſſions raiſed by Zealots, than the Arms of the Infidels: Thus that very thing which ought to be the ſupport of the State, is very often the greateſt Obſtacle that Sovereigns meet with in the Execution of their Orders (e).

(C) Becauſe ſhe proved with Child.] 'Tis an imprudence to venture the being ſo, when the Husband is run away; for if he Died before he returned, and before the Lying-in and without owning that he is the Author of the great Belly, three things very poſſible, how could a Woman juſtify her ſelf to the Publick? But farther, is it nothing to give a Handle to ill Tongues, as the Wife of Du Jon did? It will be ſaid that 'tis eaſie to Talk ſo, when one is Diſcourſing of it in cold Blood, without conſidering the caſe of Amorous People. After ſome Months Abſence, their Love is ſo Violent that no conſideration can reſtrain them; Paſſion Hurries them along, and they are not able to hearken to any Reaſon: (f) Fertur equis auriga, neque audit currus habenas. However it be, (g) our Junius's Mother was Defamed upon that Account, at which ſhe was moſt ſenſibly afflicted.

(D) His Natural Modeſty, together with his great Ambition.] Theſe two Paſſions do not ſeem to be conſiſtent one with another, and yet ſometimes they joyn together. Junius is an Inſtance of it. He confeſſes, that in his younger years he loved above Pleaſure to be Honoured and Praiſed, and that he could not ſuffer the Praiſes, which were given to others. Natura me parcum ad honoris & laudis appetentiam plus ſatis accendebat. Sic enim mala radix illa nec exemplis in me germinabat, ut nec alienam laudem iſta fronte æquo animo ferre poſſem miſer, nec in mea exiſtimatione illa conquieſcere quam mihi conciliabam pertinaciſſima diligentia. On the other Hand he Acknowledges, that he was ſo Timorous, and Baſhful, that even when he was near fifty years Old, he could not ſpeak to his own Wife without Bluſhing, and that he hardly durſt Command his own Domeſticks. Pudor ſummus qui me ad hanc uſque ætatem ſic preſſit, ut ruſticus magis ad omnia quam urbanus merito haberi poſſim —— Quid dicam niſi impudentem ferme pudorem eſſe qui me tantopere impeditum deſinet, ut vix ſine pudore uxori res vulgareis enunciem, vix jam domi ſervitio imperem. He pretends to have drawn great Advantages from this Baſhfulneſs; becauſe diſtruſting himſelf (h) he applied himſelf much more to improve by what he heard and ſaw; and he declares he would not acquaint his Readers with his Infirmity, if he did not believe, it would be a moſt uſeful Leſſon of Modeſty to Youth. Hoc eo libentius prædico de infirmitate mea, ut juventus ab exemplo meo præceptum hauriat verecundiæ atque modeſtiæ, ut certum fructum peritiæ certo judicio aſſequatur. Id enim teſtor, nihil mihi ſecundum benedictionem Dei tam commodaviſſe in rebus omnibus, quam illam de me ipſo diffidentiam ex conſcientia infirmitatis & pudoris mei, & ſtudioſam aliorum, quibuſcunque adfui, obſervantiam. That Modeſty and rare Humility which makes a Man diſtruſt his own Strength, cannot be too much Praiſed: But 'tis certain it is of no uſe to the making of one's Fortune in the World; and if a Father has a Deſign that his Children ſhould come to Preferments, I would adviſe him rather to inſpire 'em with Vanity and Preſumption, than with Diffidence of their own Merit. Junius is perhaps the only Perſon, who with reſpect to Worldly Advantages, was not the worſe for his Modeſty. I don't pretend to affirm that Arrogance is always uſeful: It ſometimes ruins young Men, and hinders them from riſing; I ſpeak only of this in general, without minding the Exceptions.

(E) Bartholomew Aneau.] I have ſpoken elſewhere of his Commentary upon Alciatus's Emblems. He was called in Latin Annulus, or Anulus: He was a Native of Bourges, (k) and Published many Books. He was miſerably Kill'd in the Tumult of Religion, where Junius had like to have loſt his Life: His Wife would have had the ſame Fate, if the Provoſt of Lyons had not ſaved her by Impriſoning her (l).

(F) A Box o' th' Ear to a young Woman, who came to Careſs him.] This is a thing much more admirable than Theagenes's Action (m), as being Hiſtorical, whereas that of Theagenes is only a Romantick Fiction. Junius, intent upon his Studies, thought of nothing leſs, than of making Love. In the mean time he was teazed for his want of Gallantry, and it was repreſented to him, that he would never learn Civility, if he did not fall in Love. Theſe Diſcourſes having no influence upon his Conduct, they expos'd him to the Careſſes of three or four Wenches, who impudently attacked him. They fell violently upon him, and omitted nothing to Triumph over his Modeſty. At laſt, he loſt his Patience, and gave one of 'em a Box o' th' Ear; this Blow caus'd a great noiſe in the Houſe. The Girl, who had receiv'd it, finding by the young Man's look, that it was not by way of Jeſt, but out of Anger that ſhe had been thus uſed, fell a Crying and Lamenting. She was Laughed at and Junius too; but this made him Odious to many People. Theſe are his own Words. (n) Dies & noctes appetebant canes illæ promiſcuè, neſcium quid ſibi vellent, & gravitatis honeſtatiſque meæ, quam in domo paterna viderant, ſubinde recordantem. Neque id ſeorſim tentabant ſingulæ, verumetiam ternæ aut quaternæ ſimul conſertis manibus in me irruebant immodeſtiſſimè, ut perductio ad ſuam impudentiam animo meo de ſpoliis pudoris mei triumpharent. Tandem vero adeo me puduit illarum impudentiæ, ut quum una multis ſpectantibus me amatorie eſſet adorſa ſuppo, ego contra colaphum gravem ei impegerim: quam illa addubitans utram in partem acciperet, ſpretis oculis attenta reſpexit ad me, aliquantiſper ſe objurgans aliquam mei animi ſignificationem: ut autem rem ſeriam à me eſſe vidit, tum illa vociferationibus & ejulatibus implevit domum, omnimoque ejus imprudens in ſeſe, ſtultorum odia in me ſibi ſavit. He was ſo tired with theſe Temptations, that he had a thouſand times the Thoughts of returning to his Father, without taking leave of the People of the Houſe; but he feared their Reſentment and the Calumnies they might make uſe of, to cry him down in his Family.

(G) He found himſelf a perfect Atheiſt.] By Bartholomew Aneau's Advice, he read Cicero de Legibus, and made Collections out of it. In the interim he received a Viſit from a Man, and heard him maintain with ſo many Arguments, what Cicero Alledges concerning Epicurus's Rejecting a Providence, that he gave way to that impious Doctrine

(k) See La Croix du Maine, pag. 35. & Du Verdier VauPrivas

(l) See Junius's Life, pag. 10. col. 2.

(m) See Heliodorus, Rem. C.

(n) Junius, ibid. pag. 9. col. 2.

his first Faith. His Father recalled him to Bourges, and discovering something of the Opinions his Son was imbued with, he gave him good Instructions, and without seeming to know any thing of the matter, brought him to read the New Testament. The first Words † that Junius (H) met with, affected him so sensibly, that he quickly grew out of Conceit with whatever related not to Piety. In the beginning of the Civil Wars, he betook himself to Geneva, for the Study of the Languages. As he carried but little Money with him, and had none sent him, he found himself reduced (I) to extreme Necessity. At last he received wherewithal to deliver himself from his Misery, and to pay his Debts; and hearing the Tragical * end of his Father, he resolved to get his Livelihood by teaching Youth. He undertook that Employment at Geneva, which he discharged till he was sent ‖ into the Low-Countries to be Minister of the Walloon-Church at Antwerp. He performed that Office in the midst of many Dangers; for tho' he opposed the indiscreet Zeal of those, who without any just Authority broke the Images, and pillaged the Temples, he was accounted their Instigator; which was the Reason that they often attempted to imprison him. He had the good Fortune always to have timely notice of it, so as to avoid being taken. It was found expedient for him to go into the Country of Limburg, where he continued his Ministerial Functions with good Success, till the Dangers he was exposed to, put the Magistrates upon advising him to retire into Germany. The Curiosity (K) that an old Man had, deserves to be known; it is so proper to shew the Knavery of the Persecutors, and the Foolishness of the People. Junius was received at Heidelberg by the Elector Frederick III. with a great deal of Kindness, and went to see his Mother at Bourges; from whence returning to the Palatinate, he was made Minister † of a little Church there. Some time after he was sent by the Elector to the Army of the Prince of Orange, during the unfortunate Expedition of the Year 1568. He was Chaplain to that Prince, till the Troops had got into Germany; and then he returned to his Church in the Palatinate, where he discharged his Function till the Year 1573, after which he was sent for to Heidelberg by the Elector Palatin, to Work upon the Translation * of the Old Testament. He was sent to Neustadt in the Year 1573, and at Fourteen Months end to Otterburg, where he staid Eighteen Months; after which he returned to Neustadt, and read publick Lectures till Prince Casimir, Administrator of the Electorate, sent for him to Heidelberg, to be Professor of Divinity. He returned into France with the Duke of Bouillon, and waited on King Henry IV. who sent him into Germany upon some Business. He thought fit to pass through Holland, before he went to give an Account of his Commission to Henry IV. and being importuned to profess Divinity at Leyden, he accepted the Offer, having first obtain'd the Consent of the Ambassador of France †. He

† The beginning of St. John's Gospel.

* See the Rem. B.

‖ In the Year 1565

‡ Scænovienſis Eccleſiæ.

* Tremellius was his Partner in that Work.

† Taken from his Life, written by himself, and published by Merula, in 1595, and afterwards prefixed to his Works. Melchior Adam has given us a large Abridgment of it. Mereri is mistaken in quoting Merula in descript. vitæ Junii.

(a) Ista horribili impietate conflata erat quotidie mensa, personabat domus, circumtrepelant omnia aures meas, adeo ut jamque ad alia omnia obsurdescerem. Nam quum omnibus horis aliquid atrociter fieri videmus, aut audimus, inquit Tullius, etiam cum natura mitissimi simus, assiduitate molestiam sensim omnem humanitatis ex animis eximimus: quum impune fieri aut dici, pietatis sensum. Id. ib. pag. 10. col. 1.

(b) Here is a Slip of Memory; Junius took the 1*st. Book* de Legibus for the 1*st. Book* de Natura Deorum. (c) Junius, ib. ibid. pag. 11. col. 2.

(d) Junius shrine: which he did the more easily, because it was the constant Table-Talk (a), and all the House rung with it. Memini, quum libros M. Tullii de legibus per illud tempus, auctore & suasore Amalo (de quo ante dixi) expenderem, & notas quasdam in eos animadversionesque colligerem, venire hominem ad me, & illa Epicuri verba quæ libro primo exstant (b), nihil curare Deum nec fui, nec alieni, multis quàm diligentissimè confirmare: ad quæ ego non ratione judicioque certe respondebam: sed assensionem paulatim adhibens, sentiebam venenum serpens, quod imbiberam, confirmari in me: & cum auctoritate hominis, tum argutiis dictorum ejus præceps eò deferebar, ut meus animus in isto malo hærens occalleſceret, totusque fieret [illegible] (c).

(H) The first Words that he met with in the New Testament affected him.] The thing is so edifying, and so likely to imprint a due Sense of the Efficacy of the Word of God, that I ought to set down the whole Passage. (d) Hic ergo novum illud testamentum divinitus oblatum aperio: aliud agenti exhibet se mihi aspectu primo augustissimum illud caput Joannis Evangelistæ & Apostoli, In principio erat Verbum, &c. Lego partem capitis, & ita commoveor legens, ut repente divinitatem argumenti, & scripti majestatem auctoritatemque senserim longo intervallo omnibus eloquentiæ humanæ fluminibus præeuntem. Horrebat corpus, stupebat animus, & totum illum diem sic afficiebar, ut qui essem, ipse mihi incertus viderer esse. Recordatus ex mei, Domine Deus mi, pro immensa misericordia tua, ovemque perditam in gregem tuum recepisti. Ex eo tempore, quum in me Deus tam potenter Spiritus sui virtute irruisset, alia frigidiùs & negligentiùs legere & tractare cœpi; de his verò quæ ad pietatem pertinent cogitare amplius, & ardentiùs in eis versari.

(I) Reduced to extream Necessity.] He gives a long Account of it, whereof I will observe but these two Things. Having only, upon the Approach of the Winter, a Linen Doublet and a little Cloak, he resolved to imitate Cleanthes (e), that is, to get something by the Labour of his Hands. He had a mind to turn Pioneer in the Ditches of the Republick of Geneva. But he found a young Man of his Country, who relieved him. Standing in need of this help longer than he had a mind to, he was afraid of being Burthensome, and by that Apprehension he brought himself to the making but one little Meal once a Day. This Abstinence lasted Four Months, and reduced him to such a lean Condition, that he was scarce able to bear the Weight of his Shirt. He would have died in a little time, if his Friends had not prevailed upon him to eat a little more plentifully. Ultro ad menses quatuor jejunium ipse indixi mihi, & horam prandii in ambulatione, legens & memoriam colens, meditans, orans occupavi: vesperæ autem cœna frugali usus sum, plurimùm forbens bina ova, & mediocrem vini cyathum hauriens. Sed ex diuturna ista & pervicace inedia paulatim me invasit tabes, & ita exedit graviter, ut vires omnes exhaustum corpus deficerent. Quod malum tum demum sensi, quum instantibus amicis & tabem meam ex vultu recognoscentibus, ad majorem cibi copiam sumendam veni, & vivere instituì liberaliùs: nam vel indusii solius onere pragravati mihi esse humeri videbantur (f).

(K) The Curiosity that an old Man had, deserves to be known.] He had been made to believe, that Junius the Heretical Preacher had Cloven Feet, and he was not undeceived, till he had viewed him from Head to Foot. 'Twas in the Presence of a great Company, who were met in hopes of hearing a Dispute betwixt Junius and a Cordelier. The Place and Hour for the Conference were appointed; but the Friar went back, under Pretence of having forgot something. I have a hundred Times heard such sort of Stories, but never saw 'em before supported by a Printed and Authentick Testimony. Which moves me to set down Junius's own Words, (g) Ridiculum est quod

(e) Certum deliberatumque erat hebdomade proxime sequutura ——alternos dies in egerenda tessera ad fossam urbis, & in studiis consumere, Cleanthis exemplo, ut levarem inopiam meam. Id. ib.

(f) Ib. pag. 13. col. 2.

(g) Ibid. pag. 20. col. 1.

He discharged the Functions of that Employment with great Ability, till the Year 1602, when he died of the Plague. He had an Aversion for Women; but, as he owns himself, he (l) was punished by God for it, in the Four Marriages he contracted. He left (M) some Children, and published (N) many Books. Thuanus is very much out (O) in what he says of him. Scaliger's Memoirs (P), who hated Junius, very probably prejudiced this famous Historian against him. Junius did not deserve the Contempt that Scaliger had for him; the Injustice of it is visible. And when we consider the Praises †, that abundance of great Authors have given him, we find our selves more quod dicam, sed tamen indicium horum simplicitatis, mendaciſſimæ illorum imprudentiæ. Quum in campo essemus Franciscani illius adventum exspectantes, vir quidam, senex frequentiam illam maximam quæ tum aderat perrumpens, copiam sibi fieri, videndi mei postulavit. Audito strepitu rogabam quid rei esset. Cognito hominem esse mei videndi cupientem, monui ut daretur homini ad veniendum locus. Tum ille demisso vultu inde à pedibus ad verticem usque observans diligentissimè constitutionem meam, erupit in hæc verba: ego, jamjam video non esse id verum, quod mihi de te fuerat nunciatum. Me autem dixente, quid ego illud est? tibi, inquit, pedes fissos esse.

† See Colom. Gallia Orient. p. 55. & seq.

(l) He was punished by God for it, in the Four Marriages he contracted.] Lest I should translate his Words wrong, I shall only set 'em down. (a) In conjugiis varie me duriterque exercuit Dominus. Nam quatuor uxores duxi habemus: adeo me æquè prius propter eanum impiarum scelera à fœminis abhorrebam, & functionis meæ studio conjugium refugiebam perviscaſſimè castigavit Dominus, præposterum judicium meum tacitè exprobravit, & perjucunda optimarum fidelissimarumque conjugum consuetudine evicit peccatum, indagatâque de scævâ fœmineo toto opinionem meam. He observes, that he lost his first Wife by the Ignorance of a Midwife, who spoilt her Uterus in delivering her of two Twins. (b) Harum primam injuria obstetricis è vita sustulit, quum ita corruptus in obstetricatu fuisset illius uterus, ut annos amplius septem indesinente sanguinis defluvio afflicta sit atque exhausta, incredibili cruciatu ipsius, & labore meo (c). The Consequences of this Business proved very unhappy, not only for the Wife, but also for the Husband, namely a continual Loss of Blood for above Seven Years together. His Second Wife died, being with Child, the Fifth Day of a continual Fever. The third died of a Dropsie. The fourth was alive when he wrote this, about the Year 1592. Afterwards she died of the Plague.

(M) He left some Children.] By his second Wife, the Daughter of John Cornput, Secretary and Burgomaster of Breda, he had, amongst other Children, a Daughter who was married to the Learned John Gerard Vossius, and a Son named (d) John Casimir JUNIUS, who studied Divinity, and was designed by his Father for an Hebrew Professor, but that did not succeed. He quitted the Profession of Learning for that of Arms, at the Solicitation of his Uncle John Cornput (e), who made him Lieutenant of his Company. He died at Gertrudenberg. He published in Dutch an Apology for the Speech of Dudley Carleton, King James's Ambassador. It was in answer to James Taurin, an Arminian Minister at Utrecht, who had confuted (f) that Speech. He left a Son called Francis JUNIUS, born at Embden, the 20th. of September 1624, who was Professor of the Civil Law in the University of Groningen (g). In the following Article I shall speak of another Francis JUNIUS, a Son of the Leyden Professor, by a third Venter.

(N) He published many Books.] His Works of Divinity, collected into one Body, make two Volumes in Folio, and contain, amongst other Things, 1. A Commentary upon the Three first Chapters of Genesis, with an Answer to (h) Simplicius's Twenty two Objections against this Holy Book. 2. An Analysis of the Pentateuch, an Explication of the Prophecies of Ezekiel, Daniel, and Jonah. 3. Sacred Parallels, and Notes upon the Revelation, and the Epistle of St. Jude. 4. Observations against Bellarmin, and upon the Anathema of Gregory XIII. against Gebhard Truchses, Archbishop of Cologne. He published also some Notes upon Minutius and Cicero's Epistles, and upon Tertullian, and a Work of George Codinus Curopalates. He translated into Latin, Bodin's Demonomanie, John du Tillet, Arnauld's Plea against the Jesuits, &c. He made an Answer (i) in French, to Peter Charron's Three Truths. I must not forget, that he understood the Greek and Oriental Tongues. He was the first that published George Codinus's Book De Officialibus Palatii Constantinopolitani, & officiis magnæ Ecclesiæ. He added to it a Latin Translation with Notes. He put out two Editions of this Book, one in the Year 1588, to which he put his Name in Hebrew, for he called himself Nadanus (k) Agmonius. He dedicated it to the Magistrates of Francfort. He dedicated the second to Marquardus Freherus, who procured him some Manuscripts, by means whereof he filled up many Gaps of the former Edition. He was preparing a third, which would have been exempt from some of the Faults which had escaped him in the two First, and which were censured by the Jesuit Gretserus (l). What Vossius observes against that Critick, is very judicious; he do's not deny that Gretserus's Book is a Learned Work, but he thinks that the good Service which Junius had done to the Republick of Learning, has not been sufficiently considered. Gretserus make it his only Business to censure his Faults; which is, says he, the Epidemical Distemper of the Learned. (m) Multa in iis sunt, quibus etiam doctissimos doceat (Gretserus) Nec pauca tamen, quæ pro Junio possim reponere. Sed hic eruditorum mobus est epidemicus: ut non tam capiant, quantum boni aliquis præstiterit: quale est hic, quid primus cum scriptorem Junius sui linguæ ediderit, Latinè verterit, etiam illustraverit Notis; in quibus humani aliquid subinde, in tam arduo negotio, perpessum fuisse, nec ipsi negamus. Sed, ut dici solet, inventis aliquid superaddere, vel, quando omnes sumus homines, etiam errores observare, non est usque adeo difficile. Junius translated the three Books of Gelasius Cyzicenus, about the Council of Nice, and added Notes to 'em (n). Vossius (o) promised to have 'em printed. Junius translated out of Greek into Latin, the Books which are called Apocryphal; and from the Arabick, the Acts of the Apostles, and the Epistles of St. Paul to the Corinthians. He translated from the Hebrew, all the Books of the Old Testament, not alone, but with Tremellius.

(O) Thuanus is very much out in what he says of him.] These are his Words. (p) Vir desultorio ingenio qui multa conatus, an adsecutus sit quod molliebatur, doctorum erit judicium. Lugduno Batavorum ubi diu professus est, ob rerum novarum suspicionem ab Ordinibus Belgii exactus, sicuti suo loco diximus, & Altorfii ubi defecit, à Norimbergensi Resp. honorifico stipendio invitatus. I don't examine whether Junius was reasonably censured for his Levity, and for medling with too many things. Vossius (q) his Son-in-Law, has solidly justified him in this Respect; but I shall observe after him (r), that Thuanus is strangely mistaken, in supposing, 1. that Junius was expelled by the States of Holland, upon some Suspicions of a political Cabal. 2. That he was invited by the Magistrates of Nuremberg, and that he died at Altorf. 3. That he (Thuanus) has mentioned this Exile under its proper Year. To begin with this last Fault, I say, that Thuanus has not spoken of Junius, but of Donellus, in describing (s) the Cabal which was discovered in the Year 1587. Junius was then in the Palatinate, and did not come to Leyden till Five Years after. No Body is ignorant, that from the Year 1592, till he died, he was Professor of Divinity at Leyden. It was Donellus (t) that retreated to Altorf, where he died.

(P) Scaliger's Memoirs ——— prejudic'd Thuanus.] 'Tis Vossius's Conjecture (u), and 'tis very probable. Scaliger's Hatred and Rage against Junius, discovered themselves both in his Conversations (w) and Letters. This is not to [illegible] every Body in his Letters, because Heinsius [illegible] published

(a) Junius, ibid. pag. 21. col. 2.
(b) They did not live. Ex prima, says he, gemelli vix viderunt lucem.
(c) Ibid. pag. 22. col. 1.
(d) Godefson to Prince John Casimir, Administrator of the Palatinate
(e) He was Governor of the Citadel of Groningen. Metern speaks of him. Vita Profess. Groning. pag. 224.
(f) His Book is intituled, Statera Orationis Carletoni &c.
(g) See the Lives of the Professors of Groningen, pag. 224. 225.
(h) And not Symmachus, as Melch. Adam says in vita Junii, pag. 201.
(i) It was printed at Leyden, in Quarto, in the Year 1599.
(k) And not Aymonius, as Placcius has it de pseudonymis, pag. 229. who a little while after says Cornelius, instead of Codinus, and apprehendi, instead of reprehendit.
(l) See Vossius de Historicis Græcis, pag. 308.
(m) Vossius, ibid.
(n) Ibid. pag. 264.
(o) Ibid.
(p) Thuan. lib. 117. sub fin. ad ann. 1602.
(q) Vossius in præfat. de Historicis Latinis.
(r) Ibid.
(s) Thuanus, Hist. lib. 86. pag. 147.
(t) Idem lib. 100. pag. 405.
(u) Vide supra.
(w) See the Scaligerana.
(x) See Vossius's Letters to Grotius, amongst those of the Arminians, n. 446. pag. 726.

more disposed to Pity than to Indignation, with respect to that Imperious Treatment. He was a Learned and honest Man; and otherwise so far from running Things to an Extremity, that he believed (Q) Salvation might be had in the Church of Rome. He never understood better the Deficiency of his Knowledge, than when he was arrived* to the highest Pitch of Science; which was a Sign of a good Understanding.

JUNIUS (Francis) Son † of the foregoing, was born at Heidelberg in the Year 1589. His first Design was to be a Man of the Sword; but the Truce which was concluded in 1609, for Twelve Years, made him take another Resolution; which was to apply himself to study. He travelled into France; from whence he went over into England in the Year 1620. He got into the House of the Earl of Arundel, and lived there Thirty Years; after which he returned into Holland, and there went on with the Study he had very much cultivated in England, I mean that of the Northern Languages (A). He made an extraordinary Progress in it. He was so passionately fond of this Study, that understanding there were in Friseland some Villages, where the ancient Saxon Tongue was preserved, he went and lived there two Years. He returned

* See the Rem. Q. Letter L.

† By the third Marriage contracted with Joan l'Ermite, Daughter of Simon l'Ermite Seigneur de Betinsart, Alderman of Antwerp, and related to Daniel l'Ermite, de quo suo loco.

published them in the Year 1627, put some Asterisms in the Places, where Junius was abused, and left out the proper Names; but the Abuses are not the less real for it. (y) Hocce anno Heinsius noster in lucem edidit Epistolas Scaligeri, in quibus non urbanatim sed rusticatim Junium tanquam Cumanum asinum tangit homo cætera magnus, sed nimis malignus. They are Vossius's Words: He had been saying, that there had been found in Junius's Books, many gross Abuses written with Scaliger's own Hand. When a Man proceeds thus far, what will he not do. (a) Memor eram, qualia superstes evomuerit adversus Junium, cùm totus in fermento jaceret. Et meminisse ipse potes. Adhuc in nostris, & aliorum manibus versantur codices Juniani, Scaligeri manu oppleti bellis illis elogiis, simia, asinus, cojone, & aliis id genus convitiis, βωμολόχοις (scurra) non Scaligerò dignis. Note, by the way, that Scaliger did nevertheless bestow many Praises upon Junius's (b) Tomb. So true it is, that the Verses made upon the Death of People, are a piece of the Grand Comedy, which is acted on the Stage of the World. Note also by the by, that Junius drew upon him the hatred of this great Man, by the Liberty he took of contradicting him sometimes in Points of Chronology, &c. Some young Men threw Oil into the Fire, by relating in an invidious manner, what Junius said of the other, either in his Lectures or Discourses. (c) Scis quale fuerit illud maximi Scaligeri ingenium. Non ferebat dissentientem. Itaque semper eo nomine offensior Junio fuit, quod in quibusdam ad sacram χρονολογίαν pertinentibus, ac credo in aliis etiam nonnullis à se discreparet. Offensam eam unus & alter discipulorum alebant, malignè interpretantes apud Scaligerum, quæ vel publicè docuisset Junius, vel privatim dixisset. However it be, this is what made Vossius (d) think that Thuanus had been prejudiced to Junius's Disadvantage, by Scaliger's Letters.

That thought kept him at first in Suspence, whether he should make an Apology for his Father-in-Law against Thuanus, or no; for he foresaw, that the Son of this great Historian would justify his Father, by producing Scaliger's Letters, which were injurious to Junius; and in that case Vossius would have found himself obliged to write against Scaliger: but he found it more proper to conceal the Faults of that great Man, than to publish them. At last he took the Method, that may be seen in the Preface (e), which I have quoted. (f) Si calamum adversus Thuanum stringam, periculum video, ne filius Thuani, juvenis eruditus, & ut genere, atque opibus pollens, ita multis in Gallia carus, & maximis honoribus destinatus, quæ de imperitia Junii modestè Parens scripserit, ea apertè, & sine circumstantia prodita, ostendat à Magno Scaligero, Reip. literariæ dictatore, cui doctior orbis lubens eruditionis fasces submisit. Hinc mihi nova cura, etiam tuendi cum adversus Scaligeri calumnias, incumbet. Quem ego virum laudavi semper, ac porrò laudare decrevi: non quia ejus impotentiam animi, aut maledicentiam ignorem; aut quasi nesciam, quam multis in locis aliquid humanitus patiatur: sed quia ejus tanta virtutes, præclaraque adeo merita sunt, erga historiam, ac bonas literas, ut propterea, quæ peccavit, censeam ei condonari, & æterna oblivione sepeliri oportere. He spares the Name of Scaliger in this Preface, but not his Person; it is true, that he gives him a Stab in a very respectful manner. These are his Words. Acerbè adeo ut summus vir (Thuanus) pronuntiaret, fecit amicus ejus, vir cætera egregius; sed, quod in aliis damnat, præsidens, planeque ἰδιοφυῶς, & αὐθεντικῶς, sæpe etiam turgens loliginis succo, ac si quis non per omnia assentiret, vehemens alieni nominis obtrectator: quo vitio non mediocriter fœdabat egregias, imò admirandas animi dotes. Non me ariolari hic, sed certissima promere, multis possim indiciis comprobare: sed ea sunt viri illius merita, ut quædam satius sit honoris causa taceri (g). Nothing can be more moderate.

(Q) That he believed Salvation might be had in the Church of Rome.] Nevertheless, he call'd her, as other Ministers did, the Whore mentioned in St. John's Revelation; but he said that she was still the Spouse of the Son of God; a Spouse, whose unfaithfulness Jesus Christ bears with, and whom he has not divorced. This did not please Beza, a great Favourer of the Monarchy of the Solipses. Let me be permitted to call thus the Communions, that believe themselves only in the way of Salvation. Junius gave a great Latitude to the true Church. Perhaps Mr. Nicole (h) did not know it. (i) Doctissimus socer Junius cum nollet ab iis discedere, qui Romanam Ecclesiam censent esse meretricem Babylonicam, & tamen statueret salvari in ea innumera millia, ajebat esse vivum corpus, sed ulceribus obsitum: meretricem esse, sed adhuc sponsam Christi, vel conjugem, quia Christus nec dum ei miserit libellum repudii. Sed non eo satisfecit Genevensibus: qui illam dicerent idololatricam, ac proinde neminem in ea salvari. Narravit mihi aliquando doct. Anthonius Thysius, cum primum Genevam veniret, & soceri mei nomine multam salutem diceret D. Beza, illum continuo subjecisse; Et quomodo valet carissimus frater Junius: vir est egregie de Ecclesiis nostris meritus: quamquam in uno capite dissentiat à nobis. Id caput erat de Ecclesia: quam Junius negabat tam arctis limitibus concludi, ac multi volunt.

This is what Vossius says. He says in another Place, that Junius being much more free from Prepossession, than is usual, used to say in his latter Days, the longer I live, the more I discover my Ignorance. (k) Socer meus Fr. Junius, tanti cum à multis retrò annis nominis foret, postremis tamen vitæ annis crebrò illud in ore habebat, magis & magis se in dies videre, quam multa se fugerent. Ita ille, qui cum novellis Doctoribus sociarat antiquos; qui etiam partium studio non paulò minus laborabat quam vulgò fieri solet.

(A) That of the Northern Languages.] Having found in England many Anglo-Saxon Books, he resolved to make Advantage of 'em; and knowing from the Skill he got in the Anglo-Saxon Language, that it would enable him to discover many Etymologies for the Illustration of the Dutch, English, and German Tongues, he applied himself wholly to that Study, and afterwards learnt the ancient Language of the Goths, Gauls, Cimbrians and Frisons, whereby he found the Etymology of many Italian, French, and Spanish Words: for the Goths, Vandals, Burgundians, and Germans, spread their Language in the Provinces which they conquered; there are still some Footsteps of them (l). He applied himself

(y) Vossius in eadem epistola.

(a) Vossius in eadem epistola.

(b) See in Vossius's Preface to his Book de Historicis Latinis, the Latin Verses of Scaliger upon Junius's Death.

(c) Vossius, epistola, 65. pag. 105. edit. Londin. 1693.

(d) See his Letter to Gomarus. 'Tis the 65.

(e) Operis de Historicis Latinis.

(f) Vossius, epistola, 65. pag. 106.

(g) Vossius præfat. de Historicis Latinis, See also his Letter to Gomarus: 'tis the 65.

(h) See the Preface to his Treatise concerning the Unity of the Church, where he mentions some Ministers, who believed, that the true Church is to be found in several Communions.

(i) Vossius epistola ad Hugon. Grotium. 'tis the 571. in Epist. Eccles. & Theolog. of the Folio Edition, pag. 818.

(k) Id. apud Colomes. Gall. Orientat. pag. 96.

(l) Taken from his Life, written by M. Grævius, prefixed to the Folio Edition of his Book de Pictura Veterum.

returned into England in 1675, and having staid two years at Oxford, he retired to Windsor to Isaac Vossius his Nephew, and Died there in a years time. The University of Oxford, to which he bequeath'd his Manuscripts, built him a very noble Monument †. I'll speak of the Books (B) he Published. He was not only a Man of very great Learning, but also of an excellent Life. He was not observed to have any Vitious Passion. He did not mind the Riches nor the Honours of this World; his Books were his only care: And perhaps no Man did ever Study (C) more than he, without doing any prejudice to his Health. I shall set down a Passage (D) of Colomiés.

† Taken from his Life written by Mr. Graevius and prefixed to his Book de Pictura Veterum in Folio.

JUNO, Sister and Wife of Jupiter, was the Daughter of Saturnus and Rhea. Her Father being resolved to devour his Children for fear they should Dethrone him, did not spare her any more than his two other Daughters *, whom he had already swallowed: But he was forced to Disgorge 'em some years after. They gave him a sort of Liquor, which made him Vomit up all the Children he had Devoured ‡. And thus it was that Juno returned into the World. The Circumstances of her Marriage with Jupiter are differently Related. There's a Tradition which says they Loved one another, and Lay together unknown (A) to their Father and Mother, and it does not appear that she kept her Lover long in Suspence. But others say, that she opposed

* Vesta and Ceres, Juno's Eldest Sisters.

‡ Apollodor. ibid.

(m) Totus erat in contexendis Anglo-saxonicis, Francicis, & Cimbricis Lexicis ac Glossariis, & explanandis antiquissimis harum gentium scriptoribus. Graevius ibid.

(n) Id. ib.

(a) At Rotterdam for Reinier Leers 1694.

(c) Qui argenteus dicitur, quoniam quatuor Evangelia litteris Gothicis in illo fuerant descripta. Graevius ubi supra.

(d) There is XI. in Junius's Life; but in the Catalogue of the Manuscripts bequeathed by Junius to the University of Oxford, there is IX.

(e) Taken from his Life.

(f) Hora prima prapdebat, sequente corpus exercebat vel in area subdivali ambulando contentius; aurem iam subsultim nonnunquam currendo, aut, si id non ferret asperior tempestas, per omnes scalas in coenaculum ascendendo valetudinis tuendæ caussa. Graevius ib.

(g) Id. ib.

self entirely to the Writing of Glossaries (m); and this is the Pedigree he Discovered. His omnibus linguis imbibendis cum satis diu insudasse videt, quod & privatim apud omnes, quibus cum agebat de hac doctrina, tum publice testatus est, Gothicam esse matrem omnium caterarum Teutonicarum linguarum, ex qua profluxerit vetus Cimbrica, monumentis Runarum posteris tradita, nec non Saxonica, Danica, Norwegica, Islandica, quibus, illius plaga hominibus isto tempore suas animi cogitationes explicant. Ex Anglo-saxonica, quæ & ipsa aut propago est Gothicæ, aut illius soror germana, & eiusdem matris filia, manavit Anglica, Scotica, Belgica, Frisica vetus. Ex Gothica & Saxonica orta est Francica, quæ Germanicæ superioris parens est. Harum veterrimarum linguarum, & dialectorum, quæ ex illis ductæ sunt, cognitionem invicto studio, & incredibili assiduitate non primus tantum assecutus est, sed & solus, viam secutus nullius ante tritam vestigiis (n).

(n) Id. ib.

(A) I'll speak of the Books he has published.] In the Year 1637, he put out a Treatise De pictura veterum, which abounds with admirable Literature. Afterwards he so enlarged it, that the second Edition that was made of it (a) is a pretty large Folio, whereas the first was but a Quarto of 318 Pages. There are very few Things in Greek and Latin Authors concerning Painting, and the ancient Painters, that have escaped the Diligence of this Author. In the Year 1655, he published Notes upon the Francica Paraphrasis of the Canticles, written by the Abbot Willeram, and published the first time by Paul Merula. Being returned into Holland, after the Two Years that he had spent in Friesland, he met with an old Gothick Manuscript, stiled the Silver one (c); he applied himself entirely to the Explication of it, and compass'd it in a little time. He published therefore this Gothick Paraphrase of the Four Gospels, with a Gothick Glossary, to which he added an Antient Anglo-Saxon Version of the same Gospels, Corrected from good Manuscripts, and Illustrated with the Notes of Thomas Marshall. This is but a little part of his Works; that which remains to be Printed is much more considerable. His Glossary in five Languages, in which he searches and explains the Original of the Northern Languages, contains eleven (d) Manuscript Volumes, which Dr. John Fell Bishop of Oxford ordered to be writ out fair to be sent to the Press. His Commentary upon the Harmony of the four Gospels by Tatian is very large. I say nothing of so many other Books, upon which he has made Notes (e). Consult the Catalogue of the Manuscripts which he left to the University of Oxford. 'Tis at the end of his Life.

(a) At Rotterdam for Reinier Leers 1694.

(c) Qui argenteus dicitur, quoniam quatuor Evangelia litteris Gothicis in illo fuerant descripta. Graevius ubi supra.

(d) There is XI. in Junius's Life; but in the Catalogue of the Manuscripts bequeathed by Junius to the University of Oxford, there is IX.

(e) Taken from his Life.

(C) Studied more than he without any Prejudice to his Health.] He rose at four a Clock in the Morning both in Winter and Summer, and Studied till Dinner time. He Dined at one, after Dinner he used (f) some Exercise till three: He went again to his Study at three, and left it not till eight to go to Supper, and then he went to Bed. He seldom went out; and when he did, it was upon some Business: which did not hinder him from injoying a perfect Health: He was never Sick. (g) Firma fuit valetudine, ut prosperrima per omnem ætatem sine ulla corporis offensione uteretur, quamvis totos dies a summo mane usque ad noctem incumberet litteris, & raríssime, nec unquam nisi negotiorum ratio id ei quasi imperaret, prodiret in publicum. Such a long Solitude spent amongst Barbarous Books, and in making five Gothick or Teutonick Lexicons, did not in the least lessen his Gaiety, no not in his old Age; he was always free from Peevishness, and Affable to those who visited him, tho' he did not care to be interrupted. Mr. Graevius describes this in Elegant Terms. (h) In assiduitate tanta licet invitus admodum avocaretur ab his, quibus insudabat, curis, tam longe tamen aberat omnis morositas ingenitique tristitia, quæ solet esse propria iis, qui à luce hominum & celebritate alieniores omne tempus & operam domi sua in doctrina & Literarum studiis consumunt, præcipue senes, ut nihil sene nostro fieri posse suavius & facilius. Worldly People will doubtless believe that he was a very Miserable Man; they had as good be Condemned to the Gallies as spend their Lives as he did among his Desks, without tasting the Pleasures of Gaming, Love, good Cheer, or Conversation. How can a Man Live, say they, without Wine in the Day time, and without Women in the Night. But they are mistaken, if they fancy their Happiness exceeds his. He was doubtless one of the happiest Men in the World, unless he had the Weakness others have to be disturbed about Trifles: For as there are some People, who having no reason to be Merry, find out Chimerical Pleasures (i) to amuse themselves; there are some on the contrary, who cannot be moved with the most just occasions of Discontent, and yet disquiet themselves for Ridiculous things, of which they should be ashamed to complain.

(f) Hora prima prapdebat, sequente corpus exercebat vel in area subdivali ambulando contentius; aurem iam subsultim nonnunquam currendo, aut, si id non ferret asperior tempestas, per omnes scalas in coenaculum ascendendo valetudinis tuendæ caussa. Graevius ib.

(g) Id. ib.

(h) Id. ib.

(D) A Passage of Colomiés.] (k) 'I knew at the 'Hague the Learned Mr. Junius, Son of the famous Francis Junius, who was Professor of Divinity at Leiden. He is an old Man near 80. but 'still very Vigorous. He Studies thirteen or fourteen Hours a Day, and has lately Published the 'four Gospels in Gothick, with a very Learned 'Glossary. He made me a present of this noble 'Work, and told me, he would quickly Print his 'Book De Pictura Veterum, with the Names and 'Works of all the Painters of Antiquity. It will 'be Dedicated to the present Earl of Arundel, who 'was his Pupil, when he was in England his Father's Library Keeper. I ought not to forget, for 'Mr. Junius's Glory, that Grotius highly commends his Book concerning Painting, in the following Letter. That Letter was prefixed to the new Edition of our Junius's Book.

(i) Dum careo veris, gaudia falsa juvant.

(k) Colomiés in his opuscules p. 116. Utrecht 1669.

(A) Unknown to their Father and Mother.] They who want a good Proof of this Matter, may find it in these Words of the Iliad (l)

(l) Lib. 14. v. 294.

Ὡς ἄρ' ἴδεν, ὡς μιν ἔρος ἀμφεπάλαθε φρένας,
Οἷον ὅτε πρῶτόν περ ἐμισγέσθην φιλότητι,
Κεῖσθον φοιτήσαντε, φίλους λήσαντε τοκῆας.

Ut vero vidit, continuo illum amor prudentia præcordia cooperuit,
Perinde ac quando primum misti sunt amore,
Ad cubile consuetudinis gratiâ euntes, suis clam parentibus.

posed (B) the Demands of Jupiter like a Maid of Virtue and Honour; and that to avoid his Importunity, she Fled into a Den. They add, that she there met with a Man, whose Discourse so softened her Heart in favour of Jupiter, that she consented to make him happy upon the spot. Others would perhaps confess, that this was the first time that Jupiter Lay with her, but not the first time that she Lay with a Man; for they pretend, that before Jupiter Courred her, she passed through the Hands of Eurymedon, a Stout and Lewd Giant, by the same Token, that he got her with Child (C) of a Son, who was called Prometheus. Jupiter did not know it till after he was Married, and he discharged his Revenge upon this Bastard under other pretences. Upon some other Occasions, the Chastity (D) of his Wife appeared very doubtful to him. He well deserv'd it, whose Gallantries were so common. There was scarce any Animal, but he borrowed his Shape to get Maiden-heads. Every body knows that he Metamorphosed himself (E) into a Cuckoo, in order to compass his desire with Juno. This Goddess presided over Marriages *, but she should not have had that Employment. 'Twas an ill Omen, for she led but an odd Life with her Husband; and

(m) Et mecum tenera gavisa est ludere in herba Purpureos flores, quos insuper accumbebat Candida formoso supponens brachia collo. Valerius Cato in Diris, p. 61. Catalectorum veterum Poëtarum.

(n) Valer. Cato ibid.

(o) Call'd Leucate.

(p) Ὅτε καὶ ἐμὸν ἦτορ ἐνὶ στήθεσσιν ἀμείρει, ἐξαπίνης δ' ἐπὶ νῶϊν ἐπέδραθε ἰμερόεις ὕπνος. Jovem semper Junonis amore captum ad saxum hoc accessisse, atque ei insidendo amoris impotentiam sedasse. Ptol. Hephæst. apud Photium cod. 190. p. m. 492.

(a) Ἦλθε παρὰ πατέρα μετὰ τοῦτον γαμέτην εἰς τὸν μεγάν τῶν Ἐφεσίων ἔτι καὶ νῦν ἐμμένοντα ἔρανον ἐπὶ τοῖς ἐμοῖς ἐπιτηδεύμασι. Schol. in Iliad. l. 14. v. 295.

(b) Id. ib.

(c) Girac, Replique à Costar, sect. 64. p. m. 545.

(1) Didym. in Hom. Iliad 14. Eustath. ib.

Homer speaks here of an occation, on which Jupiter, who had been Married many Ages to Juno, felt, as he saw her by Chance, the same Ardor, as when he lay with her by Stealth the first time. I add to the Testimony of a Greek Poet, that of a Latin one. 'Tis a Lover who speaks; a Lover, who had found the Critical Minute (m), and is vex'd that many before him had receiv'd the like Gratifications by Stealth.

Ipsius (n) atque utinam fallî mea culpa magistra
Prima foret: lethum vitâ mihi dulcius esset.
Non mea, non nullo morerentur tempore famæ,
Dulcia cum Veneris furatus gaudia primus
Discerer, atque ex me dulcis foret orta voluptas.
Nam mihi non tantum tribuerunt impia vota,
Auctor ut occulti noster foret error amoris.
Jupiter ante sui semper mendacia furti,
Cum Junone prius conjux quam dictus uterque est,
Gaudia libavit dulcem furatus amorem.

(B) That she opposed—like a Maid of Virtue and Honour.] Her Virtue was such according to some, that if Jupiter had not found a Remedy, instead of that which she would not grant him, he would not have known what to do. But he went and sate upon a Mountain (o) as often as he was in the Transport of his Passion, which he calmed by that means (p). The Author who supplies me with this Story, do's not say whether Jupiter was then Married to Juno, nor was it necessary to be so particular upon this Subject: The most stupid Readers will easily understand, that he was not Married, and that he was in Love with a cruel Woman.

(C) With Child of a Son who was called Prometheus.] You will find this Story in Homer's Scholiast (a). Jupiter's Resentment was not less Violent against the Father of the Bastard, than against the Bastard himself; for if Prometheus was put in Chains, Eurymedon was tumbled down into Hell. I know not under what pretence Jupiter treated Eurymedon in that manner; but there is no question, that he conceal'd the true cause of his Anger: He had too much Sense to disgrace himself by his Revenge. His pretence against the Bastard was his stealing the Celestial Fire. The Scholiast (b) whom I cite has this from Euphorion.

(D) The Chastity of Juno appeared very doubtful to him.] I'll Comment upon this Text with the Words of a Modern Author, who designing to prove, that Jupiter was a famous Cuckold, Expresses himself thus: 'The Giant Eurymedon had obtained 'Juno's first Favours, (1) and not to speak of the 'Isle of Samos, which was famous for the unchast 'Amours of this Goddess, don't we know that Ju- 'piter discovering a few Days after this Marriage, 'that she would quickly be the Mother of a Child, 'she knew how to wheedle him so as to persuade 'him that she had Conceiv'd of her self, and that 'she had preserv'd her Virginity intire? She 'made him believe another time that she was with 'Child by Eating wild Lettices. So that tho' 'the Horns that were set upon his Statue in Libya, 'had not denoted him a Cuckold, did not he deserve 'that they should have this signification, and to 'occasion those ways of speaking, which have been 'so long in use, by the consent of all Nations?

(E) He Metamorphos'd himself into a Cuckoo in order to compass his desire with Juno.] To relate what is most curious upon this Subject, I need only follow the Dispute of Costar and Girac. The Foundation whereof is this: Jupiter (d) was no less forgetful on many other important Occasions. Pallas complains in Homer that he did not think of Wife Ulysses. Another upbraids him that in the Establishment of his Houshold, he had not consider'd Cuckoldom, from which he had received so many signal Services. They are Costar's Words. His Adversary Answers him, that this is a very injurious Accusation: For good Jupiter, says he (e), to shew the esteem he had for Cuckoldom, and his desire of being a Cuckold, Transform'd himself into a Bird of that Name, when he Courted his Wife Juno. And afterwards to express his Gratitude, he commanded the Argivi to make a fine Cuckoo of Gold, and to Perch him upon the Sceptre of Juno's Statue; with which this great Goddess was not offended, having reap'd as many Advantages from Cuckoldom, as her Husband had done. And even near the Town of Hermione, there are two little Mountains, one of which is called the Cuckoo Mountain, upon which in Pausanias's time (2) was seen a Temple of Jupiter, and over against it on the other Mountain that of Juno. In Libya, the Statue of Jupiter Hammon had great Horns upon its Head. Which was so agreeable to this God, that tho' Statues were Erected to him over all the World, he only delivered (f) Oracles thro' this. He was so well pleased with his Horns, that he obliged his dearest Friends to follow his Example. Bacchus (3) and Pan, the Satyrs, the Gods of the Rivers, and many others did not fail to imitate him. Juno her self did the same, to shew that she had some Complaisance for her Husband, and we still see many Medals of this Goddess with Horns. Diana and Venus wore 'em too as an Ornament that wonderfully became a handsome Face. This Answer is very Learned, but it is false; for there is nothing in it that proves the point in Dispute. The State of the Question is this: Whether Jupiter honoured the Husbands, whose Wives were Gallant? Prove as much as you please, that he honoured the Bird we call a Cuckoo, and add moreover that he would have his Statues to be adorned with Horns; say withal, that the other Gods followed the same Fashion; you don't come near the Point, because at that time, the Words Cuckold and Horns were not taken in the same Sense, that is given them at present. Besides, to disguise ones self in the shape of a Cuckoo, in order to succeed in ones Enterprizes, would not even in our Age be a sign, that a Man desires to be Married to a Whore. My Readers will easily imagine, that Costar was aware of the Vanity of the Answers that were made him: But if any one should doubt of it, I shall quickly convince him by relating his own Words. In which we shall see, that the Affectation of making too great a shew of his Reading, makes him mix with his Replies, some things which spoil his Cause. He begins with Jupiter's Metamorphosis into a Bird, which bares the name of Cuckoo; and here is what he says of it.

'(g) This old Woman's Story, and that Ridiculous 'Invention of a Grammarian abusing his Leisure, '(that Erasmus (4) speaks of him) is taken from credo hanc fabulam apud veteres inveniri, sed suspicor quopiam Grammatico fuisse confictam: adeo sapit anile quiddam

(d) Costar, Defense des Ouvrages de Voiture p. m. 116.

(e) Girac, Reponse à la Defense de Voiture, sect. 26. p. 194.

(2) In Corinth.

(f) Costar's Suite de la Defense p. 382. Confutes this in these Words. Aristotle says somewhere in his Rhetorick that Hegesippus of Elis, whither he went to consult the Oracle of Jupiter, resolved likewise to Consult that of Delphi, where he ask'd Apollo this Question, Will you be of the same Opinion with your Father? Dare you contradict him? But Girac, complaining in his Reply p. 551. that his Words have been falsified; He clearly shews that he was not Ignorant that Jupiter gave Answers in other Places; but that he gave none thro' his Statue except in Ægypt.

(3) Cic. l. de nat. Deor.

(g) Costar, Suite de la Defense p. 380.

(4) Equidem vix ab otioso and in ſpite of all the ſtrong Reaſons, that ingag'd him to bear with her, after ſo many juſt

' a Scholiaſt upon Theocritus, who relates that ' Juno having left her Companions to divert her ' ſelf all alone and at Liberty, after a long Walk, ' laid her ſelf upon the Graſs in a pretty Place of ' Mount Thronax. Jupiter, who ſaw her in that ' Poſture, found her ſo handſome, that he immediately ' grew in Love with her, put on the ſhape of a ' Cuckoo, and raiſing an extreme cold in the Air, ' all Trembling and Frozen, he threw himſelf into ' this Goddeſs's Arms; and then reſuming his uſual Form, and promiſing to Marry her, he re- ' ceived from her the ſatisfaction he deſired. The ' Cold that Jupiter rais'd on that occaſion was not ' greater, than that of the ſilly Jeſt of our Learned ' Author. In effect it appears, that it was not ' out of Love to Cuckoldom that Jupiter turn'd ' Cuckoo, ſince neither among the Gods nor among ' Men, the name of that Bird did ſignify at ' that time a Husband, whoſe Wife was unfaithful ' to him. At leaſt, there is no ſign of it among ' the Antients: On the contrary, there are ſome ' Women in Plautus, who call their Husbands ' Cockoos, whom they ſurpriz'd in Adultery, and ' Juvenal (5) calls a poor Fellow Curruca, who ' had that injury done him: Doubtleſs, becauſe that ' Bird feeds the young Cuckoos that are laid in her ' Neſt. Coſtar afterwards goes on to the conſidera- tion of the Horns, and Expreſſes himſelf in this manner. (h) Has Mr. de Girac ſeen an old Manu- ſcript, which clearly proves that at that time Horns were a ſign of Cuckoldom? And you, Sir, (i) that know every thing, can you ſhew me that theſe ways of ſpeaking, to bear Horns, and to ſet Horns, in the Senſe that they are now taken in, are much more Antient than Artemidorus, who flouriſhed under Hadrian? The Horns of Jupiter Hammon were not thoſe of a Cuckold, but of a fine Ram, Prophecying upon the Sands of Libya, as our Ronſard ſpeaks. He Examins in particular, the Horns of thoſe Dei- ties which Girac had produced, and makes it Evi- dent that they had no Relation to the condition of the Husbands, which we call Cuckolds, and that they were not taken in Complaiſance to Jupiter; and this is his Concluſion: (k) If out of all this Mr. de Girac can make any thing that may be ſerviceable to his Deſign, I will not oppoſe him; but I am very much miſtaken, if he can ſucceed in it, and oblige me to Acknowledge that Jupiter, when he ſettled his Houſhold, did not forget Cuckoldom, which had been ſo Advantageous to him. This is a good Concluſion; 'tis to bring things to the ſtate of the Queſtion, and to make all the Lines terminate in the Center.

Let us conſider the Reply. Girac (a) thinks it very ſtrange that Coſtar, ſhould treat this matter with a Scholaſtick Grimneſs, and in a ſerious man- ner. He would have me to prove by Demonſtration and Authority, that it was the Love of Cuckoldom, that made Jupiter a Cuckold. He is not ſatisfied, unleſs I ſhew him ſome Manuſcripts that clearly prove, that at that time Horns were the marks of Cuckolds. Where is the juſtice of this Man? He do's nothing in all his Writings but Banter; he him- ſelf confeſſes that he can't ſpeak a Sentence without the aſſiſtance of his beloved Irony; and yet he will not ſuffer me to jeſt ſo much as once——Although my Railleries ariſe from my Subject, and are ſupported by very fine Antiquities; for is it not true that Jupiter was a down right Cuckold, ſince the Giant Eurymedon had obtained the laſt Favours from his Wife Juno? You'll find above (b) the ſequel of this Paſſage: It would be uſeleſs to repeat it here; the Paper it would take up, will be more uſefully imployed in theſe two Remarks. The firſt is, that tho' it be permitted to jeſt in a Criticiſm; yet it is not permitted to Argue Ill. You may be Merry if you pleaſe, and ſpeak according as occaſion ſerves, either in jeſt or in earneſt; but be ſure not to ad- vance a Falſity, and never pretend, that by jeſting upon a falſe Suppoſition, or by building Railleries upon Ignorance, you will either make good Objections, or ſolid Anſwers to an Objection (c). My ſecond Obſervation is, that the Adventure of the Giant, and the Unfaithfulneſs of Juno come too late. The Author had ſaid nothing of 'em in his Anſwer, and ſo they can make nothing againſt Coſtar, who was not obliged to Govern himſelf, by what his Adverſary ſhould ſay afterwards. They cannot bring Mr. de Girac off, for beſides that, he did not make uſe of 'em, to ſupport his A- nimadverſions, they cannot prove the thing in Diſpute. Suppoſe Juno had a hundred Intrigues, will this prove that Jupiter remember'd Cuckoldom, when he ſettled his Houſhold? Every body ſees that my firſt Remark ruins Girac's Cauſe, ſince all that he Alledges is grounded upon a falſe Suppoſi- tion. He might be reduced to this unlucky Di- lemma. If you was Ignoram, that when Jupiter Transform'd himſelf into a Cuckoo, Husbands diſhonoured by their Wives unfaithfulneſs were not call'd Cuckolds, and Cornutes, your Raillery is very Impertinent; for according to your own Rules (d), a Railery is naught, when it is grounded upon the Ignorance of Things, which we are obliged to know. If you knew that at that time ſuch Ideas were not Annexed to thoſe Words, you are extreamly to blame for making uſe of Proofs, whereof you know the falſity. Let us ſee the ſequel of his Reply.

Notwithſtanding all this, ſays he (e), our Sophiſt urges me to ſhew him, that when the Father of the Gods put on the ſhape of a Cuckoo, the name of that Bird ſignified a Husband, whoſe Wife was falſe to him. I promiſe and ingage to ſatisfy him, if he proves by good Authorities, that Jupiter was Re- proached that in the ſettlement of his Houſhold he had not thought of Cuckoldom. As for what Re- lates to Horns, that word in the ſignification I have given it, is more Antient than is imagin'd. We learn from Nicetas, that the Emperor Andronicus, to Ridicule the Inhabitants of Conſtantinople, and Up- braid them with their Wives Lewdneſs, uſed to ſet up in the publick Places of that great City, the no- bleſt and largeſt Stags Heads, that could be found; and Artemidorus who lived 1500 years ago, makes uſe of the Words, (i) to bellow Horns, as a common Proverb, which did not begin in his time (f). It would be an ill uſe of ones time, to ſeek the Ori- ginal of it, and to inquire whether it was in uſe in Jupiter Hammon's time. However it be, my Ad- verſary, who pretends to be a very Subtil Man, did not perceive, that I laught at him. This Paſſage of Mr. de Girac makes it plain, that he has loſt his Cauſe: He do's not find himſelf capable of proving what is denied him, and without which his Criti- ciſm is inſignificant; he pretends that he deſigned to Ridicule his Adverſary. There's no Writer that may uſe ſuch Subterfuges, when he knows not what to Anſwer: We ſhall ſee Mr. Coſtar in his turn ſomewhat Puzzled. His Knowledge forſook him, when he made uſe of Eraſmus's Authority, in a thing, where Eraſmus had (g) no manner of Rea- ſon. What was it to him if Jupiter was not Meta- morphos'd into a Cuckoo? How came he not to ſee that this Metamorphoſis is as credible as ſo many others we read in Ovid? Do's not he ſhew by his Anger againſt thoſe who have related it, that he looks upon it as a thing Advantageous to his Adverſary; and do's not he horribly deceive him- ſelf to his Enemy's Advantage? Girac did not fail to take Advantage of it: Conſider well what fol- lows. ' (b) Not being able to deny that I had very ' properly Alledged Jupiter's Metamorphoſis into a ' Cuckoo; he calls that Fable an Old Woman's Story, and a Ridiculous Invention; as if the change of ' the ſame God into a Swan, a Bull and an Eagle, ' had ſomething in it more ingenious; as if all ' Fables in general were not equally frivolous, and ' this as well as others had not its Allegory and ' Mythological Explication. But when Mr. Coſtar ' maintains, that 'tis an Invention of a Grammarian ' making an ill uſe of his Leiſure; that it is taken ' from a Scholiaſt upon Theocritus. And when he ' proves by the Authority of Eraſmus that it is not to ' be found in any Antient Author what do's he do ' but ſhew that he is Ignorant to Company, and ' that he Reads Authors only to learn their Faults? ' In effect, I don't find any Fable, that is mention'd ' by a greater number of Celebrated Authors, than ' this. And even the Scholiaſt Alledged by Mr. ' Coſtar (ſo great is this Man's Stupidity) affirms ' that

(5) Tu tibi nunc curruca places, ſtatumque labellis Exorbes. Sat. 6.

(b) Coſtar ibid. p. 381.

(i) He ſpeaks to Mr. Marnage.

(k) Ibid. p. 386.

(a) Reflexions d Cri- tiques, ſect. 64. p. 544.

(b) In the Remark D.

(c) Confer qua ſupra in the Re- mark C. of the Article Colomiés.

(d) Girac, Reponſe à la Defenſe de Voiture, ſect. 26. p. 160. See Coſtar, State de la Diſpute, p. 381.

(e) Girac, Replique, p. 543.

(f) Lib. 2. c. 11.

(f) See Menage's Etymologies of the French Tongue in folio, at the words cornes & cocu.

(g) The Paſſage of Eraſmus quoted by Coſtar, is in the Explan- tion of the Adage Scit quemadmodo Jupiter duxerit uxorem. 'Tis the 23. of the fourth Century of the fourth Chiliad, p. m. 914. He ob- ſerves, that the Scholiaſt upon Theocritus cites this upon the Credit of one Ariſtotle: Adjungit fabellam quam refellerit Ariſtoteles nefcio quis. From whence it appears that the Fable, as Girac ſaid, that this Story was mention'd by Ariſtotle, Alexander's Tutor. Several Ariſtotles have writ Books. See Voſſius de Hiſt. Pnil. p. 61.

(h) Girac, Replique p. 54'.

juſt Occaſions of Jealouſie, which he gave her, their Quarrels (F) were driven ſo far as a Divorce; and I believe, that before they came to that, he tried, if by beating her he could bring her to Reaſon. He hung her up once (G) betwixt Heaven and Earth for ſome time. If on one Hand ſhe preſided over Marriages and Weddings, ſhe had, on the other, the Management of their natural Conſequences: I mean, that ſhe preſided

(a) Ἀριστοτέλης δὲ ἱστορεῖ ἐν τῷ περὶ Ἑρμιόνης ἱερῷ ἐδείκνυτον περὶ τῆς Δηοῦς ἡ τῆς Ἥρας γάμων, &c. Schol. Theocr. in illum verſum Eid. 15. Πέντε γυναῖκας ἴσασι, ἡ οὐ Ζεὺς ἠγάγετο Ἥρην.

(i) Pauſan. lib. 2. p. 78.

(k) So it ought to be called, and not Θρόνας. Thronax, as we read in the Scholiaſt upon Theocritus. Meurſius is the Author of that Correction. Miſcell. Lacon, pag. 310. Coaſtar follows Eraſmus, who ſays Thronax.

(l) It was a piece of Polycletus. Pauſan. lib. 2. p. 59.

(m) Id. lib. 8. p. 253.

(a) He quotes Phylarchus, lib. 19. But Natalis Comes Mythol. lib. 2. c. 4. p. m. 133. quotes Dorotheus in lib. 2. narrationum fabuloſarum.

(b) Καὶ οὐ παύσεσθαι ἐμάστιγας. Et te verberibus cædam. Homer. Il. l. 15. v. 17.

(c) Ibid. v. 18.

‘ that he took it from a Tract (a) which Ariſtotle ‘ had written concerning the Temple of Hermione. ‘ Plutarch in like manner made mention of it in his ‘ Book concerning Rivers; Pauſanias ſpeaks of it ‘ in ſeveral Places in his Corinthiaca; and Didy- ‘ mus upon the Fourteenth Iliad, relates it from ‘ Euphorion a very ancient Author, not to cite the ‘ Scholiaſt on the Greek Epigrams, nor abundance ‘ of others, whoſe Catalogue would be too tedious. I omit the other things upon which Girac criticizes him learnedly and reaſonably, on the Subject of Horns and the Cuckoo. The great Number of good Authors, who have ſpoken of this Metamorphoſis of Jupiter, puts me in pain, out of Kindneſs to Eraſmus. It were to be wiſhed for his Glory, that he had let that old Scholiaſt alone. He had better have been aſleep, than write ſuch a thing as this. Had he not read what Pauſanias ſays (i) concerning Mount Thornax (k), which was called Coccygius, or Coccyx, from the time that Jupiter transformed into a Cuckoo, lay there with Juno? 'Tis a Mountain of Laconia. The ſame Author ſays, that the Reaſon why Juno (l) of Argos bore a Sceptre with a Cuckoo upon it, was becauſe Jupiter aſſumed the Form of that Bird, to lie with Juno. I don't believe that, adds Pauſanias; but nevertheleſs, ſays he, I thought, I ought not to omit it. Κύκυγα δέ ἐπὶ τῷ σκήπτρῳ καθιᾶσι φασι, λέγοντες τὸν Δία, ὅτι ἦρα παρθένου τῆς Ἥρας, ἐς τοῦτον τὸν ὄρνιθα ἀλλαγῆναι, τὸν δὲ ἄλλα μὲν ἀπίθανα δοκέοντα, τοῦτον τὸν λόγον, ἐγὼ δὲ ἐπειδὴ εἰρηταί περὶ αὐτῶν, οὐ παραλείψω χρῆσαι γνώμῃ δὲ τῇ ἐμαυτοῦ (m). Cuculum vero avem idcirco ſceptro ajunt impoſitum, quod virginis Junonis amore captus Jupiter, in eam ſe avem verterit, quam puella tanquam ludicrum captarit. Hæc ego, & quæ his ſunt ſimilia de diis vulgata, etſi vera neutiquam exiſtimo, non putavi tamen negligenda.

(F) Their Quarrels were driven ſo far as a Divorce.] Pauſanias (n) ſays, there were three Temples of Juno at Stymphalia, a Town of Arcadia. The firſt was called the Temple of Juno a Maid; and the ſecond the Temple of Juno married; and the third the Temple of Juno a Widow. Theſe three Temples were built to her by Temenus, with whom ſhe had been educated. The laſt was built at the time that ſhe lived at Stymphalia, whether ſhe retired after her Divorce. You'll find in Charles Stephens's Dictionary, enlarged by Lloyd (a), by what means Jupiter cauſed Juno to return to him. He ſpread a Report, that he was going to be married to Aſopus's Daughter. This News made a greater Impreſſion upon the provoked Goddeſs's Heart, than all Jupiter's Intreaties. See the Remark P, at the Place where I relate the Generation of Typhon.

(G) He hung her up betwixt Heaven and Earth.] The Reaſon of it was, that ſhe had raiſed a Storm againſt Hercules. Jupiter put her in mind of it, when he knew the Tricks ſhe had plaid him during the Siege of Troy. She knew ſo well how to charm him, and lay him aſleep in her Arms, that Neptune had the time neceſſary to put the Trojan Affairs in an ill Condition. I ſpeak at large of this Stratagem of Juno, in the following Remark. Jupiter, who had given her ſo many ſweet Words, and procured her great Pleaſures, no ſooner knew the Prejudice the Trojans had ſuffered, whilſt he had been lying with her, but he talked big to her. He threatned (b) to whip her, and askt her, whether ſhe had forgot the time, when he faſten'd an Anvil to each of her Feet, and ſuffered her to hang betwixt Heaven and Earth, in the Sight of all the Gods, who in vain attempted to untie her; for he kickt from Heaven to Earth as many of 'em as he could catch.

Ἦ ἐμέμνῃ ὅτε τ' ἐκρέμω ὑψόθεν, ἐκ δὲ σοὶ ἄκμονε
Ἀμφοτέρω ἔκ ποδοῖν, πηοῖ χρυσὰ δὲ ἔσαν ἐμπεδα
Χρύσεια, ἐξάπτεν, σὺ δ' ἐν αἰθέρι ἠδὲ νεφέλῃσι
Κρέμω, ἀέξετο δὲ δυσὶ κατὰ μακρὸν Ὄλυμπον.
Δεῦρε δ' ἐὼν ἐδύνατο παρασταδόν, οὓς δὲ λάβεσκε,
Ῥιπτάσκεν τέλεχνον ἀπὸ θεσπεσίης ὀρέστης
Ἐς γῆν ἱκάνοντα (o).

An non meminiſti quando pependiſti ab alto, à pedibus autem
Incudes demiſi duæ, circum manus autem vinculum miſi
Aureum, infrangibilem? tu autem in æthere & nubibus
Pependiſti, indignabantur autem dii per excelſum Olympum:
Solvere autem non poterant circumſtantes: quemcumque autem apprehenderem;
Projiciebam correptum de limine-divino, donec perveniret
In terram vix ſpirans.

'Twas Juno's beſt way to appear Submiſſive: She excuſed her ſelf with falſe Oaths, and promiſed to comply with the Deſires of her Husband. The Quarrel went no farther at that time. I ought not to forget, that Juno was the cauſe of the War of the Titans. She encouraged 'em to dethrone her Husband (d), and to reſtore Saturn, whom Jupiter had depoſed. Jealouſie was then ſtronger than Ambition; for the Indignation ſhe conceived when ſhe ſaw (e) Epaphus gratified with a Kingdom, made her chuſe rather to be a dethroned Goddeſs, provided her Husband was ſo too, than to reign with him. But perhaps ſhe propoſed to her ſelf a Revenge, in which her Ambition would be no loſer. She might hope that by preferring the Intereſts of her Father unjuſtly dethron'd, before thoſe of her Husband, who was an Uſurper, ſhe ſhould have a Share in the Government, under her Father reſtored, and ſhould break for ever with Jupiter. We ſhall ſee (f) hereafter another Conſpiracy ſhe ingaged in againſt her Husband.

I can't think of Juno hanging betwixt Heaven and Earth, without propoſing to my Readers a Paſſage which I don't underſtand. Hyginus (g) relates, that Vulcan having forg'd Golden Shoes for Jupiter, and the other Gods, Juno was no ſooner ſate down, but ſhe found her ſelf hung in the midſt of the Air. Vulcan had notice of it, that he might come and looſe his Mother, whom he had bound; but he anſwered he had no Mother. He had been kicked out of Heaven, and was ſtill enraged for that ill Uſage. Here are the Latin Words: Vulcanus Jovi cæteriſque Dii ſellas aureas ex adamante cum feciſſet, Juno cum ſedisſet ſubitò in æthere pendere cæpit. Quod cum ad Vulcanum miſſum eſſet ut matrem quam ligaverat ſolveret, iratus quod de cælo præcipitatus erat, negat ſe matrem ullam habere. I commend the Criticks, who have made ſo many Learned Obſervations upon the (h) firſt Words of Hyginus; but I could wiſh, they had taught me, how by means of a pair of Shoes, a Womam as ſoon as ſhe ſits down, can find her ſelf hanging in the Air. I don't ſee how a Chair or a Throne can have that Effect, and eſpecially upon a Perſon bound. Methinks we may complain of this Hiſtorian's want of Judgment. Could he believe that the Reader would be contented with ſo broken and falſified a Naration? Why didn't he ſay, that aſſoon as Juno was ſate down, the Floor of Heaven clove aſunder, and her Chair being no longer ſupported, fell towards the Clouds, and ſtopt in thoſe Spaces which are betwixt Heaven and Earth. This had been intelligible to the Reader. Servius tells the Story better; he ſays, that Vulcan made a Chair, which Juno ſitting upon, could not riſe again (i), till ſhe had granted Vulcan's Requeſt. It was to know, who thoſe were to whom he owed his Life. (k) Alii dicunt quod cum Vulcanus parentes ſuos diu quæreret, nec inveniret; ſedile fecit tale, ut cum eo qui ſedisſet ſurgere non poſſet; in quo cum adſedisſet Juno, nec poſſet exſurgere; Vulcanus negavit ſe ſoluturum omnino, niſi prius parentes ſuos ſibi monſtraſſet, atque ita factum eſt ut in Deorum numerum reciperetur. Conſult Pauſanias, and you will find, that Vulcan deſigning to be revenged of Juno, ſent her a Throne of Gold, to which ſhe found her ſelf tied, as ſoon as ſhe ſate down on it (e). None but Bacchus

(d) Hygin. cap. 150.

(e) He was a Baſtard of Jupiter. Hyginus, ibid.

(f) In the Remark F. of the Article Jupiter.

(g) Hygin. cap. 166.

(h) In order to know whether we ought to read ſolia, or ſoleas. Whether one may ſay aurea ex adamante, and whether it were not better to ſay, ſolia aurea nexa adamante, or ſolea ex auro & ex adamante. See Hyginus of the Amſterdam Edition 1681.

(i) Compare what is ſaid of Theſeus, in the 6th Book of the Æneid, Sedet æternumque ſedebit Infelix Theſeus; and what the Commentators ſay about the Seat that he was placed upon. See Mr. du Rondel about the Chenix of Pythagoras, pag. 95. & ſeq.

(k) Servius in Eclog. 4. Virg. v. 62.

(l) Pauſan. lib. 1. p. 18.

sided over Child-Births (G) and over many things depending thereon. Michael de Montagne did not well know the Origin of an Adventure, which he takes from Plato, and (H) expresses a little too wantonly. Authors don't agree about the Place ebus could persuade Vulcan to return into Heaven (m); and besides he was forced to make him drunk to engage him in that Voyage. The Athenians had a Picture which represented Bacchus bringing Vulcan back to Heaven (n): and the Lacedæmonians had a Piece of Sculpture, which represented the same Vulcan untying his Mother (o).

(G) She presided over Child-Births, and over many things depending thereon.] When Terence supposes, that Glycerium being in Labour, made use of this Prayer (p), Juno Lucina fer opem, serva me, obsecro; he manifestly witnesses, that Juno was the Deity that presided over that Affair. She was called (q) Opigena & Lucina, under that Function, sive te Lucinam quod lucem nascentibus tribuas, ac Lucetiam convenit nuncupari (r). She had other particular Names given her, according to the different Services that were expected from her in these Conjunctures; for she was called Fluonia, as being able to prevent too great a Loss of Blood. (s) Fluoniam Junonem mulieres colebant, quod eam sanguinis fluorem in conceptu retinere putabant. She was called Februa, as presiding over the Ceremony of the Purification of Child-Bed Women. These are the Limitations which Martianus Capella gives to the Sirnames Fluonia and Februa: For he introduces Philology, who declares, that being a Virgin, she has no need of invocating the Goddess Juno in those two Respects. (t) Nam Fluoniam Februlemque ac Februam mihi poscere non necesse est, cum nihil contagionis corporeæ sexu intemerata pertulerim. She might have wanted her Help in another respect, since St. Austin affirms, that Varro related how Juno presided over the flowing of the Menstrual Blood. (v) Ibi est & Dea Mena, quæ menstruis fluoribus præest, quamvis Jovis filia, tamen ignobilis. Et hanc provinciam fluorum menstruorum, in libro selectorum deorum ipsi Junoni idem autor assignat, quæ in diis selectis etiam regina est: & hic tanquam Juno Lucina cum eadem Menena privigna sua eidem cruori præsidet. I know very well, that many Authors make the Goddess of Child-Births distinct from Juno; for some say, that Lucina was (w) her Daughter, and others affirm, that Diana (x) was appointed to assist Women in Labour. But without insisting on the Hypothesis (y), that Lucina, Ilithya, Diana, Luna, and Juno, were the same Deity; I say, 'tis very probable, that Juno was considered, as the chief of this Function, and as having Deputies (z), and Substitutes in different Places. If you will not therefore own her directly and immediately for the Goddess Levana, who called the New-born Infants to be acknowledged (*) by their Fathers; nor for the Goddess Rumina, who presided over the Action of giving 'em suck; nor for the Goddess Cunina, who presided over their Cradles; nor for the Goddess Nundina, who presided over the Imposition of their Name; nor for the Goddess (‖) Vaticana, who presided over their Cries; nor for the Goddess Fabulina, who presided over the first Loosnings of their Tongue, that is, over the first Words they pronounced; believe at least, that all these Goddesses were Subdelegates to Juno, the Superintendant General. The same ought to be said of the Goddess Prosa, and the Goddess Postverta, who were worshipped, that Children might not take an ill Posture, when ready to be born. (a) Quando contra naturam forte conversi (pueri) in pedes, brachiis plerumque diductis retineri solent: agriusque tunc mulieres enituntur. Hujus periculi deprecandi gratia ara statuta sunt Romæ duabus Carmentibus: quarum una Postverta nominata est, Prosa altera; à recti perversique partus & potestate & nomine.

(H) Which he expresses a little too wantonly.] (b) 'Twas from some Poet that was in great want, and very greedy of this Sport, that Plato had this Story. That Jupiter one Day being in a violent Fit of Love, and not having Patience till his Wife had got into Bed, tumbled her on the Floor, and thro' the Vehemence of the Pleasure, forgot the great and important Resolutions he had been taking with the other Gods in his celestial Court, boasting that he had found that Bout as good, as when he first got her Maidenhead unknown to her Parents. So far Montagne. He is to blame for ascribing this Notion to some Poet greedy of amorous Imbraces, since Homer the Author of that Story, does plainly declare, he does not think it probable, that a Husband should be in such Transports for his Wife. 'Tis with this Notion, that he (c) supposes that Juno was not satisfied with putting on her best Rigging, but besides, had the Policy to borrow Venus's Cestus, an inevitable Charm, a Philtre, that never failed to produce its Effect. 'Tis to the Assistance of that Loan, that he attributes Juno's Power of inspiring her Husband with so violent a Fit of Love. There would have been many other things (d) to be censured in Montagne's Story, had not he had the Prudence to quote Plato. Wherefore he is not to be called in Question upon the Faults of this Philosopher; but we must apply our selves to Plato.

'Tis certain, that he unfaithfully relates Homer's Story; His Words are these: (e) [illegible] Jovem cæteris tum Diis, tum hominibus dormientibus, omnium quæ vigilando tractaverat rerum veneremm cupiditate oblitum, & usque adeo visa Junone tectus sum esse, ut nec domum venire sustinuerit, sed illum humi congredi statim voluerit dicens vehementius se cupidine inflammari, quàm olim cùm primum clam parentibus invicem congressi fuerunt. Plato means, that one of the Things, for which Homer's Poems ought to be prohibited, is that we there find, that whilst the other Gods and Men are at rest, Jupiter can't sleep for a lewd Temptation, and forgets all the Resolutions he had made; and that upon the Sight of his Wife, he is transported with such a vehement Passion, as prompts him to lie with her immediately, without giving her time to go to Bed, &c. I say once more, Plato alters the Story: for Homer does not say, that the other Gods were asleep, or that Men were at rest. He says on the contrary, that the Greeks and Trojans were vigorously fighting, and that Neptune was in Action against the Trojans. Neither does he say, that Jupiter forgot his Resolutions; he supposes that Jupiter was posted upon the Top of Mount Ida, and that Juno seeing him there, form'd a Design of possessing him with a desire of lying with her. He supposes, that in order to execute this Project, she went and washed her Body, she dress'd and tricked up her self, as fine as she could, and provided her self with Venus's Girdle. Whereby he undertakes to describe Jupiter as a very amorous God, since the most potent Charms were contained in that Girdle (f). I don't go about to excuse him: I grant that Plato most justly condemns him; for in short, 'tis a most scandalous thing thus to play upon the chief of ones Gods. The Eagerness of Jupiter was not so great, but that it gave him time to repeat a long Catalogue of his Mistresses. Some think that Homer do's not place this Story well; 'tis not, say they, Prudence in a Husband to represent the foul Play he has been guilty of; it does not seem a good way of cajoling her. Others justify Homer, by reason that it must needs be very agreeable to a Wife to hear her Husband say, that she feels a greater Passion for her, than he ever did he feels a greater Passion for her, than he ever did for such and such Mistresses upon the first Enjoyment. This is what Jupiter's Declaration becomes to (g). I add, that Homer has preserv'd Decorum on Juno's behalf. He brings her in representing to her Husband the Inconvenience that might happen, if any God should see 'em lying together upon Mount Ida, and should go and give others notice of it; but, said she, since you have a mind to it, let us go into your Chamber. Jupiter did not content to that Expedient, but he found another; which was to fall about his Wife's loud

(m) Id. ib.
(n) Id. ib.
(o) Id. lib. 3. pag. 99.
(p) Terent. in Andr. act. 3. sc. 1.
(q) Festus pag. m. CXXXIX.
(r) Mart. Capella de nuptiis philologiæ lib. 2. pag. m. 37.
(s) Festus, pag. m. LXIII.
(t) Mart. Capella ubi supra.
(v) August. de civit. Dei lib. 7. cap. 2. pag. m. 618.
(w) Hesiod. in Theog. See Meziriac upon Ovid's Epistles, pag. 638. & seq.
(x) Catullus epig. 35. Horat. od. 22. lib. 3. & alii alii.
(y) See Meziriac, ibid.
(z) See Kippingus in Antiq. Romanis, l. 1. c. 1. n. 15. pag. m. 24, 25.
(*) This was performed by taking up the Child which the Midwife had laid on the Ground.
(‖) See Aulus Gellius l. 16. c. 17. where he says after Varro, Deus Vaticanus.
(a) Aulus Gellius, lib. 16. cap. 16.
(b) Montagne, Essays, B. 1. chap. 29. p. m. 309.
(c) Iliad. l. 14.
(d) See the Letters h and i, hereunder.
(e) Plato de Republ. lib. 3. p. m. 212. A.
(f) [illegible]
(g) [illegible]

In eo autem delimmenta omnia inclusa erant: Ibi inerat quidam amor, inerat desiderium, inerat & amantium colloquium, Blandiloquentia quæ furtim furripit mentem prudentium licet. Homerus Iliad. l. 14. v. 215.

Nos autem age in amore convertamur in lecto dormiemus. Non enim unquam mihi sic Deus amor neque Mulieris Animum in Pectoribus circumfusus domuit, neque quando captus fui amore Ixionianorum, &c. Homer. ib. vers. 314

Place where Juno was educated: Some say it was at Samos *: Others say it was (I) in the Ocean, &c. but there was no Town where she was more honoured (K), than at Argos. She was also much (L) respected at Carthage, and at Olympia. There was in this last Town Sixteen Ladies appointed Overseers of the Games, which were celebrated to her Honour every Five Years. Three Classes of young Maids disputed there the Prize of the Race, and came down to run at the Olympick Games. The victorious Ladies received a Crown of Olive. The same Ladies made a Peplus † which they consecrated to this Goddess every Five Years *. Jupiter's Unfaithfulness to his Wife

* See the Remark I.

† A Kind of Gown or Veil.

* Ex Pausania, lib. 5. cap. 16. p. m. 417.

Cloud so thick, that the Sun it self could not see thro' it, and it was under this Cloud that he satisfied his Passion. He did not throw his Wife upon the Floor, as Montagne says; but upon the hard Ground in an open place. 'Tis true, the Earth immediately sent forth (b) Flowers and Grass, which served instead of a good Quilt. Neither Homer nor Plato make Jupiter say, what Montagne does, that he was as much pleased at that time, as when he first lay with her unknown to her Parents. Homer says only (i) that Jupiter perceiving Juno, felt the same Passion as when he went to lie with her the first time. I am willing it should be said, to excuse Montagne, that he did not believe there was a great Difference betwixt these two Things.

(I) Others say it was in the Ocean.] She affirms it her self, in her Discourse to Venus, when she borrowed her Cestus (k). She tells her, that she wanted it to reconcile the Ocean with his Wife Thetys, who had not lain together for a long time. Her Gratitude for the good Education she had received with them, inguged her to make a Voyage to reconcile 'em. She promises her self, that she shall for ever be loved and esteemed by 'em, if she can persuade 'em to lie in the same Bed.

(b) Id. ib. v. 347.

(i) His Words may be seen in the Remark A. Letter I.

(k) See also what she says to Oceanus, and Tethys in Ov. Met. l. 2. desiring them to exclude the Constellation of the Bear.

Δὶς (l) τόν μοι φιλότητα ἰμείρω, ὄφρα κε οἱ πάντας
Δώμαθ' ὑπνώοντας ἐπὶ θυόεντι καθείρξω.
Κοίμα γὰρ ἐλθοῦσα παλαμήσεσι πειρήσω χαίτης,
Ὡς κέν τοι θυόν χλιδήν, ἠ μάλιστα τεθύῃ,
Οἵ μ' ἐν σφετέρῃ δόμῳ ἔσσυτο ἐσσυμένως ἐπιτελλων;
. . . . . .
Τὰς ἔμμ' ἐλθοῦσαν, ἠ νῦ κάρηϊ νίσσα λύσω,
Ἠδὲ γὰρ ἔστιν χρέος ἄλλοθεν ἀπίχεσθαι
Ἐνθάδε ἠ φιλότητος. ἐπεὶ χόλος ἰμερτὴν θυμὸν, &c.

(l) Homer. Iliad. l. 14. v. 198. Juno repeats the same thing upon Mount Ida, when Jupiter asks her whether she is going. Ib. v. 301.

Da nunc mihi amorem & desiderium, quo tu omnes
Domas immortales atque mortales homines:
Vado enim visura alma fines terræ,
Oceanumque deorum parentem, & matrem Tethyn,
Qui me in suis ædibus magna curâ nutrierunt & educarunt,
. . . . . .
Hos vado visura, ipsis ut difficiles compositu lites dirimam.
Jam enim diuturno tempore inter se abstinent
Cubili & amore, ira enim invasit animum, &c.

(k) Lib. 1. v. 15.

Had she had Venus's Cestus to her Lot, that Charm so effectual to change the Conduct of married People, who lie by themselves, she had with much reason been made President of Marriages; but she wanted to borrow the pacifick Method, and Potent Instrument of Reconciliation: Why was not this Employment given to the Goddess, from whom the Cestus was to be borrowed? I leave it to those who are at Leisuure, to enquire into the Reasons of it.

As for her Education at Samos, consult Pausanius, who says, that the Inhabitants of that Island maintained, that Juno was born there under a little Tree, which they still shew'd (m). The Temple of this Goddess was very ancient (n). Every Body remembers these Words of the Æneid: (o) Quam Juno fertur terris magis omnibus unam, Posthabita coluisse Samo. The Isle was called Parthenia (p), because Juno was educated there, when she was a Virgin. There it was also, that her Marriage with Jupiter was celebrated; whence she came to be represented in her Temple as a Maid, that is a Marrying, and the Anniversary of her Feast was kept like a Wedding. Insulam Samum scribit Varro prius Parthenian nominatam, quod ibi Juno adoleverit, ibique etiam Jovi nupserit. Itaque nobilissimum, & antiquissimum Templum ejus est Sami, & simulacrum in habitu nubentis figuratum, & sacra ejus anniversaria nuptiarum ritu celebrantur (n).

(m) Pausanias, lib. 7. p. 209.

(n) Id. ib.

(o) Lib. 1. v. 15.

(p) Scholiast. Apollonii in lib. 4. He says upon the 187. Verse of the 1*st. Book, that the* Imbrasus, a River of Samos, was called Ἴμβρασος, because Juno was brought up there when she was a Maid.

(K) More honoured than at Argos.] The Argivi pretended, that Juno was bred up by the three Daughters of the River Asterion. One of them was call'd Euboea; whose Name was given to the Mountain upon which Juno's Temple was built: Eupolemus a Native of Argos was the Architect of it: In the Porch of it stood the Statues of all the Priestesses of that Goddess (b): their Office was very considerable, as I have observed, speaking of the unfortunate (c) Priestess, who occasioned the burning of the Temple. Pausanias says (d) she made her escape to the Altar of Pallas at Tegea, and that the Indignation of the Argivi did not move them to throw down her Statue. He says, that the most ancient Image of the Goddess was made of a wild Pear-tree. It was carefully preserved. Piras the Son of Argus removed it to Tyrinthus; but the Argivi having demolished that Town, restored it to the Temple of Juno. See Benedictus upon Pindar (f) concerning the Games that were celebrated at Argos, in Honour of this Goddess. See also the Commentators of Horace, upon these Words of the 7th. Ode of the 1*st*. Book.

(a) Lactant. lib. 1. c. 17. p. m. 54. See also St. Augustin de civit. Dei lib. 6. c. 7.

(b) Ex Pausania, lib. 2. pag. 59.

(c) See the Article Chrysis.

(d) Pausan. ibid. See also, l. 3. p. 86.

(e) Id. ib.

(f) Pag. 142. 628.

Plurimus in Junonis honorem
Aptum dicit equis Argos.

Silius Italius, to shew Juno's Fondness of Carthage, says that she prefers it before Argos and Mycenæ.

Hic (g) Juno ante Argos (sic credidit alta vetustas)
Ante Agamemnoniam gratissima tecta Mycenæ,
Optavit profugis æternam condere sedem.

(g) Silius Italicus lib. 3. init. 26.

According to Homer (h) the three Towns that Juno loved best, were Argos, Lacedæmon, and Mycenæ. 'Tis strange he says nothing of Samos, the only place that Virgil mentions, when he speaks of the Preference of Carthage.

(h) Iliad. l. 4. v. 51.

I'll say something of the Founder of Juno's Temple at Argos, by which we shall discover the Antiquity of this Edifice. Phoroneus the Son of Inachus, caused it to be built; and was the first who Armed this Goddess, in recompence whereof, he was the first that reigned. Phoroneus Inachi filius templum Argis Junoni primus fecit, says Hyginus in his 225th. Chapter, and Chapter 274. Phoroneus Inachi filius, arma Junoni primus fecit, qui ob eam causam primus regnandi potestatem habuit. Some Criticks instead of Arma, will have it read Aram, or Sacra, but others maintain the common reading, and confirm it by a Passage of Cassiodorus, in the 18th. Chapter of the 7th. Book Variorum. See the Commentators upon Hyginus in the Amsterdam Edition, 1681. As for the Antiquity of Phoroneus, see Scaliger, pag. 19. of his Notes upon Eusebius's Chronicon. 'Tis sufficient to remember, that Phoroneus was Contempotary with Abraham, or wanted but little of it.

(L) And so she was at Carthage.] I a long time thought that Virgil made use of a Poetical License, without any regard to History, when he represented Carthage (i) as Juno's beloved City: Nor did I think my self obliged to change my Opinion, for seeing in Ovid and Silius Italicus, the Confirmation of Virgil's Assertion; for one cannot reasonably doubt, that he was the Occasion of Ovid's making Juno speak thus (k).

(i) Æneid. l. 1. circa init.

Juniteat quod non fovi Carthaginis arces,
Cum mea sint illo currus & arma loco:

(k) Fastor. lib. 6.

A 2

Wife was so much the more inexcusable, because Juno had the secret (M) of growing a Maid again every Year. Her Love for (N) Jason has not been much Talk'd off. She got out of the Snare (O) that Ixion laid for her. If we believe some Authors, she had no Child by her Husband; and whenever she Conceiv'd, she did it (P) in a manner intirely Miraculous: But she had Milk as is usual; and it may well be suppos'd, since she Suckled a Bastard of her Husband. He was oblig'd to use Stratagems

(l) In the foregoing Remark, Letter g.

(m) Apulejus l. 6. Metam. circa init.

(n) It was said that her Statue had been Consecrated by Dido, when she built Carthage. See Herodian l. 5. c. 6.

(n) I shall say in the Remark V. something concerning the Temples she had in Italy.

(p) See Homer in the Hymn to Apollo, where he says that Juno left her Husband for a year, by reason of Minerva's Birth.

Ὡς ἄρ' ἐφώνησεν· ἐπὶ δ' ἔκλυε μητίετα Ζεὺς
Ἥρης ἐξαπίνης, ἣ οἱ φίλον ἦτορ ἔρυκε
Νυκτὸς ἀμολγαίης· ἐπὶ δ' ἔκλυε Κρονίδαο
Ἥρη, καὶ ῥ' ἔπεσιν μετεφώνεεν ἀγλαὸν υἱόν.

Nunquam ad cœlile Jovis templum confiliarii, Nunquam ad thronum variis, fraudi artes Cum ipso sedens, sapientia consultans consilia.

(q) Erasmus in Ecclesiaste, apud Colomiés, Rome Protestante, p. 25.

(r) Call'd Canathus. It was in Peloponnesus. See Pausanias l. 2. fub. fin. p. 80.

(s) Cæsar de Rochefort, Diction. general & curieux, p. 612. 613.

As also of Silius Italicus's venting the Notion we have seen above (l). But having consider'd other Passages of several Authors, I began to imagine that Virgil's Hypothesis was founded on Tradition. Psyche's Prayer is not of the least Force with me: Magni Jovis germana, says she (m), & conjux: sive tu Samia, quæ querulo partu vagituque & alimonia tua gloriaris, tenes vetusta delubra; sive celsæ Carthaginis, quæ te virginem vectura leonis cælo commeantem percolit, beatas sedes frequentas: sive prope ripas Inachi, qui te jam nuptam Tonantis, & reginam deorum memorat, inclytis Argivorum præsides manibus: quam cunctus orbis Zygiam veneratur, & omnis occidens Lucinam appellat: sis meis extremis casibus Juno Sospita, meque in tantis exantlatis laboribus defessam, imminentis periculi metu libera. This concerns Juno directly, without Ambiguity. Herodian's Passage concerning Urania (n) of Carthage, does not seem to have the same weight; for it induces us to believe that this Urania was not Juno, but the Moon. Now I don't consider here the Theology of those who reduce many of the Pagan Gods into one; I only keep to the publick Notions, according to which, Juno was Worshipp'd as the Sister and Wife of Jupiter, and as a distinct Object from Minerva, Diana, the Moon, Proserpine, &c. I can't think upon the Worship that was paid to this Goddess in so many places (o), and with so much Pomp, without believing there were mixed with it, I know not what Impressions of the Custom, which is observ'd with respect to Women. When a Woman has a share in the Government, she is much more Serv'd, Honour'd, and Respected than a Man in the same Authority. Consider how the Wives of the Governours of Provinces are Courted, when they are known to have a great Interest. The Honours that are paid to them exceed those that are given their Husbands. This is the Practice of the Earth, and it is carried into Heaven. Jupiter was serv'd as a King, and Juno as an Ambitious, Haughty, and Revengeful Queen, who divided with him the Government of the World, and (p) Assisted in all his Councils. I dare say that the Extravagances the Christians are fallen into, towards the Virgin Mary, which go beyond all that the Heathens invented in Honour of Juno, are owing to the same Original, I mean to the custom of Honouring Women, and making one's Court to them, with greater Zeal and Reverence than to the other Sex. People cannot be without Women either in a Civil or Religious Life. He that should take from the Romish Communion the Devotion to Saints, and especially to her whom they call the Queen of Heaven, and the Queen of Angels, would leave a frightful Gap in it: The rest would fall in Pieces, and would be arena sine calce, scopa dissoluta. Erasmus blaming the Custom of Saluting the Virgin Mary in the Pulpit, after the beginning of the Sermon, says (q), That it is contrary to the Example of all the Antients, who were rather to be imitated, than such sort of People, as perhaps to please Women, have herein trod in the Steps of the Heathens.

(M) Of growing a Maid again every year.] This she did only by washing in a Fountain (r). Juno took great care, says (s) the Writer of a Dictionary, to Wash her self every year in Fountain Canathus near Nauplia, which at present is call'd Napoli di Romania, where she constantly recover'd her Virginity, which made her belov'd by Jupiter. Pausan. lib. 8. 'Tis not true that Pausanias observes that she hereby made herself lov'd by Jupiter. He only says that the Argivi spoke of this return of Juno's Virginity, and grounded this Discourse upon the Practice of their occult Ceremonies in the Mysteries of this Goddess. There are many Writers, who quoting an Author, are guilty of making him say whatever they think he should have said. This was the occasion of imputing to Pausanias what he did not say. The Author of this false imputation, was probably full of what he had been relating: 'Diego 'de Torres's History of the Cherifs says that a-'mongst the Felicities the Turks hope for in a-'nother Life, they believe their Wives will bring 'them new Maidenheads, cap. 74. The Fountain of Youth, so Celebrated by our old Poets and Romancers, had not a Vertue comparable to that of Canathus.

(N) Her Love for Jason.] Some Authors say that Jason owed the Friendship and Protection of this Goddess to a good Service he had done her, without knowing, who she was. Juno disguis'd like an Old Woman, desired him to convey her over a River: He did it, and lost one of his Shoes by the Bargain. But others say he ow'd to his Beauty the interest he had in her. Juno could not withstand so many Charms, but grew passionately fond of the handsome Youth. (a) These are the Authors who mention the other Story. (b) Pelias

——forte citat Jasonem nudo pede venisse, qui dum Junonem transmutatam in anus speciem credens mortalem petentem per vadum fluminis transferret, alterum ex caligis in limo amiserat.

You'll find in Hyginus (c) the same particular more largely described, with the Marks of Gratitude which Juno gave him. Valerius Flaccus supposes that it was in a very dismal Weather, that she receiv'd this Kindness; and he adds that Jason discover'd her to be a Goddess, by the Light that seiz'd her, because she knew the Thunder to be the Voice of Jupiter, who call'd her home. It was therefore at a time of Elopement: She had left her Husband, and had no great Inclination to return.

Omnipotens regina, inquit, quam turbidus æthra
Æthere cærulcum quateret cum Jupiter imbrem,
Ipse ego præcipiti tumidum per Enipea nimbo
In campos & tuta tuli, nec credere quivi
Ante diem, quam te tonitru nutuque repostæ
Conjugis, & subita raptam formidine vidi (d).

(O) The Snares that Ixion laid for her.] Ixion having Committed a (e) Parricide of which he could find no Body to absolve him, receiv'd at last this good Office from Jupiter himself. For which he was so ungrateful, as to Attempt to Graft Horns on his Benefactor's Head: He fell in Love with Juno, and earnestly press'd her to the Point. But she refus'd him, and complain'd of the affront to Jupiter, who desiring to be Witness of this baseness, form'd a Cloud just like his Wife, and left it to Ixion's Discretion, who us'd it as Amorous People use to do. Hence came the Race of the Centaurs. He boasted afterwards to have lain with Juno; which, as is said, putting Jupiter out of Patience, made him throw him into Hell, and Condemn him to the Punishment of the Wheel (f). He did not act like a Jealous Husband: Is there any Italian who would suffer his Wife's Gallants to gratify their Passion with her Figure. He would hinder, if he could, their Divertion with her in Imagination or in a Dream.

(P) In a manner intirely Miraculous.] According to the common Opinion, she was Mother but of three Children, Mars, Vulcan, and Hebe. As for Mars, she Conceiv'd him by the touch of a Flower, which Flora shew'd her. She had a mind to be Reveng'd of her Husband, who had produc'd Minerva without her Assistance, and to shew him that she could do as much without the Concurrence of any Male.

Protinus (g) hærentem decerpit pollice florem,
Tangitur, & tacto concipit illa sinu.
Jamque gravis Tirynthi & laudi Promethidos instat,
Pulsque potens vobis, Marsque creatus erat.

(a) Ὅτι ἐν τῇ ἀποδημίᾳ ἐπὶ Λίμνην διῆλθε τὸν Ἥραν ἐπὶ τῷ ὤμῳ τὸν Ἰάσονα ἔχων, ἀπώλεσε τὸ ἕτερον τῶν ὑποδημάτων. Ἰάσονα τοῦτον εἶναι τὸν ἐκ Φερῶν ἐλθόντα εἰς Ἰωλκόν. Ἰάσονα τοῦτον εἶναι τὸν ἐκ Φερῶν ἐλθόντα εἰς Ἰωλκόν. Jasonem fuisse pulchrum hinc patet, quod juxta quotidam ipsa Juno insano amore eum prosecuta fuerit. Schol. Pindari in Pyth. Od. 4. apud Meziria in Epist. Ovidii. p. 540.

(b) Servius in Eclog. 4. Virgil. v. 34.

(c) Hygin cap. 12. See also c. 13. Apollonius Rhodius, l. 3. v. 66.

(d) Valer. Flaccus Argon. l. v. 81.

(e) He had treacherously kill'd his Wife's Father.

(f) Taken from Natalis Comes Mytholog. l. 6. c. 12. Adding some few Circumstances, all that is to be found in Diodorus Siculus, l. 4. c. 71. See also Lucian in Deor. dialogis p. 132. & seq. tom. 1.

(g) Ovid. Fasto. l. 5.

The Honours she received (V) in other Towns of Italy were very great. She wrought there many Miracles. She had a Temple at Falerii, before Rome was built. It was like that of Argos, and the same Ceremonies were used in it as the Argivi had consecrated to her Worship. This we learn from Dionysius Halicarnassæus in the 21st. Chapter of the first Book.

I would fain know whether any of the Wise Men among the Heathens took notice of a thing, which methinks was not difficult to apprehend, which is, that no Body did partake less of a happy Life, a State most essential * to the Divine Nature, than the greatest of the Goddesses. We can scarce conceive a more miserable Condition than Juno's. I don't go upon the Character of her Employments, though they were

* Quæ nobis natura informationem Deorum ipsorum dedit, eadem infundit in mentibus ut eos æternos & beatos haberemus. Cicero de nat. Deor. lib. 1. p. m. 76. see also Aristotle de repub. lib. 7. cap. 1. pag. m. 321. E. See also the Remark l. of the Article Spinoza, n. V.

(a) Virgil. Æn. lib. 12. v. 838.

(b) Cicero orat. pro Murena sub fin.

(c) Livius, lib. 8. pag. m. 224.

(d) Appian. l. 5. de bello civil. p. m. 389.

(e) Elian. histor. Animal. l. 11. c. 16.

(f) Cicer. de nat. deor. l. 1. p. m. 116.

(g) Lud. Nonnius in Goltzii Græc.

(h) Ubi supra. See also Propertius elegy 8. l. 4.

(i) See the Letter x in the next Column.

(k) Valer. Maximus, lib. 1. c. 1.

(l) Cicero, lib. 1. de divinat.

(m) In Lucinæ Junonis ara sub dio sita, cinere immobilem esse perflantibus undique procellis. Plin. l. 2. c. 107. Valerius Maximus, lib. 1. c. 8. in exempl. extern.

dire. This was the Reparation they were obliged to make, by sacrificing a Lamb to her, with their Hair hanging loose. In a Word, we may say, that it was not by too bold an Hyperbole, that Virgil introduced Jupiter promising his Spouse, that the Descendents of Æneas should serve her more devoutly than all the other Nations. This Dialogue is one of the finest Incidents of the Æneid. Juno engages to persecute Æneas no longer, and asks a Favour as a recompence for her desisting. I advise my Readers to go to the Fountain Head: I shall only produce these Four Verses.

Hinc (a) genus, Ausonio mistum quod sanguine surget,
Supra hominem, supra ire Deos pietate videbis.
Nec gens ullatenus æquè celebrabit honores.
Annuit his Juno, & mentem lætata retorsit.

(V) The Honours she received in other Towns of Italy.] She was worshipped under the Title of Sospita, with great Devotion at Lanuvium, near Rome, in the via Appia. The Romans were so fond of this Worship, that their Consuls were obliged in the beginning of their Consulship, to go and pay their Homages to this Juno. (f) Nolite à sacris propitiis Junonis Sospitæ, cum omnes Consules facere necesse est, domesticum & suum Consulem potissimum avellere. When the Inhabitants of Lanuvium were made Roman Citizens, it was ordained, that this Worship should be common to them with the People of Rome. (g) Lanuvinis civitas data, fanumque sua redditâ cum eo ut ades lucusque Sospitæ Junonis communis Lanuvinis Municipibus cum populo Romano esset. There was a Treasure in this Goddess's Temple, out of which Augustus took great Summs, and promised to pay Interest for it (h). It is thought that this Temple was founded by the Pelasgi, who came originally from Peloponnesus, which Opinion is supported by Elian's (i) calling this Juno of Lanuvium, Juno Argolica. Here is the Attire of this Goddess. Nostram Sospitam——in nunquam ne in somnis quidem vides nisi cum pelle caprina, cum calceolis repandis (k). 'Tis not observed in this Passage, whether the Goat's Skin was adorned with Horns; but there are very learned Men who do not doubt of it. 'Tis certain that Juno of Lanuvium had her Head vail'd with a Goat-Skin, set off with true Horns, which is plainly to be seen in Goltzius's Roman Medals, and in that mentioned by Vigenere, in his Annotations upon Livy. Thus Mr. de Girac speaks in the 65th. Section, and 356th. Page of his Reply. You'll find in the Margin of his Book, the following Passage: Romani Junonem Sospitam colebant, cujus caput pellis caprina cum cornibus exornabat (l). Mind this: The Serpent of the Temple of Lanuvium was something miraculous; it knew whether young Women had lost their Virginity or not. See Ælian (l).

Juno LACINIA, whose Temple was Six Miles from Crotona, was wonderfully famous. This Temple (m) was twice as large as the largest in Rome. It was covered with Marble, part whereof was brought to Rome to cover the Temple of Fortuna Equestris, which the Censor Quintus Fulvius Flaccus was building: but as he came to a miserable end, the Senate ordered the Marble to be carried to the same Place it was taken from (n). Annibal did not execute the Design of carrying away the Column of Gold, which was in the Temple of this Juno (o). Pliny relates, that the Ashes, which were left on the Altar of this Goddess, being exposed to all the Injuries of the Air, never moved from their Place (p). Servius tells another Miracle; if any one inscrib'd his Name upon the Tiles of this Temple, the Letters vanished away when that Man died. (q) In hoc templo illud miraculi fuisse dicitur, ut si quis ferro in tegula templi, ipsius nomen incideret, tamdiu illa Scriptura maneret, quamdiu is homo viveret qui illud scripsisset. Livy speaks of another Miracle, which is, that the Beasts of every kind, that were consecrated to this Goddess, fed on the Meadows of the Temple, without being tended, and retired at Night of themselves, being undisturbed either by Wild-Beasts or Thieves. (r) Læta in medio pascua habuit (Lucus) ubi omnis generis ferarum dea pascebatur pecus sine ullo pastore: separatimque egressi cujusque generis greges, nocte remeabant ad stabula, nunquam insidiis ferarum non fraude violati hominum. He gives sufficient Intimation, that he would not swear to the Truth of it; and that the Story of the unmoveable Ashes had no greater certainty. Generally, says he, some Miracles are ascribed to such sort of Places. * Miracula aliqua affinguntur plerumque tam insignibus locis. Fama est aram esse in vestibulo templi, cujus cinerem nullus unquam moveat Ventus. No Body understands this better than the Christian Monks. He adds, that this Temple was famous, not only for its Holiness, but also for its Riches (s).

'Tis no Wonder, that there have been different Opinions concerning the Founder of this Temple, and the Occasion of its Foundation; for all People are inclined to invent a Thousand pretty Things upon such sort of Matters. Strabo (t), who relates, amongst other Opinions, that King Lacinius caused it to be built, because Juno hated Hercules, whom he had refus'd to lodge. But if Strabo's Narrations ought not to supprize us, we can't however but wonder, that Authors are not agreed about the Situation of this Building. Livy places it Six Miles from Crotona: Sex millia aberat ab urbe (v) nobile templum ipsa urbe nobilius, Lacinia Junonis, sanctum omnibus circa populis (w). But Valerius Maximus says, it was at Locri, which is not the only point wherein he differs from Livy. His Words are these, Q. Fulvius Flaccus impune non tulit quod in cenſura tegulas marmoreas ex Junonis Lacinia templo in ædem Fortunæ Equestris, quam Roma faciebat, transtulit. Negatur enim, post hoc factum, mente constitisse: quin etiam per summam ægritudinem animi expiravit, cum ex duobus filiis in Illyrico militantibus, alterum decessisse, alterum graviter audisset affectum. Cujus casu motus senatus tegulas illico Locros reportandas curavit: detectique circumspectissima sanctione impium opus conſoris retexuit (x). I have followed this Narrative above, as to the Motive that ingaged the Senate to restore the Tiles; but I reserved to my self the right of rectifying things as there was occasion, by Livy's Relation. You must therefore know, that this grave Historian observes, that the Censor Fulvius Flaccus was extreamly follicitous that the Temple he built should, neither in Magnificence nor Extent, come behind any in Rome. He thought a Marble Roof would give great Lustre to his Edifice; for which reason he ordered half of the Temple of Juno Lucinia to be uncovered (y), which was sufficient for his Design. Having got those Marble Tiles brought to Rome, he took care not to say what Place they came from; nevertheless, it was publickly known, which occasioned such Murmurs, that the Consuls were obliged to consult the Senate upon that Affair. The Senate ordered Flaccus to come before 'em, and having suffered him to be exposed, for some time, to all sorts of bitter Reproaches, they unanimously resolved, that the Tiles should be carried back to Juno's Temple, and that the Goddess should be appeased by what the Ceremonies prescribed. Livy's Words have so charmed me, that I am perswaded they will be very agreeable (n) Servius in Æneid. l. 3. v. 552.

(o) Livius lib. 24. circa init. p. m. 380.

(p) Inclytum templum divitiis etiam, non tantum sanctitate fuit. Id. ibid. See also Strabo, l. 6. p. m. 180.

(q) Servius ubi supra.

(r) In Valerius Maximus, put out by Thysius, p. 27. they make Livy say, that the Temple was in the Town, In urbe nobile templum, ipsa urbe erat nobilius.

(s) Livius ubi supra.

(t) Valer. Maximus, l. 1. c. 1. m. 20.

(u) Strabo in Italia, where he says, that Juno's Lacinia had a Temple in common with the Locrians, to which Sanctuary they had recourse.

(v) This is the reason why I said above after Cluverius Ital. Antiq. l. 4. c. 15. that the Temple of Juno Lacinia was thrice as large as the largest Temple in Rome.

(w) Livius ubi supra.

(x) Valer. Maximus, l. 1. c. 1. m. 20.

(y) Strabo, in Italia, where he says, that Juno's Lacinia had a Temple in common with the Locrians, to which Sanctuary they had recourse.

were never so toilsome (X), and unpleasant, and have given just Occasion to turn the ble to the greatest part of my Readers: the Expression is admirable, and full of noble Thoughts, (a) Postquam censor rediit tegula exposita de navibus ad templum portabantur: quamquam unde essent silebatur, non tamen celari potuit. Premitur igitur in curia ortus est; ex omnibus partibus postulabatur, ut consules eam rem ad senatum referrent. Ut vero aperitus in curiam censor venit, multo infestius singuli universique præsentem lacerare: Templum augustissimum regionis ejus, quod non Pyrrhus, non Annibal violassent, violasse parum habuisse, nisi detexisset fœde ac prope diruisset. Detractum culmen templo, nudatum retectis patere imbribus putrefaciendum. Censorem moribus regendis creatum, cui sarta tecta exigere sacris publicis & loca tuenda more majorum traditum esset; eum per sociorum urbes diruentem templa, nudantemque tecta ædium sacrarum vagari, & quod, si in privatis sociorum ædificiis faceret, indignum videri posset, id Deûm immortalium templa demolientem facere, & obstringere religione populum Romanum, ruinis templorum templa ædificantem: tamquam non iidem ubique Dii immortales sint, sed spoliis aliorum alii colendi exornandique. Quum, priusquam referretur, apparet quid sentirent Patres; relatione facta in unam omnes sententiam ierunt, ut he tegulæ reportandæ in templum locarentur, piacularique Junoni fierent. The Decree of the Senate was not executed in all its Parts: for they who were commissioned to see the Roof repaired, reported, that no Workman knew how to restore the Tiles to their Place (b), and so they were left in the Court of the Temple. Flaccus did not leave off building; he made an end of the Temple, and consecrated it, and exhibited the Ludi Scenici for four Days, and the Circenses one Day (c). Here is a notable difference betwixt Livy and Valerius Maximus, which shews that the latter has done a great Injury to the Roman Senate: He supposes, that she never thought of repairing the Damage, but they had seen the prodigious Vengeance that Heaven had inflicted on the Censor Flaccus. But Livy informs us, that the Senate performed that pious and just Action, upon the bare Consideration of the Fact; and before they saw any Signs of the Divine Indignation. He does not relate the miserable end of the Censor: Nay, he represents it more dismal than Valerius Maximus; for he says, that Fulvius Flaccus hang'd himself, and he adds, that 'twas said amongst the People, that Juno had deprived him of his Senses. (d) Q. Fulvius Flaccus pontifex qui priore anno fuerat censor——fœda morte periit. Ex duobus filiis ejus qui tum in Illyrico militabant, nunciatum alterum decessisse, alterum grave & periculoso morbo ægrum esse. Obruit animum simul luctus, metusque: mane ingressi cubiculum servi, laqueo dependentem invenere. Erat opinio, post censuram minus compotem fuisse sui: vulgo Junonis Laciniæ iram ob spoliatum templum alienasse mentem ferebant. What concerns the taking away of the Marble Tiles from Juno's Temple, is said to have happen'd the 579th. Year of Rome.

(X) The Character of her Employments, though they were never so toilsome and unpleasant, and have given just Occasion.] She had the Superintendence of Marriages, and their Consequences. See Virgil's Commentators upon these Words:

(e) Mactant lectas de more bidentes
Legiferæ Cereri, Phœboque patrique Lyæo: Junoni ante omnes, cui VINCLA JUGALIA CURÆ.

They mention a Hundred such like Passages, and the Epithets pronuba, jugalis, Ζυγία, γαμηλία, παννύχια, &c. which were given to Jupiter's Wife, because she presided over Matrimonial Engagements. This Employment required great Pains; the Particulars of it were innumerable, and 'twas very difficult to perform it to her Honour. If the Business had been only to make Matches, the Difficulties would not have been so considerable: The Disposition of the Subjects, and the Inclination of Nature, might have saved the Director General a great deal of Pains; but a Goddess of the first Rank was engaged by the Interests of her Reputation and Glory, to see that People should marry well: I mean, that the sorting of Conditions and Humours should form an indissoluble Bond of Affection and Concord, and therefore all Marriages that were ill-suited and unlucky, could not but give her a great deal of Trouble, as being so many Blots to her Reputation, and just Occations of reproaching her, that the Pains they had taken to invoke and worship her, on the Wedding-Day, were all lost Labour. All those who had a mind to abuse her, had a fair Opportunity; for in short, either she did all she could to procure happy Marriages, or she did not. If she did, there was reason to conclude, she was very miserable, since she had an Employment, which exhausted all her Strength and Industry; and yet she could not avoid being unsuccessful on a Thousand Occasions. That vast Number of Experiments, which shew'd the Vainness of her Pains, was a Proof either that she had a Subject to labour on, that was very difficult, or that her Power was very unsuccessful and inconsiderable. In the first case, her Misfortune, and the deplorable Cruelty of her Fate, or else her Imprudence, were manifest; for if she was not at Liberty to lay down her Employment, in which doing her best, she could not prevent ill Success on a Thousand Occations, she deserved to be pitied. But if she might have resigned her Office, and yet obstinately continued in it, she wanted Judgment (f) and Prudence, and maintained her self unjustly in a Function which exceeded her Strength, and which she discharged to her Dishonour. It had been a poor Excuse to say, that her good Designs were thwarted by the capricious Frolicks of another Goddess.

Sic (g) visum Veneri, cui placet impares
Formas, atque animos sub juga ahenea
Sævo mittere cum joco.

This had been to confess the Limitation and Dependence of her Power, a mortifying Confession, beyond all that can be imagined for a Goddess so haughty as Juno was. This is what might be said, supposing that she discharged her Duty to the best of her Power; but if it had been supposed, that she could have succeeded better, she would have been look'd upon, as guilty of extream Negligence, or Malice, and consequently, as most unworthy of the Honours that were paid her, and of the Dignity she was invested with. These are Reflections, which the Heathens should have made. Now the result of these Thoughts is to determine, that her Condition was very unhappy, whether by reason of the great Pains her Employment required, or because of the ill Success they were attended with. Her Dignity and her Sex, made her wonderfully sensible of Contempt and Disgrace; and we can't imagine, but she had Sense enough not to be ignorant of what might be said against her Administration, and to believe, that the other (h) Gods reflected upon her, and that if they had the Complaisance not to do it to her Face, or not to tell her what was said of her, they would not fail to asperse her behind her Back, or at least to think meanly of her. There needs no more to vex one that's touchy, ambitious and Proud: if he is sensible that his Faults are known to others, that's enough to disquiet him.

All the Reflections I have produced might have been made with respect to Juno, as she presided over Child-Births. What a Trouble was this! 'Twas the way not to be at rest one Moment, and to be forced to work in a Thousand Places at once. This Office is subject to many unpleasant Accidents. The Industry of the best Chirurgeons does not hinder many Children that come across, some one way, and some another, from dying with their Mothers. These Misfortunes were so many Heaps of Reproach for the Censurers of Juno who duly invoked under particular and specifical Names, (i) according to the Exigency of the Case. I know well enough, that it may be very probably maintained, that all the Deities who presided over Marriages, Child-Births, &c. ought not to be reduced to her alone, under different Names; but on the other side, it is very likely, that all

(a) Livius ibid.

(b) Quæ ad religionem pertinent cum eam facta: tegulas relictas in area templi, quia reponendarum nemo adhibitus erat, ne inde inauspicatio oriretur, potuerit, redemptores munierunt. Id. ib. p. 818.

(c) Ludos item Fortunæ equestri, quam Proconsul in Hispania dedicaverat Celtiberorum regionibus voverat, annos sex postquam voverat, dedicavit, & scenicos ludos per quatriduum, unum diem in circo fecit Id. ib. p. 812.

(d) Id. ib. p. 819.

(e) Virgil. Æn. lib. 4. v. 57.

(f) Metiri se quemque suo modulo ac pede verum est. Horat. epist. 7. lib. 1. v. ult.

(g) Horat. ode 33. lib. 1.

(h) The Heathens believed that Jealousies, Quarrels, Divisions, and such like Disorders prevailed among the Gods.

(i) See the Remarks (D).

from Hercules * in her right Breast. 'Tis said that after the Consummation of her Marriage, she washed her self in a Fountain Situated betwixt Tigris and Euphrates, and that from that time (BB) the Waters of that Fountain had a most agreeable Smell, which Perfumed the Air round about it. Juno was Handsome, and for that Reason Ju-

(r) Christopher Deffrans, Esquire, Seigneur de la Jalouziere & de la Chaslonniere near Nyort in Poitou, Book 11. of his Histoires des Poëtes fol. 225. verso Printed at Niort 1595. He only put into Verse what John le Maire de Belges ubi infra had said in Prose.

Car (r) vostre discord gist à vos formositez,
De contempler vos corps, vos naïves beautez,
Prudement discerner le choix, l'equipolance,
Laquelle est la plus belle en face, & corpulance.
Les Déesses alors eurent timidité,
Parce qu'il leur falloit monstrer leur nudité.
Toutesfois à lombrage un peu se retirerent,
En lieu d'une antichambre, ou se desbabillerent
A part l'une de lautre, ou leurs Nymphes avoient
Qui honorablement en cela les servoient.
Quand eurent desfublé escoffions & guimples,
Leurs couronnes tourets, destaché leurs espingles,
Morrion & chappeaux, ceintures, fermaillets,
Chesnes, bagues,, carquans, bullettes, bracelets,
Robes, & cotillons, leurs manteaux & cuirace,
Leurs habits pleins d' odeurs, de tresgrande efficace.
Toutesfois retenoient leurs escarpins dorez,
Bravement enrichis decoupez & ouvrez,
De peur que l'aigu bout des pointues berbettes
Leurs plantes n'offensast fort tendres & douillettes.
Ainsi nuës estant toutes trois vont marcher
Devant le beau Paris, & droit si vont ranger.

The French Poet who gives us this Description, forgets a very material thing, which is, that these three Goddesses washed their Bodies in a Fountain. Euripides (f) tells us this particular, and there are some Epigrams on it (t) in the Anthologia. Juno must therefore submit to very disagreeable Conditions; for after all, she made Profession of Modesty, she was Grave and Majestical, she knew how to maintain her Rank, and yet she found her self obliged to shew her self Naked before a Mortal: and the worst of it was, that another appeared Handsomer to the Judge, and Venus carried the Golden Apple. He did not make it appear, that he found any Reason of Preference in the Face or Shape of these three Litigants: On the contrary, he declared, that whilst he saw 'em Dress't, he thought 'em equally Handsome. Having then pronounced against Juno, after comparing what their Cloaths concealed, it was a sign he discovered in her some notable imperfections. This might at least be suspected, and it could not but be a terrible Mortification to this Goddess. This was enough to make her Mad. I wonder that Lucian has not bestowed some of his biting Wit upon it in his Dialogue about the Judgment of Paris. See the Margin †. Our Scarron has not been so discreet, see how he Plays the Buffoon in the first Book of his Virgile travesti.

Ce que craignant la bonne (b) Dame,
Etgardant encor en son ame
Le beau jugement de Paris,
Et l' insupportable mépris,
Qu'en faveur de Vénus la belle
Il eut pour Pallas & pour elle,
Outre qu'il avoit revelé,
(Heureux s'il n'eust jamais parlé)
Qu'elle avoit trop longue mamelle,
Et trop long poil dessous l'aisselle,
Et pour Dame de qualité
Le genoüil un peu trop croté:

An Author, who Flourished in the beginning of the XVI*th.* Century, pretends that Juno did not appear quite Naked. (e) She and Minerva, says he, being surprized with Shame, and not willing to do it, answered not a Word, when it was signified to 'em, that they must be at the Pains of putting off their noble Robes, since the Dispute lay in a Comparison of the Beauty of their Divine Bodies, and in a prudent Distinction of the Preference of their Illustrious Members. But Venus the boldest of 'em, said, that things were gone so far, that there was no denying of it, and began to untie her Girdle. ' Then Juno seeing this said, certainly, ' Lady Venus, we have no mind to refuse it, for ' fear of being Baffled: But I think it is indecent ' for immortal and Chaste Goddesses; for Pallas who ' is a Maid, and for me who am the Wife of a ' King and Emperor, to shew our selves Naked to a ' Mortal Man, as little account as you make of it, ' as being used to keep company with Men. But ' however since it must be done, we will not be the ' last———(d) Queen Juno full of a Mat-' tronal Gravity, and Modesty, kept on none of ' all her Ornaments; only she took a fine ' Kerchief, long, broad and thin, all hem'd with ' Gold and Silk Fringes, with which one of her ' Nymphs was Deck'd. And she put it upon her ' left Shoulder hanging like a Scarf, and tied in a ' knot upon her right side. And because the ends ' fluttering in the Air flew up whether she would ' or no, by her Motion, she held one of her Hands ' upon her Breast, and the other lower. I believe this is a meer Fiction of this Author. Lucian insinuates nothing like it. However it be, Juno expressed an extream Resentment for the desperate Affront, that she thought her Judge had put upon her. This was a Wound that Bled for a long time, and disquieted her Mind all the rest of her Life.

Nec dum (f) etiam causa irarum SÆVIQUE DOLORES
Exciderant animo: manet alta mente repostum
Judicium Paridis, spretæque injuria formæ.

I shall observe by the by, that Macrobius is mistaken in one of the Differences he mentions betwixt Virgil and Homer. These are his Words: (g) Nullam commemorationem de judicio Paridis Homerus admittit. Idem vates Ganymedem non ut Junonis pelicem à Jove raptum, sed Jovialium poculorum ministrum in cœlum à diis asciscum refert, velut [illegible] Virgilius tantam deam, quod cuivis de honestis femina deforme est, velut specie victam Paride judicante doluisse, & propter contumeliæ pelicatum totam gentem ejus vexasse commemorat. 'Tis certain that Homer (b) has mentioned Paris's Judgment, and Assign'd it as the cause of Juno's implacable Anger against the Trojans: 'Tis not therefore true, as Macrobius pretends, that Virgil has departed from Homer upon this Point. It would signify nothing here to say (i) that Euripides, and Coluthus (k) have mentioned the same Judgment of Paris.

(BB) She washed her self in a Fountain———and that from that time the Waters of that Fountain had a most agreeable Smell.] Ælian has preserved this Story. He says (l) that this Fountain was Transparent to the Bottom, and that the Inhabitants of the Country, and the Syrians also had among 'em the Tradition just mentioned, and Attributed to it the agreeable Smell that was in the Neighbourhood of the Place. (m) [illegible] Unde locus etiamnum suavem odorem spirat, qui in vicinum etiam aërem circumquaque distribuitur. This shews the Character both of a Superstitious and Fabulous Spirit. People are easily led to derive from a Celestial Origin all the singular Properties that are found in certain Places of the World; and as the Heathens suffered themselves to be abused with a Chimerical, and Foolish Tradition of the Amours and Marriages of the Gods, they believed that Juno being to wash her Body the next Day after her Wedding, chose a very clear Fountain, and left there some Marks of her Presence. Note, that according to Turnebus (n), they fancied that the Divine Beings made themselves known by their Smell.

Omnia (o) finierat: tenuesse fecit in auras.
Mansit odor: posses scire fuisse Deam.

This is what Ovid said, speaking of Flora, and this is what Virgil says, speaking of Venus.

Dixit, (p) & avertens rosea cervice refulsit,
Ambrosiæque comæ divinum vertice odorem
Spiravere.

John le Maire de Belges follows this Opinion; for he

* See Homer Il. l. 5. v. 392. & seq. who says, it was a very painful Wound. Τὸν δὲ μιν ὀϊστευσε βαρὺν ἄχος ἀμφικαλύψαν.
Tunc ipsam gravissimus occupavit dolor.

(d) Id. ib. p. 109.

(f) Virgil. Æneid. l. 1. v. 25. See also the 30*th. Verse of the same Book*, cum Juno ÆTERNUM servans sub pectore VULNUS.

(g) Macrob. Saturn. l. 5. c. 16. p. m. 407.

(b) Homer. Iliad. l. ult. v. 25. & seq.

(i) Eurip. in Troa divus v. [illegible] & in Helena v. 23.

(k) Coluthus de raptu Helenæ.

(l) Ælian. Histor. animal. l. 16. c. 30.

(m) Id. ib.

(n) Turneb. Adverf. l. 30. c. 39. I am not very well satisfied with the two Proofs he Alledges, which are the Passage of Virgil and that of Ovid, which I have set down.

(o) Ovidius, l. 5. fastor. p. m. 102.

(p) Virgil. Æn. l. 1. v. 402.

Jupiter's Adulteries (CC) may be ſaid to be the more inexcuſable. It would be meer wrangling to Criticize Arnobius, who has judged of it in this manner. The Superſtition of the Romans was ſo great, that ſome Women honoured Juno (DD) by pretending to Comb her and Dreſs her, and hold a Looking-glaſs before her; but others were in little fear of her, for they went and ſeated themſelves in the Capitol by her Husband, fancying themſelves to be his Miſtreſſes. See my laſt Remark.

JUPITER, the greateſt of all the Heathen Gods, was the Son of Saturn and Cybele. There was no Crime, but what he was defiled with; for beſides that he Dethroned (A) his own

(g) John le Maire de Belges ubi ſupra p. 109.

(r) That is, of Juno, Minerva and Venus Naked before Paris.

(ſ) Balzac, Entret. 5. c. 2. p. m. 88. See in the Remark F F of the Article Muhomet, what the Followers of that falſe Prophet ſay of his Sweat.

(t) Jupiter liberrimus cano nive conſpuit Agros.

he affirms (g) that all Terreſtrial Beings kept Silence, and expreſs'd a reſpectful Admiration, during the Appearance (r) of the Divine Bodies, which had already Perfum'd the Circumambient Air with their fragrant, Divine and Ambroſian Odour. The Heathens would have eaſily believed that the Spittle, &c. of the Gods, was Roſe-water at leaſt. Balzac (ſ) obſerves, that the Poet Furius (t) makes Jupiter ſpit Snow; and that another Poet makes Nectar enough to proceed from him to form the Rivers of the Golden Age. Balzac adds, 'That he whom Matthieu's Hiſtory names the Chryſoſtom of France, ſaid, Preaching before the late King Henry the 'Great: Sir, if your Majeſty ſhed Pearls inſtead of 'Tears, and ſpit Emeralds, if Rubies and Diamonds 'proceeded from you when ever you ſneeſe and blow 'your Noſe, &c. There had been no great difficulty in perſuading the Heathens, that the Gods actually did all this. Thus Children are made to believe that Urganda, for Example, or ſome other Fairy getting her Head combed, and asking what is it that falls from my Head? heard with Pleaſure this Anſwer, Gold and Silver. Moſt of thoſe who believe this in their Infancy, would believe it all their Lives, if they were not undeceived when they are grown up, or if they ſaw that theſe things were the common Opinion in matter of Faith. There are many natural Properties, which the Tradition of the Chriſtian People attribute to Miraculous Cauſes, as the Heathens Attributed to Juno the Fragrancy of the Fountain before mentioned. Behold, ſaid one to me one Day, that little Track of Land where the Graſs is ſo fine. It was that way a Martyr went, when he was led from the Priſon to the place of Execution. All the way he went bears the Marks of it ever ſince. The Wheat, the Graſs, whatever is ſown there has a Tincture of it, and never acquires the Verdure which you ſee on the right and on the left. There's hardly a Pariſh, where you won't hear ſuch Stories. I wiſh ſome Travellers would make a large Collection of 'em. They are contented to Collect what concerns great Towns, but a Collection of what concerns the Country Pariſhes would have its value too. And hereupon I remember I heard a Man of Judgment ſay, that his Taſte was not like that of an Antient Father, who wiſh'd he had ſeen at Rome a Triumphal Entrance. I rather wiſh, ſaid he, I had been preſent for ſome Months at the Converſations of the Roman Citizens, and that I knew how the Women practiſed their Devotions, and how they talk'd of Jupiter and Juno; what was there common Diſcourſe on a Wedding-Day, on a Day of Child-Birth, or of a general Proceſſion, a Day of Lectiſternium, &c. concerning the Gods and Goddeſſes, Subigus or Subiga, Fabulinus, Pertunda, and the reſt. Books don't teach us theſe Particulars, 'tis only by Converſation one can come to the Knowledge of them.

(CC) Juno's Beauty made Jupiter's Adulteries more inexcuſable.] 'Tis thus Arnobius Argued: (a) Et quid Regi Saturnio matrimoniis fuerat cum alienis rei? Non illi fuerat ſatis Juno, nec ſedare impetum cupiditatum in regina poterat numinum, cum nobilitas eam commendaret tanta, facies, oris dignitas & ulnarum nivei marmoreique candores? A cavilling Sophiſt would Argue againſt this Argument of Arnobius, and ſay that at a certain Period of time, the Beauty of Women loſes all its Charms with reſpect to their Husbands, the Nature of Things being ſuch, that they no longer Affect us, after we are uſed to 'em, ab affectis non fit paſſio. He would maintain, that this Political Axiom, that (b) the beſt means of preſerving Dominions are thoſe that have been made uſe of to obtain them, is falſe in the Empire of Beauty: For if Beauty makes a Conqueſt, it does not preſerve it; a Husband who grows in Love, only becauſe his Miſtreſs is Handſome, will not continue in Love, becauſe his Wife continues to be ſo: Cuſtom hardens him againſt that ſort of Charm, and he makes every Day ſome ſteps towards inſenſibility: Some come ſooner to it, others later; but at laſt all arrive at it, and the Affection which may be, and is frequently preſerv'd, is not grounded upon Beauty, but upon other Qualities. Experience witneſſes that the Husbands, whoſe Love is moſt laſting and ſtrong, are not for the Generality thoſe who have Handſom Wives. Look elſewhere than in Beauty (c) for that Charm, which Unites the Hearts, and keeps 'em afterwards United. A Sophiſt might heap up many other Obſervations of the ſame Nature; but after all, he ought to be look'd upon as a Caviller; for 'tis certain that Arnobius's Remark is grounded upon a kind of common Notion. All the Neighbours are much more Scandaliz'd with the Intrigues of a Man, who has a Handſome Wife, than with thoſe of another, whoſe Wife is ugly. A whole Nation, tho' never ſo numerous, will be more indulgent to the Gallantries of a King, when the Queen is Deformed, and of a diſguſting Aſpect, than when he is Married to a Princeſs of a rare and excellent Beauty. Some body has inſerted in the Scaligerana a Story which has ſome Affinity with this. (d) Porthaile a famous Preacher preaching at Poictiers, and having heard of the Debaucheries of a Phyſician, named Lumeau, who tho' he had a Handſome Wife, could not be ſatisfied without change, pointing at him one Day, very pleaſantly in the Pulpit, when having ſpoke againſt this Vice in General, he came to Particulars, he ſaid, nay, we have heard with great concern, that there are ſome Men wl are ſo Proſligate, as to commit Adultery, tho' they have Wives in their own Houſes, who are ſuch that for our part, we ſhould be well enough contented with 'em.

(c) Hæc res & jungit, & junctos ſervat amicos. Horat. ſat. 3. l. 1.

(d) Scaligerana p. m. 192.

(DD) Some Men honoured Juno by pretending to Comb her.] What a Misfortune 'tis that we have not the Book, in which Seneca Condemn'd this little Superſtition, and many others like it. St. Auſtin has cited it. In Capitolium perveni, ſays Seneca (e), pudebit publicata dementiæ, quod ſibi vanus furor attribuit officii: alius nomina Deo ſubjicit, alius horas Jovi nunciat, alius lictor eſt, alius unctor. qui vano motu brachiorum imitatur ungentem. Sunt quæ Junoni ac Minervæ capillos diſponant, longè à templo non tantum à ſimulachro ſtantes, digitos movent ornantium modo. Sunt quæ ſpeculum ——— Sedent quædam in Capitolio, quæ ſe à Jove amari putant, nec Junonis quidem, ſi credere poëtis velis, iracundiſſimæ reſpectu terrentur. We may confirm this by a Paſſage taken from a Book, which is ſtill in Being. (f) Deum colit qui novit. Vetemus linteæ & ſtrigiles Jovi ferre, & ſpeculum tenere Junoni.

(e) Seneca contra ſuperſtitiones apud Auguſt. de civitate Dei l. 6. c. 10. p. m. 605.

(f) Seneca Epiſt. 95. p. m. 396.

(A) He Dethroned his own Father.] Saturn was dealt with according to the Lex Talionis, ſince he had Uſurp'd (g) the Empire of the World, which his Father Cælus Poſſeſt; but Jupiter was nevertheleſs guilty of a horrible Uſurpation: 'Tis not Lawful to puniſh one Crime by another; one can't abſolve himſelf by imitating the Wicked. 'Tis Remarkable that Cælus was betrayed by his own Wife; for it was the Earth (h), Heaven's Wife, who excited her Children to Rebel, and who put a Sickle into the Hands of the youngeſt (i) which he made uſe of to Geld him. Saturn who had committed that Exploit, was treated ſo exactly in the ſame manner; that Jupiter uſed the ſame Inſtrument (k) to cut off his Privy Parts, as he had uſe' for the Caſtration of Cælus. Note that Saturn's Party made a long Reſiſtance: It was not vanquiſhed till after ten years War (l). Saturn being Conquered, was loaded with Chains, and thrown into Tartarus, the darkeſt and deepeſt Dungeon of Hell. It was as remote from the Earth, as the Earth is from Heaven. (m)

(g) Natalis Comes, Mythol. l. 2. p. m. 86.

(h) Id. ib.

(i) Twas Saturn.

(k) Natalis Comes, Mythol. l. 2. p. m. 86.

(l) Apollodor. ib.

(m) Id. ib.

(a) Arnobius l. 4. p. m. 141.

(b) Imperium facile iis artibus retinetur quibus initio partum eſt. Salluſt. in Proœm. belli Catil.

own Father, that he caſtrated him, and bound him in Chains in the deepeſt Hell, he committed Inceſt (B) with his Siſters, Daughters, and Nurſes, and attempted to raviſh his Mother. He debauched abundance of Maids and Wives; and to compaſs his Deſigns, he borrowed the Shapes of all ſorts of Beaſts. He was guilty of the unnatural Sin; for he ſtole away Ganymede *, and preferred him to the Office of Cup-Bearer to the Gods, that he might have him at Hand, as often as his Heart deſired. Treacheries and Perjuries, and in general, all Actions that are puniſhable by the Laws, were familiar to him. The Heathens went ſo far, as to ſay; that (C) he devoured one of his Wives; and therefore nothing can be more monſtrous, than the Religion of the Pagans, who looked upon ſuch a God, as the Supreme Governour of the World, and ſuited to that Notion, the Religious Worſhip that was paid him. The Fathers of the Church have laid a great Streſs upon this Argument, to prove the Falſhood

* See the Article Ganymede.

† See the Proofs which Natalis Comes gives for it. Mythol. l. 1. c. 18. & Arnobius, quoted in the Rem. B.

(m) Τάρταρον δὲ ἔνερθε ἰδρύσατο ἐν δὲ ἀΐδαο πυλῶν ἐπὶ χαλκοῦ ἐλάσσαι, ὅσον τε σίδηρον. Is locus eſt ad Inferos tenebroſiſſimus, qui tantùm à terra diſtat, quantùm à cœlo terram abeſſe ferunt. The Chains were not very heavy; for they were made (n) of Wool. He had every Year ſome Days of Liberty allowed him, during the Saturnalia; a time in which Slaves were permitted to do what they pleaſed (o). Some ſay, that Saturn eſcaped from Priſon, and retired into Italy to King Janus. Others ſay, that his Son was contented only to expel him. Virgil is of this laſt Opinion.

Primus (p) ab æthetio venit Saturnus Olympo
Arma Jovis fugiens, & regnis exul ademptis.

But Statius is not, ſince he ſpeaks of the Liberty that was granted to Saturn once a Year.

Saturnus (q) mihi compede exoluta
Et multo gravidus mero December,
Et videns jocus, & ſales protervi
Adſint.

To which you may add theſe Words of Arnobius: (r) Numquid parricidii cauſa vinctum eſſe Saturnum, & ablui diebus ſtatis, vinculorum ponderibus & levari. I forgot to ſay, that after the compleat Victory that Jupiter's Party had obtained, Apollo ſung upon his Lyre a Poem which he had made in Praiſe of the Conquerors. Tibullus informs us of this Circumſtance in (ſ) an Elegy, which he inſcribes to Apollo.

Sed nitidus pulcerque veni, nunc indue veſtem
Sepoſitam, longas nunc bene pecte comas,
Qualem te memorant, Saturno rege fugato
Victori laudes concinuiſſe Jovi.

The beſt Allegories that may be found under theſe Fables, is to ſay, that the Antients meant by them (t) that Ambition ſtifles the Senſe of Nature, and the Duties of Friendſhip and Alliances, and that Poets and Orators are always ready to declare for the Party that is uppermoſt.

(B) He committed Inceſt with his Siſters, &c.] He lay with his Siſter Juno, without ſtaying till ſhe was his Wife, and afterwards married her. I ſpeak of it in another Place (v). He debauched his other Siſter Ceres, and had Proſerpina by her. He lay with three of his Aunts, namely, Themis, Dione, and Mnemoſyne. From his Inceſt with the firſt came the Horæ and the Parcæ: by the Second he begat Venus, by the Third the Nine Muſes (w). Seeing his Mother (x) one Day aſleep, he attempted to lie with her by Surprize; ſhe awaked, and put her ſelf in a Poſture of Defence; he made uſe of Force, and would probably have accompliſhed his abominable Deſign, if the Ardour of his Paſſion had not evaporated in his Struggle to overpower his Mother. Arnobius very juſtly exclaims upon it: (a) O rerum imaginatio indecora! ô habitus fœdus Jovis ad obſcœni certaminis expeditionem parati! Ergone ille rerum mundi, cum incautus & properus obreptionis eſſet rejectus à furto, in impetum ſe vertit: & quum rapere voluptatem inſidioſa fraude non quivit, vi matrem aggreſſus eſt, & apertiſſimè capit venerabilem ſubruere caſtitatem? Colluctatus ergo diutiſſimè cum invita eſt, victus, fractus, ſuperatuſque defecit: & quam pietas dijugare ab infando matris non valuit appetitu, effuſa libido dijunxit? He obſerves that the Heathens made Advantage of thoſe vain Efforts of Jupiter; for they ſaid, that a Stone grew with Child by him, and brought forth a Son Ten Months after. (b) Et fane hoc loco frugalitatis magnæ viri, & circa res etiam flagitioſi operis pareciores, ne ſancta illa ſeminia fruſtra videantur effuſa, ſilex, inquit, ebibit Jovialis incontinentiæ fœditatem. Quid deinde, quæſo, conſecutum eſt, dicite? In ſinu medio lapidis, atque in illa cotis duritie informatus atque animatus eſt infans, Jovis magni futura progenies, &c. Such a ſort of Propagation hath been obſerved about the Attempts Jupiter made to debauch his Daughter Venus. This Maid, who was otherwiſe ſo bountiful in her Favours to the other Sex, made a vigorous Reſiſtance to Jupiter. Arnobius makes mention of another wicked Attempt of Jupiter, wherein he ſucceeded. But 'tis according to the Opinion of thoſe, who ſaid that Ceres was his Mother. (d) Quondam Dieſpiter, inquiunt, cùm in Cererem ſuam matrem libidinibus improbis atque inconceſſis cupiditatibus æſtuaret, nam genitrix hæc Jovis regionis ejus ab accolis traditur, neque tamen auderet id, quod procaci appetitione conceperat, apertiſſima vi petere, ingenioſæ comminiſcitur captiones, quibus nihil tale metuentem caſtitate imminueret genitricem: ſit ex Deo taurus, & ſub pecoris ſpecie ſuſtollens animum atque audaciam celans; in ſecuram & neſcium repentina immittitur vi furens, agit ineſtius rei ſuæ, & prodita per libidinem fraude, intellectus, & cognitus evolat. Ceres was angry to little purpoſe; that Action made her big with Proſerpina, who went through the ſame Trial as her Mother: Jupiter got on a Maidenhead of Proſerpina his Daughter. (e) Quam (Proſerpinam) cùm verveceus Jupiter bene validam, floridam, & ſucci eſſe conſpiceret plenioris, oblitus paulo ante quid malorum & ſceleris eſſet aggreſſus, & temeritatis quantum, redit ad priores actus: & quia nefarium videbatur fatis, patrem cum filia comminus uxoria conjugatione miſceri, in draconis terribilem formam migrat: ingentibus ſpiris pavefactam colligat virginem, & ſub obtentu fero, molliſſimis ludit atque adulatur amplexibus. Meziriac (f) alledges many Authors, who ſay, that Jupiter, transformed into a Serpent, lay with his Daughter Proſerpina, by whom he got the Firſt Bacchus, ſirnamed Zagreus. I'll conclude this Remark with a Paſſage of Arnobius. (g) Quid tantum, quæſo, ſays he to the Heathens, de vobis Jupiter iſte, quicumque eſt, meruit, quod genus eſt nullum probri infame, adulterium nullum quod in ejus non caput, velut in aliquam congeratis vilem luteamque perſonam? This is to nonplus Paganiſm.

(C) That he devoured one of his Wives.] Heſiod obſerves, that the firſt Wife Jupiter married, was called Metis (h). Seeing her big with Child, he devoured her, and became himſelf big with Child by that Means, and afterwards lay in of Minerva. Gravidam factam deglutivit, ut ſcripſit Joannes Diaconus his verbis: Καὶ ἔχων ταύτην συνεκύησεν, καὶ τοῦτο μὲν αὐτὸν, ἵνα ἄλλο τις τῶν θεῶν ἀντιποιῆται μηδὲ εἷς. Vaſtis & devoravit: quam cùm gravidam feciſſet, deglutivit, ne quis alius Deorum naſceretur ex ea impudens ac fatuus. Ex eo cibo non ipſe Jupiter pro uxore gravidus factus Palladem armatam è capite peperit (i).

Since the firſt Edition of this Dictonary, I have more exactly examined this, and I have found, that Natalis Comes advances nothing, but what's grounded upon the Words of Joannes Diaconus, whom he cites. This Diaconus is a Greek and a Chriſtian Author, who compoſed Allegories and Scholia upon Heſiod's Poem, intituled Θεογονία, the Generation of

(n) Id. ib.
(o) Agathonymus in Perſide, apud Natal. Comitem, pag. 85.
(p) Age libertate Decembri, Quando ita majores voluerunt uteré. Horat. Sat. 7. lib. 2.
(p) Virgil. Æneid. lib. 8. verſ. 319.
(q) Statius Silva, 6. lib. 1.
(r) Lib. 4. p. m. 143.
(ſ) 'Tis the 5*th. of the* 2*d. Book.*
(t) Natalis Comes, who is very fond of Allegories, ſpeaks thus, pag. 85. Nulla ſunt enim vel amicitiæ, vel beneficentiæ ſatis firma vincula, ubi majeſtatis & imperandi furioſum deſiderium invaſerit: illa omnia ſiquidem facillimè conculcantur & proſternuntur.
(v) In the Remark A of the Article Juno.
(w) Heſiodus in Theogoni. Apollodor.
(x) Arnob. lib. 5. pag. 161.
(a) Arnob. ib. p. 162.
(b) Id. ib.
(d) Arnob. ibid. pag. 170.
(e) Ibid. pag. 171.
(f) Ubi ſupra, pag. 419. He quotes Nonnus, lib. 5. & 6. Arnobius, l. 5. Clem. Alexandrinus in Protrepti. co. Tzetzes upon Lycophron. The Scholiaſt upon Pindar, in 7. Iſthm. The Author of the Great Etymologicon, at the Word Ζαγρεύς. The Scholiaſt upon Ariſtophanes in Ran. Diodorus Siculus, l. 3. Arrianus, de expeditione Alexandri. Hyginus, chap. 159. & 157. Cicero, l. 3. de nat. Deor.
(g) Arnob. lib. 5. pag. 171.
(h) Ζεὺς δὲ Διὸς βουλὰς πυκινὰς πρώτην ἄλοχον Διὸς Μῆτιν. Uxorem primam Metim ſibi Jupiter addit. Heſiod in Theog. v. 886.
(i) Natal. Comes Mytholog. lib. 2. p. m. 90.

hood of the Pagan Religion; and it may be ſaid, that this Syſtem was very proper (D) to corrupt good Manners. I ſhall ſay nothing about the Fables, that concern the Birth or Education of Jupiter. Moreri has touched upon 'em; and this is to be found in a great many Books, that Scholars have daily in their Hands. I ſhall only ſpeak of the Eagle (E) that brought him Nectar. This Particular is not ſo common of the Gods. He poſitively ſays, that Jupiter having ſwallowed his Wife Metis, brought forth Minerva, ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ κεφαλὴν ἔχουσαν καὶ περικεφαλαίαν καὶ τὰ ὅπλα τὰ πολεμικά. He makes uſe of theſe Words immediately after thoſe contained in the Paſſage of Natalis Comes, which I have alledged; and thereby he manifeſtly declares, that he would have it thought that Minerva ſprung from Jupiter's Head, becauſe Metis being big, had been devour'd by Jupiter her Husband. But Heſiod does not lead us to this Thought, nor does he ſo much as inſinuate, that the Tragical end of Metis contributed to the Birth of Minerva. Here is the Sum of his Narrative; (k) Metis, Jupiter's firſt Wife, was ready to be delivered of Minerva, but Jupiter prevented her; he uſed a flattering Diſcourſe, which deceived her, and ſwallow'd her in his Belly. Celus and the Earth had given him this Advice, and had cautioned him, that unleſs he did it, he would loſe his Scepter, ſince the Deſtinies declared, that Metis after ſhe had brought the Wife Minerva into the World, ſhould Lye-in of a brave Boy, who ſhould rule over the Gods and Men. Jupiter avoided the fatal Blow (l); he included Metis in his Bowels, before ſhe became a Mother; he ſhut her up, I ſay, that ſhe might foretel him Good and Evil. He afterwards married Themis, by whom he had many Children; he had alſo many by his Miſtreſſes. He had by Eurynome the Daughter of Oceanus, the Three Graces; afterwards he lay with Ceres, who brought forth Proſerpina. After this he fell in Love with Mnemoſyne, and made her the Mother of the Nine Muſes. He had by Latona a Son and a Daughter, namely Apollo and Diana, and at laſt he married Juno, who brought him Three Children, Hebe, Mars, and Lucina; and as for himſelf, he conceived Minerva in his Head, and was delivered of her. Thus you ſee, that if Heſiod had intended his Readers ſhould think, that he meant that this Birth of Minerva was an Effect of Metis's being ſwallowed in Jupiter's Belly, he had done all that was neceſſary to fruſtrate his Intention; for he puts betwixt this Effect, and this Cauſe, ſuch an Interval as leads our Thoughts to quite another thing from his Intention. Let us ſay then, that he had no ſuch Intention, or elſe, that he had the ſhameful Art of giving a wrong Account of a Thing, and expreſſing it obſcurely. Note, that if the Nineteen Verſes which we find in one of Galen's Works (m), were Heſiod's, we could not blame this Poet for being too obſcure. It plainly appears from them, that the ſame Pallas, who was born from Jupiter's Head, was conceived in Metis's Womb. But it ought to be obſerved, that ſhe was not conceived, till after Metis had been ſwallow'd up by Jupiter. This is a Variation, which deſerves to be taken notice of. I add, that 'tis not probable, theſe are Heſiod's Verſes; for if they were, there would be in his Poem of the Generation of the Gods, a Gap which the Criticks don't complain of. Galen is ſomewhat to blame, for not putting it out of doubt, whether the Pronoun ὁ αὐτὸς ipſe, which precedes the Nineteen Verſes, refers to Heſiod or Chryſippus. I believe it relates to the latter, and that this great Philoſopher, after he had produced Heſiod's Verſes concerning Metis, cited thoſe of another Poet, in which the Conception of Minerva was deſcribed ſomewhat differently. If you aſk me, to what end Chryſippus alledged theſe Verſes of Heſiod, and the others, I anſwer, that it was to ſhew, that his Opinion concerning the Seat of the rational Soul, was not contrary to the Tradition of the Birth of Minerva. He placed the rational Soul in the Heart, and yet Minerva, that is Reaſon and Wiſdom, was born from Jupiter's Brain. This was the Objection Chryſippus examined; he took Advantage of the Circumſtance of Minerva's being conceived by Metis, after ſhe was ſwallowed by Jupiter, and he maintained, that this ſignified, that Reaſon was formed in the Breaſt, and that the Delivery of Minerva ſignified Speech, that is to ſay, that Reaſon proceeds from the Head, inaſmuch as the Mouth is the Organ, by which the Thoughts conceived in the Heart, are outwardly produced. Galen (n) thinks it very ſtrange, that Chryſippus ſhould trouble himſelf to give a ſerious Explication of Poetical Traditions. He cannot be too much blamed for ſpending his Time ſo ill.

(n) Ll. iii. pag. 133.

(D) That this Syſtem was very proper to corrupt good (a) Manners.] 'Chriſtian Authors (b) have 'drawn Potent Arguments from theſe infamous 'Actions of Jupiter, to convict the Heathens of 'the Falſity of their Gods; as may be ſeen in 'many Places of Lactantius, Tertullian, Clemens 'Alexandrinus, Arnobius, and many others. For 'beſides that ſo horrid Crimes are inconſiſtent with 'the Deity, the Gentiles might thence take a juſt 'Excuſe for giving themſelves up to all ſorts of 'Wickedneſs——not believing themſelves Criminal, whilſt they imitated their Gods. This is 'what Ion means in a Tragedy of Euripides, that 'bears his Name.

(a) See the Art. Arnauld in the Diſſ. Denunciation du peché Philoſophique, p. 32.

(b) Mezirac upon Ovid. pag. 419, 420.

'... Οὐκ ἐν ἀνθρώποις κακὰ
'Αἰσχρὰ δίκαια, κἂν ἐν οὐρανῷ νέμῃ
'Μισῶ γὰρ, εἰκὼς τοὺς θεοὺς κρείσσους κακοὺς.

'Il ne faut point blaſmer les hommes malfaiſans
'S'ils imitent les Dieux, mais rejetter le blaſme
'Sur ceux dont les forfaits leur ſervent de patron.

Mezirius makes this Reflection upon a Paſſage of Ovid, where Thadra (c) obſerves, that Inceſt was ſcrupled in the ruſtical Time of Saturn, but that under the Reign of his Succeſſor, a Woman might be permitted to lie with her Son-in-Law. Jupiter, ſays ſhe, authoriſes all by his Marriage with his Siſter.

(c) In Epiſt. ad Hippolytum.

Nec quia privigno videar coitura noverca,
Terruerint animos nomina vana tuos.
Iſta vetus pietas, aevo moritura futuro
Ruſtica Saturno regna tenente, fuit.
Jupiter eſſe pium ſtatuit quodcunque juvarat,
Et fas omne facit fratre marita ſoror.

Ovid (d) falls here into a very groſs Miſtake, ſince it is certain that Saturn was married to his Siſter, juſt as Jupiter was to his. One might add to the Paſſage of Euripides, quoted by Mezirius, a Hundred others of the ſame force. Nothing is more common in the antient Poets, than to ſee People, in order to excuſe their Crimes, maintain, that they have only imitated the Gods, or that the Gods have inſtigated them to do Evil (e). But not to diſſemble the Truth, it muſt be ſaid to the Glory of the Heathens, that they did not live according to their Principles. 'Tis true, that the Corruption of Manners was very great among the Heathen; but many of 'em did not follow the Example of their falſe Gods, and preferred the Ideas of Vertue before ſo great an Authority. What is ſtrange is, that the Chriſtians, whoſe Syſtem is ſo pure, come not little behind the Heathens in their Vices. 'Tis a Miſtake to believe, that the Morals of a Religion anſwer the Doctrines of a Confeſſion of Faith.

(d) Mezirac, p. 419. makes this Obſervation.

(e) See the Article of Helena, Remark B.

(E) Of the Eagle that brought him Nectar.] A Woman nam'd Moero, Author of a Poem (f), intituled Memory, ſays, that Jupiter, unknown to all the Gods, was bred up in a Cave in the Iſle of Crete, by Pigeons that brought him Ambroſia, and by an Eagle that brought him Nectar. The Ambroſia came from the Ocean, and the Nectar was drawn from a Stone. Jupiter having dethroned Saturn, immortaliz'd this Eagle, and tranſlated it into the Skies:

(f) Athen. lib. 15. pag. 490.

Νίκτωρ δ' ἐκ πέτρης μέλιτος πίνε δώρα θεοῖσι.
Ἐμμελέως πρέπουσα (πάλαι δ' ἦν μοῦνος ἀλήτης)
Τὴν ὑπὸ κευθμῶνι πετρίνῳ κρύπτε Ζεύς.
Ἀμβροσίην δ' ἔτρεφον περιστερεαὶ (g).

(g) Ll. ib. pag. 491.

(k) Heſiod. in Theog. v. 887. & ſeq.

(l) Αὐτὰρ ἐπεὶ δὴ Ζεὺς ὑπερμενὴς ἐν ἑοῖσι μήδεσι θῆκε θεὰν ἐπιειμένην ἠΰτε πατρὸς
Ἀθηναίης, ἐπὶ δ' ἔργα καὶ ἀμήχανα τεύχειν.
Sed illam ſane Jupiter ante in ſuum condidit ventrem, Ut nempe ei indicaret dea bonumque malumque. Il. ib. v. 895.

(m) Galenus de Hippocr. & Platonis placitis, lib. 3. c. 8. pag. 231. edit. Pariſ. 1679.

mon. Mr. Charpentier does not faithfully (F) relate a Thing, for which he quotes Homer. What the Heathens have said of Jupiter's Original, seemed to me for a long time so unaccountable, that the more I thought of it, the more monstrous it appeared to me, and such, in a Word, as I could not apprehend how the Philosophers could maintain it; but I have at last discovered, that they might be led (G) into that Error, by a sort of Reasoning, the Weakness whereof it was no easie thing for them to find out. They did not believe, that any thing could be created, and acknowledged no Substances wholly distinct from Extension. Now when once these two Hypotheses are laid down, 'tis almost as easie to imagine, that a subtilized Matter might become a God, as to believe the Soul of Man to be Material, as most Philosophers believed. See the Remark G. There was in Arcadia a Temple of God the Good. Pausanias

Nectar verò ex saxo ingenti aquila semper hauriens,
Advolans portabat consulto prudentique Jovi.
Eam ob rem patre Saturno Juppiter altisonus,
Immortalitate donatam, in cœlo habitare voluit.

(F) Mr. Charpentier does not faithfully relate.] I speak of Mr. Charpentier of the French Academy. He expected to harangue the King at the Head of the Academy, after the taking of Mons; but that Prince would have no Harangue at that time. That of Mr. Charpentier was inserted in the Mercure Galant for the Month of May, 1691. We read in it, that the King is like Homer's Jupiter, against whom all the other Gods are united, and who after having upbraided them with the Vanity of their Design, shews 'em by Experience, that his Force is not to be shaken; and whilst they all shoot at him, he lifts 'em up altogether with the Globe of the Earth. By his leave, Jupiter in Homer (b) does not put this in Practice; he only boasts of it, and threatens to do it.

(b) See the 8th. Book of the Iliad, at the beginning.

The other Gods were not persuaded, that his Boasts were well grounded: They only believed, that in a Single Combat he would be too hard for 'em. His Menace appeared ridiculous to Mars, who remembred, that it was not long since Neptune, Juno, and Minerva, having undertaken to seize him, and bind him, put him into a horrible Fright, and had actually bound him, if Thetis had not had Pity of him, and called to his Relief Briareus with his Hundred Hands (i). If Mr. Charpentier had known the Satyrical Wit of our Libellers, he would probably have abstained from Comparisons. He would have thought on Lucian.

(i) Taken from Lucian in Deorum dialogis pag. 173, 174. tom. 1. See Homer Iliad. lib. 1. v. 398. & seq.

(G) They might be led into this Error, by a sort of Reasoning.] Let us see first of all, what Hesiod says of the Genealogy of the Gods. He (k) begins with the Chaos; this is the first Being he lays down; afterwards he brings in the Earth and Love: he adds, that Erebus and the Night were begotten by the Chaos, and that Æther and the Day proceeded from the Marriage of Erebus, and Night; and that the Earth, without any Marriage begot Heaven and the Sea, and afterwards being married to Coelus, she produced Oceanus, Rhea, Themis, Tethys, Saturn, &c. This extraordinary fruitful Marriage gave but little Comfort to the Earth; for Heaven her Husband shut up all her Children as fast as they were born. She incouraged 'em to Revenge, and did it so effectually, that Saturn (l) with a Stroak of a Sythe cut off his Father's nameless Parts, and cast 'em into the Sea. They produc'd a Froth, from which sprung the Goddess Venus. The Children of Saturn and Rhea, were Vesta, Ceres, Juno, Pluto, Neptune, Jupiter. This is what I take from Hesiod's Poem. Some other Genealogists said (n), that Æther and the Day, Children of Erebus and of the Night, were the Father and Mother of Cœlus, and had for their Brothers and Sisters, Love, Fraud, Fear, Labour, Envy, Destiny, Old Age, Death, Darkness, Misery, Dreams, &c. We have seen in another Place how Carneades made use of this Genealogy to confute the Theology of the Stoicks. I shall only say now, that according to this Tree of Consanguinity, there must have been necessarily some Gods, whose Fathers were not Gods; for if on one Hand it had been granted to Carneades, that Heaven, Æther, the Day, Erebus, the Night, were Gods, they would have denied on the other, that the Chaos, which was antecedent to all these Divine Beings, was a God, and consequently they were forced to say, that the Gods had been made of a Matter, which was not a God, and without an efficient Cause which had the Nature of a God. This is certainly a Thought, which contradicts the most solid and the most evident Notions of Natural Reason; nevertheless, some great Philosophers have supposed the Generation of the Gods, and have assigned them a Cause of their Being, which was not a God. (p) Anaximenes omnes rerum causas infinito aeri dedit, nec deos negavit aut tacuit: non tamen ab ipsis aerem factum, sed IPSOS EX AERE ORTOS credidit. By which Words of St. Augustin, we better understand the Doctrine of Anaximenes, than by these of Cicero: Anaximenes aera deum statuit, eumque gigni, effique immensum & infinitum, & semper in motu (q). Cicero does not seem to have well related the Opinion of this Philosopher; for since Anaximenes made the Air the Principle of all things, and ascribed to it Immensity and Infinity, we must believe, that he supposed it eternal, and unproduced, and that if he called it God under this Notion, he did not believe the Generation of God on that respect. When therefore he said, that the infinite Air was the cause of all Beings, and that the Gods themselves were produced from it, he did not ascribe to it the Name and Nature of God, in the same Sence, that he ascribed it to the Gods, which owed their Origin and Existence to the Air. Perhaps he meant this: He was willing, in order to avoid all Disputes about Words, to give the Name of God to the immense and infinite Air, which he looked upon as the Principle of all Things; but he did not pretend, that Saturn, Rhea, Jupiter, Juno, Neptune, Minerva, and the other Gods, which the Heathens adored, were that Air, or had produced it: He supposed on the contrary, that that Air was their Principle, as well as that of other Beings which compose the Universe. He gave this Principle a perpetual Motion, from whence it may be concluded, that he took it for an immanent Cause, which produced in it self infinite Effects, without end; and he reckoned amongst those Effects, not only the Stars and Meteors, Plants, Stones and Metals, but also the Gods and Men. Such a Doctrine was at the bottom a meer Spinozism; for according to this Opinion, God, or the eternal and necessary Being of Anaximenes, was the only Substance, of which Heaven and Earth, the Animals, &c. were but Modifications. Thales perhaps was of such an Opinion, who taught that Water (a) was the Principle of all things. Perhaps he called it God on that Account. This was the God he meant, when he said (b), that God having not been produced, was the eldest of all Beings. He added, that the World (c) being the Work of God, was the noblest of all Beings. Spinoza would acknowledge this; he does not deny that God is the cause of all Things, that is to say, the immanent Cause, which modifies it self a thousand different Ways, from whence results what we call the World, and the whole Universe in General. If Thales said also (d) that the World is animated, and full of Spirits, this signified perhaps, that Water, the Principle of all things, the unproduced God, had so modified it self, that it had formed a Soul dispersed through all Bodies, and particular Spirits like the Gods, which were adored by the Heathens. This would help us to comprehend, what we have seen elsewhere (e), and which is doubtless very surprizing, namely, that Thales, and the other Naturalists, who lived before Anaxagoras, explained the Generation of the World, without interposing the Direction of a Divine Intelligence. Thales and Anaximenes could not mention it, if they supposed, the one that Water,

(k) Hesiod de Deor. genesat. v. 116.

(l) Id. ib. v. 180.

(m) Id. ib. v. 453.

(n) See Cicero de natura Deorum lib. 3. pag. m. 625.

(p) Augustin. de civit. Dei lib. 8. cap. 2. pag. m. 711.

(q) Cicero de natura Deorum, lib. 1. pag. m. 38.

(a) Diog. Laert. lib. 1. n. 27.

(b) Ὑμνοθεόλογοι τῶν ὕδωρ, φησὶ, ἀρχὴν ὑπολαβόντων, καὶ ἐξ ὕδατος πάντα γεγονέναι. Antiquissimum quidem omnium quæ sunt, Deus; ingenitus enim. Pulcherrimum mundus; à Deo enim factus est. Id. ibid. n. 35.

(c) See the foregoing Quotation

(d) Τὸν κόσμον ἔμψυχον καὶ δαιμόνων πλήρη. Animatum mundum ac dæmonibus plenum. Id. ib. n. 27. See also Aristotle de anima, lib. 1, c. 5.

(e) In the Remark D of the Article Anaxagoras.

nius Conjectures that it was consecrated to Jupiter: His reason is because (H) that Epithet belongs by way of Pre-eminence to the greatest of the Gods. 'Tis certain that Jupiter's Goodness was denoted by many Sirnames, under which he was adored. But (I) he was likewise adored under many Names, which shewed how Terrible he was

Water, and the other, that Air was the Principle of all Things, a Principle Eternal, and unproduc'd; for tho' to avoid Contention about Words, they called this Universal and Uncreated Principle, God, they could not consider it as an intelligent Cause antecedently to the particular Beings, which it formed, since it produc'd 'em in it self, and from it self, as an immanent Cause, and not as a Cause External, and Distinct from its Matter. But because Anaxagoras was the first who Acknowledged a Spirit Distinct from the Matter of the World, a pure Spirit, and unmixt with Body, he must have reasoned otherwise than the Naturalists his Predecessors: He might say, that the World had been formed by the Direction of a Spirit, that disentangled and put the Parts of Matter into order. His Hypothesis admitted an Intelligence antecedent to the formation of the World; the other Systems supposed nothing before the World, except the Chaos, or Water or Air, &c. And so they were to give a beginning to intelligent Beings, as well as to the courser Creatures. All things proceeded from the first Principle by way of Generation or Production. Jupiter the greatest of the Gods, Saturn his Father, and Cœlus his Grandfather, Æther his Great Grandfather, and all the Genealogy upwards, was a particular Being, which owed its Origin, Birth, and Existence to Eternal and Uncreated Matter, the Principle of all Things, to the Chaos according to Hesiod, to Water according to Thales, and to Air according to Anaximenes. But, you'll say, did not Thales (g) Acknowledge, that the Gods knew the very Thoughts of Men? I Answer, that we can only conclude from it, that he ascribed a vast extent of Knowledge to some of the Beings, which the Water had produc'd, and which were called Jupiter, Juno, Venus, Neptune, &c. Note that Homer, who so Pompously describes the Power of the Gods, says, they all proceeded from the Ocean.

(g) Ἱστορεῖ τις αὐτὸν καὶ λέξαι πρὸς τὸν ἐπόμενον ἐρόμενον. Ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ἐκεῖνος ἐποίησεν. Interrogatus interest ne Deos homo male agens: ne cogitans quidem, inquit. Laert. ib.

Τὸν (h) τε θεῶν γένεσιν ἠδὲ μητέρα Τηθύν.

Oceanumque Deorum parentem & matrem Tethyn.

(h) Homer. Il. l. 14. v. 201.

The great and prodigious Absurdity of those Systems consists in saying, that the Gods adorn'd with great Knowledge were form'd from a Principle, which knows nothing; for neither the Chaos, nor the Air, are thinking Beings. How then could they be the total Cause of those Divine Natures, who in the System of the Poets, and of the most Antient Naturalists, knew so many things? But tho' those Systems be never so False and Absurd, I no longer wonder, as I did, how they could be admitted by Philosophers. Most of 'em (i) suppos'd that the Soul of Man was Corporal. They believed therefore, that it was formed of the subtilest Parts of the Blood, or of the Seed. Now when once this Step is made, one may go a great way in a little time. Set Experience aside; consult only the Ideas of the Theory, and it will not appear more easie for Matter received in the Womb to be converted into a Child, who by Eating and Drinking grows into a Man of great Understanding, than for a Child to be Born of a Tree. Then a Heathen thinks it possible, that at the beginning Men should have been Born either from the Mud of the Earth, or from some Liquor dropt from Heaven. When this seems to be possible, 'tis easie to go on, and to believe what the Poets did of the Birth of Venus. It is no longer thought strange, that by the Fermentation which cleared the Chaos, or formed the different Degrees of Rarefaction and Condensation in the infinite Extension, the Stars should begin to Exist in the Firmament, and the Gods in Heaven, as Plants and Animals on the Globe of the Earth. The common Opinion of the Heathens about the Divine Nature made but some difference betwixt the Gods and Men. Now consequently to this, nothing hinder'd them from imagining, that the finest and subtilest parts of Matter had constituted the Gods, since those which remained Massive and Gross, and which as the Lees and Sediment of all, had Compos'd the Earth, were nevertheless converted into Men. Note, that they thought, that some Spirituous Particles falling from Heaven, were sufficient to Animate these Gross and Terrestrial Parts: hence it is that Lucretius Acknowledged that living Bodies have a Celestial Original.

Denique (m) cœlesti sumus omnes semine oriundi:
Omnibus ille idem Pater est, unde alma liquentes
Humorum guttas Mater cum Terra recepit,
Fœta parit nitidas fruges, arbustaque læta,
Et genus humanum, & parit omnia sæcla ferarum,
Pabula cum præbet, quibus omnes corpora pascunt,
Et dulcem ducunt vitam, prolemque propagant.
Quapropter merito Maternum nomen adepta est.

(m) Lucret. l. 2. v. 990. To which may be added these Words of Virgil Georg. l. 2. v. 325. Tum pater omnipotens fœcundis imbribus Æther Conjugis in gremium lætæ descendit, & omnes Magnus alit magno commixtus corpore fœtus.

We may infer from all this that there is nothing more dangerous or contagious, than to lay down a false Principle. 'Tis a bad Leaven, which tho' it be but small, may spoil the whole Lump. One Absurdity once laid down draws after it many others. If you are only in an Error about the Nature of the Humane Soul; if you falsly think that 'tis not a substance Distinct from Extension; that falsity will lead you to believe that there are Gods, who at first were Born from Fermentation, and afterwards Multiplied by Marriage. I can't conclude, without observing a thing at which I am Amazed. Nothing appears to me grounded upon clearer and more distinct Ideas than the Immateriality of every thinking Being, and yet some Christian Philosophers maintain, that Extension is capable of Thought; and they are Philosophers of great Parts, and of a most profound Meditation. Can we depend after this on the clearness of Ideas? But, don't these Philosophers see, that upon such a Foundation the Antient Heathens might Err so far as to say, that all intelligent Substances, had a Beginning, and that Eternally there was nothing besides Matter? This was the Opinion of the Philosopher Anaximenes, as we have seen above. 'Twas also the Doctrine of Anaximander (o) his Master. This Inconvenience cannot be prevented by this Corrective; namely that Matter becomes Thinking, only by a parte that Gift of God. It would be true, notwithstanding, that it is naturally susceptible of Thought; and that to make it actually Thinking, it suffices to put it in motion, or to order its Parts in a certain manner. from whence it follows, that an Eternal, Unintelligent, but moveable Matter might have produced both Gods and Men, as the Poets and some Heathen Philosophers have Foolishly given out.

(n) Anaximander infinitam naturæ dixit esse Cyprum unde gigni omnia. Cicero Academ. quæst. l. 2. fol. 211. B. Anaximandri opinio est nativos esse Deos, longis temporum intervallis Orientes, Occidentesque. Id. de natura Deor. l. 1. p. m. 36.

(H) That Epithet belongs——to the greatest of the Gods.] This thought of Pausanias seems to me to be very good, and I think it will not be amiss to set down this Passage. (a) Ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ ἐς τὸν Δία τὸν Ἀγραῖον καὶ τὸν Ἀθηναίων βασιλέα, καὶ ἐς ἄλλους ὅσοις Διὸς ἐπίκλησίς ἐστιν ἐπὶ τῷ μεγέθει τῆς δυνάμεως, ταύτῃ δὲ ἐπιβλέπων Διὸς ἐστὶν ὀνόματα ἐν τοῖς πᾶσιν ἐπὶ τῷ αὐτῷ τοῦτο δεῖν τιθέμενον. Ad ejus vis lavam Boni Dei ades est. Quod si dii hominibus bonorum autores sunt, deorum vero supremus est Jupiter, recte quidem hoc Jovis maxime proprium cognomen esse conjicere posse. See in the Article (b) Pericles several Collections concerning the Notions which the Heathens had of the Goodness of Jupiter, and of the other Gods.

(a) Pausan. l. 8. c. 30. p. 673.

(I) Jupiter's Goodness was denoted——But he was likewise adored——Nay, his Quality of Thunderer was denoted by the bare Idea.] These two sorts of Epithets have been observed by Lucian. (c) Ὦ Ζεῦ σωτὴρ, ἢ ξένιε, ἢ ἑταιρεῖε, ἢ ἀγοραῖε, ἢ ὁμόγνιε, ἢ ὁμοσπόνδιε, ἢ ἱκεσίε, ἢ εἴ τι σοι ἄλλο ἐπίκλησιν ἀπὸ τῶν ἔργων ἔχεις. O Jupiter Philie, hospitalis, sodalitie, domestice, fulgurator, juramenti præses, nubicoge, grandistrepe, & si quod aliud tibi cognomen attoniti pœtæ tribuunt. Jupiter appears there first as the Protector of Friendship, as an Hospitable, Familiar, and Domestick God; and afterwards as the God of Thunder and Lightning. You'll find in

(b) In the Remark L.

(c) Lucian. in Timone init. p. 57. tom. 1.

Pyr-

was. Nay, his Quality of Thunderer was denoted by the bare Idea of his Deſcent upon Earth. There were ſome Places, wherein 'tis ſaid he required (K) Humane Sacrifices. I ſhall ſay in another place *, that the Book Intituled Cymbalum mundi contains a great deal of Mirth upon Jupiter's Actions; but I queſtion whether 'tis poſſible to go farther than Arnobius on ſuch a Subject. The quickneſs of his Imagination flows like a Torrent, and as he had lately been a profeſt Rhetorician, there are no Colours nor Figures but what he adorns his Style with. I relate in ſeveral places of this Dictionary ſome of his Thoughts, and I have mention'd in one of 'em his Jeſt upon Jupiter for ſpending nine Nights in getting a Boy, who wanted only one to get fifty Maids with Child. There is ſome probability that his Memory failed him. He had Read that Jupiter ſpent nine Nights (L) in the Production of the Muſes, and he applied this to a quite different Subject, I mean, to the Adventures of Alcmena. Authors, who have a quick and lively Fancy, are Subject to the like Miſtakes. Jupiter made Love both in Heaven and upon Earth, he took all that came, whether Goddeſſes or Women; 'twas all one to him. Arnobius did not forget this, and obſerved that the Bodies of Mortal Women, (M) tho' Tranſparent with reſpect to Jupiter, had yet ſufficient Charms to Inſpire him with a Lewd Paſſion. 'Tis not improper to obſerve, that the Ridiculous Stories, which the Poets had vented concerning that God, ſerved as a Foundation for the Pagan Religion, and that ſome Grave Men indeavoured to explain 'em either Allegorically

* In the Article Periers.

Pauſanias in what Places he was Adored under the name of Mild, (d) μειλίχιος, the diſtributer of good things, (e) ἐπιβάτης, &c. and under the Name of Thunderer, (f) κεραύνιος. His Title of καταιβάτης is not leſs common both in Books and upon Medals. It ſignifies only deſcendens, if we conſider the Grammar of it; but uſe has Determined it to the Action of Thundering. You need only Read the Diſſertation (g) which Mr. Burman has Publiſhed at Utrecht, to be convinced, that this is the Notion, under which Jupiter καταιβάτης was honoured. Not that it was believed, that he never Deſcended upon Earth, but to Puniſh and to Thunder; but they thought fit at laſt to ſettle the ſignification of it; either becauſe of the Maxim, à majori, or à nobiliori parte ſumitur denominatio, or for other Reaſons. The French have ſaid in one of their Opera's

Jupiter vient ſur la terre
Pour la combler de bienfaits:
Il eſt armé du tonnerre;
Mais c'eſt pour donner la paix.

(d) Pauſan. l. 1. c. 37. p. 90. l. 2. c. 9. p. 132. & c. 20. p. 154.
(e) Id. l. 8. c. 9. p. 616.
(f) Id. l. 5. c. 14. p. 412.
(g) Intituled Jovis epithetorum, ſive Jupiter fulgurator.

I know not whether they have found that Notion in the Monuments of Antiquity that are Extant.

(K) He required Humane Sacrifices.] There was ſcarce any Temple of Jupiter, more Celebrated than that which was built on Mount Lycæus in Arcadia. The Tradition of the Country imported (h) that he was Educated upon that Mountain by three Nymphs, one whereof gave her Name to a Fountain, which had a wonderful Property; for when any long Drought waſted the Fruits of the Earth, they never failed of a plentiful Rain, provided the Prieſt of Jupiter Lycæus threw an Oaken Branch upon the Surface of that Fountain, after the Requiſite Prayers and Sacrifices (i). There was upon the ſame Mountain, a Court conſecrated to this God, and famous for wonderful Qualities; for the Men and the Beaſts, that went into it, caſt no Shade. Every Body was forbidden to ſet his Foot into it; and if any had the boldneſs to go in notwithſtanding the Prohibition, he neceſſarily Died before the year was expired. Arcas having purſued as far as that Place the Bear, into which his Mother was Metamorphoſed, had been put to Death with her, if Jupiter had not placed 'em among the Stars. (k) In ſilvis cum venaretur (Arcas) inſcius vidit matrem in urſæ ſpeciem converſam, quam interficere cogitans, perſecutus eſt in Jovis Lycæi templum: quo & qui acceſſiſſet, mors pœna erat Arcadum lege. Itaque cum utrumque neceſſe eſſet interfici, Jupiter eorum miſertus, ereptos inter ſidera collocavit. St. Auſtin informs us of what concerns the Sacrifices of Children. (l) Nominatim expreſſit (Varro) quendam Demænetum, quum guſtaſſet de ſacrificio, quod Arcades immolato puero deo ſuo Lycæo facere ſolerent, in lupum fuiſſe mutatum, & anno decimo in figuram propriam reſtitutum, ad pugillatum ſeſe exercuiſſe, & Olympiaco viciſſe certamine. This Sacrifice had a ſtrange Virtue, it Metamorphoſ'd thoſe who taſted it into Wolves. Porphyrius (m) obſerves, that the cuſtom of Sacrificing Men in Arcadia at the Feaſt of the Lupercalia, remain'd in his time. Note by the by, that (n) Saturn was not the only Deity that Delighted in Humane Victims. Jupiter his Son would not Degenerate in that reſpect.

(h) Pauſan. l. 8. c. 38. p. 678.
(i) Id. ib.
(k) Hygin. in Aſtronomico c. 4. p. m. 502. See alſo c. 2. p. 357.
(l) Auguſt. de civit. Dei l. 18. c. 17. p. m. 580.
(m) Porphyr. l. de non edendis animal.

(L) That Jupiter ſpent nine Nights in the Production of the Muſes.] Mnemoſyne, Saturn's Siſter, (o) having lain nine Nights together with Jupiter her Nephew, Lay-in of the nine Muſes upon Mount Pierius.

Τὰς (p) ἐν Πιερίῃ Κρονίδῃ τέκε πατρὶ μιγεῖσα Μνημοσύνη . . . . .
. . . . . .
Ἐννῆμαρ οἱ πάλλας ἐμήσατο μητίετα Ζεύς,
Νόσφιν ἀπ' ἀθανάτων, εἰς ἱερὸν λέχος εἰσαναβαίνων.
Ἀλλ' ὅτε δὴ περίμετρος ἐην, περὶ δ' ἔτραπον ὧραι
Μηνῶν φθινόντων, περὶ δ' ἤματα πόλλ' ἐτελέσθη,
Τὴ δ' ἔτεκ' ἐννέα κούρας ὁμόφρονας, ἦτορ ἐπ' αὐτὸ
Μολπῆς ἐμμελέης.

(o) Heſiod. in Theogon. v. 135.
(p) Id. ib. v. 53.

Quæ in Pieria Saturnio peperit patri mixta Mnemoſyne.
. . . . . .
Novem enim ei noctes mixtus eſt prudens Jupiter,
Seorſim ab immortalibus, ſacrum lectum conſcendens.
Sed cum jam annus exactus, circumvoluta vero eſſent tempora
Menſium decreſcentium, dieſque multi tranſacti eſſent,
Ipſa peperit novem filias concordes, quibus carmen Cura eſt.

A Scholiaſt upon Heſiod pretends that Mnemoſyne was Jupiter's Daughter; but 'tis not thus that the Words of that Poet ought to be underſtood. The ſame Scholiaſt propoſes a doubt to himſelf: How, ſays he, could Hercules get fifty one Sons in a Night, whilſt Jupiter ſtood in need of nine Days to beget the nine Muſes? He anſwers, that Jupiter not being Ignorant, that the love of the Muſes arrives ſlowly to its perfection, reſolved to make uſe of a perfect number. If this Scholiaſt deſerves no Commendation for the Solidity of his Thoughts, he at leaſt deſerves to be praiſed for his Brevity upon a Subject, that might have afforded an Allegoriſt Infinite Obſervations and Moral Precepts.

(M) Arnobius——obſerved that the Bodies of Mortal Women, tho' tranſparent with reſpect to Jupiter, had ſufficient Charms.] Perhaps, ſays he, his Adulteries might be Tolerated, if he had minded only the Goddeſſes; but what could he find worthy of him in Humane Bodies? Ought he not to have an Averſion for thoſe Objects, which are under the Skin, and which are not hid from his piercing Eyes? Ought not the Sight to produce in him the ſame diſguſt, which the bare Imagination can produce in all others? (a) Et tolerari forſitan malestractatio hæc poſſet, ſi cum ſaltem perſonis conjungeretis comparibus, & adulter à vobis immortalium conſtitueretur deorum. In humanis verò corporibus quidnam tically (N) or Pyhſically; but their Labour was as Ridiculous as that of the Poets, and terminated very often in ſerious Impieties. See the Remark N, where I ſhall ſpeak of thoſe who ſaid that Juno was the Air, and Jupiter the Æther.

(n) See the Penſées diverſes ſur les Comettes n. 69.
(x) Arnob. l. 4. p. m. 142.

JUSTINIANI, (Auguſtin) Biſhop of Nebbio in the Iſle of Corſica, was Born at Genoa in the year 1470. He became a Dominican the 25*th*. of April 1487, and applied himſelf to his Studies with ſo much Earneſtneſs, and under ſuch able Maſters, that he became a very Learned Man. He underſtood Philoſophy, Mathematicks, Divinity, Greek, Hebrew, Arabick, and Chaldee. He Taught in the Province of Lombardy eighteen years with great Advantage to his Hearers; he was made Biſhop of Nebbio the fifteenth of November 1514, at the Recommendation of Cardinal Bendinello Saoli his Couſin, and Receiv'd his Bulls before he knew the good Offices this Cardinal had done him. He aſſiſted at the Council of Lateran, and oppoſed ſome Articles of the Concordate agreed upon between France and the Court of Rome. Nevertheleſs Francis I. invited him to Paris, and made him his Almoner. He made uſe of this Prelate's great Skill to ſet up the Study of the Oriental Tongues in the Univerſity of Paris. Juſtiniani finding himſelf ſo near England, took a Voyage thither, and was very much nam quæſo inerat pulchritudinis, quid decoris, quod invitare, quod flectere oculos poſſet in ſe Jovis? Cutes, viſcera, pituita, atque omnis illa proluvies inteſtinorum ſub involucris conſtituta: quam non modo Lynceus ille penetrabili acie poſſit horreſcere, verumetiam quivis alter ſola vel (b) cogitatione vitare. O egregiam merces culpæ! ô digna & pretioſa dulcedo, propter quam Jupiter maximus cygnus fieret, & taurus, & candidorum procreator ovorum! This Objection of Arnobius is a good one, and a hundred times more forcible than if a great King was cenſured for Debauching not only Princeſſes but alſo the meaneſt Women. I ſhall ſet down what Juno told Thetis, ſhewing her the reaſon of her Affection for her.

(b) Compare with this the following Words of Ovid. Tunc animo ſigna quodcunque in corpore mendæ eſt, &c. in Remedio amoris p. m. 222.

Οὔνομ' (c) ἐν ἔπεσι σὺν ἐμὸν ἔπλετο πάντα,
Αἰεὶ δὲ (καὶ γὰρ ἐγὼ θεός εἰμι καὶ ἔμπλεον ἦτορ)
Ἔπλετο σὸν φίλημα τὸ σὸν φίλον ἦτορ ἔχουσα.

Propterea quod noluiſti Jovis quamquam optantis cubile
Uſurpare (quoniam hoc illi ſtudetur opus,
Ut vel æternas inſomnis vel amplectatur humanas.

(c) Apollonius Argon. l. 4. v. 793. & p. m. 453. 454.

(N) To explain 'em either Allegorically, or Phyſically; but their Labour was as Ridiculous.] We have ſeen in another place how Cicero ridicul'd the Philoſopher Chryſippus, who had taken the Pains to reconcile the Fables of the Antient Poets with the Stoical Theology. Here's a Paſſage that will give us a Specimen of that Attempt: (c) Hic locus à Zenone tractatus, poſt à Cleanthe, & Chryſippo pluribus verbis explicatus eſt. Nam vetus hæc opinio Græciam opplevit, exſectum Cælum à filio Saturno; vinctum autem Saturnum ipſum à filio Jove. Phyſica ratio non inelegans incluſa eſt in impias fabulas. Calceſtem enim altiſſimam, æthereamque naturam; id eſt, ignem, qua per ſeſe omnia gigneret, vacare voluerunt eâ parte corporis, qua coniunctione alterius egeret ad procreandum. Saturnum autem eum eſſe voluerunt, qui curſum, & converſionem ſpatiorum, ac temporum contineret——— Saturnus autem eſt appellatus, quod ſaturetur annis: ex ſe enim natos comeſſe fingitur ſolitus, quia conſumit ætas temporum ſpatia, anniſque præteritis infaturabiliter expletur. Vinctus eſt autem à Jove, ne immoderatos curſus haberet, atque ut eum ſiderum vinculis alligaret. This is ſufficient to ſhew the Folly of thoſe Explications. We can't read 'em without pitying the Philoſophers who have ſo ill employ'd their time; and if we deplore on one Hand the Miſchievous Conſequences of the Fictions of the Poets, and the unruly Licence with which they have ſported upon a Subject, that deſerved to be Reverently Treated; we can't but be diverted, on the other, with their pleaſant Inventions, whilſt we conſider them as witty Conceits. But when we ſee ſome Philoſophers very Gravely undertake to find Myſteries in theſe Follies, we can no longer bear their Extravagance: And theſe Words may well be applied to them.

(c) Cicero de natura Deor. l. 2. p. m. 330.

(f) Martial. Epig. 86. l. 2.

Turpe (f) eſt difficiles habere nugas,
Et ſtultus eſt labor ineptiarum.

The greateſt Miſchief is, that whilſt they endeavoured to avoid an Impiety, they fell into another; for by Rejecting the Gods of the Poets, Animated and Living Gods, they brought in others Deſtitute of Life and Knowledge. Cicero upbraids 'em with it. (g) Hic idem (Zeno) alio loco æthera Deum dicit eſſe, ſi intelligi poteſt nihil ſentiens Deus, qui nunquam nobis occurrit neque in precibus, neque in optatis, neque in votis. Aliis autem libris rationem quandam per omnem pertinentem naturam, ut divinam, eſſe affectam putat. Idem aſtris hoc idem tribuit, tum annis, menſibus, annorumque mutationibus. Cùm verò Heſiodi Theogoniam interpretatur, tollit omnino uſitatas perceptaſque cognitiones Deorum, neque enim Jovem, neque Junonem, neque Veſtam, neque quenquam qui ita appellatur, in Deorum habet numero; ſed rebus inanimatis, atque mutis per quandam ſignificationem hac docet tributa nomina, By theſe falſe Interpretations they uſed Men to take the Arched Skies for Jupiter. (h) Hunc Ennius nuncupat ita dicens.

(g) Cicero de natura Deor. l. 1. p. 58.

Aſpice hoc
Sublime candens, quem invocant omnes Jovem.

(h) Id. ib. l. 1. p. 330, 331.

Planiuſque alio loco idem,
Cui, quod in me eſt, exſecrabor hoc, quo lucet, quidquid eſt.

Hunc etiam Augures noſtri, cùm dicunt, Jove fulgente, tonante: dicunt enim cælo fulgente, tonante. Euripides autem, ut multa præclarè; ſic hoc breviter.
Vides ſublime fuſum, immoderatum æthera,
Qui tenero terram circumjectu amplectitur:
Hunc ſummum habeto Divûm: hunc perhibeto Jovem.

As for Juno, they reduc'd her to the Air, as Cicero informs us. (i) Aer autem, ut Stoici diſputant, interjectus inter mare, & cælum, Junonis nomine conſecratur, qua eſt ſoror & conjux Jovis, quod & ſimilitudo eſt Æthere, & cum eo ſumma conjunctio. Effeminarunt autem eum, Junonique tribuerunt, quod nihil eſt eo mollius. There was no avoiding of Abſurdies or Impieties in that Syſtem. Which I prove thus: You believe that Jupiter ſo much Celebrated by the Poets, whom you adore in the Capitol, and every where elſe, is that great ſpace wherein we ſee ſo many Stars; and that Juno, Siſter and Wife of Jupiter, ſo Jealous, ſo Haughty, and Powerful, to whom the Argivi and other Nations pay ſo many Honours, is the Air that incompaſſes the Earth, and gets into the Lungs of Animals, and in which the Clouds, the Rain, &c. are formed? But is it not Evident that this Celeſtial Space, and this Air are a Portion of the Matter of the World, and that Matter, as Matter, cannot think? Don't we clearly know that the Air has no more Life or Knowledge than Snow and Hail? If therefore Juno is nothing but the Air, it is Ridiculous to direct Prayers, and offer Sacrifices to her; for ſhe hears and knows nothing, and therefore your Doctrine overthrows Religion; 'tis a material Atheiſm; you Rob Juno of all her Divinity; you only leave her the Vain and Indeterminate Name of a Goddeſs; and you are more Abſurd than Epicurus, ſince you Worſhip an illuſive and Imaginary Name. Juno is only an Inſtance; but Jupiter and Neptune, and all the other Deities fall in the ſame manner, by the force of the ſame Argument. If you ſay that you don't conſider the Air as a meer Body, when you maintain that Juno is the Air, explain to me, what other Notion you have of it. Do you ſuppoſe that the Air is United to the Goddeſs Juno, and that much Careſſed by Henry VIII. He Collected a very fine Library, (A) and left it by his Will to the Republick of Genoa. He made many Reparations in his Biſhoprick, and increaſed the Revenues of it; he ſo Beautified his Cathedral Church, Dedicated to the Holy Virgin, that Maracci placed him among her Faithful Servants. He alſo † Tranſlated into the Vulgar Tongue ſome Latin Works, the Reading whereof might be uſeful to Clergy-men. He loſt his Life at Sea, (B) in paſſing from Genoa to the Iſle of Corſica, in the year 1536 *. He was not only a Learned Prelate, but very Laborious, as it appears from the Works he Compoſed, (C) and from thoſe which he cauſed to be Printed. I mention 'em in a Remark. He went about a Polyglot Bible, part that ſhe is the Soul of it? But is not this to ſuppoſe, a ſort of Animal, of which we have no Idea? Do's not the Notion of an Animal imply a Conjunction of Parts, which Conſtitute one intire continuum? Do's it not exclude what we call quantitas diſcreta? And is it not certain that the Parts of the Air are continually ſeparating from one another, and that the leaſt Stone that is caſt into it, makes a Solution of its Continuity, which muſt be a very ſmarting Wound, if the Air be an Animal? To what inconveniencies do you expoſe the Divinity of Juno, in making her the Soul of the Air? Do's ſhe not conſtantly receive abundance of Wounds? If you Anſwer me that this Deity is united to the Air, not to be its Soul, but only to Influence it, you fall into another Abſurdity, which is no leſs Ridiculous, than if we ſhould ſay, that a Pilot is a Ship, and that a Rider is a Horſe. Will you Anſwer, that there is a great deal of difference betwixt theſe things, ſince a Pilot is not united to the Ship, as Juno is to the Air? Explain therefore that Union, and obſerve how Ariſtotle puzzles you, when he ſays, it is againſt Reaſon, that the Air and Fire ſhould be Animals; but that if they have a Soul, it is an Abſurdity to ſay, they are not. Conſider well theſe Words: (a) Διὰ τίνα μὲν γὰρ αἰτίαν ἐν τῷ ἀέρι, ἢ ἐν τῷ πυρὶ ἔστι ψυχὴ, ἄνοιαν ζῴου, ἢ δι' ἣν αἰτίαν ἐν μὲν τοῖς μικτοῖς, ἢ ταῦτα βελτίονα ἐν τούτοις εἶναι δοκοῦσι, ἐπιζητήσειεν ἂν τις, ἢ διὰ τίνα αἰτίαν ἐν τῷ ἀέρι ψυχὴ, τῶν ἐν τοῖς ζῴοις βελτίων ἐστὶ ἢ ἀθανασίᾳ. συμβαίνει δὲ ἀμφοτέρως ἄτοπον ἢ παράλογον, ἢ γὰρ τὸ λίχνον ζῶον τὸ πῦρ, ἢ τὸν ἀέρα, πᾶν παραλογώτερον ἐστί. ἢ μὴ λέγειν ζῶα ψυχῆς ὑπάρχειν, ἄτοπον· Quam enim ob cauſam anima in aëre quidem vel igne ſi ineſt, non facit animal, in miſtis autem facit: præſertim cum in illis videatur eſſe præſtantior! Quæret etiam quiſpiam quam ob cauſam anima ea, quæ eſt in aëre, præſtabilior eſt ac inmortalior ea, quæ in animalibus ineſt. Utrobique autem emergit quoddam abſurdum & rationis egrediens metas, nam ignem aut aërem animal eſſe dicere, rationis egreditur fines, & aſſerere rurſus animalia non eſſe, ſi inſit in ipſis anima, pergbſurdum eſt ſane. Thus you find your ſelves betwixt two Precipices. If Juno is the Soul of the Air, and if the Air and ſhe do not Conſtitute an Animal, it is an Intolerable Abſurdity; but if they Compoſe an Animal, it is both an Abſurdity, and a horrible Impiety. Carneades with that ſtrength of Reaſon, which was his Peculiar Talent, confuted (b) invincibly the pretended Exiſtence of this kind of Animal.

(i) Id. ib. p. 339.

† Traſportando ancora da Latino in volgare de' libri per giovamento del ſuo Clero. The Abbot Michael Juſtiniani ubi infra p. 17.

* Taken from the Abbot Michael Juſtiniani, gli ſcrittori Liguri deſcritti p. 16. & ſequent.

(a) Ariſtotle de anima l. 1. c. 5. p. m. 485. tom. 1. oper.

(b) See his Arguments in Cicero l. 3. de natura Deor. p. m. 612.

I ſhall conclude with a Notion of Pauſanias. He tells us that he Diſputed one Day with a Sidonian in the Temple of Æſculapius. That Man maintain'd that the Phenicians were much more ſkill'd than the Greeks, in matters relating to the Deity, and in others alſo. They ſay, added he, that Æſculapius is the Son of Apollo, and they don't ſuppoſe that he had a Woman for his Mother; for he is the Air, the Fountain of Health, both for Men and Beaſts. Apollo, who is the Sun, is juſtly eſteemed Æſculapius's Father, ſince by the Viciſſitudes of the Seaſons, which his motion brings about, he makes the Air Healthy. Pauſanias granted all this; but he maintain'd, that they did not belong to the Phenicians more than to the Greeks, and that it is manifeſt even to Children, that the Health of Men is an effect of the Sun's Motion (c). Judge by this of the Orthodoxy of the Heathens. Thoſe, who pretended to underſtand beſt Theological Doctrines, made it appear, when they explain'd themſelves clearly, that they Acknowledged no other Gods, beſides the Air, the Stars, &c. This was at the bottom a true Atheiſm; it was to convert the neceſſity of Nature into God. I have obſerv'd in Euripides, a Paſſage in which Jupiter is invok'd, without knowing truely what he was. He is ſaid to Govern all things juſtly by Occult Ways; but he who ſpeaks theſe Words adds that it is very difficult to know him, and that he knows not whether he be the neceſſity of Nature, or Humane Underſtanding. What a Faith is this! A Spinoziſt would not much ſcruple to Subſcribe to it.

(c) Taken from Pauſanias l. 7. c. 23. p. 583.

Ὦ (d) γῆς ἔχημα, καὶ γῆς ἔχων ἕδραν,
Ὅστις ποτ' εἶ σὺ δυσπρόσιπτος εἰδέναι
Ζεύς, εἴτ' ἀνάγκη φύσεως, εἴτε νοῦς βροτῶν,
Προσευξάμην σε, πάντα γὰρ δι' ἀξόστου
Βαίνων κελεύθου, ᾗ δίκαι' ἀπ' ἀνδρὸς ἄγεις.

O terræ vehiculum, & in terra habens ſedem,
Quicunque tandem es, imperveſtigabilis animis noſtris
Jupiter, ſive es neceſſitas naturæ, ſive mens mortalium,
Te invoco, omnia enim per ſilentium:
Vadens viam ducis mortalia juſte.

(d) Hecuba apud Euripidem in Troadibus v. 884. p. m. 197.

(A) A very fine Library, and left it by his Will.] It was eſpecially commendable for the great number of Antient Manuſcripts in all Languages, and Sciences, which he had Collected with vaſt Labour and Expence. But ſome of 'em he had without any Coſt and Pains: I mean thoſe which Andreolo Juſtiniani his Grandfather left him. 'Tis Remarkable that the Republick made no Advantage of this Will; for thoſe Manuſcripts are only to be found in the Libraries of ſome private Perſons, who, to Conceal their Theft, have taken off from the Title Pages the Marks of that Prelate. (a) Benche al preſente non ſi trovi veruno veſtigio di eſſi nel Palazzo publico, ma preſſo diverſi particolari, che, per non eſſer ſcoperti, gli han levati nel frontiſpicio i contraſegni di quel buon Vecchio.

(a) Michael Juſtiniani, gli ſcrittori Liguri deſcritti p. 18.

(B) He loſt his Life at Sea——in the year 1536.] The Abbot Michael Juſtiniani (f) proves this by the Regiſters of the Dominicans of Genoa, and from the Biſhoprick of Nebbio's being given to Cardinal Jerome Doria the fifteenth of November 1536. Voſſius ſays (g), it is not known whether Juſtiniani Periſhed at Sea, or fell into the Hands of the Pirates; that it is only certain that he was never ſeen ſince the year 1530. when he Embark'd to go from Genoa to his Biſhoprick. I doubt not but he is miſtaken as to the Year. Jovius ſays in general, that it was never known, whether this Biſhop was Shipwrack'd, or taken by the Pirates of Barbary. (b) In curſu fluctibus obrutus, aut à Pœnis prædonibus interceptus; creditur, quum nullum uſquam naufragii, aut piratarum prædæ veſtigium apparuerit.

(f) Ll. ib.

(g) Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat. l. 3. c. 12. p. 681.

(b) Paulus Jovius Elog. c. 130. p. 275.

(C) The Works he Compoſed, and thoſe which he cauſed to be Publiſh'd.] His precatio pietatis plena ad Deum omnipotentem compoſita ex duobus & ſeptuaginta nominibus divinis Hebraicis, & Latinis cum interprete commentariolo, was Printed at Venice in the year 1513. in 8vo. He Publiſhed there the ſame year Æneæ Platonici de immortalitate animorum deque corporum reſurrectione aureus libellus, cui titulus eſt Theophraſtus. He Publiſhed at Paris in 1520. in folio, Chalcidii viri clariſſimi luculenta Timæi Platonis tranſlatio, & ejuſdem argutiſſima explanatio; as alſo Victoria Porcheti adverſus impios Hebræos in qua tum ex ſacris litteris, tum ex dictis Talmud, ac Cabaliſtarum & aliorum omnium Authorum quos Hebræi recipiunt, monſtratur veritas Catholicæ fidei; moreover Rabi Moſſæi Ægyptii dux ſeu director dubitantium aut perplexorum. He ſpent five years upon writing a Hiſtory of Genoa, with an extream Application; but Death did not permit him to put his laſt hand to it. It was Publiſhed (i) in the year 1537. 'Tis ſaid that his Manuſcript was Corrupted in ſeveral Places, by the Perſon who put it to part whereof we may reckon the Pſalter (D), which he publiſhed. He was at great Charges for the Edition, and finding that he could not get his Money by the Sale, and that Princes did not promote his Deſigns, he complain'd of the Ingratitude of his Age.

(i) At Genoa in fol.

K.

KECKERMAN (Bartholomew) a Native of Dantzick was Profeſſor of Philoſophy there towards the begining of the XVIIth. Century. He had been before Profeſſor of the Hebrew Tongue at Heidelberg. He wrote a great many Books, in which he diſcovered (A) more Method than Wit. He was a Calviniſt. He died in the Year 1609, being Thirty Eight Years of Age †. His Books are full (B) of Plagiariſm, and have been ſerved the ſame way.

† Konig places his Birth in the Year 1571. and his Death in the Year 1609. Voſſius de Scient. Mathem. pag. 202. Says, he lived Forty two Years.

KEL-

(k) Franciſco Zazzera apud Abbatem Michael. Juſtinian. ubi ſupra, pag. 19.
(l) Georgius Juſtinianus in epiſt. dedicat. Æneæ Platonici de immortalitate animæ apud Mich. Juſtinian. ib. pag. 19. & 20.
(a) Michael Juſtiniani, ib. p. 17.
(b) Paulus Jovius, elog. c. 130. p. m. 275.
(c) Aug. Juſtiniani, in his Life. It has been inſerted in his Annals of Genoa. See the Abbot Michael Juſtiniani, ubi ſupra, pag. 20.
(d) Geſner in biblioth. fol. 104. verſo.
(e) Auguſt. Juſtin. præf. Pſalter. apud Geſner. ib. fol. 105.
(f) In altera quoque epiſtola ad eundem, novum teſtamentum jam abſolutum eſſe teſtatur, vetus autem brevi futurum paratum: & hortatur ut curet totum opus primis excudi. Geſner. ib.
(g) Id. ib.
(h) Ibid.

to the Preſs. (k) Scriſſe gl'Annali della ſua patria, con grandiſſima diligenza e ottima fedelta, i quali in molti luoghi dopo la morte di lui furono corretti. This is the Teſtimony of Franciſco Zazzera, which is confirmed by George Juſtiniani, in an Epiſtle Dedicatory: (l) Magnam profectò inde me voluptatem cepiſſe fatear, & in eodem plane ſenſu fuiſſe gaudeo ipſius nepotem Auguſtinum Juſtinianum, illum ſcilicet qui poſtea ad Nabigenſem pontificatum evectus, verum noſtrarum Annales orditus eſt, quos poſt ejus obitum imperitus, omniſque eruditionis expers horridos, ſane & ineditos, ut hodie leguntur, ex defuncti Schedis evulgavit. Theſe Alterations of the Manuſcript (a) gave Paul Jovius occaſion to cenſure this Hiſtory; but he is in the wrong to ſay, that the Author made too much haſte in publiſhing it; for it was not printed till after our Juſtiniani's Death. Paul Jovius's Words are very offenſive. (b) Scribenda patria hiſtoria negotium ſuſcepit, adeo ineptis ad id ingenii viribus, ut præcipitatæ editionis male audiendo pœnas daret. I ſhall ſpeak hereafter of his Polyglot Bible. Here is a Paſſage taken from his Life, written by himſelf, in which you'll ſee a Specimen of his Labours: (c) Ho fatto imprimere in Parigi dodici opere in utilità de Studioſi; ho tradotto più coſe in materna lingua per utilità di Chierici della mia Diocesi, che ſono tutti ignari di lettere: ho tradotto l'Economico di Senofonte per inſtruttione di mia cognata, e de miei nepoti: ho deſcritto molto minutamente l'Iſola di Corſica per utilità della patria intitolata al Principe Andrea d'Oria, emeſſa poi la deſcrittione in diſtinta pittura ho donato al magnifico Ufficio di S. Georgio. The laſt Work mentioned in theſe Italian Words, is in the Library of the Vatican. 'Tis only a Manuſcript.

(D) The Pſalter which he publiſhed——He complain'd of the Ingratitude.] It was printed at Genoa in the Year 1516, in Folio, in Eight Columns, (d) Quarum prima habet Hebraam editionem; ſecunda Latinam interpretationem reſpondentem Hebræa de verbo ad verbum; tertia Latinam communem; quarta Græcam; quinta Arabicam; ſexta paraphraſim, Sermone quidem Chaldæo, ſed litteris Hebraicis conſcriptam; Septima Latinam reſpondentem Chaldææ; ultima vero, id eſt octava, continet Scholia, hoc eſt annotationes ſparſas & intercifas. The Author dedicating it to Leo X. declares, that he deſigns to publiſh the whole Bible in that manner, and that he does not queſtion to go through it, if the Pope will approve it, and promote the Impreſſion. This is the Senſe of theſe Words. (e) Quod ſi tu rem ipſam probaveris, & dignam editione duxeris, in promptu erit nobis univerſo operi manum extremam imponere, & utrumque inſtrumentum, iiſdem diſtinctum linguis, eademque ſerie & ſtructura, tradere impreſſoribus formandum, &c. He notified in a Letter, that he wrote to Cardinal Bendinello Saoli (f), that all the New Teſtament was finiſhed, and that the Old would be quickly ready, and he intreated him to get the whole Work printed. He (g) gave leave to Pellican, who was at Rome, in the Year 1517, to tranſcribe the Preface of his New Teſtament in Eight Languages, with the firſt Verſes of St. Matthew's Goſpel. Geſner (h) affirms, that he ſaw it, and the two Letters which Juſtiniani wrote to that Cardinal. He has alſo inſerted part of that Preface in his Bibliotheque. This honeſt Prelate was at great charges for the Impreſſion of the Pſalter; he cauſed Two thouſand and Fifty Copies to be printed off, and preſented with it all the Princes of the World, Infidels as well as Chriſtians; he cauſed Fifty to be printed upon Vellum, he expected not only to be praiſed, but alſo to get a great deal by it; and he had already deſigned his Gain for the Comfort of his Relations. He hoped, that the good Succeſs of this Specimen would ingage the Prelates to be open-handed for the Impreſſion of the whole Bible, but unfortunately he got nothing but Praiſes. His Pſalter was commended, and not bought; he had much ado to ſell the fourth Part of the Edition, and was not in a Capacity of printing the reſt of his Work. Let us hear his Complaints. (i) Feci ſtampare in Genova alle mie ſpeſe con quel travaglio, e con quella ſpeſa, ch'ogni letterato può giudicare due milla volumi del Davidico pſalterio in le predette cinque lingue Hebrea, Chaldea, Greca, Latina, & Arabica, parendomi di queſt' opera dover' acquiſtare gran laude, e non mediocre guadagno, il quale penſato eſſerme in la ſouventione di certi miei parenti, ch'erano biſognoſi, credendomi ſempre che l'opera dovеſſe havere grande uſcita, e che i Prelati ricchi, o Principi ſi dovеſſero movere, e mi doveſſero ajutare in la ſpeſa di far imprimere il reſtante della Bibbia in quella varietà di lingue: ma la credulità mia reſtò ingannata, perche l'opera fù da ciaſchedun laudata, ma laſſata in poſare, e dormire, perche a pena ſi ſono venduti la quarta parte de i libri, come che l'opera ſia per valer a huomini, e per ingegni elevati, che ſono al mondo rari, e pochi, e con ſtento puoti ricavar i danari, ch'haveva poſto in la ſtampa che furono in buona quantità, perche oltre à dua mila volumi ſtampati in papero, ne feci imprimere cinquanta in carta vitellina, e mandai d'eſſi libri a tutti i Rè del Mondo, coſi Chriſtiani, come Pagani. Paul Jovius was ſo hard-hearted as not to pity his unhappy Fate. Nay, he takes Delight in inſulting him for it, and will not allow at leaſt, that he received the Praiſes of the publick. If we believe him, that honeſt Biſhop (k) was at great Charges, and got neither Money nor Glory by it.

(A) More Method than Wit.] He made Syſtems of moſt Sciences. Here is Voſſius's Judgment of him. (l) Parum idoneè judicat de eo (Diogene Laertio) vir cæteroquin eruditus, ſed novellorum ſcriptorum quam antiquitatis ſtudioſior Bartholomæus Keckermannus. Ait ille libro ſuo de hiſtoria, ſcripſiſſe Laertium languidè & frigidè, ſæpè tamen non inutiliter. Qua frigida profectò laus eſt operis utiliſſimi & auro contra non cari. Quippe ex quo diſcere hic cum alia tam multa ad hiſtoriam temporum pertinentia; tum præclara tot veterum apophthegmata quorum Keckermannus, malo ſanè exemplo, brevitatem laudare mavult autorem, quàm Plutarchum, Laertium & ſimiles.

(B) His Books are full of Plagiariſm, and have.] I have mention'd in another Place, the Complaint of a Scotch Writer, who had been pillaged by Keckerman. Another Scot (n) did juſt the contrary, he robb'd Keckerman, as Themiſtocles did Phormio (o) in his Collection of Plagiaries. He has ſerved ſome other Writers with the ſame Trick, as he did to Keckerman.

(i) Auguſt. Juſtinian. in the Account of his Life, apud Lancellotti di Perugia, Hoggidì parte 1. diſingannio, 27. pag. 273. 274.
(k) Gravi quidem ille ſuppreſſi temporis cum laude opum impreſſa domi præclara volumina emptores rariſſimos invenerint, ſic ut temerè conceptam ſpem fuerit inita rationes eluderint. Jovius ubi ſupra.
(l) Voſſius de hiſtor. Græc. pag. 223.
(n) Andreas Melvinus.
(o) Themiſtocles, ſays he, ſaid that he knew how to make a good Speech of a bad Cauſe, when he had Phormio to help him. Plutarch. in Themiſtocle.

KELLER (James), one of the beſt Writers amongſt the Jeſuits of Germany towards the beginning of the XVIIth. Century, was born * at Seckingen, in the Year 1568. He became a Jeſuit in the Year 1588, and after he had taught Claſſical Learning, Philoſophy, Moral and Scholaſtick Divinity, he was made Rector of the College of Ratisbonne, and afterwards of that of Munich. The firſt of theſe two Employments laſted Two Years; but he continued in the Second Sixteen Years together. He was a long time Confeſſor to Prince Albert of Bavaria, and to the Princeſs his Wife, and he was often conſulted and imployed by the Elector Maximilian in important Affairs. He diſputed publickly with the moſt famous ‡ Miniſter of the Duke of Newburg; and if we may believe (A) his Brethren, he had the better of him. He publiſhed ſome Books (B) of Controverſie, and ſeveral Political Pieces upon the Affairs of the time. He appeared under a diſguis'd Name, in (C) the Title of his Political Writings. He died at Munich the 23d. of February 1631 †.

KEPLER (John) one of the greateſt Aſtronomers of his Age, was born at Wil in the Country of Wirtemberg, the 27th. of December, 1571. He began to ſtudy Philoſophy at Tubingen, in the Year 1589, and two Years after he ſtudied Mathematicks in the ſame Univerſity, under the famous Michael Maſtlin. He made ſo great a Progreſs in that Science, that in the Year 1595, he wrote an excellent Book, which was printed at Tubingen the Year following, with this Title, Prodromus Diſſertationum de proportione orbium cæleſtium, deque cauſis cælorum numeri, magnitudinis, motuumque periodicorum genuinis & propriis, &c. He had been already invited to Gratz, in Styria, to teach Mathematicks †. Tycho Brahe being ſettled in Bohemia, and having obtained of the Emperor all ſort of Conveniencies, to perfect Aſtronomy, paſſionately deſired to have Kepler with him, and wrote to him ſo many Letters upon this Subject, that he engaged him to leave the Univerſity of Gratz, and to remove into Bohemia with his Family and Library, in the Year 1600 ‖. Kepler in this Journey got a Quartan Ague, which laſted Seven or Eight Months, ſo that he could not do Tycho Brahe all the Services he was capable of. Tycho Brahe appeared ſomewhat reſerved ›, and did not communicate to him all his Knowledge. That great Aſtronomer died in the Year 1601, and ſo Kepler could not be very uſeful to him, nor improve much by him, which made him very uneaſie. From that time Kepler had the Title of Mathematician ‹ to the Emperor all his

* 'Tis one of the Four Foreſt Towns.

† Call'd James Hailbrunner.

‡ Taken from Nathanael Sotuel in Biblioth. Scriptor. Societatis Jeſu, pag. 373, 374.

† Taken from Gaſſendus in vita Tychonis Brahei, lib. 5. p. m. 451.

‖ Id. Gaſſend. pag. 450. & 459.

› Ibid. Pag. 460.

(A) If we may believe his Brethren, he had the better of him.] Alegambe and Sotuel ſay, that James Hailbrunner found himſelf ſo preſt in that Diſpute, that he was almoſt reduced to Silence, and that he fell ſick the Night following, or pretended to be ſo, that he might not be obliged to enter the Liſts again the next Day. Tam fortiter preſſus eſt, ut tantum non obmutuerit, morbumque reipſa nocte illa contraxerit, vel ne cogeretur iterum in arenam deſcendere, callide ſimulavit (a).

This Conference, as to the Subject, was much like that of Du Perron, and du Pleſſis Mornai; for it run upon the Accuſation brought againſt the Lutheran Miniſter, of having quoted many Paſſages of the Fathers with a Thouſand Falſifications, in a German Book, intituled, Papatus Acatholicus. The Conference of Keller and Hailbrunner, was held at Newburg (b), in the Month of June 1615, and if we may believe the Lutherans, the Innocence of their Miniſter appeared with the greateſt Evidence. Ex inſpectione & examinatione dictorum patriſticorum, innocentia Hailbronneriana luculenter patuit. Vid. Stratem. Theatrum hiſtoricum, pag. 1111. D. Dorſch. in Kircher. dev. pralim. 100. uſque 106.

(B) He publiſhed ſome Books of Controverſie.] Theſe are the Titles of 'em: Tyrannicidium, ſeu ſcitum Catholicorum de Tyranni internecione adverſus inimicos Calviniani Miniſtri Calumnias in Societatem Jeſu jactatas, at Munich, 1001. in Quarto, in Latin and High-Duch. Papatus Catholicus, ſeu demonſtratio fundamentalis veritatis Eccleſiæ Catholicæ Romanæ contra Jacobum Hailbrunner, at Munich, 1616, in two Volumes in Folio, in High-Duteh. Compendium ejuſdem operis, in the ſame Place, at the ſame time, in Quarto. Agonia ſeu ſudor mortualis Jacobi Hailbrunneri, hoc eſt refutatio Hailbrunneri qui extremam unctionem infectatus fuerat ſcripto libro, in the ſame place, 1618. in Quarto, in High-Duteh. Foſcenulus olidus 50. floſculorum, id eſt abſurditas prædicantium in (d) Colloquio Ratisbonenſi. He took the Name of Jacobus Silvanus in this Work, printed in the Year 1604, in Quarto (e). He took the ſame Name in a Book printed at Ingolſtad, in 1607, and intituled, Philippica in anonymum quendam prædicantem qui Societatem Jeſu mendaciis oneravit. The Writers of the Jeſuits Bibliotheque, have not mentioned this Book of James Keller. Placcius (f) tells us, that it was an anſwer to a German Piece, wherein the Author had collected many Paſſages taken from the Seditious Books of ſome Jeſuits. The Author of the Collection confuted Keller's Philippica, in the Year 1608: his Anſwer is intituled, Anti-Philippica; 'tis a German Book, in which the Author compleated the Collection of the Seditious Things that are to be found in the Writings of the Jeſuits (g). The Author of theſe two Collections was Counſellor to the Elector Palatine, and his Name was Michael Loſſenius (b). I have read in the Third Volume of the Morale Pratique, that our Keller is the Author of Cavea turturis. Mr. Arnauld's Paſſage runs thus: '(i) Gravina——a learned Dominican having 'complained with a great deal of Modeſty in his 'Vox turturis, that Cardinal Bellarmin had ſpoke 'ſharply of the ancient Orders in his Book, de Gemitu de Columba; and having repreſented that it 'was no wonder if they had abated of their Auſterity in the ſpace of ſo many Ages ſince their 'Foundation; Your Father James Keller anſwered 'him haughtily in his Book, intituled, Cavea Turturis, ch. 14. Societati Jeſu non eſt periculum, ne 'poſt aliquot annorum centurias ſibi multum diſſimilis appareat. Habet enim aromata à putredine 'præſervantia.

Mr. Mayer aſcribes the Cavea turturis to another Author. His Words are theſe. Cui (Voci Turturis) etſi D. Riedelius, Eccleſiæ Landshutanæ Decanus, aut ſub Riedellii nomine Jacobus Balde, Jeſuita, Caveam Turturis oppoſuiſſe, Gravinæ Vocem congeminantem Turturis publico dedit (k) &c.

(C) Under a diſguiſed Name, in the Title of his Political Writings.] The Bloody War, which deſolated Germany from the Year 1618, to the Peace of Munſter, was doubtleſs a War of Religion; for the League which the Proteſtants formed, againſt which the Roman Catholicks oppoſed a League, whereof the Elector of Bavaria was the Head, owed its Birth to the Suſpicions, that the Imperial Court, animated by the Jeſuits, had a mind to break the Peace of Paſſau. The Elector of Bavaria, a very able Prince, would not ſuffer the Catholicks to lie under that Imputation. He cauſed ſome Books to be publiſhed, in which the Proteſtants were accuſed of having confederated for pernicious Deſigns, and particularly to oppreſs the Roman Church. This Accuſation came out in the Year 1621, in a Book intituled, Cancellaria ſecreta Anhaltina, id eſt, Occulta

(a) Alegambe & Sotuel in Biblioth. Scriptor. Societatis Jeſu.

(b) Andreas Carolus, in memorab. Eccleſiaſt. ſæculi 17. pag. 384.

(c) Id. ib. pag. 385.

(d) And not Collegio, as 'tis in Placcius de Pſeudonymis, pag. 261.

(e) Taken from Alegambe & Sotuel ubi ſupra.

(f) Placcius, ibid.

(g) Id. ib.

(b) Deckher. de Scriptis adeſpotis, pag. 153.

(i) Arnauld, Morale Pratique, tom. 3. p. 112.

(k) Jo. Frider. Mayerus de fide Bellarmini ſuſpecta pag. 107. 108.

his Life, and increaſed more and more his Reputation (A) by his Works. The Emperor Rodolphus * put him upon finiſhing Tycho's Tables, which were to be called Rodolphin †. Kepler ſet heartily about it; but the Treaſurers (B) were ſo ill affected to him, that he could not publiſh 'em till the Year 1627. He died in November 1630, at Ratisbonne, where he was indeavouring to get the Arrears of his Penſion paid him ‡. Lewis KEPLER his Son, a Phyſician at Koningsberg in Pruſſia, made an end of printing his

* See the Remark. F.

* Gaſſendus, ibid. lib. 6. pag. 471.

† They came out with that Title.

‡ Gaſſendus, ibid. pag. 472. (a) I write this in October, 1695.

(l) Keller in the Appendix Cancellariæ Anhaltinæ, ſays that it is falſe,

(m) Nicolas Harſtein denies it in the Preface of his Reſponſio apologetica to the Ajax of Fabius Hercynianus.

(n) Alegambe has miſtaken that Name; for he ſays Belſſii, and that he was Chancellor. Father Sottuel has not mended thoſe two Faults: he ſays Belſſii, &c. Placcius de anonymis n. 256. pag. 71. has not mended them, and places this Work among the Anonymous ones, not knowing that the Author took the Name of Fabius Hercynianus.

(o) Nicolaus Harſtenius, Sciamber in præfat. reſponſionis apologeticæ printed in 1265.

(p) Legat myſteria politica nuper à vobis, & quidem à te Jacobe Kellere (ut multorum fuit opinio) edita. Nicol. Harſteinus Apolog. pag. 8. In bed to an 1062. &

culta Conſilia, Inaudita Propoſita, Periculoſæ adinventiones, & prodigioſa Machinationes Capitum ac Directorum unionis correſpondentium in Germania, occaſione Rebellionis Bohemicæ ad ejuſdem Coronæ, & Imp. Rom. perniciem agitata. Poſt mperam illam, omnibus poſteris memorabilem Victoriam Pragenſem, 8. Novemb. 1620. in Originalibus Scripturis ac documentis Cancellariæ Anhaltinæ, Divinâ Providentiâ deprehenſa. The Proteſtant Princes cauſed this Book to be refuted, whichwas (l) ſaid to have been written by William Fecher, Counſellor to the Elector of Bavaria, and by Doctor Leickard. It was thought that theſe Princes made uſe (m) for that end of Volrad Pleſſi, Counſellor to the Elector Palatine. Our James Keller believed it, for he confuted their Confutation, in a Work printed in the Year 1624, and intituled, Volradi (n) Pleſſii Heidelbergenſis olim Conſiliarii Ajax poſt oppugnatam fruſtra Cancellariam Anhaltinam in ſpongiam incumbens, ſive Appendix Cancellariæ Anhaltinæ, auctore Fabio Hercyniano J. C. Alegambe and his Continuator knew not that Keller had taken the Name of Fabius Hercynianus in this Work. He took it the foregoing Year, in Anſwer to a Book, publiſhed by Lewis Camerarius, and intituled, Cancellaria Hiſpanica: adjecta ſunt Acta publica, hoc eſt: Scripta & Epiſtolæ authentica, è quibus partim infelicis belli in Germania, partim Proſcriptionis in Electorem Palatinum ſcopus præcipuus apparet. Adjecti ſunt ſub finem Flores Scoppiani, ex Claſſico belli Sacri. This Work has another Title after the Table of Contents, viæ vivæ demonſtratio cauſſarum præſentis in Germania belli religionis ergo ſuſcepti. Keller's Anſwer to this Book of Camerarius, is intituled, Litura, ſeu Caſtigatio Cancellariæ Hiſpanicæ, à Ludovico Camerario Excancellario Bohemico, Conſiliario Heidelbergenſi, &c. inſtructæ. Auctore Fabio Hercyniano, J. C. There was a new Edition of it in 1624, which had this Title: Cancellariæ Anhaltinæ, pars ſecunda. In qua non ita pridem à quibuſdam edita Cancellaria Hiſpanica nervoſe ſimul & lepidè refutatur: tum ex quibuſdam interceptis ad Caborem litteris, Hungaricorum qui ſequuti ſunt & adhuc durant motuum incentores ſeu auctores demonſtrantur. Auctore Fabio Hercyniano J. C. Alegambe and his Continuator were ignorant that James Keller took this falſe Name in the Title of this Work. They were not ignorant of it, with reſpect to two Pieces, which were intituled: Rhabarbarum domanda bili quam in Apologia ſua proritavit Ludovicus Camerarius propinatum à Fabio Hercyniano J. C. anno 1625. Tubus Galilæanus, hebeſcentibus Ludovici Camerarii oculis, in litura Hiſpanicæ Cancellariæ male advertentibus, ad clamis videndum tornatus, à Fabio Hercyniano. Additis in fine teſtimonii cauſſa, & pro Tubo, & pro Rhabarbaro, ipſius Camerarii epiſtolis anno 1625. Nicolaus Harſtein anſwering the Ajax, or the Appendix Cancellariæ Anhaltinæ, obſerves, that the Jeſuit, who was the Author of it, was very much uſed to diſguiſe himſelf. (o) Nihil huic homini inſolens eſſe, ut veritatem, ita nomen ſuum pervertere & modo ſub Aurimontii (à matre ſua Goltbergera) modò ſub Didaci Tamiæ, modò ſub Fabii Hercyniani (à ſylva Hercynia, ſive Nigra, prope quam ſupra Baſileam in oppido Seckingen natus eſt) nomine fallere, & his literis, J. C. quæ non Juriſconſultum, ut alias, ſed Jacobum Cellarium denotant, lectori imponere. Theſe Diſguiſes were unknown to the two Jeſuits, who compiled the Bibliotheque of the Writers of their Order. The ſame Nicholas Harſtein informs us, that James Keller was the Author of the Myſteria politica (p), a Work which made a great Noiſe (q), and which was very injurious to the Court of France. But he aſcribes to another Jeſuit (r) a Work intituled, Secreta ſecretorum Calvino-Turcica, the Author whereof had concealed himſelf under the Name of Honeſtus Cognamdonus. He who anſwered him in a Book intituled, Secreta Secretorum Turco-Papiſtica, took the falſe Name of Juſtinus Juſtinopolitanus, inſtead of Ludovicus Camerarius his true Name. The Conteſts of Writers about the Affairs of the Time, were then more grave, than they are in this War (a), and as vehement in their Kind, as thoſe of Warriors. At preſent we ſee hardly any thing but Scurrilous Satyrs.

(A) Increaſed more and more his Reputation by his Works.] I ſhall only ſet down the Titles of ſome of his Works. Harmonices mundi libri V. Apologia pro ſua harmonica mundi contra demonſtrationem analyticam Roberti de Fluctibus. De Cometis libri tres. Ad Vitellionem Paralipomena, quibus Aſtronomiæ pars optica traditur. Epitome Aſtronomiæ Copernicanæ. Aſtronomia nova, ſeu phyſica, aitiologis tradita commentariis de motibus ſtellæ Martis, ex obſervationibus Tychonis Brahei. Chilias logarithmorum in totidem numeros rotundos. Supplementum Chiliadis logarithmorum. Nova ſtereometria doliorum vinariorum & ſtereometriæ Archimedeæ ſupplementum. Dioptrica. De vero natali anno Chriſti. Ecloga Chronica de tempore Herodis Herodiadumque, baptiſmi, miniſterii, paſſionis, mortis & reſurrectionis Chriſti, deque tempore belli Judaici. Tychonis Brahei Hyperaſpiſtes adverſus Scipionis Clavamontii Anti-Tychonem in actum productus. This is ſufficient to ſhew, that our John Kepler was none of thoſe who move in a little Sphere: his Activity reached a great many Objects. See in the Text of this Article, the Title of the firſt Book he publiſhed. 'Tis the ſame with his Myſterium Coſmographicum, which of all his Works he moſt eſteemed. He was ſo charmed with it for ſome time, that he declared he would not Renounce the Glory of the Diſcoveries of that Book for the Electorate of Saxony. (b) Thomas Lanſius in Mantiſſa orat. pag. 792. memorat, Keplerum aliquando à ſe rogatum, quem ex editis à ſe libris loco dignaretur præcipuo, primatum dediſſe Myſterio coſmographico, teſtatum in illo ſcripto quinque corporum regularium ſublime ſecretum tot ſæculis abſconditum pandi: inventum illud autem, cum adhuc recens eſſet, tanti ſe feciſſe, ut, ſi eodem tempore Saxonia electoratus ſibi dono oblatus fuiſſet, addita conditione, alterutrum, aut donum aut inventionem repudiandi; ampliſſima, & tot metallorum copia ſacta provincia excidere, quàm invidenda & perpetuam gloriam ſecum ducturæ inventione carere maluerit.

(B) The Treaſurers were ſo ill affected to him.] Woe to the Learned, who depend on thoſe Gentlemen, and can't perfect a Work without the good Humour of the Intendants of the Finances, a ſort of Men, who to ſerve their Prince well, muſt vex his Penſionaries with a Thouſand Difficulties. They leave him by that means, whilſt it coſts him but little, the Glory of being liberal. I ule Gaſſendus's Expreſſions to ſhew Kepler's Diſſatisfaction. (c) Alacriter quidem ille ſe accinxit; verùm illa brevi ac aliæ deinceps, partim ex operis natura, partim ex tergiverſatione Præfectorum ærarii, ſubortæ ſuere difficultates, ut priuſquam Tabulæ perfectæ, evulgatæque fuerint, annus ſæculi XXVII. adventaret. Conqueſtus eſt certè ab annis 11. ac 111. configi ſe limas Præfectorum oculis; & cùm anno IX. ſpecimen laboris inſigne, Commentaria de motibus Stellæ Martis edidiſſet, ac Rudolphus præter editionis impenſas, perſoni illi confeſtim mandaſſet, tum ſtipendiorum rebus, quas, iniquè, ad duo millia monetæ argenteæ majoris exceverant, tum alia inſuper auro nulla; expoſtulabat tamen adhuc biennio poſt, decreta Rudolphi in ſe munificentiſſima nullum eventum conſequi, ac ſe incaſſum facere ſumptus, pulſarique jam Camera Sileſiaca jam Imperialis ærarii fores. Kepler was no leſs diſcouraged by the Financiers under the Emperor (d), Matthias, than under Rodolphus. He had occaſion enough for his Patience, under the Reign of Ferdinand; but

(b) Konig. Biblioth. pag. 444. in voce Keplerus.

(c) Gaſſendus in vita Tychonis Brahei, lib. 6. pag. m. 471.

(d) Licet anno inſequente Matthias Rudolphi ſucceſſor & continuari ſtipendia, & exſolvi reſidua juſſiſſet, querelantur tamen anno XVI. expectare ſe adhuc manifeſtiorem exonerationis effectum. Id. Ib.

his Father's Somnium, Lunariſve Aſtronomia; and he was in great Apprehenſion (C) that it would occaſion his Death. John Kepler's Opinions are ſometimes very ſingular; one would think that he gave the Earth (D) a Soul, indowed with Sence. 'Tis pretended that he afforded very good (E) Hints to Deſcartes. We may place him among thoſe Authors *, who have ſaid, that they valued a Production of the Mind, above a So-but at laſt he received his Arrears. (e) Perſeverarunt adhuc querelæ poſt exactum XIX. quo Ferdinandus Matthiæ ſucceſſit, etiamque poſt XXI. quo edidit partem doctrinæ Copernicanæ theoricam juxta quam deductio tabularum foret: quouſque optimus Imperator rebus licet nondum penitus compoſitis etiam vetera quæ Anteceſſores debebant ſtipendia perſolvit, ac ut neceſſarii ad maturationem editionemque operis ſumptus ſuppeditarentur mandavit. The Payment of his Penſion was interrupted; for the Reaſon why he went to Ratiſbonne in the Year 1630, was to ſollicit the Payment of his Arrears (f).

(C) He was in great Apprehenſion that it would occaſion his Death.] The laſt Work that Kepler compoſed, was the Deſcription of the Moon; he had not the Satisfaction of publiſhing it, becauſe he died whilſt it was printing. James Bartſchius his Son-in-Law, and his faithful Follower in Aſtronomical Opinions, took care of the Book, and continued the Impreſſion; but Death broke it off again, Lewis Kepler, the Author's Son, was ſo ſurprized with theſe Accidents, that it proved a very difficult thing to perſwade him to meddle with this Work. He feared he ſhould loſe his Life in it, as his Father, and Brother-in-Law had done; and his Mother-in-Law, John Kepler's Widow, who was poor, and had many Children, was obliged to uſe a great many Intreaties and Arguments to engage him to that Undertaking. At laſt ſhe obtained her Deſire. A learned Profeſſor of Utrecht made uſe of theſe Circumſtances to cry down the Doctrine of John Kepler concerning the World in the Moon. Unum, ſays he, præterire nequeo, quod ſpectat Selenographiæ Keplerianæ natales, unde jure merito male ominor Lovaniæ, ejuſque incolis. He relates the Death of the Author, and that of Bartſchius, and then adds: Iſta vero ut intellexit Ludovicus Keplerus, Johannis filius, novercæ viduæ inopis ac liberis onuſta precibus atque erga patrium nomen affectu, vix vinci potuit ut libelli inchoatæ editioni abſolvendæ manum admoveret, territus (quod ipſe fatetur) improviſo & patris & affinis obitu, metuenſque ne cum illis in Levaniam relegaretur (g). I have hardly ſeen any Author ſo violent againſt Kepler, as Schoockius, as if this great Mathematician had made himſelf the moſt ridiculous Man in the World, by trying to accommodate Mathematical Speculations to Phyſicks. I don't believe that this Deſign can ever ſucceed; for the Object of Mathematicks, and that of Phyſicks, are things irreconcileable; the one is a Quantity, which only exiſts in Idea, and cannot exiſt any other way, the other exiſts out of our Mind, and can never be really in it. However it be, I ſhall ſet down Schoockius's Words: (a) Ubi Mathematicus, nemo eodem (Johanne Keplero) melior & ſubtilior, ubi vero Phyſicus, nemo eodem pejor atque ineptior, ut ſapiſſime doleam, ſi non ingemiſcam, virum tam eximium, divinam illam Mathefin nugamentis ſuis Phyſicis adeo ſude commaculaſſe. Quid abſurdius enim vel febricitans anus in ſomnio videat, quam quod terra ingens animal ſit, qua per montium crateres & camino, ceu os aut nares, ventos exſpiret? & hoc tamen expreſſe docet, lib. 4. Harmonica, cap. 7. ubi ſerio quoque probare nititur, quod terra cum cœlo ſympathiam colat, & naturali inſtinctu ſiderum juſturam cognoſcat. Similiter in ſcripto de Motibus Martis fol. 173. contendit ſolem magnum magnetem, ſeu magneticum corpus eſſe, ſupra proprium centrum diurno motu circumactum, quod ſecundum ſpeciem quandam diffuſam, omnes reliquas Planetarum ſphæras commoveat, & in orbem agitet. Nec ſic Keplerus ſolum, per Mathefin imprudenter & infeliciter Phyſicæ applicatam, in errorum præcipitium ruit; ſed cum eo multi quoque alii quorum indicem alio inſcripto, ſi Deo placuerit vitam provogare, exhibebo.

(D) That he gave the Earth a Soul.] Voſſius (b) obſerving the Abſurdity of placing the Earth among the Gods, the Earth, I ſay, which all the World took for a Body, trampled under Foot, and covered with all ſorts of Filth, adds, that the wiſer ſort were well aware of this Abſurdity, and ſaid, the Earth was either an Animal, or part of a great Animal, call'd the World. Kepler, continues he, was not far from this Opinion, for he not only ſaid that the Diurnal Motion of the Earth proceeds from the Earth, but alſo, that it perceives the Apparition of Comets, that it ſweats for fear of 'em, and that thence proceed great Rains. (c) 'Audiamus etiam loquentem libro de cometis anni poſt milleſimum & ſexcenteſimum ſeptimi, atque item duodevigeſimi: Facultas mundi ſublunaris cometam PERSENTISCIT, ET OBSTUPESCIT, unaque facultates cæteræ omnium rerum ſublunarium, AC poſtea: Facultas telluris, inſolentia Cometæ apparitione CONSTERNATA, uno terreſtris ſuperficiei loco multum exſudat vaporum, pro qualitate illius partis ſui corporis, hinc diuturnæ pluvia, & eluviones. Gaſſendus obſerves, that according to Kepler, all the Stars are animated, and that as Animals move by means of their Muſcles, the Earth and the Planets have alſo Muſcles proportioned to their Bulk, which are the Inſtruments whereby they move themſelves. He gives the Sun a moſt noble and active Soul, and will have it, that the Beams of the Sun put the Souls of the Planets in Action. (d) Adnoto dumtaxat Keplerum ita ſidera feciſſe animata, ac ut inſtrumenta motus in Animalibus ſunt fibræ digeſtæ per muſculos; ſic cenſuiſſe illum eſſe & in Terra, & in Planetis cæteris ingentes fibras aliquas pro ratione molis cujuſque, per quas Anima vim ſuam motricem exerceat. Cenſuit verò etiam, præter ſpecialeis Animas, & vires, quæ inſunt in cæteris, eſſe in ipſo Sole Animam nobiliſſimam potentiſſimamque, qua dum Solem circa proprium axem (à centro Mundi propereà non diſcedentem) circumagit, immaterialtas ſpecies (ſic enim appellat) irradiando, circumfundit, quibus, Planetæ velut correpti, ipſi Soli circumducantur. See what I quote out of Mr. Leibnitz (e), and obſerve, that it would be difficult to confute Kepler's Suppoſition; for we are no more in a Condition of knowing whether the Earth be animated, than a Louſe is of knowing whether we are living Creatures. A Louſe is contented with feeding on what it draws from the Surface of our Bodies, it knows not whether we think, nor can it diſcover the ſecret Springs that move us. Can we make more Diſcoveries upon the Queſtion, whether the Earth thinks, and whether it has Senſations, which like ours determine certain inward Springs to move themſelves in a certain manner?

(E) He afforded very good Hints to Deſcartes.] 'Kepler,' ſays Mr. Baillet (f), 'had particularly cultivated Aſtronomy and Opticks, and tho' he left 'many Things to be diſcovered, or perfected, yet 'it muſt be confeſt, that the reading of his Writings has not been uſeleſs to Deſcartes. In another place (g) he mentions three Things, which ſeemed to have been common to Deſcartes and Kepler. 'The firſt is the Knowledge of the Celeſtial Vortices, which 'tis pretended Kepler had at leaſt a confuſed Idea of, as well as Jordanus Brunus. The Second is, the Explication of Gravity which Kepler gave firſt of all, by the Compariſon of ſmall Pieces of Straw, which by the Motion of Water Circulating in a Veſſel, gather in the Center. The Third is the Knowledge of Opticks, in which Deſcartes has owned Kepler for his Maſter in the Year 1638. Here is the Teſtimony he gave of it to Father Merſenne. He, ſays he (i), who accuſes me of having taken the Ellipſes and Hyperboles of my Dioptricks from Kepler, muſt be ignorant or malicious. As for the Ellipſis, I don't remember that Kepler ſpeaks of it; or, if he do's, 'tis certainly to ſay, that it is not the Anaclaſtick, which he looks for. And as for the Hyperbole, I remember very well, that he pretends to demonſtrate, that it is not that neither, though he ſays, it is not very different from it. Now I leave you to judge, whether I could learn that a thing was true, from a Man, who endeavoured to prove [illegible] it was falſe. Which does not hinder me fr[illegible]nowledging, that Kepler was my firſt Maſter in Opticks, and that he knew more of it than

* See the Remark A. at the end.

(a) Martinus Schoockius de Scepticiſmo, lib. 4. pag. 387, 388.

(b) Voſſius de origine & progreſſu idolatriæ, lib. 2. c. 62. ſub fin. pag. m. 641.

(c) Id. ib.

(d) Gaſſend. Phyſica ſect. 2. lib. 3. c. 6. Oper. t. 1. p. m. 635.

(e) Tantarum tamque conſtantium veritatum cauſas dare nondum potuit (Keplerus) tum quod Intelligentiis aut ſympathiarum radiationibus inexplicatis haberet præpeditam mentem, tum quod nondum illius tempore Geometria interior & ſcientia motuum eo quo nunc profeciſſent. Act. Eruditor. Lipſienſ. 1019. pag. 82, 83.

(f) Vie de Deſcartes, t. 1. p. 226.

(g) In the 2. tom. p. 542. He quotes G. G. Leibn. tom. 1. Act. Eruditor. Lipſ. Indeed Mr. Leibnitz ſpeaks ſtrongly, p. 289 Cl. Speſſius notat ſolemne fuiſſe Carteſio præterire nomina autorum, & exemplum affert mundanorum vorticum, ad quos Jordanus Brunus & Johannes Keplerus ita digitum intenderint, ut tantum illud vocabulum ipſis deſuiſſe videatur. See tom. 3. of the Letters, pag. 397.

a Sovereignty. Moreri has been Guilty (F) of more Faults of Omiſſion than of Commiſſion.

KERMATIANS, a Sect in Arabia. See the Remark A of the Article ABUDHAHER.

KILIANUS (Cornelius) a Native of Brabant, was an excellent Corrector of the Preſs, for the ſpace of 50 years at Plantin's Printing-Houſe. He wrote ſome Books, which (d) were eſteem'd. He had no ill ſucceſs in making Latin Verſes, as it appears from his Apology (B) for the Correctors againſt Authors. He Died very Old on Eaſter Day in 1607. Moſt of the things I have been ſpeaking of will be verified in the Remark, wherein I put down (C) his Epitaph.

KIRCHER, a Native of Tubingen in the Dutchy of Wirtemberg, Studied with great ſucceſs in the Univerſity of his Country, and raiſed very great hopes of him; but having choſen another ſort of Life, and ſeeing no Probability of a Settlement in it, he changed the Lutheran for the Romiſh Religion, and went into Hungary *. This was about the year 1640. He Publiſhed according to cuſtom, the Motives (D) of his Change, to which were made ſeveral Anſwers. I can go no farther in my Account of him; and I ſhould be

(b) Acta Eruditor. Lipſ. 1689. p. 83.

(i) In Cenſura Philoſoph. Carteſianæ c. 8. p. m. 216.

(k) Voſſius de ſcient. Mathem. p. 198.

(l) Exinopinato literas accepit quibus Keplerus inſinuavit non eſſe ſibi integrum pactis conditionibus ſtare, quod à Styriæ proceribus quorum in ære erat, undequaque probarentur. Gaſſend. in vita Tychon. Brahei, l. 5. p. 459. ad ann. 1600.

(a) Id. ib.

(b) Deducto ad Cæſarem Keplero, lætatus eſt Cæſar ipſum convaluiſſe, ac teſtatus eſt velle ſe eum quidem Mathematicum ſibi habere, ſed addictum tamen Tychoni, quaſi miniſtrum à calculis. Id. ibid. p. 460. col. 1.

(c) Id. lib. 6. p. 474. col. 2.

* Joh. Georgius Dorſchæus, Epiſt. dedicat. Ad Ingreſſ. ad Catholicos.

(d) Voſſius ubi ſupra p. 310.

(e) Gaſſend. ibid. p. 477. col. 2.

(f) So it is in my Edition of Sanderus. It ſhould be Walleſtinus.

(g) This is only to be underſtood of the ſecond part of the Ephemerides; for the firſt was Printed at Linz in 1617.

than all thoſe that went before him. Mr. Leibnitz, whoſe Words I have mentioned concerning the Vortices, ſays ſomething in another place about the Subject of Gravity. He pretends, that we are indebted to Kepler for the cauſe of that Phænomenon, and he accuſes Deſcartes of having made uſe of that excellent Diſcovery, without aſcribing the Invention of it to him that it belonged to. (b) Ipſi (Keplero) primum indicium debetur veræ cauſæ gravitatis, & hujus naturæ legis, à qua gravitas pendet, quod corpora rotata conantur à centro recedere per tangentem, & ideo ſi in aquâ feſtucæ vel paleæ innatent, rotato vaſe, aqua in vorticem acta, feſtucis denſior, atque ideo fortius quam ipſæ, excuſſa à medio, feſtucas verſus centrum compellit; quemadmodum ipſe diſerte duobus & amplius locis, in Epitome Aſtronomiæ expoſuit; quanquam adhuc ſubdubitabundus, & ſuas ipſe opes ignorans, nec ſatis conſcius quanta inde ſequerentur, tum in Phyſica, tum ſpecialim in Aſtronomia. Sed his deinde egregie uſus eſt Carteſius, etſi more ſuo autorem diſſimularit. See the Biſhop of Avranches (i) who cites ſome Paſſages of Kepler, accuſing Deſcartes of having ſtolen many things from this German.

(F) Moreri has been guilty of more Faults of Omiſſion than of Commiſſion.] The Faults of the firſt kind will eaſily appear to all thoſe who will be at the Pains of comparing his Article with this; and much more, if it was compared with an Article, containing thoſe things, which I have not obſerved? Here are his Faults of Commiſſion. I. The Emperor, who ſucceeded Rodolphus, was not called Matthew, but Matthias. Theſe two Names are very different, and no Body ſhould have known it better than Moreri, who as a Prieſt read every Day in his Breviary, Wherein the Feaſts of St. Matthew and St Matthias are diſtinct. II. He ſhould not have ſaid, that Kepler died towards the Year 1620, but in the Year 1630. An Error of Ten Years is not pardonable in ſpeaking of a great Man of our Age. III. He ſhould not ſay, that John Kepler is different from Lewis Kepler, but that Lewis Kepler was John's Son. Moreri might eaſily have avoided the firſt Fault, ſince Voſſius, whom he copied, ſpeaks thus: (k) Primum Rodolphi Imperatoris, exinde MATTHIÆ, tandem & Ferdinandi Cæſ. Mathematicus fuit. I ſhall occaſionally ſay here that before Kepler had that Title he had been Profeſſor at Gratz in Styria. His Ingagement with Tycho Brabo had like to have been broke, becauſe the States of Stiria did not approve of it. (l) Tycho gave Kepler to underſtand, that he had procured him a greater Salary at the Court of the Emperor, with the Character of Mathematician to his Imperial Majeſty, ſo that the loſs of his Penſion in Stiria ought not to ſtop him (a). Hereupon Kepler left the Univerſity of Gratz. The Emperor Rodolphus made him his Mathematician; but he obliged him to ſerve Tycho as an Ariſthmetician. I (b) find that the Emperor Matthias gave Kepler a fixt Settlement at Linz, and that he order'd him a Salary from the States of the Upper Auſtria, which was paid for ſixteen years. (c) Neque enim ſibi ſatis eſſe, quod Cæſar etiam ante Imperium decreviſſet idoneam, ſiveamque ſedem Lincii; ac adjeciſſet exhibenda à Proceribus Auſtriæ ſuperioris ſtipendia, quibus, donec res pacationes evaderent, ſuſtentaretur; uti & fuit illis reipſa per annos ſexdecim ſuſtentatus. You ſee the reaſon why Voſſius ſpeaking of the Stereometry that was Printed in 1617. calls Kepler (d) Cæſaris Matthiæ & illuſtrium Ordinum Archiducatûs Auſtriæ ſupra Onaſum Mathematicus. I find alſo that Walſtein ſettled Kepler at Sagan in Silefia, and there it was that this Aſtronomer called the continuation of his Ephemerides to be Printed in the year 1630 (e). Deinceps autem anno xxx poſt editas Sagani Silefiorum (ubi Dux Mecklenburgi Walſtenius (f) ſedem illi tribuerat) Ephemeridas (g) ad Comitia Ratiſbonenſia ——ſe contuliſſet.

(A) He wrote ſome Books.] Swertius (h) begins the Liſt of them with theſe Words Scripſit Etymologicon Teutonicæ linguæ, ſive Dictionarium Teutonico-Latinum, a Julio Lipſio lucubatum. Typis Moreti 1599. in 8vo. His other Works are Latin Verſes, and a Flemiſh Tranſlation of Philip de Comines, and Lewis (i) Guicciardine.

(B) His Apology for the Correctors againſt Authors.] 'Tis an Epigram of eighteen Verſes, which we find in Reyerlinck's Theatrum vitæ humanæ (k). Mr. Chevillier has inſerted it in his (l) Origine de l'Imprimerie de Paris, having ſaid a thing, which deſerves to be mentioned. 'We will not however 'charge the Printers or Correctors with all 'the Faults that are in the Copies. They have their 'excuſe upon the Authors. Faults remain ſometimes 'in an Edition through the Ignorance, or Negli'gence of the Writer or the Publiſher. He gives 'a very Uncorrect Copy, which is ſometimes Pro'ved, and conſequently with the Faults of the Ma'nuſcript: But it happens that the Learned, who 'Judge without Flattery, Cenſuring what deſerves 'it; he that is not Guilty, is acquitted, the Fault 'Fault be intirely in the Author. An excellent 'Corrector of Plantin's Preſs called Cornelius Kilianus, made an Apology for the Correctors againſt 'the Authors, who being miſtaken for want of 'Learning and Judgment, and giving in Uncorrect 'Copies, do nevertheleſs blame the Innocent.

(C) Wherein I put down his Epitaph.] It was made by (m) Francis Swertius his Friend, and conſiſts in theſe Words: D. O. M. CORNELIO KILIANO Duffæo, conſtantis laboris, & perennis induſtriæ laude ornato & amato viro. I. ann. Plantin. Typographiæ correctorem geſſit. Quam fideliter, perite, docte, ipſos rogate libros elegantia, nitore, fama æterna artis primus. Nec ſuorum alienos tractavit, cum & ſuos reliquerit, tatim. ...tione diſertus, verſificatu felix, patriam quoque eloquentiam excoluit, cultumque ejus & propriet...tem revocavit. Obiit ætate operibuſque gravis M. DC. III. ipſo paſchatis feſto (n).

(D) The Motives of his Change, to which were made ſeveral Anſwers.] The Book he Publiſhed is intituled, Ætiologia in qua migrationis ſuæ ex Lutheranâ Synagoga in Eccleſiam Catholicam veras & ſolidas rationes ſuccinctè exponit, & perſpicuè, ...que omnibus & judicandi dexteritate pollentibus ritè, ac cum curatè & modeſtè conſiderandas proponit. It was Printed at Vienna in Auſtria, in the year 1640. and Dedicated to Emeric Loſi Archbiſhop of Strigonia. This Work turns upon theſe two Things; one is that the Lutheran Religion ought to be quitted, ſince it has no infallible Authority to direct us to judge what we ought to believe: The other is, that Popery ought to be Embraced, becauſe we find in it ſuch an Authority (o). He was Convicted Con-

(h) Athen. Belg. p. 190.

(i) Deſcription of the Netherlands.

(k) Tom. 7. p. 327.

(l) Pag. 203.

(m) Mr. Chevillier p. 196. and here.

(n) Franc. Swertius Athen. Belg. p. 189. 190.

(o) Taken from Dorſchæus's Prodigeſtis Catholicis p. 1. & 2. p. 330 be to blame, if I durſt not own it, ſince the Learned Mr. Baillet made (E) no ſcruple to acknowledge, that he was Ignorant of this Man's Adventures.

KIRCHMAN (John) famous for his Works, was Born at Lubeck the 18*th.* of January 1575. He Studied in his Country till he was eighteen years of Age, after which he went to Francfort upon the Oder, where he ſpent four years conſtantly attending the Lectures, and avoiding the Amuſements and Debaucheries, in which (A) moſt Scholars loſe their time. He Studied afterwards in the Univerſity of Jena, and then in that of Strasburg. He deſired to Travel into Forreign Countries, but having not a ſufficient Stock for that, he was forced to refrain his deſire. He was not long under that conſtraint; for he was made Governour to the Son of a Bourgomaſter of Lunenburg, and went with him into France and Italy. He returned into Germany in the year 1602, and being at Roſtock, he diſcovered ſuch a Capacity, that the year following he was made Profeſſor of Poetry. The Work he Publiſhed in the year 1604, de funeribus Romanorum, procured him the Reputation of a very Learned Man, and Contributed perhaps to his meeting with a good Match as readily as he deſired; for he had no leſs inclination to increaſe (B) the number of the Inhabitants of the World, than that of his Books. It was therefore a very good Fortune to him, to find a Wife the ſame year, that he ſet up for an Author, eſpecially ſince the Wife he met with made him attain the end he aimed at, for ſhe brought him Children, beſides, ſhe lived with him (C) very Friendly. Being look'd upon as a Man who Educated the (p) Baillet, in the 1. Tom. of the Anti, n. 25. p. 204. 205.

(q) Note, that he ſpeaks of it in the 267. p. of the ſame Tome, but not under the Notion of Anti-Kircher.

(r) Profeſſor of Divinity at Strasburg. See the Acta Eruditor. in 1682. p. 249. & Mr. Baillet ubi ſupra, p. 268.

(ſ) Baillet ubi ſupra p. 206. 207.

(t) That is, for ſaying nothing of Kitcher's Life or Death.

(a) See Quintilian inſtit. Orator. l. 1. c. 2. & Mr. Dacier's Remarks upon the Life of Numa Pompilius at the end, and the Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres for June 1700. p. 686.

ſult Mr. Baillet (p) who will tell you that John Conrad Schragmuller Publiſhed an Anti-Kercher in High-Duteh in the year 1654. And that Abraham Calovius put out an Examen Anti-Kircherianum at Konungsberg in Pruſſia in the year 1643. He do's not there mention (q) the Book of John George Dorſcheus, Profeſſor of Divinity at Strasburg, tho' it may be reckon'd an Anti-Kircher. The Title of it is; M. J. Kircherus devius, ſive hodegeticus Catholicus, quo oſtenditur M. Johannem Kircherum Tubingâ Wurtembergicum migrationis ſuæ ex ſynagoga, quam vocat, Lutherana in Eccleſiam Catholicam inſtitutione iviſſe, non qua eundum eſt ſed qua itur. It was Printed at Strasburg in the year 1641, in 12. and contains two Parts, the running Titles whereof are 1. Hodeget. Cathol. Antikireh. pralim. 2. Hodeget. Cathol. Antikireh. Dorſcheus maintains the Perſpicuity of the Scripture, which is the Foundation of the Proteſtant Faith, and ſhews on the other Hand, that neither Councils nor Deciſions of Popes can be a good Foundation of certainty. The Citations take up more than half the Book, and eſpecially in the places, wherein are examined Kircherus's Complaints, that the Proteſtants impute to the Catholick Church all the Impertinencies of particular Authors. This Book of Dorſcheus was anſwer'd by a German Jeſuit called Henry Wangnereck, who Publiſhed an Anti-Dorſcheus in the year 1653. and in his turn was Confuted by an Anti-Vangnereck, which (r) Balthaſar Rebelius Publiſh'd by way of Theological Theſes in the year 1682.

(E) Mr. Baillet made no ſcruple to Acknowledge, that he was Ignorant.] ' (ſ) You would have no ' occaſion (t) to Reproach me for it, if I could ' have diſcovered the Regiſter of his Baptiſm or ' Burial. Of the four German Kirchers, whom I ' know to have been, Authors, and whereof two ' were Jeſuits, he whoſe name was John, is he, ' whoſe Life and Imployments I am leaſt informed ' of. I believe that if he had Died a Lutheran, ' Mr. Henning Witten would have done him the ' Honour to place him in his Memoirs, with ſo ' many others, who did not deſerve it better than ' he: Another of his Fraternity would have made ' his Funeral Oration, or Publiſhed an Hiſtorical ' Elogy on him. It may be alſo that if Kircher, when ' he turned Roman Catholick, had made himſelf a ' Monk, ſome Bibliographer or other curious Per- ' ſon of his Order, would have been at the pains of ' Collecting his Actions and Writings, and of ' placing him among the famous Men of his Order. ' But I have too good an Opinion of your Memory, ' to repeat what I have told you upon this Subject ' in the Article of the Anti-Cochleus, when you was ' deſirous to know, why the Proteſtant Writers are ' generally better known to us than the Catholicks, ' and why amongſt the latter, the Monks of what ' ever Order they be, are commonly better known ' than the other Catholicks.

(A) In which moſt Scholars loſe their time.] It has been a Diſpute for many Ages (a) whether it be better to Educate Children at home, or to ſend 'em to the Univerſities. There are Arguments on both ſides; but that which is moſt plauſible againſt ſending them to the Univerſities, is the great danger danger of being drawn into Debauchery. Studious Scholars are very ſcarce; but thoſe who diſturb others, either by their bad Examples, their Sollicitations, or their Railleries are very numerous. See what is ſaid of our Kirchmannus, and of moſt of his School-fellows. (b) Ibidem per quadriennium fere ſubſtitit; non cibos & potiones tantum percolando, non Charadrii vitam agendo, non ludicris aliorum exagitationibus, aut laſcivis Gynæcei luſtrationibus ſe oblectando, non ſcurrilibus Lurconum nugis optimum juventutis florem peſſime corrumpendo, quibus egregiis, ſcilicet! Exercitiis, deplorato & exulcerato hoc ſeculo, maxima, (c) proh dolor! Academicorum pars dedita eſt, ſed lectiones & diſputationes publicas diligenter viſitando, cum viris doctis familiariter converſando, & interdiu noctuque bonis literis, quibus animum totum applicuerat, ſtrenuè incumbendo.

(B) To increaſe the number of the Inhabitants of the World.] 'Tis here more neceſſary than in other places to ſet down the very Words of my Author. (d) Quemadmodum prole animi bonas litteras promovere ſtuduit Kirchmannus, ita etiam prole corporis humanum genus augere apud ſe conſtituit. Quamobrem eodem anno, quo Funera Romanorum publici juris fecit, iiſque nominis ſui funera planè exterminavit, vitæ ſociam ſibi elegit Virginem caſtiſſimam & pudiciſſimam, Emerentiam, Joachimi Schelii, Senatoris Roſtochienſis prudentiſſimi, filiam. Here you ſee a Man who minded the publick good; he confin'd not his Zeal to the Advantage of the Republick of Learning, he Laboured alſo for that of the State, by the Procreation of Children: He Conſecrated both his Body and Mind, to the benefit of Mankind. The Learned Helena Piſcopia Cornara had very different Notions; for to ſhew that ſhe trod in the ſteps of Minerva the Goddeſs of Science, who always preſerved her Virginity, ſhe got her ſelf admitted into the Academy of Gli infecondi. But then the moſt Learned Tiraquellus was an Example to our Kirchman, for 'tis ſaid he produced every year a Book and a Child. See the Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres, (e) on the Subject of Mrs. le Fevre. The following Words ſhew that our Kirchman was not Fruſtrated of his good Intentions. (f) Quonam vero præcipuus conjugii ſcopus quo Kirchmannus collimavit eſt procreatio liberorum, ——etiam hunc ſcopum attigit, & conjugium ex benedictione divina uti jucundum, ita & fœcundum habuit. Ex uxore quippe ſuaviſſima, nunc proh dolor! Vidua mœſtiſſima, quinque liberos ſuſcepit, filios tres & filias duas.

(C) She lived with him very Friendly.] The Funeral Oration ſays that for 37. years that their Marriage laſted, they had no need of a Reconciliation. (g) Quod conjugium felicibus auſpiciis cœptum felici etiam ſucceſſu novem vruit. Tanto enim amore hi conjuges ſe mutuò ſunt complexi, tantâ concordiâ ſeptem & triginta annos tranſegerunt, ut nunquam ingratiam redire, aut ad aram Bona Dea litare neceſſe ipſis fuerit. Pomponius Atticus had the like good Fortune with his Siſter and Mother (h), but not with his Wife. The Author of the Funeral Oration

(b) Jacob. Stolterfhotus Orat. funebri Johannis Kirchmanni, apud Witten Memor. Philoſoph. Orator. &c. p. 525.

(c) See the Remark D. Letter m.

(d) Idem Stolterfhotus p. 530.

(e) For November 1684. art. XII. p. 977.

(f) Orat. funebr. apud Witten, Memor. Philoſoph. p. 531.

(g) Id. ib. p. 530.

(h) See his Article.

the Youth well, and suffered not his Boarders (D) to commit Debaucheries in his House; he had many Scholars sent him from the other Towns of Germany; and at last when the Magistrates of Lubeck saw that their School wanted a new Rector, they intreated him to take upon him that Imploy. One of the Reasons that Ingaged him to accept it, was (E) his fear of offending God, if he should refuse so Lawful a Call as that. He took Possession of that Imployment in the year 1613, and continued in it all the rest of his Life, with wonderful Industry, though he had the Mortification of being expos'd to many (F) Slanders under pretence that the School visibly Decay'd. 'Tis said that it was not his Fault. He Died the twentieth of March 1643 †. I will give a Catalogue of his (G) Writings.

† Taken from his Funeral Oracion pronounced by James Stolterfhous his Son-in-Law. Witten has inserted it in the Memoria Philosophorum p. 516.

KYRIANDER (William) a German Civilian, after he had begun the Study of the Civil-Law in Germany, continued it in France and at Padua; and went afterwards to Venice to add the Practice to the Theory by frequenting the Bar ‡. He there undertook the Translation (AA) of a Book of Leander Albertus, which was Printed at Cologne in 1567. You'll find in Moreri that he was Syndic of Triers, and that he Publish'd (A) the Annals of that Town: But you will not find there that he chang'd his tion pretends that this Concord proceeded from this, that both the Husband and the Wife well understood, that it was pleasing to God and Men, and that the Inconveniencies of Marriage, that are great in themselves, ought not to be Aggravated with sad Contentions, but rather sweetned by an agreeable Conversation. (i) NIMIRUM uterque ipsorum probe intellexit, Deo hominibusque gratum; si bene inter maritum & uxorem conveniat, nec conjugii molestias, alias sat graves, odiosis rixis & acerbis concertationibus cumulandas, sed suavissimâ potius oblectatione, & jucundissimâ conversatione leniendas esse. Hereupon he makes a very Pathetical Wish: Would to God, says he (k), that all those who don't live well together, would consider this great Truth. I don't believe this Author has hit upon the true Cause. There's scarce any Body but knows this great Truth; even those Families, where Discord Reigns most, are very well convinc'd of it: But they are not Govern'd by this persuasion, and I question whether the quarrelling part is not pitched upon, as the least Inconvenient; they would be more Tormented by their Discontent and Antipathy if they kept it within their Breast. Scolding is like Tears (l), it asswages the Grief, with which one is Oppress.

‡ Kyriander praefat. descript. Italiæ.

(D) Permitted not his Boarders to commit Debaucheries in his House.] There are some Professors so Covetous, that for fear of having their Board cried down they are very cautious how they cross their Boarders in their Pleasures. Young Men to Revenge themselves of the constraint they are kept under, would make their Relations believe a thousand Lies, in order to remove their Lodgings. Kirchman did not Govern himself by such Apprehensions. (m) Non enim Bacchanalia cum convictoribus suis Kirchmannus vivebat, non scyphos ad ordinem evacuatos; non ad mensuras sine mensura vivebat, non noctem Baccho ut pervigilem ducerent domesticis suis permittebat, quemadmodum nunc non nullos in Academiis Professores & Juventutis censores, egregios scilicet! facere audibus; sed ita in omnibus se gerebat, ut studiis mores convenienter irent; ipsiusque domestici, adeoque omnes litteris humanioribus addicti vivum haberent exemplum, ad quod vitam, mores, & res suas omnes examussim componerent.

(E) His fear of offending God.] Here is a Proof of a very nice Conscience. Many reasons diffuaded him from leaving Rostock; but this is the first thing that he oppos'd to them. (n) Contra vero ab hac parte non minus sollicite secum perpendebat divinam & legitimam vocationem, quam si contemptim repudiaret, in gravissimam Dei iram & certissimam ejus vindictam incurreret. I think he was too scrupulous: His Call was not like that of Abraham; and he might have refused to Answer it without any danger of provoking Heaven.

(F) To many Slanders under pretence.] When the Scholars plaid any mad Tricks, the Rector was blamed, and publickly Censured for it. (a) Statim bonus Kirchmannus cum suis Collegis vapulabat, & negligentiæ officii ac disciplinæ reus agebatur. Neque hæc carnificina in conviviis, transitis & privatis congressibus tantum à vulgo, cui neque judicium, neque veritas, identidem eanchatur; verum etiam in publicis scepius Vir optimus acerbè perstringebatur ab iis, quorum officium potius fuisset, Kirchmanni & Scholæ nostræ causam agere, ipsiusque Auctoritatem & existimationem, si qua à malevolis arroderetur, defendere. He bore it Patiently, and (b) Courageously despised those injurious Reflections. His Son-in-Law enlarges much upon this, and without denying (c) that Kirchman had his Faults, he maintains that the decay of the College proceeded from introducing into the Town the ule of Domestick Tutors. (d) Qui primum Januariis Præceptores in nostram civitatem introduxit, quisquis etiam fuerit, & quot domos tot ferè scholas in nostra urbe aperuit, hunc violentus huic Lyceo manus intulisse, & ad prosternendum primo ictu petiisse, tam confidenter assevero, ut nihil confidentius. Quid postea accesserit, & scholæ nostræ fundamenta penè everterit, unusquisque ipse secum reputet, in animo enim mihi non est omnia refricare, & Camarinam, quod aiunt, movere.

(G) A Catalogue of his Works.] 'Tis at the end (e) of his Funeral Oration. Oratio funebris Amplissimo Viro, Jacobo Bodingo, Consuli Reipublicæ Lubecensis, scripta: Rostochii 1610. in 4to. De Funeribus Romanorum Libri quatuor: Hamburgi 1605. in 8vo. Lubecæ. 1623. 1637. Brunsv. ac 1661. Francof. 1672. in 8vo. Ludg. Bat. 1672. in 12s. De ira cohibenda disputatio: Rostoch. 1611. in 4to. Oratio de vita & obitu Pauli Merulæ: ibid. 1617. in 4to. & Ludg. Bat. 1672. in 12s. Libri tres de Pacificatione Koltzenburgensi ad Legatos Ordinum Unitarum Belgii Provinciarum. Lubecæ 1620. in 4to. Oratio de vita & obitu Georgi Stampelii, Ecclesiæ Lubecensis Superintendentis, habita: ibid 1622 in 4to. De Annulis liber singularis. ibid. 1623. Slesvigæ 1657. Francof. 1672. in 8vo. Ludg. Bat. 1672. in 12s. Rudimenta Rhetorica: Bremæ, 1652. in 12s. Rudimenta Logicæ Peripatetica: Lub. 1609. & saepius in 8vo. Tabulæ Logicæ & Rhetoricæ, ibid. in fol. Genethliacon Illustrissimi Principis, Adolphi Friderici, Ducis Megapolitani, Primogenito Filio scriptum: ibid. 1624. in 4to. He design'd to Publish a Manuscript with Notes, which did not come out till 1684. by the care of his Grandson (f)

(AA) The Translation of a Book of Leander Albertus.] This Book contains the Description of Italy, and has not been despised by the Learned. Read Vossius, Chapter 12. Book 3. (g) De historicis Latinis, and La Popelinere, pag. 414. of the Histoire des Histoires. Kyriander made use of three Italian Editions of this Work, which he put into Latin, but I wonder he says nothing of the Edition, which was inlarged with the Description of the Islands bordering upon Italy. That Edition was printed at Venice appresso Ludovico degli Avanzi, in the Year 1561, in Quarto. The Translator should have made use of it, and should have added to his Work the Description of the Islands.

(A) The Annals of that Town.] 'Tis a Folio printed at Deuxponts in the Year 1603 Michael Hertzius does not mention this Edition: He only mentions that of 1625, and pretends that those Annals begin in the Year of the World 966 (h). Which is to make 'em rise above 700 Years before the Deluge. Zeiller might have (i) taught him to say 1966, and not 966. In the second Dutch Edition of his Religion; and that his Book (B) was cried down by the Jesuits upon that Account.

(k) Orat. funebr. ib. (l) Utinam id secum probe volverent illi, qui conjugium, quod debebat esse caritatis vinculum, faciunt certamen rixosum, quo seipsos excarnificant, & quotidiana quasi morte mulctant! Satius illis esset, nunquam matrimonium contraxisse, quam contractum tam fœde deturpassse. Id. ib. p. 531. (l) Est quadam flere voluptas: Expletur lacrymis, egeriturque dolor. Ovidius Trist. l. 4. Eleg. 3. v. 37. (m) Orat. funebr. p. 533. (n) Ibid. p. 535. (o) Orat. funebr. p. 540.

(a) Ibid. p. 538. (b) Ibid. p. 539. (c) Ibid. p. 538. (d) Ibid. p. 533. (e) See the Nouv. de la Rep. des Lettres, February 1685. art. 2. (f) Pag. m. 660. (g) Pag. 553. (h) Hertzius, Bibliotheca Germaniæ, p. 404. (i) De Hist. p. 2. part. p. 27.

KIRSTENIUS (Peter) Professor of Physick at Upsal, and extraordinary Physician to the Queen of Sweden, was born at Breslaw, the Capital City of Silesia, the 25th. of December 1577. He learnt in his Country Latin, Greek, a little Hebrew and Syriack, Natural Philosophy, Anatomy, and Botanicks. After which he went to see the Universities of Leipsick, Wittemberg, and Jena; and having improved much in four Years time, under the Professors of these three Universities, he travelled into the Low-Countries, and into France. He had heard say, that in order to be eminent in the Practice of Physick, it was necessary to understand Avicenna; whereupon he was very desirous to learn Arabick, knowing that the Translation of that Physician's Works was very bad. He therefore applied himself to the Study of Arabick, and designed to read not only Avicenna, but also Mesue, Rhasis, Abenzoar, Abukasis and Averroes. He was confirmed in this Design by Scaliger and Casaubon *, who thought him capable of excelling in that Language, to the great Advantage of the Commonwealth of Learning. This Inclination was no impediment to his desire of Travelling. He saw Italy, Spain, (A) England, and spent seven Years in his Travels, before he came Home again. He took his Degree of Doctor of Physick at Basil, being Twenty Four Years of Age. A little after his return into Silesia, he went to Jena, and married there; afterwards he was invited by the Magistrates of Breslaw, to be Director of their College, and Schools. A Fit of Sickness obliging him to quit that painful Employment, which besides he was weary of, he applied himself wholly to Physick, and the Study of the Arabick. Nay, he gave the Preference (B) to that Language, and made it appear, that he was born to Succeed in it. He added a great deal of Piety (C) to the Practice of Physick. We are not told why he removed with his Family into Prussia, but that Removal proved advantageous to him; for it gave him an Opportunity of being admitted into Chancellor Oxenstiern's House: that Chancellor took him into Sweden, where he was honoured with the Professorship of Physick in the University of Upsal, in the Year 1636, and besides he was made Physician to the Queen. He would have discharged much better the Duties of his Professorship, if the Strength of his Body had been answerable to the Vigour of his Mind; but he was very much broken, and lived but till the 8th. of April 1640 †. He published (D) several Books. It is said in his Epitaph, that he understood Twenty Six Languages.

KNOT,

* Qui cum indolem hominis viderent, animum verbis & exemplis addiderunt, ut pertenderet, atque istas literas, quæ nondum inter Christianos debitum cultum & nitorem accepissent, à barbarie vindicaret ac liberali manu asseveret. Illud magno fore Reipub. literariæ bono, & sibi ornamento illustriori. Orat. funebr. Kirstenii, apud Witten Memor. Medicor. pag. 114.

† Taken from his Funeral Oration, pronounced by John Loccenius his Collegue, Professor of the Civil Law. Witten has inserted it in his Memoriæ Medicorum.

(k) Masenius in dedicat. compend. Histor. Trevir. apud Magirum, eponymol. pag. 498.

(l) Apud Witten Memoria Medicorum, pag. 122.

(m) Orat. funebr. Kirstenii apud Witten, ibid. pag. 115.

(a) Ibid.

(b) Horat. Sat. 2. lib. 1.

(c) Idem epist. 15. lib. 1.

of Moreri's Dictionary, there is 1066. which is to go near 600 Years before Noah.

(B) His Book was cried down by the Jesuits upon that Account.] Masenius speaks of it thus: (k) Kyrlander res Trevirenses, ut fidem Deo Principique suo violarat, perversè persecutus est.

(A) He saw Italy, Spain, England, &c.] The Funeral Oration stops there, and speaks not of the Voyage Kirstenius made into Greece and Asia. 'Tis mentioned in his Epitaph. (l) Neve hunc satis fuit tot vidisse populos Europæ celeberrimos, ni matrem olim artium permearet Græciam, & Alcinoi sedem permigraret Asiam, vinosamque per Hungariam reverteret. Such a Voyage was suitable to his Intentions.

(B) He gave the Preference to the Arabick.] For he not only bestowed on that Study all the time that he stole from the practice of Physick, but also spent upon the Impression of Arabick Books, all that he saved out of his Gain. (m) Quicquid succisivi temporis laboriosæ praxi Medicæ suffurari potuit, hoc excolendæ Arabicæ linguæ totum destinavit: adeo ut cum lingua isthæc, velut cæteræ, superiorum facultatum, ut vocant, & imprimis Medicinæ ministra esse debuisset, contra praxis Medica isti linguæ sæpe serviret: dum quicquid horæ inde lucri redundantis abradere potuit, illud Arabicæ typographiæ adornandæ, & monumentis in illa edendis impendit. His Panegyrist had reason to say, that few Men make such a use of their Gain. They who have a profitable Profession, are infinitely more careful to buy Lands, or to put their Money to use, or to eat and drink well, than to be at the Charges of printing Books. Raro fane & laudando exemplo. Quales sunt hujus ævi mores, plerique si rem faciant, aut fœnori eam locarint, aut fundis emendis, aut gulæ deputant. In publicandis ingenii monumentis sumptus facere, rem sterilem esse credunt, & quæ nihil hæredem juvet (a). To the Shame of Learning, the Professors of it are wholly bent on growing rich in Lands and Money

(b) Dives agris, dives positis in fœnore nummis;

And they follow this bad Maxim,

Vos (c) sapere & solos aio bene vivere, quorum Conspicitur nitidis fundata pecunia villis.

(C) He added a great deal of Piety to the Practice of Physick.] This would be no less a Rarity than his disinterestedness, if the common Reports concerning the Religion of Physicians were to be believed. 'Tis said, that Kirstenius expected nothing from Remedies, without the Divine Assistance, and made the Success of Physick depend on the Blessing of Heaven. (d) Auspicium suorum laborum à pietate Christiana fecit, quam Æsculapius ignorabat. Noster autem senex sciebat, virtutem herbarum & usum medendi inutilem esse sine virtute divina: itaque à DEO, cui soli est potestas summa in omnia à se creata, in ipsam vitam & mortem hominum, Medicinæ felicitatem & successum petendum esse. Nay, it seems that commonly he did not undertake to cure his Patients, till after they were reconciled to God (e). He used likewise to incourage them, by advising 'em to confide in God, who in a Moment can cure the most desperate Diseases, unless he thinks it fit to translate his Children from this Vale of Tears into Heaven. Ægroti malo ex lege humanitatis indolebat, eumque bono animo esse Deoque fidere jubebat, etiam in morbo dubiæ salutis, quod cum Comico sciret, bonum animum in re mala dimidium esse mali. Ægrotum jam à Medico desertum, vel solo DEI nutu facile ad sanitatem reduci posse, si DEO volenti, ipsi saluti esset. Aut ex hac calamitosa vita ad meliorem transferri. He was very careful to frequent pious Exercises; he began and ended the Day with the reading of the Bible; and he had read that Sacred Book Sixteen times from one end to the other. (g) A Bibliorum lectione diem ordiens & claudens, multoties illa pervolutavit. Sedecies ab illo perlecta liberi ferunt. He died very piously (h).

(D) He published several Books.] The following Catalogue is to be found at the end of his Funeral Oration. (i) Decas Sacra Canticorum & Caminum Arabicorum ex aliquot MSS. cum Latina interpretatione. Brelæ 1609. Evangelistarium quatuor ex antiquissimo Codice MSS. Arabico Cæsareo erutæ. Francof. 1609. in fol. Tria specimina Characterum Arabicorum, nempe Oratio Dominica nostri Jesu Christi, Hail Mary, &c. Ibid. 1609. in fol. Grammatica Arabica. Ibid. 1609. in fol. Liber Secundus, de Canone Canonis à filio suo studio, sumptibus ac typis Arabicis, quâ potuit fide, ex Mauritio & Africano exemplari

(d) Orat. funebr. Kirstenii, pag. 117.

(e) Ita ægroti non minus DEO reconciliati curationem aggrediebatur. Ab ægrotis tamen invaletudine adhuc recenti quam ingravescente advocari malebat, præsertim in gravibus & acutis morbis. Ibid.

(f) Ibid. pag. 118.

(g) Ibid. pag. 119, 120.

(h) Ibid. pag. 121.

(i) Apud Witten ubi supra, pag. 124.

KNOT * (Edward) an Engliſhman, born in Northumberland, turn'd Jeſuit at Twenty ſix years of Age; which was in the year 1606. being already a Prieſt. He taught a long time at Rome in the Engliſh College; afterwards he was made Sub-Provincial of the Province of England, and after he had exerciſed that Employment out of the Kingdom, he was ſent thither to perform the Functions of a Provincial. That Employment was twice conferred upon him. He aſſiſted in the Quality of Provincial at the General Aſſembly of the Order held at Rome in the Year 1646, and was elected Definitor. He died at London the 14th. of January, in 1656 †. Alegambe reckoned among the Works of this Jeſuit, a Piece (A) which concerns the Hierarchy, and diſpleaſed the Biſhops. Sotuel has left it out. We ſhall ſee in a Remark (B) his Catalogue of the Books of Edward Knot.

* Vero nomine Matthias Wilſonus. Sotuel ubi infra.

† Sotuel, in Bibliotheca Scriptor. Societatis Jeſu, pag. 185.

KNOX (John) a Scotch Miniſter, was one of the Principal Inſtruments in the Work of the Reformation, in his own Country, in the XVIth. Century. He had been a Diſciple of John Major, one of the ſubtileſt Schoolmen of that Time; whoſe Steps he followed ſucceſsfully in teaching School Divinity, that in ſome things he was more ſubtil than he: but having examined St. Jerom's and St. Auſtin's Books, he quite alter'd his Taſt, betook himſelf to a plain and ſolid Theology, diſcovered abundance of Errors, and publiſhed a Confeſſion of Faith, which made him paſs for a Heretick.

exemplari MSS. Cæſareo Arabicè per partes editus, & ad verbum in Latin. tranſlatus, notiſque textum concernentibus illuſtratus. Ibid. 1610. in fol. Epiſtola S. Judæ ex MSS. Heidelbergenſi Arabico ad verbum tranſlata, additis notis ex textuum Græcorum & verſionis Latinæ vulgatæ collatione. Breſlæ 1611. in fol. Liber de vero uſu & abuſu Medicinæ. Francof. 1610. & Germanicè, Ibid. 1611. in 8. Oratio Introductoria in Gymnaſio Uratiſlavienſium habita. ibid. 1611. in 4. Notæ in Evangelium S. Matthæi, ex collatione textuum Arabicorum, Syriacorum, Ægyptiacorum, Græcorum & Latinorum. Breſlæ 1612. in fol. [illegible] ſive informatio Medicæ artis ſtudioſo perutilis, aliquandiu in Pharmacopolio verſaturo Caſpari Pencer, edita è MSS. Petri Kirſtenii. Upſaliæ 1638. in 8.

(k) Alegambe Bibliotheca Scriptor. Societ. Jeſu, pag. 99.

(l) A Jeſuit, who had been lately dead.

(A) A Piece which concerns the Hierarchy.] Alegambe ſpeaks thus. (k) Scripſit doctiſſimum libellum, qui ſub nomine Nicolai Smithei eſt editus hac epigraphe, Modeſta & brevis diſcuſſio aliquarum aſſertionum D. Doctoris Kelliſoni, quas in ſuo de Eccleſiaſtica Hierarchica tractatu probare conatur, ex Anglico in Latinum à Georgio Wrighto converſa, & plurimis Doctorum atque adeo Catholicarum Univerſitatum ſuffragiis approbata. This Book was printed at Antwerp in the Year 1631. in 12. I am ſatisfied, that moſt of my Readers will be pleaſed to find here the Occaſion and Progreſs of this Hierarchical Diſpute. You muſt know then, that Richard Smith, Biſhop of Chalcedon, having received the Authority of an Ordinary over the Catholicks of England, in the Year 1626, came into that Iſland a little after. He undertook to extend his Juriſdiction over the Jeſuits, and the other Regulars; but he met with ſo many Obſtacles, that he was obliged to deſiſt, and to return into France. They perceived, that the Charities which were beſtowed upon this Prelate, that he might keep up the Dignity of his Character, came no longer to them, which did not pleaſe 'em; therefore they formed a Party ſo cunningly, that they obliged the Biſhop to retire. This Retreat was quickly followed by a furious Paper War. The firſt that entered the Liſts, was Doctor Kelliſon, Profeſſor at Douay; he wrote in Defence of the Biſhop's Authority. Knot, Provincial of the Jeſuits, anſwered him under the Name of Nicolas Smith. A little after a Book came out (m) upon this Subject, the Author whereof took the Name of Daniel à Jeſu, though his Name was John Lloyd. He was a Jeſuit, Profeſſor at St. Omer. The Archbiſhop of Paris cenſured the Books of both theſe Jeſuits: The Sorbonne, and the General Aſſembly of the Clergy of France, did the ſame. (n) Which was ſo far from ſtopping the Mouths of the Jeſuits, that it engaged 'em to reprint their Books in the Latin Tongue, with great Approbations. They publiſhed alſo a Remonſtrance againſt the Biſhop of Chalcedon, in the Name of the Catholicks of England. The Secular Clergy publiſhed the ſame Year 1631, Three Writings in England, ' in oppoſition to ' the Jeſuits. Who were ſo far from quitting ' the Field by reaſon of the number of their Enemies, that they began a freſh Charge againſt ' both the Sorbonne Doctors, and the French ' Clergy, under the feigned name of Hermannus ' Loemelius, whoſe chief Author was the fore-named Jeſuit Lloyd, with the aſſiſtance of his Brethren, as the diverſity of the Style ſhews. And another Book came out againſt the Faculty of Paris, in Vindication of Knot or Nicolas Smith, ' with many Approbations of Biſhops, Univerſities ' and private Doctors: And in Vindication of the ' Propoſitions of Ireland (likewiſe cenſured at Paris) another Book came forth, under the name of ' Edmondus Urſulanus, whoſe true name was Macmahone, Prior of the Franciſcan Convent in Louvain. About the ſame time, the Jeſuits Publiſhed their Cenſure of the Apoſtolical Creed, in imitation of the Cenſures at Paris, againſt their Doctrines (as though their Doctrines were as certain as that, and themſelves as infallible as the Apoſtles:) Wherein they charge the Biſhops their Enemies, with reviving old Hereſies, and broaching new ones. The Jeſuits having now done ſuch great things, triumph unreaſonably in all places, as having utterly overthrown their Enemies, and beaten them out of the Field: When, in a little time after. Hallier and le Maiſtre, two Doctors of the Sorbonne, undertake the Quarrel againſt them; but none was ſo highly magnified and infinitely applauded by the French Clergy, as a Perſon under the diſguiſed name of Petrus Aurelius; whoſe Atchievements in this kind they Celebrated, next to thoſe of the Pucelle d' Orleans, and Printed all theſe Works together at their own Charge: And writ a high Elogium of him, which is received before them. And the ſecular Clergy of England ſent him a Letter of Congratulation for his Triumphs, ſubſcribed by John Colleton Dean of the Chapter, and Edmond Dutton Secretary; wherein, they ſadly lament the Diſcords that have been among them here, and the Hereſies broached by their Adverſaries, by occaſion of them. The main of this Controverſie did concern the Dignity, Neceſſity, and Juriſdiction of the Epiſcopal Order; as appears by th Cenſures of the Biſhops of France, and by Aurelius, who ſaith, (o) that although the Diſpute began upon occaſion of the Biſhop of Chalcedon, and the Engliſh Clergy, yet it was now carried farther, whether the Epiſcopal Order was neceſſary to the Being of a particular Church? Whether it was by Divine Right, or no? Whether Confirmation might be given, without Biſhops? Whether the Epiſcopal Order was more perfect, than the Monaſtical? Whether the Regulars were under the Juriſdiction of Biſhops? (a)

(m) Intituled, Apologia Eccleſiæ Apoſtolicæ quoad modum procedendi circa regimen Catholicorum in Anglia 1631. in 8. Alegambe, p. 242. mentions it; but Sotuel ſays nothing of it.

(n) Stillingfleet, ubi infra.

(o) Id.

(a) His Catalogue of the Books of Edward Knot.] (b) Miſericordia, & veritas, ſeu charitas propugnata a 1634, in 4. againſt Doctor Potter, who had accuſed the Church of Rome of want of Charity, in maintaining, that there is no Salvation in the Profeſſant Communion. Chriſtianitas propugnata, de eodem fere argumento adverſus replicam cujuſdam Hæretici Chillingworthii, at St. Omer, in 1634 in 4. Directio prævia ad eundem Chillingworthium, at London, 1638. in 8. Infidelitas detecta adverſus libros ejuſdem, quo docuerat religionem Proteſtantium eſſe ſectam viam ad ſalutem, at Ghent, 1652, in 4.

(b) His Catalogue of the Books of Edward Knot.] Petri Aurelii Orationum, tom. 1. fol. 22.

(a) Taken from a Book of Dr. Stillingfleet, intituled, A Diſcourſe concerning the Idolatry practiſed in the Church of Rome. London, 1676. p. 421. & ſeq. See alſo the Letters, intituled, Les Imaginaires, letter 3. p. m. 49 & ſeq.

Heretick. He was ſhut up (A) in a Priſon; and had he not fortunately eſcaped, he had died upon the Scaffold. He retired into England, where he was ſo much eſteemed by King Edward, that he might have (B) been made a Biſhop; but he was extreamly angry when they offered him a Biſhoprick, which he rejected as a thing, that favoured too much of Antichriſtianiſm. After the Death of this Prince he left England, that he might not fall into the Hands of the Perſecutors, and retired to Francfort, and afterwards to Geneva, where he preached to the Refugees of his Country, and entered into a ſtrict Friendſhip with John Calvin. He returned into Scotland in the Year 1559, and laboured to ſet up the Proteſtant Doctrines with an extraordinary Zeal, both by Word of Mouth and in Writing. His Enemies having expelled him from Edinburg, he retired to St. Andrews, where the Devil † raiſed him many Enemies, and eſpecially when he oppoſed ſome People, that conſpired againſt the Royal Majeſty. The News of the Paris Maſſacre overwhelmed him with Grief; but he quickly found himſelf comforted by the good Courſe of Affairs in Scotland. The Baniſhed were recalled to Edinburg, and he among the reſt *, where he reſumed the Functions of the Miniſtry. They granted him the Collegue that he deſired, and he inſtalled him the 9th. of November 1572, and this was the laſt Sermon that he preached. He fell ſick a little after, and till the 24th. of November following, which was the Day of his Death, he was altogether taken up with Pious Diſcourſes to his Wife, his Servant, and thoſe who viſited him ‖. He lived Fifty Seven Years †. Nothing can be more abuſive, than what Moreri ſays of our John Knox, out of Spondanus. Theſe Places have been left out in the Dutch Editions. The Misfortune is, that the Epiſcopal Clergy of England agree with the Popiſh Authors in crying him down as an Apoſtate, who eſtabliſhed his Reformation (C) by † Quæ ut primum venit multos illi Satanas excitavit hoſtes, præſertim cum ſe illis qui contra regiam majeſtatem conſpiraranr oppoſuiſſet. Melch. Adam. in vit. Theol. exter. p. 138.

* It does not appear that Beza knew he had been expelled from thence.

† Taken from his Life in Melchior Adam ubi ſupra.

† Beza in iconibus.

‖ Taken from Nathanael Sottuel, pag. 185.

(c) Hamelfontium unicum tunc portum aſylum perfugere cogeretur. Beza in Iconibus.

(d) And not at Edinburg, as Melchior Adam affirms, in vitis Theolog. exteror. pag. 137.

(e) Melch. Adam is guilty of a conſiderable Omiſſion, by not ſaying that Knox was a Prieſt.

(f) Berwick is not an Epiſcopal Town: Beza excuſes himſelf wrong.

(g) Beza, in [illegible] Melch. Adam, p. [illegible]

* Written by Thomas Smeton.

His Monita utiliſſima pro patribus Miſſionis Anglicanæ (b), have not been printed. We may eaſily gueſs, that ſome Political Reaſons hindred the Publication of this laſt Book.

(A) He was ſhut up in a Priſon.] Melchior Adam gives us here but a lame Account, and in ſome things contrary to that of Beza. Let us rectify it, and ſay, that John Knox, not being contented to renounce the Schoolmen, but having alſo very freely cenſured many other things, was forced to leave Edinburg, and to eſcape to Hameſton (c), the only Sanctuary of the faithful at that time. He there (d) publiſhed a Confeſſion of Faith, the Conſequence whereof was, that David Beton, Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, cauſed him to be condemned for Contumacy, as a Heretick, and degraded him from his Prieſthood (e), and that he had been killed by ſome Aſſaſſines, if a Scotch Gentleman had not ſaved him. Great Revolutions came on after that. This Archbiſhop, who was alſo a Cardinal, was killed: The French made themſelves Maſters of the Fortreſs of St. Andrews: Knox fell into their Hands, and obtained his Deliverance, and betook himſelf to Berwick, an Engliſh Town on the Confines of Scotland. He there diſputed, according to Beza, with the Biſhop of that Place. (f) illius civitatis pſeudo-Epiſcopo: Their Diſpute was referred to the Parliament of England, who adjudged the Victory to Knox. Utroque ad ſupremum Angliæ ſenatum rejecto, (tum autem Eduardus regnare cœperat) tantum effecit ut victoria penes veritatem ſtante, damnaretur quidem falſa religionis pſeudepiſcopus, ipſum verò tum pietas, tum diligentia magnopere commendaret (g). I cannot tell whether this Diſpute was not the ſame thing that John Knox did in the Dioceſs of Durham. He was forced to ſpeak his Thoughts concerning the Maſs, and he expoſed in a Sermon with ſo much Strength, the Blaſphemy and Idolatry of that Sacrifice, that Biſhop Tonſtal and his Doctors could not give him any good Anſwer. I doubt that they have made two Events of one. However, here's the Proof of what I have ſaid concerning this Sermon. (h) Specimen ejus illuſtre depoſuit tum alias, tum anno 1550. in terra Dunelmenſi: quando coactus coram Epiſcopo Tonſtallo & ejus doctoribus ſuper Miſſa Pontificia opinionem ſuam exponere; pro concione illius idololatrias & horrendas blaſphemias tam ſolidis argumentis demonſtravit, ut adverſarii, quod vere opponerent, non haberent. Perhaps Knox's Life (i), which I have not by me, if conſulted, would clear this matter. We ſhall in the next place ſee what the King did for him.

(B) He might have been made a Biſhop; but he rejected it as a thing.] His Zeal againſt the Hierarchy appeared upon that Occaſion, as we find in Melchior Adam, at the 137th. Page of the Lives of Foreign Divines. Cum Epiſcopatus de Regis voluntate Knoxo eſſet oblatus: indignabundus Knoxus non ſolum honorem recuſavit, ſed etiam Oratione gravi titulos illos improbavit, quaſi regni Antichriſtiani quiddam redolentes. His Refuſal of ſuch a Preferment is very much praiſed by Beza, who doubtleſs, whatever ſome modern Miniſters may ſay of him, was fully perſuaded with his Collegues, that the Equality of Paſtors is of Divine Right, and that therefore the Eccleſiaſtical Hierarchy is a Fundamental Corruption. Here are ſome ſharp Strokes of Beza againſt Epiſcopacy. (k) Inde Novocaſtrum ac deinceps Londinum ad Regem accito (Knoxo) quum Epiſcopatus quidam offerretur, tantum abeſt ut illum receperit, ut etiam in totam illam verè Satanicam poteſtatem graviter ſit invectus, ut quæ divino jure nullo nitatur, ac ne & veteribus quidem canonibus adminiſtretur: qua in re, etſi non obtinuit (quod ſi in Anglia & alibi factum eſſet, id eſt ſi cauſa illa Tyrannidis omnis Eccleſiaſtica præcipua & primaria eſſet ſublata, longè alia facies Eccleſiarum eſſet) conſcientiam tamen ſuam ſingulari cum Chriſtiana Modeſtia exemplo liberavit.

(C) His Reformation by Fire and Sword.] Spondanus having ſaid that Knox, an Apoſtate Prieſt and a Monk, a Corrupter of many Women, and even of his Mother-in-Law, and a Magician, was returned into Scotland with full Inſtructions from Calvin in the year 1559, adds what follows. Adeo prædicationibus ſuis & invectivis rem auxit, ut non ſolùm paſſim templa & monaſteria deſtructa fuerint, ſacra conculcata, Imagines confractæ, ornamenta & bona expilata, exturbati monachi, ſacerdotes pulſi, Epiſcopi ejecti; verùm etiam omnis obedientia Regenti renunciata, omniſque auctoritas abrogata, & in quorundam, quos tanquam conſiliarios eligebant, tranſlata (a). He ſays in another Place (b), relating the different Opinions of thoſe who Voted about the Deſtiny of Queen Mary Stuart, that ſome by Knox's Advice, were for putting her immediately to Death. Laſtly, he ſays, that King James Recommended it to his Son not to Read Buchanan's Libels, nor Knox's Chronicle, but on the contrary to puniſh ſeverely ſuch as kept thoſe pernicious Books, and to ſuppoſe according to the Doctrine of Pythagoras, that the Souls of thoſe Seditious Authors were Tranſmigrated into the Bodies of ſuch as read 'em, or maintained their Opinions, and that therefore they deſerved the ſame Puniſhment, as would be juſtly inflicted upon thoſe Authors, if they were raiſed from the Dead. (c) Haud tamen famoſos libros Buchanani, aut Knoxii Chronica evolveret: ſed ſi quod ejuſmodi ſcriptum inveniret, cum ejus depoſitariis ex legis ſeveritate ageret. In eo Pythagoræ diſcipulum ſe profiteretur: ut exiſtimaret ipſos manes iſtorum ſeditioſarum flabellorum mutatæ choſi quadam in eorum corpora tranſiſſe, qui eorum vel libros retinerent, vel dogmata defenderent: eoſque non minori ſupplicio plectendos, quàm ſi ipſi auctores jam à mortuis eſſent reſuſcitati. He cites the ſecond Book of the Baſilicon Doron: I have conſulted it, and can find nothing but this in it. 'I don't mean thoſe Hiſtories

(k) Beza in Iconib. A little after he has theſe Words: Non veram tantum doctrinam, ſed etiam veram & ad divini verbi normam exactam diſciplinam paſſim tum verbis, tum reipſa ſtatuerit.—Sibi non in ultla gradus pſeud-Epiſcopatus tyrannide cui merito ſit intimiciſſimus, ſed in Evangelico miniſterio una cum reliquis e Collegis & Presbyteris æquo prorſus jure adminiſtrando, Joannem Lauſonium ſucceſſorem deſignatum amplexus.

(a) Spondanus ad ann. 1559. n. 30. p. 587.

(b) Ad ann. 1567. n. 3. pag. 690.

(c) Idem Spond. ad ann. 1539. n. 7. pag. 450.

till

by Fire and Sword, and who taught (D) moſt Seditious Doctrines. I have not been able to know, by the reading of his Works, whether all that is imputed to him be true: but when I conſider the Anſwers (E) that are made for him, I can't doubt, but that his Opinions concerning the Royal Authority, were ſuch as the Epiſcopal

(2) Joannes Brerleius Sacerdos Anglus in Apologia Proteſtantium pro Romana Eccleſia, tract. 3. ſect. 2. p. 623. 624.

(1) Vide Holinſhedi magnum Chron. ultimæ editionis p. 340. initio & fine; & Bancroft. in lib. Propoſitiones, &c. p. 15. ante medium, ubi ait: Horrenda illa Card. & Archiepiſcopi Sancti Andreæ, quippe qui & ante fuerat & tunc erat præfractus (novi ſcilicet Evangelii) adverſarius, & ejus cædes anno 1545. perpetrata, ſuper ſcripto defenditur, tanquam facinus pium, aliique ad parifacinora audendum excitantur per Knoxium in Hiſtoria Scotiæ p. 187.

(2) Holinſhedus ubi ſupra, p. 366. b. lin. 14. 15. &c.

' full of Gall and Invectives, thoſe Defamatory ' Libels, which ought neither to be read nor kept ' by your Subjects, under great Penalties, which ' you ought to lay upon 'em. For in this caſe I ' would have you, as a Diſciple of Pythagoras, be- ' lieve, that the Souls of thoſe Inſtigators of Sedi- ' tion are gone into thoſe that keep their Writings, ' and defend their Opinions; who ought to be Pu- ' niſhed neither more nor leſs than the Authors ' themſelves. Theſe are King James's Words ac- cording to the French Tranſlation of the Baſilicon Doron, made by the Sieur de Villiers Hotman, and Printed at Paris in the year 1604. Conſult the ſe- cond Part, and the 57*th.* Leaf. Spondanus goes be- yond the bounds of an Hiſtorian, when he makes King James expreſly quote theſe two Authors: He ſhould have been contented to ſay by Conjecture, that this Prince meant them. Let us ſee what the Epiſ- copal Men cited by Brerleius ſay; for not being able to come at their Books, I have been forced to depend on him, and to Tranſcribe what he re- lates. ' (d) Et primo quidem de Joanne Knoxio—— ' notum atque ipſorum Proteſtantium teſtimonio con- firmatum eſt, cum poſtquam Geneva in Scotiam redi- iſſet, Religionem vi & armis ad phantaſiam ſuam ibi reformare aggreſſum eſſe, Cumque Caſtrum San- ' cti Andreæ clanculariis inſidiis (1) occupaſſet, & ' Cardinalem horrendo aſſaſſinatu in cubiculo ſuo ' occidiſſet, & ob id ſcelus à Regina Stryulingam ad ' jus dicendum (2) vocatus fuiſſet, nec compararet, ' perduelleum declaratum eſſe. Ille vero audiciam ' non deponens, ſed confirmans, mox Perthæ turbas ' ciere. Magiſtratum Sancti Joannis & Dundeæ ' cum plebe ibidem tumultuante ut imagines, & Al- ' taria, per omnes Eccleſias, & Monaſteria, aliaque ' Religioſorum domicilia undique per circuitum di- ' ruerent, hortari: Ipſe autem poſt concionem qua ' talia auditoribus ſuaſit, habitam, Carthuſianorum, ' Prædicatorum, & Carmelitarum Domos ſubver- ' tere, Imagines & Altaria Fiſæ, Anguſæ Mernæ, ' & aliis in locis deſtruere, & ſic omnes Religionis ' iſtius Eccleſias (novo ſcilicet modo) reformare ' pergebat. Poſt hæc inquit Bancroftus (qui & ip- ſius Knoxii Chronicon citatis ipſis foliis ubi ſingula facta narrantur, in teſtimonium adducit.) (3) Alia ' vice coierunt reformatores ad Sancti Andreæ, ubi ' ex inſtigatione Knoxii pro concione tam fratrum ' Religioſorum domos, quam reliqua illius oppidi ' Monaſteria ſpoliarunt, dejecerunt, vaſtarunt. Idem ' Sconi, Stryulingæ, Lithquo, & Edenburgi patra- ' runt: Regina ob metum fugam capeſcente, duo- ' bus menſibus in campo caſtra metati ſunt, & mo- ' netæ cudendæ inſtrumenta diripuerunt, & factum ' defenderunt, &c. Reginam mentitam eſſe ſæpe ' convicti ſunt, eamque indigniſſimis ſædoriis one- ' rarunt, eique obedientiam præſtare renuerunt, im- ' mo eam (4) omni authoritate regali exuerunt, ex- ' preſſo inſtrumento ad id à Knoxio exarato.

(D) Who Taught moſt Seditious Doctrines.] Let us here Brerleius, Page 625. ' Summa autem opi- nionis ejus, ut ex ſcriptis ſuis colligitur, & ex ipſo folio pro qualibet harum aſſertionum citato pa- tet, his propoſitionibus (quas citat) (5) Bancroftus) continetur, (6) Proceres tenentur ſi modo Rex no- lit, Religionem reformare. Plebis (7) eſt Reli- gionem reformare. (8) Deus conſtituit Proceres ad effrænes Principum appetitus coercendos. (9) Principes ob juſtas cauſas deponi poſſunt. (10) Si Principes adverſus Deum ac veritatem ejus tyran- nicè ſe gerant, ſubditi eorum à juramento fidelita- tis abſolvuntur. Cum pleriſque aliis id genus dog- matibus. Compare with this the Words of Petra Sancta, which ſhall be cited in the following Remark.

(E) When I conſider the Anſwers that are made for him.] The firſt thing that I am to ſay, is that thoſe who Defame the Actions and Opinions of our Knox, Maliciouſly preſuppoſe that he Acted (e) in concert with Calvin, and brought from Geneva the Notions that he ſet forth in Scotland. With this Proſpect, they affect to produce the Encomiums, which Calvin and Beza beſtowed upon him. We muſt hear Brerleius page 619. ' Hinc Joan. Knoxius ſcholæ ' (11) Genevæ diſcipulus (quem Calvinus (12) Vi- ' rum inſignem vocat & fratrem ſuum reverendum) ' doctrinæ Calvini probe conſciæ, ex opinione Cal- vini & aliorum quorundam Miniſtrorum Genevæ commorantium (teſte (13) Sutcliffo & Bancrofto) ' docuit: Licere ſubditis ſi Principes nollent, immo ' ſi id opus eſſet, vi & armis Religionem reformare. ' Hinc eſt quod licet doctrina & facta Goodmanni & Knoxii ſic conjurationi faveant, ut id nulla ter- giverſatione celari poſſit, eos tamen ambos Calvinus ' (14) fratres ſuos venerandos nominet, & audacem Knoxii in eo genere temeritatem laudet, (15) quem ' egregiam Chriſto & Eccleſiæ operam navaſſe ait, ' (16) & ſe vehementer lætari dicit, quod tam fœli- ' ces & lætos progreſſus fecerit. They don't forget that Beza in his Icones calls him the Apoſtle of Scot- land. A quibus (Anglis), ſays Spondanus (f) under the year 1559. n. 30. ad Scotos tranſeuntibus primus occurrit magnus ille IOANNES KNOX- US, quem ſi Scotorum in vero Dei cultu inſtaurando velut Apoſtolum quendam dixero, dixiſſe me quod res eſt exiſtimabo, & ſequens vera ipſius vita narratio teſtabitur. Cardinal Richelieu, when he was yet but Biſhop of Luſſon, Publiſhed a Book of Contro- verſy, wherein he made uſe of John Brerleius's Col- lections, and particularly in what relates to Knox's Seditious Opinions. I have conſulted the Anſwers that were made to this Book of the Biſhop of Luſ- ſon, but I confeſs, I could find nothing in them to make me ſuſpect the Credit of Brerleius's Citati- ons.

Peter de la Vallade Miniſter of Fontenai le Comte, Publiſhed a Book at Rochelle in 1619. in 4*to*. Intituled, ' an Apology for the Epiſtle of the Miniſters of the ' Goſpel at Paris, inſcribed to the King; in anſwer to ' the Book written againſt them by Armand John du ' Pleſſis de Richelieu, Biſhop of Luſſon: Containing ' a ſummary Decition of the principal Controverſies ' of this time about Religion by the Authority of ' the Scripture, and the Teſtimony of the Antient ' Doctors of the Church; with a brief Defence a- ' gainſt the Reproaches which are made againſt the ' Proteſtants, on occaſion of the Troubles and Wars ' that have happened in France, Germany, Scotland ' and Denmark. Extracted for the moſt part from ' the Hiſtory of James Auguſtus de Thou, Preſident ' in the Parliament of Paris, or from the very ' Hiſtorians alledged and approved by the Biſhop ' of Luſſon. He relates the very Words of the Ob- jection. ' I could, ſays the Biſhop, prove your O- ' pinion in this matter, by a great number of Au- ' thors, if what you teach upon this Subject was as ' Advantageous, as it is prejudicial to you. I am ' contented to deſire the Reader to conſult a Book ' Intituled Apologia Proteſtantum, one of the moſt ' uſeful Books that has been Printed for a long time, ' in which he'll find more Paſſages upon this Sub- ' ject, and ſome amongſt others, which prove that ſome ' of your Writers have written, that by the Divine (e) See Spondan. ad. ann. 1559. n. 30.

(11) Sic Bancroftus in aſſertionibus ſeditionis, p. 10. initio.

(12) Calvin. in Epiſt. & reſponſ. Epiſt. 705. fine: & p. 565. in concluſione illius Epiſtolæ quæ ad Knoxium ſcribitur, ubi ſic habet: Vale eximie vir, & ex animo colende frater. Et Beza in Epiſt. Theologicis Epiſt. 74. ſic habet: Joanni Knoxio Evangelii apud Scotos reſtauratori, fratri, & ſimmiſſe obſervando.

(13) Vide hoc in Hiſt. Eccleſiæ Scotiæ per l'antronicellerum, p. 213. & citatur à Sutcliffo in reſponſ. ad libellum ſuppli- cem, p. 193. & 71. In Aſſertionibus, &c. p. 10.

(14) Calvinus ut ſupra ad (12): & vide Calvini Epiſt. 306. ubi eum virum eximium vocat, fratrem colendum,

(3) Bancroftus in libro cui titulus, Aſſertiones ſcandaloſæ, &c. p. 12. (4) Ibid. p. 13. initio, & Sutcliffus in reſponſione ad libellum quendam ſuppliccm, p. 193. prope finem quærit à Puritanis, Num rationes à Knoxio & Wollocko allatæ latis probarent, nempe Principem, ſeu Gubernatricem legitime conſtitutam, à ſubditis deponi poſſe, quemadmodum ipſi de facto Reginam Scotiæ gu- bernatricem regno abdicarunt. (5) In lib cui titulus, Aſſertio- nes ſcandaloſæ, p. 14. 15. (6) Knoxius appellat. fol. 25. (7) Idem ad plebem, fol. 40. 50. (8) Idem Hiſt. p. 343. (9) Idem Hiſt. pag. 371. (10) Idem ad Angliam & Scotiam, folio 76.

& Knoxio coadjutorem fidelem. (15) Calvinus, Epiſt. ubi ſupra, p. 566. circa med. ait, Strenuè operam ſuam Chriſto & Eccleſiæ impendit. (16) Calvinus ubi ſupra Epiſt. 305. Joanni Knoxio, p. 565. ait: Evangelium apud vos tam fœlices lætoſque progreſſus facere vehementer, ut par eſt, lætor: certamina vobis moveri non novum eſt, ſed eo clarius refulget Dei virtus, &c. quando ad reſiſtendum pares nunquam fuiſſetis, niſi à cœlo vobis opem tuliſſet, qui ſuperior eſt toto mundo. (f) Quoting Beza's own Words.

copal Clergy, and the Catholick Party charg'd him with. Some aſcribe to him (F) a Spirit of Prophecy. It is doubtleſs doing ſome Service to the Memory of John Knox,

(c) Silveſter Petra Sancta not. in Epiſtol. Molinæi ad Balzacum, p. 104. That Book was Printed at Amſterp in 1634. in 8vo.

(2) In Admonit. ad Nobil. & Pop. Scot. atque Anglia.

(f) Buchananus ſcripſit de jure regni apud Scotos, ſed hoc nihil ad Gallium, Anglum, Germanianum, Hiſpanium. Nec ſi quis aliquid ſcripſit quod modum excedat, debet continuo adſcribi ejus religioni, potius quam ejus genio. Nam ejuſmodi libri quos citat Jeſuita, ſive veri ſive falſi, nullam præferunt fronte approbationem Doctorum. Petrus Molinæus in Append. ad Epiſt. 2. 3. c. 11. p. 492.

(g) David Blondel had already obſerved it ubi ſupra p. 213.

(h) Rivet. in Caſtigation. notarum in Epiſtol. ad Balzacum c. 13. n. 14. Oper. tom. 3. p. 536.

(i) Petra Sancta ubi ſupra, p. 185. Hiſtor. Whitak. Contr. 2. q. 5. c. 13.

(a) La Vallade, Apologie p. 544.

(b) David Blondel. His Anſwer Printed at Sedan 1619. in 8vo. Is Intituled: Modeſte declaration de la ſincerité & verité de Egliſes Reformées de France.

(c) See his Anſwer p. 287.

(d) Blondel, p. 294.

(1) There are but five Letters written to Knox, three of Calvin, and two of Beza: One of Calvin to Goodman, and one of Beza to Buchanan. There is not one Word of Advice about State Affairs to be found in any of 'em.

'and Humane Laws, it is lawful to kill 'impious Kings, that 'tis a thing agreeable to 'the Word of God, that a private Perſon by 'a ſpecial Inſtinct may kill a Tyrant, a Doctrine e'very way Deteſtable, which can never enter into 'the Thoughts of the Catholick Church. Here follows the anſwer to that Objection. '(d) There 'was no need here, where we are only concerned 'in the ſearch of Truth, of ſuch Rhetorical Flou'riſhes, which are only Fictions and Falſities; for 'how is it poſſible, that he ſhould have ſo many 'Authors in hand, who make us Guilty of ſo de'teſtable a Doctrine, and yet not produce one that 'ſpeaks a Word of it? Nay, to produce the weak 'Proof that he has advanced, he was forced as it 'were to run-over all the Earth, and to go into 'the other World among the Savages, and bring 'Buchanan to Life again, who had his Birth there? 'And who yet never made Profeſſion of Divinity? 'How is it credible that the Biſhop ſhould be ſo 'moderate as not to produce thoſe many Authors, be'cauſe it is not to our Advantage, but to our Preju'dice; ſince he has undertaken to write againſt 'us? It is a Prevarication to conceal what is De'trimental to ones Antagoniſt, and adverſe Party, 'and to alledge what is advantageous to him. Such 'Diſſimulations are not becoming a Biſhop who pro'feſſes to ſpeak the Truth; he ſhould not have 'ſpared us, ſince the buſineſs was to make us ac'knowledge our Fault in ſo important a Point; he 'ſhould not have referred us to the Apologie Pro'teſtantum, which Book I never ſaw, nor know 'where to find it: But I know very well, that the 'Author of it, if he be one of ours, does not ſpeak 'as the Biſhop ſays he does; but if he be one of 'their Writers, he advances this of his own Head, 'and has no good Proof for it. 'Tis manifeſt that this Anſwer do's not at all clear John Knox. Another Miniſter (b) much more Learned than he of Fontenai le Comte, anſwered the Biſhop of Luſſon: He had (c) read John Brerleius's Book, and gave a ſatisfactory anſwer to the Objections grounded on ſome Paſſages of Calvin: But he forſakes John Knox, and maintains, that the Encomiums which Calvin and Beza give him, no ways concern his Notions about the Royal Authority, nor his particular Actions, in which ſome ſtrong ſteps of Rebellion might be found. This Miniſter's Words are theſe. '(d) As for Knox, 'Goodman, and Buchanan, the occaſion and time in 'which they writ, leſſen in ſome meaſure the O'dium of the Doctrine, which they ſpread in Scot'land inconſiderately and againſt the Truth, which 'their Anger, natural to that Nation, and the general 'Troubles of the State, hindered them from di'ſtinctly diſcovering; according to the cuſtom of 'Men who chuſe rather, even with Sharpneſs and 'Obſtinacy, to defend an ill thing in which they 'are ingaged out of Paſſion, and without any ill 'will, than to confeſs what has been ill done, or ill 'contrived, either by themſelves or their Party. Not'withſtanding thoſe Excelles they have all three 'been great Men, and in other things very ſervi'ceable; Buchanan particularly in Tutoring the 'King of Great Britain, and the others in the 'Work of the Miniſtry, to which they ſhould have 'been intirely and wholly Dedicated. Granting 'that Calvin (1) (in the Letters that he writ to 'them) called the two firſt Brethren and excellent 'Men; and that Beza gave ——— the firſt ——— 'the Title of Reſtorer of the Goſpel in Scotland: 'Doth this prove, that they Subſcribed to their 'Opinions concerning the Supream Authority of 'Kings, or that they were Communicated to them, 'or that they ſo much as knew, what paſſed in 'Scotland after the change of Religion, or that 'our Adverſaries go upon good Grounds in affirm'ing againſt the Truth, that the Books of Knox and 'Goodman were Subſcribed at Geneva with the Appro'bation of Beza and Calvin. If thoſe Gentlemen are 'pleaſed to prove what they certify upon their base 'Word, and to aver that the Miniſters of Geneva 'Communicated with the above-named in other 'than Eccleſiaſtical Things, or that they were in'formed of their particular Opinions concerning 'the Right of Kings, or that they truly underſtood, 'and afterwards approved, what they have taught 'concerning Politicks, then they ſhall have liberty 'to complain. But on the contrary, it appears, from 'the Letters cited in the Biſhop of Luſſon's little 'Book, that the Miniſters of Geneva never gave 'nor received Advice from Foreigners, except in 'matters purely Eccleſiaſtical, and particularly '(from thoſe which Beza writ to Knox) that at 'Geneva they had no certain News of the Scotch 'Tranſactions ——— If therefore Calvin, Beza, Whitaker, or ſome others of our Religion, have 'called Knox and Goodman their Brethren, it does 'not follow from it that they adopted their Opi'nions, but only that they call'd 'em ſo, with re'ſpect to the Eccleſiaſtical Office, with which they 'were inveſted. If they praiſed 'em, they did it 'only according to their Knowledge, not thinking 'them impeccable: For it is not impoſſible but that 'amongſt thoſe who Preach Chriſt (as St. Paul ſays 'to the Philippians) ſome ſhould Preach him out of 'Envy and Contention, and mix the fervour of their 'Zeal with their Infirmities: amongſt which if the 'Lord frequently accompliſhes his Work, drawing 'Light from Darkneſs, and Order from Confuſion; 'tis that the Glory of what is well done, may be'long to his Conduct, and all Evil to the Imper'fections of his Inſtruments. Is not this to Ac'knowledge that Brerleius, and thoſe like him, 'have not Slander'd Knox with reſpect to the Opi'nions they impute to him?

Juſt as the Biſhop of Luſſon had made uſe of John Boucher's Collections, the Jeſuit Petra Sancta ſometime after made uſe of this Biſhop's Book, to object againſt du Moulin, what ſeveral Proteſtants had ſaid about the Obedience of Subjects. Here follows what he alledged againſt Knox (e): Si principes, inquit (2), adverſus Deum & veritatem ejus tyrannidem ſe gerant, ſubditi eorum à juramento fidelitatis abſolvantur. Idem præter alia multa, Illud, inquit, audaciter affirmaverim, debuiſſe Nobiles, Rectores, Judices, Populumque Anglicanum, non ſolum reſiſtere & repugnare Mariæ illi Jezabel, quam vocant Reginam ſuam; verum etiam de eâ & Sacerdotibus ejus, & aliis omnibus, quotquot ei auxilium tulerunt, mortis ſupplicium ſumere, ut primùm cœperunt Evangelium Chriſti ſuppriměre. What did Mr. du Moulin Reply? He made no mention of John Knox, but was contented to ſay that Buchanan (f), whom the Jeſuit ſpoke of too, had only treated of the right of the Scotch, and that if other Authors had run into excels, it ought to be aſcribed to their particular Temper, and not to the Spirit of their Religion. Rivet in his Anſwer to the ſame Jeſuit referr'd him to the two above mentioned Books written againſt the Biſhop of Luſſon, and Expreſly declared that the Proteſtants diſapproved the Opinions of John Knox, and of others like him, who had rather Acted according to the Spirit of their Nation, than according to the Spirit of Religion. Upon which he obſerves (g), that of the 105 Kings, who Reigned in Scotland before Mary Stuart, there had been three Depoſed, five Expelled, and thirty two Killed. (h) Nemini noſtrum probantur quæ vel ex Goodmanno, vel ex Knoxo, vel ex Buchanano in eam ſententiam deſcribuntur, quamvis ii uſque non procedant, quæ Jeſuita protulerunt, vel alii qui in Gallia ſcripſerunt de Juſta Henrici tertii abdicatione, & crimenum in Belgio fovendum, ubi ſcribit Jeſuita Romanus. Id tantùm obſervandum eſt, ſi quæ durioribus perſecutionum temporibus à Scotis & Anglis nonnullis timerè ſcripta fuerunt, ea poſſe imputari non tam Religioni, quam nationum illarum, ſcoticæ præſertim, ferocis ingenio, & ad vindictam prompto: quod tamen valdè mitigatum fuiſſe accenſa veritatis Evangelicæ luce, ex eo conſtat, quod ex centum quinque regibus fuit, uſque ad Mariam, tres excarnificarunt, quinque expulerunt, & triginta duos necarunt: quod ne Religioni imputetur magis veſtra intereſt, quam noſtra. After this, I may be allowed to obſerve, that Knox's Books contain the Propoſitions which Brerleius quoted out of 'em upon the credit of the Epiſcopal Clergy.

(F) A Spirit of Prophecy.] Petra Sancta having mentioned the praiſes, which Calvin and Beza beſtowed upon Knox, adds (i), à Whitakero ex omnium Sco-

Knox, to shew the Extravagancies of those who have aspersed his Reputation. This obliges me to set down a Passage of Thevet (G), where we shall see such gross and outrageous Abuses, as will alone be sufficient to prejudice us against whatever the Catholick Writers have published concerning that great Scotch Reformer. I wish it were as easie to confute the Accusation of a Lutheran (H) who charges him with Inconstancy.

KNU-

Scotorum sententia, Spiritu Prophetico, & Apostolico præditus apellatur. David Blondel (a) says something more particular, 'endowed with a Prophetical Spirit, by which he foretold many things 'that are come to pass, as Whitaker observes in his 'Writings.

(a) Blondel ubi supra, pag. 295. He quotes Witaker de Eccle. qu. 5. cap. 13.

(G) A Passage of Thevet, wherein we shall see such gross and Outrageous Abuses.] No body can question that this Man was a bad Compiler. He was so little exact, that when he undertook to write of the Affairs of Scotland, he did not so much as give himself the Trouble to observe the true Names of People. You'll see, that he knew not the right Name of our John Knox. 'All this while, says 'he (b), the Scotch suffered not England to be at 'rest; which happened, when Henry VIII. plaid 'his Pranks with Chalices, Relicks, and other Ornaments of the English Churches: which Tragedies and Sports have been plaid in our Time in 'the Kingdom of Scotland, by the Instigation of 'Noptz, the first Stalck Minister of the bloody 'Gospel. This Dyspheroist, who was fond of Dissensions, was not contented to tread in the Steps of Luther, Zuingius, and Firet, much less in those of his Master Calvin, who had lately redeemed him from the Gallies of the Prior of Capua, in 'which he had remained three Years for his Crimes, 'unlawful Amours, and execrable Whoredoms, and for his dissolute Living, and for having been convicted of Parricide and Murther, committed upon the Person of James de Beton, Archbishop of 'St. Andrews, by the Connivance and Treachery of the Earl of Ropphot, James Lesele, John Lesele their Uncle, and William du Coy. This Simonist, who had been a Priest before in our Church, and fatten'd with Benefices, which he sold for ready 'Money, seeing he could not prove his Cause to be good, fell into the most horrid Blasphemy in in the World. First, he denied the Power of God; he preached openly, that Virginity was no better than Marriage: which he had from Luther's Heresie, out of his new Epithalamium. Likewise he induced many devout Wives, and Religious Virgins to prostitute themselves. He taught likewise, that we must reject, despise and trample under Foot the Holy Chrism, pull down Images, take up and burn the Bodies of Saints, and seize the Treasures of the Church. This is not all. He did not cease for two Years to animate the People to take up Arms against the Queen, to drive her out of the Kingdom, which he said was elective, as it had been in the Days of Paganism. Could the greatest Barbarians in the World say any thing more cruel and mischievous——— The Lutherans have Temples and Oratories, their Ministers sing Psalms, and say Mass; and tho' it be different from ours, yet they add to it, Kyrie Eleison, Credo, Sanctus, Agnus, and other Prayers like ours. In like Manner their Ministers, in the Time of Divine Service, wear Copes, Chasubles, and Surplices, like ours. Whereas the People of Scotland have lived these Twelve Years without Law, without Faith, without Ceremonies, and without acknowledging either King or Queen, any more than Brutes, being better pleased with the Fables of this rank Hypocrite Noptz, a Man unfaithful to God and his Country, than with the Purity of the Gospel, the Canons of the Councils, and the Doctrine of so many Holy Greek and Latin Doctors of the Catholick Church. This fine Preacher, after the Decease of his first Wife, suddenly provoked with his venomous Tongue the Nobility of Scotland to set up against the Clergy, more than he had done before; and then the Clowns assaulted, plundered, burnt, and ruined the Castles and Houses of the Gentlemen, Merchants and others, who would not join in their Debaucheries and Murthers. 'Tis certain, that this Traitor, puffed up with the Spirit of Ambition, and egged on by 'the Flesh, came into so great Credit and Honour 'with the ignorant People of that Country, that 'he married for his Second Wife a Gentlewoman of 'an ancient Family, related to the Scotch Princes of 'the Royal Blood. Are not People that write with so little Judgment, well qualified to make us question the Truths they advance, suppose any such escape 'em?

(b) Thevet. Cosmographie universelle B. 16. tom. 2. fol. 666.

(H) The Accusation of a Lutheran, who charges him with Inconstancy.] James Thomasius, Professor at Leipsick, published a little Discourse, intituled, Historia affectuum & miserandum Controversiæ de Gynæcocratia. He there speaks of the Passions that attend the Dispute concerning the Monarchy of Women; and he says, that this Question was warmly discussed in the XVIth Century, when Mary succeeded Edward King of England, and Elizabeth succeeded her Sister Mary. Those two Queens took two contrary Methods, as to Religion; the one banished the Non-Catholicks, the other recalled 'em, and made the Reformation triumph. Those whom Mary had persecuted, maintained, that it was contrary to Natural Right, and Divine and Humane Laws, that a Woman should rule over a whole Nation; but their Language was quite different under the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. See how Schlüsselburgius insulted hereupon our Knox and others. (c) Qui Calvini placita sequerentur, his nihil erat magis exosum fœmineo Mariæ regimine; iisdem vicissim, ubi ad clavum Reip. feliciter evectam conspexissent Elisabetham, nihil magis venerabile, quam Reginas fuit. Atque ut hoc de suo Schlüsselburgius (1), magnæ constantiæ doctrinaque Theologus, largiatur mihi, ex eadem Calvini religione Gilbius, Goodman & Knoxus, (qui scilicet exitium suum Mariæ imputabant) publicis libris Genevæ impressis, docuerunt, esse contrà jus naturale, divinum, & humanum, ut mulier etiam in rebus politicis regnet. At ubi Mariæ imperium Elisabetha excepisset, eximia & Pontificiorum hostis, & Calcinisequarum fautrix, protinus verso remigio à Reformatis Anglis, non Regina tantùm in temporalibus illa est proclamata, sed etiam caput Ecclesiæ in spiritualibus. Ita spacio duorum annorum, (ipsissima Schlüsselburgii verba recito,) quod prius fuit Calvinistis Genevæ moratis ipsissimum verbum DEI, mox atque in Angliam redierunt, mutatum est in verbum Diaboli. Tantum videlicet potuit amor in religionem, quam sub alterius fœmineo regno conculcatam viderent, sub alterius resurgentem, ut à personis in ipsum imperii genus defluente jam affectu proscriberent Gynæcocratiam, jam dignitati ac famæ restituerent. Thomasius, who supplies me with these Words, pretends that the Calvinists of France, changed also their Maxims after the Persecution they suffered under Charles IX. and he expressly cites Lambert Daneus, who on one hand declared against the Monarchical Power, and on the other for the Authority of Women, in Favour of Elizabeth Queen of England. (d) Ut Anglico regimini pro Gallico faveret (Daneus) illud maximè fecit, quòd sua secta hominibus & sub Elizabetha lætissima esset fortuna, & sub Carolo Gallo vix aliud præter gladium, crucem, ignis exspectandum. Notæ sunt Parisinæ nuptiæ (2) eo acta eventu, ut ab illo maximè tempore scriptores Galli pestilentem inceperint in Politica doctrina sectam sive navam condere, sive sepultam resuscitare, quam solemus vocare Monarchomachorum. Huic nomen addixit etiam suum Daneus: ut mirari aliquis possit, quomodo scriptor ille, qui vix Regem æquo animo pati posset in solio Monarchico, fuerit in eodem potuerit Reginam. Nempe vereor, ut non hic suæ partes egerit hoc odium in perfidiam Galli, illinc amor tam in felicissimam Elisabethæ gubernationem (3), tum in Religionem Calvini, cui perfugium ea tempestate in ipsâ insulâ satis tutum erat. 'Tis certain, that in that Century, the General Affairs whirled about in such a manner, both in France and England, that each Party changed their Maxims. See the Remark I of the Article Hotomanus. The Roman Catholicks, who spoke very ill

(c) Jacobus Thomasius in præfatione §6. pag. 328. edit. Lipsi. 1685.

(1) Lib. IV Theol. Calvinist. pag. 324, 325. Conf. Responsi. ad Calvini & Bez. pro Francisco Balduino pag. 15.

(d) Thomas. Ibid. pag. 331.

(2) Anni 1572.

(3) Hoc nostro tempore (inquit Polit. Christian. lib. VI. c. 3. pag. 308.) ELISABETHÆ, Serenissimæ Anglorum Reginæ, imperio nihil illa unquam ætas vidit felicius & optatius † Oldenſworta Eiderſladienſis. Moller. Iſagoge ad Hiſtor. Cherſon. Cimbr. parte 3. pag. 164.

* Tobias Pfannerus ſyſtemat. Theologiæ gentilis, pag. 35. & Mollerus ib. p. 105.

KNUZEN (Matthias) a Native of the Country † of Holſtein, arrived to ſuch a degree of Extravagancy, as publickly to maintain Atheiſm, and undertook great Journeys to gain Proſelytes. He was a reſtleſs Man, who ſhewed the beginning of his Impieties at Koningsberg in Pruſſia *. He boaſted, that he had a great Number (AD) of Friends in the principal Towns of Europe, and even Seven Hundred in the ſingle Town of Jena. His Sect was called the Conſcientiaries, becauſe he ſaid there was no other God, Religion, or Lawful Magiſtracy, than Conſcience, which teaches all Men the three Precepts of Juſtice, to do no Injury, to live honeſtly, and give every one his due. He made a Summary of his Syſtem, in a ſhort Letter (A) of which ſeveral Copies were ſpread. 'Tis dated from Rome. You'll find it entire in the laſt Editions of Micrælius. He diſperſed alſo ſome German Writings ‖. All this was confuted in the ſame Tongue, by John Muſæus, a (B) Lutheran Profeſſor. This Sect began about the Year 1673.

A Book was printed againſt Knuzen at Wittemberg (C) in the Year 1677.

KONIG (George Matthias) in Latin Konigius, Profeſſor of Poetry, and of the Greek Tongue, and Library Keeper in the Univerſity of Altorf, deſerves a place here in a particular manner; for I ſhould be ungrateful, ſhould I not acknowledge, that the Book he publiſhed in the Year 1678 ?, does me a conſiderable Service. I make no doubt that it is uſeful to a great many Men of Letters, notwithſtanding the Cenſure (D) that was paſt upon it. Our Konig ‡ died towards the end of the Year 1698, being 82 Years Old. He was Son of George Konig †, a Native of Amberg, who died in 1654, after he had taught Divinity Thirty Eight Years in the Univerſity of Altorf.

KOORN-

‖ Intituled Bibliotheca vetus & nova, in fol. I often quote it, and ſometimes I criticiſe upon it.

† Acta eruditor. Lipſ. 1699 pag. 360.

‡ Konig, Biblioth. pag. 448. See his Encomium in Witten's Memoriæ Theolog. renovatæ decade 8. pag. 1100. & ſeq.

ill of the Government of Women in the Reign of Elizabeth, had very much commended it in the Reign of Queen Mary. Knox and ſome others had the ſame Inconſtancy. The Roman Catholicks under Charles IX. preached up Submiſſion (e) to the Authority of the King; but they ſpoke and did quite contrary in the Time of the League, and their Adverſaries thought it very ſtrange. I have read in Savaron, a thing which I thought very curious. (f) 'Pedro Cornejo, a Spaniard——thinks it 'ſtrange and wonderful, that that Town (a) ſhould 'have remained firm in its Fidelity to its Prince, and 'that the laſt Troubles did not diſturb its Conſtan-'cy, nor ſhake its Reſolution: Since, ſays he, it is 'a very Catholick Town, and beautified with a 'Church, in which God is ſerved with great 'Modeſty, and Ceremony, Muſick, and as 'much Reverenced as in any Church I have ſeen. Generally ſpeaking, 'tis a Proof that Paſſions make Men ſpeak either for or againſt the right of Princes, to ſee the ſame People diſputing for the Affirmative or Negative, juſt as the Intereſts of their Cauſe happen to change.

(AD) He had a great Number of Friends.] Theſe are his Words. (b) Nemo homo mihi vitio vertet, ſi una cum meis gregalibus (quorum innumerus mihi numerus Lutetiæ, Amſtelodami, Lugduni, in Anglia, Hamburgi, Hafniæ, nec non Holmiæ, imo Romæ & in contiguis locis adſtipulatur) univerſa Biblia bellæ fabellæ loco habeam, qua bellua, id eſt, Chriſtiani, rationem captivantes, & cum ratione inſanientes delectantur. We muſt not imagine that he uſed the Stratagem of your State-Conſpirators, who to bring others to their Party, always ſay they have a vaſt Number of Accomplices. 'Tis more likely he ſpoke in this manner, becauſe he was a hair-brain'd Fool.

(A) In a ſhort Letter, of which ſeveral Copies were ſpread (c) about.] Micrælius's Continuator has reduced the Contents of that Letter to Six Articles. 1. Non eſſe Deum neque Diabolum. 2. Magiſtratum nihil eſtimandum, templa contemnenda, Sacerdotes rejiciendos. 3. Loco Magiſtratus & loco Sacerdotum eſſe ſcientiam & rationem cum conſcientia conjunctam, qua doceat honeſte vivere, neminem ladere, & ſuum cuique tribuere. 4. Conjugium à fœcundatione nihil differre. 5. Unicam eſſe vitam: poſt hanc nec præmium nec pœnam dari. 6. Scripturam ſacram ſecum ipſam pugnare (d). This Syſtem, beſides its horrible Impiety, is alſo plainly extravagant; for one muſt be mad, that can believe Mankind can ſubſiſt without Magiſtrates. 'Tis true, they would not be neceſſary, if all Men would follow the Dictates of Conſcience, which that impious Man exhibits to us; but are they followed even in thoſe Countries, where the Judges puniſh with the greateſt Severity, the Injuſtice that is done to ones Neighbour? I don't know but it may be ſaid, that there is no Impertinence, be it never ſo extravagant, but may teach us ſome Truth or other. The Follies of this German ſhew, that the Ideas of Virtue, the Impreſſions of Reaſon; in a Word, the Light of Conſcience may ſubſiſt in the Mind of Man, even after the Ideas of the Exiſtence of God, and the firm Belief of a Life to come are extinguiſhed.

(B) By John Muſæus, a Lutheran Profeſſor.] The Author I have this from, obſerves, that Muſæus ingaged in this Work, to remove all Suſpicions that might be entertained to the Diſadvantage of the Univerſity of Jena: for this wretched Man had boaſted of abundance (e) of Aſſociates there. That Book of Muſæus contains a great many ridiculous Things, concerning Knuzen's Life; but if you would have a ſolid Apology of the Scripture againſt the Blaſphemies of this Man, you muſt have recourſe to the Second Edition. And if you underſtand High-Dutch, conſult, as Mr. Mollerus (f) adviſes, the Book (g) which he ſpecifies, and obſerve his Reflection. He ſays, that if People continue to make their Enemies ſuſpected of Atheiſm, as the Author of this Piece with a paſſionate Zeal has done, they will afford matter enough to Mr. Chriſtian Thomaſius, who is about an Apology for thoſe who have been wrongfully expoſed to ſuch Accuſations. The Author of ſeveral Thoughts upon Comets has inſinuated (h) the Deſign of ſuch a Work, and given a curious Notion of it. But let Mr. Mollerus's Words inform us of the Malignity of ſuch ſort of Accuſers. (i) Quo in opere optandum eſſet ut Theol. celeberrimus (Jo. Mullerus, Antiſtes Hamb.) ſuo in Antagoniſtas odio minus indulſiſſet, nec per inſignem animi impotentiam, Schuppii & μιμητῶν Demegorias, piis omnibus commendatiſſimas & Chriſt. Hoburgii, ad extremum Atheiſmo contrarium, ſuperſtitionem ſc. & Enthuſiaſmum, proclivioris, ſcripta collo obtorto iis, qua Atheiſmum vel occultant, vel quadamtenus promovent, aggregaſſet. Certe, ſi zelo hujuſmodi præcipiti, privatiſque affectibus obnoxio, Theologi Atheomaſtiges ſibi inviſos in ſuſpicionem impietatis Atheiſmo affinis pergent adducere, vereor ne calamo Chriſt. Thomaſii μαγικῷ, Gabr. Naudæi (qui magia reis eſt patrocinatus) exemplo apologiam pro Atheiſmi falſo infimulatis parturienti, campus ſe pandat ampliſſimus innocentiam illorum, cum hominum cordatorum applauſu, vindicandi.

(C) A Book was printed againſt Knuzen.] The Title of it is, Exercitationes Academicæ II. de Atheiſmo Renato des Cartes & Matthiæ Knuzen oppoſita. Autore Valentino Greiſſingio Corona-Tranſylvano Elector. Saxon. alumno. This I have from a Book of (k) Caſpar Sagittarius.

(D) The Cenſure that was paſt upon it.] John Mollerus a Learned Man, who publiſhed at Hamburg, in the Year 1691, an Iſagoge ad hiſtoriam Cherſoneſi Cimbrica, had printed Four Years before, Cimbria literata prodromus, wherein according to the Liberty which ought to prevail among the Subjects of the Republick of Learning, he freely ſpoke

(a) Clermont in Auvergne.

(b) Apud Micralium Syntagm. Hiſtor. Eccleſ. pag. 2291. edit. 1699.

(c) Hæc epiſtola plus millies deſcripta eſt. Micræl. ubi infra.

(d) Micral. Syntagm. Hiſt. Eccleſ. p. 2289. Edit. 1699

(e) Blaſphemis ſuis—— in ſolo oppido Jenenſi 700. cives atque ſtudioſos falſo jactabat adſtipulari Mollerus Iſagoge ad Hiſtor. Cherſon. Cimbr. parte 3. pag. 1162.

(f) Atheiſmus devictus. It was printed in the Year 1672. The Author calls himſelf Jo. Mullerus, Antiſtes Hamburgenſis.

(g) In the Preface to the Addition printed at Rotterdam, 1694

(h) Mollerus, ibid.

(k) Intituled, Introductio in hiſtoriam Eccleſiaſticam, pag. 879. It was printed in 1694. in 4.

KOORNHERT (Theodorus) a Native of Amſterdam, and Secretary of the Town of Haerlem † in the XVI*th*. Century, made himſelf famous by ſome Writings that were very Unorthodox in point of Religion. He is Rank'd amongſt thoſe Spiritualiſts or Enthuſiaſts, who [a] believ'd that all the Sects of Chriſtianity had been Corrupted for many Ages, and that without an extraordinary Miſſion Authoriz'd by Miracles, no Body had a right to intrude into the Functions of the Goſpel Miniſtry. At this rate he publickly Condemn'd Calvin's and Luther's Undertaking, though he acknowledg'd that the Church of Rome was no true Church. Till it ſhould pleaſe God to raiſe Reformers, like the Apoſtles, he would have all Chriſtian Sects unite under one Form, (A) the Model whereof was, that the Scripture ſhould be read to the People without offering any Explication, or preſcribing any thing to the Auditors by way of Precept or Prohibition, but only by way of Advice. He did not believe that in order to be a true Chriſtian one ought (B) to be a Member of any particular Church, and he practis'd it accordingly; for he neither Communicated with the Catholicks nor with the Proteſtants, nor with any other Sect. He wrote with great Aſſurance * againſt the Reform'd Religion, and particularly againſt Calvin and Beza, and was accounted ſuch a Diſturber of Religion ‡ that the Magiſtrates of Delft expelled him from their Town, and the States of Holland decreed many things, upon which he complain'd that the Inquiſition was renew'd. Nothing appear'd to him more contrary to Reaſon and the Goſpel, than to Perſecute thoſe who are not of the † Hoornbeeck, ſumma controv. l. 6. p. m. 435.

[a] Id. ib.

* Ex oppugnatu in herbis Reformatione noſtrarum Eccleſiarum, pueriliorum noſtri Catechiſi, & proinde ibi nec noſtra Eccleſia, nec alius ... ſum interitus ... compendiis omnibus, & in gratiam ... dis nondum ... Calvinum dico, Bezam, Danæum, Sarravium, eos, quos ... Italiam ... inter ... ſtas ... ſum. Id.

‡ Voetius, de Politia Eccleſiaſt. tom. 2. p. 455.

(c) Id. ib. p. 436. 437.

(f) Vid. de mutuo odio ſectarum.

ſpoke his Thoughts about the Faults which he found in Konig's Book. Immediately Daniel William Mollerus, an Hungarian Profeſſor of Metaphyſicks and Hiſtory, in the Univerſity of Altorf, ſet up againſt the Critick, and yet could not deny, but that part of the Faults obſerved by him, are really true. Now ſee what the Critick in general pretends to, as he has explained himſelf in a Preface (l). Innumeros in opere Konigiano autores eſſe omiſſos, de Antiquis pauciſſima ſatisque confuſe, in medium allata, è Recentiorum, etiam Polygraphorum Scriptis quam plurimis plerumque vix unius aut alterius factam mentionem, ac raro Synopticam aliquam de Autorum patria, ætate ac vitâ, librique editi loco ac tempore, narrationem adjectam, manifeſtius eſt, quam ut Lectore eruditum, aut negari ab homine candido poſſit. Nomina etiam ſæpius, uti in Prodromo monui, & ſcripta falſa auctoribus eſſe attributa, circa patriam atque vitam illorum erratum, inedita pro editis venditata, & ex uno ſcriptore duo aut tres inepte procuſos, exemplis plurimis oſtendere poſſem, ſi in expurgando hoc augiæ ſtabulo tempus pariter atque operam vellem perdere, aut ſordes illius in præfationem hanc convectare. He adds, that in this he agrees in his Judgment with many Learned Men of the firſt Rank. Agnoverunt eandem, quotquot ex chori literarii primicerii, de Opere Konigiano, aut eadem mecum, aut his etiam aſperiora judicarunt. Petrus ſcil. Lambecius, non alio, quam Rhapſodi, titulo Autorem dignum (1) Dan. Georg. Morhofio (2), & (qui meum de eodem judicium ſuo verbotenus adjecit) Augiſto & Wilh. Ern. Tenzelius (3), alii item complures, quorum verba allegare ſuperſedeo, cum rerum teſtimonia ipſi adverſario, nolenti volenti, veritatis confeſſionem extorſerint. Non audet enim is Bibliothecam hanc, cui patrocinatur, veterem ac novam pro accurata, aut tali, quæ Seculi applauſum mereatur, venditare, ſed fatetur nomen in iſta interdum cum nomine eſſe confuſum, errata nonnulla commiſſa, & Autores aliquot omiſſos, in qua ipſius confeſſione acquieſco. Obſerve that he does not rob Konig of the Praiſe (a) of an Old Profeſſor, who had done good Services to the Republick of Learning.

(l) In the Preface to the Iſagoge ad Hiſtoriam Cherſoneſi Cimbricæ.

(1) V. locum celeberr. Tentzelii mox allegandum.

(2) P. I. Polyhiſt. Literarii, c. 18. p. 202.

(3) In Collectis manuſcriptis ex variis libris, M. Martii A. 1689. p. 317.

(a) Sanis de re literaria meritis elogium Konigio ob alios ejus Philologici argumenti libellos non invideo. Mollerus ibid.

(A) Unite under one Form the Model whereof.] Hoornbeeck, who had read his Dutch Books, explains this Viſion. (b) Iſte Coornbert paſſim ſuis libris——aliquod ſchema Eccleſiæ communis erigenda proponit, in quâ, vel ſolus Scripturæ textus legeretur, abſque gloſſis & expoſitionibus, vel etiam admonitiones ex Scripturâ ſub aliorum judicio, non autem ex authoritate, aliquando fierent, ad modum alterius & novi Interim, uſque dum novâ divinaque ad extruendam aliam Eccleſiam, miſſione accederent miniſtri quales Apoſtoli fuerunt, Eccleſiam ex Chriſti præſcripto novam erecturi, qua jam divinâ miſſione ad erigendam per Reformationem aliam Eccleſiam omnes, juxta eum, careant. Tomo primo, pag. mihi in delineatione iſtius Eccleſiæ ſic loquitur: 'Rarò aut 'nunquam utuntur hic humanis gloſſis, non quod 'peccatum ſit, ſed quia incertum, è ſole ad ſtellas, '& à fontibus ad ciſternas recurrere. Atque ita 'etiam nemo hic ſibi (abſque certâ & ſpeciali miſſione) arrogat docendi officium, ut cum authoritate 'mandet vel prohibeat, benè quidem ut ſub meliori 'ſententiâ admoneat, idque ex Scripturâ. This Viſionary wou'd have had the Magiſtrates to lay their Injunctions on the Preachers to ſay nothing but what was contain'd Word for Word in the Scripture, and to oblige the Laity under the Penalty of a Fine, to lay aſide all their Divinity Books. You'll ſee this more ex ctly in theſe Latin Words: (c) Hæc libello vel dialogo (d) ita ſententiam ſuam exponit: 'exiſtimo, Magiſtratui ſignificandum, quæcunque ſcripta humana, gloſſas, dogmataque quæ 'impuri, errores & ambages continere, à quibus omnibus immunis eſt Scriptura, certam pandens ſalutis viam. Quare reſerentur rogandus eſſet, ut vel 'les, ad modum novi alicujus Interim, (& hoc ad 'tempus uſque quo concorditer decretum eſſet quæ 'doctrina ſequenda foret) omnibus Concionatoribus 'interdicere, ne è ſuggeſtu populum aliud quid docerent, prælegerent dicerentve, præter clarum Scripturæ textum, citra unius ſyllabæ aut additionem aut demtionem, quomodo in Veteri Novoque Teſtamento ſolebat fieri. Hoc demum pacto ſectas evanituras. Præterea populo ſub multâ injungendum 'eſſet, ut omnes ſuos libros de Scripturâ tractantes, 'quæ ipſa non eſſent mera Scriptura, ad manus Magiſtratus deferrent, ubique ſervarentur, ne vel rederentur poſtmodum ſuis Dominis, vel pront viſum 'foret, de illis diſponeretur. Hæc Coornbertus.

(b) Hoornbeeck, ib. p. 437.

(B) One ought to be a Member of any particular Church, and he practis'd it accordingly.] Not believing that there was any Chriſtian Society upon Earth, that was pure and directed by true Paſtors, he never Communicated at the Lord's Table. He denied not, but that for the ſecurity of the weak, there ought to be an external Communion appointed; but he pretended that no Body ought to aſcribe to himſelf a Heavenly Miſſion, nor teach the neceſſity of the uſe of the Sacraments. This is the Sum of the following Latin Words. (c) Coornbertus palam ſcribebat inter omnes ſectas ſe nullibi Chriſti Eccleſiam deprehendere; Romanam noſtrâ, quam ne quidem Eccleſiæ nomine dignabatur, meliorem eſſe, Tom. I. in Dialogis, fol. 484. nec S. Cœnam ullibi id circo participabat, quia veram Eccleſiam, & legitimos miniſtros ſcilicet deſiderabat: unde & communionis illam eſſe neceſſitatem, quæ vulgo docetur, negabat. Tom. I. lib. Confeſſionum, in initio. Tom. III. in Delineatione imparialis Eccleſiæ: ubi ſtatim à principio docet, poſſe nunc ſine eſſe verum Chriſtianum, utcunque non ſit membrum viſibilis alicujus eccleſiæ: Regulaſque, quid præſtaret, an extra viſibilem Eccleſiam vivere, quæſque ipſe Deus per certos Miniſtros Eccleſiam reſtauret; an Eccleſiam, infirmorum gratiâ, non valentium vivere abſque externâ illâ formâ, quam ad ſanctam partem prolabantur, ... reſpondet: ... ſus quidem eſſe magis eorum; at ſecundum voluntatem ... neceſſarium. Ubiapſam quidem eſſe Dei Eccleſiam, ſed ... apparere manifeſtum mandatum nam reſtituendæ ... eamque aliis aliquid ... ad ... ſuæ ...

the State. He wrote about this against Beza. (C) and Lipsius. He Died the twentieth of October † 1590. acknowledging the Doctrine of Predestination (D) which he had so much oppos'd. His Works were Publish'd in the year 1630. in three Volumes in folio. He began to Study (E) somewhat late, Lewis Guicciardin * speaks of an excellent Engraver ‡ a Native of Haerlem, whose name was Theodorus COORNHERT. 'Tis doubtless the same that's mention'd in Freherus's Theatrum (F), and who makes the Subject of that Article. This is all I could Collect from some Latin Books; and I was ready to send it to the Press with the six first Remarks subjoined to it, not thinking to add any thing else to it; when being inform'd that Coornhert's Life was prefixt in Dutch to his Works, I have got some Extracts made out of it, which have occasion'd the Addition of what follows. They import that Koornhert was Born in 1522. of an Antient and good Family of Amsterdam; that he took a Journey into Spain and Portugal when he was very young; that at his return he Married against the Intention of his Father's Will, and without consulting his Mother; that his Wife having hardly any Fortune, he was oblig'd to get into the Service of Renaud de Brederode Baron of Vianen; that he became his Steward, and got into his Favour; but quickly left him, because he could not Reconcile himself to a Court Life; that he settled at Haerlem, and got a subsistance by his Trade of Ingraving; that having some Scruples about some matters of Divinity, and thinking he could find them resolved in St. Augustin, and in some other Fathers, he learned the Latin Tongue at thirty years of Age, wherein he made such Progress that he found himself quickly able to Translate Tully's Offices and several other Books into Dutch; that he understood Musick and Poetry; that he was very good Company at Table, but so as to direct his Discourse to the Edification of his Neighbour; and that he never exceeded the Rules of Sobriety; that he loved to Work, and made it a Law to himself to be but six hours in Bed; that he was made Notary in 1561. and Secretary to the Town of Haerlem in 1562, and Secretary to the Burgomasters of the same Town in 1564; that in 1565, and 1566. he was frequently deputed to the Prince of Orange, Governor of Holland; that he had several Conferences with (G) Henry de Brederode upon the Subject of the Troubles that began to rise in the Low-Countries, and of the famous Petition that was presented to the Dutchess of Parma in April 1566; that he was carried away from Haerlem, and remov'd to the Hague, where he endur'd a long

† See the Advertisement to the Reader at the end of his Reply to Lipsius. Note, that Konig has wrongly placed his Death in the year 1599.

* Ludov. Guicciard. in descript. Belgii, c. de Antuerpia p. m. 118.

† He is mistaken; for Koornhert was a Native of Amsterdam.

(b) Colomies, Mélanges Historiques p. 63.

(*) Volcard was his Father's Name, and not his own.

† 'Tis said in his Life that Dr. John Basius, who was afterwards Councellor to the Prince of Orange, taught him the Latin Tongue. No mention is made of the Greek.

(a) Vir ingenii quidem alicujus, sed uti [illegible] (quippe ad annum denum ætatis XXX linguâm Latinam cœpit addiscere.) Ita &c. Hoornb. ubi supra

(d) Boxhorn. in theatro Hollandiæ, cap. de urbe Amstelodamo, p. m. 263.

(c) Paul Freher. in Theatro p. 1483. He quotes the Academia Germ. Pictorum Joach. à Sandrart.

‡ Freherus should have call'd him an Ingraver and not a Sculptor, and should have said that he practised his Trade at Haerlem and not at Amsterdam.

(f) Voetius de politica Ecclesiast. tom. 2. p. 386.

(g) Plebeia (scriptio) futilis, & concepta plebeio illo. Lipsius in præf. libri de una religione adversus Dialogistam.

(*) He wrote it in Dutch; but his Heirs had it Translated into Latin.

(b) See the Advertisement to the Reader at the end of that Re-Reply.

(i) Voetius ubi supra p. 433.

(a) Hoornbeek ubi supra p. 435.

lupos defendendis, sub tali nempe libertate, qua nemo sibi arroget, à Deo se ad docendum missum esse, & Sacramentorum Baptismi ac Cœnæ usus relinquatur liber, pro infirmis habendum; nullum verò istorum urgeri debere præceptum, aut necessitatem.

(C) Against Beza and Lipsius.] There is something to be found fault with in these Words of Voetius: (f) Cornhertus qui Latino Dialogo contra Lipsii politicam hanc causam agit rotundemque Dialogum postea contra Lipsii responsum (cui tit. adversus Dialogistam) defendit, idem Belgico scripto processum de hæreticidio edidit contra Bezam. 'Tis not true that Koornhert's Dialogue against Lipsius's Politicks, is in Latin. 'Tis in Dutch (g). Voetius himself Acknowledges it in a Passage I shall presently cite. Note likewise that the Title of that Dutch Book Answers to his, seu processus de hæreticidio. Koornhert's Reply is in Latin *; it had been larger (b) if he had Lived longer (b). The Title of it is: Defensio processus de non occidendis hæreticis contra tria capita libri IV. Politicorum J. Lipsii: ejusque libri adversus Dialogistam confutatio. Sub extremum mortis fatum per sua patriæ libertatis studiosissimum THEODORUM VOLCHARDUM COORNHERT conscripta. The Edition I make use of, is of Hanaw 1593. If you are desirous to see what Perplexity Lipsius happen'd to be in by that Reply, Read what follows: (i) Lipsius peritus libello Belgico à Diederico Volckero Coornhert, postea libro, de Una Religione dicto Died. Coornhert repositio addidit, se veram & probam intelligere: Sed non explicat, & explicaturum se negat, quanam sit vera & proba religio. Hinc dictus Cornhertus in refutatione libelli Lipsiani a. 1591, tit. Defensio processus de non occidendis Hæreticis, &c. ita constrinxit Lipsium, ut à Papistica, aut Ethnico-Machiavellicâ (quarum alterutram pectore premebat, quamvis tunc Leidæ conciones publicas frequentaret) se liberare non potuerit. Et hanc unam putant ex causis præcipuis fuisse, cur statione Leidensi turpiter desertâ hypocrisios larvam deponeret, ad partes hostiles transfugeret, atque ibi Baptismi professionem susciperet. Add to this the Remark E of the Article Lipsius.

(D) Acknowledging the Doctrine of Predestination, which he had so much oppos'd.] He cried out as he was a Dying, My God, from thee I have my Soul; it is in thy Power to save or Reprobate it according to thy good Pleasure; I have no reason to complain. (g) Obiit a. ClↃ lↃXↃ & quod valde observandum, is qui tam impotenter de Prædestinatione multa, sibi nequaquam intellecta, adversus Theologos nostros conscripsit, sub mortem, veritatem ejus in se sentire & agnoscere coactus fuit, ad Deum exclamans: 'se 'animam suam ab eo possidere, quam Deo integrum sit 'pro suo beneplacito servare, an reprobare, sibi nil 'esse quod conqueratur. Quod nil est, quam vim & summam prædestinationis divinæ in nobis aut salvandis, aut abjiciendis, pro Dei summo in nos omnes arbitrio, proprio sensu confiteri, & in morte sinceris testari, quam tot infrunitis & impetuosis adversus eam scriptis, per vitam. This Citation was necessary, considering the Reflections it contains and may suggest.

(E) That he began to Study somewhat late,] 'I have seen at the Hague in Mr. de Beuning's Li-'brary, the Works of Theodorus * Volcard Cornu-'hert in Dutch. He was an Enthusiast, who had 'a very ready Wit. He Learned † of himself 'Greek and Latin at forty years of Age, and made 'such great Progress in these two Languages, that 'he Translated into Dutch any Author he had a 'mind to. He wrote many Treatises of Divinity, 'some of which have been Confuted by Calvin and 'Danæus. He writ also against Lipsius, who an-'swered him to his Book De una Religione. The 'Hollanders speak of him as of a wonderful Man. 'He Died in the year 1590. being 68 years Old. There are some Exaggerations in this Passage of Colomies. I have read in a good Author (c) that Koornhert was but thirty years Old, when he began to Study the Latin Tongue. He never was a great Master of it, and his Writings have been in no great Repute for this long time. Note, that Boxhornius (d) said most of the things contained in this Passage of Colomies.

(F) In Freherus's Theatrum.] Wherein we see that Theodorus Cornhertzius an excellent Sculptor, Exercised his Art with Commendation at Amsterdam where he was Born, and left many Works made upon the Model of Martin Hemskerk whom he imitated. He was besides a good Poet; he Died at Tergou, in the year 1590. being 78 years of Age (e). This is our Koornhert: But it should have been said, that he lived 68 years and not 78 years. See the Margin ‡.

(G) Several Conferences with Henry de Brederode upon the Subject of the Troubles.] Koornhert had been long and ſevere Impriſonment; that there he wrote many Poems in Dutch; that his Wife being perſuaded he would never have his Liberty, endeavoured to catch the Plague, that ſo infecting him, they might both Die together; that he ſeverely Reprimanded her for it, and commanded her patiently to ſubmit to Providence; that he vindicated himſelf ſo well, that he was releas'd, and only prohibited to go out of the Hague; that underſtanding there were freſh Orders come from Bruſſels to re-impriſon him, he privately retired to Haerlem, and afterwards into the Country of Cleves, where he maintained himſelf by his old Trade of Engraving; that the States of Holland having firmly reſolved to maintain their Liberty againſt the Spaniſh Tyranny, he returned into his Country, and was honour'd with the Poſt of Secretary to the States of the Province; that going about to oppoſe the Diſorders committed by the Soldiery, and being deputed to take (H) Information of them, he became ſo odious to the Commanders of thoſe inſolent Troops, that to ſave his Life, he thought fit to go into Exile; that having writ to the Prince of Orange, and to the States of Holland the Reaſons of his Retreat, he took Refuge at Embden; that after Things were reſtored to a better State, he returned to Haerlem; that he engaged in Diſputes, wherein he was oppoſed by the moſt zealous Miniſters; that he publiſhed ſeveral Pieces in Defence of his Cauſe, and maintained it by Word of Mouth at Leyden and at the Hague; that to be the more ready to write, he went and lived at the Hague; that theſe verbal Diſputes (I) having been prohibited by Authority, he often intreated the States and the Miniſters, and particularly at the Synod of Tergou, to permit that they ſhould be continued and ended; that he preſented a Petition upon this Subject to the Prince of Orange; that he ſtrengthened it with many Arguments; that he beſeeched him to order it ſo; that if his Demand was rejected, he might at leaſt have leave to go on in modeſtly and Chriſtianly confuting Errors, and thereby enjoy the Liberty of Conſcience, which had been purchaſed with ſo much Pains; that in caſe of a Refuſal, he beg'd as the laſt Favour, Permiſſion to retire into ſome Neighbouring Country, in Friendſhip with Holland, to ſpend the reſt of his Days in finiſhing an Index of the Holy Scriptures, upon which he had laboured Twenty Six Years, and alſo to prevent the Oppreſſion of his Conſcience, the Dangers of his Perſon, the Miſeries of Poverty, and the Scandal of the Reformed Church; that he demanded a Safe-Conduct; that he declared he would return to the Hague, to terminate the Diſpute, when they ſhould think fit to recall him; that all theſe Demands being rejected, he nevertheleſs publickly declared, that he found great Errors in the Heidelberg Cathechiſm; that he got many Enemies by it; that he was cried down in the Pulpit, and elſewere; that he was loaded with Invectives and Calumnies; that he had a great many Mortifications, this having prejudiced and provoked many People againſt him; that he always prudently and conſtantly bore up againſt this Adverſity; that been Steward to Renaud de Brederode, and had done him good Services. By that he diſcovered himſelf to the beſt Advantage to Henry de Brederode, Renaud's Son. He conferr'd with him at Vianen, and at Utrecht, Amſterdam, and Haerlem, about the Means of preſerving the Liberty of their Country, and he moved him to preſent to the Dutcheſs of Parma, the Petition, which had ſuch remarkable Conſequences. He was the Author of the firſt Manifeſto that Prince William (f) publiſhed in his Camp, the Title of which was (g) Advice to the Inhabitants of the Low-Countries for the Law, for the King, and for the Flock. Bor, who mentions that Manifeſto, in the Fourth Book of his Hiſtory, Fol. 18a. declared to ſome People, that he knew very well, that Koornhert had writ it (h).

(H) Being deputed to take Information of 'em, he became ſo odious.] The Captains, who were conſcious of many Extortions, bethought themſelves of a very effectual Expedient, to prevent their being known; which was to cry down Koornhert, as a dangerous Papiſt, and thereby expoſe him to a Thouſand Dangers. They found a very ſpecious Pretence for it; for he was continually ſaying, that it was juſt, and for the Intereſt of Holland, not to perſecute the Catholicks, but to obſerve the Promiſe which the Prince of Orange had made 'em concerning the free Exerciſe of their Religion, &c. The Count de Lumei, who commanded the Troops in Holland, was far from ſtanding to this Promiſe. Koornhert very boldly condemned this Conduct, whereupon he was defamed, as a moſt curſed Favourer of Popery. The Count de Lumei, to whom he had been repreſented in black Colours, ſwore his Deſtruction, and gave Orders to kill him. There was no Safety for him in the Highways of the Country, nor in the Streets of the Town: he had recourſe to the Protection of the Prince of Orange; but that was not ſufficient to ballance the great Credit this Count had with the Soldiery. Wherefore Koornhert was obliged to retire into the Country of Cleves (a). This happened in the Year 1572. Note, that he favoured ſo little the Cauſe of the Spaniards, that he was expreſly excepted in the Amneſty, which Lewis de Requeſens cauſed to be publiſhed at Bruſſels in the Year 1574, for all thoſe who ſhould in Two Months time receive Abſolution in the Confeſſionary of the Prieſts (b). Here follows a Thing, which ſhews, that he did not love the Church of Rome, and yet was for granting the Papiſts Liberty of Conſcience.

The private Exerciſe of their Religion was forbidden in Holland, in 1581. Some among 'em employed Koornhert to draw up a Petition addreſſed to the Prince of Orange, by which they deſired to be maintained in the Exerciſe of their Religion, in the Monaſteries of Haerlem, and in the Temple, which the Proteſtants had quitted, after they became Maſters of the great Church. Koornhert being obliged to appear before the Burgo-Maſters of Haerlem, on Account of that Writing, delivered it into their Hands, according to the Order he had received, and declared, that he did not undertake the Defence of it, any more than that of Popery, which he conſidered as a Den of Murder; but that nevertheleſs, he was perſuaded, that it was a Piece of Injuſtice to break ones Word with the Roman Catholicks, and to force their Conſcience. The Burgomaſters gave this Petition to the Prince of Orange, who ſent it back to the States; theſe ſent for the Burghers of Haerlem, who had ſigned it, and ordered them to cancel their Names. They ordered alſo Koornhert to tear the Draught of it; all which was executed (c).

(I) Theſe Verbal Diſputes having been prohibited.] Here are ſome Circumſtances of thoſe Diſputes. They began at Delft, in the Year 1578, and what occaſioned

(f) In December 1566.

(g) The the Tranſlation of the Dutch Title.

(h) Taken from the Extracts imparted to me in Latin, out of the Dutch Life of Theodorus Koornhert.

(a) Taken from the Extracts imparted to me in Latin, out of Gerard Brandt's Dutch Hiſtory, part 1. lib. 9. p. 535. ad ann. 1572.

(b) Ibid. ex lib. 11. pag. 553.

(c) Ibid. ex lib. 12. pag. 667. 668. ad ann. 1581.

‡ Upon the New Teſtament.

* I have quoted above an Author, who ſays the 20th. but probably this Difference proceeds from that of the Old and New Style, and from this, that when a Man dies in the Night between the 19th. and 20th. Day of a Month for Inſtance, ſome ſay he died the 19th. others that he died the 20th.

† In the great Church, with a very noble Epitaph compoſed by his good Friend Henry Laurence Spiegel. See Gerard Brandt's Hiſtory of the Reformation in the Netherlands, Book. 15. ad. ann. 1590.

that there is great Probability (K) he was protected by the Prince of Orange; that no Body at that time wrote ſo ſtoutly as he (L) for the Liberty of the Country, and for the Liberty of Conſcience; that his Writings againſt the Doctrine of Predeſtination and of Original Sin were ſtrengthened with ſo many Arguments, that the Conſiſtory of Amſterdam having ordered James Arminius to confute them ſome Years after, this Miniſter anſwered, that he did not ſee, that either he or any Body elſe could anſwer 'em from Scripture; that having almoſt finiſhed his Dutch Verſion of Eraſmus's Paraphraſe ‡, he was ſeized with a Diſtemper, in which he ſignalized his Patience, and held moſt edifying Diſcourſes, till he expired, full of Confidence in God, the 29th. * of October, 1590; that he was buried at † Tergou; that he would neither be buried at Amſterdam, where he was born, nor at Haerlem, where he ſpent moſt of his Time; that he has been praiſed by Iſaac Pontanus, in the Deſcription of Amſterdam, and by Grotius, and even by Juſtus Lipſius his Adverſary. This is what I gather from the Latin Extracts, communicated to me out of Koornbert's Life, written in Dutch. Some other things there are, which I ſhall put in the Remarks. I ſhall alſo make uſe of ſome Latin Extracts, taken from Gerard Brandt's Book, I mean the Dutch Hiſtory he wrote concerning the Reformation of the Netherlands. They have been made by the ſame Perſon, who imparted to me thoſe of Koornbert's Life, and who underſtands well the Dutch Tongue, and is very exact. I think they may be depended on.

KORN-

occaſioned 'em was, that a certain Perſon, who had quitted the Church of Rome, to embrace the Reformed, alledged ſuch Reaſons for his Change, as ſhewed he underſtood neither of 'em very well. Koornbert tells him very freely, What remains to be examined, is, Whether you have choſen a Religion better than that you have left. He was call'd to an Account for this Diſcourſe; for a Noiſe was made about it, and 'twas odiouſly repreſented: which occaſioned the Conference betwixt Koornbert, and two Miniſters of Delft, which turned upon the Marks of the true Church. He undertook to prove, that the Churches, which followed the Doctrines of John Calvin, and Theodorus Beza, were falſe; and he went upon Three Points; Predeſtination, Juſtification, and the Puniſhment of Hereticks. The Conference was hardly begun, when the States of the Province put an end to it: it was renewed by their Order, and in Preſence of their Commiſſioners at Leiden, the 14th. of April, but it laſted only a Day and a half; Koornbert complaining, that his Adverſaries made an ill uſe of the Secular Authority againſt him, retired. He boaſted, that he had reduced the two Miniſters to their laſt Shifts, though he was not permitted to attack 'em upon (d) the third Point; he pretended, that his naming Calvin and Beza, ſerved as a Subterfuge to his Adverſaries, becauſe the Commiſſioners ſaid, that he knew very well, the States would not ſuffer the Names of thoſe two Geneva Miniſters to come into the Diſpute, and that therefore he ought to expect their Indignation. Finding himſelf thus threatned, he declared, he would not return to a Conference, where he had not an entire Liberty of Speech. The Miniſters and Commiſſioners failed not to appear at the place where the Diſpute began. They ſtaid for Koornbert, ſent to his Lodgings, and took his Abſence for a Flight, and an undoubted Proof of his Defeat. The States of Holland cauſed the Magiſtracy of Haerlem to forbid him to write any thing concerning that Diſpute (e).

(d) Viz. the Puniſhments of Hereticks.

(e) Ibid. en pag. 597. ad ann. 1578.

Some Years after he wrote againſt the Cathechiſm of Heidelberg, which was adopted by the Reformed Churches of Holland. He dedicated this Piece to the States of the Province, and with a prodigious Boldneſs repreſented to them the Miſchiefs of adopting this Catechiſm, and of the Deſign, the Miniſters had, ſaid he, of impoſing on every body the Neceſſity of thinking and ſpeaking like themſelves. He deſired that thoſe Misfortunes might be prevented, and offered to prove what he advanced. The Miniſters on their part, preſented a Writing to the States, full of Complaints againſt Koornbert, and declared themſelves ready to juſtify their Propoſitions. The States, after mature Deliberation, reſolv'd, with the Approbation of the Prince of Orange, to make Koornbert diſpute with the Miniſters before Fifteen Deputies. Hadrian Saravia, Profeſſor of Divinity at Leyden, was choſen to be a Diſputant for the Miniſters: a Notary was given him, and another to Koonbert, that whatever ſhould be ſaid on both ſides, might be put authentically in Writing. The Diſpute began at the Hague the 27th. of October, 1583, and continued to the Third of November, when Koornbert deſired leave of the Commiſſioners to go to Haerlem, to ſee his Wife, who was upon her Death-Bed. The Diſpute began again the 28th. of November, but becauſe Saravia for Four Days together had dictated very long Writings to his Notary, the Deputies reſolved to ſend Koornbert Home, there to compoſe his Anſwer. It was more prolix than the Writing of Saravia, and was confuted by a Reply of the Miniſters that was much longer. The States finding that one Article among Fifty that were to be examined, took up ſo many Seſſions, thought there would never be an end of this Affair, and interrupted the Courſe of it. Koornbert boaſted of his Victory, and that he had ſettled himſelf at the Hague, that he might be the more ready to Diſpute. The order of the States, for interrupting the Conferences, hindered not the Parties from attacking one another in Writing (f).

(f) Ib. en libro 13. pag. 693, 694, 695. ad ann. 1583.

The Synod of South Holland being aſſembled at Tergou, in Auguſt 1589. Koornbert, who lived in the ſame Town, ſent a Letter to the Aſſembly, to offer 'em a freſh Battle. The Synod having read the Letter, ſent it back to the Author, and declared they had nothing more to do with him, and that if he deſired any thing, he muſt addreſs himſelf to the States (g).

(g) Ibid. ex libro, 15. pag. 769. ad ann. 1589.

(K) There is great Probability he was Protected by the Prince of Orange.] 'Tis certain that this Prince, knowing him to be a Man of Parts, a great lover of Liberty, and a great Enemy to the Spaniards, thought him a fit Man for the Affairs of that time. He made uſe of his Pen on ſeveral Occaſions, he charged him with ſeveral Commiſſions, he deſired they would recall him from his Exile (a); and one can hardly apprehend, how Koornbert could have withſtood his Enemies, if he had not been clandeſtinely ſupported by a Potent, and well-managed Protection; for he obſerved no Meaſures with Relation to the publick Doctrine of the Churches; he attacked the Miſſion of their Miniſters, condemned all Sects, and was for leaving an entire Liberty to the Roman Catholicks, which in the Circumſtances of thoſe Times had been very dangerous. His Criticiſms on the Cathechiſm of Heidelberg were ſo bold and inſulting, that ſince the States of Holland, who had it examined by a Profeſſor of Divinity, and a Miniſter, were contented (b) to order, that the Copies ſhould be put into the Hands of the Magiſtrates, he muſt needs have been ſupported by a mighty Power. If the Prince of Orange had been alive, when Koornbert went to live at Delft, I do not think the Magiſtrates would have commanded him to depart in Twenty Four Hours, (c) as they did in the Year 1588. Some Perſons tried to get him impriſoned for the reſt of his Life; but the Prince and the ſupream Magiſtrates rejected that Demand (d).

(a) Taken from the Extracts of Koornhert's Life.

(b) Ibid.

(c) Extracts of Brandt's Hiſtory, lib. 15. p. 757.

(d) Ibid.

(L) Wrote ſo ſtoutly as he for the Liberty of the Country, and for the Liberty of Conſcience.] Whilſt he KORNMANNUS (Henry) a German Civilian, Author (A) of some curious Treatises, of which there are many Editions. He lived in the beginning of the XVIIth. Century.

KORTHOLT (Christian) Doctor and Professor of Divinity at Kiel, was born the 15th. of January 1633, at Burg in the Isle of † Femern. He was instructed both in Piety and Learning, with great Care, at his Father's, and in the School of Burg, till he was Sixteen Years of Age; after which he was sent to Slesvick, where he went on with his Studies for Two Years. He afterwards studied in the College of Stetin, where he gave publick Proofs of his Progress; for he maintained two ‡ Theses, one De veracitate & taciturnitate, the other De natura Philosophiæ, ejusque in Theologia usu. He was the Author of the latter. Being come to Rostock, in the Year 1652, he was a diligent Attendant on the Professors Lectures, and successfully maintained two other * Theses, of which he made the first. The Death of his Father obliged him to leave this University, at the Year's End; but he returned thither some Months after, and gave new Proofs of his Knowledge, both by the Theses de Christo; Disputations, which he composed, and publickly defended, and by the Lectures he read at home in Logick, Metaphysicks, and Hebrew. He solemnly took his Degree of Doctor of Philosophy, in the Year 1656, and then he went to study in the University of Jena, where he got a great Reputation by the Academical Acts, in which he was sometimes Respondent, and sometimes Moderator, and by the private Lectures he made upon Philosophy, the Oriental Tongues, and Divinity. He left the University of Jena, in 1660, and visited those of Leipsick and Wittemberg, and afterwards returned to Rostock, where he shewed his Capacity several Ways; so that in February 1662, he was made Professor of the Greek Tongue. He took his Doctor of Divinity's Degree in November the same Year. Not long before, his Parts and Learning discovered themselves, in Three Disputes (A) with the Roman Catholicks, in the Presence of Christian, Duke of Mecklenbourg. He married the 28th. of April 1664, and was invited the following Year to be second Professor of Divinity in the University lately founded at Kiel. He was created Vice-Chancellor in the Year 1666, and succeded Peter Musæus in 1675. who had the first Divinity-Chair. He was so desirous to make this new University flourish, and had so much Gratitude for the Kindness which the Duke of Holstein his Master shewed him, that † Near the Baltick Sea, in the Country of Holstein.

‡ That is, two Dissertations, and not meer Positions.

* One was de supposito & persona, and the other de sphæra activitatis.

(e) In the Duchy of Cleves.

he was at Santen (e) in a voluntary Exile, in the Year 1574, he drew up the Plan of a Book, designed to shew all Christian Princes, that the Conduct of the Provinces which opposed the King of Spain, and the Duke of Alba, was not a Rebellion, nor a popular Itch of pulling down Images, but an Emanation of the supreme Authority, which the People have to defend their Rights, their Laws, and the Liberty of Conscience. Add to this what I relate in the Remark H. The Acts of the Pacification of Cologne, which began in the Year 1579, published at Delft, with the Licence of the States, and with excellent Notes by Haggai Albada, Koornhert's intimate Friend, are thought to be the Work of the latter. Eusebius Philalethes ascribes all this to him, in a Book printed in 1617. See likewise Koornhert's first Treatise against Justus Lipsius. He wrote a Piece in the Year 1584, concerning the Means of resisting the King of Spain, and he shewed amongst other things, that it was necessary to put themselves under the Protection of France. Being perswaded that Christian Peace was one of the most important Doctrines of the Gospel, and that it could not be maintained, but by reducing the Truths necessary to Salvation, to a small Number, and by permitting the difference of Opinions with respect to other Doctrines, he laboured with all his Might to put things upon that foot. He took Advantage of the great Erasmus's Opinion (f), and agreed with two (g) Doctors of the Reformed Church; and it seems, that Prince William was somewhat inclined that Way. Consult the History of Bor, Book 21. fol. 107. Koornhert was continually saying, that Luther, Calvin and Menno had briskly attacked abundance of Romish Errors, but that they had very ill succeeded against the dreadful and impious Doctrine of the Constraint of Conscience; and that instead of opposing it to some Purpose, they had rather strengthened it; every one having put it in Practice, wherever they could become Masters, and created a new Papacy, by the Erection of a Schismatical Church, which condemned all others. They have said he, incouraged the Papists by this means, to continue their Method, and have not only gained nothing against their persecuting Maxims, but have also introduced Confusions and Schisms, by taking away the Liberty (h) of Prophecying. As for himself he maintained, that no Body ought to be hated; and that all pious People, who by Faith in JESUS CHRIST endeavoured to imitate him, are good Christians, and that the Magistrates ought to reckon all peaceable Livers, good Subjects (i). He was so full of this Hypothesis, that to the Prejudice of his Tranquillity and temporal Interest, he made use of all his Courage, Parts, and Learning to maintain it (k).

(f) In epistola ad Archiepiscopum Panormitanum operibus Hilarii præfixa.

(g) Hubert Duyslius, & Taco Sybrand.

(h) That is, of professing whatever is dictated by the Conscience.

(A) Author of some curious Treatises.] That which is intituled, De vinginitatis jure tractatus novus & jucundus, ex jure civili, canonico, patribus, historicis, poëtis, &c. confectus, and that which is commonly printed with it, with this Title, Linea amoris, sive commentarius in vesiculum Cl. visus, colloquium, convictus, oscula, factum, have been often printed. The oldest Edition I know of 'em, is of Francfort, 1610. 'Tis a great and fruitful Subject, but the Author runs over it, and examines nothing to the bottom, and what he says is very common. He may please those who love Brevity. His other Works are, Templum naturæ historicum, Sive de natura & miraculis quatuor elementorum. De miraculis vivorum, seu de natura, proprietatibus, &c. hominum vivorum, at Franckfort 1614. De miraculis mortuorum, &c. It has been said (l), that Kirchmannus, in his Book de funeribus Romanorum, borrows a great deal from this last Work of our Author. And yet I don't find, that the Book de miraculis mortuorum, came out before the Year 1610. whereas the Book intituled, de funeribus Romanorum, was printed in 1604. 'Tis true, that the Author gave a new Edition of it in 1625, and he might have made use of our Kornmannus's Work for his Additions. This we may examine another time, if we have Leisure.

(i) Extracts of Koornhert's Life.

(k) The Dutch Distich, made by Peter Hooft, to be put under Koornhert's Print, imported that he had been infatigable of Knowledge and Liberty.

(l) Antonii Borremans Flandria illustrata, c. 4. p. 32.

(A) In three Disputes with the Roman Catholicks.] Their Theses are the Particulars we find upon it in his Funeral Programma. Anno M DC LXI. d. Serenissimo Duce Mecklenburgico, CHRISTIANO, Principe eruditione, facundia comitateque singulari Principe, per Cancellarium ejus, D. CHRISTOPHORUM KRAUTHOFIUM, invitabatur in aulam Suerinensem, ad colloquium cum Pontificio Austriaco, EGGEFELDIO, viro quidem docto, sed admodum superciliosi, de religionis negotio, habendum. Quod & in conspectu multorum aulæ Procerum, ac peregrinorum etiam, qui fortè tunc adierant, institutum, ac postero die cum alio Pontificio that he refuſed all the Preferments that were offered him in ſeveral Places, though they were very Noble and Honourable. This Prince procured him the Profeſſorſhip of the Eccleſiaſtical Antiquities, in 1680, and declared him perpetual Vice-Chancellor of the Univerſity, in the Year 1689. He diſcharged the Duties of all thoſe Places, and of that of † Vice-Rector, (which came Five times to him) with great Ability, Application, and Prudence. His Death, which happened the 31ſt. of March, 1694, was a very great loſs to the Univerſity of Kiel, and the Republick of Learning, which he had inriched (B) with many Books, to which he might have added many more, if he had lived longer. He left two Sons, who (C) tread in his Steps †.

† This is the ſame thing as Rector, becauſe there was no other Rector at Kiel, but the Prince himſelf, who founded that Univerſity.

† Taken from a Annual Programma, printed at Kiel in 1694.

KOT-

(a) It ſhould be du Buiſſon

Polono, FULERNIZKIO, continuatum eſt Sorchenburgi, ipſo Principe præſente, qui cum illuc accerſitum clementerque acceptum toto oſtiduo ſecum retinuit. A quo & ſequenti anno MDCLXII. demum ad certamen, cum Pontificio quodam Pariſienſi, cui nomen de la (a) BUISSON erat, ibidem inſtituendum, provocatus comparuit, in eoque degraviſſimis religionis controverſiis cum omnium applauſu per aliquot dies diſputavit.

(B) Enriched with many Books.] I have ſeen the Catalogue of 'em, which was printed at Kiel in the Year 1694. Some are in High-Dutch, and others in Latin. The Titles of the Latin ones are theſe: Tractatus de Origine & progreſſu philoſophiæ Barbaricæ. Jenæ in 4. 1660. Tractatus de Perſecutionibus Eccleſiæ primitivæ, veterumque Martyrum cruciatibus, ibid. in 8. 1660. Prodiit longe accuratior, & triplo auctior, Kilonii ann. 1689. in 4. Valerianus Confeſſor, hoc eſt, Sola Demonſtratio, quod Eccleſia Romana hodierna non ſit vera CHRISTI Eccleſia; deducta ex Vales. Magni, Capuccini, Apologia Anti-Jeſuitica. Roſt. in 12. 1662. Opuſculum illud auctius Kilonii in 4. eſt editum 1666. Diſſertatio de Neſtorianiſmo, ibid. in 4. 1662. Tractatus de Calumniis Paganorum in veteres Chriſtianos. Roſtochii, in 4. 1663. Longe auctior publicatus eſt Kilonii anno 1668. novoque plane habitu, in tres libros diſtinctus, brevi, V. D. è Typographeo Kilonienſi (b) proditurus eſt. Exercitatio in Hiſtoriam Judith, Roſtoch. in 4. 1663. Exercitatio in præfationem Hieronymi in Judith. ibid. in 4. 1663. Tractatus de Canone Scripturæ, Bellarmino, ejuſque propugatoribus, Gretſero & Erbermanno Jeſuitis, oppoſitus. Roſtochii, in 4. 1665. Tractatus de Religione Ethnica, Muhammedana, & Judaica. Kilonii. in 4. 1665. Oratio de Scholarum & Academiarum ortu & progreſſu, præſertim in Germania, inter ſolemnia inaugurationis Academiæ Kilonienſis habita. Sleſv. in fol 1666. Diſſertatio Hiſtorica de Philippi Arabis, Alexandri Mammææ, Plinii Junioris, & Annæi Senecæ, Chriſtianiſmo. Kil. in 4. 1667. Apologia pro Valeriano Confeſſore, adverſus Capuccinum Salisburgenſem, ibid. in 4. 1667. Tractatus de Variis Scripturæ ſacræ editionibus. ibid. in 4. 1668. Longe auctior vulgatus eſt Kilonii ann. 1686. Pſeudadelphia Heiniana, D. Johanni Heinio, Theologo Reformato Marpurgenſi, oppoſita, ibid. in 4. 1669. Tractatus de Lectione Bibliorum in linguis vulgo cognitis. ibid. in 4. 1670. Reviſus & auctus Plœnæ recuſus eſt anno. 1692. Funus Eccleſiæ Romanæ in Clemente IX Papa defunctæ. ibid. in 4. 1670. Papa Utopicus. ibid. in 4. 1670. Tractatus de Origine & natura Chriſtianiſmi ex mente Gentilium. Kil. in 4. 1672. Apologia pro Valeriano Confeſſore, adverſus Chriſtianum Fabrum, Gallo-Sebuſianum. Kil. in 4. 1673. Commentarius in Epiſtolas Plinii & Trajani de Chriſtianis primævis. ibid. in 4. 1674. Commentarius in Juſtinum M. Athenagoram, Theophilum Antiochenum, Tatianum Aſſyrium. Kil. in fol. 1675. Auctior editus eſt Lipſiæ ann. 1686. Diſſertatio de Viribus humanis in ordine ad Civilia & Spiritualia. Kil. in 4. 1676. Exercitatio anti-Salmaſiana de Pane quotidie, quem in Oratione Dominica petimus. in 4. 1676. Diſquiſitiones anti-Baronianæ. ibid. in 4. 1677. De Tribus impoſturibus Magnis, liber, Edoardo Herbert, Thomæ Hobbes, & Benedicto Spinoſæ oppoſitus. Cui addita Appendix, qua Hieronymi Cardani & Edoardi Herberti de Animalitate Hominis opiniones philoſophicè examinatæ. ibid. in 8. 1680. Diſquiſitio anti-Baroniana peculiaris de Religionum cultu. ibid. in 8. 1680. Tractatus de Vita & Moribus Chriſtianis primævis per Gentilium malitiam aſſertis ibid. in 4. 1683. Theſes Theologicæ XXV. Diſputationibus publicis in Univerſitate Kilonienſi propoſitæ. ibid. in 4. 1684. Prodierunt & ventilatæ ſunt altera vice 1686. ac rurſum anno, 1692. Tractatus de Proceſſu diſputandi Papiſtico. Cui ſubjuncta Diſſertatio de Hoſtiis Euchariſticis, ſive Placentulis orbiculatis, quibus in S. Synaxeos adminiſtratione utimur. ibid. in 4. 1685. Exercitatio de CHRISTO CRUCIFIXO, Judæis ſcandalo, Gentilibus ſtultitiæ, Credentibus autem Dei potentia & ſapientia, 1 Cor. 1. 18. 23, 24. Ibid. in 4. 1686. Exercitatio de Atheiſmo Veteribus Chriſtianis, ob Templorum imprimis averſationem à Gentilibus objecto, inque coſdem à noſtris retorto. Ibid. in 4. 1689. Silentium Sacrum; ſive, de Occultatione Myſteriorum apud veteres Chriſtianos diſſertatio. Ibid. in 4. 1689. De Studio Belli ac Pacis diſſertatio Theologica, in gratam memoriam reddita divina clementia Cimbricis provinciis Concordia, reſtitutique feliciter Reverendiſſ. Sereniſſimique Slefvici & Holſatiæ Ducis regnantis Dn. CHR. ALBERTI. Ibid. in 4. 1689. De Actionibus Forenſibus Exercitatio Theologica. Ibid. in 4. 1690. Alexander Papa Octavus Pſeudonymus. Ibid. in 4. 1690. De Magnanimitate Ariſtotelica, Chriſtianæ Modeſtiæ aliiſque veris Virtutibus inimica, diſſertatio. Ibid. in 4. 1690. De Schiſmate, ſuperiori ſeculo Proteſtantes inter & Pontificios enato, diſſert. Hiſtorico-Theologica, ibid. in 4. 1690. Apotheoſis Papæ. Ibid. in 4. 1691. In Canonem 6. Nicænum Cardd. Baronio & Bellarmino oppoſita Exercitatio. Ibid. in 4. 1691. Miſcelanea Academica. Ibid. in 4. 1692. Diſquiſitio de Pontifice Romano. Ibid. in 4. 1692. De Rationis cum Revelatione in Theologia concurſu. Ibid. in 4. 1692. De Veterum quorundam locutione illa: Filius Dei aſſumpſit Hominem. Ibid. in 4. 1692. De Nominibus, quibus per ludibrium & contemptum Chriſtiani olim à profanis appellati, deque Notis occultis, quibus iidem ſe inſigniviſſe creditі, diſſertatio; additi Mantiſſa, qua diſquiritur: Num filiola, quam octo dierum infans exuxit eſt, Baptiſmi capax. Ibid. in 4. 1693. De ſacris Publicis, debita cum reverentia præſentiſque Numinis metu colendis, Diatribe Aſcetica. Ibid. in 4. 1693.

(b) It came out in 1698. See the Acta Eruditorum for September 1698. pag. 420.

Since his Death, a Tract has been publiſhed with this Title, Paſtor fidelis, ſive de officio Miniſtrorum Eccleſiæ opuſculum, at Hamburg, 1696. in 12. See the Acta Eruditorum (a). They have alſo publiſhed his Hiſtoria Eccleſiaſtica Novi Teſtamentis, at Leipſick, in 1697. in 4. See (b) the ſame Journal.

(C) He left two Sons, who tread in his Steps.] He had Ten Children, Five Sons, and Five Daughters, whereof Four Sons were living, and as many Daughters, when he died. The two eldeſt Daughters were already married, one to Mr. Lindeman, Profeſſor of Phyſicks and Metaphyſicks at Roſtock, the other to Mr. (c) Paſch, Profeſſor of Morality at Kiel. The eldeſt of the Sons, Henry Chriſtian KORTHOLT, ſtudied Phyſick, and travelled then into Foreign Countries. Matthias Nicolas KORTHOLT, and Sebaſtian KORTHOLT his Brothers, had already given excellent Proofs of their Parts. Joſ. John KORTHOLT, the youngeſt of them all, ſtudied well, and was a Man of fine Hopes. Natu minor, they are the Words of the Funeral Programma, JOEL JOHANNES pietatis & literarum ſtudio diligenter innumbens, optimam de ſe ſpem excitat, quam abunde jam impleverunt ætate profectibuſque multò majores, MATTHIAS NICOLAUS, & SEBASTIANUS, ſuribus præclaris bonæ indolis ingenique excellentis ſpeciminibus editis. I have ſeen the Diſſertation de Poetis Epiſcopis, which Mr. Sebaſtian Kortholt printed in the Year 1699, and ſubmitted to the Examination of the Learned, Examini Eruditorum publico, when he was preparing (d) to take his Doctor's Degree in Philoſophy. 'Tis a very curious Piece, and it ſhews the great reading of the Author. Since this was printed, I have ſeen two other Pieces of his, on which I paſs the ſame Judgment: one is intitled, Diſquiſitio de Enthuſiaſmo Poetico, and

(a) January, 1696. pag. 7. & ſeq.

(b) For September 1697. pag. 438.

(c) He publiſhed in 1695. Schediaſma de curioſis hujus ſæculi inventis quorum accuratiori cultui facem prætulit antiquitas. He is reprinting it with great Additions.

(d) Pro ſummis in Philoſophia honoribus impetrandis.

was

KOTTERUS (Chriſtopher) is one of the three Fanaticks, whoſe Viſions were Publiſhed at Amſterdam in the year 1657. with this Title (A) Lux in tenebris. He lived at Sprottaw in Sileſia. His Viſions begun in June 1616. He fancied he ſaw an Angel in the Form of a Man, who commanded him to go and declare to the Magiſtrates, that unleſs the People repented, the Wrath of God would do terrible Executions. Tho' he had received this Order ſix times ſucceſſively, he did not Execute it; His Paſtor and his Friends diſſuaded him from it. But in April 1619, believing he ſaw the ſame Spirit, which threatned him with Eternal Damnation if he kept ſilence any longer, he diſcharged his Commiſſion in a full Aſſembly of the Magiſtrates the 26th. of Auguſt 1619. They Laughed at him. The Apparitions went on, and were followed with Extaſies and Prophetick Dreams. The Elector Palatin, Declared King of Bohemia by the Proteſtants, was concerned in theſe Viſions. Kotterus went to him at Breſlaw was printed at Kiel in the Year 1696, in 4to. the other, De pueilis Poetis omiſſis ab Adriano Bailleto, and was printed in the ſame Place, in the Year 1700, in 12*s*. I have learned alſo, that the Author has been made Profeſſor of Poetry in the Univerſity of Kiel, in February 1701, and that his Brother (Matthias Nicolas) being invited to Gieſſen, to be Profeſſor of Eloquence and Poetry in that Univerſity, made his Inauguration Speech the 22d. of June 1700. He treated De antiqua Eloquentia recentiorum perperam poſtpoſita à Carolo Peralto ſcriptore libri, Cujus eſt titulus, Parallele des Anciens & des Modernes, &c. This Speech ſeemed to me to be very good. You may ſee an Elogy upon this Profeſſor, in a Letter from Mr. (d) Magnus, dated from Kiel the 22d. of May 1700.

(d) Jo. Burchardus Majus Eloquentiæ & Hiſtoriæ profeſſor primarius. He is very famous for his Writings.

(A) With this Title, Lux in Tenebris.] I have obſerved in another Place (e), the occaſion of this Title, and will not repeat it. This Book was printed in the Year 1657, at the Charges of a rich (f) Patron, whom Comenius found at Amſterdam. It contains the Revelations of one Chriſtopher Kotterus, of Chriſtina Poniatovia, and Nicolas Drabicius. Comenius publiſhed an Abridgment of it in 1660. with this Title, Revelationum divinarum in uſum ſeculi noſtri factarum Epitome. He reprinted the whole Work with this Title, Lux è Tenebris novis radiis aucta, &c. This laſt Edition contains the reſt of Drabicius's Revelations till the Year 1666. A Profeſſor of Divinity at Franeker, a Polander, called Nicolas Arnoldus, writ quickly againſt this Work, and replied to Comenius's Apology. Mareſius, Profeſſor of Divinity at Groningen, wrote againſt the ſame Book, in his Theſes de tribus Videntibus, in the Year 1659; and when Ten Years after he publiſhed an Anſwer (g) to a Piece of Comenius concerning the Millenium, he upbraided him more than once, and with great Vehemence, for the Impreſſion of thoſe three pretended Prophets. This Book in ſome Years time fell into Oblivion and Contempt; but when the Turks beſieged Vienna, in the Year 1683, it was wonderfully ſought after. They who had put the Copies in a Garret, where they had reſted a long time, fetched 'em out and Sold abundance at a great Price; and if the Turks had taken Vienna, I doubt not but they muſt have made a new Edition of it, tho' the Copies had never been ſo dear. They were very much inquired for in France; M. d' Avaux ſent ſome thither: and therefore we may very well wonder, that M. Jurieu ſhould have ſuppoſed in the year 1691, that Drabicius was not known at Paris. This Suppoſition is not excuſable, ſince not long before he himſelf had very much contributed to ſpread the name of that Fanatick all over the World. Beſides, he alledged this wrong Suppoſition as a Proof of a State Crime; for he pretended that the Avis aux Refugiez making mention of Drabicius, could not have been written in France. Thoſe are things which my Readers would ſcarce believe; wherefore 'tis neceſſary I ſhould prove 'em, by giving an account of what was anſwered him. Here is the Anſwer made by the Author he accuſed (b).

(e) In the Article of Drabicius.

(f) His name was Lawrence de Geer.

(g) Intituled, Antirrhetricus, ſive defenſio pro zeli, &c. contra J. A. Comenium.

(b) In the Cabale chimerique p. 130. & ſeq. of the ſecond Edition.

(i) Pag. 28.

' The firſt of his Proofs is, that the Avis aux ' Refugiez was not made at Paris. Now this he Demonſtrates thus:

' He (i) who wrote that Avis, gives a particular account of Drabicius's Prophecies; he ſaw 'em, read 'em, and knows all the particulars of ' 'em.

' But the Learned of Paris ſcarce know the name ' of Drabicius.

' Therefore the Author of the Avis is not at ' Paris.

' If I ſhould deny the firſt Propoſition, I am ſure he ' could never prove it; becauſe it do's not appear ' from the Avis aux Refugiez that the Author of ' it knew any thing more of Drabicius, than that ' he attempted to excite a War againſt the Houſe ' of Auſtria. Any Man of Letters may know ' this without reading the Books of that Prophet.

' But the ſecond Propoſition is ſtill more palpably Falſe. For, not to ſay, that during the Siege ' of Vienna, Drabicius's Book was much Talked of ' in France, and that many Copies were ſent for ' from hence, (I was deſired by one of my Friends ' at Rouen, to ſend him one) who knows not that ' the great Encomiums Mr. Jurieu beſtowed on the ' Prophetical Triumvirate, I mean Chriſtina Poniatovia, Kotterus and Drabicius, in a (2) Book more ' common than Almanacks, as he himſelf boaſts of ' it (3), uſing the beſt Compariſon that was ever ' ſeen; who knows not, I ſay, that thoſe great Encomiums beſtow'd on Drabicius, and ſo likely to ' make this Prophet Talked of, have drawn upon ' the Paneggyriſt ſome very mortifying Cenſures ' from (4) the Biſhop of Meaux, and Mr. Pelliſſon ' (5), in ſome Books Publiſhed at Paris before the ' Impreſſion of the Avis aux Refugiez? Who ' doubts that the Satyr Intituled L'Eſprit de Mr. ' Arnauld, ſo well known ſince the year 1684. ' raiſed a Curioſity in abundance of French-' men to ſee Drabicius's Prophecies, the Model ' whereof Mr. Jurieu draws (6) there, in ſuch a ' manner as to promiſe to the Publick on one Hand, ' from Drabicius the ruin of the Houſe of Auſtria, ' to the King of France the Imperial Crown, to the ' Turks the taking of Vienna, Carinthia and Styria, ' and the Deſtruction of the Republick of Venice, ' and of the City of Rome, and to promiſe on the o-' ther Hand, in the name of the Proteſtants, all ' that they can do to accompliſh thoſe Prophecies? The Learned of Paris muſt have been very Stupid, if they did not inquire after a Book of which Mr. Jurieu has given the following Notion. I found, ſays he (i), in the Prophecies of Cotterus, Chriſtina and Drabicius, Publiſhed by Comenius, ſomething great and ſurpriz.ng. Kotterus, who is the firſt of theſe three Prophets is Great and Lofty; the Images of his Viſions are as Noble and Majeſtical, as thoſe of the Antient Prophets. They are alſo admirably connected, they are all of a Piece, and there is no Contradiction in them. 'Tis inconceivable how a meer Mechanick could have imagined ſuch lofty things without the Aſſiſtance of God. The two years of Chriſtina's Prophecy are in my Opinion a train of Miracles, as great as have happen'd ſince the Apoſtles: Nor do we find any thing in the Life of the greateſt Prophets, that is more Miraculous, than the Adventures of this Maid. Drabicius has alſo his Flights but there is much more Obſcurity and Difficulty in him. Theſe three Prophets conſpire in foretelling the Fall of the Antichriſtian Empire, as what muſt preſently come to paſs. But then there are ſo many other things in which one is offended, that one cannot ſet himſelf upon 'em. If this had not ſailed a deſire of knowing Comenius's Prophetical Collection, at leaſt, thoſe ſhould have had a Curioſity for them, who have ſeen Mr. Pelliſſon's Reflections ſur les differens de Religion. For when a Writer diſcovers a great deal of Haughtineſs, 'tis impoſſible not to feel a ſecret Pleaſure when he happens to be informed, as Mr. Jurieu was by theſe Words of Mr. Pelliſſon: (7) Propoſe and more than a Prophet, a Governour demands of you

(2) A compliſ. des Pro-phet. Printed in 1686.

(3) Lettre Paſtorale of the year 1689.

(4) Hiſt. des Variations, l. 13. n. 91. Printed in 1688.

(5) Reflexions ſur les differens de Religion. Printed in 1686.

(6) Tom. 2. p. 201.

(7) Preface to the Accompliſhment des Prophecies, Printed in 1686. Tom. 2. p. 3. Edit. Amſt.

law in December 1620, and declared to him his Commiſſion. He went to ſome other Places, and at laſt in 1625, to the Court (B) of Brandenburg *. He got himſelf acquainted the ſame year (C) with John Amos Comenius, who became a Promoter † of his Prophecies. Now as moſt of thoſe things turned upon Preſages of Proſperity to the Elector Palatin, and Unhappineſs to his Imperial Majeſty, it happened that David Wachſman the Emperor's Attorney in the Lower Sileſia, and in Luſatia, uſed all ſorts of means to ſeize Kotterus whom he look'd upon as a Seditious Impoſtor. Kotterus fell into his Hands the ſecond of January 1627. He was Examined, and put into a Dungeon, and the Sentence of the Court of Appeals was expected from Prague. The Em-

* Taken from his Revelations publiſh'd by Comenius.

† Comenius, Hiſt. Revelation. p. 16. & ſeq.

(d) Comenius in epitome revelationum, Append. 3. p. m. 209.

(e) His name was Abraham Mencelius.

(f) Comenius, Hiſt. revelat. p. 21.

(a) Videſ hanc Bibliothecam meam (inſtruxi Biſſimam habebat, celeberrimus ob eam rem tam per Germaniam, quo me ſecerit, hoc colloquium expetentem introduxerat) omnes Authores, antiquos & recentes conſului, ut quid de quæſtione illa, Utrum poſt Chriſtum & Apoſtolos, obſignatumque Novi Fœderis Canonem, ullæ novæ admittendæ ſint, ſi divinæ vel angelicæ, revelationes, ſentiendum ſit cognoſcerem? Sed nemo me ſcrupulis liberare potuit. Ego igitur ad preces converſus, ardentiſſime invocabam Deum (ſæpe etiam noctu ſurgens & me in faciem provolvens) ut ne pateretur illudi Eccleſiæ ſuæ orans. Poſt omnia vero tandem penſitata, divinitusque ſuggeſta, non aliud habeo quod dicam, niſi DEUM MISISSE ANGELUM SUUM, qui nuntiaret nobis ſervis ſuis ea, quæ oportet fieri cito: (quæ ſunt Angeli verba Apoc. 22. 6.) Ibid.

his

(1) Chriſtopher Kotterus, of Sileſia. Chriſtina Pontanuski, of Bohemia. Nicolas Drabicius, of Moravia.

(b) Ibid. p. 501. & ſeq. See alſo Les Chimeres de Mr. Jurieu, 4. part. p. 141.

(c) Thoſe, which I have quoted above out of the Preface of the Accompliſſement des Prophecies.

the Millenium, which he declares to us, who at leaſt aſſumes the Authority of Reforming, Correcting, and Chaſtiſing, when he pleaſes, ſuch as he has formally acknowledged for Prophets, and Inſpired (1) Men, a ſort of People whom the Event has already proved to be Guilty of a hundred Impoſtures, and who have been confounded in the ſight of all the World, by the taking of Buda, tho' they had aſſured us, as from God, that it would never return to the Chriſtians by Force of Arms, but by a Treaty with the Turks. He gave (b) formal Proofs of all this, by quoting the (c) very Words of Mr. Jurieu, and the places where Drabicius expreſly ſaid that Buda ſhould never come out of the Hands of the Turk, but in a Peaceable way. When People are affected towards an Author as they were at Paris, with reſpect to Mr. Jurieu, they are ſo well pleaſed to ſee him convicted either of Impoſture, or Enthuſiaſm, that they'll ſeek for ſuch a Conviction at the Fountain Head. But is it true, ſay they, that Drabicius affirms ſuch a thing? may not one ſee it with ones own Eyes, that there may remain no Scruple to leſſen the Ridiculouſneſs of ſuch a Scene? They'll ſeek a Copy of Drabicius wherever they think it may be had; and if it can't be met with, they will however keep his name in their Memory.

It can't be ſaid that I digreſs from my Subject; for ſince it is a falſity in point of Fact, to ſay that Drabicius's Name was ſcarce known at Paris in 1690. it belongs to this Dictionary, and I have the right of uſing all the Proofs that Confute this Falſity.

If M. Jurieu had been contented to ſay, that in Compariſon of the noiſe Drabicius's name would have made in France, in caſe the Turks had taken Vienna, he was ſcarce known at Paris, when the Avis aux Refugiez was Written, I think he would not be in the wrong; for the taking of Vienna would have made Drabicius more Talked of, than the Grand Viſier. The Book which M. Jurieu writ during the Siege of that Town, to Praiſe and Vindicate the three Prophets of Comenius by his fine Illuſtrations, and learned Commentaries, would have been Tranſlated into ſeveral Languages, and would have made Drabicius for a long time the Diſcourſe of all Companies. His performance came to nothing as to Drabicius's Memory, by the raiſing of the Siege: The great Sobieski, two or three hundred Leagues off deſtroy'd a Book, which was juſt ready to be put into the Preſs. I began to know during the Siege of Vienna, how much I was miſtaken in believing that at laſt the World was cured of the Chimerical hopes, which they had ſo often grounded upon Viſions. I every where met with People, that Talked of nothing but of Drabicius's Prophecies, and who built many Caſtles in the Air, ſo far as to deſtroy Babylon in a Moment. They could not ſufficiently admire how Drabicius could gueſs ſo right with reſpect to Tekely. This is what I would be at; for I made it appear, that Tekely, who was then the great Actor of this Opera, made no Figure in Drabicius's Book, which is a plain Nullity. I queſtion not but the French had quickly prick'd up their Ears, if the Enterprize of the Grand Viſier had ſucceeded. They would gladly have lent their Hand to the Credulous concerning Drabicius's Viſions, ſince they promiſed the Empire to the King of France. 'Tis therefore certain, that the Name of this falſe Prophet would have been incomparably more Famous at Paris if the Turks had taken Vienna.

(B) In 1625. to the Court of Brandenburg.] The Elector George William hearing the great Noiſe, that was made of Kotterus's Revelations, had a mind to ſee him. He ordered the Divines of Francfort upon the Oder, to Examine him; after which, he ſent for him twice to Berlin, firſt in the year 1625. and then in the year 1626. His Renown ſpreading as far as Strasburg, ſo ſtruck one of the Burgomaſters, that he ſent a Meſſenger into Sileſia, to intreat Kotterus, to explain to him ſixty two Points, and to come to Strasburg, where he might more ſafely Exerciſe his Prophetical Miniſtry. Kotterus anſwered his ſixty two Queſtions, but excuſed himſelf from going to Strasburg, upon his having no Commiſſion from the Spirit, and ſuffered his Picture to be ſent to the Burgomaſter (d).

(C) He got himſelf acquainted——— with John Amos Comenius who became a Promoter.] After the Edicts of the Emperor commanding the Miniſters of Bohemia and Moravia in the year 1624. to depart out of the Country, it was reſolved in a ſecret Aſſembly in March 1625, that the Miniſters of Bohemia ſhould retire into Poland, and thoſe of Moravia into Hungary, and that ſome ſhould be deputed with Letters both into Poland and Hungary, to prepare a Reception for 'em. Comenius was deputed to Poland, and paſſing through Gorlitzin Luſatia, the Governor of the young Count de Zerotin told him, as a very comfortable News, that the ruin of Antichriſt was at Hand, as it appeared from what the Holy Ghoſt had revealed to a good Man of Silſia, called Chriſtopher Kotterus. He related and read ſeveral Pieces of it, and becauſe Comenius was too Incredulous, he adviſed him to go to the place, and Diſcourſe with the Prophet. Comenius paſſing through Sprottaw, deſired to ſee Kotterus: His Wife anſwered him, that he was ſent for by the Elector of Brandenburg. The Paſtor (c) of that place confirmed the ſame thing to him; he aſſured him that Kotterus was a true Seer, and gave him his Revelations to read. Comenius waiting till Kotterus's return, Meditated on this Manuſcript, and was Amazed at it. Soon after he ſaw Kotterus, performed his Journey, returned quickly to Sprottaw, Tranſlated the Manuſcript of the Revelations into the Bohemian Tongue, and was fully convinced that they proceeded from God. He returned into Poland, and took the Prophet with him, who told him in the way, that he knew by Revelation, that there would be a Council of all Chriſtendom, in which the Pope would be Depoſed, and a Canon made, forbidding every Body hereafter to Uſurp the Title of Univerſal Biſhop. Comenius repreſented to him, that he had not read that Article in the Manuſcript: Kotterus anſwered, I had no orders to write it, but I have learned it. Returning from Poland, Comenius parted from Kotterus, and went to Berlin, where he found that even among the Refugees of Bohemia and Moravia, they paſſ very different Judgments on this Man: Some held him for a true Prophet, eſpecially when the Poſt brought News, that the King of Denmark was raiſing Troops. Others ſaid he was a Cheat, who having ſpent his Fortune, and not knowing how to live, ſet up for a Prophet. (f) Alii rurſum ex iiſdem meis ſcabioſiſſima de Cottero effutiebant: helluonem, rei ſuæ decoctorem, deſperationeque ad prophetandum adactum dictitantes, miraque de prophetiis ipſius mendacia inter ſe ſpargentes, mihique referentes. This made Comenius uneaſy, but Chriſtopher Pelargus, Super-intendant-General of the Churches of Brandenburg, who had examined Kotterus by the Elector's Order, removed his doubts, by ſaying, that he ought not to queſtion that Man's extraordinary Miſſion (a), nor repent of his having Tranſlated

Emperor's Attorney received it the 25th. of April; but as he Died a little after, it is not known what it contained. Kotterus was taken out of the Dungeon, and permitted to be Visited by his Wife and his Friends, and at last he was put (D) in the Pillory, and Banished the Dominions of the Emperor not to return upon pain of Death. He went into Lusatia, which belonged to his Electoral Highness of Saxony, and there lived quietly till he died, which happened in the year 1647 *. 'Tis by a Fault of the Printer, that Moreri's Dictionary (E) makes him 92 years of Age. Comenius can't be excused (F) for Printing such Prophecies. He knew that part of 'em had proved false by the Event. Since his Death, they have been more and more confuted by the course his Revelations into the Bohemian Tongue. This Translation was not kept secret, as the Author says he desired; it was shewn to some Persons, who had it Transcribed, and so the Copies Multiplied prodigiously in Bohemia: Nor is it any wonder, since that Book promised a hundred Triumphs to King Frederick. Sometime after it was Printed in Bohemian at Perna in Misnia, with Praises and Marginal Notes. But all the Ministers did not fall into the Trap. Two of 'em, with some Elders, found fault with the Transcribing of that Book; the interest of the true Faith, and the Danger which they were exposed to, were the two Reasons that made 'em Vote for the Suppression of these Chimera's, as being either an ingenious Fiction, or the fantastical Dreams of an Enthusiast. (b) Scriptum illud (sive id ab aliquo ingenioso confictum, sive ab ipso fanatico homine conscriptum esset) supprimi petierunt. Duplex enim subesse periculum, & Conscientiarum, si se homines à certo Dei Verbo ad incerta id genus figmenta abduci paterentur, & Corporis atque vitæ, si hac in adversariorum venian' manus. In the year 1626. the Electoress Juliana, Mother to King Frederick, having acquainted a great Lord of Moravia, who was as well as she, a Refugee at Berlin, that she had received a Letter from the King her Son, in which he enquired whether he could have the Prophecies of the Man of Silesia in Writing, this great Lord got a Copy Transcribed, and not being able to give it himself, because he was Sick, he charged Comenius with it, who was then at Berlin. Comenius, instead of delivering it to the Electoress, went directly to the King, who was then at the Hague, demanded Audience, Harangued him, and amongst other things told him, that since his Majesty and his Children bore the principal part of that Divine Piece, they who had this Manuscript, would have thought themselves Guilty of an Absurdity, if they had not Communicated it to his Majesty. Cujus (Cotteri) omnia cum sint in scriptum relata, ibidemque Majestas Vestra, cum Progenie sua, tanquam primaria in hac Dei Comœdia introducitur Persona; absurdum visum est illis, qui ea suis hactenus custodierunt manibus, ad notitiam Majestatis Vestræ hæc non deduci. Non quidem ut majestati Vestræ ista præcisè credendi imponatur necessitas: sed, Primùm, ut hæc apud Majestatem Vestram tanquam in archivo sacro asserventur, in futurum testimonium: nè, si demùm post completa prædicta hæc palam fiant, ex eventu sic esse collecta, suspicari quis, aut calumniari, possit. Deinde, ut occasio sit attendendi, num forte divina providentia tales in eventus res disponat. (Nam si de imminente rerum mutatione Politicos discursus, vel Astrologicas prædictiones, aut similes Prudentiorum conjecturas, cognescere non aspernamur, cur hæc ab altiori venientia principio aspernari libeat?) Curarunt itaque ex authentico describi exemplar, quod Majestati Vestræ per me humili cum observantia exhibent: simulque exhibui (c). This is not meant, adds he, to impose on your Majesty the necessity of believing these things, but only to desire that you would preserve them in your Archives, to the end that if they prove true no Body may object, that those Predictions were made after the Event, and that you may also have an occasion to observe whether Providence prepares the way to those great Revolutions.

Here the Mystery lies: They would have it so that the Princes who are capable of Executing a Design, and Interested in the Execution, should form it, in hopes of succeeding in it. This is frequently the first Motive of our Prophets and Apocalyptical Commentators, and of those who favour 'em. But to return to the Thread of the History.

Comenius was received, and dismist Honourably by King Frederick, and went into Bohemia, where Kotterus met him, in October 1626, and Discoursed with some Ministers and Gentlemen (d).

Here is a Passage in which I can see no great exactness. (e) Quum turpiter vero in horum (Cotteri & Drabicii) & Christinæ Poniatowiæ virginis Bohemæ conatibus, qui ejusdem omnino farinæ erant, juxtà modo dictus Comenius se dederit, è Voetii Disp. part. 2. p. 1080. liquet. They are Mr. Hartnac's Words in his new Edition of Micrælius's Ecclesiastical History. He had been Condemning the pretended Prophecies of Kotterus, and Comenius who Published 'em; he had been saying (f) that Drabicius's Head and Hand were cut off, who well deserv'd that Punishment; and then he adds, that it appears by the 1080. Page of the 2. Tome of Voetius's Disputations, that Comenius committed a most shameful Fault in Publishing the Revelations of those People. I have consulted that place of Voetius, but there is nothing relating to Comenius either in the 1080 Page or in the following.

(D) He was put in the Pillory.] These are Comenius's Words. (g) Post aliquot adhuc mensium deliberationem, nominiæ pœna affecerunt tali. Eductum carcere collocarunt ad cippum fori, ferreo adstrictum collari, affixaque supra caput scheda, cui inscriptum fuit Hic est Pseudo-propheta ille, qui prædixit quæ non evenerunt. Horæ spatio sic spectaculo relictus, per Lictorem urbe fuit eductus, extrequè patriâ, nec in Cæsaris ditiones redire sub capitis pœna, jussus.

(E) That Moreri's Dictionary.] His Birth is placed there in the year 1585. and his Death in 1647, he therefore lived 62 and not 92 years. But the Printers do often confound the Figures 6 and 9.

(F) Comenius can't be excused for Printing such Prophecies.] God forbid, I should pronounce Judgement on what passes in the Heart of my Neighbour; these Mysteries only belong to God: But on some occasions, one may speak ones thoughts upon Appearances. Much more may I be permitted to Relate Historically, what others have thought of Comenius. Whilst he lived in Prussia, they deliberated about him in the Courts of some Princes, and it was made a Case of Conscience, whether he did not deserve the Punishment, which the Law of God Decreed against false Prophets. He was suspected to have been a Counsellor and a Secretary to those, who intended to make an Irruption into Bohemia, which they would have Executed, if the English (b) had furnished 'em with the Supplies, which they Demanded. He and those of his Temper were accounted the Abettors of the War, which Ragotski, and the Princes Radzivil undertook against Poland. The Church of God to be delivered from Papal Tyranny, was the Object that was set before their Eyes to make 'em take up Arms. I say nothing, but what I have a good Authority for: Read these Words of Arnoldus to Comenius. (i) Prævaricatio illa, quam dicis, tanti tamen non fuit, ut super ea in aulis Principum deliberaretur, casus conscientiæ formati viris doctis decidendi mitterentur, an sim falsus Propheta, & consequenter, an in me pœna divinitus in falsos Prophetas statuta animadvertendum non esset, quod de te in Borussia cum adhuc morarer perscriptum memini, & forte autographum illarum literarum adhuc possideo. Tanti, inquam, non fuit illa prævaricatio, ut propter eam [illegible] audirem, ac desertâ statione mea Professoriâ, Magnatibus pro flabello in concertandis motibus bellicis essem, uti de te rumor est, qui à manu & consiliis intimis fuisse illis dicerit, qui in Bohemiam irruptionem ante annos molirentur, si modo annuissent illorum

* Taken from the Abridgement of his Revelations, Append. 3. and from the Historia revelationum, p. 21. 22.

(b) Ibid. p. 23.

(c) Ibid. p. 26.

(d) Taken from the Historia revelationum Publish'd by Comenius in the year 1650. p. 15. & seq.

(e) Micræl. Histor. Eccles. p. 1324. Edit. 1699.

(f) Interceptus in illo regno (Hungariæ Drabicius) capite manuque amputatis, libro quoque cui titulus, Lux in Tenebris, infami loco combusto dignam pœnam lim. Id. ibid.

(g) Historia revelat. p. 28.

(b) 'Twas in Cromwell's time.

(i) Arnoldus in Discursu Theologico contra Comenium, p. 10.

course of Affairs. The Turks, who according to those Prophecies (G) were to destroy the House of Austria, have restored it to its former Lustre, by their continual Losses. He made himself very much suspected of having a Design to kindle a War. The rum votis Angli sollicitati. Ego id non dico, quanquam stylus literarum tuo non sit absimilis. Jam per rumores in Borussia (uti nisi me omnino fallat memoria illinc ad te perscripsi,) audiveram, Principes Radzivilios & Rakocium à vobis fuisse inductos, qui arma contra Polonos capesserent, spe liberandæ Ecclesiæ à tyrannide Pontificia, cujus rei haud exiguæ passim in volumine illo triuno extant argumenta. Ego tamen non definio. I don't wonder, that Comenius was suspected of Political Contrivances, and Intrigues of War; for a Divine who Travels as much as he did, and who has such frequent Business at the Courts of Princes, is a Man, who is not much to be trusted. The Electoress, Mother to King Frederick, inquires whether a Collection of Kotterus's Prophecies is to be had; the Person, to whom she makes her Application, gets a Copy Transcribed, and not being able to present it himself, orders Comenius to do it: Comenius who is at Berlin, and has but two steps to make, to present it to the Electoress, chooses rather to go to the Hague, that he may give it with his own Hand to King Frederick, and Harangue him upon the Contents of the Book, which, at least, said he, would make him Attentive to the Occurrences. This looks very much like the Contrivance of a Faction. They foretell what they desire should be Attempted, and then they leave no Stone unturned, to engage in the Enterprize such as they think fit for it. 'Tis very likely, that the great Pains Comenius took, to Reunite the Protestants (b), proceeded from his desire of forming a powerful Party, that might accomplish the Prophecies with Carnal Weapons. There is another thing which did Comenius some Prejudice. He was a Man of Learning, he Argu'd very sensibly in other Matters, and like a Man of Parts; there was nothing in him that look'd like Enthusiasm. This made People believe that he was not persuaded of what he said. There may be, and there is sometimes some Imposture in Extatical Grimaces; but those who boast of Inspiration, without shewing in their Face, or by their Words, that their Brain is disorder'd, and without ever being put out of their Natural State, are incomparably more suspected of a Cheat, than those, who from time to time fall into Convulsions, as the Sibyl more or less.

(c) Deus ecce, Deus: cui talia fanti,
Ante fores subito non vultus, non color unus,
Non comta mansere coma: sed pectus anhelum,
Et rabie fera corda tument: majorque videri,
Nec mortale sonans, adflata est numine quando
Jam propiore Dei. . . . . .
. . . . . .
At (d) Phœbi nondum patiens immanis in antro
Bacchatur vates, magnum si pectore possit
Excussisse deum: tanto magis ille fatigat
Os rabidum, fera corda domans, fingitque premendo.

I am willing that Comenius should not be suspected of any sinister Design. But what shall we say against those, who find Fault with him for having Publish'd Kotterus's Prophecies as being Divinely Inspired, tho' the Event had proved them to be false (e)? I confess this seems to me inexcusable. And as for Drabicius, could it be imagined, that God inspired him? If God had inspired him, he would have had Rogotski to destroy the House of Austria, and to know that Heaven had design'd him for this great Work. But if this had been God's Will, would he not have inspired that Prince with the desire of making War against the Emperor, or at least with some Credulity for Drabicius? Here's a thing that shews the conceitedness of Comenius. His Son-in-Law (f) desired Arnoldus Professor of Divinity at Franeker to Assist his Father-in-Law with his good Advice, who seemed to Hesitate about the Impression of the three Prophets. Arnoldus advised him not to Print 'em (g); the Son-in Law (h) gave the same Counsel, which he grounded upon very strong Arguments. But how could Comenius Adhere to the Advice of two Persons, since he had no regard to the Decree of the Polish Churches, which having examined the pretended Revelations of Kotterus, and Christiana Poniatovia, Condemned 'em to be suppress for ever (i).

(h) He owns in his Book de uno necessario, that one of the three things wherein he had intangled himself, were the pseudo-irenicum, five variæ, noxiæ, prorsusque exitiosæ circa fidem disidentes Christianos reconciliandi desiderium. See Spizelius in infelice literato, p. 1025.
(c) Virgil. Æn. l. 6. v. 46.
(d) Ibid. v. 77.
(e) It was proved against him from his own Words, that he believed some of Drabicius's Predictions to be false, that for instance which imported that Comenius was to be present at the Coronation of the King of Hungary at Presburg. Arnoldus ubi supra p. 42.
(f) His name was Figulus.
(g) In Discursu Theologico, p. 5.
(h) Ibid. p. 30.

(G) The Turks who according to those Prophecies were to destroy the House of Austria, have restored it to their former Lustre.] See hereupon the indecent Insults of the Author of the Avis aux Refugiez. 'Tis certain, says he (k), that the Glory and Happiness of his Imperial Majesty in this War, are wonderful; and that to the Eternal Confusion of the Prophecies of your Drabicius, God has given greater Success to this Prince, than to the Emperor Charles V. This false Prophet, more eager to Curse than Balaam, who even when a Neighbouring King importun'd him with great Promises, would do nothing Rashly, let Fly for the space of several years against the House of Austria, the most terrible Curses he could think of, and devoted it as we may say, to the Furies and Infernal Gods, Diris & numinibus infernis, because it had Persecuted your Religion. But the Event has shewn, that he did not understand that Trade, and that he had no good Hand at Cursing. No Man did ever deserve less the Encomium that was bestowed upon Balaam, He that thou Blessest shall be Blessed, and he that thou Curses shall be Cursed; and if all your Prophetical Imprecations are like those of Drabicius, People will be forward hereafter to desire your Curses, and you'll be sought for with greater Importunity to utter 'em, than the King of the Moabites used to make Balaam the False Prophet Curse his Enemies. Since the Impression of that Avis, the Prosperity of the Emperor's Arms, has been sometimes interrupted (l); but this has been but a little Respite for the Turks; their bad Fortune quickly began again to Display all its Fury. She was like to over-whelm them the last year (m), she made 'em every where feel her Indignation, in Dalmatia, in Hungary, in Poland, upon the Archipelago; and if we may believe the News Writers, they lost two Battles at least in a little time last Winter, tho' the Victors did not think fit to pursue their Victory, but rather quit the Isle of Chios. The New Sultan raises in a manner the hopes of the Port. They apply to him what Florus said of Trajan (n); but hitherto it does not appear by the Relations of our News Writers, that he has had great success. And as for Tekeli, who during the Siege of Vienna was given out for Drabicius's Hero, we have lately been told in the Gazettes that the Turks weary of the obstinate Malignity of his Stars, have shut him up in the seven Towers.

THIS IS what I said in the Month of October 1695, whilst we saw a kind of Suspension of the Good and Glorious Fortune of the Imperial Arms in Hungary. The Paris Gazettes daily Amplified the Victory the Sultan had lately got, the other Gazettes continually diminished it. It was not as yet known to what Party the Consequences of this Battle would be favourable. The Progress of the Turks would have confirmed the Relations of Paris and confuted those of Holland and Germany. But they made none at all, they retired a little after into their Territories, and hereby the Contest was ended to the confusion of the Paris Gazetteers. The Fortune of his Imperial Majesty was uppermost afterwards, and especially in 1697, by a Defeat of the Ottomans, so Compleat, so Shameful, and Pernicious to 'em, that there is hardly any like it in their Annals. The Sultan, who was there in Person was so mortified with this Blow, that he thought of nothing but Peace, and accepted it the year following, on what conditions they would prescribe him, which were most Glorious and Advantageous to his Imperial Majesty. No false Prophets did ever receive such bloody Affronts, as those which the Prophecies Published by Comenius received by this Grand Treaty of Peace. The Emperor, whom they did so much Threaten, Mortified, Humbled, and trod under Foot the Haughtiness of the Ottomans, to whom they had promised so many Conquests over the House of Austria. He added the Lustre of an Advantageous Peace, to the Glory which had attended his Arms, and made him Triumphant by reducing the strongest Places and gaining many Battles. He

(i) Cotterianæ & Poniatovianæ visiones ut vanæ ad silentium & tenebras fuerunt ab illis condemnatæ. Arnoldus ib. p. 28.
(k) Pag. 357.
(l) For Example, when the Turks Retook Belgrade in the year 1690.
(m) I write this in October 1695. when our News Writers tell us that the loss of the Imperialists at the Battle of Lugos is very inconsiderable.
(n) Quibus inertia Cæsarum quasi consensus atque decoxit, nisi quod sub Trajano principe movet lacertos, & placet sibi omnium, senectus imperii, quasi redita juventute, revirescit. Florus in proœmio.

does

The ſame Suſpicions are entertained of a Miniſter (H), whoſe Prophecies are of a later Date. Advantage has been taken of ſome Words, which are to be found here and does what ever he pleaſes in Tranſylvania; he has made a Kingdom Hereditary which had been always Elective, and is in Poſſeſſion of that whole Kingdom, whereas he only poſſeſt part of it. What ſhall we ſay of the Advantages and Glory he obtained by the Treaty of Riſwick, by the recovery of ſo many Countries, which had been taken from the Empire, or his Allies, and by the Re-union of Friburg and Briſac, to the Hereditary States of the Houſe of Auſtria? If this Prince is happy abroad, he is no leſs ſo at home; Fecundity, Marriages, &c. make his Family proſper; his ſecond Son is to inherit almoſt the whole Monarchy of Spain, by ſuch Tranſactions, as France it ſelf has conſented to (a). Take warning by this Confuſion of Comenius's falſe Prophets, you, who have the confidence to threaten with the Apocalypſe, thoſe that don't pleaſe you.

(a) I write this in June, 1700, when the News-Writers tell us of a Treaty of Partition of the Spaniſh Monarchy, agreed upon by France, England, and Holland.

(H) The ſame Suſpicions are entertained of a Miniſter, whoſe Prophecies are of a later Date. What I have ſaid of Comenius, I ſay it alſo of a famous Divine at Rotterdam, who has explained the Prophecies of the Scripture, pretending confidently to be inſpired. I don't pretend to judge of his Heart, and I am willing it ſhould be believed, that he did not act againſt his Conſcience; but no Body ought to take it amiſs, if I ſay, that he has been ſuſpected to have no other Deſign than to make People take up Arms, and put Europe in a Combuſtion. They go upon this, that there appeared no Sign of Confuſion in him, when the Event gave the Lye to his Prophecies, in a moſt undeniable manner. He had, ſay they, ſo great an Opinion of his Parts and Knowledge, that he would have fallen into a mortal Diſcontent and Humiliation, by ſo terrible a Proof of Illuſion and Ignorance, as this would be; but being inwardly convinced, that he was not deceived, he has preſerved the ſame good Opinion of his Underſtanding that he had before, and ſo the ill Succeſs of a Propheſie, which was a meer Juggler's Trick, has not humbled him. They build alſo upon this, that like Comenius, he has attempted to reunite the Lutherans and Calviniſts (b), in hopes, ſay they, of increaſing the Number of Troops that ſhould attack Antichriſt. Once more, I am willing that this ſhould only be looked upon as a faithful Account of what many ſay and think. Let us go farther, and ſee what one of his Adverſaries has publiſhed. (c) 'One muſt needs be ſtupid, not to 'perceive ſo groſs an Artifice, eſpecially when he 'ſeems to give you notice of it himſelf; and to ſay 'here and there, ſome things, whereby he may 'diſcover his Secret hereafter, and ſecure himſelf from your Reproaches. (1) It is certain, ſays 'he in one Place, that often Prophecies, whether 'fictitious or true, have inſpired thoſe for whom they 'were made, with a deſign of undertaking the things 'that were promiſed 'em. Men of Senſe need no 'more to make 'em underſtand his Intention, and 'diſcover his Views. And elſewhere: One Day 'perhaps the World ſhall know, the principal Rea-'ſon that made me ſpeak ſo poſitively, and with ſo 'much Aſſurance upon the Explication of the Pro-'phecies. We ſhall know it, moſt dear Brethren, 'in the Way he will then explain it. If he be under a Miſtake, as one may well believe he is; he'll 'tell you, I had nothing but Conjectures, but a good 'Cauſe ought to be ſupported as well as it can, and 'our People were to be animated with ſome few 'hopes. I knew that Prophecies, even ſuch as are 'Fictitious, are wont to produce a like Effect. If 'on the contrary, the preſent Junctures, the Jealouſy of Nations, the Indignation of the Proteſtant 'States for their aſſaulted Religion, the Controverſies of France with the Court of Rome, ſhould 'produce any important Effect, which might give 'you new Hopes; I well know, would he ſay, what 'I ſaid in the Year 1680; an Angel ſpoke to me: 'but if I had ſaid ſo then, I ſhould have been taken for 'an Impoſtor; the Angel himſelf forbad me to ſpeak 'of it. He ſpeaks to me ſtill, and gives me Liberty 'to declare it to you. Follow me; we are going to 'begin that Kingdom of God, of which you doubted, 'and which nevertheleſs you begg'd of him in your 'daily Prayer. Were it true that Mr. Jurieu is guilty of the Impoſture, he is charged with, he would have been afraid, that the Publick had not been able to dive into his Secret; and therefore chuſing to preſerve the good Opinion of his Parts, at the Coſt of his Honeſty, he would have ſlipt in (d) ſome Words, that might diſcover the Myſtery to the clear-ſighted.

(b) See the Biſhop of Meaux's Addition to his Hiſtoire des Variations.

(c) Pelliſſon, Hiſtoire de Mr. Jurieu, 4 part, pag. 184. 185. of the Amſterdam Edition.

(1) In the 2d. Edition of the Accompliſſement des Prophecies, at Rotterdam, 1686, chap. 15.

The Knaveries, that have been diſcovered amongſt the Prophets of Dauphine, have occaſion'd a large Comment upon the Paſſage of Mr. Pelliſon, before related. We need only read a Book, entituled, Hiſtoire du Fanatiſme de notre temps, &c. The Hiſtory of the Fanaticiſm of our Time, and the Deſign there was of making the diſcontented Calviniſts in France riſe up in Arms. It was printed at Amſterdam the Year 1692. Mr. Brueys, the Author of it, having collected together ſeveral Paſſages out of Mr. Jurieu's Book, to prove, that this Miniſter ſet up for a Prophet, adds immediately, (e) However, it ought not to be imagined, that this Miniſter was truly perſuaded, of what he would perſuade others; he deſignedly affected to appear like a Prophet. He knew well enough, that he was not; but he had a Mind to impoſe upon the People, to make an Inſurrection, and to kindle a Civil War in the Heart of this Kingdom, in order to favour the Deſign of our Enemies. He was ſo full of this deteſtable Project, when he compoſed his Book of Prophecies, that he himſelf can't forbear diſcovering his deſign to the Reader, who has never ſo little Penetration. The time in which he writ, the Motives that induced him to it, and the Strokes, wherein he has incogitantly ſcattered ſome Drops of the Venome his Heart was filled with, diſcover the Deſign of this falſe Prophet. I will not produce the Proofs he has given of each of theſe Remarks, but will only ſet down what he obſerves concerning the laſt. Here is, ſays he (f), what has eſcaped him in ſome Places of his Book, which manifeſtly diſcovers, that he had no other Deſign, than to cauſe an Inſurrection of the People. 'The 'Prophecies which are in that Piece, at firſt ſcandalized the moſt underſtanding Men of his Party; 'he ſays ſo himſelf, in the Second Edition of his 'Book. (1) Some, ſays he, believe that the 'hopes I give of a Reſtoration in a few Years, may 'be very prejudicial. He attempts firſt to ſhew, that 'there is no Reaſon to fear it, and then he adds: 'It is certain, that often Prophecies, whether 'Fictitious or true, have inſpired thoſe, for 'whom they were made, with a Deſign of undertak-'king the Things that were promiſed 'em. Could he 'declare more expreſly the Intention he had of running the Hazard of venting falſe Prophecies to 'make the Malecontents of France riſe up in Arms, 'and to inſpire 'em with the Deſign of procuring to themſelves the ſpeedy Deliverance, which he promiſed them? Thoſe of his Party, were not only 'ſcandaliſed as his venturing to publiſh ſuch Pro'phecies; but much more at his talking ſo affirma'tively. He himſelf informs us of it. 'As to 'the Reflection, ſays he (2), which ſo many People 'have made, that I ſpeak too affirmatively of 'things, which I ſhould have propoſed only as ſtrong 'Conjectures; one Day perhaps the World ſhall know 'the principal reaſon that made me ſpeak ſo poſitively, 'and with ſo much aſſurance. What then is this 'principal Reaſon, which he dares not ſpeak, and 'which perhaps the World ſhall know one Day? 'Is it that he is truely perſuaded of the Things 'he ſays? This is the only reaſon that ought to o'blige an honeſt Man to ſpeak poſitively. But if 'it be his, why do's he not ſay ſo? Is he afraid of 'ſpeaking the truth? Let us preſs him no far'ther upon it; he is more ſincere than we think; 'he has already told us this principal Reaſon; does 'he not ſay, that it is certain that often Prophecies, 'whether fictitious or true, have inſpired thoſe for 'whom they were made, with a deſign of undertaking 'the Things that were promiſed them. This is his 'principal Reaſon; we need not ſeek for another. This 'falſe Prophet did not expect, that (g) theſe two Paſ'ſages would be put together ſome time or other, he 'had ſeperated them on purpoſe in two ſeveral Tomes; 'are now placed together, and ſo naturally explain one another, that he muſt be blind who (d) The two Paſſages for Example, cited by Mr. Pelliſſon out of the Accompliſſement des Prophecies.

(e) Brueys Hiſtoire du Fanatiſme, pag. 44.

(f) Ibid. pag. 51.

(1) Tom. 1. Addition to the Avis, 2d. Edit.

(2) Tom. 2. pag. 184.

(g) Mr. Brueys often repeats the Conſequences which he draws from the Conjunction of thoſe two Paſſages. See eſpecially, pag. 227. 230. 241.

and there in his Book, and by which 'tis pretended he has discovered the Secret of his Design. They too much exaggerate (I) what they impute to him. My Reader may judge

' cannot see, that if Mr. Jurieu spoke in so decisive a ' manner of the approaching Deliverance, which he ' promis'd the Protestants of France, it was because ' he thinks, that often Prophecies, whether fictitious or true, have inspired those for whom they ' were made, with a design of undertaking the ' Things that were promised them.

Mr. Brueys seems so fully perswaded, that he has discovered all the Mystery, that he repeats this Observation more than once. Nay, he is so malicious as to put his Reader in mind of the Artifices of the Heathens. (h) This Minister promised the Calvinists the fall of Popery, and the approaching Deliverance of their Church; he promised 'em these things in the Name of God, telling them they were contained in St. John's Revelation. And therefore those Prophecies could not but inspire those for whom they were made, with a design of undertaking the things that were promised 'em; because there is nothing that has more force upon the Minds of Men, than Religion; and every thing appears lawful to them, when they firmly believe that God is on their side, and that they are only executing his Orders. Those who know what use the cunning Greeks and Romans made of their Oracles, Diviners, Augurs, and of those Priests, whom they called Haruspices, Feciales, Præpetes (a) and Oscines, whose Functions consisted in foretelling the Will of the Gods, when they deliberated about any important Affair; some by observing the Entrails of the Victims, others the singing, flying, or different Motions of certain Birds. Those, I say, who know of what use those things were formerly, are not ignorant, that Men of Sense and Judgment gave no Credit to 'em, and used them only to possess the People and the Soldiers with a desire of undertaking what they promised them from their Gods; but at the bottom it was nothing but what they themselves had resolved upon, before they consulted their Oracles. Here you see exactly the Fictitious Prophecies, and the pretended Persuasion of M. Jurieu.

(a) Those two Names præpetes & oscines, were not given to some Priests, but to some Birds, which served for Divination.

I here renew the Protestation I have already made; which is, that I don't pretend to be a Judge: I only relate what others say. 'Tis true, I will not end this Remark, without saying, that in all Times and Countries, Prophecies have been forged to induce People to revolt. I could bring a hundred Instances of it, but one will be sufficient. The Spaniards who rebelled against Charles V. spread a malicious Prophesie, importing that there should reign in Castile a Prince named Charles, who should ruin and burn the Country; but that a Son of the King of Portugal should take Possession of Castile, and restore the Kingdom to a good Condition. The Ring-Leaders of the Sedition, got this Prophesie printed, and ordered every one of their Abettors to keep a Copy of it (b).

(b) See among the Epistles of Antony de Guevara, that which the Amirante of Castile wrote to the Inhabitants of Seville, in the Year 1520. 'Tis the 13*th. of the* 3*d. Book. What I mention is p.* m. 65.

(I) They too much exaggerate what they impute to him.] If you consider well Mr. Brueys's Words, you'll find an Artificial Rhethorick in 'em, which ought to be suspected. (c) ' 'Tis not possible for ' M. Jurieu's best Friends to disown, that he published ' his Predictions upon the Apocalypse, only with a ' Design of raising the discontented Calvinists in ' France; that the League which was then forming, ' finding the Kingdom divided against it self, might ' more easily accomplish its utter Destruction, and ' the Calvinists might re-establish their Religion ' upon the Ruins of their Country.

' Now reckon up, if you can, all the Crimes ' and Villanies of such an execrable Project; the ' Artifices, Fictions, and Impostures, to seduce the ' simple; the Profanation of Holy Writ, and its ' sacred Oracles; the Impieties and Blasphemies ' against the Holy Spirit; the Violation of the most ' Holy Laws of Christianity; the overturning the ' Principles of the Morality of JESUS CHRIST; ' the Contempt of the constant Practice of the ' Church, and of the Examples of Martyrs; the ' forgetting his own Maxims; the Precepts of Revolt against the Powers which God has ordained; Exhortations to Subjects, to Christians, and ' Frenchmen, to take up Arms, and join with those ' who have conspired the Ruin of their Country; ' the horrible Wishes he induces 'em to make for ' the Defeat of our Armies, the plundering of the ' Kingdom, the Depopulation of our Provinces, ' the burning of our Towns, the Effusion of Blood, ' and the Murthers of their Fellow-Citizens, ' Friends and Relations. Lastly, all the Inhumanities ' and Barbarities, that a civil and intestine War ' would have added to the most furious and bloody ' Foreign War, that was ever known.

' Tantum Religio potuit suadere malorum.

' Thus you see, to speak things as they are, the ' Contents of Mr. Jurieu's false Prophecies, and ' the result of the Seditious Writings of this famous ' Defender of Calvinism, who to restore the publick Exercise of his Religion in France, inspires ' his Party with great Fury, and prompts 'em ' to greater Cruelties than the barbarous Mahomet ' caused heretofore to be committed for the Establishment of his Alcoran.

These Words ought to be criticised. 'Tis false that any League was forming against France, when Mr. Jurieu published his Predictions; for they were in sale in March 1686, above two Years before he had the least Suspicion of what happened in the Year 1688. So that the Anachronism (d) of his Adversary, is here a very gross Fault. If Mr. Brueys had consulted Mr. Nicole, he would have been more equitable; he would not have been ignorant, that Mr. Jurieu, in publishing his Explication of the Apocalypse, believed, that Arms would have nothing to do in the Events which he predicted. Mr. Nicole has done him Justice. ' (e) Who ' would not, for Instance, take for a Menace of a ' very bloody War, these last Lines of the Preface ' to his System of the Church (f). We shall quickly establish Truth upon the Throne of Falsehood, and the Exaltation of that, which has been cast down, shall be performed in so glorious a manner, that it will be the Astonishment of all the Earth. Did ' ever any Author write in such a Strain? Who ' would not believe that such a Discourse is to be ' followed by an Army of a Hundred thousand Protestants combined together, to restore the pretended Reformed Religion in France? Mr. Jurieu ' might be charged with a Crime of State, and ' looked upon as a Seditious Man. It is therefore ' necessary to undeceive the World in this Point, ' and to inform them, that this Discourse is no ways ' grounded upon any Conspiracy against France. ' (f) All that he says here, by the by, in so ' dreadful a manner, is much less terrible, being explained at large by his Accomplishment of the Prophecies. For there we see, that this Glorious Restoration of the Protestants shall be made (1) ' without any, or with very little Effusion of Blood; ' nay, that this will not come to pass by an Army ' of Foreigners, nor by a multitude of Ministers, ' who shall repair into France, but by the Effusion of ' the Spirit of God, which shall reanimate the extended Bodies of Enoch and Elias, that is to say, ' according to Mr. Jurieu (2), the Protestants who ' were formerly witnesses of the Truth, and who ' having cowardly forsaken it, are at present deprived of Life, and stretched out in the Place of ' the City of Antichrist, that is, throughout all ' France, the principal Part, in his Notion, of the ' Antichristian Empire.

There's another thing that Mr. Brueys deserves to be blamed for. He insinuates (h), that Mr. Jurieu is the Oracle that was consulted, for the erecting of a School (i), wherein Children were to be taught to set up for Prophets. See here the Description of this infamous College: (k) Could this be believed, unless one had seen it? This was the first time, that a School was erected, in which the Art of Prophecying was taught, and to which they went to learn how to foretell things to come; and after having gone through the necessary Trial, they were perswaded that they received the Holy Ghost from the impure Mouth

(d) This is not the only Anachronism, that is to be found in M. Brueys's Book. He says, p. 17 that M. Jurieu being weary of writing Controversial Books, and Pastoral Letters resolved to take another Course, and to set up for a Prophet. This is wrong; for M. Jurieu began to write his Pastoral Letters, after he had published his Prophecies. M. Brueys p. 14. speaks of a Peace concluded in 1682. but he should have said in 1684.

(e) Nicole, Preface to his Book de l'Unité de l'Eglise, pag. 24.

(f) This Book of M. Jurieu was published the same Year, as his Accomplissement des Prophecies.

(g) Nicole ib. p. 25.

(1) Accomplissement des proph. pag. 206. & 207. See the Accomplissement des Propheties 2. part. pag. 188. 189. 209. 222.

(2) M. Jurieu, 2. part. pag. 175. (h) Brueys ib. p. 79. (i) In a Glass-House situated upon a Mountain of Dauphine, called de Peyra. Brueys, ib. p. 76. 77. (k) Id. ib. p. 75. 76.

judge of it by examining the Paſſages I have Related. The Author of the Thought (K) upon Comets, maintains, that Drabicius's Prophecies found little Credit.

KRANTZIUS (Albertus) a famous Hiſtorian, born (A) at Hamburg, had no ſooner gone through his School-Learning in his Country, but he went to travel. He ſaw the principal Parts of Europe, and ſo ſtudiouſly cultivated the Sciences in his Travels, that he became an extraordinary Man. He was Doctor of Divinity, and of the Canon-Law, and Profeſſor of Philoſophy and Divinity in the Univerſity of Roſtock. He was Rector there * in the Year 1482. Thoſe who ſay he was a Canon of Naumburg (B) are miſtaken. He went from Roſtock to Hamburg, where he obtained a Canon's Place in the Cathedral. He did not enjoy this Preferment, as ſo many others do, like a Sluggard, but ſpent his time in Preaching and reading Lectures of Divinity. He was elected Dean of the Chapter in the Year 1508, and performed the Viſitation of his Dioceſe with the Diſpoſitions of a Man reſolved to cure the Diſorders he ſhould find in it. He

* Chyt. part. 1. Chronici Saxoniæ p. 400. & Petr. Lindebergius, l. 5. Chron. Roſtoch. c. Hunfrid Molanus, in ſuppl.

of a Sacrilegious Maſter, who pretended to breath it with a Kiſs into the Mouth of thoſe miſerable Scholars. This is ſo horrible a Deſign, that it ought never to be declared, or inſinuated, without good Proofs, that a Miniſter was ſo wicked as to ſuggeſt the Model of it. Mr. Brueys has given too great Scope to the Conſequences he draws from Mr Jurieu's Care to ſalve the Honour of the Prophets of Dauphine. (l) He could never be prevailed with to revoke what he had publiſhed at firſt concerning this Propheteſs (m), and he maintained it in all his Letters with ſo much Obſtinacy, that even after God had retrieved that Maid from her Errors, and ſhe became a good and devout Catholick, and confeſt to her Judges how ſhe was ſeduced by Du Serre; this Miniſter perſiſted in what he had advanced, was conſtant to his Shepherdeſs, notwithſtanding her unfaithfulneſs, and had even the Imprudence to ſay, ſpeaking of her, and of the other little Sleeping Prophets, that they might be Rogues, but yet had been Prophets——— (n) This Miniſter openly declared in favour of the little Prophets, notwithſtanding what the honeſt People of his Party could ſay to him; and maintained, that their Inſpiration was true, with an invincible, but affected Obſtinacy, as I have already obſerved, becauſe he had his Views, and deſigned to have ſome Succeſſors in Prophecy, as he had had ſome Forerunners (o)

(l) Brueys ib. p. 98.
(m) That is, the Shepherdeſs of Cret.
(n) Ibid. pag. 106.
(o) Mr. Brueys had been ſaying, pag. 39. that Mr. Jurieu, as a great Prophet, was willing to have ſome Forerunners, viz. Kotterus, Chriſtina Poniatovia, & Drabicius.

——Should we (p) wonder after this, that Mr. Jurieu could not reſolve upon forſaking thoſe who had ſo much improved by his Leſſons, and that like a fond Father, who does not ſee the Imperfections of his Children, he would never acknowledge the Folly of thoſe to whom he had given Birth? The Conſequences that are drawn from hence, are not very juſt; for how many things are there, which Men reſolve to maintain, when they find 'em already done, without knowing how wickedly they have been performed, which they would never deviſe, if they knew it, and if thoſe things were ſtill to be done? Thus Charity will have us to extenuate, as much as poſſible, the Faults of ones Neighbour, and to ſuſpend one's Judgment, notwithſtanding the ſtrongeſt Probabilities, if they do not amount to a good Proof.

(p) Id. ib. pag. 145.

Mr. Brueys's Raſhneſs will more evidently appear, if it be obſerved, that, not contented to inſinuate his Accuſation, he propoſed it in clear and affirmative Terms, not only againſt the Miniſter Jurieu, but alſo againſt many others. The moſt factious of the fugitive Miniſters, ſays he (a), who flamed with Impatience of recovering what they had left in France, conſidering that the Stratagem contrived by Mr. Jurieu, might advance their Affairs, underſtanding with what Greedineſs the Malecontents of the Kingdom received the Prophecies, which promiſed them a ſpeedy Deliverance, and perſuading themſelves that there was no better Expedient to bring on a Revolt, thought they ought not to loſe ſo fair an Opportunity of kindling a Civil-War, in the Heart of the Kingdom, which might give it a mortal blow, with a Proſpect of ſeeing their Religion riſe again upon the Ruins of a Monarchy which they believed at the very brink of Deſtruction. And theſe were the ſame Miniſters, who at firſt made a great Noiſe againſt his Predictions, threaten'd to complain of 'em, and were angry he had ſpoken ſo affirmatively; but the falſe Prophet having imparted his Secret to them, and given 'em to underſtand, that often Prophecies, whether Fictitious or True, have inſpired thoſe for whom they were made, with a Deſign of undertaking the things promiſed 'em; and having told 'em in the Ear, that principal and ſecret Reaſon, which ſhould one Day be known, and which made him ſpeak ſo poſitively, They were quickly ſatisfied; his Stratagem was approved in their ſecret Council, and it was reſolved to Prophecy, in order to cauſe an Inſurrection. Here are two things to be cenſured; for in the 1ſt. place, no Proof can be given, that the French Miniſters had a hand in the horrid Plot of thoſe Seducers, who taught little Children to pretend to Inſpiration; and in the ſecond Place, 'tis not true, that the French Miniſters made grievous Complaints againſt Mr. Jurieu's Predictions. Mr. Brueys (b) alledges that falſe Suppoſition a Hundred Times over, tho' he has cited at the 216th. Page, a Paſſage which ſhould eaſily have undeceived him. The Paſſage is this: The other thing, which ſome have been offended at, they are Mr. Jurieu's Words, concerns the MILLENIUM. Many Divines of this Country have raiſed great Clamours againſt it, Murmuring ſo far as to threaten to complain of it. 'Tis manifeſt, that theſe loud Murmurs came from the Dutch Divines, and not from the French Miniſters, and did not concern the Promiſes of a ſudden Deliverance, &c. but the Doctrine of the Reign of a Thouſand Years, which was moſt odious to the Churches of Holland, and for which Mr. Jurieu had been brought into Trouble, had it not been for human Supports. Notwithſtanding thoſe Supports, Complaints were made againſt him in the Walloon Synod, who inſerted ſome Words into an Act, of which we may ſay what Cardinal d'Oſſat ſaid (c) of the Strokes of the Switch, which the Deputies of Henry IV. received.

(a) Pag. 73.

(b) See page 30. 210, 220. 223.

(c) We felt them no more than if a Fly had gone over our Cloaths. See the Article of Henry IV. (c) Pag. 785.

(K) The Author of the Thoughts upon Comets, maintains.] He was more equitable than the Perſon cited in the Remark G. He acknowledged, that the Proteſtants made no great Account of Drabicius. The Proteſtants themſelves, ſays he (d), are not over-perſuaded that Drabicius was a Prophet. Many believe that he was a Fanatick, who had his Brain turned by reading the Commentaries upon the Prophecies of the Old Teſtament, and the Apocalypſe; that being full of thoſe Ideas, he look'd upon the Emperors of Germany, as ſo many Pharaoh's, Sennacherib's, Nebuchadnezzar's, and Emiſſaries of the Great Whore, drunk with the Wine of the Wrath of her Whoredom; that he came at laſt to be perſuaded, that God had appointed him to command ſeveral Princes to exterminate thoſe Perſecutors. They who had ſuffered Perſecution, and who thought that the Divine Providence would puniſh, ſooner or later, the Authors of ſo barbarous a Conduct, did probably believe Drabicius's Viſions. Nevertheleſs, moſt of 'em made little Account of 'em, eſpecially having Experienced that he was deluded, and that he contradicted himſelf frequently in the moſt palpable manner, and ſuch as cannot be excuſed but by recurring to a Multitude of Gloſſes, which make the incredulous laugh more, than the ſincere Confeſſion of that Man's Errors would; for by the Help of ſuch Gloſſes, multiplied as Occaſion ſerves, there is no falſe Prophet but may find an Apology.

(d) Pag. 785.

(e) De Script. Eccleſ.

(f) In Patrol. pag. 673. apud Muſelanum Iſagoge ad Hiſtor. Chriſt. Commen. part. 1. pag. 95.

(g) In Theatro Hiſtor.

(h) De Johanne Papiſſa.

(i) Hiſtor. Eccleſ. tom. 4. pag. 148.

(k) Melchior. Adam. in vit. Henrici VIII. pag. 72.

(A) A Native of Hamburg.] And not of Bamberg, as (e) Bellarmin, John (f) Gerard, Chriſtian (g) Maſſæus, David (h) Blondel, and Hottinger (i) affirm. There can be no doubt about it, tho' a Modern Author has affected to ſuſpend his Judgment. (k) Res in aperto eſt poſita, ac proinde riſu digna erga Mart. Dorſenbachii [illegible] ut ne, qui litem de loco ejus natali ſerere quam decidere jutius conſultius.

(B) That he was a Canon of Naumburg.] Two [illegible] very

† Taken from Mollerus, Isagoge ad Histor. Chersonesi Cimbricæ, part. 1. p. 95. & seq.

He did the same in the year 1514. He did many good Services (C) to the Town of Hamburg, and other Hans-Towns; and got such a Reputation of Ability and Prudence, that the King of Denmark himself (D) made him Arbitrator in a considerable Controversy. He Died the seventh (E) of September in the year 1517. being very sensible (F) that the Church stood in need of a Reformation †. He writ several good (G) Books;

(2) In Introd. ad Histor. Saxon. infer. p. 72.

(3) In Diss. de rebus Meclenburgicis §. 17.

(l) Mollerus ibid. p. 96.

(m) Petr. Lindeberg. Chron. Rostoch. l. 4. p. 401. apud Mollerum ibid. p. 97.

(n) Hasaldus Huitfeldius, Chronic. Danic. part. 6. p. 1021. & 1022. & Ad. Tratiegerus Chron. Hamb. MSto, apud Mollerum ibid.

(o) Moller. ibid. p. 97. 98.

(4) Vide Huitfeldium, l. c. p. 1035. & Ant. Heimreichii Chronicon Dithmarsiæ, l. 2. c. 5. p. 120. 127.

(p) Moller. ibid. p. 99.

(q) Lib. 4. notitiæ orbis geographicæ c. 14. p. 132. apud Moller. ibid.

(r) In Dissertat. de comparan. prud. & eloq. civili, n. 37.

(f) Degory Wheare, in Relect. onibus hiemalibus de methodo legendi Historias p. 252. 253. apud Mollerum ibid. p. 94.

very Learned Authors have affirmed it; But Mr. Sperlingius, who writes Albert Krantzius's Life, will shew their Mistake. Sunt qui in Collegio etiam Canonicorum Numburgensium aliquandiu vixisse, ac Diaconi partes obiisse perhibent, & hos inter Duumviri celeberrimi, Henr. Meibomius Jun. (2) ac Conr. Schurtzfleischius (3). Sed falli eos, ac Krantzium Numburgum forte nunquam vidisse, satis sibi esse exploratum, Dn. Sperlingius nobis significavit, in ipsa Krantzii Biographia prolixius sententiam hanc impugnaturus (l).

(C) Many good Services to the Town of Hamburg, &c.] Under pretence that this Town began only in the year 1546, to have ordinary Syndics, one could not deny what is found in the Danish Remonstrance, in Answer to the Apology of the Hamburghers in the year 1642. viz. that Albert Krantzius was Syndic of Hamburg; for that Title was given in his time to those whom the Town deputed upon particular Affairs. Now 'tis certain that Albert Krantzius was deputed two or three times. He was at the Assembly of Wismar (m), in the year 1489 in behalf of the Hans Towns; and he (n) went into France in 1497 to demand a Truce; and into England in 1499, to desire some Privileges against Pirates. This is what we learn from Mollerus in the Book I have quoted: His Proofs are in the Margin.

(D) The King of Denmark himself made him Arbitrator.] This was in the year 1500. Read what follows: (o) Quantam vero, in reliqua etiam Cimbria, Prudentia & Integritate singulari sibi conciliarit Autoritatem, vel inde perspicies, quod A. 1500. Johannes, Rex Daniæ, & Fridericus, Dux Holsatiæ, Arbitri ipsi Honorarii Partes, in Controversiis quæ cum Dithmarsis sibi intercedebant, decidendis, deferre non dubitaverint (4).

(E) The seventh of December 1517.] This appears from his Epitaph: 'Tis therefore a Fault to say with Gesner's Continuators and Theodorus Zwinger, that he Flourished in the year 1520. Gesner should not have been Taxed with that Fault by Mr. Mollerus (p). The Error of Father Fournier a Jesuit, and John Andrew Bosius is much greater. The Jesuit makes him Die (q) in 1569, and the other (r) in 1570. These Faults would not come near the blunder of a famous Professor (f) of Oxford, if he took Albert Krantzius to be the same with Albertus Magnus Bishop of Ratisbon. But Mr. Mollerus who taxed him with it, has Acknowledged his mistake and acquits him clearly of the Fault. No Body has given him notice of it: He himself has discovered it, and Confesses it Publickly like an honest Man. See the 738, and 739 page of his Treatise De Scriptoribus hominymis.

(F) That the Church stood in need of a Reformation.] He acknowledged this Necessity, both with Respect to the Doctrine and Morals, if we may believe Melchior Adam. 'Animadvertit in doctrina 'ejus temporis multum fuisse errorum & superstitionum: & mores Canonicorum ac monachorum acerrime reprehendit; eosque in ordinem redigere conatus est. Sed cum id frustra se tentare videret: 'quod perversitas illorum hominum munita esset auctoritate Pontificis, dixisse fertur: nunquam posse eos reduci ad meliorem frugem, nisi prius à viris doctis expugnata arce. Interrogatus cur sese ipse non opponeret tam crassis erroribus, respondit, se neque eruditione neque ætate parem esse tantis negotiis (a). There is a thing in this Passage, which puts me in Mind of Telesinus in Velleius Paterculus. This Telesinus was General of the Samnites and a very brave Captain; he mortally hated the Romans, and approached Rome with an Army of forty thousand Men, fully resolved to push on, and to that end he continually Animated the Soldiers with these Words: 'Tis necessary to destroy this City; for the Wolves that Ravish the Liberty of Italy, will never be wanting as long as this Forest subsists, in which they find shelter. (b) Circumvolans urbines exercitus sui Telesinus, dictitansque adesse Romanis ultimum diem, vociferabatur cruendam delendamque urbem, adjiciens nunquam defuturos raptores Italicæ libertatis lupos, nisi silva in quam refugere solerent, esset excisa. He did not Argue amiss. Krantzius was likewise of Opinion, that whilst the Court of Rome continued in Force, it was impossible to suppress the Corruption of the Monks and Clergy. Here I must expose a notable Piece of Insincerity in Moreri; for thus his Fault ought to be call'd. He had read Melchior Adam, who says that Krantzius seeing Martin Luther's Positions against the Doctrine of Indulgences, cried out, He has too Powerful Adversaries, he'll never succeed, I advise him to desist from his Enterprize, and to shut up himself in a Cell, and say, Lord have Mercy upon me (c). What has Moreri done? He has curtail'd this Passage, and only given us the last Words of it, which he understands as if Krantzius had Condemned Luther's Attempt. Krantzius, says he, deplored, at the hour of his Death, this (d) unhappiness which he had foretold in his Life time. 'Tis affirmed, that in that Moment he often repeated these Words, Frater, age in cellam, & dic, miserere mei Deus. Tho' we should not attend to several Passages of Krantzius's Works, which testify his Opinion of the Corrupt State of the Church, the only Words he pronounced when he saw the first Positions of Luther, would sufficiently acquaint us with Moreri's Prevarication. Consider what follows: (e) Vitia quæ doctrinam & cultum Ecclesiæ Romanæ publicum deformabant, agnovit, & quanto Emendationis eorundem desiderio teneretur, cum locis Scriptorum suorum plurimis, tum Vocibus, hisce Cygnæis est testatus, quibus suum de Thesibus Lutheri Anti-Tetzelianis, in Lectulo sibi Emortuali oblatis, judicium exposuit (1): Vera quidem dicis, Bone Frater, sed nihil efficies: Vade igitur in Cellam tuam, & dic: Miserere mei Deus. I'll conclude this Remark with a Passage that will teach us, that if Flacius Illyricus has not made use of Albert Krantzius's Authority against the Church of Rome in his Catalogus testium veritatis, the Compilers who followed him, made amends for that Omission; for they made a good Collection of what they Read in Krantzius, that favoured their Design. Nay, the Editors of the Francfort Editions have been at the pains of observing those things in the Marginal Notes. Here's the Passage I have promised: (f) Ipsi Theologi Protestantium Cordatiores scriptoris hujus, licet Pontificii, atque adeo [illegible]. Lectionem sibi habent commendatissimam, & Arma ex illo depromunt, quibus adversus Ecclesiæ Romanæ Hyperaspistas haud infeliciter [illegible] depugnatur, Invectivas scilicet in Vitia non Monachorum solum ac Canonicorum, sed & Episcoporum atque Pontificum, [illegible] crebrasque de statu Ecclesiæ & Aulæ Pontificiæ corruptissimo querelas. Quas uti à Matth. Flacio in Catalogo Testium Veritatis miror omissas, ita à Joh. Wolfio (2), Joh. Cour. Dieterico (3), aliisque Recentioribus, satis diligenter video esse congestas. Observationes etiam, quas Wechelianis Operum Krantzii Editionibus accessisse diximus, Marginales loca ejusmodi studiosè notarunt; obelo vicissim hanc ob causam notata, & Impietatis insimulata, à Rob. Bellarmino (4), Joh. Bona (5) & Aub. Miræo (6), qui Textum etiam ipsum ab Hæreticis esse vitiatum affirmare non erubescit.

(G) He writ several good Works, &c.] I. A. Cronicle regnorum Aquilonarium, Daniæ, Suecia, & Norwegiæ. Henry of Eppendorf Translated it into High-Dutch from the Manuscript he found (g) at Cologne, and Published his Version at Strasburg in the year 1545. He Published the Latin Text the year following in the same Town. A second Edition of it was made in the year 1562. John Wolfius Counsellor to the Marquis

(a) Melch. Adam. in vitis Philosophorum, p. 34.

(b) Paterculus, l. 2. c. 27.

(c) Nihil effecturum esse contra tam potentes adversarios: suum esse consilium ut ab incepto desisteret. Frater, frater, inquit, abi in cellam tuam, & dic, miserere mei Deus. Melch. Adam. ib.

(d) That is, Luther's Attempt.

(e) Moller. ubi supra, p. 98.

(1) V. F. Kaleb. Schrœpii Speculum pœnitentiæ Nimivitice p. m. 18. aliosque Theologos cumplures.

(f) Moller. ibid. p. 144.

(2) Centenario XV. Lect. memorabil. p. 963. 977.

(3) In Breviario Pontificum.

(4) In l. de Script. Eccles. p. 304.

(5) In Catalogo Autorum, Operi de Psalmodia Divina præfixo.

(6) P. I. Biblioth. Eccl. p. 278.

(g) In the Library of Reinhard Count of Westerburg, Dean of Cologne.

Books; but all those that (H) are Ascribed to him, are not his. His Reputation has been Aspersed (I) by some Criticks.

KUCHLIN (John) Minister and Professor of Divinity, was Born in 1546, in a little Town of the Country of Hesse, called Wettera. His Father a good and honest Mechanick, tho' he had the charge of ten Sons and three Daughters, whom he maintained only by the Labour of his Hands, design'd to make a Scholar of him; but he Died before the young Boy had made any considerable Progress. The Minister † of the place took care of him the more willingly because he very much improved in his Greek and Latin under Justus Wulteius, Rector of the School of Wettera. But when Kuchlin was fit to go to the University, he had no little difficulties to over come by reason of his Poverty. However he was not cast down, but resolved to seek his Fortune; and to that end, went to Travel, as a young College-Adventurer. He found nothing at Francfort. His Landlord at Mentz carried him to the Jesuits, who kept him no longer, than they saw that he would not abjure the Protestant Religion. All that he could find at Strasburg, was a Letter of Recommendation from John Sturmius to Brentius, who was Professor at Tubingen. But the latter did not keep him long, as thinking he was not sufficiently prepossest with the Ubiquitarian Notions. Kuchlin went to Heidelberg with the same Letter of Sturmius, where he at last found what he wanted; for Ursinus put him in a way of Living, and going on quietly with his Studies. The University of Heidelberg was then in a very Flourishing state. This young Man made a great Progress in six years; after which he was sent (A) to teach School at Newstad, where, amongst other Collegues, he had Fortunatus Crellius, and Frederick Sylburgius ‖. At last he was Admitted Minister, and had the Church of Tuckenheim, which he faithfully served till after the Death of the Elector Frederick in 1576. Lewis his Successor expell'd the Ministers who would not turn Lutherans. Kuchlin retiring into his Country of Hesse, and finding nothing there but Discouragement, by the Advice of his Wife, took Sanctuary in the great Ark of the Fugitives, I mean in Holland. He passed through Embden in 1577, and staid there some time; from whence he was invited to Amsterdam (B) to the Office of the Ministry. He accepted it, and Exercised it † John Piscier, Brother-in-Law to the Professor Hyperius, Professor of Divinity at Marpurg. He was his Country-man and Relation.

‖ Meursius, whose Words are quoted in the Remark B.

third and a fourth at Francfort in the years 1575, and 1583 (b). II. The Book Intitule: Saxonia, sive de Saxonica gentis vetusta origine, longinquis expeditionibus susceptis, & bellis domi pro libertate diu fortiterque gestis historia; libris 13. comprehensa & ad A. C. 1501. deducta. The first Edition was at Cologne 1520. John Soter or Heylius procured it, and Dedicated it to Charles V. That Work was Printed in the same Town in the years 1574, and 1595. The Welchels Printed three Editions of it at Francfort in the years 1575, 1580, and 1621. which are preferable to the Editions of Cologne. This Work Translated into High-Dutch by Basil Faber, was Printed at Leipsick in the years 1563, and 1582 (i). III. The Book Intituled Vandalia, sive Historia de Vandalorum vera Origine, variis Gentibus, crebris è patria Migrationibus, regnis item, quorum vel Autores fuerunt, vel Eversores, Libris XIV. à prima eorum Origine, ad A. C. 1500. deducta. The first Edition which is of Cologne 1519. was followed by three others at Francfort (k) and one at Hanaw (l). The German Version Printed at Lubeck, in the year 1600, was done by Mark Stephen Macropus (m). IV. The Book Intituled Metropolis: It contains in twelve Books, the Ecclesiastical History of Saxony, Westphalia and Jutland, with the Lives of the Prelates, that from the year 780, till 1504. possest the twelve Bishopricks of that Country. Joachim Mollerus the younger, a Native of Hamburg, Counsellor to the Dukes of Brunswick, is the first that Published this Work. He did it at Melanchthon's Request from the Author's Original, which was the only Manuscript extant of that Book: Henry Bulchols Bishop of Lubeck, had given it to this Mollerus's Father. This first Edition is of Basil, by Oporinus in the year 1548. 'twas followed by that of the year 1568, in the same Press, and by two others (n) at Cologne (o), and by three more at Francfort (p). V. (q) Spirantissimum opusculum in officium Missæ in optimum Ordinem pro sanctâ & suavi Sacerdotum Ecclesiæ institutione digestum; and the Book Intituled, Ordo Missæ secundum ritum Ecclesiæ Hamburgensis, at Strasburg 1509. in fol. Consilium de ordine & privilegiis creditorum in bona fœrum debitorum. It is inserted in the fourth Volume of the responsorum juris, Printed at Francfort in the year 157[illegible]. Institutiones logicæ, compendiosa admodum, pariterque absolutissimæ nec minus latinæ, at Leipsick in the year 1517. Grammatica culta & succincta, at Rostock 1506. There are in the Library of Leipsick some Treatises of Philosophy of Albert Krantzius, which have not been Printed (r).

(b) Taken from Mollerus ubi supra p. 35.

(i) Taken from the same, p. 100.

(k) In 1575. 1580. and 160[illegible].

(l) In the year 1619.

(m) Taken from the same, p. 102.

(n) In 1574. and 1596.

(o) Taken from the p. 103.

(p) In 1575. 1590. & 1627.

(q) It was Printed at Rostock in 1506.

(r) Taken from the same, p. 105. 106.

(s) Bibliotheca Pontific. p. 243.

(t) Apud Mollerum p. 107.

(u) See the Catalogue of 'em in Mollerus p. 107. & seq.

(w) Ubi supra p. 111. & seq.

(x) Ibid. p. 112.

(H) But all those which are ascribed to him are not his.] He is not the Author of the Tractatus de Romanis Pontificibus, & præsertim de Victore II. alias Episcopo Eystettensi, which Father Jacob (s) hath ascribed to him; nor of the Life of Ansgarius, which Gesner's Continuators Father upon him; nor of the Scriptum de Imperii Romani interitu ascribed to him by Scherzerus (t).

(I) His Reputation has been aspersed.] This Motto, Per convicia & laudes, Suits him as well as many other great Men. Many Learned Men (u) bestow great Encomiums upon him; but some use him very roughly. He is accused of venting many false Stories, about the Original of Nations; of citing Antient Authors very wrong; of Transcribing whole Pages from other Authors without citing any Body, and of falsifying the Monuments of History to gratify his Passions. Mr. Mollerus (w) names the Authors of those Centures, and says something in his Vindication; he denies not, but that Albert Krantzius was a Plagiary; he only endeavours to excuse him, upon the Practice of that Age. (x) Solenne præterea ei esse fatemur, Eginhardum, Witekindum, Herm. Contractum, Adamum, Helmoldum, Arnoldum Saxonem, Albertum Stadensem, Gobelinum, Blondum, Cornerum, aliosque veteres, de verbo ad verbum exscribere, ac non Periodos solum, sed & paginas atque Capita integra, in sua inde scripsa, nulla plerumque Autoris mentione adjecta, transferre. Observatum id nobis in Accuratiori Narrationum de iisdem Rebus Collatione: Observatum & ante nos Vellejo, Reineccio, Meibomorum Triga, Vossio, Malincrotio, Conringio, Bangerto, Sagittario, Schurtzfleischio, Madero, quorum Testimoniis Lectores meos nolo obruere.

(A) To teach School at Newitad.] The Author (a) of the Diarium Biographicum says, that Kuchlin was Rector of this School, but his Funeral Oration wherein such a Preferment would not have been omitted, says expressly, that he taught at Newstad when Basil Pithopœus was Rector there. There's another Fault in the same Diarium: It makes two different Books of one Disputationes Theologicæ ad Catecheseos Ecclesiarum Belgicarum explanationem, and the Disputationes de Religionis Christianæ præcipuis capitibus. They are but one and the same Book.

(a) Hemmingius Witte ad ann. 1606.

(B) From whence he was invited to Amsterdam.] Moreri did so little examine the Authors he consulted, that it eighteen years: After which he earneſtly engaged in the Principality of a College of Divinity, which the States of Holland had Erected at Leyden in 1591, and of which he had had from that time the Management for ſome Months. It was in 1595 that he wholly left his Church at Amſterdam to fix in this College. He taught Divinity there till he Died, which happen'd the ſecond of July 1606. He had Married his two Daughters to two Learned Men Peter Bertius and Feſtus Hommius [s]. A Collection was made in one Volume in 4to. at] Geneva in 1613, of all the Theſes of Divinity which he caus'd to be maintained at different times. Guy Patin has extreamly commended him, and a little too much; for he calls him [t] one of the moſt Learned Men of his Age.

KUHLMAN (Quirinus) was one of the Viſionaries of the XVIIth. Century. He was born at Breſlaw in Sileſia the 25th. of February [u] 1651, and gave great Hopes [w] by his early Progreſs. But his Studies were interrupted, by a Sickneſs he had at Eighteen Years of Age [x]. He was looked upon as a dead Man the third Day of his Diſtemper. That Day he had a terrible Viſion. He thought himſelf ſurrounded with all the Devils in Hell, and that at Mid-day, being not aſleep. This Viſion was followed by another of God himſelf, encompaſſed with his Saints, and Jeſus Chriſt in the midſt of 'em. He then ſaw and felt unutterable Things. Two Days after [y] he had ſtill theſe ſorts of Viſions; and when he was cured of his Diſtemper, he perceived indeed a great Change as to thoſe Sights, but he always ſaw [z] a Circle of Light which attended him on his Left ſide. He had no longer any Reliſh for Literature. He had ſometimes [a] ſuch ecſtatical Diſtractions, that they hindered him from ſeeing and hearing thoſe that were with him; and he formed the Deſign of abundance of Books, which were ſo many Methods for learning every thing without much Trouble and perfectly. At Nineteen Years of Age he left his Native Country, where ſufficient Juſtice was not done him, and went to viſit the Univerſities. He made [b] a ſecond Edition of his Epitaphs, a Work he had conceived at Fifteen Years of Age; and he publiſhed a Treatiſe of Morality: but as he made an extraordinary Progreſs every Day, he found † the Sheets unworthy of him, which the Printer ſent him; his Underſtanding was ſo enlarged, whilſt the Book was printing. He made no Account of the publick Lectures and Diſputations in the Univerſity of Jena, and would * have no Teacher but the Holy Ghoſt. His deſire of ſeeing Holland was ſo ſtrong, as not to permit him to put off his Journey till he might ſee what would be the Iſſue of the War, which had proved ſo miſchievous to that Country in 1672. He landed at Amſterdam [β] three Days before the Town of Naerden was retaken [γ]. He went to Leyden a few Days after, and was not long there, before he lighted (AD) upon the Works of Behme, of whom he had never heard before. The reading of him was caſting Oil into the Fire; he admired that Behme had propheſied of things, which no body † knew of but Kuhlman himſelf. There was at that time in Holland, one (A) John ROTHE,

[s] Taken from his Funeral Oration, pronounced by Luke Trelcatius. See alſo Meurſius Athen. Batav. pag. 182.
[t] Patin Let. 258. p. 427. of the 2. Vol.
[u] Epiſt. Theoſophicæ Leidenſes, p. 11.
[w] See his Prodromus quinquennii mirabilis, pag. 10, 12. and the Fragments of the Letters prefixed to it by him.
[x] Prodrom. quinquen. mirabilis, pag. 3.
[y] Ibid. pag. 6.
[z] Ibid. p. 11.
[a] Ibid. p. 13, 14.
[b] Ibid. pag. 25.
† I think this Book was intitled, Moralis Heraldus Hiſtoricus.
* Prodrom. pag. 26.
† Ib. p. 30.
β The 3*d. of* September 1673.
γ Pag. 38.
† Pag. 40.
(b) Athen. Batav. p. 182.

that he conſidered only the firſt part of Meurſius's Period. If he had read the whole Period, he would have ſeen the quite contrary to what he affirms. He ſays, that Kuchlin was Miniſter at Embden and Groningen in the Low-Countries; but 'tis certain he was not Miniſter at Groningen. He had his Choice of this Town, and Amſterdam, and tho' he had more Inclination to the former than to the latter, yet he was perſwaded to chooſe the latter. Here are Meurſius's Words. (b) Inſtinctu uxoris quæ Belgica erat in Belgium abiit, Emdamque venit anno CIↃ IↃ LXXXVII. ubi cum operam aliquamdiu tam in ſchola quam in Eccleſia navaſſet, eodem tempore ab Amſtelodamenſibus & à Groeningenſibus evocatus fuit. Ille, cum propter Germanici idiomatis vicinitatem Groeningenſes præferendos judicaret, à clariſſimo viro D. MENSONE ALTINGIO graviſſimis rationibus permotus fuit, ut operam ſuam Amſtelodamenſi Eccleſiæ addiceret. 'Tis a great Careleſneſs in Moreri to ſay in general, that Kuchlin taught Divinity at Leyden. He ſhould have ſaid, whether he did it in the Quality of Profeſſor of the Univerſity, or of Principal of the Divinity College. Meurſius would have very clearly explain'd it to him.

(AD) Before he lighted upon the Works of Behme]. James Behme, or Boehme, was an Enthuſiaſt, of whom I ſhall ſometime ſpeak more largely. He was born in a Village of Germany, near Gorlitz, in the Year 1575, and when he had learned to read and write, he was taken from School, to be made a Shoemaker. He began to exerciſe his Trade at Gorlitz in 1594. He fell into an Extaſie for the ſpace of Seven Days, in the Year 1600, if we may believe what he publiſhed in a Book, intituled, Aurora. This Book was impeached to the Magiſtrates of Gorlitz, by George Richterus, Dean of the Paſtors of the Place, as containing many Errors of Paracelſus and Wigelius; for Behme had medled with Chimiſtry in his Youth. The Magiſtrates ſuppreſſed this Aurora as much as they could, and ordered the Author to write no more. He held his Tongue Seven Years; but when he found, that the Director of the Electoral Laboratory had recommended him to many Perſons at Court, as a good Chymiſt, he lifted up his Head, and daringly oppoſed George Riebterus; and writ above Twenty Books in Five Years time. He died the 18th. of November 1624. (a) Many People ſuffered themſelves to be infatuated with this Man's Viſions. Kuhlman was not the leaſt of his Admirers, as it appears from this Paſſage: (b) Ejus (Johanni Rothii) inde veſtigia legit Quirinus Kuhlmannus Sileſius, Jacobi Bohemi ſimul propugnator, Calovii vero atque Scherzeri acerrimus inſectatur. Sic enim in Bohæmo redivivo, c. 12. In Muſeo meo ſolus paucis diebus plura didici ex uno Bohemo, quam ab omnibus ævi ſapientibus ſimul audiris diſcere potuiſſem. Et in præfat. Operis ejuſdem: Inter innumerabiles viſiones accidit, ut erepto mihi ex muſeo millena luminum millia circa me exorientium intueri daretur. Plura ejuſmodi legi poſſunt apud Calovium in Anti-Bohemo, cap. 32. & ſeq.

(A) John ROTHE, who pretended to Propheſie.] He was a Native of Amſterdam, and had always led a very regular Life; but he (c) early diſcovered a melancholy Temper, and that he loved to change his Religion. He was ſo charm'd with Labadie, that he became a Proſelyte to his Sect, and laboured might and main to procure him new Diſciples; but ſome time after he turn'd Schiſmatick to him, and ſet up for the Head of a Party. He ſaid, that the glorious Reign of JESUS CHRIST was at Hand; and was not contented with the Functions of St. John the Baptiſt, I mean of being Forerunner and Harbinger, but pretended to be the chief Director of this great Work, and more than Standard-Bearer of this new World. (d) Hic à Johanne Labadæo, novo, ut videri volebat, Eccleſiarum Reformatore, morumque rigidiore caſtigatore, ſub intenſioris devotionis ſpecie, ita primum dementatus fuit, ut ſuis ex adhæſentium tan-

tum

(a) Taken from Micrælius Hiſtor. Eccleſ. pag. 1449. & ſeq. Edit. 1699.
(b) Micral. ibid. pag. 1324.
(c) Utà prima lanugine ſumme melancholicus, ita in eligendis quas quoad religionem ſequeretur partibus inconſtans plane ac deſultorius. Saldenus in otiis Theolog. pag. 194.
(d) Idem Saldenus. ibid.

ROTHE, who pretended to Propheſie. Kuhlman contradicted the Proverb (B) *, that People of the ſame Trade envy one another; for he † writ with the greateſt Humility to this John Rothe. He called him a Man of God, and John III. the Son of Zacharias. He beg'd the Aſſiſtance of his Knowledge, and pronounced (C) Wo to thoſe who did not attend to him. He dedicated to him his Prodromus quinquennii mirabilis, printed at Leyden in 1674, which was the Forerunner of two Volumes he deſigned to publiſh. He intended to put into the firſt the Studies and Diſcoveries he had made ſince his firſt Viſion, till the Year 1674. We ſhould have found in it ‖ a Thouſand Inventions, that would have aſtoniſhed all Ages. The laſt would have been the Key of Eternity, Æviternity, and Time. He communicated his Deſign to Father Kircher; and praiſing the fine Works this Jeſuit had publiſhed, and particularly the Ars combinatoria, ſive ars magna ſciendi, he gave him to underſtand, that he had only (D) made the tum, ſed quoſcunque poſſet, ad familiam ejus novam pertrahere totis viribus allaboravit. Verum poſtea, eo quod parem ſe ſibi non ferret, nedum ſuper eum, quo loco Libudæum nova devotionis artificem & fraudem habere tamen tenebatur, quamd. civis Cœlis aſſciptus eſſet, ſeceſſionem ab eo molitus eſt, gloriosum in Chriſto Regnum infandis ſpectris in terris, negotio illo veri lifero, metu ſolvius eructaturus. He boaſted of his Revelations, he promiſed Wonders to ſuch a wond liſt themſelves under his Banner; he diſturbed the Church and the State with his Libels; but nothing came to paſs of what he had foretold; and to compleat his Misfortune, he was ſhut up in the Priſons of Amſterdam. See this more at large in Mr. Saldenus's Narrative. (e) Hinc numeroſas vacillantium animarum catervas collegit, ſocienis ſuis aureos montes promittere, Eccleſiam Reipublicamque libellorum famoſiſſimorum plaustris conturbare, Servum Dei Johannem Prophetamque eximium ſeipſum indigitare, Revelationum tandem extraordinariarum univerſi numina in vulgus ſpargere, neque erubuit neque deſtitit. At quis tandem omnium horum exitus?

* Figulus figulo invidet, Faber fabro.

† His Letters to him, and thoſe he received from him, are printed with this Title, Theologiæ Spiritualis Reformatæ Specula millena millia inventa omnem ætatem ad ſuperiorem provocantia. Pag. 33.

‖ Id. ib.

(e) Ibid. pag. 195.

Mons parturivit ridiculus mus.

Eorum, quæ prædixerat, nihil evenit; eventrè contra multa, quæ nec prædixerat nec præſagierat. Miſſo enim, quod evertuvum ſe eſſe gloriatus erat, vexillo, & cum De Reatus, Somers, Richarſonius, novi Regni deſignatis Aſſeſſoribus, reduce in Patriam factus, ſolitâ ſocietate tribunitâ & ſchismaticâ, patriæ urbis down neceſſus eſt: impetratâ ſimul pleniſſimâ facultate & potestate, Prophetias ſuas ludicras & ridiculas refumendi & retractandi, periculumque faciendi, num prædicere certiuſcule forſan poſſit, quo ſcilicet & modo ex illo ſuo ergaſtulo liberandus tandem ſit, quam multa alia prænunciavit. Mrs. Bourignon did not ſuffer herſelf to be ſeduced by the Whims of John Rothe; ſhe had a Sovereign Preſervative againſt ſuch Charms; ſhe would have her Prophecy to be like the Privileges of the Gentlemen of Germany, who hold only of the Empire; ſhe would be Propheteſs in chief, and hold only of God, without any Subordination, without any Collaterals. However it be, let us ſee what Judgment ſhe made of John Rothe, and Kuhlman. ' (f) Which then ' particularly appeared on occaſion of a famous pre- ' tended Prophet of Holland, who ſet up Standards ' to lift under 'em the Twelve Tribes of Iſrael, ' which he was to reſtore, and whom ſome honeſt ' People actually followed, beſides others, who with- ' out following him, gave Credit to his Chimeri- ' cal Revelations. In ſome Viſits that he made to ' her, ſhe eaſily diſcovered his Illuſion, though he ' aſſured her he had a frequent Commerce with the ' Angels, and with God, and that he ſhould be for the ' future as a God to her, ſince God would only diſ- ' cover himſelf to her by his means. She was ſo ' weary of him, as to reſolve not to ſee him any ' more, nor to open his Prophetical Letters, which ' are at preſent ſealed up ſtill among her Papers. ' She cautioned her Friends to beware of him, be- ' cauſe undoubtedly he was not of God; for ſhe ap- ' plied to God on purpoſe to know what he was; ' and God to the Queſtion ſhe asked, Lord, is this ' Man thy Prophet? anſwered, No; and to a Se- ' cond Queſtion, Who is he then, Lord? he anſwe- ' red her, He is a Preſumptuous Man, over whom ' the Devil hath a great Power. God had given her ' the ſame Sentiments of thoſe of his Tribe, and ' particularly of one Chriſtinus Aukema, who lately ' printed a Letter, which he addreſſed to this Gen- ' tlewoman, to try whether he could jumble toge- ' ther the Spirit of God, and the Viſions of the ' Devil, with which this falſe Prophet has his Head ' filled, roving up and down to ſeduce thoſe who ' deſerve to be ſeduced, by reaſon of the little ' eſteem they have for the Truth, that comes from ' God (g).

(f) That is God, diſcovered to her by Experience, how far the Preſumption and Folly of Men may go in Conjunction with the Illuſions of the Devil; never ſuffering her to be ſeduced by them, for he inwardly diſcovered every thing to her. Vie continuée d'Antoinette Bourignon, pag. 253.

(g) Id. ib.

We find in (h) Mercatus's Continuator, that John Rothe, bein the Son f a Man whoſe Name was Zacharias, boaſted of being the Forerunner of the Son of God, with reſpect to the laſt Judgment; and that in the Year 1668, he ordered in King Melchiſedec the Emperor's Name, all Kings and Princes to lay own their Sovereignties, for as much as the Reign of JESUS CHRIST was at hand. That he was examined in the Year 1677, and ſhut up in Priſon by the Order of the States of Holland and Weſt-Friſland; and afterwards being ſet at Liberty, he was laugh'd at by every Body, his Prophecies being found contrary to the Event (i). That Author ſhould have added, that he was cured of his Viſions, that he married, and became as other People. He is ſtill living, whilſt I write this (k).

(h) His Name is Daniel Hartmannus.

(i) Mercatus hiſtor. Eccleſ. pag. 132. edit. 1699.

(k) Ad calcem epiſt. Kircheri ſcripta, p. 51.

(B) Contradicted the Proverb.] This was more edifying, than not at altogether, than what we have ſeen ſince. We have ſeen two Interpreters of the Apocalypſe, write one againſt another, though they were agreed upon the pretended Myſteries of the Year 1689. But becauſe they met in that Point of Union, by different Roads, each would maintain his Hypotheſis, to the prejudice of his Brother Interpreter. This was not well; and if the Publick had been leſs indulgent than it was, no Body ſhould have wondered at it.

(a) Præfat. Prodromi.

(b) Omnibelli Theoſophiſtæ & Diabologi multis verbis, calumnias, invectionemque eruditis Prophetam, nimium Deo dilectum, Cui militat æther, Et conjurati veniunt ad claſſica venti. Ib.

(C) Pronounced Woe.] He thundred out (k) Væ! væ! ſi prophetias ſervorum Dei ſpreverunt, ſeu Batavia olim mirabilis nunc miſerabilis ſpernit & mortem ſpernit. Hoc anno, continued he, & hujus anni una die veniet & mors & luctus & fames Babylonis Belgicæ, & ignem exuretur cœleſti, quinvaliduſ eſt Dominus Deus damnans eam. All this becauſe an outcry had been made againſt John Rothe, and his Viſions had been laughed at. Kuhlman maintained, that Heaven had declared for that Prophet, (a) by the great Storm on the 24th. of March 1674, and by the Ruins that happen'd in ſeveral Places the 21ſt. of May following. He referred to the Gazetteer who mention'd 'em, and applied (b) to his Friend, the famous Words of an old Poet. He made an Apoſtrophe in particular to (c) Amſterdam, where the Wind had torn up many Trees; and forgot not the Thunder, which fell upon the Great Church at Utrecht; but eſpecially, he cried up Miracle (d), becauſe it thundered the 24th of March, the Day before John Rothe left Holland, whilſt there was ſtill ſome Snow in the Streets, and Ice in the Canals. Theſe Storms, Thunders and Lightnings, were according to him the Fore-runners of the Deſtruction of the Country; and yet from that time the Affairs of the United Province went on better and better every Day. It is not improper to obſerve all theſe things, in order to know the Predominant Spirit of ſuch People, they make an ill uſe of every thing, and find their pretended Myſteries every where. We have Inſtances of it, of a later Date.

(c) In cauſa epiſt. ad Kircher. pag. 55.

(d) Theophilus Philadelphus epiſt. pag. 21.

(D) He had only made (e) the firſt Draught.] recte paradoxis tuis ſubjunxiſti, ſed hoc optarem liberè) ut magis interna quam externa, ſecretum quam cor-

(e) Inumeram exacte conſilium tuum inveniri poſſe in Methodo Chymiæ, (noneam quam cor- Father the firſt Draught of what he deſigned to carry farther. This Jeſuit anſwered him civilly, and gave him (E) good Advice, and particularly upon the Deſign he had to write to the Pope (F). The Prophetical Spirit had not made our Kuhlman inſenſible to the Pleaſure of being praiſed; for there was no Encomium written to him, either by thoſe whom he had preſented with his Books, or by others, but what he publiſhed in the Front of his Prodromus. As for to the Praiſes that he beſtows upon his own Writings, they are undoubtedly very extraordinary; but as he declares, that all his Knowledge proceeds * from incarnate Wiſdom, I will not be poſitive ‡ that it is a Sign of Pride. I don't well know when he left Holland; but I have lately ſeen a Book, where 'tis ſaid † that he wandered a long time (G) in England, in France, and in the Eaſt, and that at laſt he was burnt in Muſcovy the 3d. Day of October 1689, for ſome Predictions || actually ſeditious. I don't know whether he had his Medal ſtruck, as ſome other new Prophets; but the ſame Book informs me, that his Effigies came out, under

2 In quibus majora in omni ſcibili eruuntur, quam à nobis vel ullo homine expectantur. Monit. ad lector. in limine epiſtol. ad Kircher.

* Omnia quæ poſſi deo ſapientiæ incarnatæ non mihi veniunt adſcribenda. Ibid.

† See the Entretiens ſur la Cabale chimerique, printed in 1691. pag. 109.

‡ Diarium Biographicum Henningi Witte, tom. 2. pag. 168.

Father Kircher did not ſtand to defend his Works, and pretended not to be more knowing than he. He ſtruck ſail before him, and declared, that having written in a humane way, he pretended not to equal thoſe who wrote by Inſpiration. Quod porro de arte combinatoria, cæteriſque paradoxis meis, tum in polygraphia, tum in muſurgia, jam publicæ luci traditis meliori modo fieri potuiſſe contendis, nil moror cum SCIENTIÆ TUÆ TAM SUBLIMIS ET [illegible] prorſus incapacem ineptumque me eſſe humili mentis obſequio fatear. Quæ ſcripſi ego, divina aſpirante gratia humano more, id eſt ſtudio & labore adquiſita ſcientia ſcripſi, non divinitus inſpirata aut infuſa, cujuſmodi puram inter mortales dari non exiſtimo ——— Non dubitem quin tu pro INCOMPARABILI INGENII TUI VASTITATE meis nugis & majora & admiratione digniora fis proditurus. Our Prophet took this glittering Tinſel for true Gold, and was not ſenſible that the Jeſuit laughed at him. He carefully publiſhed Father Kircher's Anſwers, and filled Capital Letters in the Places where he thought himſelf praiſed.

(E) Gave him good Advice.] Kircher's Second Letter makes it plain, that he knew the Weakneſs of this Man, and that he jeers him, when he ſays in a ſerious Manner: Magna ſanè [illegible] promittis, QUÆ UTI SUPRA OMNEM HUMANI INGENII CAPTUM LONGE CONSTITUTA SUNT, ITA EA QUOQUE A NEMINE HUCUSQUE NON DICAM TENTATA, SED NEC COGITATA QUIDEM FUISSE AUDACTER AFFIRMO, atque adeo aliud mihi ſuſpicari non liceat, niſi talem te divino munere ſcientiam adeptum eſſe qualem ſacra Pagin de PROTOPLASTO ET SALOMONE teſtatur, explico: Adamæam Salomonicam, verbo INFUSAM nulli mortalium niſi Tibi ſoli notam, cæteris inexplicabilem Scientiam. But what follows is a charitable Advice. All things well conſidered, Father Kircher adviſed him to keep that infuſed Knowledge to himſelf, and not to expoſe himſelf to the Railleries of an Age ſo ſcoffing as this is. Indeed, our Age ſeems to be more terrible to the Viſionaries than the preceding ones. The Biſhop of Alcaux has touched upon it in one of his Books; but I queſtion whether at the bottom the Appearances are not fallacious. Quicquid ſit, they are Kircher's Words, ego ſane conſiderato rei non parvi momenti negotio, pro ſingulari quo te proſequor affectu etiam atque etiam quam obnixiſſimè contenderim, ne hanc ſuam noviter obtentam ſcientiam Centraliſque abyaſſi profunditatem ulli vana quadam jactantia oſtenderes, ne Tertii poſt Adamum Salomonis dicam & cum riſu nomen incurras. Potiſſimum hoc ſæculo ſarcaſmo, quo Criticaſtrorum, Traſonum & ſycophantarum non parvus eſt numerus, qui aliud non moliuntur, quam ut glorioſos aliorum labores canino dente rodere, ſannis ludibriiſque expungere non ceſſent. And to make greater Impreſſion by his Remonſtrances, he was pleaſed to tell him what had happen'd to himſelf; which was, that he had found by Experience, that a Man expoſed himſelf to many Evils, when he raſhly and inconſiderately ſets up for an Author. Quanta malorum Ilias ex inconſiderata Scriptione reſultet, ego jam 40 annorum ſpatio, quo in hoc omnium gentium & nationum theatro, meam utut poſſum perſonam ego, frequenti experientia comperi.

(F) To write to the Pope.] Tho' Kuhlman fancied that he was the Man promiſed by Drabicius, and tho' he knew that Drabicius's Promiſes concern'd the Ruin of the Roman Antichriſt, yet he was fond of Writing to the Pope. He conſulted Father Kircher, and expreſſed to him the paſſionate Deſire he had of communicating to the Sovereign Pontif his great Secrets for the good of Chriſtendom. Ate, Reverendiſſime Pater, peterem ne dengares mihi occaſionem præbere, qua Pontifici Maximi manibus propriis quædam Epiſtolia me in ſignum obſervantiæ tranſmittenda traderetur ——— Vellem enim arcana ponderoſiſſima ad Chriſtiana Eccleſia commodum ſingulariter proficua, candido ore ſtilloque candido, tam admirabili tempeſtate Pontifici communicare, amoreque Reip. Chriſtianæ impulſus. I don't know the Particulars of the good Advice, the Jeſuit gave him upon this Subject; he left them out of the Anſwer he received, for that Paſſage was printed in the following manner: Quod denique de litteris ad ſummum Pontificem dandis, eidemque propriis manibus à me conſignandis Te cogitare ſcribis ——— qua ſcribo ut quanta cautela & circumſpectione Roma procedendum ſit cognoſcas. But he did not ſtrike out that part, wherein he was told, that his great Work, dedicated to the Pope, would be applauded and admired, provided he left nothing in it, that might offend the Cenſors of Books, and took care not to pretend to an inſpired Knowledge, ſilentio quoque ſuppreſſa divinitus Tibi inſpirata ſcientia. This laſt Counſel, tho' good in it ſelf, was the leaſt likely to be reliſhed, for 'tis by boaſting of a Divine Illumination, that one may ſtrike a great (g) Blow among the People. Let us ſpeak a Word concerning the Knavery or Folly of falſe Prophets. About the time that Kuhlman was ready to write to the Pope in reſpectful Terms, for the good of Chriſtendom, he wrote to others, That he hoped to ſee quickly the Deſtruction of the Papacy. This is the plain meaning of theſe Words of Kuhlman, according to the Style of our Viſionaries. O Pontifex Clemens XI! an ſigilli mei duplicatum Quinarium X. excedes, mox orbis aſpiciet univerſus? In Clemente I. Petro & Lino jure præterito Epiſcopatus Romanus incepit: in Clemente X. quid futurum ſit tempus evolvet. I could name a Man (h), who has been extreamly vexed becauſe the Publick has been informed, that whilſt he furiouſly inveighed againſt Lewis XIV. he writ ſome Letters to a Duke, full of Flattery for that Prince.

(g) See the Biſhop of Meaux's Commentary upon St. John's Revelation, Dutch Edit.

(h) Quem verſu dicere non eſt, Signis perfacile eſt. Horat. ſatyra 5. lib. 1.

(G) He wandered a long time in England, in France, and in the Eaſt.] I have lately found many little Books of this Enthuſiaſt, Printed at London at his own Charges, ſome in 1681, and others in 1682. The firſt of 'em Dated from London the 24*th.* of June 1681, is Dedicated to Lewis XIVth. with this Familiar Inſcription, Salve Ludovice XIV. Rex Liligere, ſalve. The Author exhorts this Prince to aſſert the Regale, which was the Talk of that time, and acquaints him (a) that Drabicius had promiſed him the City of Rome. We find in this Collection a Letter which he writ from Lubeck to Father Kircher in February 1676. De ſapientia infuſa Adamæa, Salomonæaque; and a Piece which he Inſcribed to Mahomet IV. De converſione Turcarum. 'Tis Dated from Conſtantinople the firſt of of Auguſt 1678. The Author ſet his Myſtical Seal to it at London, the firſt of May 1681, and ſignified to the Sultan, that the Comet which appeared the preceding Winter, preſaged the Converſion of all under which there are (H) so many Titles given him, that I believe the Eastern Monarchs hardly give themselves more. If it be thought, that I speak too seriously, and too copiously of him, I desire it may be known, that there is a seriousness, which upon such things is worse than jesting; and 'tis Requisite the World should be informed of the prodigious variety of Fanaticism. 'Tis a more contagious Evil than is imagined. The Reading (I) of Drabicius compleated the ruin of Kuhlman. Those who have not the Prodromus of the latter, need only read three or four Pages † of Morhofius's Polyhistor, where they'll see the magnificent Promises and vast Projects of this Enthusiast. He was none of those Inspired Men who pretend to Continence; he was Married twice, if we may call a Marriage, and not a Concubinage, the Commerce that is between a Man and a Woman, without observing the Formalities Prescribed by the Canon and Civil Laws. He understood well enough how to trick People out of their Money, and he writ to some Persons in a Magisterial and Prophetick Tone, that 'twas necessary for the advancing of the new Kingdom of God, that they should send him such or such a Sum, in default of which he threatned them with the most terrible Punishments the revenging Hand of the most High could Inflict. Van Helmont was one of those who received those sorts of Letters; but he was Wiser than to have any regard to them. ||

(a) A Deo data ſcientia ROMAM nunc cribrans à DRABICIO Tibi olim promiſſa.

† From p. 357. to p. 361.

|| I have this from some Persons, who knew Kuhlman.

L.

LABE (Loyse) a Curtezan of Lyons, has been reckoned among the French Authors by la Croix du Maine, and du Verdier Vau-privas. She ‡ flourished at Lyons in Henry the II's time in 1555. Her Works were Printed there (A) the same year. She did not resemble the Curtezans in all things; for if she was on one Hand of their Humour, in that she would be well paid for her Favours, she had on the other Hand some regard for Learned Men, which others have not; for she gave them some sport Gratis. Her Character will be better known by the Passage I shall quote (B).

‡ La Croix du Maine p. 291.

LA-

all Nations; and he Congratulated his Highness, for having appointed a Fast throughout his Empire. Aspexisti ante aliquot menses, O Capitanee grandis ab Oriente Solis, Cometam in-audite-ingentem, NUNTIUM REALEM REGNI JESUELITARUM, hoc est Restitutionis Populorum omnium ad Deum Unicum & Triunum. Bene Te, quod cor tuum coram Deo flexeris, & Proclamatione Dei pœnitentialis Catholici in Regnis tuis, inceperis adimplere Verba Dei ad Prophetam Drabicium: Si Christiani voluntatem meam in destruendo Antichristianismo, Doctrinâque pravâ & Idololatriâ exequi renuent, facient id Christianis in opprobrium Turcæ & Tartari: quod horrori erit angelis meis & hominibus. Macte istâ indole. He writ to the Aga of Smyrna the 28*th.* of June 1678 (b). Some Months after, he Dedicated to the Sieur Van Dam the Mystery of Kotterus's 21 Weeks, in which he declared that the House of Austria was about to lose the Imperial Crown. By his Piece intitled De magnalibus naturæ ultimo ævo reservatis, Inscribed Ad adeptos magosque orbis terrarum, at Geneva the thirtieth of January 1682, it appears, that he was going into the Holy Land. His Arcanum microcosmicum is Dated from Paris the first of November 1681.

(b) Kuhlman was then in the Port of Smyrna on Board a French Ship. He was still at Smyrna the 17*th.* of October 1678. as appears from the Letter which he writ to James Van Dam, the Dutch Consul.

(H) There are so many Titles given him.] Here is what I find in the Book I have quoted: (c) In effigie quam Andreas Lippius edidit, ita celebratur:

Alter Scaligerum, Taubmannus, Grotius, Opitz,
Barthius, Iscanus, Gryphius, Muretus, Erasmus!
Henoch, Josephus, Davides, Josua, Moses,
Elias, Daniel, Salomon, Eliſa, Johannes!
Cyrus, Alexander, Constantin, Karl' Fridericus!
Liligerus, Juvenis, Frigerans, Artista, Sophata:
O Pater hæc tua sunt! Hæc ad te cuncta reflexit.

A little before, it is said, that he sometimes call'd himself LUDOVICUS LUDOVICI. The Catalogue of his Writings, as Mr. Witte gives it, do's not comprehend the Epistolæ Theosophicæ Leidenses; but then it contains nine Letters written to Father Kircher; besides Epistolarum Londinensium Catholica ad Wickleso-Waldenses, Hussitas, Zwinglianos, Lutheranos, Calvinianos; besides in High-Dutch, De cœlesti osculo amoris, sive cogitationes poëticæ ex Cantico Canticorum Discursus sacri & profani de pulcerrimis virtutum flosculis. Mortalitas immortalis, sive centum epitaphia. Caduceator Historicus. Prothmius illustratus, &c.

(c) Diarium Biographicum Henningi Witte, part. 2. p. 268.

(I) The reading of Drabicius compleated.] Kuhlman found in Drabicius's Prophecies two Passages which he applied to himself (d). The first contains these Words: (e) Qui legit, intelligat! cum numerabitur QUINQUE finem accipient filii contumaciæ, conspecto me, testatem habere in cœlos, terram, mare. Here follows the other: (f) Abundantia benedictionis Te (Drabicium] parata expectat Wratislavia, ac si oculis videas tuis. Add to these two Passages, that which he took from the Astrologico-Prophetical Prognostick written by Paul Felgenhaver in 1647. and Published in 1655. Quantus error sit pacis spes illud nobis duplicatus QUINARIUS demonstrabit, cum venerit post paucos dies. He (g) imagined that he was that double Quinarius, whom Felgenhaver had promised, being convinced of it by two Reasons; first because his name was Quirinus, secondly because in 1674, it was five years since he had received an infused Science. He therefore believed, that then the time promised by Drabicius was come, cum numerabitur quinque, finem accipient filii contumaciæ; so that he hop'd quickly to throw down Antichrist and Babylon with his Pen. Let us hear the Allelujah's, which he Sung before Hand: Corruet Antichristus proprio suo judicio, & Babylon excidium suum properabit cum admiratione populorum. Hallel. Quem Cæsares armis potentibus non debellavere, juvenis inermis debellavit in virtute Jesu Christi prælians. Hall. Stant Mercatores antichristi horrore procul trementes, desent interitum suum insperatum ab insperato timore futurorum. Hall. (h) If I had not Read this, I should hardly believe that the Extravagance of Fanaticism could have gone so far.

(d) Epist. Theosoph. p. 2.
(e) Revelat. 594. Febr. 7. ann. 1664.
(f) Revelat. 608. 24. May 1664.
(g) Epist. Theosoph. ibid.
(h) Thus is what he wrote to John Rhode the 24*th.* of April from Leyden. See Epist. Theosoph. p. ult.

(A) Her Works were Printed.] They (i) contain a Dialogue in French Prose, intituled, Le debat de Folie & d' honneur, (A Debate between Folly and Honour) and many Poems of her own Invention: Besides (k) the Writings of several Poets in her Praise, in Greek, Latin, Italian and French Verse.

(i) La Croix du Maine, p. 291.
(k) Du Verdier Vau-Privas, Bibl. Françoise p. 822.

(B) Her Character will be better known by the Passage I shall quote.] I make no alteration in du Verdier's Words. Loyse Labe, (l) says he, 'a Curtezan of Lyons, (otherwise called the Handsome 'Ropemaker's Wife, being Married to an honest 'Ropemaker) managed a Horse very well, for 'which reason, the Gentlemen, who had Access 'to her, called her Captain Loys; she was a Woman 'of a good and chearful Wit, and indifferently 'Handsome. She obligingly entertain'd in her House

(l) Id. ib.

LABERIUS (Decimus) a Roman Knight and a Poet, had an admirable faculty at playing the part of a Mimus. He durſt not refuſe Julius Cæſar who was willing he ſhould come upon the Stage to Act one of thoſe Pieces, tho' this was very unbecoming his Condition, and his Age. He excuſed himſelf (A) the beſt he could in his Prologue, and Malitiouſly (B) ſlipt in ſome ſtrokes againſt Cæſar; which Determined that Prince to mortify him a little by preferring (C) another Poet before him. Laberius was Rallied (D) by Cicero that Day *, and he paid him in his own Coin. He Died † ten Months after Julius Cæſar. His Verſes have not been ſo much deſpiſed (E) by Horace, as 'tis thought. Moreri (F) has committed ſome Faults.

* That is, on the Day that he acted a Play out of Complaiſance to Julius Cæſar.

† Euſebius in Chronico.

LABOURLOTE (Claudius) one of the braveſt Captains of his Age, was Indebted to his Fortune for his Courage. His Birth was ſo mean, that ‡ 'tis ſtill a Di-

‡ See the Remark A.

'Lords, Gentlemen, and other Peoſons of Merit 'with Diſcourſe, Muſick, both Vocal and Inſtru-'mental, in which ſhe was admirably well Skilled, 'Reading of good Latin, Italian and Spaniſh Books, 'wherewith her Cloſet was curiouſly ſet off, and with 'Exquiſite Sweet Meats. In fine, ſhe Communicated 'to 'em privately the moſt ſecret Pieces ſhe had, in 'a Word ſhe was free of her Body to ſuch as paid 'for it: However not to all, not to Mechanicks 'and Men of mean Condition, whatever Money 'they might have offered her. She loved Learned 'Men above all, who were ſo much in her favour, 'that thoſe of her Acquaintance were preferred be-'fore any great Lord, to whom ſhe would rather 'do a kindneſs Gratis, than to another, for a great 'many Crowns, which is contrary to the Cuſtom 'of thoſe of her Trade and Quality. This Paſſage has been quoted in the continuation (a) of the critique generale de l' Hiſtoire du Calviniſme with the Addition of this Reflection: '(b) Domoſthenes 'would have been glad, if the Curtezan Lais 'had been like this; he would not have made a 'Voyage to Corinth in Vain nor Experienced,

(a) Letter 18. p. 595.

(b) Ibid. p. 596.

'Qu' à tels feſtins un Auteur comme un ſot,
'A prix d' argent doit payer ſon écot.

'That at ſuch Treats an Author pays his Scot,
'And is no better dealt with than a Sot.

This Woman at once Honoured and Diſhhnour'd Learning: She Diſhonour'd it, whilſt being an Author, ſhe led the Life of a Whore; and ſhe Honour'd it, becauſe the Learn'd were better received by her Gratis, than the Ignorant at any Price.

(A) He excuſed himſelf the beſt he could in the Prologue.] Macrobius has preſerv'd it to us, and very judiciouſly obſerves that a Maſter, even when he intreats (c), uſes a ſort of Authority, which there is no reſiſting. (d) Laberium aſperæ libertatis equitem Romanum Cæſar quingentis millibus invitavit, ut prodiret in ſcenam, & ipſe ageret mimos quos ſcriptitabat. Sed poteſtas non ſolum ſi invitet, ſed etſi ſupplicet, cogit. Unde ſe & Laberius à Cæſare coactum in prologo teſtatur his verſibus:

(c) Auſonius ſays more: Quod eſt potentiſſimum imperandi genus, rogabat qui jubere poterat. Præfat. cenſon. nupt.

(d) Macrobius, Saturnal. l. 2. c. 7. p. m. 342.

Neceſſitas, cujus curſus tranſverſi impetum
Voluerunt multi effugere, pauci potuerunt,
Quo me detruſit pæne extremis ſenſibus?
Quem nulla ambitio, nulla umquam largitio,
Nullus timor, vis nulla, nulla auctoritas
Movere potuit in juventa de ſtatu:
Ecce in ſenecta ut facile labeſcit loco
Viri excellentis mente clemente edita
Submiſſa placide blandiloquens oratio?
Etenim ipſi Di negare cui nihil potuerunt,
Hominem me denegare quis poſſet pati? &c.

(B) Slipt in ſome ſtrokes againſt Cæſar.] This we have from Macrobius. (e) In ipſa quoque actione ſubinde ſe qua poterat ulciſcebatur inducto habitu Syri, qui velut flagris cæſus præripientique ſe ſimilis exclamabat:

(e) Macrob. ibid. p. 344.

Porro Quirites! libertatem perdimus.

& paulo poſt adjecit:

Neceſſe eſt multos timeat quem multi timent.

Quo dicto univerſitas populi ad ſolum Cæſarem oculos & ora converſit, notantes impotentiam ejus hac dicacitate lapidatam. Father Briet hath not well obſerv'd this Paſſage; for he ſuppoſes that Laberius did not offend Cæſar till a long time after. (f) Procedente tempore ipſum Cæſarem offendit, & maximè hoc verſu.

(f) Briet. de Poet. Lat. p. 12.

Porro Quirites libertatem perdimus,

Item & iſto

Neceſſe eſt multos timeat, quem multi timent,

(C) By preferring another Poet before him.] Here's another Paſſage of Macrobius: (g) Ob hæc in Publium vertit favorem. Is——productus Romæ per Cæſaris ludos omnes qui tunc ſcripta & operas ſuas in ſcenam locaverant provocavit, ut ſinguli ſecum poſita invicem materia pro tempore contenderent. Nec ullo recuſante ſuperavit omnes; in quis & Laberium; unde Cæſar arridens hoc modo pronuntiavit:

(g) Macrob. ibid.

Favente tibi me victus es Laberi à Syro:

Statimque Publio palmam & Laberio annulum aureum cum quingentis ſeſtertiis dedit. Tunc Publius ad Laberium recedentem ait: Qui cum contendiſti ſcriptor hunc ſpectator ſubleva. Laberius ſome time after Compos'd a Mimus, in which he declar'd that the Fate of Arms is as uncertain upon the Stage as any where elſe; and that if he had loſt the firſt Rank, the ſame Diſgrace would happen to his Succeſſor (h). Here follows a Paſſage out of Aulus Gellius: (i) C. autem Cæſarem ita Laberii maledicentia & arrogantia offendebat, ut acceptiores & probatiores ſibi eſſe Publii quam Laberii mimos prædicaret.

(h) Sequenti ſtatim commiſſione, mimo novo interjecit hos verſus: Non poſſunt primi eſſe omnes omni in tempore. Summum ad gradum cum claritatis veneris, Conſiſtes agre; & quum deſcendas, dicides. Cecidi ego, cadet quis ſequitur, lapſa eſt publica. Macrob. ibid. p. 345.

(i) A. Gellius, l. 17. c. 14.

(D) Was Rallied by Cicero that Day.] After (k) Laberius had played his Piece, Cæſar preſented him with a Ring, and gave him leave to retire. Laberius went to look for a Place among the Knights, but they ordered it ſo, that he could find none. Cicero ſeeing him perplexed, told him, Recepiſſem te niſi anguſte ſederem. Mirum, Anſwer'd the other, ſi anguſte ſedes qui ſoles duabus ſellis ſedere. Cicero kill'd two Birds with one Stone. He Laughed at Laberius, and at the many Senators of a new Creation, ſimul & illum reſpuens, & in novum ſenatum jocatus, cujus numerum Cæſar ſupra fas auxerat (l). But the Anſwer that was made him (m) Taxed him with tricking, that is with neither being a good Friend to Pompey nor Cæſar. Cicero male audiebat tanquam nec Pompeio certus amicus, nec Cæſari, ſed utriuſque adulator (n). I ſhall obſerve by the by, that Macrobius has confounded the places of the Knights with thoſe of the Senators; he thought, that (o) the Senators ſate upon what was called the fourteen Benches, which is his miſtake. This was the place of the Knights ſince the Law of Roſcius Otho. Sic libitum vano qui nos diſtinxit Othoni (p).

(k) Macrob. ibid. p. 582. See alſo Seneca controverſ. 18.

(l) Id. ib. & l. 7. c. 3. p. 582.

(m) Exprobrata levitate Ciceroni. Macrob. ib. Objiciens tanto viro lubricum fidei. Id. Macrob. l. 7. c. 3. p. 582.

(n) Senec. ib.

(o) Quod Cicero dixit, niſi anguſte ſederem, ſcomma fuit in C. Cæſarem, qui in ſenatum paſſim tam multos admittebat, ut eos quatuordecim gradus capere non poſſent. Macrobius Saturnal. l. 7. c. 3. p. 582.

(p) Juvenal. Sat. 3. v. 159.

(E) So much deſpiſed by Horace as 'tis thought.] Here are the Words of Horace.

Nec (q) tamen hoc tribuens, dederim quoque cætera, nam ſic
Et Laberi mimos, ut pulcra poëmata mirer.

Mr. Dacier's Note runs thus: '(r) Horace does 'not here Condemn Laberius abſolutely, nor ſo 'much as cenſure his Works; but only ſpeaks by 'Compariſon. Laberius's Mimi were agreeable; but 'they were not fine and perfect Poems. Nor were they 'made to that end; for the Mimi had only Obſcene 'Jeſts in them. For which reaſon Ovid calls 'em 'Mimos obſcœna jocantes, and they were only de-'ſigned to make People Laugh. If Julius Scaliger 'had well underſtood Horace's meaning, he would 'not have Condemned the Judgment, that Horace 'makes of Laberius's Mimi.

(q) Horat. Sat. 10. l. 1. v. 5. (r) Dacier's Remarks upon Horace, Tom. 6. p. 607.

(F) Moreri has committed ſome Faults.] I. The Prænomen of Laberius is not Decius but Decimus. II. He

Diſpute, whether he was a Native of Lorrain or of Franche Comté. 'Tis ſaid that he had been Barber to Count Charles of (A) Mansfeld; and that he did him (B) a ſignal piece of Service. He went through all military Degrees, till he was made Commander of the Walloon Troops * in the Service of the King of Spain. There was (C) more Luck than Conduct in his Management; for he never more willingly engaged in an Enterprize, than when it was very dangerous. He was wounded (D) on ſeveral Occaſions, and at laſt he was killed (E) with a Muſket Shot the 24th of July 1600. whilſt he

* Patria Lotharingus, virtutis ſine ſuffragiis ex gratiâ nobilitat per omnes nobilitatum gradus ad Ducalem dignitatem evectus. Valer. de gest. magnanim. Lotharingiæ Gallo-Belg. l. 13. p. m. 35.

He ſurviv'd Julius Cæſar ſo little a time, that there was no need of ſaying, he lived in the Reign of Auguſtus. III. 'Tis not true that he received Preſents from Auguſtus. IV. and that Macrobius ſays it. V. 'Tis falſe that Cæſar made him a Roman Knight. See what Laberius ſays in the Prologue of the Farce acted by him in complaiſance to that Emperor.

Ergo his tricenis annis actis ſine nota.
Eques Romanus Lare egreſſus meo
Domum revertar mimus.

Which is an undeniable Proof that he was a Roman Knight independently on Cæſar. That which deceived Moreri, with many others (t), is, that Cæſar at the End of the Play gave a Ring to this Farce-Player, as we learn from Macrobius; but 'tis eaſie to find in that very place a Proof of the Juſtice of my Cenſure. Here is the whole Paſſage: (u) Deinde cum Laberius in fine lusorum annulo honoratus à Cæſare è veſtigio in quatuordecim ad ſpectandum transiſſet, violato ordine, & cum detrectatus eſt EQUES Romanus, & cum mimus remiſſus, aut Cicero præcesserunt Laberio, & ſedile quærenti, recipiſſem te niſi anguſte ſederem. 'Tis evident that Macrobius ſays, that the Order of the Knights was diſhonoured two manner of ways. 1. Becauſe a Place was refuſed to a Roman Knight. 2. Becauſe a Farce-Player was ſent from the Stage to the Place where the Roman Knights ſate. From whence I neceſſarily conclude, that Laberius owed not his Knighthood to the Favour of Julius Cæſar. All that can be ſaid, is, that he diſgraced himſelf by his Complaiſance of acting a Play on the Stage; and that he was re-habilitated by Julius Cæſar. The Ring that he received, may be look'd upon as new Patents of Nobility: But this does not excuſe Moreri. Seneca confirms what has been ſaid (w).

(t) Julius Cæſar did like him ſo well, that he made him a Knight. Dicier ubi ſupra.

(u) Macrob. c. 3. p. 329.

(w) Divus Julius ludis ſuis mimum produxit (Laberium) dein-ſi de equeſtri illum ordini reddidit, ſum juſſit ire ſeſſum in equeſtrio: omnes ita ſe coarctaverunt ut venientem non reciperent. Senec. controv. 18. ſub fin.

(A) Barber to Count Charles of Mansfeld.] This is ſaid by Bongars in a Letter written to Camerarius the 6th of Auguſt 1596. in which he ſent him ſome News about the Siege of Hulſt. 'Some, (a) ſays he, 'write that Labourlotte has been kill'd in it (b); 'that Man ſo famous for his Bravery and Cou-'rage. He was formerly Barber to Count Charles of 'Mansfeld, who died in Hungary. The Cardinal 'chiefly made uſe of Labourlotte's Boldneſs and 'Rone's Counſel. He who in 1693. publiſhed the Hiſtory of Arch-duke Albert, does not ſay that Labourlotte was a Barber; but he ſays nothing that can prove the contrary. 'His Birth, ſays he (d), 'reſembles that of Great Men, which is frequently 'diſputed: Lorrain will have him to be hers; 'Bourgundy claims him as hers. The Name Claudius 'favours the Burgunders. Whatever Country he 'be of, 'tis certain he was a deſerving Man. 'The many Enemies he has had, are a Demonſtrati-'on of his extraordinary Merit. Envy, like the 'Thunder, paſſes over Shrubs, and falls upon 'lofty Trees. They ſay he was of mean Extraction, 'and that he handled the Razor and the Lancet, be-'fore he handled the Sword and the Pike: But the 'Unprejudiced ſpeak otherwiſe. They ſay that in-'deed he knew good Remedies for Wounds; but 'that he was led to this Study by Curioſity and Cha-'rity, and not by Neceſſity. When d'Aubigne (e) relates that Labourlotte was killed in a Skirmiſh in the Counterſcarp of Fort Iſabella, which he had recruited and victualled, he adds, 'that he was lament-'ed by the Arch-duke, and his Superiours, and not 'by his Equals; who, enraged with Envy, could not 'bear that Merit ſhould make a Colonel of a Bar-'ber.

(a) Bongars's Letters, p. 493 of the Hague Edit. 1695.

(b) It was not true. See the Rem. E.

(d) Hiſt. de l'Archduc Albert, b. 4. p. 263.

(e) Hiſt. univerſel. tom. 3. l. 5. chap. 19. p. 729.

(B) And that he did him a ſignal Piece of Service.] He delivered him from the Perplexity of a moſt unlucky Marriage. An Authour I have cited, will not believe it. 'Tis ſaid, ſays he (f), that he got 'into the Favour of Mansfeld by ridding him of his 'troubleſome Wife; but I believe nothing of it; 'he was too honeſt a Man to be guilty of ſo baſe an 'Action. The Action would certainly be very baſe, whatever Pleaſure it might have given the Count That which makes me ſay that the Incredulity of this Writer might be ill grounded, is, that Grotius has hinted at that Action; an evident Sign that he did not think the Story that was ſpread to be a vain Report. His Words are worth relating, as informing us of the Merit of the Deceaſed, with ſome Circumſtances well choſen. (g) Hic quoque ſe Claudius Burlota tranſtulerat, honoque & extremam nactus operam, trajectus glob. vir nobilis animo, Lotharingus ortu, curandi olim vulnus ibus tam ſæpe ſervaverat: mox perfacinus haud bonellum consulatus Mansfeldio feci batur, dictus uxorem ejus ſalutaſſe: ſed nullus honores, ita ſe gesſerat, ut mereri majora ſemper juduceretur, quo mors ejus nec ludu apud ducem, nec apud ipſos novitati invidentes gaudio caruit (h).

(f) Hiſt. del'Archiduc Albert, B. 4. p. 264.

(C) More Luck than Conduct.] Here is what Famianus Strada ſays of him: (i) Animoſus magis quam cautus ac ſæpe ſæpenumero expectatæ mortem viſus eſt. 'He would undertake any thing, and 'was terrified with no Danger. He began a Fight 'as if he had been ſure of the Victory. The bold 'Attempts were committed to him. They who 'did not care to be put upon ſuch Hazards, or ſaw 'themſelves eclipſed by his Succeſs, call'd him a 'fortunate Fool-hardy Fellow.

(D) He was wounded on ſeveral Occaſions.] At the Siege of Nuys in the Year 1583. at that of Andres in 1590. at that of Hulſt the ſame Year, and at the Battle of Newport in 1600. ſee Famianus Strada (k): I believe he is miſtaken as to the firſt Wound. I have ſeen no other Hiſtorian that mentions it: and beſides, they all ſay, that Labourlotte a few days after the Battle brought a conſiderable Succour to Newport, which contributed very much to the raiſing of the Siege that Prince Maurice had laid to that Place. As to the Wound at Hulſt, it was not mortal, as Bongars will have it. What I have cited from him in the firſt Remark was written the 6th of Auguſt 1596. he was not undeceived 20 days after; for he affirms in a Letter of the 27th of Auguſt in the ſame Year, that Labourlotte was (m) dead of his Wounds. Thus you ſee how the very Miniſters of Princes are ſubject to ſpread falſe News, and not quickly to know the Falſity of them. They ought to be more circumſpect in that Point than the Perſon I am ſpeaking of, whoſe Ability otherwiſe deſerves great Encomiums. But when we follow him cloſe, we can't forbear lying that he too lightly believ'd agreeable News, and was too haſty in imparting them to his Friends. Here's another Proof of it, taken from the ſame Letter, in which he affirm'd that Labourlotte was dead: 'You will probably rejoice when you hear 'that the King of Spain is dead, and that the Spa-'niards will not receive his Son for their King, as 'being born of an inceſtuous Marriage. Rideas etiam eum intelligas Regem Hiſp. mortuum, & filium repudiari ab Hiſpanis natum nuptiis inceſtis (n). This is what he writ to his Friend the 6th of Auguſt 1596. At that time all the News diſadvantageous to Spain were as eaſily believ'd (4), as now thoſe that are to the diſadvantage of France.

(k) Famian. Strada de bello Belgico, dec. 1. l. 8. p. m. 572.

(i) De bel. Belg. l. 1. p. m. 35.

(h) Hiſt. de l'Archiduc Albert

(m) Bongars; Rationum ex vulneribus obiit. Bongarsii epiſt. pag. 500 of the Hague Ed. 1695.

(n) Id. ad p. 491.

(4) I write this in the Year 1695

(E) He was killed the 24th of July 1600.] The Author of the Hiſtory of Archduke Albert, ſays the 25th of July at page 138; but at page 264. he inſerts Labourlotte's Epitaph, which ſays the 24th. This Epitaph is uſeful to the Hiſtory of this brave Man; and therefore I ſhall ſet it down. (o) 'He 'is buried at Lapogne, with this Epitaph. Here 'lies the Noble and Illuſtrious Lord, Meſſire Claude de 'Labourlotte, Knight, and Counſellor of War to the 'King, Colonel of twelve Companies of Luxem-'burghers, Lord of Bernſtein, Famoux, La Vallée, 'Lopogne and Bah. He was killed at Fort Iſabella 'near Oſtend, the 24th of July in the Year 1600. I don't think this Authour has been a good Tranſcriber: for, to relate an Epitaph faithfully, the leaſt Letter ought not to be chang'd. The Barbariſms and Solœciſms muſt be retain'd, if there can be; or the Reader muſt be told that one gives only the Subſtance of it. Here is the Epitaph as the Baron he was making an Intrenchment betwixt Bruges and Fort Iſabella. He had a great ſhare in the barbarous Actions that the Troops of the Amirante (L) committed in the Territories of the Empire in 1598. He † left a Son (F) who turn'd Dominican, and one Daughter who married Robert de Celles Baron de Foy, in the Country of Liege near Dinant.

(o) Hiſt. de l'Archiduc Albert p. 264.

† Hiſt. de Archid. Auſtr. Princes in [illegible] pag. [illegible]

‡ Diogen. Laert. lib. 4. n. 59.

† Diogen. Laertius.

LACYDES, a Greek Philoſopher born at Cyrene, was the Diſciple of Arceſilaus, and his Succeſſor in the Academy ‡. Some pretend that he followed not his (A) Maſter's Doctrine; but I think they are miſtaken. He was poor in his younger days; nevertheleſs he became famous by his intent Application to Study: Beſides, he had a very grateful way of diſcourſing †. He taught in a Garden which * Attalus King (B) of Pergamum had made. He anſwer'd that * Prince, who ſent for him to Court, that the Pictures of Kings were to be look'd at at a diſtance. He taught ‖ Philoſophy twenty ſix Years, and reſigned his ‡ Employment to two of his Scholars. He imitated his Maſter in a very laudable thing, which was, that he lov'd to do good without (C) caring it ſhould be known. The Kindneſs (D) a Gooſe had for him is very remarkable. He died of a Palſie (E) for drinking too much. What Numenius (F) relates of him, looks like a † Diogen. Laertius.

* It was in the Academy.

* Id. ib. n. 60.

‖ Id. ib. n. 61.

‡ Id. ib. n. 60.

Le Roi gives it (p): I believe it differs very little from the Original: Icy giſt noble & illuſtre Seigneur Meſſire Claude de Labourlotte, Chevalier & du Conſeil de guerre, Colonel de douze compagnies Luxembourgeoiſes, Seigneur de Berleſtem, Seigneur de Boncourt, La Vallée, Loppoigne, Baſy: lequel à eſté tué lez Oſtende pour le ſervice de ſa Majeſté le 24. de Juliette 1600. Prier Dieu pour ſon ame.

(p) In Topographia Gallo-Brabant. printed at Amſterd. 1603. in fol. p. 74.

(F) The barbarous Actions which the Troops of the Amirante committed.] Their Extortions and Barbarities ſtrike with horrour thoſe who read 'em in the Hiſtories. See the Deſcription that d'Aubigne has given of 'em in few words, in the 10th Chapter of the 5th Book of his third Volume. 'Some Lords 'ſaying to Labourlotte, adds he (q), that the Empe- 'ror and the German Princes would reſent ſuch Out- 'rages, he ſhew'd 'em a Cow, and ſaid, As much as 'that Beaſt. Note, that the Amirante who com- manded thoſe Troops, was Francis de Mendoſa.

(q) Pag. 718.

(F) He left a Son.] My Author ſhould have ſaid that Labourlotte left two Sons, Erneſtus and Francis; The firſt was Lord of Loppoigne, and dy'd without Iſſue; the latter was a Monk, and ſo the Succeſſion of their Father fell to their Siſter. See the Topography of the Walloon (s) Brabant.

(s) Vide ſupra.

(A) That he followed not his Maſter's Doctrine; but I believe they are miſtaken.] Diogenes Laertius aſſirms, that Arceſilaus was the Founder of the Second Academy, and that Lacydes was the Founder of the third. (a) [illegible] Arceſilas primus mediam invexit Academiam. . . . . (b) [illegible] Lacydes nova Academiæ princeps fuit. I had rather believe Cicero, who affirms that Lacydes retained Arceſilaus's Method, and that Carneades reformed it. (c) Cujus (Arceſilæ) primo non admodum probata ratio . . . . proxime à Lacide ſolo RETENTA eſt: poſt autem conſtituta à Carneade, qui eſt quartus ab Arceſila. Moſt Authors are agreed that Carneades was the Founder of the Third Academy: They therefore ſuppoſe that Lacydes ſtuck to Arceſilaus's Doctrine without any Innovation. See the Remark A in the Article Carneades.

(a) Diog. Laert. lib. 4. n. 28. See alſo the ſame Author, in Proœmio, n. 14.

(b) Id. ib. p. 50. See alſo the ſame Author, in Proœm. n. 14.

(c) Cicero Academ. queſt. l. 2. fol. 203. B.

(B) A Garden which Attalus King of Pergamum had made.] [illegible] Lacydes igitur in Academia ſi holam habebat in horto quem Attalus Rex fieri curaverat, Lacydiumque ab ipſo appellatus eſt (d). If you add to this, his deſire of having Lacydes in his Court, you'll eaſily perceive that he loved Philoſophy. Menage is very much miſtaken: (e) he applies to this Attalus what Plutarch (f) and Juſtin (g) ſay of another Attalus's Delight in Agriculture. This Chronological Confuſion is ſomewhat ſtrange.

(d) Diog. Laert. l. 4. n. 60.

(e) Menag in Diog. Laert. lib. 4. n. 60.

(f) Plut. in Demet.

(g) Juſtin lib. 36.

(C) To do good, without caring it ſhould be known.] This was one of Arceſilaus's good Qualities, as we have ſeen in the Remark I of his Article. Here follows a Paſſage of Plutarch: (h) 'And what Philo- 'ſophy tells us, that Children uſually reſemble their 'Parents, we find in ſome meaſure verified in Arce- 'ſilaus and Lacydes, his intimate Acquaintance: For 'when Cephiſocrates was impeached of High- 'Treaſon [illegible] Lacydes, with ſeveral others of his 'Friends, ſtood by him at his Trial, the Council for 'the State delivered the Priſoner's Ring, wherein lay 'the principal Evidence againſt him, might be pro- 'duced in Court, which Cephiſocrates hearing, dropt 'it ſlyly off his Finger; and Lacydes obſerving it, 'ſet his Foot upon't, and bury'd it in the Ground. 'Whereupon being acquitted, and going afterwards 'to pay his Reſpects and Thanks to his Judges, one, 'of them, who, it ſeems, had taken notice of the 'Paſſages, told him that his Thanks were owing to 'Lacydes, and ſo related the whole Story, when yet 'Lacydes had never mentioned it.

(h) [illegible]

(D) The Kindneſs a Gooſe had for him.] She follow'd him every where, within doors and out of doors, in the day time, and in the night time. (k) Poteſt & ſapientiæ videri intellectus his (ſcilicet bus) eſſe. Ita comes perpetuo adhæſiſſe Lacydi Philoſopho dicitur, nuſquam alio, non in publico, non in balneis, non nudo, non interdiu digreſſus. When ſhe died, Lacydes made as noble a Funeral for her as if ſhe had been his Son or his Brother (l).

(k) Plin. l. 10. c. 22. p.m 308. See alſo Athenæus, l. 13. pag. 600.

(l) Ælian. l. [illegible] Hiſt. anim. c. 41.

(E) He died of a Palſie for drinking too much.] (m) [illegible] Mortuus eſt autem ex Paralyſi quam ex immodica potione contraxerat. Athenæus (n) tells us, that Lacydes and another Philoſopher called Timon, were invited for two days together to a Feaſt: and that in compliance to the Humour of the Company, they drank plentifully. Lacydes quitted his Poſt the firſt day, and retired when he perceived he had enough. Timon ſeeing him goeſt, claim'd the Victory: but the next day he yielded firſt: he could not drink off the Bowl that was brought him. Lacydes was even with him. This is a very ſcandalous thing. Philoſophers ſhould never contend for ſuch a Victory; it is not only a fault to obtain it, but alſo to attempt it; and tho' the Ignominy of the Victor is greater than that of the Vanquiſhed, yet the latter deſerves to be cenſur'd. How many Chriſtian Philoſophers, and even Divines, have imitated Timon and Lacydes!

(m) Diog. Laert. in [illegible] ſuprà, n. 61.

(n) Athen. l. 10. c. 10. p. 438.

(F) What Numenius relates of him, looks altogether like a merry Story.] Here is the Subſtance of what he ſays. (o) Lacydes diſcovered a great Stinginеſs in his way of Living; he truſted nothing to his Servants; (p) his Pantry was inacceſſible to 'em; he put in, and took out of it himſelf what there was occaſion for, and never left it open: But that he might not be troubled with the Key, he put it in a Hole (q) which he ſeal'd up, and then he threw his Seal into the (r) Pantry through the Hole of the Lock. His Servants having diſcovered this, trick'd him with eaſe. It was no difficult thing for them to get the Key, and to place it again where he had put it, and to ſeal up the Hole. They eat, they drank, they robb'd him as they thought fit, and laughed at him into the Bargain. He on his part very eaſily perceived the Diminution of his Wine and Proviſions; and not knowing where to lay the Fault, he remembred the Doctrine of Arceſilaus, who taught that our Senſes and our Reaſon comprehend nothing, and he attributed the Vacuum of his Bottles and Baſkets to that Incomprehenſibility. Thus he began to Philoſophize in Arceſilaus's School, againſt the certainty of humane Knowledge. Nay, he made uſe of that Domeſtick Experience, to prove that he had reaſon to ſuſpend his Judgment in every thing. I won't alledge a hear-ſay, ſaid he one Day, as he was gravel, diſcourſing with one of his Friends; I know by Experience what I am going to tell you; I can ſpeak of it without any Doubt. Hereupon he told him from one end to the other the Adventure of his Buttery. What, continued he, could Zeno ſay againſt an Argument of this force, which has

(o) Numenius apud Euſeb. præpar. Evangel. lib. 14. c. 7. p. 734. & ſeq. [illegible]

(p) [illegible]

(q) I don't keep to the Greek, in which there is [illegible] cava quadam in arcula.

(r) [illegible]

a merry Story. Moreri has committed (G) very groſs Miſtakes. The Difference that Father Rapin finds betwixt Arceſilaus and Lacydes, is a meer Illuſion. Philoſophy, ſays he †, was uneaſie under the former, and contradicting under the latter. 'Tis certain, that it was never more contradicting than under Arceſilaus.

LACISIUS (Paul) a Regular Canon of the Congregation of Lateran in the XVIth. Century p, was of Verona. He taught the Latin Tongue in the Priory of St. Fridian, at Lucca q, whilſt Peter Martyr was Prior there; and having reliſhed with him the Doctrine of the Proteſtants, he followed him into Germany, where they openly profeſs'd it in 1542. After they had been ſome time at Zurich r, and at Baſil, they were invited to Strasburg by Martin Bucer, and by his Means Peter Martyr was made Profeſſor of Divinity, and Paul Laciſius, Profeſſor of the Greek Tongue s. The latter † died at Strasburg, I know not when. His Latin Verſion of Tzetzes's Chiliads, was printed ‡ with the Greek in 1546, at Baſil, by John Oporin.

† Rapin, Reflect. ſur la Philoſ. n. 8. ‡ Maittaire, Annal. Typ. Tom. 2. p. 832.

LAIS,

(G) Moreri has committed very groſs Miſtakes. I. Inſtead of ſaying, that Lacydes's Father was a Native of Cyrene, he ſhould have ſaid, that Lacydes was born there. II. He ought not to have adopted Laertius's Error, concerning the Foundation of an Academy by Lacydes. III. He ought not to have placed his Death in the Fourth Year of the 130th. Olympiad. This is no fault of the Impreſſion, for he adds, that it was the 114th. Year of Rome. If the Printers had omitted ſome thing, in their Calculation, they would not have erred to exactly in the Second. 'Tis therefore certain that they followed the Copy. Now what can be more aſſured, than to believe, that Apollonius (b) lived in the 120 h. Olympiad, and that Lacydes his Diſciple, died the laſt Year of the 130th. Olympiad? Thus his Death had been placed in the Fourth Year of the 134th. Olympiad, it would not be an Error, I confeſs, but not, till about the Second Year of the 135th. Here's the Proof of it. Diogenes Laertius obſerves that Lacydes, who began to be the Head of the Academy the 4th. Year of the 134th. Olympiad, died after he had taught Philoſophy Twenty Six Years.

(a) Ἐτελεύτησε δὲ ἐν ἔτει τετάρτῳ τῆς ἑκατοστῆς τριακοστῆς ὀγδόης Ὀλυμπιάδος, ἔτη ἑξήκοντα τρία γεγονώς. Obiit autem Scholam adminiſtrare cœpiſſet quarto anno centeſimæ tricesimæ octavæ Olympiadis, vixitque ſexaginta tres annos in ſchola conſumptis. V. 'Tis an Abſurdity to find in theſe Words (d), that Lacydes lived to a Reputation —— after he had taught for the Space of Twenty five Years. VI. This can hardly be ſaid of any Profeſſor; for if he ſpends Twenty five Years in his Profeſſion, without Fame, he runs the hazard, ordinarily ſpeaking, of dying without any Reputation.

Note, that Father Hardouin is out, as to the time of our Philoſopher's Death. Obiit, ſays he (e), anno 4 Olymp. CXXX. He cites the 120th Page of Diogenes Laertius, in the London Edition, 1664, in folio. But before that we find that it was the 134th. Olympiad, and not the 130th. 'tis certain that it concerns Lacydes's Entrance on his Profeſſion and not his Death. Father Labbe has committed but one of theſe two Faults: He ſays (f), citing Diogenes, that the Philoſopher Lacydes died in the 4th. Year of the 134th. Olympiad. I will not diſcuſs whether it can be proved, that he did not die at that time? I anſwer, that there are two Proofs to the contrary to be given for it. The 1ſt. is, that he was not the Head of the Academical School (g) till after Arceſilaus's Death, who Death, and we know that Arceſilaus (h) was Contemporary with Eumenes Prince of Pergamus, who ſucceeded not Philetærus till the 129th. Olympiad. Father Labbe (k) lys to; the Conſequence of this Philoſopher with Eumenes, requires, that he ſhould have lived till the 130th. Olympiad. Which being ſo, it can't be ſaid, that he ſucceeded the 4th. Year, of the 134th. Olympiad; for he taught Twenty Six Years. My ſecond Proof is drawn from this, that Attalus, King of Pergamus, erected the Garden to be made, where Lacyde taught, and deſired to have that Philoſopher at his Court. There's little Probability, that theſe two things relate to the firſt Year of his Reign, that is (l), to the Third Year of the 134th. Olympiad. Let us lay then, that Lacydes died not the following Year; and let us remem-

(b) Menagiana, Tom. 2. p. 61. (c) Diog. Laert. ubi ſupra, n. 60. (d) Diog. Laert. ubi ſupra, n. 59. (e) Hardouin, Chronol. Franc. Tom. 2. p. 301. n. 60. (f) Labbe, Chronol. Franc. Tom. 2. p. 301. n. 60. (g) Diogenes Laertius, ubi ſupra, n. 60. Vide Labbe, that Lacydes is the firſt Philoſopher who deſign'd upon his Chronology. (h) Diog. Laert. ubi ſupra, n. 38. (i) Vide Labbe ubi ſupra pag. 295. (k) Labbe ubi ſupra pag. 300.

(f) Ἐκ τούτου τὰ μὲν χρήσιμα, τὰς ὑποκειμένας ἐπιφορὰς ἔχει, καὶ τὰς ὄψεις, ἢ ἐν ἡμῖν, ἢ ἐφ' ἡμῖν, ἢ ἀφ' ἡμῶν, ἢ τὰς ἕξεις, ἢ τὰς πράξεις, ἀλλὰ τὰ ὄντα ἐν ἀνοίαις διαλογισμένων τὴν ἄτοπον πίστιν, τὰ παράλογα ἐκβάλλει ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ καὶ ἀγέλαστα. Inops conſilii vicinos inclamare, appellare Deos: ſæpe hei mihi, profacinus indignum, per Deos Deaſque omnes ingeminare, ac cætera id genus argumenta, quæ homini gravioribus inquerelis, ubi fidem non impetrat, ſine arte natura ſuppeditat. Quæ cum audirem, videbam omnia magno clamore deplorata, magnam utique probabilitatis ſpeciem oſtendebant. Id. ibid. p. 736. B.

(g) Ὅταν μὲν γὰρ ἐν τῇ στοᾷ περιπατῶμεν. Domi deinceps quiereret perpetuo, ac pro cellula foribus aſſideret. Id. ib. This Tranſlation ſeems more to be liked than that of Ambroſius, in his Notes upon Diogenes Laertius, p. 523. n. 10. per amicum cellæ perantice cuſtodem dominum linquit.

(h) Id. ibid. C.

has ſo clearly demonſtrated to me the Acatalepſia? Have not I reaſon to miſtruſt every thing, when having ſhut, ſealed, unſealed, and opened again my Pantry with my own Hands, I cannot find what I had left in it? I only find my Seal there, which will not permit me to believe that I am told'd. When he came to that part, his Friend could hold no longer; he broke out into ſuch a Fit of Laughter, as made the Philoſopher perceive his Blunder, and reſolve to look to his Seal better. His Servants did not trouble their Heads about it; and whether they had learnt from the Stoicks, or elſewhere, to diſpute with him, they unſeal'd his Key, without troubling themſelves to put the ſame Seal on again. They put on another, and ſometimes none at all. It vex'd him, when he ſaw their Roguery; but they maintain'd, that they had never medled with the Seal, and that he had forgotten to put it on. He made long Diſcourſes to let them ſee, that he well remember'd he had ſeal'd it, and went ſo far, as to ſwear it. You have a mind, anſwered they, to divert your ſelf, and to laugh at our Simplicity. A Philoſopher like you, has neither Opinions nor Memory; for you maintained the other Day, that Memory was an Opinion. He confuted them with Reaſons different from thoſe of the Academicks; but they had recourſe to a Stoick, who taught 'em how to reply to their Maſter, and to elude all his Arguments by the Doctrine of Incomprehenſibility, which they did with a great deal of pleaſant Humour. The worſt of it was, that they continued to rob his Proviſions, and Lacydes perceived that his Goods vaniſh'd away every Day. He found himſelf in great Perplexity; his Principles, inſtead of ſerving him, were againſt him, and he was forced to behave himſelf like the Vulgar. (i) All the Neighbourhood was filled with his Clamours and Complaints. He proteſted by all the Gods and Goddeſſes, that he was robb'd; at laſt he took the Reſolution not to ſtir out, and (k) to keep a watchful Eye over his Buttery-Door. What did he get by diſputing with his Servants? He made uſe of the Method of the Stoicks againſt 'em, and they anſwered him in the way of the Academicks, and beat him with his own Weapons. At laſt, reſolving to free himſelf once for all, from the intolerable Perplexity he was in, he ingenuouſly told his Servants, Children, we uſe to diſpute one way in the Schools, and we live another way in our Houſes. (l) Ὅτι δὲ ἐν τοῖς λόγοις ἀκαταλήπτους τὰς φαντασίας ἔλεγε, δῆλον ἐκ τούτων. Ἀλλὰ τοῦτο μὲν ἐν τοῖς λόγοις ἐκεῖνος ἔλεγε. Verum ubi vitæ agit, ſecum ipſe cogitans, quo ſua ſibi verſutia recideret: eodem animo ſenſum patam ac ſine ſuco aperiens, nimirum, inquit, famuli, aliter hæc in ſchola diſputamus, aliter vivimus.

This is a pretty Story, and Mr. de la Fontaine might have made it very diverting; but 'tis plain, that it has been forged by a pious Fraud of the Stoicks. This has been a Method uſed at all Times, and in all Places; People have always endeavoured, and do ſtill, to train the Doctrine of their Adverſaries into ridicule: and to that end a Thouſand Fables are invented, provided a Pretence be not wanting to ſtain maliciouſly the Conſequences of their Opinions. This Paſſion has been ſo blindly indulged againſt the Pyrrhoniſts, that not only Sincerity, but even Probability has been laid aſide, to make them be denied, that in the ordinary Conduct of Life, Men ought to truſt to the Teſtimony of their Senſes. They only denied, that the abſolute nature of Objects, is juſt the ſame as it appears to be.

Note, that Diogenes Laertius (a) is content to obſerve, that our Lacydes having ſeal'd his Study Door, threw his Seal in the Inſide, and that his Servants made uſe of the Seal to ſeal his Proviſions, without being diſcovered by him.

(G) Moreri has committed very groſs Miſtakes. I. Inſtead of ſaying, that Lacydes's Father was a Native of Cyrene, he ſhould have ſaid, that Lacydes was born there. II. He ought not to have adopted Laertius's Error, concerning the Foundation of an Academy by Lacydes. III. He ought not to have placed his Death in the Fourth Year of the 130th. Olympiad. This is no fault of the Impreſſion, for he adds, that it was the 114th. Year of Rome. If the Printers had omitted ſome thing, in their Calculation, they would not have erred to exactly in the Second. 'Tis therefore certain that they followed the Copy. Now what can be more aſſured, than to believe, that Apollonius (b) lived in the 120 h. Olympiad, and that Lacydes his Diſciple, died the laſt Year of the 130th. Olympiad? Thus his Death had been placed in the Fourth Year of the 134th. Olympiad, it would not be an Error, I confeſs, but not, till about the Second Year of the 135th. Here's the Proof of it. Diogenes Laertius obſerves that Lacydes, who began to be the Head of the Academy the 4th. Year of the 134th. Olympiad, died after he had taught Philoſophy Twenty Six Years.

(a) Ἐτελεύτησε δὲ ἐν ἔτει τετάρτῳ τῆς ἑκατοστῆς τριακοστῆς ὀγδόης Ὀλυμπιάδος, ἔτη ἑξήκοντα τρία γεγονώς. Obiit autem Scholam adminiſtrare cœpiſſet quarto anno centeſimæ tricesimæ octavæ Olympiadis, vixitque ſexaginta tres annos in ſchola conſumptis. V. 'Tis an Abſurdity to find in theſe Words (d), that Lacydes lived to a Reputation —— after he had taught for the Space of Twenty five Years. VI. This can hardly be ſaid of any Profeſſor; for if he ſpends Twenty five Years in his Profeſſion, without Fame, he runs the hazard, ordinarily ſpeaking, of dying without any Reputation.

Note, that Father Hardouin is out, as to the time of our Philoſopher's Death. Obiit, ſays he (e), anno 4 Olymp. CXXX. He cites the 120th Page of Diogenes Laertius, in the London Edition, 1664, in folio. But before that we find that it was the 134th. Olympiad, and not the 130th. 'tis certain that it concerns Lacydes's Entrance on his Profeſſion and not his Death. Father Labbe has committed but one of theſe two Faults: He ſays (f), citing Diogenes, that the Philoſopher Lacydes died in the 4th. Year of the 134th. Olympiad. I will not diſcuſs whether it can be proved, that he did not die at that time? I anſwer, that there are two Proofs to the contrary to be given for it. The 1ſt. is, that he was not the Head of the Academical School (g) till after Arceſilaus's Death, who Death, and we know that Arceſilaus (h) was Contemporary with Eumenes Prince of Pergamus, who ſucceeded not Philetærus till the 129th. Olympiad. Father Labbe (k) lys to; the Conſequence of this Philoſopher with Eumenes, requires, that he ſhould have lived till the 130th. Olympiad. Which being ſo, it can't be ſaid, that he ſucceeded the 4th. Year, of the 134th. Olympiad; for he taught Twenty Six Years. My ſecond Proof is drawn from this, that Attalus, King of Pergamus, erected the Garden to be made, where Lacyde taught, and deſired to have that Philoſopher at his Court. There's little Probability, that theſe two things relate to the firſt Year of his Reign, that is (l), to the Third Year of the 134th. Olympiad. Let us lay then, that Lacydes died not the following Year; and let us remem-

(b) Menagiana, Tom. 2. p. 61. (c) Diog. Laert. ubi ſupra, n. 60. (d) Diog. Laert. ubi ſupra, n. 59. (e) Hardouin, Chronol. Franc. Tom. 2. p. 301. n. 60. (f) Labbe, Chronol. Franc. Tom. 2. p. 301. n. 60. (g) Diogenes Laertius, ubi ſupra, n. 60. Vide Labbe, that Lacydes is the firſt Philoſopher who deſign'd upon his Chronology. (h) Diog. Laert. ubi ſupra, n. 38. (i) Vide Labbe ubi ſupra pag. 295. (k) Labbe ubi ſupra pag. 300.

LAIS, a famous Curtezan, was of Hyccara (A) a Town of Sicily. She was carried into Greece when her Country was plundered by Nicias the Athenian General. She settled at Corinth, which was the fittest Town (B) in the World for Women of her Profession; and there she made so great a Noise, that no Curtezan (C) had ever a greater Resort. She had been informed by a kind of Revelation, that she should be eminent, and get a great deal of Money; for she dreamed that Venus (CD) appeared to her, to acquaint her with the Arrival of some very rich Customers. The most illustrious Orators, and even the most austere Philosophers, fell in Love with her. Every remember, that if he had taught but a few Months in that Garden, it would be an Absurdity to give him no other School but that, and even to observe, that it had its Name from him. He must therefore have taught there many Years, and consequently he did not die a Year after Attalus came to the Throne. Sethus Calvisius (m) has been guilty of the same Fault as Father Labbe.

(A) Of Hyccara, a Town of Sicily.] This we learn (n) from Plutarch, when he speaks of the taking of that Town. The Inhabitants were sold, and Lais amongst the rest, who was transported to Peloponnesus, being yet (o) a Virgin. Some Moderns say (p), that she was sold at Corinth; but they have not consulted Pausanias, nor his Translator, who might have clearly taught 'em, that she was sold at Hyccara, and then carried to Corinth. Pausanias perfectly agrees with Plutarch; he says as well as he, that she was yet a young Girl (q). Solinus (r) is contented to make her a Sicilian, without specifying the Town she was of; but Athenæus, in the 13th. Book, Page 588. cites three Authors (f), who expressly say, that she was of Hyccara in Sicily. One of those three Writers observes, that she went a Slave to Corinth. [illegible] Ex quo (o pido Hyccaris) captiva Corinthum venit. This condemns the Moderns I have mentioned. Stephanus Byzantinus says also, that she was of Hyccara, and quotes Syncsius (s), who call'd her [illegible] Hyccaricum mancipium. On the other hand he cites Neanthes (x) Author of a Book concerning Illustrious Men, who says, that she was born at Crastus, a Town of Sicily. He also cites Timæus, as having said, that she was of Eucarpia in the same Island; and yet we have seen, that Timæus, quoted by Athenæus, makes her a Native of Hyccara; and since no body makes mention of a place in Sicily, called Eucarpia, I find Berkelius's Conjecture (y) very probable, namely, that Stephanus Byzantius made use of a Copy of Timæus, where the Transcribers had put [illegible] for Casaubon (z) observes that the Country of Lais, like that of Homer, and of some other illustrious Men, has not been well known, and he cites Solinus, who says, (a) Lais eligere patriam maluit quam fateri. Casaubon adds, that some will have her to be born at Pancarpia in Phrygia; but probably his Memory fail'd him (b): he remember'd confusedly, that he had read, that some made her a Native of Eucarpia in Sicily, a Place which Stephanus Byzantinus mentions in the Article of Eucarpia of Phrygia; This confounded his Ideas; he fancied that he had read, that Pancarpia in Phrygia was Lais's Birth-Place, according to some Writers. Pinedo goes farther than Casaubon, as to the Parallel of Homer with this Curtezan: he pretends, that many Towns contended for the Glory of having produced Lais (c).

(B) Corinth——was the fittest Town in the World for Women of her Profession.] However I don't believe all that is said of her by Lotichius. He (d) affirms, that the Corinthians, in their solemn Prayers, beg'd of the Gods to encrease the Number of the Curtezans. He cites Athenæus, who says no such Thing. But this probably misled Lotichius; he depended too securely upon these Words of Erasmus: (e) Tantus Corinthi bonos habebatur mercimonius, ut quemadmodum ex autoribus docet Athenæus, illic in templo Veneris prostarent, atque in solemnibus precibus illud addi soleat, ut Dii augerent meretricum numerum. Quin & illud refert meretrices facto sacro Veneri, civitatem extremo periculo laborantem servasse placata Venere. Erasmus strains the matter. Athenæus says only, that there was an ancient Law at Corinth, ordaining, that when the Town should make Supplications to Venus in any important Affair, they should summon as many Curtezans as ever they could, that they might assist at the Pomp of the Procession, and pray to that Goddess, and remain the last in her Temple (f). Erasmus is right in his further Account of the matter; for it is true that Athenæus says, that it was believed that the Prostitutes of Corinth had very much contributed to the Safety of all Greece, by the Prayers they put up to Venus, when Xerxes made his Irruption. He adds, that the Corinthians promised Venus a certain Number of those Creatures, if they obtain'd the Favours they beg'd of her, and that Xenophon the Corinthian made a like Vow, if he carried the Prize at the Olympick Games. Having obtained the Victory, he punctually perform'd his Vow, consecrating Twenty five Girls to the Service of Venus, and presenting them to this Goddess, during the Ceremony of the Sacrifice he offered to her, after his return from the Olympick Games. Nay, these Twenty five Girls began the Hymn that was sung during the Immolation of the Victim. Concerning the Whoredom of Corinth, See Erasmus's Adages (g), where he cites a notable Place of Strabo (h).

This is sufficient to make good my Text, and at the same time to shew, that the Heathens could not say, that the Abominations they published of their Gods, were only Poetical Stories; for here's a most flourishing City, which testifies by its Laws, and publick Worship, that it believes, that the Curtezans by their Prostitutions, did an agreeable Service to Venus, and that their Intercession with her was of the greatest Efficacy to prevent the publick Calamities. 'Tis a Sign they gave Credit to the Stories that were told of this Goddess's Adulteries.

(C) No Curtezan had ever a greater Resort.] Of this Propertius (i) gives a formal Testimony.

Non ita compleant Ephyræ (k) Laidos ædes,
Ad cujus jacuit Græcia tota fores.

Plutarch says (l) that Greece was inflamed with the Love of Lais, that two Seas fought for this Woman, and that she had an Army of Gallants (m). [illegible] Inauditus haud dubie quid Laidi obtigerit. Nobilis illa & tam multis amata viris, quæ sui desiderio Græciam inflammavit, atque adeo de qua duo maria certaverant. See her Epitaph in the Remark I.

Mrs. Jacquette Guillaume says at the 77th. Page of her Dames Illustres, ' (n) that one of the principal Gallants of Lais, a publick Curtezan, erected ' her a Statue like that of Pallas, with this Inscription: To the Divinity of Lais, for having triumphed over the Wisdom of all the Philosophers, and the Courage of all the Conquerors. I wish she had quoted a good Author for it; for her Testimony can't be depended upon.

(CD) She dreamed that Venus appeared to her to acquaint her.] It was Venus, surnamed Melanis, or the Black, that appeared to her. She had a Temple with this Title in (o) a Suburb of Corinth. It has been thought that this Surname was given her (p) because generally speaking, Men go about the Multiplication of their Kind by Night, and not like Beasts by Day. If this reason of the Surname Melanis was a solid one, it does not seem that Venus, as Black, should have shewn herself in a Dream to young Lais, who was not design'd to mind the distinction of Days and Nights. However it be, this Dream was mention'd by an Orator in one of his Pleas, You need only read these Words of Athe-

(m) Sethus Calvisius ad ann. mundi, 3709. pag. m. 208.

(n) Plutarch. in Nicia, pag. 533. See also Plutarch in Alcibiade sub finem.

(o) [illegible] Virginem etiamnum. Id. in Nicia, p. 533. C.

(p) Thomæus de varia, hist. l. 1. c. 81. One of the Commentators upon Alciatus's Emblems, p. m. 330. Du Verdier Vau-Privas, Diverses Iesons, Book 3. ch. 6. p. m. 184.

(q) [illegible] Adhuc puellam. Pausanias, lib. 2. pag. 95.

(r) Solin. cap. 5.

(s) Polemo, Nymphodorus & Timæus.

(t) Polemo apud Athen. ib.

(u) Invoce [illegible]

(w) Invoce [illegible]

(x) In voce [illegible]

(y) In Stephan. voce [illegible]

(z) In Athen. pag. 869.

(a) Solin. ubi supra.

(b) See Pinedo in Stephanum voce [illegible]

(c) Celeres meretrices ubertatem in Diis placet illustrant: de qua (Laide) decertabant quædam civitates haud [illegible] focus ac de Homero. Pinedo in voce [illegible] See the same Pinedo, at the Word [illegible]

(d) Lotichius in Petronium, pag. 232.

(e) Erasm. in proverb. [illegible] id est, scortationibus ac lustris indulgere, lenociniumque exercere. 'Tis the 68th. Proverb, Centur. 3. chiliad. 4. pag. m. 904.

(f) Athenæus, lib. 13. p. 573. ex Chamæleonte Heracleonte in libro de Pindaro.

(g) Erasm. in proverbium, Non est cujuslibet Corinthum appellere. 'Tis the 1st. of the 4th. Century of the 1st. Chiliad pag. m. 132.

(h) Strabo, lib 7. pag. 201.

(i) Propert. lib. 2. eleg. 6.

(k) That is, Corinthiæ; for Ephyra was the ancient Name of Corinth, Plin. lib. 4. c. 4.

(l) Plutarch in [illegible] amatorio pag. 767.

(m) [illegible] Magnum aliorum amatorum clam subterfugiens exercitum Id. ib.

(n) That Book was printed at Paris, in 1665.

(o) Pausan. lib. 2. cap. 2.

(p) Id. lib. 8. cap. 6.

ry body knows, that Demoſthenes (D) made a Journey on purpoſe to Corinth, to have a Night with her; but the Rate ſhe put upon it diſcouraged him. It is alſo well known, what a (E) Paſſion Diogenes the Cynick had for her. He found her very Complaiſant, as poor and clouterly as he was, which is more to be admired than her great Intimacy with the Philoſopher Ariſtippus, who was a very ſpruce and Polite Man. 'Tis ſaid that ſhe did not love him, and he was jeſted upon for't. The Anſwer (F) he made thereupon, is very free. Some ſay *, that her Emulation of another Curtezan, moved her to give Acceſs to the Poor as well as to the Rich, to ſignalize her ſelf by the Multitude of her Admirers; but others maintain, that ſhe never (G) beſtowed her Favours at a cheap Rate, till ſhe grew old: Some will have it that ſhe took up then (H) a Bawd's

* Athen. l. 13. p. 588.

† Viz. Phryne.

(c) Cicero Epiſt. 26. l. 9. ad familiares.

(d) Lib. 12. p. 544.

(e) Lactant. l. 3. c. 15. p. m. 184. Ὅτι χρὴ γυναῖκα ἔχειν κοινὴν. Graeci dixerunt, ut Latini habere uxorem, de eo qui ad eam pro uxore cum venit, ventitabat. Latinae dictionis exempla habes apud Terentium in Andria I. 1. Quis Chrysidem habuit? Qua de re Muretus variar. lect. vi. 7. Menag. ad Diog. Laert. l. 2. n. 75.

(f) Diog. Laert. l. 1. n. 84. 85.

(g) Epicrates in Anti-Laide, apud Athen. l. 13. p. 570. Οὐκ ἔστιν ὅστις ἡμῶν ἀγνοεῖ, ὅτι Διογένης ὁ κύων ἐπεθύμησε τῆς Λαΐδος, καὶ ὅτι ἐκείνη οὐκ ἐδίδου αὐτὸν ἐντεῦθεν, εἰ μὴ ἀργύριον πολὺ ἔδωκεν· ὁ δὲ ἐπεθύμει μὲν, ἀπορῶν δὲ ἐφείδετο. Laïdem etiam Axine nuncupata eſt. Quod ejus cognomen ingenii ſævitiam redarguebat, quodque numerum quæſtum exigeret, præſertim à peregrinis, eo quod ſtatim eſſent diſcedituri. Ælian. var. Hiſt. lib. 14. c. 33. See alſo the fifth Chapter of the twelfth Book, wherein Ælian quotes Ariſtophanes Byzantius for it. (h) Neque admittebat illa nimium quantum. A. Gellius lib. 1. c. 8. (i) Above Letter I.

(r) Athen. lib. 13. pag. 588. næus: (r) Τὴν δὲ Ἀφροδίτην ἐν Κορίνθῳ ἡ Μελαινὶς καλλιμίνη, νυκτὸς ἐπιφανεῖσα ἐμπόροις ἐφιεμένοις ἐφ' ἑαυτὴν πολυτελῶς. ἃ Τιμοκλῆς μνημονεύει ἐν τῷ κατὰ Λαΐδος ἐπιγράμματι. Huic (Laidi) cum eſſet Corinthi, Venus Melænis ſive Nigella dormienti noctu ſe oſtendit, & adventum prænunciavit amatorum qui forent pecuniоſiſſimi, ut memorat Hyperides Actione ſecunda contra Ariſtagoram.

(D) That Demoſthenes made a Journey on purpoſe.] This ſtory has been very prettily dreſt up in French by Mr. le Pays (f). Aulus Gellius tells it thus: (t) Lais Corinthia ob elegantiam venuſtatemque formæ grandem pecuniam demerebat: conventuſque ad eam ditiorum hominum ex omni Græcia celebres erant: neque admittebatur, niſi qui dabat, quod poſcerat. Poſcebat autem illa nimium quantum. Hinc ait natum eſſe illud frequens apud Græcos adagium, Οὐ παντὸς ἀνδρὸς ἐς Κόρινθον ἐσθ' ὁ πλοῦς. Quod fruſtra iret Corinthum ad Laidem qui non quiret dare quod poſceretur. Ad hanc ille Demoſthenes clanculum adit; &, ut ſibi ſui copiam faceret, petit: at Lais μυρίας δραχμὰς ἡ τάλαντον poposcit. Hoc facit numi noſtratis denarium decem millia. Tali petulantia mulieris atque pecuniæ magnitudine ictus expaviduſque Demoſthenes avertit; & diſcedens, Ego, inquit, pœnitere tanti non emo. Sed Græca ipſa, quæ fertur dixiſſe, lepidiora ſunt, Μετανοῶ, inquit, μικρὸν δεῖν χιλίαις δραχμαῖς.

(E) What a Paſſion Diogenes the Cynick had for her.] He received a Courtely of her ſcot-free. This is what Ariſtippus's Servant repreſented to his Maſter, who laviſht his Eſtate upon that Proſtitute. But Ariſtippus anſwer'd him, I pay her well, not that others may not Lie with her, but that I may do it. (u) Ὑπολαμβάνοντος ὑμῶν ἴσως, ὅτι τὸ μὲν αὐτὴν πωλεῖσθαι ἀργύριον δίδως, ἐγὼ δὲ οὐδὲ δραχμὴν τῷ κοινὴ συγκυλίεσθαι ἀνωρύτῳ δίδωμι, ἐγὼ Λαΐδι χορηγῶ πολλὰ, ἵνα αὐτὴς αὐτὴ ἐπιλαύω, οὐχ ἵνα μὴ ἄλλος. Ariſtippus was the moſt obliging Man in the World to his Miſtreſſes; he was not Jealous of 'em, nor did he value their beſtowing upon others the ſame Favours he received. This is what he declar'd to Diogenes, who told him (w), you Lie with a Proſtitute; either leave her, or be a Cynick as I am. Do you think it Abſurd, anſwered Ariſtippus, to Lodge in a Houſe, that has Lodg'd many others, or to Embark in a Veſſel, which has carried many Paſſengers? No, replied Diogenes. Juſt ſo, ſaid Ariſtippus, it is no ways abſurd, to have to do with a Woman, whom many others have known before (x). Here is a diverting Deſcription of the Equipage, with which theſe two Philoſophers rambled about Lais's Houſe, if we believe Taſſoni. (a) Ma che bel vedere Diogene Cinico col mantello di romagnuolo ſquarciato, e rappezzato, la barba ſquarruffata, ſenza camicia, e lordo, e pidocchioſo fa dell' innamorato, paſſeggiando lungo la porta della famoſa Laide, e dall' altra parte comparire il ſuo rivale Ariſtippo, tutto profummato, e attilato, ſputando zirlippo, tutto di torno, e levargli il muro; e la betto, e mirarlo di torno, e levargli il muro; e la Signora ſtarſi alla geloſia, pigliandoſi guſto di vederli paſſeggiare al ſereno.

(u) Athen. l. 13. p. 588.

(w) Id. ib.

(x) See the new Letters againſt Maimbourg's Hiſtory of Calviniſm. There is in du Verdier's Bibliotheque Franſoiſe p. 989. a pretty Poem upon this, Compoſed by Peter de Brach, a Native of Bourdeaux.

(a) Taſſoni, Penſieri diverſi, l. 7. c. 11. p. 228.

(b) Plutarch. in Amatorio, p. 750. D.

(F) The anſwer he made thereupon is very free.] I don't think, anſwer'd he, when he was told that Lais did not love him, that Wine and Fiſh love me, and yet I feed on 'em with a great deal of Pleaſure. This I learn from Plutarch: His Words have not been well underſtood by Amiot, for he ſuppoſes that Ariſtippus anſwer'd, I neither love Fiſh nor Wine, tho' I live upon 'em with Pleaſure. You'll find no ſuch Thought in the Greek. (b) Ἀριστίππου πρὸς κατηγοροῦντά τινος Λαΐδος περὶ οὗτος ὡς ἡ φιλοῦσα, ἀποκρινομένου ὅτι οὐ τὸν οἶνον οὕτως οὐδὲ τὸν ἰχθὺν μὲν φιλῶ αὐτὸν, ἀλλ' ἥδιον ἐκείνοις χρῶμαι. Ariſtippus qui Laïdem apud ſe vituperanti quod non amaret, reſpondit: A vino quoque & piſce non puto amari me, tamen utroque libenter veſcor.

On another occaſion Ariſtippus gave an anſwer, which many Authors have mention'd: It ſhews, that tho' he often went to Lais, he was no Slave to his Paſſion: (c) Cum eſſet objectum habere cum Laida, habeo, inquit, non habeor à Laide. The Anſwer is ſhorter in Athenæus, (d) Ἔχω αὐτὴν, οὐκ ἔχομαι ὑπ' αὐτῆς. habeo non habeor. Many Authors mention this Anſwer. Diogenes Laertius has it in the Life of Ariſtippus; Lactantius relates it thus: (e) Ariſtippus Cyrenaicorum magiſtro cum Laide nobili ſcorto fuit conſuetudo, quod flagitium gravis ille philoſophiæ doctor ſic defendebat, ut diceret, multum inter ſe, & ceteros Laidis amatores intereſſe, quod ipſe haberet Laidem, alii vero à Laide haberentur. O præclara, & imitanda bonis ſapientia: hunc vero libenter in diſcipulum dares, ut diſceret habere meretricem. Aliquid inter ſe, ac perditos intereſſe dicebat, ſciret, quibus illa bona ſua perderent, ipſe gratis luxuriaretur. In qua tamen ſapientior meretrix fuit, quæ philoſophum habuit pro lenone, ut ad ſe omnis juventus doctoris exemplo, & authoritate corrupta, ſine ullo pudore concurreret. The Reflection of this Father of the Church is very wrong; he do's not ſeem to have underſtood the Thought of the Philoſopher. Ariſtippus's meaning was this, I go to Lais, I am in Poſſeſſion of this right (f); but ſhe do's not keep me under, I remain ſtill Maſter of this Correſpondence, and I can leave it, whenever I pleaſe. He meant not as Lactantius ſuppoſes, that this Commerce coſt him nothing. I have mention'd above the Complaint of Ariſtippus's Servant on Account of the great expences his Maſter was at to purchase Lais. I ought not to forget that this Philoſopher (g) Dedicated ſome Books to that Curtezan.

(G) That ſhe never beſtowed her Favours at a cheap rate till ſhe grew Old.] Epicrates (h) made very biting Verſes upon her. When ſhe was young, ſays he, ſhe was ſo haughty by reaſon of her Wealth, that it was harder to ſee her, than Pharnabazus. But now that ſhe is Old, you may do with her what you have a mind to; ſhe Drinks every where, ſhe indifferently admits the Old and Young; ſhe is grown ſo Humble and good Humoured, that ſhe offers her Hand to beg a Favour. Athenæus relates theſe Verſes of Epicrates: He takes 'em from a Book Intituled Anti-Lais. Mr. Baillet has forgot it in his Collection of the Anti. 'Tis impoſſible to reconcile the Authors, who ſpeak of Lais. She was almoſt inacceſſible according to Epicrates, when ſhe was Young. Another Author ſays, ſhe was called (i) Axine by reaſon of her rough Humour, and becauſe ſhe exacted upon her Lovers; ſhe asked too great a Price, (k) and gave no quarter, particularly to Foreigners; for ſhe knew they could not ſtay long, and had no time to bate the Price, that if ſhe took not from them a great Sum at once, ſhe would have no opportunity of recovering, what ſhe ſhould bate. See the Greek Words of Ælian, (l) in the Margin. Athenæus deſcribes her much more obliging. He ſays, that ſhe made no difference betwixt the Poor and the Rich, (m) ἀνεκλίνετο πάσιν ὁμοίως. She took nothing of Diogenes. Probably ſhe imitated the Charitable Phyſicians, who take no Fees of the Poor; but ſhe made it up upon the Rich, as they do.

(H) That ſhe took up then a Bawd's Trade.] There

(c) Cicero Epiſt. 26. l. 9. ad familiares.

(d) Lib. 12. p. 544.

(e) Lactant. l. 3. c. 15. p. m. 184. Ὅτι χρὴ γυναῖκα ἔχειν κοινὴν. Graeci dixerunt, ut Latini habere uxorem, de eo qui ad eam pro uxore cum venit, ventitabat. Latinae dictionis exempla habes apud Terentium in Andria I. 1. Quis Chrysidem habuit? Qua de re Muretus variar. lect. vi. 7. Menag. ad Diog. Laert. l. 2. n. 75.

(f) Diog. Laert. l. 1. n. 84. 85.

(g) Epicrates in Anti-Laide, apud Athen. l. 13. p. 570. Οὐκ ἔστιν ὅστις ἡμῶν ἀγνοεῖ, ὅτι Διογένης ὁ κύων ἐπεθύμησε τῆς Λαΐδος, καὶ ὅτι ἐκείνη οὐκ ἐδίδου αὐτὸν ἐντεῦθεν, εἰ μὴ ἀργύριον πολὺ ἔδωκεν· ὁ δὲ ἐπεθύμει μὲν, ἀπορῶν δὲ ἐφείδετο. Laïdem etiam Axine nuncupata eſt. Quod ejus cognomen ingenii ſævitiam redarguebat, quodque numerum quæſtum exigeret, præſertim à peregrinis, eo quod ſtatim eſſent diſcedituri. Ælian. var. Hiſt. lib. 14. c. 33. See alſo the fifth Chapter of the twelfth Book, wherein Ælian quotes Ariſtophanes Byzantius for it. (h) Neque admittebatur illa nimium quantum. A. Gellius lib. 1. c. 8. (i) Above Letter I.

Bawd's Trade. Others say, that notwithstanding the Pleasure she found in distinguishing her self by the great numbers of her Courtiers, she left Corinth, where she had always a Crowd of Gallants, (I) and went to Thessaly in quest of a young Man she was passionately in Love with. The Women of that Country conceived so much Jealousy against her, that they made a cruel end of her. They drew her into the Temple of Venus, and there Stoned her * ; or, according to others, over-whelmed her with the Stools that they found at Hand. All Authors don't agree that she died (K) in that manner. I have said in another place † that she performed her Apprenticeship under the Painter Apelles ; and indeed it seems that he got her Maiden-head, if we depend on the Authors I have Alledged. See ‡ how he answered those who laugh'd at him, under pretence that he had chosen a Novice: But if the matter be Discuss'd, (K△) we shall have reason to doubt of this Story. The Conjecture of those, who say that there were

* See the Remark L.

† In the Article Apelles Remark E.

‡ Ibid.

was no Deity among the Heathens, that was served more faithfully than Venus ; for generally the Prostitutes kept on their Trade, as long as it was possible ; and when the Wrinkles of old Age deprived 'em of all Lovers, they did not give over that Service, they betook themselves to the teaching of Scholars, and managing Intrigues. This is what Claudian says of Lais.

(n) Claudian. l. 1. in Eutropium v. 90.

Haud (n) aliter juvenum flammis Ephyreia Lais
E gemino ditata mari, dum fersa refundit
Canities, dum turba procax, noctisque recedit
Ambitus, & raro pulsatur janua tactu,
Sequè reformidat speculo damnante senectus,
Sat tamen, atque alias succingit lena ministras,
Dilectumque diu quamvis longæva lupanar
Circuit, & retinet mores, quos perdidit ætas.

This puts me in mind of the disabled Soldiers who have been sometimes mention'd in our Gazettes. When they can no longer bear Arms, they are sent upon the Coasts to Exercise the Militia. If you would have another Comparison, consider the Mule spoken of by a Greek Historian (o). Having done long services to the People of Athens, she was exempted from Labour, with permission to go and Pasture where she pleased ; but that she might not be useless, she went and placed herself before the Waggons, and in some measure incouraged the Beasts of Burthen that drew 'em. For which reason, it was ordered, that she should be kept all her Life at the publick Charges.

(o) Plutarch. in vita M. Catonis.

I ought not to forget a Blunder of the most Learned Barthius. He thought (p) that Synesius gives us the History of Lais, in a Letter, wherein he speaks of a Curtezan, who was at first Concubine to a Master of a Ship, and then to a Rhetorician, and afterwards to a Servant, and then a Prostitute, and at last a Bawd. 'Tis certain that Synesius do's not mean Lais, but the Mother of a Rhetorician, newly Married to Synesius's Niece: An under Match, which was extreamly ungrateful to that Author. Here is the whole Passage. Πλην εἰμὶ τὰ λήγοντα ὀρθὰ ἡ τὸν γαμβρὸν ἡμῖν μισῆσαι ἀνεπιμόνητος γοναλεγήσας αὐτὸν ἀπὸ τῆς ἐν φόμῃ Λαΐδος. ἡ γὰρ Λαὶς ἦν τις ἐξ ἑτέρου λογογράφου, ἀνδράποδον ἦν ὑπαιμαίου, ἐκ Χαλκίδος ἐνταῦθα, ὅθεν ἡ καλλίπυγος ἡ τοιοῦτον τὸν σοφιστὴν. ἡ αὐτὴ πάλαι μὲν ἐναλλακτὶς ναυκλήρῳ διεπόνει, ἔπειτα μὲν τοῦ ῥήτορος, ἡ τέτρῳ δουλίῳ, τρίτον μεθ' ἑκάστην ἑρμαΐδιον, ἡ λάθρᾳ τῇ πόλει ἔπειτα λαμπρὰς τῇ πόλει, ἡ πρίαν τῆς τέχνης, ἐς ἑσπερὰ τὴν ἐργασίαν ὑπὸ χαλκῷ μοιχίδι κατίλυσε, τὰς ἐν ἀλκίᾳ παιδαγίσκας, ἡ τοῖς ἔτεσι ἀθλιωτέρους. Nisi forte aliquid dicunt qui & sponsum nobis à matris genere verbis efferunt, genus ejus à famosa illa Laide ducentes. Nam Laïs (dixit jam quidem historiarum scriptor) mancipium fuit Hypparicum, emptum ex Sicilia unde nobis venit illa pulchrorum filiorum mater quæ celebrem illum peperit. Et ipsa quidem olim scortum fuit Nauclerî heri, deinde Rhetoris similiter heri, tertii deinde post illos conservi, & clam civitatis, deinde palam civitatis artique præfuit meretricia, à cujus opera postquam ob maturas rugas destitit, adultas jam puellas in ea instituit, hospitibusque pro se subjtituit. Here you see a Woman, of whom it might be affirm'd, that the last condition was worse than the first, for her Prostitution was less Pernicious than her procuring Trade.

(p) Barthius, Animadverf. ad. l. 1. Claudiani in Eutropium verf. 95. p. 1291. Edit. in 4to.

(q) Synesius Epist. 3. p. m. 21. I make use of Thomas Naogeorgus's Translation, and the Basil Edition 1558. in 8vo.

(I) She went to Thessaly in quest of a young Man.] What has been said of the Poverty (a) and the procuring Trade of Lais, do's not agree with what Plutarch says of her ; for he affirms, that when this Curtezan left Corinth, she had there a great Army of Gallants, and that the Women of Thessaly killed her only for the Envy they bore to her Illustrious Beauty (b). The Thessalian Spark she fell in Love with was called Hippolochus, if we believe Plutarch ; but Athenæus (c) calls him Pausanias. They both agree, that the Temple of Venus in which she was killed, had a Sirname given it, which denoted that Crime ; it was Sirnamed according to Plutarch the Temple of Venus Homicide, ἀφροδίτης ἀνδροφόνου, and according to Athenæus, the Temple of Venus Profan'd, ἀφροδίτης βεβηλωμένης. A Tomb was built to Lais upon the River Peneus with this Epitaph (d):

(a) In the two foregoing Remarks.

Τῆς δὶ σῆ' ὁ μεγάλαυχος Ἀνικητὶς τὸ πρὶν ἀλκὴν
Ἑλλὰς ἰδαλοῦ πάλλ[illegible]ου,
Λαΐδος, ἣν τίκτουσι Φρυὴ, θρέψεν δὶ Κορίνθος,
Κεῖται δ' ἐν πλατέῃ Θετταλικοῖς πεδίοις.

Hujus aliquando, magnanima, & fortitudine invicta
Græcia, formâ deabus æquiparandâ, victa & in servitutem redacta est
Laïdis, amoris filiæ, alumnæ Corinthi,
Quæ in nobilibus Thessaliæ campis sita jacet.

Athenæus confutes those, who said, that she was Buried in a Suburb of Corinth called Cranion. However 'tis true, that her Monument was seen (b) in that Suburb ; and nothing hinders but that it might be there and in Thessaly too : for tho' the Corinthians had not her Body, they doubtless erected a Monument to her. They Engraved upon it, a Lioness, whose Fore-feet rested upon a Ram (f). See Alciatus's Emblems (g). According to Pausanias, the Gallant that Lais went in quest of, was called Hippostratus. To conclude, I don't think Genesius's Conjecture to be solid. He believes that the Women of Thessaly Sacrificed Lais to Venus, as having made herself Odious to that Goddess, by the Ambition of equalling, and even Eclipsing her. He grounds his Conjecture upon their leading her to the Temple of Venus, tho' they might have killed her in other places. Verisimile est, says he (k), quod hac Lais ab invidis & furiosis istis feminis non simpliciter necata, sed tanquam piacularis victima Deæ Veneri in ejus templo immolata fuerit ; quia forma sua & pulchritudine Veneris ipsius gloriam affectasse, imo obscurasse, & ita indignationem & iram ejus in se excitasse videbatur. Nam quare ipsam non in alio loco, in foro, platea, vel ædibus occiderunt ? quare ipsam in Veneris templo lapidibus & scamnis obruerunt, nisi propterea, ut Laïda Veneris æmulam coram ipsa Venere in sacrificium mactarent ?

(b) Ἔστι δὶ αὐτῶν αἱ γυναῖκες ὑπὸ φθόνου ἀποκτεῖναι τὴν Λαΐδα διὰ τὸ κάλλος εἰς ἱερὸν Ἀφροδίτης ἀποφυγοῦσαν καὶ [illegible] ἀποθανοῦσαν. Ibi vero eam mulieres INVIDIA PULCRITUDINIS & æmulatione impulsæ, in templum Veneris adductam lapidibus obruerunt. Plutarch. in Amatorio, p. 768. A.

(c) Athen. l. 13. p. 589.

(d) Athen. ibid.

(e) Pausan. l. 2. p. 45.

(f) Pausanias ibid.

(g) The 74. p. m. 329.

(k) Jacobus Gensius Theologus & Medicus Fijsius, in tractatu de Victimis humanis parte 2. p. 482. 483.

(i) Ptolemæus Hephæst. apud Photium p. m. 472.

(k) Μοχὶ Λαΐδος πλησίον· ἀνῃρέθη δὲ ὑπὸ γυναικῶν. Ac ne Laïs quidem obierat jam ; cum subigeretur mortua est. Philetærus in Venatrice, apud Athen. l. 13. p. 587.

(K△) We shall have reason to doubt of this Story. Let it be remember'd that the Birth of Lais ought to be placed in the fourth year of the 89*th*. Olympiad, and that Apelles being at Sea, was forc'd by a Storm to put in at Alexandria under the Reign of Ptolemy the Son of Lagus, which Reign could not begin at farthest till the 114*th*. Olympiad. The most convenient Supposition for the Authors of that Story would be to say, that Apelles was but twenty years were two Curtezans (L) called Lais, is grounded upon this, that every thing that is said of Lais cannot be understood of the same Woman without contradicting Chronology. There's no probability, that she was the Daughter of Alcibiades †, or that she was (LA) an Author. We have a very pretty Epigram of Ausonius upon (M) the years Old, and that Lais was 25 at the time they speak of, and that he put into Alexandria the first year of Ptolemy's Reign: And therefore he must have been Born the first year of the 91st. Olympiad. But then, would he not have been near 95 years Old, when Ptolemy the Son of Lagus began his Reign? And is it likely, that at such an Age, he would have been in a Capacity of bearing the Sea, and doing what he is supposed to have done at the Court of Ægypt? Would this great Age have been passed over in silence by all the Writers that remain? These difficulties can't be remov'd but by supposing, that this Painter at twenty Years of Age entertained her, when she was already forty or fifty five years of Age. Now this is to suppose things quite contrary to Probability, and to what we find in Authors. It would be much more reasonable to suppose, that Apelles was twice Older than Lais. 'Tis highly probable that she began her base Trade very early, and consequently that Apelles did not Debauch her. Note, that the Fountain of Pirene, from whence 'tis said, he saw her return, when he was struck with her Beauty, was at Corinth. Wherefore if this Story was true, it must be concluded that he made some stay in that Town, which I don't believe any Author has positively said.

† See the Remark (L)

(L) That there were two Curtezans called Lais.] She I speak of, was removed to Corinth, when Nicias commanded the Athenian Army in Sicily, that is, the second year of the 91st. Olympiad. She was then seven years Old, if we believe Aristophanes's Scholiast (m). Now since Demosthenes durst not go to Corinth, but incognito, in order to lie with Lais, he could not be a young Scholar, but a Man of a great Reputation. He must therefore be supposed to have been at least thirty years of Age, and so Lais would have been then 67 years Old (n). Therefore there's no probability that Demosthenes had been desirous to see her, or that she would have ask'd a great Sum of him. It was another Lais, who asked Demosthenes so much. There were therefore two Curtezans called Lais. The difficulty would be very great, tho' we should suppose that Demosthenes made this Voyage to Corinth being about twenty years of Age; for our Lais would have been then near sixty. I find that many Authors go upon a Passage of Athenæus, wherein 'tis said, that Alcibiades was always attended with two Concubines, Namely Damasandra (o) the Mother of young Lais, and Theodota, who took care of his Funeral, when he was killed in a Town of Phrygia. This Passage of Athenæus is of some weight; for it supposes there was a Woman called Lais before her, who was the Daughter of Damasandra; nevertheless there remain great difficulties. In the first place Athenæus, who says so many things concerning Lais, makes no distinction; he speaks all along as if there had never been but one Lais. Do's a Man express himself thus, when he is persuaded that there are two, and intends to inform his Reader of it? Secondly Plutarch speaking of Lais the Daughter of Alcibiades's Concubine, says Expressly, that she was a Native of Hyccara in Sicily (p), and that she was brought a Slave from thence. Thus, according to Plutarch, the same Lais whom Athenæus calls the young, is she that was Born in Sicily before the 91. Olympiad; so that if she who asked such a great price of Demosthenes, is different from this, there must have been a third Lais; for she who in Athenæus's Account would be the first, must have preceded the Sicilian who was Sold in Hyccara, the second year of the 91st. Olympiad, and would have been still more incapable than the second mention'd by Athenæus, to receive a Visit from Demosthenes. In the third place, the great Sum demanded of this Orator, manifestly supposes that she was very young. A Woman do's not set such a value upon her self, when she is above thirty five years. Now as there's a great probability that Alcibiades's Concubine was already the Mother of Lais, when Alcibiades Died the first year of the 94th. Olympiad, we must say, that Lais was at least twenty years Older than Demosthenes; and at this rate, if this Orator at thirty years of Age had made a Voyage to Corinth to lie with that Curtezan, he would have been in Love with a Woman of fifty, who rated one of her Nights (a) at near 4000 Livres. For my part, instead of admitting two Lais's, I had rather say that the Greek Authors, who were ill Chronologers (b), have applied to the Whore of this Name an Adventure of Demosthenes, which concerned another Woman of Pleasure. Note, that in another place Athenæus says, that Alcibiades being General of the Army, had with him two Concubines, Timandra the Mother of Lais the Corinthian, and Theodota the Athenian (c). This plainly intimates that Timandra was then the Mother of Lais; and 'tis certain that the same Lais, who was Born in Sicily, was called the Corinthian. (d) Plutarch says so expressly. Note also, that Athenæus calls sometimes Lais's Mother Damasandra, and sometimes Timandra, and ascribes to Theodota the care of Alcibiades's Funeral; but Plutarch (e) says that Timandra was the Mother of Lais, and that she Buried Alcibiades.

(LA) Or that she was an Author.] Pliny (f) mentions two things, which he had read in the Writings of a Woman called Lais. He names her the first time with Elephantis, and the second time with Salpe, and a little after he makes mention of a Mid-wife, call'd Sotira. 'Tis known that Elephantis had writ some Books full of Obscenities. See the Remark N. in the Article Helena, and Suetonius in the forty third Chapter of the Life of Tiberius and Martial in the forty third Epigram of the twelfth Book. Galen (g) witnesses, that Elephantis had writ a Treatise of Cosmetacks. I have observed in another place the meaning of that Word. Salpe was of the Isle of Lesbos (i), and had writ a Book of Jests, or of Sports and Diversions; but there's no great Probability, that Pliny alledged her with respect to that Work. Lais & Salpe, says he (k), canum rabiosorum morsus, & tertianas quotidianasque febres, menstruo in lana arietis nigri, argenteo brachiali concluso, that is, according to du Pinet's Version, Lais and Salpe two very renowned Curtezans, say, that if one wraps up some Menstrual Blood in the Wool of a Black Ram, and puts it in a Silver Bracelet, it is good for the bitings of Mad Dogs, and Tertian and Quartan Agues. This is clearly to insinuate, that these two Women had writ a Book of Remedies. Father Hardouin affirms (l) that Salpe writ De Remediis muliebribus. The other Passage of Pliny, where Lais and Elephantis are joined, intimates the same thing. (m) Quæ Lais & Elephantis inter se contraria prodidere de abortivis, carbone è radice brassicæ, vel myrti, vel tamaricis in eo smigmate extincto; item asinas non concipere tot annis, quot grana hordei contacta ederint: quæque alia minucupavere monstrifica, aut inter ipsas pugnantia: cum hæc fecunditatem fieri iisdem modis, quibus illa sterilitatem, prænunciaret, melius est non credere. That is, according to du Pinet's Version, As to what the Curtezan Lais (1) and the Poetess (2) Elephantis say of the Menstrual Blood, and to make a Child dissolve in the Mother's Belly, and of the Coals made of the Roots of Cabages, Myrtles, or Tamarisks, and extinguished in the same Blood, there is no reason to give any Credit to it: for one of 'em contradicts the other. The same may be said of what they tell us, that a She-Ass will not conceive for so many years, as she has Eaten grains of Barley Pound with the same Blood. These two Curtezans say many Monstrous things upon this matter, to which we ought to give no Credit; for what one of 'em says is good for getting Children, the other holds to be proper against it. This Translator undertakes to decide a thing which Pliny has not expected. He says boldly, that the Curtezan Lais is here spoken of, and doubtless he means her, who makes the Subject of this Article. If he had said this, in a Marginal Note, he would have shewn himself less rash; but he gives it as the true Version of the Words of the Original, which is an inexcusable boldness. Father Hardouin has been infinitely more reserved; he confesses, (n) that he do's not know whether Pliny cites one of the two Curtezans called

(a) Lais negare se unquam pœnitere, nisi quod à rivali populo it, hoc facit minimi nostrarum deliciarum decem millia. Aul. Gellius l. 1. c. 8. Denarium decem millia, make, according to Gassendus 3722. Livres

(b) See Scaliger in Eusebium, n. 780. p. m. 402.

(c) Athenæus l. 12. p. 535.

(d) Plut. in Alcibiade fol. fin. p. m. 213.

(e) Ibid.

(f) Plin. l. 28. c. 7.

(g) Galen. in libris adversus.

(i) Athen. l. 7. p. 321. 322.

(k) Plin. ubi supra p. 588.

(l) Hardouin. in indice Auctor. Plinii, p. 128.

(m) Plin. ubi supra. p. 587.

(1) She was a Sicilian Curtezan, who retired to Corinth, where she was so much courted, that every Grecian Prince thought himself happy if he could be one Night with her

(2) She was a Whore, who made her self famous by an infamous Piece of Prostitution, hoc facit nimium nostrarum deliciarum kime. (n) Hardouin. ubi supra p. 11.

(m) Ad Plutum.

(n) Demosthenes was Born the fourth year of the 98th. Olympiad. See Exercitationes Palmerii, apud Lloyd voce Lais, & apud Menagium in Diogen. Laert. l. 2. n. 75.

(o) Τὴν θεοδότε τὴν ἑαυτῆς γαμετὴν. Junioris Ladis matrem. Athen. l. 13. p. 574.

(p) Γεγόνει δὲ καὶ ἑτέρα Λαὶς, ἡ Κορινθία μὲν προσαγορευομένη, ἐκ δὲ Ἱκκάρων Σικελικῆς πόλεως αἰχμάλωτος ἀχθεῖσα. Hujus ferunt filiam fuisse Laidem, quæ dicta fuit Corinthia, quum Hyccaris Siciliæ oppidulo fuerit captiva abducta. Plutarch. in Alcib. fol. fin. p. 213. D.

(M) the Looking-glass of that Lewd Woman, I forgot to say, that she was so much in Love (N) with Eubates, that she obliged him to promise her Marriage; but he found a way of evading his Engagement. As many Charms as she had, she could not conquer (O) the Continence of the Philosopher Xenocrates. She defended her self one Day (P) very Artfully against Euripides, who Censured her with Reason. Ta-

Lais, and he calls her Mid-wife, Obstetrix, whom Pliny quotes. If I found no Remedies for the Tertian and Quartan Ague, in Pliny's Words, but only for Barrenness, and Receipts for Abortion, I should be more inclined to believe, that he cites a Book written by our Lais, or ascrib'd to that famous Curtezan; for there are hardly any People so well skill'd in what can promote or prevent Conception, or cause Abortion, as those of Lais's Trade, a Trade, that takes up the wretched Art of doing a good turn to those who are afraid of Disgrace, a Trade in a Word, which terminates in that, when Age does no longer favour the other Functions. But after all, I don't think it probable, that our Lais wrote Books. However I would not deny that those which are mention'd by Pliny, and set by him in opposition to those of another Lewd Woman, named Elephantis, were ascribed to her. I question, whether an honest Matron, expert in Secrets, and a Mid-wife by Profession, would have been called Lais; for this Name like that of Chrysis and Thais, and the like, was bestowed upon the naughty Tribe, in the Works of the Poets. And it was doubtless in Allusion to that Custom, that a Book was Printed in France towards the beginning of the XVI*th.* Century, with this Title, A Dialogue of Aretin, wherein are related the Lives, Manners, and Behaviours of Lais, and Lamia, Curtezans of Rome. Aristaenetus (o) calls his Mistress Lais: He loved (p) her, and she loved him, without any reserve; for he says, that her Bones were almost Flexible, and that the Tracts of his Imbraces remained Imprinted on them, as much almost as on the Flesh which covered 'em. (q) Οὕτω μίντοι σύμμετρα ἦν τρυφερὰ τὰ τῆς Λαΐδος τὰ μέλη, ὡς ὑγρότητος αὐτῆς λυγίζεσθαι τὰ ὀστᾶ τῷ περιλυτουμένῳ δοκεῖν. τυγχάνει γοῦν πάντα μικρῷ χείμενος ἐπ' ἀναλόγοις σύνεγγυς παραλήπτοις τῇ σαρκί, ἃ ταῖς ἐρατειναῖς ἁπαλόταις ὑπείκει. Caterum tam concinna, tam delicata Laïdi membra, ut pressus adtrectans dicas lenta & ductilia ossa; nam ea fere una cum carne impressos digitos recipiunt tenerrima, cedunteque amplexis amatorum ulnis.

(M) Upon the Looking-glass of that wanton Woman.] Ausonius does but Translate an Epigram of Plato, which is in the Anthologia. He has done it very well:

Lais (r) annus Veneri speculum dico: dignum habeat se
Æterna aternum forma ministerium.
Ad mihi nullus in hoc usus, quia cernere talem
Qualis sum nolo; qualis eram nequeo.

This is to suppose, that Lais survived her Beauty, and that her Looking-glass became an useless, and even unpleasant Utensil. This agrees with the Authors, I have mention'd in the Remarks G and H, but not with Plutarch. See the Remark I.

You'll find in the Commentaries upon Alciatus's Emblems, some Latin Verses, in which Lais's Complaints are prettily represented. They were grounded upon two Reasons: The first was, that she found herself impaired, when she consulted her Glass; the second was, that she still felt the Flames of Lust; she complain'd, that she had all the Lascivious Desires of Youth, in a Body almost Decrepit. It was a sad thing.

Et (f) tamen idem animus stimulos sub pectore eosdem,
Et noto sensit fervida corda Deo;
Sic secum: Facie nimium vivacior, o mens,
Cur dudum hac anus est, tuque puella manes.

The truth is, that an Old Curtezan of Venice was represented under her Name. Accepi pridem à viris Italici soli, id scriptum fuisse in quandam meretricem Venetam, quæ ætatis lapso, seu decusso flore, quoties se in speculo conspiceret, fronte jam rugis obsita, misere contabescebat, & nihilo segnius ardore tenebatur (t). Horace has afforded this Thought:

Dices, (v) heu (quoties te speculo videris alterum)
Quæ mens est hodie cur eadem non puero fuit?
Aut cur his animis incolumes non redeunt genæ?

(N) So much in Love with Eubates.] Her Passion must needs (w) have been very Violent, since she was willing to submit to the Laws of Hymen, which would not have permitted her to continue freely her Prostitution. She discover'd to Eubates the Passion she had to Marry him. He pretended to give his consent, fearing her ill Offices: But he did non Lie with her; he put off that Affair till after the Games, in which he was to dispute the Prize. He obtained it, and did not mind his Promise of Marriage. He returned to Cyrene his Country, contenting himself to take along with him the Picture of Lais. He thought by that means, that he should be a Man of his Word. The Wife he had at Cyrene, thought herself obliged to Recompence so noble a Continence; for which reason she erected a Statue to her Husband. I am afraid, that Ælian (a) who relates this Story, has lost the Wit of it. Clemens Alexandrinus relates it (b) in fewer Words, but he calls the Man Aristotle, whom Ælian calls Eubates; and he quotes the Book of Ister περὶ ἰδιοτροπιῶν λόγων, de proprietate certaminum. He do's not agree with Ælian in all the Circumstances.

(O) Conquer the Continence of ——— Xenocrates.] Lais laid a Wager, that she would oblige this Philosopher to have a diverting Game of Love with her. She pretended to be frighted, and under that pretence took Sanctuary in his House, and spent the Night there, but he did not meddle with her. When she was required to pay her Wager, she answer'd, that she had not laid it about a Statue, but about a Man. Thus an old Interpreter of Horace (c) relates the Story. Diogenes Laertius Ascribes this to the Curtezan Phryne, and do's not speak of the Wager. He says (d), that she fled to Xenocrates's, pretending that some Body pursu'd her; and as he had but one Bed in the House, she intreated the Philosopher to let her have part of it. He consented to it. After that she made other Demands, which came to nothing. Whence it was, that when she was asked, how things went, she answered, she had lain with a Statue, and not with a Man. Some say, that Xenocrates's Disciples put Lais into his Bed, and that he was so fully resolved to preserve his Continence, that he several times suffered Incisions to be made in his Privy-Parts, and Fire to be apply'd to 'em. Ἔνιοι δὲ Λαΐδα φασὶ πεμφθεῖσαν ὑπὸ τῶν μαθητῶν, τὸν δὲ ὕπνον εἶναι ἐγκρατῆ, ὅτι ἡ τομὴ καὶ καῦσις πολλάκις ὑπομείνας περὶ τὰ αἰδοῖα. The Latin Translation runs thus, (e) Quidam verò discipulos Laidem illi injecisse in lectulum tradunt, illumque adeò fuisse continentem, ut cùm se ad libidinem incitari præsensisset, & secare & urere verenda sæpè pateretur. We ought not to be satisfied either with the Greek Author or his Translator. The latter adds of his own Head, that Xenocrates (f) found in him the Rebellion of Lust; and as to Diogenes Laertius, he do's not tell us what became of Lais: he puts her in the Philosopher's Bed, without saying what she did there, or how she came out again, and instead of finishing the Narration of this particular Adventure, he falls upon a general thing; that is, upon the Remedies which Xenocrates had several times made use of, to be Proof against Love.

(P) She defended her self one Day very Artfully against Euripides.] Euripides with a Pen in Hand was going to Compose something in a Garden. Lais seeing him in that Posture, accosted him, and ask'd him what he meant by some Words (g) which he had used (h) in one of his Tragedies, to denote in general a Man, who does filthy Actions. He was surprized at the Impudence of this Question, and answer'd her, (i) You your self are one of those I

(m) Ἡσιόδῳ μὲν ἐξαμίτῳ ἐμίγνυτο καὶ τοῦ γάμου λόγος προεγίγνετο. Ardentissime amavit, & de matrimonio sermonem intulit. Ælian. var. Hist. l. 10. c. 2.

(a) Ælian. var. Hist. l. 10. c. 2.

(b) Ὅτι Κυρηναῖος Ἀριστόδημος, Λαΐδα ἑρώτων ὑπερφυῶς μένος, ὑμωμοκὼς ὑπὲρ τῆς σωφροσύνης, ἢ μὴ ἀπόξενον αὐτὸν εἶναι τῆς πολιτείας, εἰ συμπεριέσειν αὐτῷ τινα πρὸς τὰς ἀλλοτρίας, ἐπιδὴ ἀναπεῖθε, χαριζόμενος ἐπιλαβὲν τὴν ὄψιν, γράψαι ἐκέλευσε αὐτὴν ὡς ὅτι μάλιστα ὁμοιότατον εἰκόνα, ἀνέστησεν εἰς Κυρήνην. Et Cyrenæus Aristoteles amantem Laïdem solus despexit. Cum meretrici itaque juraset, se eam esse in patriam abducturum, si ei adversus decertantes adversarios in aliquibus opem tulisset, postquam id perfecit, lepide à se scriptum jusjurandum exequens, ejus quam simillimam Cyrenæ statuit imaginem. Clem. Alexandr. Stromat. l. 3. p. 447.

(c) In Horat. Satyr. 3. l. 2. (d) Diog. Laert. l. 4. n. 7. (e) Id. Ibid. (f) Cum se ad libidinem incitari præsensisset. (g) Τί βλασφημεῖς ἐρέσσας ἐν τραγῳδίᾳ τοῖς αἰχρυντοῖς. Quidnam Poëta cogitasti cùm scriberes in tragœdia, Abi in malam rem αἰχρυντοῖς. Machon. apud Athen. l. 13. p. 582. (h) In the Medea where this Verse is to be found. Ἀλλ' αἰχρυντοῖς ἡ τέκνων μιαφόνοι. (i) Σὺ γὰρ εἶναι τις εἶ τῶν ἐπὶ τοῖς Αἰχρυντοῖς. Et tu porro, inquit, videris agere turpia. Apud Athen. ib.

(o) See his first Letter, wherein he makes a very particular Description of the Beauties of that Mistress.

(p) Λαΐδα τὴν ἐμὴν ἐραστήν. Amicam meam Laïda. Aristæn. Epist. l. 1. l. 2. init.

(q) Id. ib. p. 6.

(r) Ausonius, epigram. 55.

(s) Emblem. Alciati p. 330. Edit. Patav. 1661. in 4to.

(t) Ibid.

(v) Horat. Ode 30. l. 4.

Tatian * upbraided the Heathens with the Monument, that was Erected to the Debaucheries of that Whore. He calls the Sculptor who made it, Turnus; from whence we may conclude, that he was a famous Master in that Art, and yet neither Pliny, nor Pausanias, nor any other Writer make mention of him. I'll make but one Remark for the Faults of Moreri, (Q) and those of some other Dictionaries. There never was a more extravagant Confidence, than that of Antony (R) de Guevara. He has vented a thousand Ridiculous Falsities about Lais, as if he had found 'em in Antient Books. I had almost past over in silence the Adventure (S) of the Sculptor Myron.

* Tatian contra Græcos p. m. 17.

LAMBECIUS (Peter) one of the most Learned Men of his Age, was born at Hamburg in the Year 1628. He went early to study in Foreign Countries, at the Expence of the Learned Luke Holstenius his Uncle; and he made so great Progress, that at Nineteen Years of Age, he published a Book †, which was extremely applauded. He staid Eight Months at Toulouse with the Archbishop Charles de Montchal, and two Years at Rome with Cardinal Barberini. He was made Professor of History at Hamburg the 13th. of January, 1652, and Rector of the College of that Town, the 12th. of January 1660. He had taken his Doctor of Laws Degree some Years before in France. He had a Thousand Vexations in his Country, as well because his Scholars would not obey him, as because his Enemies accused him of Heterodoxy, and even † Intitled Lucubrationum Gellianarum prodromus.

(k) 'Tis the fifth Verse of Euripides's Æolus in Barnes's Edition.
(l) Athenæus, ibid.
(m) See Brodæus, Miscellan. lib. 6. c. 19.
(n) See Leopardus, Emendat. lib. 1. c. 7.
(o) Plut. de audiend. poet. p. 33.
(p) See the Remark (D) D. in his Article.
(q) Docte & acute dubium movet, atque Aristophanem dicere ea quæ rationi temporum nequeunt convenire, quippe cum eo tempore quo Plutum fabulam dabat non potuerit Laïs esse valde celebris, quippe quæ a Nicia imperatore capta sit in Sicilia septennis. Valesius, not. in notas Mauscaci ad Harpocrat. p. 124.
(r) Athenæus, l. 13. p. 592. See also Harpocration voce Naïs
(s) Amiot, in his Translation of the Life of Alcibiades at the end.
(t) Τιμάνδρα γὰρ ἦν ἡ παλλακὴ τοῦ Ἀλκιβιάδου, ἀλλ' οὐ Λαΐς. Plutarch. in Alcibiade.

mean. She fell a Laughing, and quoted a Verse (k) in which he said that an Action was not filthy, unless he that did it thought it so, Τὰ δ' αἰσχρὰ οὐ μὴ τοῖσι γ' εἰσορῶσι δρᾶν (l), Ecquid vero turpe est nisi qui utuntur sic putent? We don't know whether Euripides was confounded by this Argument ad hominem, or whether he made any Reply; but 'tis certain that Lais could not more handsomely bring her self off, nor more subtilly perplex her Censurer. This Maxim would carry the Philosophical Sin to the utmost Point, and would be of dangerous Consequence; for which reason the Philosopher Antisthenes (m) corrected it in this manner, πράττειν τὰ ἀσχήμονα μὴ δοκεῖν μὴ δοκεῖν. What is Filthy is Filthy, whether it appears so or not, to those who do it. Stobæus ascribes this Correction to Diogenes the Cynick (n) and not to Antisthenes, as Plutarch will have it (o).

There is reason to doubt of this Conversation; for since Euripides died (p) in the 93*d*. Olympiad, when Lais could not be above fifteen or sixteen years old; it is not likely, that he had any Discourse with her upon this Point or any other. We shall be more easily convinced of it, if we consider, that he spent his last years at the Court of Archelaus, where there is no Author, who says, that Lais had ever been. Suppose as much as you please, two Curtezans of this Name, you'll never clear the matter; for the first must be she, that was Sold, when Hyccara was Plunder'd by Nicias. But according to Aristophanes's Scholiast, she was then but seven years Old. By which Chronology, he offers a very considerable (q) difficulty, upon the mention that is made of Lais in Aristophanes's Plutus, a Comedy that was acted at a time when Lais could not as yet be famous. The difficulty will vanish, if it be suppos'd, that it ought to be read Nais, and not Lais in that Play. You'll find this Correction in Athenæus (r). 'Tis certain, there was a Curtezan named Nais, and probably many Authors have confounded her with Lais. Perhaps it was with Nais, that Euripides entered into Discourse.

(Q) For the Faults of Moreri and ——— some other Dictionaries.] Moreri's first Fault is to say that Lais liv'd in the 420*th*. year of Rome. She must then have lived about the end of the 111*th*. Olympiad: Judge whether this can be said of a Person who was removed from Sicily to Corinth, in the second year of the 91*st*. Olympiad. Here is no recurring to the Hypothesis of two Lais's, since besides that Moreri speaks only of one, he expressly says that he speaks of that Lais, that was a Native of a little Town of Sicily called Hyccara. This Lais is manifestly she who was seven years Old, when Hyccara her Native Town was taken in the second year of the 91*st*. Olympiad. II. 'Tis not true that Plutarch says that 'twas believed she was Daughter to Alcibiades. Moreri cannot Father this Falsity upon Amiot; for 'tis plain that in this Phrase (s) l'on dit que Laïs ——— estoit sa fille, the Word sa ought to be referr'd to Timandra, Alcibiades's Concubine, and not to Alcibiades. There is no Ambiguity in the Greek (t). How could Alcibiades be Lais's Father, who went not into Sicily, but with Nicias? Was not Lais then six or seven years Old? III. 'Tis not true that Lais went to Alexander's Camp; she had been dead a long time before Alexander was Born. Amiot has occasion'd this Fault, for not understanding a Passage of Plutarch (u) where some Words are wanting, he Translates it, that Lais falling in Love with Hippolochus ——— left Mount Acrocorinthus ——— and went to the great Camp of Alexander.

Charles Stephens is mistaken, in saying, that Lais removed from Sicily to Corinth, that her Prostitution might be more profitable to her. She was but seven years Old when she went to Corinth, and she went thither against her Will, having been bought to Hyccara by a Man, who carried her with him into Greece as a Slave. This Fault has not been mended by Lloyd or Hofman. I can scarce believe, that Charles Stephens found in any good Author what he says; 1. That Lais going into Thessaly, so gained the love of the young Men of the Country, that they pour'd out Wine before her Door. 2. That the Thessalian Women out of Envy stabb'd her, whilst they were performing their Devotions in the Temple of Venus, at which the Men could not be present. 3. That this Action drew upon Thessaly a Plague, which ceased not, till they had built the Temple of Venus Deiras (w). Lloyd and Hofman have both of 'em these three particulars.

(u) The right Word is in the Paris Edition, 1620.

(w) See Jac. de Guevara, Reflections, B. 1. p. m. 202. Translated into French by Guterry.

(R) Antony de Guevara. He has vented a thousand Ridiculous Falsities about Lais.] I will not stand to refute 'em, and shall only relate a small part of 'em. He says (a) that she was Born in the Isle Bithrite in the Confines of Greece, and as the Chronicles have written of her, she was the Daughter of a great Priest of Apollo's Temple, who lived at Delphos, a Man greatly experienced in the Art of Magick, by which Science he foretold the Ruin of his Daughter. Now this Amorous Lais was in the Voyage, at the time of the Renown'd King Pyrrhus, ——— who being a Youth of sixteen or seventeen years of Age, came into Italy to make War with the Romans ——— This Amourous Lais remain'd a long time in King Pyrrhus's Camp, and with him she came into Italy, and returned with him from the War ——— and retired into the City of Corinth, to make her Abode there, in which place she was followed, and Courted by many Kings, Lords and Princes. He afterwards relates the Adventure of Demosthenes, and concludes with saying that Lais died at Corinth at seventy two years of Age. How can a Man have the Confidence to publish such gross Falsities? There are above 130 years between the Birth of Lais, and Pyrrhus's Expedition against the Romans, and above forty betwixt the Death of Demosthenes and that same Expedition. And yet this Imposture has impos'd upon Men of Sense; for 'twas after him, that Brantome vented many Fables concerning Lais (b). I say nothing of Du Verdier Vau-Privas, who has given out (c) that Lais was a long time in King Pyrrhus's Camp in Italy. He had read this in Gueovara, and took it to be true.

(a) In Il. Traité de l'Inconstance, p. m. 750. Edit. de Paris 1621.

(b) See the Article Flora, Remark I.

(c) Du Verdier, Diversités Leçons Book 3. c. c. p. 185.

(S) The Adventure of the Sculptor Myron.] 'Tis one of the ridiculous Adventures of a grey-headed Lover. Myron, venerable for his hoary-head, went to Lais to ask a Night of her, but was sent back with-even of Atheism, and sharply censured his Studies and his Works. His unfortunate (A) Marriage, which he contracted in 1662, having compleated his Misfortunes, he gladly hearkned to the Proposals of the Queen of Sweden, who advised him to retire elsewhere. He therefore left his Wife and Country, and took a Journey to Vienna, from whence having had the Honour to wait on his Imperial Majesty, he went to Rome, and there made publick Profession of the Catholick Religion. He had abjured the Lutheran (B) long before, though he made still Profession of it. He returned to Vienna towards the end of the Year, 1662, and was very well received by the Emperor, who made him first his Sub-Library-Keeper †, and afterwards his Library-Keeper in chief, with the Title of his Counsellor and Historiographer. He continued in that Employment to his Death, and got a noble Reputation in it, by the Books (C) he published.

† D. 27. Novemb. 1662. Præfectus Bibl. oth. Augustæ vicarii, A. autem sequenti, 1663. d. 26. Maji, suprema ejusdem qua Mat. Mauchterus Th. D. se abdicaverat, Ephoria, cum Consiliarii atque Historiographi Cæsarei titulo, est collata. Mollerus ubi infra, quoting a Letter of Lambecius, which I shall quote in the Rem. B.

out so much as being heard. He thought he had found the reason of her Slight, and hop'd that if he should offer himself with a brown Head of Hair, he should be admitted. He therefore changed the Colour of his Hair, and returned to Lais: What a Fool you are, said she, to come to ask a thing of me, which I have refused your Father. Ausonius tells the Story very prettily.

Canus (d) rogabat Laidis noctem Myron:
Tulit repulsam protinus.
Causamque sensit: & caput fuligine
Fucavit atra candidum.
Idemque vultu, crine non idem Myron,
Orabat oratum prius.
Sed illa formam cum capillo comparans,
Similemque non ipsum rata,
Fortasse & ipsum, sed volens ludo frui,
Sic est adorta callidum:
Inepte, quid me, quod recusavi, rogas,
Patri negavi jam tuo?

Costar has given a List of some witty Sayings, ascribed to different Persons; amongst which he has this Answer of Lais: Spartian, says he (e), relates, that an old Man who was very grey-headed, having been denied some Favour by the Emperor Adrian, came to ask it again a few Days after, having painted his Hair of the finest black he could meet with. This Prince discovering the Trick, wittily answered him, What you ask of me, I have already denyed your Father. Nevertheless, in Ausonius, 'tis the Curtezan Lais, who makes this ingenious Answer, and yet Athenæus does not speak of it, though he has so carefully preserved to us, all the notable Sayings of that handsome Lady. If the Conjecture of some Moderns was right, we need not wonder that Athenæus says nothing of this witty Repartee of Lais; for they pretend (f) that Ausonius invented it. I mean, that knowing the Emperor Hadrian's Answer, he feigned that Lais made use of it, and made an Epigram upon it. I believe this Answer came rather from a Woman, than from the Emperor Hadrian; for one can hardly imagine any good reason, why an old Man, after a refusal, should fancy, that appearing as a Man without grey Hair, he should obtain from this Prince what he design'd to ask of him. 'Tis easie to conceive why he might hope for such a thing, if he desired a Love-Favour from a Lady. It seems then, that we may say, that the Writers of Hadrian's History, Men of little Judgment and Exactness, have confounded with his witty Sayings, those which he only related. He had read somewhere, what Lais is said to have answered Myron: Perhaps he had read, that this Answer was made to some other old Gallant, by some other Curtezan: He told the Story before his Friends; the thing going from one Hand to another, lost its principal Circumstances, so that at last Hadrian was looked upon as the Inventer of it (g).

I will not end this Remark without saying, that Mr. Costar praises this witty Sentence of Lais too much. I confess, the Answer was smart, and fit to mortify the Gallant, and to give the Curtezan the pleasure of laughing at the old Man; But in short, she reasoned very ill, and against the Rules of her Art. I have refused the Son, much more shall I refuse the Father, is the Principle of a Woman of Pleasure; her Argument turns upon this Hinge: but here on the contrary, Lais supposes, that since she has denied a broken old Father, she ought to deny his Son, a young Man, full of Vigour. This is forsaking one's Principle and Fundamental Rules.

To conclude, Myron could not be young, when Lais was in her Glory: He flourished (b) in the 87th. Olympiad, seven or eight Years before she came into the World.

(A) An unfortunate Marriage which he contracted.] It may be said of many Learned Men, that they behave themselves with respect to Marriage, like Pomponius Atticus with respect to Poetry. (i) Attigit quoque poëticen: credimus ne ejus expers esset suavitatis. They have a mind to taste it, that they may know what Pleasure there is in it. But I don't think that Lambecius had such Thoughts, for he married an old Woman; and as she was very rich, 'tis probable he hoped only for the Pleasure of having a good Estate. His hopes were quickly frustrated; the Lady was so covetous, as not to suffer her Husband to make use of her Estate. She declared her mind so suddenly upon that Point, that Lambecius had not been married above Fifteen Days, when discontented and weary of his Condition, he left his House and his Country, never to return again. (k) Ad hæc adversa postquam tædium Conjugii, inauspicato, A. 1662. cum Vetula Divite, sed parca, atque avara (A. 1690. Hamburgi defuncta,) contracti, accessit, haud difficulter à Christina, Suecorum Regina, Hamburgum delata, persuaderi sibi est passus, ut, duabus post nuptias Hebdomadibus vix elapsis, patriam & Uxorem, d. 14. Apr. A. 1662. desereret, ac Vindobonam commigraret.

(B) He had abjured the Lutheran Religion long before.] Nihusius a famous Convert, was in Holland the Director of Lambecius's Studies, he began his Conversion; after which the Jesuit James Sirmond compleated it at Paris. He would engage his Proselyte to take the Habit of St. Ignatius; but he could not induce him to it. (a) Cœtui Ecclesiæ Romanæ publice se aggregavit. (l) Sacris enim ejus diu ante jam erat initiatus, cum in Batavia Barth. Nihusio, Apostata celebri, ac Studiorum ipsius Academicorum Ephoro, tum in Gallia à Jac. Sirmondo, Jesuitarum doctissimo; sed externa Lutheranismi Professione Cives incautos hactenus fefellerat. Constat id mihi ex Illustris Gudii, quo familiariter ille apud Exteros est usus, Narratione, & Gallica, quam Idem asservabat, Claud. Sarravii, Senatoris Parisiensis, ad Salmasium Epistola. Huic enim ille jam, A. 1647. significat, Lambecium, Holstenii ex Sorore Nepotem, à Sirmondo, in Jesuitarum eum Societatem pertrahere conato, & Milleterio persuasum, ad Pontificios defecisse.

(C) By the Books he published.] I shall say something of those he published before he was the Emperor's Library-Keeper. The first was his Prodomus Lucubrationum Gellianarum, printed at Paris in the Year 1647. The second was, if I mistake not, Origines (b) Hamburgenses, sive liber rerum Hamburgensium primus ab V. C. & A. C. 808. ad A. 1225. Adjecta est tum duplex vita Ansgarii à Remberto & Gualdone scripta, ac notis Lambecii illustrata, tum diplomatum libri hujus historiam illustrantium Ennead. He designed to continue this History to his own time, but he only published the 2d. Book. Liber (c) secundus rerum Hamburgensium ab A. C. 1225. ad A. 1292. una cum diplomatum vetustorum, lucem ei afferentium, Mantissa Chronologia & Auctario Libri I. ab A. 808. ad A. 1472. Dissertatione de Asino ad Lyram, Monumento Ædis Cathedralis Sepulchrali insculpto, Scriptorum Autoris Catalogo, & Epistolis tandem Joh. Christiani, L. Baronis à Boineburg, & H. Conringii ad eundem encomiasticis. Here follows the Judgment that was made of those two Works by the Author, whom I cite so often in this Article. (d) Ambo libri (in quibus, præter nimii in patriam Affectus vestigia, passim obvia, & ab eodem subinde profluxerunt, quæ nihil facile reprehendas) summa diligentia & fide sunt congesti, & Narrationum singularum Veritas Locis Scriptorum ac Diplomatum Antiquissimorum, eum judicio selectis, confirmata. Lambecius printed a Book at Paris, in Folio, in the Year 1655, in which (i) Cornel. Nepos in vita Attici, cap. 18.

(k) Moller. Isagoge ad historiam Chersonesi Cimbricæ, parte 3. pag. 538.

(a) Moller. ubi supra.

(l) V. Epist. ad Ren. Franc. Slusium, libro 1. Operis de Biblioth. Vindob. insertam.

(b) Printed at Hamburg in the Year 1652. in 4.

(c) Printed at Hamburg in the Year 1661. in 4.

(d) Moller. ubi supra, pag. 541.

(d) Ausonius, Epigram. 47. p. m. 17.

(e) Costar, Suite de la defense de Voiture, pag. 55.

(f) Scaliger in hunc locum Ausonii. Baptista Pius in annotationibus posteroribus, apud Vinetum in Ausonium ibid.

(g) Joca ejus plurima extant. Nam fuit etiam dicaculus. Unde illud quoque innotuit, quod quum cuidam canescenti quiddam negasset, eidem iterum petenti, sed infecto capite, respondit, Jam hoc patri tuo negavi. Spartian. in Hadrian.

(b) Plin. l. 34. c. 8. p. m. 108.

published. He was about many others, but had no time to finish them, dying (D) in April 1680 †.

LAMBERT, Bishop of Liege, or rather of Maestricht. 'Tis a common Opinion, as I have shewn in another Place ‡, that he was killed by Pepin's Order, by the Suggestion of Alpaide; but the thing is not certain. This is what I shall (A) discuss. So many People have written his Life, that it is (B) disfigured by it. I have only read that which was printed at Liege in 1657, composed by the Sieur du Bosc de Montandré. The Title of it is, Le Courtisan Chretien, &c. The Christian Courtier sacrificed as a State Victim to the Passion of the Court: or S. Lambert, Bishop of Tongres and Martyr, sacrificed for the Interests of Conjugal Honour.

† Taken from Mollerus, Isagoge ad Historiam Chersonesi Cimbricæ, parte 3. pag. 537. & seq.

‡ In the Article Alpaide.

LAMECH,

which he displayed a great deal of Learning. I mean his Animadversiones ad Codim Origines Constantinopolitanas, & ad Anonymi excepta & ad Leonis Imp. Oracula. I say nothing of his Orations, which he published in the Year 1660, nor of some other Books of his: I proceed to that vast Work he compiled at Vienna, which the Reader may form a just Idea of, by these Words of Mr. Baillet. (c) 'Though the Catalogue of the Manuscripts of the 'Emperor's Library at Vienna, be divided into 'Eight Volumes in Folio, it is not yet finished, 'the Death of the Author having deprived us of so 'curious and important a Work. Lambecius had 'undertaken in that great Work, the Explication of 'the Manuscripts of that Library, which he has 'done in a Critical and Historical manner; resol-'ving to lay out upon it, all his Learning and In-'dustry; in which he has very much distinguished 'himself from all the Catalogue-Makers I have 'spoken of. It must be confest, that there are A-'bundance of very particular and curious Things in 'this large and stately Commentary: But the Au-'thor might have included the Substance of so ma-'ny Volumes in a narrower Compass, if he had 'consulted rather the Income and Leisure of private 'Persons, than the Magnificence and Majesty of 'his Prince.

(D) Dying in April 1680.] I keep to this Date, because herein I find Nesselius (f) more credible, than those (g) who place his Death in September 1679. Perhaps we might easily reconcile Meibomius and Nesselius, as to the Day; for the 24th. of March, according to the old Style, belongs to the Month of April, according to the new. But these two Authors differ very much as to the Distemper Lambecius died of; one says, that it was the Plague, the other that it was the Dropsy. (h) Henr. Meibomius Jun. (i) Peste illum Viennensi Epidemia obiisse perhibent, ad d. 24. Mart. A. 1680. Successor autem ipsius, Dan. Nesselius, qui Hydropem mortem ejus accelerasse testatur (3), ad M. Aprilem ejusdem A. 1680.

(A) This is what I shall discuss.] I shall make use of the Proofs alledged by the Baron le Roi, in one of his Books. 'Tis his Opinion, that neither Pepin nor Alpaide, had any Hand in St. Lambert's Murther, and he goes (i) 1. upon the Silence of Godescalcus, a Contemporary-Writer. Here then is a negative Argument, on which Dr. John de Launoy lays so much Stress. Godescalcus assigns no other reason, for the Murder of St. Lambert, than the Murder of two Brothers related to Dodon. These Two Brothers used Lambert very ill, for which reason they were killed by two of his Relations. Dodon, a Potent Lord, and of great Interest with Pepin, would neither suffer this Murther to go unpunished, nor to revenge himself upon inconsiderable Persons; he resolved therefore to make away with St. Lambert, for whose sake his Two Cousins had been murthered. This was the only Reason, according to Godescalcus, of this Bishop's Death. He says nothing of Pepin or Alpaide. 2. Mr. le Roi (k) observes, that the first who imputed Lambert's Death to Pepin, was a Canon of Liege, called Anselm, who lived in the XIth. Century. This Canon omitted not to say, as well as those that lived before him, that Dodon caused St. Lambert to be murdered, to revenge the Death of his Two Relations; but he related also as another Tradition, what concerns Alpaide's Resentment against this Prelate. 3. 'Tis observed (l), that Sigebert (m) suppress'd the ancient Cause, mention'd by all Authors, and spoke only of the new one, which Anselm began to publish. Thus you see how Errors successively and gradually encrease. The Authors, who succeeded Sigebert, said nothing of the ancient Cause, or else they have confounded it with the New, and added a hundred Circumstances to it, unknown to the first Historians (n). The Baron le Roi cites very grave Authors, who reject the new Tradition, and answer the Instance brought in against Godescalcus's Silence. They will have it, that the true Cause of St. Lambert's Martyrdom was suppress'd by him, to avoid provoking Pepin's Successors. Father Mabillon answers, that since it was given out, that Charles Martel was damned, one might as well have had the Confidence to say, that his Father had caused a Bishop's Death? (o) Et hæc ratio valuerit in Godescalco, inquit Mabillon, cur eam causam dissimulavit Stephanus qui sub extremis Carolinæ stirpis regibus vixerat? Sane longe atrocior erat fabula de Caroli Martelli damnatione, quam tamen Hincmarus Remorum Archiepiscopus, Adrevaldus aliique Auctores imperante Carolo Calvo Martelli abnepote in vulgus jactare non dubitarunt. Unde omnino incertum videtur an Landebertus ob inceptum de pellicatu Pipinum casus sit, at vero alienum omnino videtur à tanti principis bonitate & clementia ut cædis illius fuerit auctor. Father Jourdan cited by Mr. le Roi, makes no question, but that Pepin married Alpaide with all the usual Ceremonies, after he had divorced Plectrude. (p) 'Tis true, That the Christian Law forbad such Divorces and Marriages; nevertheless, humane Laws permitted 'em at that time even among Christians. These second Marriages had nothing of Shame or Infamy in 'em. This Historian observes (q) that Pepin and Alpaide had been a long time parted when Lambert was assassinated in the Year 708. Alpaide, adds he, had no hand in it, since she was parted from Pepin, at the beginning of the Century, and retired into a Monastery——— Ado was the first, who 108 Years after, imputed the Death of that Saint to Pepin and Alpaide. Hadrian Valesius cited by the same Mr. le Roi, observes, that notwithstanding the Canons, People married in those Days a second Wife, in the Life-time of her that was divorced, and that Pepin made use of that Custom. He says however, that others maintain, that Pepin never divorced Plectrude, nor married Alpaide, and that Beda favours this Opinion. He is in the right to add, (a) that 'tis probable, that out of Flattery to Pepin's Descendants, who reigned in France, Historians supposed, that Alpaide was married.

We find in the Supplement to Moreri's Dictionary, Mr. Godeau's Arguments against those, who on this Subject follow Sigebert's Chronicle; but those Arguments do but create Confusion. One thing seems to me to be certain, that it is of no use, as to the true cause of St. Lambert's Murther, to know whether Alpaide was married in Form, or whether she remained a Concubine; for since the Church severely condemned Marriages contracted after a Divorce, Bishop Lambert would not have failed to call Pepin's Commerce with Alpaide, a Concubinage, though Pepin had married her. Thus by supposing the Marriage, their Opinion, who say that Pepin was censured, remains still probable. And because a Prince's Mistress has generally more Interest than a Lawful Wife, 'tis no ways necessary, that Alpaide should be married to Pepin, to apprehend, how she could prevail with him to put the Bishop to Death, who censured them. Father Jourdan's Chronological Reason is in my Opinion, the best that can be urged against Sigebert.

(B) That it is disfigured by it.] This is Father Mabillon's Observation, which the Baron le Roi supplies me with. (b) Sanctus Landebertus——— plures habuit vitæ suæ scriptores, Godescalcum Decanum Leodiensem supparem, Stephanum Episcopum Leodiensem

(a) Baillet, Jugements des Savans tom. 2. pag. 250.
(f) He succeeded Lambecius in his Place of Library-Keeper.
(g) Henningus Witte does it in Diario Biographico.
(h) Moller. ubi supra, pag. 540.
(i) In Introd. ad Hist. Sax. inf. p. 62. 42.
(3) In Supplemento Operis de Biblioth. Cæsarea, A. 1690. edito. V. Tenzelii Colloqu. Monstr. M. Oct. A. 1690. p. 940.
(i) Jacobus le Roi in Topogr. Histor. Gallo-Brabant. lib. 7. c. 2. p. 250.
(k) Ibid. pag. 251. ex Carolo le Cointe Annal. Ecclesiast. Francorum, tom. 4. pag. 476.
(l) Idem le Roi, ibid.
(m) Sanctus Lambertus Pipinum Principem increpare ausus, quod pellicem Alpaidem Plectrudi legitimæ uxori suæ superduxerit, à Dodone fratre ipsius Alpaidis Leodii martyrizatur. Sigebertus ad ann. Christi 698. Quo mortem Sancti Lamberti male configat. Jacobus le Roi ubi supra, pag. 251.
(n) Id. le Roi ibid. pag. 252.
(o) Id. ib.
(p) Jourdan. Hist. de France & de la Maison Royale, tom. 3. p. 560. & seq. apud le Roi, ibid.
(q) Apud le Roi, ib. pag. 253.
(a) Cette haine paroit fondée, il est vrai, sur ce que Pepin épousa Alpaide du vivant de Plectrude, & légitima par ce mariage les enfans qu'il avoit eus de cette concubine. Mais il n'est pas vraisemblable que Pepin ait fait mourir un Evêque pour une faute dont il s'étoit rendu coupable lui-même. Il y a plus d'apparence que ce Prince, qui dominoit alors sur les Frisons, voulut punir la mort de quelques Missionnaires, qui avoient été massacrés par ordre de Radbode Roi de Frise. Hadr. Valesius rerum Francicarum tom. 3. lib. 23. p. 379. apud le Roi, ibid.
(b) Mabillonius in commentario ad vitam S. Lamberti, apud Baronem le Roi ubi supra pag. 251.

LAMECH, a Deſcendant in a right Line from Cain, was of the 7th. Generation, reckoning from Adam. The Holy Scripture † obſerves, that he had two Wives, one whereof was called Iladah, and the other Zillah; and 'tis believed, that this Remark has a Myſtery in it, ſince it ſerves to ſhew us the Original of Polygamy. It did not begin in the Poſterity of Seth, who feared God, but in the corrupt and depraved Poſterity of Cain, and from Lamech (A), who told his two Wives, that he would kill a Man. Such an Original, ſay ſome, muſt needs be ſcandalous. However it be, the Marriage of this firſt Tranſgreſſor of the Law of Monogamy, eſtabliſhed in the Terreſtrial Paradiſe, did not bear the Marks of Reprobation, if we may judge of it by Temporal Bleſſings; for Children proceeded from it, who had the Skill of inventing (B) many good Things. Now the Inventers of Arts were ſo much eſteemed, that moſt of 'em have been placed in the Number of the Gods. It was therefore a great Glory, and conſequently a remarkable Temporal Bleſſing at that time, to have the Wit that was neceſſary for Invention; but 'tis no ſign that God approved of Lamech's Polygamy. The Scripture mentions only four * of this Man's Children; but according to Joſephus ||, he had Seventy ſeven by his Two Wives. What he told his Wives (C) is a Riddle to me; I ingenuouſly confeſs it is above my Underſtanding †. I have ſlain a Man, ſaid he, to my wounding, and a young Man to my hurt; Cain ſhall be avenged ſeven fold, truly Lamech Seventy and ſeven fold. Many pretend (D) that he meant he had killed Cain, and Tubal-Cain; for there is a common Tradition, ‡ that Lamech, who had been a great lover of Hunting, continued the ſport, even when by reaſon of his great Age, he was almoſt blind. He took with him his Son Tubal-Cain §, who not only ſerved him as a Guide, but alſo directed him, where and when he ought to let fly at the Beaſt. One Day, as Cain was laid among the Thickets, Lamech's Guide ſeeing ſomething move in that Place, gave him notice of it; whereupon Lamech ſhot an Arrow, and ſlew Cain. He was extreamly concerned at it, and beat his Guide, † Geneſ. chap. 4.

* See the Remark B.

|| Antiq. lib. 1. c. 2.

† Geneſ. chap. 4.

* Vide Perer. in Geneſ. cap. 4. v. 23. & 24. Heidegg. hiſt. Patriarch. tom. 1. pag. 211.

‡ Others ſay that his Guide was one of his Servants.

(c) Ludov. Vives de tradendis diſciplinis lib. 5. pag. m. 300. Vide etiam, lib. 2. pag. 90, 91.

(d) See the Nouv. de la Republique des Lettres, for April, 1685. art. 1. & 2.

(e) Polygam. triumph. pag. 188.

(f) Ibid. pag. 191.

§ Ipſe autem inſuper habitis omnibus imminentibus & præconceptis difficultatibus heroico animo hoc primus auſus, & proprio facto verba legis catholicæ (crescite & multiplicamini) non leve debitum, ſed immanem imperatoriam, explanare, & bono exemplo omnibus ſuis poſteris præire voluit. Lud.

Leodienſem ineunte ſæculo X. Anſelmum ejuſdem Eccleſiæ Canonicum medio ſæculo XI. Nicolaum itidem Canonicum, & Reinerum Monachum ſæculo XII. Denique Ægidium Aureæ Vallis Canobitam medio ſæculo XIII. Felicior certe futurus ſi vel unicum eumque diligentem habuiſſet. At S. Landeberto, id quod pluribus ſanctis, accidit, ut dum auctores alius poſt alium ipſius res geſtas illuſtrare exornando amplificandove molirentur; eas è contrario incertis ac fabuloſis narrationibus inepte obſcuraverint atrocibuſque mendis fœdarint. This is the Origin of ſo many impertinent Falſhoods. The multitude of Panegyricks and Lives, will always produce this effect: no Body is contented with the Wonders publiſhed by the foregoing Authors; they therefore invent new ones, much more in favour of the Book and its Author, than in favour of the Hero who makes the Subject of the Book. I muſt except the Legendaries, for they have commonly more at heart the Reputation of the Saint, than any thing elſe; but the Reaſon is, becauſe the greater it is, the more it will encreaſe the Number of the Devotees, and pious Charities. Here follows a fine Paſſage of Ludovicus Vives, wherein he condemns the falſe Zeal which has ſtuff'd the Hiſtory of Saints with ſo many fabulous Stories. (c) Quæ de iis ſunt ſcripta, præter pauca quædam, multis ſunt commentis fœdata, dum qui ſcribit officii ſui indulget, & non quæ egit divus, ſed quæ ille egiſſe eum vellet, exponit: ut vitam dixerit animus ſcribentis, non veritas. Fuere qui magnæ pietatis loco ducerent mendaciola pro religione confingere: quod & periculoſum eſt, ne veris adimatur fides propter falſa, & minimè neceſſarium: quoniam pro pietate noſtra tam multa ſunt vera, ut falſa tanquam inutili ſint onerioſa magis, quàm auxilio.

(A) And ſlew Lamech.] The Author of the Polygamia Triumphatrix was a very odd Man; he ſpent his Eſtate and his Life in maintaining the Lawfulneſs of Polygamy (d), and yet one Wife had been too much for him. He highly commends Lamech's Reſolution of marrying Two (e) Wives, as an Heroick Action, and extravagantly praiſes him, as being the firſt (f) who attentively examined that Command of God, Encreaſe and Multiply, and who having well conſider'd it, made it his Duty to obey it, according to the full Extent of his Strength, by marrying two Wives. No Body durſt venture upon it before him; the Remembrance of Eve's Tranſgreſſion, and the Conſideration of Adam's Baniſhment had made People timorous in that reſpect. Lamech was the firſt who made that bold Step with an Heroick Courage, without minding the Difficulties that he was ſenſible of. He (G) commented not in Words, but in Actions, upon the Text of the Univerſal Law, Encreaſe and Multiply; a Law which is a true Commandment, and not a meer Benediction. By this means he broke the Ice, and gave a good Example to thoſe that came after him. Obſerve here how this poor Author was bigotted for Polygamy; it was his darling Notion, he thought the Scripture (g) mentions the double Marriage of Lamech, as an excellent Exploit; whereas Divines maintain with Reaſon, that it was with a Deſign to brand Polygamy in its Birth.

(B) The Skill of inventing many good Things.] Jabal and Jubal, the Sons of Adah, Tubal-Cain, and Naamah (h) his Siſter, whoſe Mother was Zillah, are the four Children of Lamech that are mentioned in Scripture. Jabal invented Tents; Jubal invented ſome Muſical Inſtruments: Tubal-Cain invented ſeveral Inſtruments of Braſs and Iron. The Holy Scripture, which teaches us this, does not attribute any Invention to Naamah, but if we believe the Rabbins (i) ſhe invented the Art of Spinning and Weaving.

(h) Joſephus ſays, ſhe was the Daughter of Tubal-Cain.

(i) Apud Genebrard in Chron. & in margine verſionis Gallicæ Joſephi.

(C) Is a Riddle to me.] 'Tis no eaſie thing to know how the Original Words of Lamech ought to be tranſlated. The Geneva Verſion makes uſe of the Future Tenſe, I will ſlay, and repreſents Lamech as a Man, who was to receive a Wound before he ſhould kill: but the Vulgar renders it, I have ſlain; and as for the Wound, one can't tell to whom it relates; for this Phraſe, Occidi virum in vulnus meum, is a Barbariſm which ſignifies nothing in Latin, and may ſignify any thing, as depending upon no Grammar Rules. Some Interpreters (k), well ſkill'd in the Hebrew Language, tranſlate it neither by the Preter-Tenſe, nor by the future, but reduce it all to a Conditional Propoſition. I would kill a Man with a Wound, and even a Young Man with a Cudgel, or with my Fiſt, if they would attack me. Now what way is there of fetching out the true Conſtruction of a Period, which is as much in the Future as in the Preter-Tenſe, and as much in the Optative as in the Indicative Mood. But tho' we could get clear of the Matter in the Grammatical Senſe, we ſhould not be far advanc'd; it would ſtill remain to be conſidered, what Lamech meant; which is no little difficulty. Nothing ſeems more remote from Probability, than the Thought of thoſe who take all this (a) to be a Rodomontade of Lamech: others take it to be a Menace to kill his Wives, if they continue to vex them by their bawling and Diſputes (b). But others on the contrary take it to be an Interrogation, deſigned to remove their Fears: They were afraid that ſome Body would kill him; he bids 'em have a good Heart, with theſe Words, Have I ſlain a Man, &c.

(k) Apud Rivetum. Oper. tom. 1. pag. 186.

(a) Vide Rivetum, ibid. pag. 187.

(b) Vide Heidegg. Hiſtor. Patriarch, tom. 1. pag. 212.

(D) That he meant he had killed Cain.] A Commentator (c), otherwiſe a very judicious and Learned

(c) Perer. in Geneſ. c. 4. v. 23. 24.

Guide ſo much, as to leave him dead upon the Place. This, ſay they, is the Way to make Senſe of his Words, which run thus, according to the vulgar Tranſlation, Occidi virum in vulnus meum, & adoleſcentulum in livorem meum; wherein he diſtinguiſhes his way of killing the Man (it was by a Wound) from his way of killing the young Lad, which was by Bruiſes, that made his Body black and blue. There are a Thouſand Abſurdities (E) in this Story, and in the Circumſtances that attend it. Suidas will have Lamech to have killed Two Brothers of Enoch, and that he married their Wives.

You'll find many Collections upon all this in a † Theſis, that was maintained at Wittemberg in the Year 1673. ſub præſidio Joh. Wilhelmi Hilligeri.

LAMECH, the Son of Methuſelah, and the Father of Noah, was the Ninth Man from Adam incluſively ‡. He lived 777 Years. Iſaac Voſſius || complains, that Sigiſmund Gelenius has foiſted into the Verſion of Joſephus a Fact that is not in the Greek Text of that Jewiſh Hiſtorian, viz. that Adam was ſtill living in Lamech's Time. This Critick in cenſuring this Fault, has committed another; he has confounded Lamech, the Father of Noah, with Lamech ſprung from Cain, as I have ſhewn in the laſt Remark of the foregoing Article.

LAMIA, a Roman Family. It was a Branch of the Houſe (A) of the Ælii, into which probably it entred only by Adoption; for it is ſaid to be deſcended from LAMUS the Son of Neptune, and King of the Læſtrygones, who lived in a Town which was afterwards called Formiæ. This is (B) the Opinion of Horace. So antient a Genealogy as this, with which this Poet flatters his Friend Ælius LAMIA, is doubtleſs the reaſon why Juvenal, being willing to denote a Lady of the firſt Quality, made uſe of theſe Words, quædam de numero Lamiarum †. 'Tis very probable, that he to whom Horace inſcribes the 17th. Ode of the 3d. Book, and whom he mentions in ſeveral other Places, with Marks of Eſteem, was * the Father of Lucius Ælius LAMIA, who died towards the end of the Empire of Tiberius, in the 786th. Year ‡ Suidas voce Αμαρ.

† Dereliquis Lamechi. Geneſ. cap. 5.

‖ De extremo ætate mundi, pag. 13. & 14.

* Homer Odyſſea lib. 10. mentions this Lamus, who, ſays he, lived in a great Town.

† Juven. Satyr. 6. v. 383.

* Glandorp, Onomaſt. pag. 14. ſays, he is the ſame who died in the Year 766. He makes him live too long.

ned Man, is out here; for he thinks it is the moſt probable Interpretation of Lamech's Words. He brings two Proofs for it. 1. Says he, Cain's Poſterity extended it ſelf to the Deluge, and yet Moſes confines it to Lamech and his Sons; of which doubtleſs there is no other reaſon than this, that Cain's Life ended in the Generation of Lamech, who killed him. 2. Says he, the only reaſon why Moſes has related the Murther committed by Lamech, is to point out the miſerable Death of Cain. I could confute theſe Proofs ſeveral Ways; but I ſhall only ſay, that Pererius ſuppoſes a Thing, which has no Probabilty, viz. that it was Moſes's Intention to inform the World, that Lamech was the Murtherer of Cain. If he had had ſuch an Intention, would he have left ſuch an impenetrable Darkneſs, in the 4th. Chap. of Geneſis? Had the Death of Cain any thing myſterious in it, which ought to have been involv'd in ſuch Ænigmatical Expreſſions?

(E) There are a Thouſand Abſurdities in this Story.] I. 'Tis an ill-grounded Suppoſition, to ſay, that Lamech was almoſt blind (e) with old Age, whilſt Cain his Grandfather was ſtill alive. II. 'Tis abſurd to make him go a hunting at an Age ſo decrepit, that he could not ſee his Game, and ſtood in need of a Guide to tell him when he was to ſhoot an Arrow. III. 'Tis abſurd to ſuppoſe, that the Reaſon which induced him to talk in this manner to his Wives, was their ill Treatment of him in that great Age; either (f) becauſe they could not withſtand his exceſſive Laſciviouſneſs, or becauſe of the ill Manners of his Children. What Probability is there, that at ſo great an Age, he could give occaſion to his two Wives to complain of his two frequent Careſſes? IV. 'Tis abſurd to ſay (g) that when Lamech had been guilty of this double Murther, his Wives refuſ'd to lie with him, as believing that the Race of Cain was to come to an end, according to the Oracle, after the Seventh Generation: this, I ſay, is abſurd; for God was ſo far from Threatning Cain to deſtroy his Deſcendants after the Seventh Generation, that he aſſured him, that Whoever ſhould kill him, ſhould be puniſhed Sevenfold. 'Tis ſtill more abſurd (h) to ſay, that Lamech led his Two Wives to Adam, and that he deſired him to catechiſe 'em upon their Refuſal to lie with him, and that Adam beginning to reprimand 'em, was interrupted in ſuch a manner, as put him to Confuſion. Does it become you, ſaid they to him, to teach us our Duty? let your Cenſures fall upon your ſelf, ſince for ſo many Years you have lived apart from your Wife's Bed. I omit the little Conſiſtence there is betwixt the Age they make Lamech to be of, and his Eagerneſs to make his Two Wives hearken to Reaſon. I don't ſay, that the pretended Recrimination would have been better imagined, if Adam had cenſured Lamech at their Requeſt, and upon the Complaints of his Two Wives; but I ſay, that Adam and Eve's Separation from Bed, after Abel's Death, having laſted, according to the idle Fancies of the Rabbins, but 130 Years, 'tis abſurd to ſuppoſe, that Adam was reproached for it, as a thing that continued till when Cain was killed. Iſaac Voſſius has upon this Subject confounded Lamech, who had Two Wives at one time, with Lamech the Father of Noah. Judicium eſt fabella, ſays he (i), Lamechum de uxoribus conqueſtum eſſe apud Adamum, illum hæ juſſiſſe ut ad maritum revertentur ac ſui facerent copiam. Iſtas reſpondiſſe Adamo ut ipſe prius ſuæ ſatisfaceret conjugi, à qua jam per centum & triginta annos propter ſcelus Cami eſſet ſeparatus. Verum quis adeo ſit hebes ut non videat narrationculam hanc eſſe ineptiſſimam? Ex ea ſequeretur Lamechum qui à Setho ſeptimus fuit diu fuiſſe antequam Sethus naſceretur. VI. 'Tis abſurd to ſuppoſe, that Tubal-Cain a young Lad, ſhould have been killed by his own Father; how could he have been the Inventer of divers Inſtruments of Braſs, as the Scripture ſays he was? To conclude, Joſephus ſays nothing of this pretended Murther of Lamech; ſo that Toſtat (k), who cites him for this old Tradition, has fail'd thro' want of Memory.

(A) Of the Houſe of the Ælii.] The Antonines, Emperors of Rome, deſcended from that Houſe; it contained Seven or Eight Branches, that were all Plebeian, viz. the Cati, the Tuberones, the Galli, the Stilones, the Præcomini, the Sejanus's, and the Lamia's (a). No Body ſays, that the Ælii deſcended from Lamus King of the Læſtrygones, but this was ſaid of the Lamia's, and therefore the latter muſt have enter'd by Adoption into the Family of the others.

(B) This is the Opinion of Horace.] Theſe are his Words (b).

Ælî vetuſto nobilis ab Lamo,
Quando & priores hinc Lamiæ ferunt
Denominatos, & nepotum
Per memores genus omne faſtos.
Autore ab illo ducit originem
Qui Formianam mœnia dicitur
Princeps, & imperiosus Antro
Littoribus tenuiſſe Lyris
Late tyrannus.

The ancient Romans were as ridiculous in Point of Genealogy, as People are at preſent. How many Families did they not ſay deſcended from a Conjunction of Hercules, or ſome other Perſon of the Fa-

Poly-

(e) Some ſay he was quite blind. See Polygamia triumph. pag. 185.

(f) Hanc traduht hiſtoriam, Lamechum in ſenectute male tractatum eſſe ab uxoribus, vel propter nimiam ejuslibidinem atque laſciviam, vel propter truculenta filiorum ejus ingenia. Pererius ubi ſupra.

(g) Gedalia in Catena. Fab. & Horring. hiſt. Orient. apud Lyſerum Polyg. triumph. pag. 192.

(h) Aben Ezra apud eund.

(i) Iſaac Voſſius de ætat. mundi, cap. 4. pag. 14.

(k) Vide Pererium ubi ſupra.

(a) See Glandorp Onomaſt. pag. 10. & ſeq.

(b) Ode 17. lib. 3.

Year of Rome, after he had been Governor (C) of Syria; from whence he was recalled to be Governor of Rome. He was honoured with the Funeral Rights of a Cenſor [a]. From him perhaps deſcended Ælius LAMIA, the Huſband of Domitia Longina, whom Domitian took from him. He put him to Death (D) ſome time after. There was alſo one Lucius Ælius LAMIA, who for having too zealouſly embraced Cicero's Party againſt Piſo, was baniſh'd. Afterwards he was made Ædile, and then Prætor, after the Death of Cæſar, in the Year of Rome 711. 'Tis thought it was he, who being accounted (E) a dead Man, ſo that Fire was put to his Funeral Pile, recovered his Senſes by the Activity of the Fire. Conſult Streinnius's Roman Families, and Glandorp's Onomaſticon [b].

LAMIA, a Town of Theſſaly. 'Tis chiefly memorable for the Battle that was fought in its Territory, betwixt the Athenians, aſſiſted by the other Greeks, and Antipater, Governor of Macedonia. 'Twas after the Death of Alexander. The Succeſs of that Battle was very fatal to the Athenians, and to many other Towns of Greece, Suidas [c] is miſtaken in ſaying, that Antipater loſt the Battle.

LAMIA, the Daughter of Neptune. The Greeks ſaid, that the Africans named her Sibylla, that ſhe was the firſt Woman that propheſied, and that Jupiter had a Daughter by her, named Herophyle, who was one of the Sibyls *. Others ſay, that Lamia was a handſome (A) African Woman, by whom Jupiter had ſome Children, and that Juno deſtroy'd 'em all out of Jealouſie; which threw the Mother into a ſuch a violent Grief, that ſhe not only became ugly, but alſo ſo cruel, as to ſteal away Children and kill 'em †. Hence doubtleſs came the Popular Tradition, which the Poets (B) adopted upon the Stage. Lamia, or the LAMIÆ, were ſpoken of under another Notion; for it was ſaid, that they could part with their Eyes, and put 'em in again when they thought fit. They took 'em out in their own Houſes, and put them on again when they went abroad. This is the Emblem (C) of Curioſity and Self-Love. Philoſtratus repreſents 'em (D) very Laſcivious. I know not whether (E) the Fiſh LAMIA had its Name from what the Fables ſaid of the Lamiæ, or whether the latter owed their Name to that Fiſh. Moreri's Faults (F) are not conſiderable.

LAMIA, a celebrated Curteſan, the Daughter of an Athenian, named * Cleanor. From a Flute-Player, which was her Profeſſion, ſhe became the Concubine of Ptolemy I. King

[a] See the Remark C. Letter e. Pag. 14. &c. ſeq.

[b] Diodor. Siculus lib. 18. Pauſanias lib. 7. pag. 251.

[c] Suidas in Λάμια.

* Pauſan. lib. 10. pag. 327.

† Suidas in Λάμια.

See what Aſpacius in Ariſt. de morib. l. 7. cap. ſays of a Lamia in Pontus.

* Polemo apud Athenæum, lib. 13. pag. 577.

(a) Et regnata Lamo Cajeta. Sil. Ital. lib. 8. See Dauqueius's Notes.

(b) Lib. 1. cap. 33.

(c) Extremo anni mors Ælii Lamia funere cenſorio celebrata, qui adminiſtrandæ Suriæ imagine tandem exſolutus ubi præfuerat. Genus illi decorum, vivida ſe nectus; & non permiſſa provincia dignationem addiderat. Tacit. Annal. lib. 6. cap. 27. ad ann. 786.

(d) Idem lib. 4. c. 13.

(e) Sed periit poſtquam Cerdonibus eſſe timendus Cœperat, hoc nocuit Lamitarum cade Maxim. l. 1. c. 8. p.m. 118. (i) Plinius, l. 7. c. 52. (k) In Suidas in voce Λαμία. (l) In pacem. (m) Euripides apud Bochart. Geograph. ſacr. lib. 1. cap. 33. (n) Ἄντρον ὑπόγειον, κατὰ τὴν ἐμπόριον συντεθειμένον ἐν ᾧ μυθεύουσι γεγονέναι τὴν Λιβύης βασίλισσαν Λαμίαν, Vaſtum antrum hedera & taxo conſitum, in quo Reginam Lamiam natam eſſe fabulantur. Diod. Sicul. l. 20. apud Bochart ibid. (o) Ibid. (p) Horat. de arte poet.

bulous Ages? Silius Italicus believed, that Lamus had reigned (c) in Caieta. See Bochart's Geographia Sacra.

(C) Governor of Syria.] He had only the Title of it, and did not keep it long; the Injuſtice done him upon that occaſion, proved glorious to him (r). He had commanded in Africa (f).

(D) He put him to Death ſome time after.] I ſpeak of it in the Article of Domitia Longina, where I cite the neceſſary Authorities. Juvenal (g) alludes to the Death of this Lamia in the Fourth Satir.

(E) Who being accounted a dead Man--recover'd his Senſes.] See what Valerius Maximus ſays of it: (h) Lucque Lamiæ prætorio viro æquè vocem fuiſſe ſuper rogum conſtitit. Pliny alſo makes mention of it (i).

(A) A handſome African Woman.] Many Authors agree in making Lamia a Native of Africa. Doris, or (k) Duris does it; and ſo does Heſychius. Ariſtophanes's Scholiaſt ſays (l), that ſhe was the Daughter of Belus and Libya. Conſider this Paſſage of Euripides.

Τὶς (m) πόντου τὸν ἀνήνιδον βροτοῖς
Οὐκ οἶδ' Ἀφρικῆς τῆς Λιβυστικῆς γένος;

Quis Africanæ neſciat Lamiæ genus
Infame nomen & tetrum mortalibus?

Didorus Siculus relates, that Ophellas, King of Cyrene going to meet Agathocles, who made War with the Carthaginians, found (n) a Cavern, wherein it was ſaid that Queen Lamia was born. Bochart (o) thinks that the Name Lamia is derived from the Punick Word Laham, or Lahama, which ſignifies ſtill among the Arabians, to devour.

(B) Which the Poets adopted upon the Stage.] 'Tis upon this that Horace gives 'em a good Advice.

Fiſta (p) voluptatis cauſa ſint proxima veris,
Nec quodcumque volet, poſcat ſibi fabula credi,
Neu pranſæ Lamiæ vivum puerum extrahat alvo.

Philoſtratus ſays, that the Lamiæ were fond (q) of humane Fleſh. Among the old Womens Stories in ſome Countries, there are Abundance, in which ſome Fairies are mention'd, as great Eaters of Children.

(C) 'Tis the Emblem of Curioſity.] Conſult Plutarch (r), who ſays, that (like Lamia, who was blind at Home, and when ſhe went out, took her Eyes out of a Box, where ſhe kept 'em) every Man is very intent upon the Faults of his Neighbour, but makes no uſe of his Eyes to diſcover his own Vices.

(D) Philoſtratus repreſents 'em very Laſcivious.] He ſays (s), that out of a Principle of Wantonneſs, they inticed the Men, whom they deſired to devour, in a proper time; and that they eſpecially delighted to eat handſome Boys, when they were grown fat and plump. It was not eaſie methinks, to grow fat in the Service of thoſe laſcivious Creatures. Philoſtratus ſhould have thought of this Difficulty. Perhaps one might apply to the preſent Subject, the Explication which ſome have given of the Fable of Diomedes King of Thrace, who fed his Horſes with the Fleſh of his Gueſts. The meaning of which is, according to ſome, that he forced 'em to ſatisfie the Luſt of his Daughters, till they had nothing left but Skin and Bones. (t) Diomedes Thraciæ Rex cum aliquot haberet filias ſalaciſſimas, cogebat hoſpites ut earum libidinem ſatiarent; dictus ob id equas humanis carnibus paſcere; equa enim & mulier ſola animalium appetunt marem etiam prægnantes, unde equiendi vocabulum, ut ait Ariſtoteles (1), trahitur maledicto in fœminas procaces: comedunt verò carnes humanas, cum viros exfugunt, & coitu emaciatos ad talem perducunt; ut rectè Solomon (2) à mulierum conſuetudine revocet adoleſcentes, ne fruſtrà gemere incipiant, poſteaquàm carnes ſuas conſumpſerint.

(E) Whether the Fiſh LAMIA.] It is a Fiſh of a prodigious Bulk and Voracity. Some time the whole Body of a Man was found in it. See Mr. Ray in his Hiſtory of Fiſhes, and the following Remark, where I cenſure Calepin.

(F) Moreri's Faults are not conſiderable.] I. Pharamus, who is (x) a Modern Author ſhould, not have been cited. II. Much leſs ought he to be cited before Suidas. III. Inſtead of ſaying, that the Antients gave the Lamiæ the Name of Lares, he ſhould have ſaid Larvæ. IV. He ought not to have cited Rhodiginus, but Philoſtratus, from whom he took (h) all that he ſaid of the Lamiæ. V. He ſhould however have cited the 29th, and not the 40th.

(q) Ἔφησε, τὰ μαλακία ἀνθρώπινον ἐσθίειν. Carnes autem humanas præ cæteris primis. Philoſtrat. in vita Apollon. lib. 4.

(r) Plut. de curioſitate, init. p.m. 515. 516.

(f) Vid. ſupra.

(s) Balthaſar Bonifacius Hiſtoria Judicii lib. 5. cap. 2. p.m. 125.

(1) Ariſt. de gener. animal. l. 4. c. 5. Idem hiſt. animal. l. 6. c. 18.

(2) Prov. 5. v. 11.

(a) He publiſhed his Dictionary in the Year 1523.

(b) Lloyd and Hofman ſeem to have been ignorant of this.

King of Egypt; but before that, she had made her self famous (A) as a Woman of Pleasure. She was taken with many of her Companions * in the Sea-Fight, wherein Demetrius Poliorcetes obtained the Victory over that Prince, near the Isle of Cyprus. Being brought to Demetrius, she appeared so charming to him, though she began (A) to decline, that she was afterwards his most beloved Mistress. For this reason it was said that the others loved him, but that he loved her. He was (B) jested upon on this Account. He so loaded her with Riches, that she found her self in a Capacity of making

* Plut. in Demetrio, p. 895. F.

40th. Book, for his Antiquæ Lectiones contain only Thirty Books. VI. He should not have cited Pliny, since he said nothing of the Fish he calls (c) Lamia; and yet Moreri wanted an Author, who had considered the Lamia as extraordinary Fishes. This puts me in mind of a false Citation, that I have observed in Calepin; Pliny is cited there, Lib. 29. Cap. 24. immediately after these Words, Lamia item piscis est (unde & Lamiarum strigum nomen, quod ut Lamiæ sint voracissimæ, à λαιμὸς guttur) tanto ovis vitiu tantaque voracitatis ut & longatum hominem devorasse compertus sit. Itaque de hoc intelligunt qui Jonam deglutierit. Pliny says not a Syllable of all this; however the 9th. Book should have been quoted, and not the 29th.

(c) Father Hardouin in hunc locum: Plinii, lib. 9. cap. 24. thinks it is a kind of Ray.

(A) Famous as a Woman of Pleasure.] Plutarch affirms it. These are his Words; (d) Ἡ δὲ τῶν ἑταιρικῶν ἐν Λαμίᾳ, τὴν μὲν ἀρχὴν συνδιέφθειρε δεῖν τῶν τέχνην, ᾠδὴν γὰρ αὐλεῖν οὐκ ἐπιστᾶται ἔτερον οὐδὲν τῶν ἰδιωτικῶν λαμπρὸν γυναικί. In his nobilis illa fuit Lamia, quæ initio propter artem fuit in scena habita. Siquidem scienter tibia canebat. Post extitit commercio meretricio celebris. When a Woman is paid for Singing, Dancing, or Playing upon the Instruments; I mean, when she makes a Trade of it on the Stage, or in solemn Assemblies, 'tis the High-way to Debauchery. No wonder then, if our Lamia, from a Fluter, became a Whore.

(d) Plut. in Demetrio, p. 895. E.

(e) Δημητρίῳ δ' ὁ Πολιορκητὴς ἐπιμανῆναι λέγεται τὴν αὐλητρίδα, ἣν καὶ ἐρῶσαν ἔσχε καὶ Σφυρίδιον ἐκάλει. Demetrius Poliorcetes (and not Phalereus, as 'tis in Athenæus's Translation) Lamiam tibicinem amavit perdilectissime, ex eaque gnatam Philam suscepit. Athen. lib. 13. pag. 577.

(A) Though she began to decline.] I would have used more proper Terms, to represent her old, if I had only consulted Plutarch; but having read in Athenæus (e) that she had a Daughter by Demetrius, I thought the Expressions were to be softned. These are the Words of Plutarch: (f) Ἦν γὰρ ἡ Λαμία τῆς ὥρας, ἣ πολὺ πρότερον ἐξέλιπε τὸν Δημήτριον, ἐρᾶσθαι τῇ χάριτι καὶ κατοκωχῇ τῆς ἡλικίας ἔτι μένειν ἐφ' ἑαυτῆς ἐδόκει. Tunc vero etiam exolescente forma multo se minorem pellexit Demetrium, adeoque lepore devinxit & cepit eum, ut ob aliis mulieribus amaretur, unius illius esset amator. I shall set down another Passage below (g), that is no less formal. 'Tis commonly said, that in Families Love descends much more than it ascends; Fathers love their Children, more than Children love their Fathers. The same thing may be said of the Love of Men to Women; the Men are commonly older than the Women they love. But this Rule admits of many Exceptions; and even in Royal Families: witness the Dauphin, who fell in love with an old Widow, under the Reign of Francis I. I mention it in the Article of Diana de Poitiers. We see here a young King, led Captive by a Woman much older than himself. Nor need we wonder at it, since an old Curtezan, with some remains of Beauty, supported with Art and Cunning, may carry a young Man far. However it be, if Demetrius found great Charms in Lamia, the first time he saw her, she appeared no less charming to him in the Privacies they had together: (h) ἦσαν δὲ τῶν Λαμίᾳ τὸν βασιλέα ἐμμανῆ ποιούντων ὑπερπιπτόντων. Idem ait Demetrium ab incubante Lamia concinne fuaviterque subagitatum fuisse, & idcirco eam laudasse. It was not only her Agility, that made her so charming to Demetrius; she gave him amorous Bites, which probably pleased that Prince, as much as his Passion for her displeased his Friends. They could not dissemble it; for when his Ambassadors saw the Scars, which Lysimachus shewed 'em in his Thighs and Arms, they answered him, that the King their Master had some also in his Neck, which were the Effect of the Teeth of the furious Beast Lamia. We must know that Lysimachus had fought with a Lyon, and shewed them the Marks of the Wounds he had received in that Fight. The Words of the Orignal have more Grace than the Substance I give of 'em. (k) Δημήτριος μὲν οὖν τοῦτ' ἔφη πρὸς Λυσίμαχον, τὸν ἐπιθέσθαι

(b) Macrobius, apud Athen. ubi supra.

(k) Plut. in Demetr. pag. 901.

(B) He was jested upon.] People wondered (l) to see Demetrius, who was immediately dis-oblig'd with his Wife Phila, because she began to decline, such a Slave to Lamia, who was already in Decay. [illegible] Day asked Demo, what she thought of La-mia, who was playing on the Flute at a Meal. She is old enough, said Demo. When the Defect was [illegible] not see, said he to Demo, how many [illegible] owe. My Mother, answered Demo, [illegible] would have lain with her (m). [illegible] man, who had been Con[illegible] Father, and who [illegible] Mania, at [illegible] Lamia, a Song, two [illegible] Notes where note a violent Hatred between Lysimachus and Demetrius, which gave Lysimachus occasion to reflect upon Demetrius's Fondness for Lamia. She is old, said he, the mad Curtezan, that I ever saw come from the Stage. Demetrius answered, I will have him to know, that my Whore is more honest than his Penelope (n). James Amyot has not understood this, he makes Lysimachus say, He has never seen a Whore play in a Tragedy. Plutarch's Words have not that meaning. [illegible] Lysimachus alluded to Lamia's Profession, and to the Tragedies [illegible] Lysimachus was [illegible] Lamia's amours, dicebat mox fœminam fore ex tragica prodiens (q) [illegible]. The Interpretation would not clear this. The sense of Lysimachus is, if we were ignorant of a thing related by Athenæus (o), namely, that Demetrius had find, that Lysimachus's Court resembled a Comical Theatre, [illegible] of it, but such as have only two Syllables in their Names. Thus he laughed at one Bithes, one Pitus, and some others, whose Names are not longer, and who were Lysimachus's chief Favourites. When Lysimachus heard this Jest, he only answered, that he never saw at his Court a Whore come from a Tragick Stage. He alluded (r) to Lamia, who was a Fluter, and consequently of a Profession used in the acting of Tragedies.

(l) Idem ibi.

(m) Idem ibi.

(n) Idem ibi.

(o) Athen. lib. 14.

(p) Plut. in Demetrio, p. 895. E.

(q) There is a Transposition in Plutarch's Text.

(r) Athen. lib. 13. pag. 577.

(C) She found her self in a Capacity of making great Expences.] 'Tis common for the Mistresses of Kings to be fond of immortalizing their Names by stately Buildings. Lamia was of this Humour, she caused a most noble Portico to be built in Sicyon, of which an Author (s) published a Description. She gave one Day a very noble Entertainment to Demetrius. There was (t) a Book upon this Subject. (u) Χωρὶς δὲ τούτων ἐκ τῶν Λαμίᾳ [illegible] ἐπιγράφεται δὲ ἡ βίβλος αὐτῶν Ἐπιτύχη διαλόγου. Præterea scorsum Lamia cænam reparans, Demetrium conciliavit, atque ob eam cænæ fumptus [illegible] fuit illa celebrata cæna, ut ejus nam mandaverit litteris. Quamobrem Lamiæ cœnæ quidam aptissime cœnam Helenæ coæquavit. Plutarch had been speaking of the great Sums which Demetrius (u) had obliged the Athenians to give to Lamia; and the Alds, that this Prince made many Persons give her Money for the Feast she prepared for Demetrius.

(s) Pausanias in Corinthiacis.

(t) Athen. lib. 13. pag. 577.

(u) Plut. in Demetr. p. 895. F.

king great Expences. She was excellent (D) at witty Sayings and Repartees; and as the Athenians carried their Flatteries of Demetrius to the moſt extravagant Impieties, they built (E) a Temple to this Concubine, under the Name of VENUS LAMIA, though on a certain Occaſion, they were very much diſcontented to ſee their Mony (F) beſtowed upon that Woman. The Thebans * committed the ſame Impiety. The Story we read in Athenæus concerning Demetrius and Lamia, is not fit to be mention'd (G) in a Modern Language. I queſtion whether Ælian (H) has exactly related what he ſays of theſe two Perſons. Plutarch tells us how Lamia (I) Animadverted on a Judgment paſt upon Love Matters. What I have ſaid againſt Antony de Guevara about Laus, I repeat it on the Account of Lamia. He has uttered as many Lies about the one as about the other. Brantome has been impoſed (K) upon by it. Moreri is very ſhort upon this Head, (L) and therefore I have not many Faults to charge him with. I am ſurpriz'd at a doubt (M) of Mr. Menage.

* Polemo apud Athen. l. 6. p. 253.

LAM-

(D) She was excellent at witty Sayings and Repartees.] Athenæus ſays ſo. Ἦν δέ, ſays he (b), Λαμία σοφίσμα ἀξιολόγως ἐν ἀποκρίσεσι τισὶ καὶ ἀπορρήτοις. Fuit quidem certe Lamia diſertis falſa & acuta, prorſusque in reſpondendo Athenienſis.

(b) Athen. l. 13. p. 577.

(E) They built a Temple to this Concubine.] They built another to Læna Concubine to the ſame Demetrius (c), and did the ſame honour to the Favourites of this Prince. Altars, Libations, and Hymns were not wanting. Demetrius was ſo ſurpriz'd at it, that he openly ſaid, that there was then no Citizen in Athens that had any Courage. His thought has been miſerably diſfigured by Athenæus's Tranſlator. He makes him ſay, that there would never be in Hell an Athenian of a great Spirit: Admirante ipſo Demetrio quæ tum fierent, palamque dicente apud inferos nullum unquam futurum magni excelſique animi civem Athenienſem. One Letter (d) put in the room of two others, has occaſion'd the prodigious change of this Thought. Theſe are Athenæus's Words: Ὥστε μὴ φαίνειν τὸν ἀμφιτρίωνα θαυμάζειν εἰ τοῖς γενομένοις, ἢ λέγειν ὡς οὐδεὶς ἐν ἅιδου Ἀθηναῖον γίγνει μέγας ἢ ἀνὴρ τὴν ψυχήν. This Reflection of Demetrius puts me in mind of an Exclamation of Tiberius: (e) Memoria proditur Tiberium, quotiens curia egrederetur, Græcis verbis in hunc modum eloqui ſolitum, ὦ homines ad ſervitutem paratos! Scilicet etiam illum, qui libertatem publicam nollet, tam projecta ſervientium patientia tædebat.

(c) Idem l. 6. c. 14. p. 253.

(d) Ἐν ἅιδου, in inferis, pour en outre, ſua ætate.

(e) Tacit. Annal. l. 3. c. 65.

(F) To ſee their Money beſtowed upon that Woman.] Amongſt many Violences which the Athenians ſuffered from Demetrius, nothing vexed 'em more than the order he gave, that they ſhould pay him immediately 250 Talents. He cauſed this Tax to be raiſed with great Rigour, and Speed; and when the Money was ready, he commanded them to pay it in to Lamia, and the other Curtezans ſhe had in her Train; this is, ſaid he, to Buy 'em Soap. Theſe words and this uſe was a greater Trouble to the Athenians, than the loſs of their Money. (f) Ἰδὼν ἐκφερόμενον τὸ ἀργύριον, ἐκέλευσεν Λαμίᾳ καὶ ταῖς ἄλλαις ἑταίραις εἰς σμῆγμα δοθῆναι. ἦν γὰρ αἰσχύνη, τὸ ξενικὸν καὶ τὸ ῥῆμα τῷ τρόπῳ μᾶλλον ἐπαχθὲς τῆς ἀνθρακικῆς. Ubi coactum argentum vidit, Lamiæ juſſit id, cæteriſque meretricibus quæ circa eam erant, ad ſmegma præberi. Pupugit enim eives pudor magis quàm jactura, & verba, quibus eſt uſus, quam exactio. At preſent we ſhould ſay a pair of Gloves, inſtead of the word Soap.

(f) Plut. in Demetr. p. 901. A.

(G) Is not fit to be mention'd in a Modern Language.] (b) De Lamia rurſum Machon hæc ſcribit, Demetrium aliquando inter pocula, varia genera unguentorum oſtentantem Lamiæ tibicinæ, ut illa non ita jucundè olere dixit, non nihil commotum & tanquam vellicatum, quòd improbans omnia petulantius illuderet, immiſſe ut Nardinum quoddam afferretur, & cùm pudendum manu confricuiſſet, ac digitis contractaſſet, dixiſſe, hoc Lamia obfacito, quantum à reliquis diſtet, cognoſces: illam verò ſubridentem reſpondiſſe, atque, ὦ miſer, omnium longè putidiſſimum hoc eſſe mihi videtur: regemque mox ſubjeciſſe, è regia tamen glande per Jovem eſt, ὦ Lamia.

(b) Athen. l. 13. p. 577.

(H) Whether Ælian has exactly related.] Demetrius, ſays he (i), who Reigned over ſo many Nations, went often in his Arms, and with his Diadem on his Head to the Curtezan Lamia. He would have very much Diſgrac'd himſelf, if he had ſent for her, but he went carefully to her Houſe. I make leſs account of this Prince, than of Theodorus the Piper, who rejected Lamia's Intreaties to viſit her. This is the Story of that Author: which I can't but ſuſpect; for Demetrius never ſaw Lamia, till ſhe was preſented to him, after the Naval Victory he obtained over the King of Ægypt. Lamia was no longer a common Woman; ſhe did belong to the King. If it be ſaid, that after ſhe belonged to Demetrius, ſhe had her Houſe a-part, and that therefore it is very poſſible, that Demetrius might be ſeen to viſit her; I anſwer that he would not have gone to her as to a publick Curtezan, but as to a Miſtreſs, whom he believed to be ſolely at his Pleaſure, and whom he had enabled to have a fine Houſe of her own. If it be ſo, Ælian's Cenſure comes to nothing; for when once a Prince is ingaged in publick Concubinage, 'tis the ſame thing whether he goes to his Miſtreſs, or whether ſhe comes to him: Nay, 'tis more Scandalous to ſee her Lodged in his Palace, than any where elſe. I am perſuaded, that Lamia had her Lodgings with Demetrius, and if ſhe had not, Demetrius went not to ſee her, as a Curtezan, who open'd her Doors to all Comers. And yet this is Ælian's Suppoſition, upon which he builds the Morality of this Chapter.

(i) Ælian. var. Hiſtor. l. 12. c. 17.

(I) Lamia Animadverted on a Judgment.] The fact is this: Thonis (k) an Ægyptian Curtezan had demanded a great Sum of a young Man who lov'd her. Whereupon the Bargain broke off; and the Lover withdrew re infecta. He Dream'd in the Night, that he Lay with that Woman; which cured his Paſſion. Thonis underſtanding all the Myſtery, pretended that the young Man ought to pay her, and Summon'd him before the Judges. Boccharis Condemn'd the Defendant to put the Money in a Purſe which ſhe demanded, and to move it ſo that the ſhadow of it might fall upon Thonis. This Judge meant by it, that Opinion is but the ſhadow of Truth, and that the young Man's Pleaſure in a Dream was only the ſhadow of a real one. Lamia, a competent Judge in theſe matters, ſaid one Day, that this Judgment was unjuſt, becauſe the ſhadow of the Purſe had not cured the Curtezan's Paſſion for the Money, whereas the Dream had cured the young Man's Paſſion (l).

(k) It was her Ægyptian Name. The Greeks call'd her Archidice or Archedice. See Ælian var. Hiſtor. l. 12. c. 63. and Kuhnius's Notes.

(l) Ex Plutarcho in Demetrio, p. 901.

(K) Brantome has been impoſed upon by it.] He (m) gives out ſome Maxims, as if they were Lamia's, which are only Guevara's Fictions. If we muſt take the Advice, ſays he (n), of a Curtezan, who was one of the moſt Famous in former times, and very well ſkill'd in her Profeſſion, viz. Lamia who ſaid, &c. One Francis Voilleret, Sieur de Florizel, Counſellor, Notary, and Secretary to the King and Crown of France, Publiſhed (o) as true Matter of Fact, all the Falſities he had read in that Spaniſh Author, concerning the three Curtezans Flora, Lais and Lamia. So true it is, that one bad Author is enough to ſpoil many others.

(m) Memoires des Dames galantes Tom. 2. towards the end.

(n) Epitres dorées B. 1. p. m. 260. & ſeq.

(o) In a Book Printed at London in the Reign of King James I. and Intitled, Le Preau des fleurs meſlées. See the 8. c. of the 2. Book p. 244. & ſeq.

(L) Moreri ——— I have not many.] I. This Expreſſion, the Thebans Conſecrated to her the Temple of Venus Lamia, is Fallacious: It induces one to believe, that the Thebans had a Temple of Venus Lamia, which they Conſecrated to Demetrius's Miſtreſs. Moreri ſhould therefore have ſaid, to avoid Ambiguity, that the Thebans built a Temple in Honour of this Miſtreſs, and called it the Temple of Venus Lamia. II. 'Tis not true that Plutarch makes mention of this; he ſhould have cited Athenæus. Moreri had this falſe Quotation from Charles Stephens (p).

(p) Lloyd has left out the Quotation of Plutarch. Hofman has done the ſame.

(M) I am ſurpriz'd at a doubt of Mr. Menage.] He queſtions whether the Curtezan Lamia is the ſame Athenian Lady, that was kept by Demetrius Phalereus. (a) An eadem eſt ac illa nobilis femina

(a) Menag. in Diogen. Laert. l. 5. n. 76. p. 221.

quam

You'll find a great commendation of this Lamia in a Book † that Mr. Baudelot Publiſhed in the year 1698.

LAMPONIANO (John Andrew) Deſcended from * an Illuſtrious Family of Milan, was one of the three Domeſticks of Galeazzo Sforza, Duke of Milan, who Conſpired againſt that Prince, and Kill'd him in St. Stephen's Church the 26*th.* of December 1476. It was Lamponiano that gave him the two firſt Wounds. He pretended to remove the Crowd, and to have Letters to preſent to the Duke. He was inraged againſt him (A) on account of a Law-Suit, in which he could not prevail with this Prince to interpoſe his good Offices againſt his Adverſary; he hoped to find his Account in a Revolution of the State, and he wanted an After-game; for he had ſquander'd away the main part of his Patrimony, and found himſelf as Vain, and as much addicted to Luxury as before. His two Accomplices were Charles Viſconti, and Jerom Olgiati. The latter was engaged in this black Conſpiracy by the Glory, which a School-Maſter (B), who hated the Duke, repreſented to him in the Murder of a Tyrant. As for Charles Viſconti, he was moved to it (C) by two powerful Reaſons. Lamponiano deſigning to Eſcape thro' the Women, was killed by a Moor. His Corps (D) biting the Ground was ‡ delivered to the Mob, who made it their ſport for ſome time †. Peter Crinitus (E) made ſome Verſes in Praiſe of this Aſſaſſin. 'Tis ſaid that this Duke of Milan had very good Qualities *, and that he Governed like a good Prince, without any notable Fault, beſides a prodigious Incontinence; which it was ‡ Equatius exempl. l. 3, c. 2. fub fin. fol. m. 95. verſo.

† Intitulé, Hiſtoire de Ptolemée Auletes &c. See the 7*th.* chap. of the 2. part, p. 317. &c. ſeq.

* Lamponianus infultantis plebis & plerorumque ad ludibrium concidatur, mirum lacerare perſecutus ut ſe rabiosus ejulatus eſt. Jovius ubi ſupra.

† Idem ſcripſit, ubi ſupra, p. 247.

(b) Thebanos autem Demetrio blandientes, Veneris Lamiæ templum excitaviſſe, ut Lamiæ ab eo amatæ memoriam colerent, ſcribit Cœlius Rhodig. l. 29. c. 5. Aldobrandin. in Diogen. Laertium l. 5. n. 76.

He can mean no Body but Demetrius Phalereus, of whom he had been ſpeaking.

(c) Paulus Jovius in elogio Galeacii Sforiæ, l. 3. elog. p. m. 244.

(d) Call'd Pauſanias.

(e) Pauſaniam Attalus mero onuſtum nefariis convivarum ludibriis expoſuerat. Freinſhem. Supplem. in Quint. Curt. l. 1. c. 9.

(f) Adoleſcens, odium ab auctore injuriæ in negligentem ejus vindicem convertit. Id. Ibid.

(g) Jovius ubi ſupra p. 245.

(h) Hujus Colæ diris cohortationibus conjurationem inchoatam ad exitumque perductam fuiſſe, Olgiatus ipſe ex quæſtione perſcripſit. Id. ibid.

(i) Idem p. 244.

quam amabat Phalereus? In calling her a Noble Woman, he goes upon theſe Words of Diogenes Laertius: Ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐπιστολὴν γράψαι Λαμίᾳ τῇ ἑταίρᾳ. Verum urbana ac nobili amica Lamia utebatur quam amabat. If theſe Words be pointed thus, one may very well deny, that Lamia the Miſtreſs of Demetrius Foliorcetes was loved by Demetrius Phalereus; for the Miſtreſs of Demetrius Poliorcetes was only a Flute-Player, and conſequently was not of a Noble Family. Menage had reaſon to Cenſure Dalecbampius, who has Tranſlated theſe Words of Athenæus, Ἐμπάντας δ' ὑπερβαλόμενος ἐν ἑταιρικοῖς πράγμασι Δημήτριος ὁ Πολιορκητής, thus, Demetrius Phalerus Lamiam ſibicinem amavit perditiſſime; but he ſhould likewiſe have Cenſured Aldobrandin, who ſays (b) that the Thebans out of Complaiſance to Demetrius Phalereus, built a Temple to Venus Lamia, in order to honour the Memory of his Miſtreſs Lamia. Aldobrandin cites Cœlius Rhodiginus, l. 29. c. 5. Here are three things to be Cenſured. 1. It was not to pleaſe Demetrius Phalereus, but Demetrius Poliorcetes, that the Thebans built this Temple. 2. Aldobrandin ſhould have quoted Athenæus, and not Cœlius Rhodiginus. 3. He ſhould have ſaid that the Athenians had the ſame Complaiſance as the Thebans.

(A) He was inrag'd againſt him on account of a Law Suit.] The thing was this, according to Paul Jovius: (c) Ad audendum immane uſque adeo & periculoſum facinus vehementer incitabat illata ſibi injuria à Caſtellionco Comenſium antiſtite, à quo ſacri latifundii poſſeſſione contra jus interrupta locatione, ſe permique ſpoliatum querebatur. Totum autem ejus injuriæ odium que venenum vertebat in principem, qui à ſe ſuppliciter deprecante eam contumeliam, ſæpe rogatus adverſarium in extrahenda lite prapotentem, neque advertere, neque mollire voluiſſet. This puts me in mind of Philip King of Macedonia, who was Kill'd (d) by a Man, who could not obtain from him the Revenge he deſir'd for a bloody Affront. He thought no longer of Revenging himſelf on the Author of that Affront, but on the Prince who did not do him Juſtice (f).

(B) From the Glory, that a Maſter of a School, Enemy to the Duke.] His name was Cola Montanus, and he had been Preceptor to Galeazzo Sforza, who remembring more than he ſhould have done, the Laſhes he had received from his Pedagogue, order'd him to be publickly Whip'd. (g) Hic cola quondam Galeacii pædagogus dirum in principem odium concaperat impotentis ejus contumelia percitus, quod illepuerilium verberum nimis memor, poſtquam adolevit, imperiumque ſuſcepit, ipſi Cola tanquam immiti ſubagreſtique præceptori, acceptæ olim plagæ nudatis clunibus loro palam repend. juſſiſſet.. Cola exulceratus with this Affront, inflam'd young Olgiati with an Ardent deſire of Glory, by Murdering the Tyrant, and by that means reſtoring the Liberty of his Country. He exolled to the Skies the Merit of Brutus and Caſſius. In a Word, it was he, (h) who by his Violent Exhortations inſpired him with the Deſign of Executing that horrid Attempt. (i) Olgiatum puti imberbem, leviſſimumque adoleſcentem inani ſpe paranda gloria inflaverat Cola Montanus litterarii ludi magiſter; ſi occiſo tyranno patriam Libertatem aſſereret, ſæpe Caſſios & Brutos magnis extollens laudibus, ani gloria aut publicæ ſalutis cupidos, fatti conſilium olim ſuſcepiſſent. So true it is that a bad Leſſon is able to do great Miſchief and that Princes themſelves ought to take care, not to be hated by inconſiderable Men. There are few ſuch. Colt (k) being taken ſome time after fell into the Hands of Laurence de Medecis, who cauſed him to be Hang'd. The Courage he inſpired into Olgiati, in hopes of an eternal Fame, did not fail him at the place of Execution. Olgiati and his Comrade made their Eſcape, by reaſon of the Confuſion which the Aſſaſſination of the Duke cauſed in the Church: But becauſe no body durſt Harbour 'em, they were taken two Days after. Their Puniſhment was ſuited to their Crime; and Olgiati expreſs'd a great Conſtancy. (l) Olgiatus ipſe mortem ſuam diuque veſana conſtantia obſtinatum animum in ipſo ſupplicii tempore geſſens, ſeliquit in ipſa morte [illegible] mans hac ſua [illegible] Hieronyme, ſtabit cauſa mea [illegible] ent acerba, ſed tormentum breve, atque [illegible] perpetua.

Here follow ſome Verſes which he made in Priſon. They are a Proof of his Boldneſs, and contain an Inſult upon the Prin[illegible] he had Aſſaſſinated.

Quem (m) non mille acies, quem non potuere phalanges
Sternere, privata Galeæ dux ſorte in dextra
Concidit, atque illum minime tuvere cadentem
Aſtantes famuli, nec opes, nec regna, nec urbes.
Hinc patet humanis quæ ſit fiducia rebus,
Et patet hinc ſæco tutum nil eſſe tyranno.

(C) He was moved to it by two powerful Reaſons.] In the firſt place he was provok'd to ſee that the Sforza's had Uſurp'd the Dominion to the Prejudice of his Family. Secondly, he had a Siſter whom Galeazzo Debauched, and afterwards he imparted her to a young Fellow that was his Catamite. Germanæ ſororis probro quam Galeacius adamaret, atque ſuſtineret, permovebatur: tanto indignantius quod eam decoro adoleſcenti, qui ætatis ſuæ florem principi ſuo dandum dediſſet, conciliaſſe & communicaſſe ſuſpicaretur (n). This Prince (o) was reckon'd to Lewd, that not only his Amours were talk'd of, but alſo his Pimping. We have here an inſtance of it. The Womens Compliance. Francis Viſconti's Siſter not content to gratify the Duke with the title of her Body, ſatisfied alſo the Lewdneſs of his Catamite, when he pleaſed. Probably ſhe had no great difficulty in giving this Mark of Complaiſance to the Duke, ſince it was in favour of a handſome young Man.

(D) His Corps biting the Ground.] I may uſe this Phraſe in the literal Senſe, ſince Paul Jovius Expreſſes himſelf thus. (p) Ipſius Lamponiani [illegible] daver ſolum lingua [illegible] commordens [illegible] bat.

(E) Peter Crinitus made ſome Verſes in Praiſe of this Aſſaſſin.] They are in the ſecond Book [illegible] this Poem, and are intitled De [illegible] [illegible]

(k) Idem ſcripſit, ubi ſupra, p. 247.

(l) Idem ſcripſit, ubi ſupra, p. 244.

(m) Idem ſcripſit, ubi ſupra, p. 244.

(n) Principem omnium in amore impotentem, qui ætatis ſuæ florem adoleſcenti cuidam dediſſet, conciliaſſe & communicaſſe ſuſpicaretur. Jovius ubi ſupra p. 244.

(o) Id. ibid. p. 244. [illegible] m. 203.

4 4 4

was so much the easier for him to satisfy, because the Ladies (F) of his Court gloried in their Gallantries.

LANCELOT (Claudius) a Benedictin Monk, was a Native of † Paris. 'Having Studied very well in his youth, he was intrusted with the Education of a 'young Gentleman of Quality, and afterwards he retired to Port-Royal des Champs, 'where he taught Classical Learning with great success. Some time after he turn'd 'Monk in the Abbey of St. Cyran, where he was in great Intimacy with the Deceased 'Abbot M. de Barcos; at whose Death that Society being dissolv'd, and the Monks 'dispers'd, Dom Claudius Lancelot was confined to the Lower-Bretagne, where he Died 'two or three years ago ‡. He Compos'd many (A) good Books, but did not put his Name to them, and they were Ascribed in General to the Gentlemen of Port-Royal.

† Vigneul Marville, Mélanges d' hist. & de littérat. p. 125.
† Id. ib.
‡ I think the meaning of it is that he died in 1694. or thereabouts.

LANDA (Catherine) ought to be reckoned among the Learned Women. She was yet very young, when in 1526, she writ a Latin Letter to Peter Bembus, which was Printed amongst those ‖ of that Writer, with the Answer that he gave her. Hilarion de Coste †, who miscalls her Lauda, observes that she was of Piacenza, and very Handsome, and the Sister of Count Augustin Lauda, and Wife of Count John Fermo Triulcio.

‖ 'Tis the 13th. of the 6th. Book of Bembus's Letters.
† Hilar. de Coste, Eloges des Dames illustres Tom. 2. p. 728.

LANDO (Hortensio) a Physician Born at Milan, Lived in the XVIth. Century. He is the Author of many Books, and he loved to Publish 'em under false Names. He is thought to be the Author of a Dialogue published under the Name of Philalethes against the Memory of Erasmus. That Conjecture seems (Z) to be well grounded.

He

Andreæ Lamponiani Tyrannicidæ. The six first run thus:

Parabat olim sacra Bruti manibus
Antiqua virtus Italum.
Ac forte lectam dum rependit hostiam
Marti dicatam vindici,
Frontem retorsit illico ad acres Insubres
Mirata fortem dexteram.

We must not wonder that Peter Crinitus prais'd this Assassin; for we find an Hymn (r) in praise of (a) Balthazar Gerard amongst the Sacred Poems of Levinus Torrentius Bishop of Antwerp. Amongst other Elogies, this is to be found in it.

(r) Hymnus in Laudem Balthasaris Gerardi fortissimi tyrannicidæ.

Morte inferendus cælicolum choris
Æterno ab omni labe puram
Reddis ovans animam parenti.

(a) He kill'd the Prince of Orange in the year 1584.

(F) The Ladies of his Court gloried in their Gallantries.] The Description which Paul Jovius gives of the Corruption of the Women of that Country is Abominable. They look'd upon Chastity as an Obstacle to Politeness; they thought that the love of that Virtue was not good Breeding, and look'd like the awkward Air of a Country-Woman. In short, they did not believe, that Lying with a Prince was an Action contrary to Virtue; they pretended, that the way to raise their Husbands above others, was to make them wear Golden Horns. Galeazzo, who was a Handsome Vigorous young Man, and of a Lewd Temper, found his account in it. (b) His artibus quum boni, splendidissimique principis nomen tueretur, premebant ejus famam intemperantes vagaque libidines. Nam ea tum erat ex multo otio luxuriantis seculi conditio, in ipsis præcipuè nobilioris maronis, ut totum pudicitiæ decus ab humanitate aulæ alienum prorsus & subagreste putaretur, ideoque princeps ad licentiam libidinis proclinatus, & juventæ vigore venustateque oris supra omnes spectatu dignissimus, procacibus fœminarum oculis & desideriis cupidissimè deserviret. Erat enim tum vulgatum inter fœminas, nullam ex principis concubitu fieri impudicam, earumque maritos qui ineptis hirci videri possent, ita excellere aureis cornibus, ut dignitate cunctos anteirent. This is doubtless the utmost Degree of Corruption; for if any thing prevents Chastity from being banish'd out of the World, 'tis the Annexing, with respect to Women, an Idea of Dishonour to the contrary Vice. 'Tis the main Barrier, to stop a little the Progress of Lewdness, and hinder it from over-flowing all Mankind like the Waters of the Deluge, which spared but few Persons.

(b) Jovius ubi supra p. 243.

(A) He Compos'd many good Books.] The new Method for learning the Latin and Greek Tongues: the Garden of Greek Roots; an Italian Grammar: a French Translation of Phædrus's Fables; and another of some Comedies of Terence: a Treatise of the Hemina, the second Edition whereof being much larger than the first came out in the year 1688. (c) Lastly all the Pieces and Observations, that are to be found at the end of the Vitré Bible, as an Introduction to the understanding of the Holy Scripture. The Author from whom I have this, affirms (f) that the Grammaire generale & raisonnée, which contains the grounds of the Art of speaking, is of Mr. Arnauld's Invention and a composure of Dom Claude Lancelot.

(c) Vigneul Marville, Mélanges d' Hist. & de litterat p. 126.
(f) Id. ib. p. 125.

(Z) That Conjetture seems to be well grounded.] Here I shall perform a Promise, which I made in the Note C. of the Article of Erasmus, by setting down the import of the Memorial which I have quoted in that place. Herold believed, that a Physician, Born of Piacenza, whose name was Bassiano Landi, or Lando, concealed himself under the name of Philalethes. For my part, I rather believe it was Hortensio Lando a Milanese, and a Physician too, and a Man of Parts, who wrote many Latin and Italian Books, in which he always affected to appear in a Disguise. He took the same Name Philalethes in a Dialogue intituled Forcianæ quæstiones, in which he examines the Manners and Genius of the several Nations of Italy. 'Tis true that in this last Dialogue, he calls himself Philalethes Polytopiensis, whereas in the Dialogue against Erasmus, 'tis Philalethes Utopiensis, or ex Utopia civis. Which, so far from expressing any real difference, shews on the contrary, that both these Books came from a Man of the same Genius. He also called himself sometimes Hortensius Tranquillus; which Simler the Abridger, and Continuator of Gesner, has not observ'd, speaking of Hortensius Tranquillus, and Hortensius Landus, as two different Writers. We have a Book of this Lando, intituled, Un commentario delle più notabili e mostruose cose d' Italia, in 8vo. A diverting Book, to which having not prefixed his Name, he supplies that with a little Advertisement at the end, where he says: Godi, lettore, il presente commentario nato del costantissimo cervello di M. O. L. detto per la sua natural mansuetudine il Trang. Who sees not that these three Letters M. O. L. signify Messer Ortensio Lando, & Trang. Tranquillo. Next to this there is, Un catalogo de gli inventori delle cose chi si mangiano, e delle bevande ch' oggidi s'usano, at the end of which are these Capital Letters SUISNETROH SUDNAL ROTUA TSE. Which being read backwards according to the order of the Words make: HORTENSIUS LANDUS AUTOR EST. In the same manner at the end of his Paradolli, Printed at Venice in 8vo. 1544. SUISNETHROH TAREDUL, that is HORTENSIUS LUDEBAT. 'Tis therefore very probable, that it was not Bassiano, but Hortensio Lando, who was the Author of the Dialogue, which Herold answer'd: And what confirms me in this Thought, is that Hortensio being to prove in one of his Paradoxes, that it is no dishonour to be a Bastard, alledges the Example of many Men of Letters, Peter Lombard, Giason Maino, Longueuil, Celio,

He writ two Dialogues, which have been Father'd on Cardinal (Z) Aleander.

LANGIUS (Paul) a German Monk, would ſcarce have been known by the Chronicle he Compos'd, if he had not inſerted † in it ſome Complaints againſt the Lives of Eccleſiaſticks, and beſtowed an Encomium upon Martin Luther. Which has been the reaſon, why the Proteſtants have cited him a thouſand times. He was Born at Zwicka in Voigtland, and became a Benedictin Monk in the year 1480. in the Monaſtery of Rozau near Zeits in Miſnia *. The Abbot Trithemius ſent him in 1515. to rummage all the Convents in Germany, in order to make a Collection of all the Manuſcripts that might ſerve to Illuſtrate Hiſtory, or to inlarge the Catalogue of Eccleſiaſtical Writers ‡. Langius laboured alſo for himſelf in peruſing the Libraries; for this was of great uſe to him, when he writ (A) his Chronicle ‖. It begins, according to Voſſius, in the year 1468; but he (B) is miſtaken. Coeffeteau (C) made uſe of a poor Evaſion when he anſwer'd the Myſtery of Iniquity, where ſome Words of Langius were Alledged. I don't think that to be a ſolid Reflection, which Andrew Rivet

* See Hoffm. Lex. verbo Langius, p. 1. & ſeq.

‡ Voſſius, de Hiſtor. Lat. p. 744.

‖ Id. ib. Vignier, Theatre de Mechanil, in the Index of the Authors quoted.

Celio Calcagnini and Eraſmus, ſpeaking of the latter in theſe Words. O quanti letterati hannoci ancora dato i furtivi abracciamenti, &c. hannoci dato un Eraſmo di Roterodamo, e per opra d'un valente Abbate ce lo dettero.

I muſt not forget the Collection of Letters which he Printed at Venice, Appreſſo Gabriel Giolito in 1548 in 12. It is intituled Lettere di molte valoroſe donne, nelle quali Chiaramente appare non eſſer ne di eloquentia ne di Dottrina alli huomini inferiori. There is at the end of it a ſmall Advertiſement (†) of Bartholomæus Peſtaloſſa, Rhetus, which ſhews that Hortenſius Lando Collected theſe Letters into one Volume at the requeſt of Octavianus Raverta, qui ob inſignem animi pietatem Terracinæ Pontifex deſignatus eſt (‖).

† 'Tis in Latin.

(‖) I am beholden to Mr. Des-Maiſeaux for theſe particulars.

(Z) Which have been Father'd on Cardinal Aleander.] The following Paſſage was Communicated to me by the Author of the foregoing Remark. 'The two Dialogues, one whereof is intitled, Cicero relegatus, and the other Cicero revocatus, were not written by Jerom Aleander, but by Ortenſio Lando a Milaneſe, ſirnamed Tranquillo. They are Dedicated to Pomponio Trivulcio; and becauſe the Inſcription of the Epiſtle Dedicatory is thus expreſs'd, Pomponio Trivulcio, H. A. S. D. Henry Lewis Chaſteignier Biſhop of Poitiers thought, that the Letters H. A. ſignified Hieronymus Aleander. But they have been put there without any reaſon for it, or perhaps by an Equivocation H. A. have been put for H. L. A. that is Hortenſius Landus, the true name of the Author. Simler the Continuator of Geſner, Attributes theſe Dialogues to Hortenſius Tranquillus Mediolanenſis, whom he Erroneouſly diſtinguiſhes from Hortenſius Landus; for they are one and the ſame Writer. He loved to diſguiſe his name, and yet deſir'd nothing more than to be known. L'Autore della preſente opera, ſays he, under the name of Paulo Maſcranico in an Advertiſement to the Reader, at the end of his Paradoxes, il qual ſu M. O. L. M. (1) detto per ſopranome il Tranq. At the end of his Commentario d'Italia, in another Advertiſement to the Reader, under the Name of Nicolo Morra, he ſpeaks thus Godi Lettore, &c (a). At the end of his Sermoni ſui nebri delle beſtie, he names himſelf at length, and without any Diſguiſe Hortenſio Lando (2) ditto il Tranquillo. Now this Lando, or Tranquillo owns, in his laſt Paradox, the Dialogue Cicero relegatus, to be his Work. Non dubito certamente, ſays he, che molti non ſi habbino da maravigliare che ancora fatto non habbia la pace con M. Tullio, qual gia ſono poco meno di dieci (3) anni chio mandai con ſuo gran ſcorno in eſſiglio; and lower, quando ſcriſſo il dialogo intitolato Cicerone relegato.

(1) That is, Meſſer Ortenſio Lando Milaneſe.

(a) See the Sequel in the foregoing Remark.

(2) So they ſay in Lombardy inſtead of detto.

(3) The Paradoxes came out at Venice in the year 1544. and the Dialogues about Cicero at Lyons in 1534.

(A) When he writ his Chronicle.] Though it be intituled, Chronicon Citicenſe. Du Pleſſis ſhould not have called the Author of it, Moine de Citique. Coeffeteau, inſtead of correcting it, made uſe of the ſame Words. Nor are thoſe of Rivet better, le Moine Citique. See their Paſſages in the Remark C. Foreigners have great reaſon to complain, that the French do ſo diſfigure proper Names, that they cannot be known. Voſſius (b) makes that Obſervation againſt the Illuſtrious Thuanus. But here the Miſchief does not conſiſt only in diſfiguring the Name of a Town, but in ſomething worſe; for under Pretence that Langius compoſed the Chronicle of a Cathedral, he has a Name given him, derived from that Church. Now that Name does not ſuit with him.

(b) Voſſius de arte Hiſtorica c. 12. p. 69.

(B) But he is miſtaken.] This Book of Langius is a Chronicle of the Epiſcopal Church of Zeits. The Emperor Otho I. founded this Cathedral in the Year 968. Pope John XIII. confirmed it (c). Langius extends his Chronicle from the Foundation of it till the Year 1515; and not only gives the Hiſtory of the Biſhops of Zeits, but alſo ſpeaks of the other Biſhops of thoſe Parts.

(C) Coeffeteau made uſe of a poor Evaſion.] Du Pleſſis ſays does not forget the Praiſes that Langius beſtows on Martin Luther (d), Father Langius, a Monk of Citique, and a Diſciple of the Abbot Trithemius, at the Time that Luther began to appear, though he did not leave his Monaſtery, yet he was very much moved, and gave him the Teſtimony: This Martin, ſays he, being a compaſſionate, profound, and incomparable Divine, endeavoured to reſtore the Holy Theology to its Purity and Sincerity of its Original, and to the firſt Purity and Innocence, Sincerity and Simplicity of the Goſpel, ſetting all Secular Philoſophy——— in another Place, on the Year 1503. adding, that Carloſtad and Melanchthon; They handle, ſays he, and teach the Holy Theology, giving the Wheat of the Word of God, without any Chaff; that is, without mixing it with Philoſophy and Syllogiſms. They above all keep to the Goſpel of Chriſt, and to the Apoſtle St. Paul, whom they take for their Patron and Foundation; and to the Study of Learning, they add the Fear of God, and the Seeds of all Vertues, which they ſow in the Hearts of their Diſciples, by Words, Examples, and Books. And leſt it ſhould be replied, that it was before Luther had oppoſed the Pope, ſee how he ſpeaks of him under the Year 1520, after having diſcounted of the Abuſes and Exceſſes of Indulgences. This Man, ſays he, by his Doctrine and admirable Preaching, brought all Indulgences to nothing. He diſſuaded the People from buying them, affirming, that they are no ways neceſſary to Salvation, and do not procure the Remiſſion of Sins, but make People careleſs of Repentance, and of all good Works, and even are an incentive to Vice. He further ſays, that the Merits of Chriſt and his Saints are not a Treaſury of Indulgences; ſince in the Primitive-Church, and for above a thouſand years after, there was nothing written of 'em by the Holy Men and Doctors of the Orthodox Church. So far were they then from entertaining ſo great an Opinion of 'em, as they do now, from a Deſire of Wealth, which accrues from them. Moreover, he aſſumed and proved, that the Church of Rome is not of Divine Right, the firſt, nor the Head of others, &c. And therefore, ſays he, they have ſo perſecute him as another Athanaſius, eſpecially for having maintained this Poſition, and ſome other important Doctrines, which not only the Romaniſts continue to impugn, but alſo very many learned Men, eſpecially the Thomiſts; and ſo this Martin, who is undoubtedly, the firſt and moſt Divine of our Age, has not been hitherto confuted, confirming and proving his Doctrine by the Teſtimonies of the Goſpel, and of the Apoſtle St. Paul, and even by the Original Texts of the antient Orthodox Fathers. Du Pleſſis does not forget the corrective added by Langius to ſo many bold Propoſitions, and thus, ſays he, this Monk ſpeaks non aſſertive but admirative, not to affirm any thing, but out of Admiration, ſuſpending his Judgment, like many others.

(c) Tolle Paolo Lango in Chronico Citicenſi Ecclesiæ ad annum 1515. deducta Epiſcopis Zeitzenſibus adhuc in vivis constitutis, quos pleniùs commemorat Dux. Mat. lib. 12. in Geographia Eccleſiaſtica p. 124.

(d) Du Pleſſis Mornay, Myſtere d'iniquité, p. 373.

Rivet made (D) with relation to Pistorius, who Published the Chronicle of this Monk, in the year 1583. Morери's Faults * are not considerable.

LANGIUS (Joseph) a Native of Kaisersberg † in the upper Alsace, and Professor of Mathematicks, and the Greek Tongue at Friburg in Brisgaw, was about his Elementale Mathematicum ‡ in the Year 1612, which was not printed, according to Vossius §, till Five Years after ‖. Isaac Habrecht, a Philosopher and a Physician, enlarged it, and adorned it with Notes and Figures, and caused it to be printed ¶ in the Year 1625. Langius published at Strasburg, in 1598 (A), a Florilegium, in 8*vo*. which was followed some time after, by a Book in Folio, intituled (B) Polyanthea Nova. He lived many

* They may be seen in the 1st. Edition of this Dictionary.

† Caesaremontanus.

‡ Vossius, de scient. Mathem. pag. 388.

§ And yet the Edition of 1612, is mentioned in the Catalogue of the Bodleian Library.

‖ At Friburg.

¶ At Strasburg.

'others, till the matter be decided in a general Coun-'cil. I put Langius's Words in the Margin (e), They fully shew that he was a Catholick.

Here follows Coeffeteau's Answer. 'What M. 'du Plessis urges from Paul Langius a Monk of Ci-'tique, and a Disciple of the Abbot Trithemius, 'shews the Sincerity of the Protestants, and their 'Fairness in the Publication of Authors. For 'they make Langius say several Things concerning 'Luther, which are entirely contrary, not only to 'the Doctrine, which Langius constantly profess'd 'to his Death, but also to what he writ in the 'same Chronicle, wherein are inserted the Praises of 'Luther. Possibly the Protestants fancy they can 'make us believe, that this Author was both a 'Lutheran and a Papist, a Heretick and a Catho-'lick. Otherwise, certainly they cannot reconcile 'what they make him say, with his first Writings. 'And let no Body be deceived with the Name of 'Pistorius the Publisher; for though he turned Ca-'tholick, it was some time after, and he was still 'a Protestant, when he published this Chronicle, 'with some other Works of the German Writers. 'Nay, he says, that he had it from Henry Petreus, 'who lived at Basil amongst the Hereticks. Those 'who have been guilty of the Imposture, were fully 'perswaded, that it would be difficult to believe, 'that Langius spoke so advantageously of the Per-'son and Doctrine of Luther; for which reason they 'added a poor and insipid Subterfuge, making 'him say, that what he had written about it, 'was not assertivè, but admirativè, not to affirm 'any thing, but out of Admiration suspending his 'Judgment, &c. One would think that Langius was 'in quest of a Master, and was yet unresolv'd, what 'Religion to embrace (f). This is a poor An-'swer, and it were better to say nothing at all, than 'to use it. Father Gretser did not mind it, and thought it more to the purpose to suppose, that good Langius, being extremely desirous to sport with a Woman, looked upon Luther as a Hero, that was to destroy Celibacy. Let us see how the Apologist for du Plessis answered this pleasant Notion, and Coeffeteau's Subterfuge. 'Paul Langius a 'Monk [Citique] gives such a noble and great Cha-'racter of Luther's Doctrine, that our Monks can't 'bear it, and accuses the Publishers of his Work 'of having added to it all that is produced out of 'it upon this Subject, measuring their Corn by the 'Bushel of the Papists, who corrupt with Additi-'ons and Mutilations, all the Writings that come 'into their Hands. And yet it has pleased God to 'remove that Objection, in that it was published 'by a Man who was then brooding the Apostacy, 'which he at last hatched; namely, Pistorius, who 'would not have failed to discover afterwards this 'Artifice, if he had done it, or any other that he 'knew of. Gretser, who might have asked him 'some Questions about it, had not the Impudence, 'though it be a Predominant Quality in him, 'to accuse the Publishers of any Imposture. He 'chose rather to abuse this poor Monk in these 'Words, 'Tis this Langius, whose Feet itched at 'the first hearing of the Lutheran Gospel, to run 'from his Monastery, thinking that the acceptable 'time was come, in which it should be lawful for 'the Monks to throw of their Cowls, and marry 'the Nuns. At that time the Monks knew well 'enough how to lie with them, without marrying 'them, had they had no other Itch. Coeffeteau 'is not ignorant, that they want no Opportunity of 'scratching it elsewhere (z). These last Words manifestly shew, that the common Places the Missionaries make use of on account of the Marriage of the Reformers and Monks, who embraced the Protestant Religion, are not so favourable to 'em as they imagine. It affords them a large Field for Declamation; they make an odious Description of the Sensuality of those Proselytes: but they are easily answered, because it is but too true, that those who make a Vow of Celibacy, don't always observe it; and common Sense teaches, that if the Ministers of the Church have not the Power to abstain from Women, 'tis better they should allay their Heat with their own Wives than other Mens.

(z) Rivet, Remarques sur la Reponse au Mystere d'iniquité, 2. part. pag. 633.

(D) I don't think that to be a solid Reflection which Andrew Rivet made.] We have seen that he pretends that Pistorius would have discover'd his Fraud when he turn'd Papist. I believe he is mistaken. If Pistorius had alter'd Langius's Manuscript, he would never have bragg'd of it. Such a Confession would have procured but an inconsiderable Advantage to the Church of Rome. Whether Langius prais'd Luther in the year 1520, or whether he disprais'd him, or did not mention him at all, is but a Trifle at the bottom. But Pistorius could not have discover'd his Knavery, without making himself contemptible to the Papists, and exposing himself to the Insults of the Protestants, who would have found in his own Confession, wherewithal to Convict him of being a Knave. People are not willing to own such Faults: They are too Material.

(A) A Florilegium.] 'Tis an Alphabetical Collection of Sentences, Apophthegms, Comparisons, Examples and Hieroglyphicks. Such a Book is of use to Scholars in dilating upon a Theme. It might be also serviceable to learned Men, if all the Citations had been well Collated with the Original; but little care has been taken of that. Our Langius was contented to Transcribe the Modern Compilers, and amongst others Thomas Hibernicus (a), whose Book intituled Flores doctorum, abounds with Faults.

(a) Dieterico nihil aliud in Langio reprehendit quam credulitatem, qua se ab Hibernico decipi passus est. Thomasius de plagio, n. 482.

(B) Polyanthea Nova.] The Author in this Book has follow'd the same Methods as in the Florilegium. The Index of Spain Corrects some places in it, and gives an account of the Books intituled Polyanthea. I think it will not be amiss to give the substance of that Account. The first Polyanthea was Printed in (b) 1512. 'tis the work of the Monk Dominicus Nanus Mirabellius, Author of the Monotessaron Evangeliorum. The second was Compiled by a Bookseller of Cologne, call'd Maternus Cholinus, and Published (c) in the year 1585. He added to Mirabellius. all that he thought proper to be Copied from three Books, that had been Published, I mean from the Collection of Bartholomaus Amantius, and from the Sententiarum opus absolutissimum ex probatissimis auctoribus excerptum (d), and from an Anonymous Book Printed at Lyons. Colinus, besides, put in his own Collections. The third, intituled Polyanthea nova, is the Work of our Joseph Langius, and was Printed at Geneva in 1600. at Lyons in 1604. at Francfort in 1607. and several times since. The fourth called Polyanthea novissima is divided into twenty Books, and differs from the third only in some Additions. The fifth called Florilegium magnum seu Polyanthea floribus novissimis sparsa, was Published at Francfort in 1622. What is new in this Book, is owing to the industry of Franciscus Sylvius Insulanus. I have mentioned elsewhere (e) Gruterus's Supplements: They contain two Volumes; so that the Florilegium magnum contains three Volumes: The first is Sylvius Insulanus's; the second and third Printed at Francfort in 1624. are Gruterus's.

(b) At Basil, and then at Sarna, in 1514. and at Cologne in 1539. Index libr. proh. pag. 726. edit. 1667.

(c) It was reprinted at Venice, in 1592.

(d) By Franciscus Torsellus, or de Tort, of Angers. That Work was printed at Paris, in 1560. and 1580.

(e) In the Article of Gruterus.

(C) I

* And they make use of the Words of Cicero, Non de Romanis, sed Romanensibus, id est, non indigenis, sed aliunde ad eam confluentibus, describserim. Langius, apud Wolfium, Lect. memorab. tom. 2. p. 175. (f) Coeffeteau, Reponse au Mystere d'iniquité, pag. 1218, 1219.

ny Years in the Protestant Communion; and then † he turn'd Catholick. I give the Titles (C) of his other Books.

† See the Preface to his Polyanthea.

LANGLE (John Maximilian de) Minister of the Gospel, was born at Evreux in 1590. He was made Minister of the Reformed Church of Rouen in 1615. being then but twenty five years of Age. He discharg'd all the Functions of his Ministry for fifty two Years with great Reputation, Piety and Eloquence. We have two Volumes of his Sermons, one upon the eighth Chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, the other upon several Texts of the Scripture; and a Dissertation by way of a Letter, in defence of Charles II. King of England. Seven Years before his Death he fell into a Palsie, which created an Impediment in his Tongue, notwithstanding which, his ingenious and pious Conversations were both pleasing and edifying. He died in 1674. in the 84*th* Year of his Age, leaving many Children behind him (Z), who inherited his Merit and his Virtue †.

† I publish this article such as it has been imparted to me.

LANGUET (Hubert) a Native of Viteaux * in Burgundy, became famous by his Ability and Virtue in the XVI*th* Century. Having read a Book of Melanchthon in Italy, he was so desirous of knowing that great Doctor, that he went to visit him in Germany. He contracted a very strict (A) Friendship with him. He charm'd him with his fine Con-

* Thuan. lib. 74. circa finem. ad ann. 1581.

(C) I give the Titles of his other Books.] An Edition of Juvenal and Persius at Friburg, 1608. Tyrocinium Græcarum Literarum, ib. 1607. Adagia, sive Sententiæ Proverbiales.

(Z) Leaving many Children.] Samuel de LANGLE his eldest Son, was born at London, and was carried into France being one year old, where he constantly lived, till the last Persecution obliged him to retire into England. He was a Minister almost in the same Year of his Age as his Father, and jointly officiated with him in the Church of Rouen for twenty three years. He was afterwards invited to Paris in 1671. to serve the Church that met at Charenton, and was very much esteemed in both for his grave Manners, his solid Learning and consummate Prudence, being an intimate Friend of Mr. Claude. The Persecutions of France, and particularly that which depriv'd Fathers of their Children, obliged him to retire into England. The University of Oxford made him Doctor of Divinity without his asking for it; and King Charles II. gave him, as a Testimony of his Esteem, a Prebend in the Abbey of Westminster. He was born in 1622. He fell sick in the 71*st* year of his Age, in June 1693. of a violent Distemper, which lasted 8 Days, but hinder'd him not from preserving all the Strength of his Parts, continually making excellent Discourses to his Relations and Friends, and especially to his Children, to whom he had given the same Education he received from his Father. The Publick has yet seen no other Writings of his, besides a Letter upon the Differences between the Episcopal Clergy and the Presbyterians of England. Dr. Stillingfleet (f), the present Bishop of Worcester, printed it at the End of one of his Books upon the same Subject; but they have found among his Manuscripts, a Treatise concerning the Christian Truth, which he began some years ago, and finished a little before his Death. 'Tis hop'd that Mr. de Langle his eldest Son, and a Minister too, will publish it in a little time. He also made many Critical Observations upon several Places of the Scripture, and particularly on the Psalms, which 'tis believ'd he would have published himself, if he had lived long enough to put them in order (a).

As for the other Children of John Maximilian de Langle, the Memorial imparted to me, says nothing of 'em.

(A) He contracted a very strict Friendship with Melanchthon.] All that I have said about this, is afforded me by Joachim Camerarius in his Life of Melanchthon. (b) Hunc (Languetum) lectio libri cujusdam in Italia ubi tunc ipse degeret, à Philippo Melanchthone compositi cupiditate incenderat vivendi autorem illius, & ea stimulos perpetuo admovens perpulerat tandem ut in Germaniam veniret, & Wittembergam se conferret. Languet came to Wittemberg in the year 1549 (c), and continu'd so close to Melanchthon, that excepting some Journeys from time to time, he never left him. (d) Neque ab ipse discessit, nisi interdum per intervalla quædam peregrinationum quibus mirifice delectebatur, donec Philippi Melanchthonis vita in terris duravit. Languet's Conversation was admirable. He talked learnedly of the Interests of Princes, and was thorowly acquainted with the History of Illustrious Men (e). His Memory never failed him about the Circumstances of Time, or proper Names; and he had an extraordinary Sagacity to discern the Inclinations of People, and to foresee the Issue of things. He who gives him this testimony, was particularly acquainted with him. Neque adeo, says he (f), audivi ullum alterum, qui tam prudenter & certo, & planè, dilucidè, disertè exponeret, quicquid narrare instituisset. Nam ille in hominum nominibus fallì, non indiciis temporum errare, non confundere rerum negotiorumque seriem. Erat autem in eo singularis sagacitas in notandis naturis hominum, & conjiciendo, quo quisque sua pte ingenio deferretur, & quæ esset voluntatis inclinatio. Consiliorum etiam solertissimus æstimator, & eventuum futurorum provisione admirabilis.

I will add to this what Mr. de la Mare says, that about the Year 1548, a German gave Melanchthon's Common-Places to Languet; that Languet having read that Book four or five times in one Year, during his Travels, was freed from those Doubts which had tormented him a long time, and conceiv'd an extraordinary Esteem for Melanchthon; that having consulted the Chief Divines of Leipsick, he embraced the Protestant Religion, and put himself under the Discipline of Joachim Camerarius, who taught Literature in the University of Leipsick; that he lodg'd in the House of that Professor; that seeing the Troubles of that Country, he undertook a Journey into Italy, in hopes that he might settle in Germany as soon as things should be quiet there; that he studied the Civil Law a year at Padua, where he took his Doctor's Degrees, and afterwards went to Bologna; and that during that time, as (a) Joachim Camerarius relates, he was so charmed with a new Book of Melanchthon that he wished for nothing so earnestly, as to return into Germany to see the Author of that Book, which he did in the Year 1549. I find something in this Account that is liable to a Difficulty: For 'tis not natural, that a Man who had conceived such an Esteem for Melanchthon, by the reading of his Common-Places of Divinity (b) that he took him for the only wise Man in the World, should make a Journey to Leipsick, stay there, and embrace the Protestant Religion, without going to see that Divine; and that he should not desire to make him a Visit, till he reads another Book of his at Bologna. 'Tis not true that Camerarius says, that 'twas his Treatise de Anima, and that it made Languet resolve to return into Germany. He expresses himself so, as to make one believe that he means a first and not a second Journey. (c) Pepulerat tandem ut in Germaniam veniret. Lastly, 'tis strange that if Languet had been Camerarius's Disciple and Boarder at Leipsick in 1548, Camerarius should say that he did not come into Germany till 1549, out of a Desire of seeing Melanchthon, which proceeded from his reading a Book of his in Italy. Either he or M. de la Mare must be mistaken. In all likelihood Camerarius's Account is right; for Languet (d) tells him, that having read in Italy Melanchthon's Common-Places in the year 1547, and not thinking him sufficiently clear about the Eucharist, he resolved to go and consult the Author, and that he saw him in 1549. Would he have spoke after this manner, if he had embraced the Protestant Religion at Leipsick in 1548, and if Camerarius had been his Professor and Landlord in the same Year, and in the same Town?

(f) He died in 1699 since the first Impression of this passage.

(a) A Memorial imparted to me, which I print such as I have received it.

(b) Joach. Camerar. in vita Melanchth. p. m. 333.

(c) Ibid.

(d) Ibid.

(e) Erat autem Philippo grata atq; jucunda multarum magnarumq; rerum, quas ille teneat, commemoratio, & oratio de Regibus Principibusq; gubernationum, & aliis sapientia, virtute, doctrina præstantibus viris horum temporum, ib.

(a) Quo tempore narrat in Philippi Melanchthonis vita Joachimus Camerarius elegantis illius & multiplici eruditione referti de anima libri à Melanchthone non ita pridem typis Languetum tanto vivendi auctoris cupiditate incensum fuisse, &c. Ph. de la Mare in vita Languetiana.

(b) Melanchthonem alio tempore tantum abest mare, ut religiose conjunx & propinquis affectibus indulgere judicaret, unum aut tem (pe re Melanchthonem id. ib. p. 2.

(c) Camerarius in vita Melanch. p. m. 334. & Languet Epist. l. 15. ad Joachim. Camerar. p. m. 77.

‡ See the Remark (A) of Thuanus.

Converſation ; for he had a very good Memory, and an exquiſite Judgment ‡. He was a long time [a] one of the Chief Counſellors to Auguſtus Elector of Saxony ; and if we may believe Thuanus (A), he did not leave that Court till he was ſuſpected of being one of thoſe who adviſed Gaſpar Peucer to publiſh an Expoſition of the Doctrine of the Euchariſt, agreeably to the Geneva Confeſſion. This Hiſtorian adds, that having left the Court of Saxony, he retired to the Prince of Orange, and was employ'd in great Affairs, and that whilſt he applied himſelf to 'em, he fell ſick, and died at Antwerp the 30*th* of September 1581, being 63 years old *. He had a great ſhare (B) in the Eſteem of Mr. du Pleſſis Mornai. He is thought to be the Author (C) of the Oration which was made to Charles IX. the 23*d* of September 1570. in the Name of many Princes of Germany. The famous Treatiſe (D) intituled, VINDICIÆ CONTRA TYRANNOS, is aſcribed to him. The Latin Letters which he wrote to Sir Philip Sidney, were printed at Francfort in 1633. Thoſe he wrote in the ſame Language to the Camerarius's, the Father and the Son, came out in 1646. and were reprinted with ſome others † in 1685. The Preface prefixed to thoſe Letters, contains a Noble Encomium upon him. It was written by Joachim Camerarius, Grandſon to the Author of Melanchthon's Life.

† Which he writ to Auguſtus Elector of Saxony.

A great Collection (E) of thoſe he wrote to the Elector of Saxony his Maſter, during the Courſe of his Negotiations, was publiſh'd at Hall in 1698. I muſt not forget what Thuanus relates of a Converſation (F) he had with him in 1579.

LANS-

(A) If we may believe Thuanus, he did not leave that Court.] Thuanus ſpeaks of it too generally. The Expoſition of the Doctrine of the Lord's Supper came out in the Year 1573. Languet was not then at the Court of Saxony, but of the Emperor ; and did not leave that Employment till 1577. A Letter (e) which he writ from Prague the firſt of March 1577, informs us, that he had obtain'd Leave from his Electoral Highneſs to retire whither he pleaſed. Ever ſince he had a great Correſpondence with that Elector, tho' he applied himſelf to the Affairs of Prince Caſimir, or of the Prince of Orange. All this is proved by his Letters publiſhed in the year 1698.

(e) 'Tis the 28*th of thoſe he writ to* Camerarius the Son.

(B) A great ſhare in the Eſteem of Mr. du Pleſſis Mornai.] Which appears from this Paſſage : (g) 'At his Arrival at Antwerp, Mr. du Pleſſis found his 'Wife and Children ſick ; and a Son whom God had 'given him, died immediately in his Abſence : Beſides, he found Mr. Languet, his particular Friend, 'dead, whom Madam du Pleſſis, tho' ſick her ſelf, had 'attended to his laſt Breath. His laſt Words were 'That the only thing he was ſorry for, was, that he 'could not ſee Mr. du Pleſſis again before he died, 'to whom he would have left his Heart if it had been 'poſſible. That he had deſired to live to ſee the World 'grow better ; but ſince it ſtill grew worſe and worſe, 'he had nothing more to do with it ; that the Princes 'of this time were ſtrange People ; that Vertue had 'much to ſuffer, and little to gain by 'em ; that he 'very much pitied Mr. du Pleſſis, who would feel 'a good deal of it, and would have a bad time to go 'through ; but that he ſhould not deſpond, and God 'would aſſiſt him : He entreated her to requeſt one 'thing of him, that in the firſt Book he ſhould publiſh, 'he would make mention of their Friendſhip. This 'Mr. du Pleſſis did not long after, in a little Preface 'at the Beginning of the Latin Verſion of his Book 'concerning the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion. What he ſays in praiſe of Hubert Languet in that Preface, and what others have publiſhed upon the ſame Subject, has been carefully collected by Voetius (h). The Epitaph alone is worth a Panegyrick. You'll find it in the ſame Voetius. Note, that Languet expreſs a very great Affection (*) for M. du Pleſſis at the time of the Paris Maſſacre.

(g) Life of Du Pleſſis Mornai, p. 50. ad an. 1581.

(h) Diſput. Theolog. vol. 4. *p.*238. & ſeq.

(*) See the Life of M. du Pleſſis, *p.*22. See alſo page 12. of the ſame.

(C) He is thought to be the Author of the Oration.] Mr. Colomies gives a very ſolid Proof for it in his Melanges Hiſtoriques (i). He takes it from a Letter of Languet to his Hero Sir Philip Sidney, written from Vienna the firſt of January 1574.

(i) Pag. 13 & 14.

(D) The famous Treatiſe, entituled, VINDICIÆ CONTRA TYRANNOS.] What I have ſaid thereupon in the Project of this Dictionary, at the Word Brutus, is too long to be conveniently inſerted here. I have thought it more proper to place it at the End of this Work by way of Diſſertation.

Some ſay, he is the Author of the Book De furoribus Gallicis, but without any good Grounds (†). 'Twas thought in his Family, that he writ the famous Apology for the Prince of Orange ; which they believed, becauſe he ſent a Copy of it to each of his Relations, as a thing of his own making. Nevertheleſs Grotius () aſcribes this Apology to another Frenchman who was called Peter de Villiers (††).

(†) See M. de la Mare in vita Languetti, *p.*67, 68.

() Lib. 2. Ann. Belgic.

(††) *La Mare, ib. p.*121, 122.

(E) A great Collection of Letters he wrote to the Elector of Saxony.] Mr. Ludovicus, Profeſſor in the Univerſity of Hall, procured that Edition. We ſhould have been more indebted to him, if he had given a Table of the Contents, and if he had taken care that the Faults of the Printers or Tranſcribers in the Proper Names, had been more carefully corrected. 'Tis a wonder he put no Preface to that Book ; and that the Editions of Germany being generally recommendable for the Tables of Contents, that there ſhould be none in Languet's Letters, which wanted it more than many other Books ; becauſe each Letter contains many particular Facts which have no Connection with a general Subject. Here is the Title of that Book : Arcana ſæculi decimi ſexti Huberti Languetti Legati, dum viveret, & Conſiliarii Saxonici Epiſtolæ ſecretæ ad principem ſuum Auguſtum Sax. ducem, & S. R. I. ſeptemvirum. Ex ΑΡΧΕΙΟ Saxonico deſcriptas primus è Muſeo edit Jo. Petr. Ludovicus. The Abbot Nicaiſe aſſured me, that the Life of the Author written by Mr. de la Mare, would be prefixed to it ; but that did not prove true. It was publiſhed by it ſelf in the Town of Hall in 1700. in 12*o*. If it had come to my hands ſoon enough, this Article had been better and fuller. I refer you to Mr. Bernard (*), who gives a very large and exact Account of that Piece : 'tis well written, and very curious.

(*) In the Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres March 1701. 286. & ſeq.

(F) Of a Converſation which Thuanus had with him.] He became acquainted with Languet at the Baden Waters, in the Year 1579. and was ſo charmed with the Carriage and fine Diſcourſes of that worthy Man, that he thought he never could part from him. This is the Encomium he beſtows upon him ; which I relate, becauſe neither Voetius nor Mr. Teiſſier have mentioned it. (k) Argentina Badam ventum, ubi Thuanus Languetum vacuum nactus ita mordicus per triduum ei adhæſit, ut ab eo divelli non poſſe putaretur. Ita candor hominis illum ceperat, inſigni probitate, judicio non ſolum in literis, ſed in publicis negotiis, quæ tota vita ſub variis principibus magna fide geſſerat, præditi ad hæc verum Germaniæ callentiſſ. ut Germanos ipſos reſpatrias ſuas doceret. Toto illo tempore cum eo aſſiduus, niſi quantum aquis ſumendis impendebat, cum multa didicit, tum breviculum manu ipſius perſcriptum, quod & nunc ſervat, poſtquam hinc diſceſſit, ab eo accepit, quo generalis Germaniæ ſtatus, ſicut hodie eſt, comitiorum jus, circulorum numerus, conſiliorum ordo deſcribitur. He ſays, that Languet ſhewed him a German Lord, who was at a Window with his Wife, and afterwards aſked him with a Smile, If it was in your choice, would you prefer ſuch a handſome Woman before the Archbiſhoprick of Cologne ? Thuanus not knowing what was the Drift of his Queſtion, ſaid nothing. Languet explained to him the Myſtery, telling him that this German Lord was the Count of Iſemburg, who had lately reſigned the Archbiſhoprick of Cologne to Marry Joan de Lignes, Siſter to the Count of Arenberg. He added that the ſuppreſſion of Celibacy in Germany was inconvenient to the great Proteſtant Lords ; for whereas in the time of Popery, they made their Daughters Nuns, with a certain proſpect of ſeeing 'em ſome time raiſed to the Dignity of

(k) Thuan. de vita ſua, lib. 2. init. p. vi. 1176.

LANSBERGIUS (Philip) a Mathematician of the XVIIth Century, was born in Zealand in [a] 1561. He was Miniſter of the Word of God at Antwerp in 1586. which he was afterwards (A) many years at Ter-Goes in Zealand: and at laſt being declar'd Emeritus, he retir'd to Middleburg [b], where he Died about the year 1632. I ſhall ſet down the Titles (B) of his Works.

[a] Voſſius de ſcient. Mathem. p. 341.

[b] Ipſe epiſtola dedic. Uranometriæ.

LARROQUE (Matthew de) in Latin Larroquanus, one of the moſt famous Miniſters the Proteſtants have had in France, was Born at Leirac a little Town of Guienne, near Agen in 1619. The Misfortune he had to loſe in his youth his Father and Mother, who for their Condition and Virtue were ſome of the moſt Eminent of their Town, was follow'd quickly after by the loſs of his Patrimony: It is not known by what Fatality, or by whoſe Fraud this came to paſs. This was ſo far from diſcouraging him, that it animated him more ſtrongly to ſeek for comfort in his Studies, and to add to his Claſſical Learning, the Knowledge of Philoſophy, and eſpecially of Divinity. He made a very great Progreſs in thoſe Sciences, and was admitted Miniſter with Applauſe. He was obliged to go to Paris two years after his admiſſion into the Miniſtry, in order to oppoſe the Cavils of thoſe who were about to ruin his Church. He could not overcome them; but he met with favourable Conjunctures on other Accounts. He Preached ſometimes at Charenton, and was ſo liked by the Dutcheſs de la Tremouille, that ſhe choſe him to be Miniſter of the Church of Vitré in Bretagne, and afterwards gave him many marks of a particular Eſteem. The ſame did [c] the Prince and Princeſs of Tarente, and [d] the Dutcheſs of Weimar. He ſerv'd that Church about twenty ſeven years, and applied himſelf to the Study of Antiquity, with an incomparable diligence. He quickly gave publick Proofs of the Progreſs he had made in it; for the Anſwer he Publiſhed to the Motives of Converſion of [e] a certain Miniſter, who changed his Religion, was full of the Teſtimonies of the Fathers. The Books he Printed (A) afterwards, highly raiſed his Reputation. He Contracted a very ſtrict Friendſhip with Mr. Daillé and his Son, which was kept up by a frequent Correſpondence of Letters. The Journey he made to Paris, procured him (B) the acquaintance

[c] Son to the Dutcheſs de la Trimouille.

[d] Daughter of the ſame Lady. Call'd Martin

(a) Filias omneis quibus homines proletarii abundant, matrimonio elocare tenentur. Id. ib.

(b) De ſcient. Mathemat.

an Abbeſs, in ſome very rich Convent, they were obliged to Marry 'em in a Country (a) where People Multiply very faſt.

(A) Many years.] Voſſius in the 237*th.* Page (b) ſays he was Miniſter at Ter-Goes XXXIX. years more or leſs, but at page 341. he only puts XXIX. years. This is doubtleſs a Fault of the Preſs; but I confeſs, I know not whether it conſiſts in the Subſtraction or Addition of an X. 'Tis one of the two.

(B) The Titles of his Works.] Chronologia ſacra libri VI. Printed in 1626. Progymnaſmata Aſtronomiæ reſtitutæ, Printed at Middleburg in 1629. Triangulorum Geometricorum libri IV. Printed at the ſame place in 1631. Uranometriæ libri III. Printed at the ſame place the ſame year. Commentationes in motum terræ diurnum & annuum, & in verum aſpectabilis cæli typum, wherein he openly declares for the opinion of Copernicus, and even pretends to perfect it. He wrote this Work in Dutch; but it was Tranſlated into Latin by Martin Hortenſius, and Printed at Middleburg in 1630. Fromondus, a Doctor of Louvain, anſwer'd it in his Ant-Ariſtarchus, ſive orbis terræ immobilis. Lansbergius, who lived not long enough to reply, left a Son, who anſwer'd Fromondus, and at the ſame time Morin, Regius, Profeſſor at Paris, and a Dane called Peter Bartholinus. This Anſwer, intituled, Jacobi Lansbergii Medicinæ Doctoris Apologia pro commentationibus, &c. Printed at Middleburg in 1633. was confuted by a new Book of Fromondus in 1634. with the Title of Veſta, or Ant-Ariſtarchi Vindex. I think the matter ſtopt there.

(A) The Books he Printed afterwards.] He Publiſhed in 1665. an anſwer to a Book of the Gentlemen of Port-Royal, intitled L' Office du St. Sacrement, &c. the Office of the Holy Sacrament, or the Tradition of the Church concerning the Euchariſt, Collected from the Holy Fathers, and other Eccleſiaſtical Authors. This Anſwer was very much eſteem'd: (c) Mirâ cum ſolertiâ nimis Catholicorum virorum, qui ut legentibus fucum facerent SS. Patrum textum vel muſclaverant, vel pravo commento inquinaverant, pias fraudes vel impias dicam neſcio, retexit. Mirati ſunt omnes nihil inter reſpondendum illum fugiſſe, nihilque vindicandum intactum ſiviſſe, tantâ ſagacitate ac diligentiâ unum quodque expendens officium, ut in ejus meſſem nemo pedem, vel Spicilegii cauſa intulerit. As good as this Book was, it did not come up to the excellent Work which this Author Publiſhed ſome years after, with this Title, Hiſtoire de l' Euchariſtie. There were two Editions of it in leſs than two years, and it was Tranſlated into Engliſh. The Author did not put his name to the firſt Edition; but he put it to the ſecond, which is that of 1671. 'Tis true, it appear'd with ſome diſguiſe through the Bookſeller's Fault, who doubtleſs took a g. for a q. in the written Name of the Author. Whence many Controverſiſts of the Roman Communion have named him Larrogue, inſtead of Larroque. He Printed at Geneva in 1670. two Latin Diſſertations, De Photino & Liberio, wherein amongſt other things he ſhew'd ſome Errors of Petavius concerning the Epoch of Photinus's Condemnation. He confuted in a third Diſſertation what Mr. David had urg'd againſt the firſt. Afterward, he engag'd in the defence of his deceaſed Friend Mr. Daillé againſt two Learned Engliſhmen. That Book is intituled, Obſervationes in Ignatianas Iearſonii vindicias, nec non in Beveregii annotationes. He had almoſt finiſhed his Reply to Dr. Beveridge's Anſwer, but being deſired by ſome of his Friends to drop that Diſpute, he eaſily condeſcended to their Requeſt. His Book concerning the Conformity of the Diſcipline of the Reformed Churches of France with the Antients, came after thoſe I have mentioned, and was followed by a Treatiſe concerning the Communion in both kinds, againſt a Book of the Biſhop of Meaux. This is what we find in the Life of the Author prefixed to a Poſthumous Book Publiſhed by Mr. de Larroque his Son in 1688. We don't find there the Tract concerning the Nature of the Church, nor that concerning the Regale; and therefore I add theſe two Pieces to the foregoing Books. His Poſthumous Book is intituled, Matthæi Larroquani Adverſariorum ſacrorum libri tres. Opus Poſthumum. Acceſſit diatriba de legione fulminatrice in qua expenduntur Veterum teſtimonia quibus hactenus hæc hiſtoria vera habita eſt. Authore Daniele Larroquano M. Filio. Mr. de Larroque his Son, who had already given Proofs of his Knowledge and Ability, is the Author of the Diſſertation De Legione fulminatrice. He informs us that his Father had undertaken an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, and had finiſhed the three firſt Centuries, and began the fourth. I hope the Publick will ſome time or other injoy that excellent Work.

(c) Daniel Larroquanus in vitâ ſummâ Matthæi Larroquani, fol. 5.

(B) The acquaintance of many learned Men.] Amongſt others Mr. Juſtel, Mr. (d) Amproux, and Mr. Conrart. They, and Mr. Da lle and his Son, and Mr. Allix were the Proteſtants he had the greateſt Affection for. He made himſelf known alſo to many learned Men of the Roman Communion, particularly to the Abbot de Marolles and Mr de Launoi. Many Letters of theſe two Gentlemen, and eſpecially of the latter, were found among his Papers (e).

(d) Counſellor in the Parliament of Paris.

(e) Taken from his Life prefixed to the Adverſariorum libri tres.

quaintance of many Learned Men. The Church of Charenton reſolved to have him in 1669. But the Envy of ſome falſe Brethren was ſo violent, that they prejudiced the Court againſt him; ſo that his Majeſty forbad that Church to think of him, tho' the [a] Deputy-General of the Proteſtants offer'd to anſwer for the good Conduct of Mr. de Larroque. It was a very great Trouble to him to be ſlandered; but the Teſtimony of a good Conſcience was his Remedy. He was invited to be both Miniſter and Profeſſor of Divinity at Saumur. He accepted the firſt Employment, but refuſed the latter, as judging it prejudicial to the Study of Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, which was his ſtrong Paſſion. He was preparing for his Journey to Saumur, when [b] the Intendant of the Province forbad him to make it. He appealed againſt that unjuſt Prohibition. The Church of Saumur earneſtly ſollicited the neceſſary Permiſſion, and obtained it; nevertheleſs, he did not think it convenient to make uſe of it, nor to enjoy a Place in ſpite of the Intendant. He therefore ſtaid ſtill at Vitré, where his Pen was not idle. He was offered three of the Principal Churches of the Kingdom, that of Montauban, that of Bourdeaux, and that of Rouen. He accepted Rouen, where he ended his Life, at Sixty Five Years of Age, the 31ſt. of January 1684. not only applauded for his Learning, but alſo for the Qualities of an honeſt Man, and a good Paſtor [c]. He had joyn'd all theſe different (C) Characters together, which are but too often divided. See his Encomium in the Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres, in the Fifth Article of the Month of March, 1684.

LASCARIS (Conſtantin) left Conſtantinople his Birth-Place, in 1454, and retired into Italy. He was one of thoſe who reſtored in the Weſt the Knowledge of good Literature. He taught it firſt at Milan, whither he was invited by Francis Sforza. Afterwards he went to viſit Cardinal Beſſarion at Rome, and received many Marks of Affection from him, and then he went to Naples, where he taught Eloquence, and the Greek Tongue with Applauſe. At laſt he went to Meſſina [d], where he ſettled for the reſt of his Days. He drew a great Concourſe of Scholars thither, and amongſt others, Peter Bembus, who was raiſed to the Dignity of a Cardinal, by Clement VII. He left his Library to the Senate of Meſſina: It was compoſed of excellent Books, which he brought from Conſtantinople. The Senate made him [e] a Citizen of that Town, and cauſed him to be buried at the publick Charges. His Marble Tomb in the Church of the Carmelites, has been ruined by the Injuries of time, and has not been repaired [f]. Our Laſcaris wrote (D) ſome Books.

LASCARIS (John) ſirnamed [g] Rhyndacenus, was of the Family of Laſcaris, which has produced ſome Emperors of Conſtantinople. He took Sanctuary in Italy, after the Deſtruction of the Eaſtern Empire in the XVth. Century, and was very kindly received by Laurence de Medicis. This great Favourer of Learned Men thought him fit to make a Collection of the beſt Books that were in Greece, and to that end (A) deputed him to the Sultan. That Deputation had a happy Succeſs, for the Grand Signor permitted Laſcaris to ſearch all the Libraries, by which means vaſt Treaſures of rare Learning were tranſported into Italy. After that Laſcaris went into France, and [a] The Marquis de Ruvigni.

[b] Call'd Mr. Voiſin.

[c] Taken from the Abridgement of his Life prefixed to the Work, which M. de Larroque his Son Publiſhed at Leyden in 1688. with this Title, Matthæi Larroquani adverſariorum ſacrorum libri tres.

[d] In 1405.

[e] Taken from Jerom Raguſa, in elogiis Siculorum.

[f] Perhaps from a Town call'd Rhyndacus between the Helleſpont and Phrygia, mention'd by Stephanus Byzantinus.

(C) He joined all theſe different Characters together.] I have refer'd you to his Encomium in the Nouvelles de la Republique des lettres. I refer you alſo to the Preface, from which I have taken this Article, and from which I ſhall ſtill take ſome Verſes of Gregory Nazianzen. (a) Id duntaxat ſubjungamus colophonem huic elogio impoſituri, quod de ſuo parente nimirum dicebat Gregorius Nazianzenus, etenim noſtro apprimè accommodari poteſt.

Ἦν μοι πατὴρ κατὰ τὸ κρεῖττον εὐσεβὴς,
Ἀκριβὴς, ἀπλοῦς τὸν τρόπον, σεμνὸς βίον,
Πατριάρχης ἐντὸς Ἀβραὰμ τὸ δεύτερος,
Ὃν ἐξανθεῖν ἐφασκον, ἐν τοῖς πολλοῖς.
- - - - - - - - - Χριστοῦ σέβας.
Ἐκ τοῦτο πεσὼν, πεσόντα τὸν κρείττονα.

Erat patri mi vir probus valdè, ſenex,
Simplexque, vitæ regula & certiſſima,
Patriarchus alter Abraham: non tam ſtudens
Famâ (b) eſſe, quàm re vir bonus contra atque nunc.
- - - - - - - - Chriſti cultor
Exinde Paſtor, ordinis decus & Jui.

(D) Wrote ſome Books.] They concern the Greek Grammar: Aldus Manutius Printed 'em with ſome other ſmall Pieces of the ſame Nature in Greek and Latin. Beſides Laſcaris made (c) a Collection of the Learned Men, who flouriſhed Anciently in Sicily.

(A) Deputed him to the Sultan.] Twice, if we may believe Jovius, who adds that the Sultan loved Philoſophy, and had a particular Eſteem for Laurence de Medicis. 'Tis neceſſary to ſet down the Words of that Hiſtorian; for I muſt compare 'em with thoſe of Varillas. 'Tis a point of Criticiſm. (d) Is (Laurentius Medices) tum abſolvendæ Bibliothecæ ſtudio tenebatur. Ob id Laſcarem, ad conquirenda volumina Byzantium cum legatione ad Bajazetem his miſit: nec deſuit honeſta petenti, uſquam Barbarus Imperator, quippe qui erat totius philoſophiæ ſtudioſus, Averroiſque ſectator exiſtimus, & de Laurentio privatim tanquam de illuſtri cultore virtutis, optimè ſentiret, quum paulo ante Bandinum percuſſorem fratris, fuga in Aſiam elapſum in catenis ad ſupplicium tradidiſſet (e); ſingulari quidem religionis, atque juſtitiæ exemplo; quod ille immane ſcelus in templo auſus, merita pœna plectendus cenſeretur. Itaque Laſcares, tuto abdita Græciæ perſcrutatus, quum patriæ opes victoribus ceſſiſſent, nobiliora divitiis antiquæ dignitatis volumina collegit, ut in Italia ſervarentur. Varillas thought this Narrative of Paul Jovius was too dry, and therefore he has Embelliſh'd it with abundance of Circumſtances, as if inſtead of faithfully Tranſlating another Man's Work, he had been injoyned to turn it into a Romance. Here is his Narrative: (f) 'Laurence de 'Medicis received Laſcaris with open Arms; 'and committed to him the care of his Library. 'One Day as they Diſcours'd about the means of 'enriching it, it came into Laſcaris's Thought 'that Bajazet II. Emperor of the Turks had an 'Inclination for Philoſophy, and having cauſed Averroes's Commentaries upon Ariſtotle to be explain'd to him, he would not be unwilling to 'have the Peripateticks preſerved. Laurence de 'Medicis promiſed to furniſh him with things ne'ceſſary for a Voyage to Conſtantinople, if he would 'go upon that Deſign. Laſcaris took him at his 'Word, and Imbark'd without any other Creden'tials than what Laurence de Medicis gave him 'to his Factors. Nevertheleſs he had Acceſs to 'the Grand Signor, and was introduced to his

High-

(a) Daniel Larroquanus in Summa vitæ Matthæi Larroquani in fine.

(b) 'Tis an Encomium beſtowed by Æſchylus upon Amphiaraus. See the Article of the latter.

(c) The Jeſuit Jerom Ragusa has inſerted it in his Elogia Siculorum Printed at Avignon in 1693.

(d) Jovius Elog. c. 31. p. m. 74.

(e) Paul Jovius is miſtaken; for it was not Bajazet II. but his Father Mahomet II. who caused Bandini to be Arreſted, and ſent him to Laurence de Medicis in the year 1478. See Guiller's Hiſt. of Mahomet II. Tom. 2. p. 320. and ſeq. and p. 439. Note that M. de Wiquefort is very much out in this matter: See his Traité de l'Ambaſſadeur Tom. 1. p. m. 269.

(f) Varillas Anecdot. de Florence p. 182.

and got the Esteem of Lewis XII. who sent him (B) to Venice, in Quality of Embassador. He went to Rome in the Pontificate of Leo X. and made another Voyage into Greece, from whence he brought some young Gentlemen to be educated in the College that was founded on Mount Quirinal, in order to preserve the right Pronunciation

' Highness, who received him much better than he ' imagined. They had a pretty long Conversation, ' and Bajazet expressed to him all the Esteem, ' that an Infidel was capable of, for the Merit of ' Laurence de Medicis, and permitted him (on his ' Account) to buy up all the Manuscripts that were ' to be sold in his Empire. His Highness allowed ' him a Safe-guard to Conduct him to the Places ' where he knew there had been Libraries, and to ' prevent those who had plunder'd them, from sell- ' ing Books dearer than they were worth. Thus ' Lascaris had the conveniency of going through ' all Greece, and Collecting those rare Volumes, ' that are still in being, in the King's Library. He ' brought but one half of 'em in the first Voyage ' he made; because the joy of Exhibiting to his ' Patron the Authors he had recover'd, and which ' were supposed to be lost, made him return to ' Florence at two years end. But Laurence de Me- ' dicis sent him back three Months after, desiring ' him to continue his search, wherever there had ' been Learned Men. Lascaris waited again upon ' Bajazet, and received from him new Civilities. ' He ran over all Peloponnesus, and return'd as ' it were in Triumph, in a Vessel laden with the ' remainder of the spoils of the Greek Tongue. But ' he had not as yet placed his Manuscripts in the ' sumptuous Building design'd for them, when ' Laurence de Medicis died, and left Italy in a ' Calm, which was not of long continuance. The ' French Army enter'd Florence, and plunder'd the ' Books as well as the other Goods of the House of ' Medicis. Here are not only many Circumstances, which Varillas has Forged to embellish and inlarge his Story, but also some Falsifications; for he supposes 1. that Lascaris had no Letters credential to the Grand Signor. What is then the meaning of these Words of Paul Jovius, Byzantium CUM LEGATIONE ad Bajazetem misit? 2. That the rare Volumes Collected by Lascaris, are in the French King's Library, the French Army having plunder'd the Books and other Goods of the House of Medicis, in the time of Charles VIII. To confute this Historian in this particular, we need only put him in mind, that he himself says in another Book, (a) that the House of Medicis was plunder'd by the Florentins, before the Troops of Charles VIII. enter'd into Florence. He says positively, that the Florentins ' plunder'd the prodi- ' gious Collection of Statues, Pictures, BOOKS, ' and Medals, which Foreigners came to see with ' Admiration in the Palace of Medicis. Note, that the Books of that Library, which have been Transported into that of the French King, came thither through another Channel than Charles the VIII's. Expedition. This removal is more Modern; See Father Jacob in his Tract of Libraries: He will tell you (b) that Catherine de Medicis ' brought a- ' mong other things to Henry II. her Husband, ' the Manuscripts of the famous Library of Me- ' dicis, which were put into the Royal Library; ' where they are still preserv'd.

When it shall be proved to me that Varillas was not barely grounded upon the Elogies of Paul Jovius, speaking of Lascaris in his Anecdotes de Florence, I shall then see, whether I am to blame for accusing him of being the Inventer of most of the Circumstances mention'd by him. If he had known what Jovius observes, in another Book, he would have given us a more Paraphrastical Narrative; It would have been a Scene full of Decorations. Jovius relates that the Basha Cherseoglis got leave for John Lascaris to search all the Libraries of Greece, when by order of Leo X. he went in quest of old Manuscripts. (c) Nec illud quidem erga literarum studia eximia benignitatis officium prætermittendum videtur, quod Lascari, quem supra memoravimus Græcorum nobilissimo, pariter atque doctissimo antiquos codices jussu Leonis decimi conquirenti, cunctas Græciæ bibliothecas impetrato ad id regio diplomate, liberè exoutiendas aperuit. This Historian had been saying that this Basha having turned Mahometan out of State, preserv'd in his Heart the Christian Faith, and had a Crucifix conceal'd in a Closet, which he Worship'd in the Night, when no body could be Witness of it. He shew'd his Crucifix to John Lascaris, who afterwards related all these Particulars to Jovius. The reason which moved him to make an outward Abjuration of Christianity was this. He was ready to be Married to a handsom Woman, when his Father liking her very well, resolved to Marry her himself. This Injury so enrag'd the Son that he retir'd to the Neighbouring Garrisons of the Turks, and afterwards to Constantinople, where Bajazet gave him a very kind Reception and promised him to Marry him to one of his Daughters. The young Man turned Mahometan, quitted his name Stephen, and took that of Achomat, and Cherseoglis, and became Son-in-Law to Bajazet (d). What Paraphrases and Flourishes should we not have seen in the Anecdotes de Florence, if Varillas had known this Latin Passage? (e) Non, ut cæteri ferè omnes à prima pueritia per delectus Christianis parentibus erepti, sed jam planè vir (Cherseoglis) ita à majorum religione discessit, ut nunquam ex arcano veræ pietatis obliviscerentur. Is Cherjechii regnli in Illyrico, ad montem Nigrum filius, quam adamata ei sponsa quæ erat è Stirpe [illegible] Despoti, ad paratas nuptias duceretur, concupitæ nuptiæ, quod esset egregiæ venustatis, procaci oculorum probus pater, omnemque pudorem superante libidine, hbi patrim impotenter excluso filio nuptias celebravit, frustra reclamantibus propinquis, qui ei facinus plus contumeliosum patriæque & domui infame detestabantur. Itaque juvenis tantæ injuriæ indignitate commotus, præcipitique actus desperatione, &c. I leave others to examine whether Jovius has not confounded the Voyages which John Lascaris made by order of Laurence de Medicis, with the Voyage he supposes that he made into Greece under Pope Leo X. Bajazet Died before the Pontificate of Leo X. and I question much whether Cherseoglis had any great interest with the succeeding Sultan. And 'tis certain, he was never in so great a Capacity of serving John Lascaris, as in Bajazet's Reign.

(B) Lewis XII ——sent him to Venice in Quality of Ambassador.] I find that he sent him thither in 1507, and 1508. See Peter Bembus (f) in the History of Venice, where he mentions the occasion of those Embassies, and the Substance of the Embassador's Speech. Varillas (g) affirms, that in 1507. the Republick hearing of the League of Cambray, dismissed Lascaris Ambassador to Lewis XII. but how could this League be then known, which was not concluded till December 1508? See the Margin (†)

What Mr. de Wicquefort says of this Embassy, is not very obliging. The Pope, says he, ' (*) knew, ' when 'twas too late, the Fault which he had been ' guilty of, in making choice of an impertinent and ' ridiculous Minister. John Lascaris, whom Lew- ' is XII. sent on an Embassy to Venice in the Year ' 1503, was not much better. He descended from a ' Family which had formerly produced great Princes ' in the Empire of Constantinople, and was very ' learned, but knew nothing of the Affairs of the ' World; besides, he had a very mean Look, and ' lived very sordidly; so that instead of ap- ' pearing like an Ambassador, and honouring his ' Master, he affected to imitate the false Modesty of ' those who give themselves up to contemplative ' Philosophy, and profess Poverty, and bore a lit- ' tle of the Cynick. His Commission was the more ' difficult to execute, because he had Orders to bor- ' row Money, and to make an Alliance, at a time ' when the Inclinations of the Senate were not for ' the French Interest; because the Affairs of that ' King were not in a very good Condition in Italy. ' Laurence Suarez de Figueroa, And that from ' Ferdinand the Catholick, did not fail to make his ' Advantage of the Discontent of the Republick, ' which could not bear the King's lending them a Pe- ' dant instead of an Ambassador, and laid in a full ' Senate, that they might judge how the King of ' France would use them, if after the Conquest ' which he pretended to make of the Kingdom of ' Naples, he gained his Ends, and could Tyran- ' nize over Italy as he pleased; since in his very

(a) Varillas, Histoire de Charles VIII. l. 3. p. 262. ad ann. 1494. Dutch Edit.

(b) Jacob, Traité des Bibliotheques p. 458.

(c) Jovius Historiar. l. 13. fol. m. 256.

(d) Jovius ibid. fol. 255. verso (e) Id. ibid. fol. 255. See also Melanchthon in the fifth Book of Crion's Chronicle p. m. 874.

(f) Lib. 6. fol. m. 144. verso, & l. 7. fol. 152.

(g) Histoire Veneta parte secunda p. 70.

(†) He here hints by way of Antici- pation, that Au- thor tells the Intri- gues that were con- triving before the conclusion of the Treaty of Cambray, the League of Cam- bray.

(*) Wicquefort de l'Ambassadeur, &c. l. 1. p. m. 167.

ciation of the Greek Tongue. He returned into France (C) in the Reign of Francis I. and having ſtaid there ſome time, he went to Italy again, and died at Rome of the Gout, being about Ninety Years of Age. He was buried in the Church of St. Agatha. Tho' he had no ſettled Income, he had always wherewithal to ſupply his Expences, and yet he did not mind his Domeſtick Concerns, and loved to live great. His Lazineſs would not ſuffer him to compoſe (D) many Books β. He underſtood (E) Latin well, and was not aſhamed to be Corrector of the Preſs. I muſt (F) examine Gyraldus's Relation.

LATINUS (John) a Moor by Birth, was brought into Spain, being a little Boy, and was a Servant (A) in the Houſe of the Duke of Sueſſa γ. The Wit that was

* Troubles and Neceſſities he deſpiſed the Senate ſo much, as to ſend them a Greek Philoſopher, who was juſt come from the College.

(C) He returned into France in the Reign of Francis I.] Jovius ſays nothing of it, which is the reaſon why Varillas ſaid nothing of it neither. His Paraphraſe on that Hiſtorian imports (a) that Laſcaris not knowing what to do, engag'd himſelf with Charles VIII. And that being a Man fit for buſineſs, he had an Embaſſy given him to Venice, which he honourably diſcharg'd in the Reign of that Monarch, and of Lewis XII. his Succeſſor. At laſt, Leo X. being made Pope, invited Laſcaris to Rome to be one of his Council. This was, according to Varillas, John Laſcaris's laſt Employment; which is to maſſake ſeveral ways; for this Pope did not make him his Counſellor, but Director (b) of a Greek College, and afterwards this learned Man had ſome Employment at Paris. I believe it was that of the King's Library-Keeper, which I ground upon a Letter, which James Tuſanus wrote to Angelus Laſcaris, John's Son, in which are theſe Words: (c) Jani patris tui excellentem in Romana lingua, nedum veſtra, peritiam pluribus his verbis ne fuſius proſequar, illud certe dicam: Græcæ literaturæ quantum uſu, quantum ſcientia præcellat, ex eo intelligi vel maxime poſſe, quod eum ex cunctis veſtri generis hominibus de ſententia doctiſſimorum delectum princeps noſter Franciſcus accerſendum eſſe cenſuerit, ut Muſeo, quod in hac urbe longe omnium principe multo celeberrimum ſperamus excitatum iri, propediem, velut alter Apollo præſideat. Here follows a Paſſage, that is not free from Faults; however it will ſerve for a Proof: I take it from James du Breul's Antiquities of Paris. (d) Emanuel Chryſoloras had Angelo Tifernas for his Scholar, who in the year 1523. being at Paris, inſtructed in the Greek Tongue John Laſcaris, and William Budæus, two learned Men, who have Publiſhed many fine Books, as Mr. Genebrard witneſſes in his Chronology, in theſe Words. Anno 1523. Chryſoloræ, qui primus litteras Græcas Florentiam Coſmo Mediceo Florentino Duce attulit, diſcipulus Tifernas in Franciam venit, Budæumque literas Græcas docuit. Deinde Janus Laſcaris mortuo Laurentio Mediceo Mœcenate ſuo. Atque inde literatura Græca, deſerta Italia ad nos migravit. Now this Laſcaris and Budæus, as the ſame Author teſtifies, were the firſt, at whoſe Sollicitation King Francis I. ſet up his Library of Fontainebleau, and afterwards he appointed ſome Royal Profeſſors, as the ſame Author ſays. Laſcari & Budæo authoribus, Franc. I. Bibliothecam Fontenablæam inſtruxit, indeque anno 1530. linguarum & mathematum profeſſores. Nam cæteri ſunt adſcriptitii. There are many things to be cenſured in this Paſſage. In the firſt place Tifernas was called Gregory and not Angelo. 2. He Died in the XVth. Century, how then could he come to Paris in 1523? Father du Breul had been ſaying that Chryſoloras, who Died at Conſtance the fifteenth of April 1415. had taught him Greek. This was ſufficient to ſhew, that he did not live till the Reign of Francis I. 3. It is Abſurd to pretend that John Laſcaris a Native of Greece learn'd the Greek Tongue of (e) an Italian. 4. 'Tis a groſs ignorance to ſay, that in 1523. he and William Budæus were young Scholars. Budæus was then 56 years Old, and was look'd upon as the moſt learned Man, and the greateſt Grecian in France. 5. Genebrard's Paſſage cited by de Breul ſignifies that John Laſcaris came into France after Tifernas, and after the Death of Laurence de Medicis. He who cites it, did not underſtand it. Note that Laſcaris returned into France (f) in the year 1518, and that he was there (g) ſtill in 1528. Which ſhews that Moreri is guilty of a groſs Fault, for he ſays that he Died a little after Leo X. was made Pope.

(a) Varil. Anecdot. de Flor. fol. 184.

(b) See a Letter of Budæus, among thoſe of Eraſmus. 'Tis the 30*th. of the* 2*d. Book, p.* 156.

(c) Geſner. in Biblioth. fol. 39. verſo.

(d) Du Breul, Antiquitez de Paris, Book 2. p. 563. Paris Edition, 1639. in 4.

(e) Tifernas was an Italian.

(f) See Eraſmus's Letters, lib. 11. n. 4. pag. 548. & n. 5. pag. 549.

(g) See the ſame Letters, lib. 20. n. 72. pag. 930.

(D) His Lazineſs would not ſuffer him to Compoſe many Books.] He was deſired to make ſome Verſions of the Greek Authors, but he could hardly be perſuaded to Tranſlate ſome Tracts of Polybius concerning the Art of War (h). I find in the Catalogue of the Bodleian Library, his Book De Veris Græcarum litterarum formis ac cauſis apud antiquos Printed at Paris in 1536. in 8vo. and his Orations, Printed at Francfort in 1573. Geſner (i) ſays that his Latin and Greek Epigrams were Printed at Baſil in 1537.

(E) He underſtood Latin well, and was not aſhamed to be Corrector of the Preſs.] The Paſſage of Eraſmus, which I have quoted (k) in another Place, teſtifies, that John Laſcaris was Maſter of the Latin Tongue. Jovius gives him the ſame Commendation (l). Valebat Latina facundia, ita ut verſus, qui extant, perſcriberet. Beſides theſe two Teſtimonies, and that of Tuſanus (m), I might add ſome others, if it were neceſſary. Note, that Laſcaris was not ſatisfied with the Commendation given him by Eraſmus, in the Dialogue, intituled Ciceronianus. He ſided with the Malecontents, who wrote Satyrical Verſes at Paris (n) againſt the Author of that Dialogue. He was too touchy and angry without Reaſon; for ſee Eraſmus's Words: (o) De Jano (Laſcare) quoniam adhuc ſupereſt, dicendum eſt pareſtis. Morum comitate generis nobiliſatem præ ſe fert, acri judicio vir, multa in Epigrammatibus argutia: poterat inter Ciceroniani cognominis candidatos numerari, ni crebra legationes ac Regum negotia revocaſſent hominem à Muſis.

As for his being Corrector of the Preſs, read theſe Words of Henry Stephens: (p) Quid verò dicturos Al. filium Muſurum & Jamum Laſcarin putamus, in quibus primis Græcia reviviſcere cæpit, & qui principes in pandendo nobis ad linguæ Græcæ adyta itinere fuerunt? quid, inquam, dicturos remur, ſi, quum ipſi tantum honoris arti typographicæ detulerint, ut non indignam exiſtimarint cui ſuam operam navarent, fungentes munere correctorum (licent enim de rebus typographicis typographicè loqui) eò rem deveniſſe videant, ut ſiquis, &c. Add to this the Words of Mr. Chevillier (q). 'I believe that Laſcaris corrected the 'Avicenna, printed at Lyons, in Three Volumes in 'Folio, with the Commentaries of James de Partibus, by John Trechſel, and John Cleym, in the 'Year 1498, as I gueſs from the Epiſtle Dedica'tory, inſcribed to John Poncean, Phyſician to 'the King, which he prefixed to that Book.

(F) I muſt examine Gyraldus's Relation.] It imports, that the Medicis being expelled from Florence, Janus Laſcaris wandred about for ſome time, till Leo X. ſent for him to Rome; that after the Death of this Pope he was ſent for into France by Francis I. who having made uſe of him in the Foundation of a College and Library, depured him to Venice, where he tarried a long time; and laſtly, after the Death of Clement VII. was perſuaded to come to Rome by the fair Promiſes of Paul III. where he died ſoon after, leaving a Son who was called Angelo (r). I obſerve firſt a great Oniſſion. Gyraldus ſays nothing of the Embaſſy to Venice under Lewis XII. I further obſerve, that he ſuppoſes that Francis I. ſent Laſcaris to Venice, in the Quality of Legatus. I believe he is miſtaken. Laſtly, I obſerve, that he did not know that this learned Greek was at Rome in the Year 1532, under the Pontificate of Clement VII. See the 28th. Letter of Bunel, wherein he ſays (ſ), that he ſaw John Laſcaris at Rome that Year.

(A) A Servant in the Houſe of the Duke of Sueſſa.] He declared it himſelf in an Inſcription mentioned by Don Nicolas Antonio. (t) Hæc Joannes Æthiops Criſticola ex Æthiopia uſque infans allectus ad celeberrimum & invictiſſimi Conſalvi Fernan-

(h) Paulus Jovius in elog. cap. 31. p. 74.

(i) Geſn. ubi ſupra.

(k) In the Rem. A. of the Art. Muſurus.

(l) Jovius ubi ſupra.

(m) Above in the Rem. C.

(n) See Eraſmus's Letters, pag. 1030. 1039. 1044. & alibi edit. Londin.

(o) Eraſm. in Ciceronianο, p. 70.

(p) Henr. Stephan. in artis typog. querimonia apud Almeloveenum de viris Stephan. pag. 140.

(q) Chevil. Orig. de l'Imprimerie, pag. 194.

(r) Taken from Lilius Gregorius Gyraldus de Poet. ſuor. temp. Dial. 1. p. m. 552.

(ſ) Bunellus Epiſt. 28. pag. 108. Edit. Toloſ. 1687.

(t) Nicol. Anton. Bibliotb. Hiſp. tom. 1. pag. 547.

was observed in him, was the cauſe of his being permitted to be taught with his young Maſter; by which Means he grew ſo learned, that being made free, he obtained of the Archbiſhop of Granada to teach the Latin Tongue in the School of the Church of that City. He worthily diſcharged the Duties of that Place for the ſpace of Twenty Years; and becauſe he was no leſs eſteemed for his Virtue than for his Parts, he found a Wife (B) with a good Fortune. He publiſhed (C) ſeveral Poems. Some ſay, that Clenard brought him (D) from Æthiopia into Spain, and taught him. This is not true: it will be eaſie to ſhew their Error. Moreri's Faults (E) are few in Number, but very Groſs.

LAUDICE, Siſter and Wife of Mithridates, ought to be reckoned among the Perſons of unhappy Memory. Her Husband meditating a vaſt Deſign, ſtole away from his Court Incognito, to go and ſee, with a ſmall Attendance, the Situation of the Places where he deſigned to make War. Laudice hearing no News of him, fancied that he was dead, and that he would return no more; and inſtead of afflicting her ſelf, ſhe gave her ſelf up to the moſt filthy Pleaſures. The return of her Husband made her very a Taken from Don Nicolas Antonio, Bibl. Hiſpan. tom. 1. Pag. 547.

(a) Hic dum Mendozium Heroa (I think it is a Fault of the Preſs, inſtead of Herum) Granatæ in ludum literarium comitaretur, linguam Latinam eadem opera arripuit. Schottus, Biblioth. Hiſpan. pag. 456.

(b) He ſcripſerit, ſaltem veri pag. 92.

(c) Nicol. Anton. ubi ſupra.

(d) Id. ib.

(e) Granatæ linguam Latinam publice profiteri cœpit, illu pendo exemplo in cathedra nigram hominem Latine loqui. Schottus ubi ſupra.

(f) Ludov. Nonius in Hiſpania illuſtrata, pag. 83.

(g) Taken from Nicol. Antonio ibid.

(h) It is to be ſeen in Nicolas Antonio ubi ſupra, and in Moreri.

(i) Bullart, tom. 1. p. 267.

di à Cordoba Ducis Succeſſe, Gonſalvi Magni Hiſpaniarum Ducis nepotis ſervus, ab ipſo infantia lacte ſimul nutritus, cum ipſo à rudibus annis liberalibus artibus inſtitutus & doctus, & tandem libertate donatus, Granatæ ab illuſtriſſimo pariter & reverendiſſimo Petro Guerrero Granatenſi Archiepiſcopo extra omnem aleam doctiſſimo, S. Eccleſiæ Granatæ cathedram Grammaticæ & Latini ſermonis accepit moderandam, quam per viginti annos faliciter moderatus eſt. The Jeſuit Schottus is therefore miſtaken, who ſays, that our Moor learned Latin, waiting upon Mendoza at the College (a). Our Latinus's Maſter's Name was not Mendoza. You'll find in Aubertus Miræus (b), almoſt Word for Word, what Schottus ſays of this Learned [illegible]ian.

(B) He found a Wife with a good Fortune.] He married (c) Donna Anna de Carleval: Charus omnibus propter ingenii ac morum dotes, matrimonio insuper honeſto nec ignobili fœmina ſupra conditionem ornatus (d). 'Tis ſaid he was a handſome Man, which is perhaps as rare a thing, according to the Taſte of the Europeans, as to ſee a Moor (e) teach the Latin Tongue. Ludum hic (Granatæ) parentum memoria aperuit (quis credat?) Joannes Æthiops genere, Latinus hinc dictus, at præſtanti forma & Muſica ac Poetica in paucis peritus (f).

(C) He publiſhed ſeveral Poems.] One upon the Battle of Lepanto, another upon the Death of Pius V. and a great many Epitaphs. The Title of 'em are: Auſtriados libri II. ſive de victoria navali Joannis Auſtriaci ad Echinadas Inſulas. De obitu Pii V. ejuſque in Philippum regem ſtudio. De auguſta regalium corporum ex variis tumulis in unum regale templum Eſcurialis tranſlatione, atque illinc in Granatenſe Reginæ Fœminæ, epigrammatum, ſive epitaphiorum libri II. at Granada, 1576. The Inſcription I have ſet down in the firſt Remark, is taken from this laſt Book; and as the Author obſerves, that he was Fifty Eight Years old (g), we may know, will ſome ſay, the Year of his Birth. A Man who is in his Fifty Eighth Year, in 1576. muſt have been born in 1518. But let us take care not to argue in this manner; for though Latinus's Epitaphs and Epigrams were publiſhed at Granada in 1576, it do's not follow, that the Inſcription we ſpeak of, was made in that Year. It were a wrong Conſequence, tho' we were ſure that he was then Alive: And it muſt be worſe ſtill, if it be ſuppoſed that he Died in 1573. as his Epitaph (h) imports. What is certain, is, that ſince he Died in 1573. this Inſcription was not made after that year; and ſo the Author was at leaſt 58 years Old, that year, and he could not be Born after the year 1515. Nicolas Antonio would be to blame, in caſe he could have mention'd the year, in which Latinus ſaid he was 58 years old; for he does not mention it. I could wiſh for the rarity of the thing, that our Latinus had found a Place among Mr. Baillet's Poets.

(D) That Clenard brought him from Æthiopia into Spain.] The Author (i) of the Academie des Sciences, tells us, that Clenard departing from the Court of Fez, was only attended by one Æthiopian Diſciple, who arriving with him at Granada, in 1542, writ to the Emperor Charles V. an elegant Letter, and died in that ſame Year, and left his Æthiopian Diſciple (known by the Name of John Latinus) ſo well tutor'd in good Literature, that he compoſed a fine Latin Poem upon the Victory of Lepanto. I am induced from many Reaſons to believe, that there are ſome Falſities in this Account. 1. Latinus (k) ſays he was but a Child, when he was removed from Æthiopia into Europe. This would not be true, if he had come from Africa into Spain with Clenard in 1542. He was then at leaſt Twenty Seven Years old. 2. He ſays, that from his Childhood (l) he was educated and inſtructed with Gonzales Ferdinand de Corduba, his Maſter, who at laſt (m) gave him his Liberty. Would he have ſpoken in this manner, if he had been indebted for all his Learning to James Clenard, as Mr. Bullart ſuppoſes? 3. He ſays nothing that has the leaſt Affinity with Mr. Bullart's Account. My third Obſervation perſuades me, that Aubertus Miræus is miſtaken in ſaying, (n) Diſcipulum reliquit (Clenardus) Joannem Latinum Æthiopem (quod prodigii ſimile eſt) Rhetorem Illiberitanum, cujus poema veſtas panegyricum de navali Jo. Auſtriaci ad Echinadas Inſulas victoria. Doubtleſs Mr. Bullart was deceived by this Paſſage of Aubertus Miræus; but he has added to it a Fault of his own, in ſuppoſing that Latinus was brought into Europe by James Clenard, in the Year 1542. His Error probably proceeded from this. Clenard ſays (o) that being ſent to Braga to ſet up a School there, he produced his Three Mooriſh Servants before his Scholars, and commanded them in Latin to perform certain Poſtures. Theſe Moors had learnt in his Houſe Latin enough by Cuſtom, to underſtand what he commanded them in that Tongue. Erant mihi Servuli tres, quos (p) ſupra nominavi, non ſane peritis Grammaticæ, verum domeſtica conſuetudine tantum conſenti, ut me percipient, quicquid dicerem, & contra Latine reſpondeant, licet identidem peccantes in Priſcianum. Hos in ludum productos, dialogos agere juſſi, ſpectantibus diſcipulis, & cum eos multis de rebus ſermonem miſcebam, attentiſſimo auditorio, adeo miracula loco fuit, quod Æthiopes loquerentur Latine. Heus, Dento, inquam, ſalta, &c. From this Story it might eaſily be concluded, that John Latinus was a Scholar of this Learned Grammarian.

(E) Moreri's Faults.] 1. 'Tis not true that Gonzales Fernand de Corduba made our Latinus a Slave, when he was ſtill in his Cradle. The Inſcription (q) above-mentioned, clearly intimates, that he and Latinus were almoſt of the ſame Age; and therefore Gonzales, whilſt he was in his Cradle, muſt have made Expeditions into Africa, or by Sea, if it were true, that he made Latinus a Slave. I would fain know why Moreri did not ſtick to a Faithful Tranſlation of his Originals. He had the Book of Don Nicolas Antonio before his Eyes; why was he not contented to ſay, that Latinus was a Slave to Gonzales Fernando de Corduba? Doth this Signifie, that Gonzales had taken this Æthiopian himſelf, and afterwards (r) brought him into Spain? II. Latinus's Employment at Granada was not merely to teach the young Clerks of the Cathedral. He publickly taught all Comers the Latin Tongue; it was the Cuſtom of the Schools of Cathedral Churches, as Mr. Joly ſhews in one of his Books. III. 'Tis a great Ignorance (s) to tell us of a Poem, intituled, Auſtriados. 'Twere in vain to pretend to be excuſed by the Original, in which Nicolas Antonio does not uſe the Genitive Caſe Auſtriadis, with adding libros duos.

(k) See the Rem. A

(l) A rudibus annis.

(m) Et tandem libertate donatus.

(n) Aub. Miræus in elog. Belg.

(o) Clenard epiſt. lib. 2. pag. 303.

(p) This Word refers to the following Paſſage in Page 295. Præter Guhelmum miniſtrum tres ſervos addiveram Æthiopes, Dentonem, Nigrinum & Carbonem, nam ita eos nuncupavit Reſpondit.

(q) In the Remark A.

(r) This is a Conſequence of Moreri's Error.

(s) This Fault has been mended in the Dutch Edition.

very uneaſie. It was neceſſary to conceal her Crime, and ſhe could find no better way of doing it, than by Poyſoning Mithridates. She was preparing for it, but one of her Servant-Maids betray'd her, and revealed the Myſtery. Mithridates did not heſitate to put ſuch a Wife to Death [a]. A Modern Author [b] falſly ſays, that this Monarch was actually poyſon'd by his Wife; but that being accuſtomed to his Antidote, he recovered, tho' difficultly. Thoſe who are perplex'd with Juſtin's Saying, that Laudice had (F) lain in, in her Husband's Abſence, raiſe needleſs Difficulties. I have ſpoken elſewhere [c] of another LAUDICE, Siſter to this, and ſtill more wicked than ſhe. Juſtin is wrongfully ſaid (G) to contradict himſelf in ſpeaking of theſe two Women.

LAUNOI (Matthew de) one of the moſt violent Leaguers in France, had been many Years Miniſter of the Reformed Church; but having committed Adultery, and deſpairing of a Relaxation of the Diſcipline on his Behalf, he returned to the Communion of Rome. I dare not affirm, what I have read in great Authors, that he was a Prieſt (A) when he turned Proteſtant; but if he was not then, he became one after he had renounced the Proteſtant Religion. Though he had been moſt ignominiouſly diſgraced (B) at Sedan, for his Adultery, he was received with open Arms by the Catholicks. They made [d] Gatherings for him; they gave him a Canonſhip in the Cathedral of Soiſſons, and made him Curate of St. Mederic at Paris [e]. He uſed his Tongue, his Pen, and all his Induſtry [f] to foment the Rebellion of the Pariſians; and made himſelf ſo conſiderable in the horrible Faction of the Sixteen, that he (C) preſided in all the Aſſemblies that were held to put to Death Barnabas Briſſon, Preſident of the Parliament of Paris. If he had not ſuddenly eſcaped, he had kept Company to thoſe whom the Duke of Mayenne cauſed to be hanged for having promoted the Death of that Great Man [g]. He retired into Flanders [h], where I believe he

[a] Taken from Juſtin, lib. 37. c. 3. p. m. 544.
[b] Chriſt. Matthias, theatr. hiſtor. pag. m. 28.
[c] In the Article Cappadocia.
[d] Memoires de la Ligue tom. 6. p. 449. The other Hiſtorians do not ſay that he was made Curate of that Pariſh.
[e] Memoires de la Ligue, ib.
[f] Thuanus, lib. 95. pag. 280.
[g] Cayet, Chronologie Novenaire, ad ann. 1591.
[h] Ibid.

(F) That Laudice had lain-in in her Husband's Abſence.] Mithridates could not be offended at it; the Computation of the time permitted him to pretend, that he was the Father of the Boy, whom Laudice was delivered of in his Abſence. What makes me ſay ſo is, that Juſtin obſerves, that this Prince was (a) congratulated, both for his Return, and for the Birth of a Son. No Body durſt have wiſhed him Joy for a Shameful and undoubted Proof of his Cuckoldom. What was it then that made Laudice ſo uneaſie? Probably ſhe was with Child, or afraid of being ſo, having lain with her Gallants after her Lying-in. Thus you ſee the reaſon, why to conceal her Adulteries, ſhe endeavoured to deſtroy her Husband. (b) Laudice ——— cum periſſe eum crederet, in concubitus amicorum projecta, quaſi admiſſum facinus majore ſcelere tegere poſſet, venenum adventi paravit.

(G) Juſtin is wrongfully ſaid to contradict himſelf.] Freinſhemius charges him with it, or with prodigiouſly confounding Hiſtory. (c) Aut contradicit ſibi auctor, aut hiſtoriam miſce confundit. His Reaſon is, that Juſtin relates in other Places: 1. That (d) Laudice, the Widow of Ariarathes, King of Cappadocia, was killed by her Subjects, for poiſoning Five of her Children. 2. That (e) Laudice, Ariarathes's Widow, married Nicomedes, King of Bithynia, whilſt her Brother Mithridates was preparing to ſuccour her againſt the ſame Nicomedes, Uſurper of Cappadocia, to the Prejudice of Ariarathes, Son of the deceaſed King. The reaſon of this Accuſation of Freinſhemius is of no Force; for Juſtin ſpeaks of two Laudice's Queens of Cappadocia. The firſt had married one Ariarathes, who died in the War of Ariſtonicus, about the 622d. Year of Rome. The ſecond was Siſter to Mithridates, and Wife of Ariarathes, who ſucceeded the other. There is therefore neither Contradiction, nor Confuſion in this Account. Note, that Juſtin is cenſured for things, in which he is right, and is not blamed for many matters of Fact, which he falſifies. The Commentator, in uſum Delphni, has renewed Freinſhemius's Accuſation.

(a) Inter gratulationem adventûs ſui, & filii geniti. Juſtin. lib. 37. c. 3.
(b) Id. ib.
(c) Freinſhemius in Juſtinum lib. 38. c. 1. pag. 548.
(d) Juſtin. lib. 37. c. 1.
(e) Id. lib. 38. c. 1.

(A) That he was a Prieſt when he turned Proteſtant.] Thuanus affirms it. Matthæus Launæus, ſays he (f), ſacri Sueſſionum collegii Sodalis, olim ſacerdos, & poſtea ejerata majorum religione doctrinam proteſtantium amplexus, paſtoriſque officio diu inter eos functus, uxore etiam ducta, cujus cum propter egeſtatem ætate jam inclinata tæderet, errore revocato ad nos redierat, ſed incerta fide, quam mox ut ſe vere Catholicum approbaret, factioſis addixit. The ſame thing is repeated in the 95th. Book (g), with a very conſiderable Addition; for that Hiſtorian reckoning up the Reaſons, which induced this Man to leave the Proteſtants, does not forget the Puniſhment which he had to fear, being convicted of Adultery. He returned into the Pale of the Church, ſays Thuanus; whether he repented of his Errors, or was weary of his Wife, or feared the Puniſhment which the Proteſtants inflict on thoſe who are convicted of Adultery. (h) Ruſſus ſeu pœnitentia ductus, ſive uxoris pertæſus, & adulterii pœnam, cujus convictus fuerat, metuens, ad ſacerdotium relicta uxore redierat. I ſhall ſet down hereafter another Paſſage, wherein Thuanus repeats part of theſe Things. I omit theſe Words of Du-Verdier Vau-Privas. 'Matthew de Launoy, firſt 'of all a Prieſt, afterwards a Miniſter of the pretended Reformed Religion, is now returned into the Pale 'of the Chriſtian and Chatholick Church. Thuanus's Authority is ſufficient to prove what I advance. Let us ſee, whether one may doubt that Matthew de Launoi was a Prieſt when he turned Proteſtant. If I doubt of it, I build upon the Silence that he kept upon an Occaſion, where it ſeems he ſhould have mentioned his Prieſtood. 'I omit, ſays he (k), 'what they ſay of my Calling, before they drew 'me out of the Boſom of the Chriſtian and Catho'lick Church, and of my leaving my former Im'ployment. For I have always been in publick Bu'ſineſs and Authority ever ſince I performed my 'Studies; and notwithſtanding my Youth, which 'was far from Maturity, I behaved my ſelf with 'Praiſe and Honour, to the Content of thoſe with 'whom I had to do, till ſome Miniſters and others 'of their Sect perplexed my Head with their Illu'ſions and Dreams. And the eſteem they had for 'me was ſuch, that aſſoon as I was liſted in their 'Party in the Year 1560, they forced me to accept 'of an Employment among them, in which they 'were ſo haſty, as not to give me any time to 'conſider of it, they were ſo affraid of loſing me. 'Nay, they obliged me to make but one Probation 'Sermon; and moreover, aſſoon as they ſaw me 'enter upon the Subject, being contented with the 'beginning of my Sermon, they ordered me to 'ceaſe, and admitted me amongſt 'em, to ſend me 'into Champagne.

(f) Thuan. hiſtor. l. 86. p. 112. Anno 1587. vide etiam Maimbourg. Hiſt. de la Ligue. l. 1. pag. 65.
(g) Pag. 280. ad ann. 1588.

(B) Had been moſt ignominiouſly diſgraced.] The Memoirs of the League (l) import, that being convicted of having got a Couſin of his with Child at Sedan, where he was Miniſter, he was hanged there in Effigie.

(h) Thuan. ibid.
(i) Bibliotheque Françoiſe, pag. 860.
(k) Defenſe de Matthieu de Launoi & d'Henri Perpetier —— contre les fauſſes accuſations & perverſes calomnies des Miniſtres de Paris, Sedan & autres, pag. 43. 44. That Book was printed at Paris, for John du-Carroi, in 1577, in 8.

(l) Tome 6. pag. 351.

(C) He preſided in all the Aſſemblies.] See the Novenaire Chronologie (m) of Peter Victor Cayet, where you'll find more Particulars than in theſe Words of Thuanus, which are ſufficient to my Purpoſe: (n) Matthæus Launæus qui olim Presbyter, poſtea ejerata majorum religione Miniſter uxorem duxerat, ejuſque pertæſus adſcera redierat —— principem locum in iis conciliabulis ſemper tenuit.

(m) Tom. 1. fol. 508. & ſeq. ad. ann. 1591.
(n) Thuan. lib. 102. p. 443. ad ann. 1591.

(D) One

he ſpent the reſt of his Days. He publiſhed ſome Books of Controverſie, and one amongſt others (D) concerning the Motives of his Change, and an Anſwer to the Calumnies, he pretended the Miniſters had ſpread againſt him. He is very weak in his Anſwer (E) to the Accuſation of Adultery; and as his Conduct in the Time of the League

(D) One amongſt others concerning the Motives of his Change.] It is intitled, 'The Declaration and 'Confutation of the falſe Suppoſitions and wrong 'Applications of ſome Texts of the Holy Scriptures, which the Miniſters make uſe of in theſe 'laſt Times to divide Chriſtendom; with an Exhortation to the ſaid Miniſters, to reunite themſelves, 'and to bring their Auditors to the Catholick, Apoſtolick, and Roman Church, from which they 'ſhould not have ſeparated——by Matthew de 'Launoi, and Henry Penetier, late Miniſters of the 'pretended Reformed Religion, and at preſent returned into the Pale of the Chriſtian Catholick 'Church: the whole put into Order, and digeſted 'into three Books, by the ſaid de Launoi. The Epiſtle Dedicatory (a) to King Henry III. tells us, that theſe two Miniſters met in the Burrough of Guines, in the Re-conquered Country, the firſt of June 1576. Pennetier being returned thither from England ſometime before, and the other being newly come from Holland. 'Twas time, ſay they, that they prepared that Book, and reſolved to make an open Abjuration of their Hereſie.

(a) It is dated from Paris the 20*th. of* September, 1577.

(E) He is very weak in his Anſwer to the Accuſation of Adultery.] He owned himſelf (b) to be a frail Man, and liable to fall into that Sin. He does not confeſs the Fault he is accuſed of, but he alledges in his Juſtification, only ſome little Cavils. 'My 'Accuſers, ſays he (c), are out as to the time for want 'of a good Memory; for in 1574, I was in Holland. 'They involve themſelves in many Variations, adds 'he, ſaying it was a Maid, who had been intruſted 'with me, by People of Honeſty, and fearing God; 'and afterwards they ſay, ſhe was a Servant-Maid. 'Now there's a great deal of Difference between the 'one and the other. For when a young Woman 'is given in Truſt, this preſuppoſes ſhe is of a good 'Family, and has wherewithal to live; ſo that ſhe 'does not become a Servant-Maid of Six or Seven 'Livres a Year. Beſides, they had a mind to aggravate this pretended Fact: For it were a greater 'Crime to corrupt a young Woman of a good Family, intruſted to ones Keeping, than if it was a 'meer Servant-Maid, who hires her ſelf for Wages, to ſerve and ſtay as long as her Service is liked. This is but a ſorry Defence: I have cited an Author (d) above, who ſays that Launoi got his own Couſin with Child. 'Twas probably a young Woman that was ſent to him during the Perſecutions of France, when many Proteſtants fled to Sedan. Now as Launoi was not very rich, and his Refugee had not perhaps wherewithal to pay for her Board, 'tis probable enough that by reaſon of her Domeſtick Services, ſhe was to him inſtead of a Servant-Maid; and ſo without any Contradiction, ſome might ſay, that he had lain with his Servant-Maid: and others that he had lain with a young Woman, that was intruſted to his Keeping.

(b) Defenſe de Matthieu de Launoi pag. 45.

(c) Ibid. pag. 47.

(d) In the Remonſt.

Here's another pretended Contradiction. (e) 'They ſay, that being convicted of the Fact before 'the Conſiſtory, I confeſs'd it to three or four of 'them; they are uncertain as to the Number. But 'they don't ſay how I was convicted. It was not, 'adds he (f), by being ſurprized in the Fact, by 'the Judge himſelf, attended with his Serjeants, 'and others of his Retinue. It was not by unexceptionable Witneſſes, for People don't call Witneſſes on ſuch Occaſions. It was not by a violent 'Preſumption; for if they had had any, they would 'have been very defective, according to their own 'Diſcipline. A Preſumption is grounded either upon the too great Familiarity of the Parties, or 'upon the Maids being with Child. If they grounded their Preſumption upon Familiarity, they 'ſhould have given us Notice of it, in order to preſerve us by good Remonſtrances from falling into 'Sin: So that they would be greatly to blame, for 'having ſuffer'd the thing to run on, without interpoſing by a Brotherly Charity, or requiſite Cenſures. If they grounded their Preſumption upon 'the Maids being with Child, it is not ſufficient to 'accuſe me, much leſs to condemn me. It would 'be a fine Law, if a Servant-Maid ſhould commit a 'Folly in her Maſter's Houſe, and was got with 'Child, that the Maſter ſhould be charged with 'it. What reaſon is there for that? Fathers and 'Mothers cannot ſometimes preſerve their own 'Daughters, though they keep 'em cloſe. How 'then ſhould a Maſter be accountable for the big 'Belly of a Servant Maid, whom he can't always 'have under his Eye? It were much better to be 'ones own Servant. Such a Preſumption therefore 'is of no Force. But when they ſaw that young 'Maid of a good Family, big-bellied, as they ſay, they 'ſhould have ſent for and examined her, to know 'the whole matter, and then they had known the 'Truth. But they forgot to do it; and therefore 'they can't alledge a Preſumption, without condemning themſelves. And after all, it would be of no 'Force. It were eaſie to ſhew the Weakneſs of this Defence, would one be at the Pains; but the thing not deſerving it, I only ſay, that though he had put this Girl out of the way, one might have had convincing Proofs of her being with Child; ſo that he could take no Advantage of her not being confronted and interrogated.

(e) Ibid.

(f) Ibid. pag. 48.

The following pretended Contradiction ſignifies no more than the former. (g) 'They ſay, that I have 'been convicted before their Conſiſtory, which according to them, was compoſed of Seventeen Miniſters, and Thirteen Elders, which make Thirty 'Perſons. Now they maintain, that I was convicted by that Confeſſion, which, ſay they, I made 'before three or four: It was not therefore their 'Conſiſtory; for there would be Twenty ſix or 'Twenty ſeven Perſons wanting. A vain and childiſh Cavil. It was not pretended that he had confeſs'd his Fault before all the Conſiſtory, but that without confeſſing it before that Aſſembly, it had been proved upon him; and it was added, that he had confeſs'd the Charge in Particular to three or four Perſons.

(g) Ibid. pag. 50.

He complains (h) 'that they equally condemned them both of Adultery, and to the ſame 'Penalties. Now an Adultery, as it is diſtinguiſhed from Fornication, is committed between, or by 'married Perſons; and yet they ſay, ſhe was a 'Maid; ſhe did not therefore commit Adultery in 'that Senſe. This is a pitiful Argument; for to commit Adultery, properly ſpeaking, there is no need that both the Parties ſhould be married, it ſuffices that one of 'em be ſo.

(h) Ibid. pag. 50.

The laſt thing he objects, is the reſpect of Perſons (i): He pretends they had great Indulgence for the like Faults; he names the Perſons and Places; and whether he was willing to find a greater Conformity between the Crime he was accuſed of, and that whereof he accuſed ſome of his Brethren, or whether he had ſome other Reaſons, ſome Servant-Maids appear moſt Times in his Recriminations. He names a Miniſter, whoſe Name was prefixed to ſome fine Books, and who was called in Holland the School Predicant (k): If we may believe him, this handſome Preacher made himſelf formidable to his Landladies, for his Attempts upon their Maids, and admirably made uſe of the Maxim of a Roman Poet (l). I ſhall ſay in the following Remark, that Launoi was not an honeſt Man enough to prejudice thoſe whom he hindered.

(i) Pag. 51, 52.

(k) That is, the Engliſh Miniſter.

(l) Ne ſit ancilla tibi amica. Horat. Epiſt. 4. lib. 2. Scribitur ad Quint. Fabium.

Let us make a little Digreſſion. Either Clergymen ſhould be permitted to marry, or forbidden to keep young Servant-Maids; for the prodigious Commerce of Prieſts, which hath ſubſiſted the Papiſts for ſo many Ages, owes its Original to the Permiſſion of having Women about 'em, to manage their Houſe keeping. The Intention of the Canons was that they ſhould confine themſelves to the Service of a Servant-Maid; but they eaſily believ'd that themſelves to be perſuaded to have to do with other Perſons: The Function of a Confeſſor found ſo convenient to them in all Reſpects, that their Miniſters had not much trouble [illegible] Sin. Since Luther's Reformation, the Proteſtant Clergy [illegible] their Servant-Maids, unleſs the [illegible] much ſuſpected to ſerve [illegible]. Every Body knows the Song, the Burthen whereof is, Dites moi, Marie, &c. If you love me, Mary, &c. That Prieſt that ſpoke [illegible] Confeſſion to a Woman, [illegible] lewd Rebuſe to ſay, which we dare not explain.

THAT the Prohibition of Marriage, and the Permiſſion [illegible] Maids, are two [illegible] Times

League made it appear that he was an ill Man, no Credit ought to be given to the Stories which he Publiſhed (F) againſt the Proteſtants. That which concerns two pretended Demoniacks is (G) the moſt Ridiculous.

LAUNOI (John de) in Latin Launoius, Doctor of Divinity in the Univerſity of Paris, was Born in a little Village of Normandy near Coutances. He performed his Studies in Philoſophy and Divinity at Paris with ſo great ſucceſs, that he became a formidable Diſputant. He was admitted a Prieſt and Doctor of Divinity (A) in the year againſt unmarried Churchmen, 'tis moſt commonly with Relation to their Maids, and the Reaſon of it is plain: the Temptations on both ſides, and the Occaſions of ſinning, are more eaſily and frequently to be met with: Hence it is doubtleſs, that the looſe Caluiſts do very much extenuate the Sin of a Maid got with Child by her Maſter. In former Times, the Word Focaria was taken in a good Senſe; it ſignified a Woman or a Maid, who ſerved in a Houſe, and dreſt her Maſter's Meat; but in Proceſs of time, it only ſignified (a) the Concubines of Clergymen: The reaſon was, that moſt of their Maids continued indeed to be their Cooks, but moreover they lay with their Maſters. Let us conclude, that in no Country whatſoever young unmarried Clergymen ſhould be allowed to keep young Servant-Maids.

(a) See du Cange's Gloſſary at the word focaria, p. 460. 470. Edit. Pariſ.

(F) The Stories which he publiſhed againſt the Proteſtants.] Tho' we ſhould paſs over the horrible Crimes he committed during the League, we ſhould have reaſon to look on him as an Impoſtor, with reſpect to many things he relates of the Miniſters, as being very remote from Probability. He (b) ſays, that the Miniſters who fled to Neufchattel in Switzerland, being reſolved to undo a young Man, who had preferred the Study of Phyſick before Divinity, accuſed him of many falſe Doctrines; but that one of the moſt famous amongſt them, oppoſed their Deſign: However, they ceaſed not to proſecute this Phyſician. (c) 'Some calling him a Sorcerer, others an Anabaptiſt, others an Atheiſt. Others told him, how dare you ſay, that you don't believe all the Doctrines of Mr. Calvin, by whoſe Mouth we all ſpeak? He anſwering, that Calvin was a Man ſubject to Error like others: They immediately cried out, O curſed Philoſophy! O execrable Blaſphemy! For to ſpeak againſt Calvin's Doctrine, and againſt the Intention and Will of thoſe venerable Doctors, is in their Opinion to ſpeak againſt God, and lye to the Holy Ghoſt; and they make no Conſcience of proſecuting a Man for it to Death, if they can catch him. What he makes theſe Miniſters ſay concerning Calvin (d) is ſo far from the Spirit and Maxims of the Reformed Church, and ſo inconſiſtent with their Style, that this alone is enough to convince us, that he forged the Slanders he publiſhed; and therefore it can be no Prejudice to the Memory of thoſe concerned, if I take the Liberty of inſerting here this ſorry Story. '(e) The eldeſt Capel had, a little before, plaid ſuch a mad Trick to a Lady of a good Family, who coming to Sedan upon Buſineſs, did not care to be known. Nevertheleſs, his great Curioſity made him ſo bold, as to uſe the Name and Authority of the Duke and Dutcheſs of Bouillon, to get into the Chamber of the ſaid Lady, and to ſee her. At the ſame time, he plaid another Trick, which ſhewed no leſs his Madneſs than a Scandalous and Lewd Deſire. For coming out of Church, moved with I know not what Devotion, he took a young Gentlewoman by the Arm, who was very Handſome and Modeſt, and of an Honourable Family, and deſired he might ſpeak a word with her: which being granted him, he told her in the Ear, Madam, being moved with the good Qualities I perceive in you, with your Beauty, and civil Behaviour, and eſpecially with your Wit, I take the boldneſs to make a requeſt to you; but I would not by any means be denied. The Lady anſwering him, that ſhe could grant nothing, before ſhe knew what he deſign'd to ask, he told her, I would beg of you to give me one hours Recreation with your Body: We can eaſily meet in a place, where there will be no Body but you and I. The poor Gentlewoman perfectly aſhamed and amazed at the inſtruction given her by this reformed Philoſopher, coming from Sermon, ran in haſte to her Mother, to whom ſhe declared the whole matter: Which the Mother by way of Complaint told me the ſame Day.

(b) Defenſe de Matthieu de Launoi, p. 38. & ſeq.

(c) Ibid. p. 42.

(d) See alſo what he relates in the 2d. Book of his Declaration and Refutation, fol. 136. verſo.

(e) Defenſe, p. 35. 36.

(G) Two pretended Demoniacks is the moſt Ridiculous.] Here is the Story in ſhort: Matthew de Launoi was a Celebrated Miniſter in 1562. Some Merchants of the Low-Countries heard him Preach with ſo much ſatisfaction at Ai in Champagne, that they kept him with 'em, as he was upon his Departure for England. They admired his Language and Diligence; for he often Preach'd ſix times in twenty four hours. They made him their Miniſter at Tournai. Whilſt he was there, it was reported that the Exorciſms of the Catholick Church had delivered ſeveral People poſſeſt by the Devil; which diſpleas'd the Calviniſts: They fear'd their Sect would be cried down, if their Miniſters had not the Gift of driving out Devils, which was Conſpicuous in the Apoſtles, and was ſtill to be ſeen among the Papiſts. They therefore ſuborn'd two Perſons, a Man and a Woman, and engag'd 'em to pretend to be Demoniacks, for a certain Sum, and a Penſion for Life. Theſe two Perſons plaid their part very well; and hereupon Matthew de Launoi, who knew nothing of this contrivance, was deſired to go and aſſiſt thoſe two Demoniacks; he went, and his Prayers and Sermons proved ſo effectual, that theſe two Demoniacks after a great many fetches, managed as they were directed, declared that the Devil was gone out of their Bodies. The Miracle was ſpread far and near, and procured de Launoi a prodigious Veneration. The Cheat was diſcover'd ſome time after; becauſe the two Perſons who had play'd that Farce, not recovering the promiſed Reward, Sued their Seducers. A Weaver, and a Roper acquainted de Launoi with this in Holland (e) in the year 1574. This was the Motive of his Converſion, if we believe the Cordelier Sedulius, who has inſerted this Story at length in his Anſwer (f) to the Alcoran des Cordeliers Printed in 1607. He ſays, that Matthew de Launoi (g) being ſtill Alive at Bruſſels, and writing many Books againſt the Calviniſts, could vouch the truth of it. Spondanus has inſerted the ſubſtance of this ſtory in his Annals (h). There is no need of ſhewing the impertinence of it; ſince every Body knows, that the Proteſtants decried all the Miracles of the paſt Ages, and maintained that they were not neceſſary for the juſtification of the Reformation. See, what I have ſaid in the Remark R of Calvin's Article.

(e) Non aque ſunt ecclæſiæ à Matthæo intellectæ, quam pecuniis non præſtitis litem movere debitoribus dæmoniaci cœperunt: totaque eſt ea fabula in Hollandia ad annum 1574. Matthæo à duobus, Chriſtiano de la Quennoi lerie textore lini, & Joanne Walle, qui chordis nectendis vitam ducere conſueſſet, commemorata. Sedulius ubi infra, p. 283.

(f) Henr. Sedulius, Apologetic. adverſus Alcoranum Franciſcanorum p. 280. & ſeq. He quotes Florentius vander Haer de initiis tumultuum Belgicorum.

(g) Vivit hodieque Matthæus Bruxellæ Principum urbe Brabantiæ, & multa adversus illos ſcribit, quibus mendacio pallente non poſſunt reſcribere. Idem Sedulius ibid. p. 283.

(h) Ad annum 1562. n. 50.

(A) Prieſt and Doctor of Divinity in the year 1636.] I don't follow Moreri, who affirms that John de Launoi entered into Holy Orders in 1634, and took his Doctor's Degree in June the ſame year. This is my reaſon for it. In the Elogy of this Doctor 'tis ſaid that he began his courſe of Divinity in 1633, and made ſuch a progreſs in it in two years, that no body exceeded him, and that he exceeded ſome Perſons of great Senſe and Learning. 'Tis added that he was promoted the following year to the Prieſthood, and to his Doctor of Divinity's Degree. Studium Theologicum ingreſſus eſt anno trigeſimo tertio ſupra milleſimum & ſexcenteſimum, illudque biennio integro ita percurrit, ut multos ingenio & eruditione præſtantes vinceret, & à nemine vinceretur. Ad ordinem ſacerdotalem anno inſequenti, & ad Theologiæ Magiſterium evectus (i). I ſuppos'd I was to place that following year, after the two years of his Study of Divinity, for if I had put it immediately after the year 1633. it would follow, that this Doctor had Studied Divinity one year as a Scholar, after he had been admitted Doctor. Yet I would not be preferr'd before Moreri; for the Author of the Elogy did not perhaps pretend to much exactneſs in theſe Chronological Punctilioes. Does he not ſay (k) that after John de Launoi had ſpent five or ſix years in the Study of Philoſophy and Scholaſtick Divinity, he began his Courſe of Divinity, and ſpent two years in it? Is this to expreſs ones ſelf according to the Laws of Ex-year 1636. and he made no use of these two Characters to get (B) Money, and to beg Benefices; he only thought of improving in Learning; and to that effect, he continued his Application to his Studies with a prodigious Industry. He did not content himself with reading all sorts of Books; he frequented (C) the most Learned Divines to consult them upon all the difficulties he met with. He profited chiefly by the Conversation of Father (D) Sirmond. It was not for his own satisfaction, but for the use of the Publick, that he stor'd up such a vast Treasure of Learning; for there are very few Divines that have Publish'd (E) more Books than he. He boldly impugn'd (F) many false Traditions, and was one of the strongest supports of the Privileges of the Gallican Church. He carried his Criticisms as far as some Devout Practices; and

(i) Eloge Launoii p. 2.

(k) Ibid.

(a) Omnem ab incunabulis adolescentiæ curam operam cupiditatem, quam divinus vox flagitiorum finem appellat. Sed ad firmam ætatem cum pervenisset, paternam hæreditatem, parvam illam quidem, fratribus nepotibusque reliquit. Ibid. p. 3.

(b) Ibid.

(c) Ad hæc animos sentire & cura peculi. Cum semel imbuerit, speramus carmina fingi Posse linenda cedro, & levi servanda cupresso. Horat. de arte poet.

(d) Magna pars.

(e) Quæ ille adeo retinuerunt, ut ne verbum quidem, quemadmodum à quibusdam fieri solet, mutarint, ne quid Dei beneficio intellexerat facibus effe homini Christiano bonis carere, quam iis recte uti. Elog. Launoi p. 35.

(f) Ibid. p. 36.

(g) That is, the Executor of the Will.

(h) Exilis domus est ubi non & multa supersunt & desunt multa. Horat. Epist. 6. lib. 1. See what Horace says of Lucullus a little before.

Exactness? But as negligent as he has been, I have prefer'd his Authority to that of Moreri.

(B) To get Money, and to beg Benefices.] This requires a Remark; it being so rare to find, even among Doctors of Divinity, some persons free from Avarice and Ambition, that when we meet with any one, the publick ought to know it. Such Examples ought to be consecrated: We ought carefully to do them the Justice that is due to them, it being a useful Lesson to the Publick; for it shews that Providence has not entirely given up Mankind to Corruption. I say then that John de Launoi (a) express'd from his younger years, a great indifference for the things of this World; which excellent dispositions did not change, when he grew older: for then he gave up to his Brothers and Nephews all his Pretentions to his Father's Estate; and would never hearken to the Advice of his Friends, putting him upon asking for Prebends and Livings. To put an end to their Officious Counsels, he declar'd to them that he was not qualified for Singing or Preaching, and that he would not furnish himself with the Wealth of the Church, whilst he could not do her good Services by the Functions of his Ministry. (b) Monitus aliquando ab amicis, ut precibus prehendam ecclesiam vacantem, eo nomine petendæ apud eos, qui conferendæ illius munus incumbebat, respondi, se huic utrique officio parum aptum esse à natura, cùm per latera parum firma, perque vocem minimè canoram, neque verba apud populum facere, neque psalmos hymnosque decantare posset. Ingeniosius non nullis inde provenire non modicam copiam, qui suis commodis agerent, continuo regerebat, si hæc ita se haberet, proficere, rem ecclesiasticam ei, ut Ecclesia sibi optimus juris consultum existimat, ipse nullam Ecclesiæ, aut certè exiguam, Ministerio suo præstet, quod factum minimè fore videret, conquam iniquum rem. & inutilissimum. We need not wonder that he became so Learned, since he applied himself to his Studies with a Mind free from Covetousness and Ambition. How many People would be very eminent in Learning, if the greedy desire of making their Fortune did not continually draw them from their Books? See what a Poet says (c) considering the Impediments of his Art.

I must not forget John de Launoi's Will. The Preface of it was worth consideration. After the (d) common Form, in the name of the Father, &c. there was, I shall quickly make an end of this Will, for I have but a small Estate. Mr. Moreri did not say all; there was also the reason why the Testator left no great Estate: viz. that God had given him to understand that it was much harder for a Christian to use Riches well, than to want them (e). This is remarkable; Mr. de Launoi left more Money than he thought would be found with him: An evident sign of his little concern for Riches. He was not at the pains of counting his Money: and sometimes he forgot where he had laid it. (f) Certum illum (g) fecit Launoius, plus annos se post obitum signata pecunia reperturum ibi, quàm præsentis legatis requireretur; & revera longè plus reperturn est, plusque quam Launoius ipse reperturn se crederet. Sed id tantum abest ut ei vitio verti possit; quin potius laudi duci debet, cùm illud omne quantumcunque fuerit, non avara manus asservasset usquam, sed contemptor opum animus domi projectum oblivioni penè dedisset. We have here a Proof that indifference for Riches, and a violent thirst after them, may produce the same effect: For there are some Misers who hoard up so much Wealth, that they know not the extent of it (h).

(C) He frequented the most learned Divines.] Nor was he contented with that; but he consulted, by way of Letters, the learned Men who lived in the Provinces of France, or in Foreign Countries (i), and when he went to Rome it was not to see the Curiosities, but to get acquaintance with learned Men. Those he most convers'd with there, (k) were Lucas Holstenius, and Leo Allatius. (l) Ter, cum infesto in Italiam, non quicquam ut fane optaret & mallet, non ut urbes inspiceret, non ut viros eruditione insignes, non ut monumenta, novissimè ex Græcia advecta, sed ut conferendum consilium suum.

(D) By the conversation of Father Sirmond.] He went to propose his doubts to him; and never answer'd with Heat and Clamour. The contentious way of Discourse, and the Sophisms common among the Learned was not to the Taste of that Jesuit. (m) Sapientissimum, de rebus omnibus, de quibus mecum conferebat, temperantem judicium, perspicuum & ordinatum, nullis unquam senex, mentem suam [illegible] cum effert ab omni affectu, & ab omni studio partium, facultatemque animus, ac rationem cæterorum, lectique ad id aptissimi præbent patiam, quibus innixus ad veritatem. [illegible] Friend the Authorities of the Fathers, upon which he grounded his Opinions, [illegible] Launoi examin'd them with great Exactness, [illegible] with Father Sirmond, who [illegible] him Discontentment about Matters, A [illegible] At first I [illegible] but at present [illegible] (n). No Jesuit [illegible] de Launoi was [illegible] Cum nullum hactenus [illegible] quosdam Asiaticos [illegible] cum è portu solvere, eodem [illegible] Latio annuus, ut vix [illegible] quam fili (o). Let us add this [illegible] Father Sirmond [illegible] that when he heard him [illegible] good, he was not without a Book (p).

(E) More Books than he.] See the [illegible] them in the History [illegible] Navarre in 1677. His Bookseller [illegible] lish'd it by itself. Here's a [illegible] methinks, deserves a place here. [illegible] the Book which he was [illegible] it was that he took [illegible] Testimony he has given [illegible] Gratitude to that College of the [illegible] he consider'd as his Mother. Or whether [illegible] not altogether intended to the [illegible] all his own Works particularized in this [illegible] For he has inserted in the Catalogue of [illegible] Writings, which he was willing to do himself, [illegible] well to make it more exact, as more easily to explain the Titles, and Subjects of his smallest Books and of all his Letters in particular, wisely preferring, that any Body else would be easily discouraged with their great number, and the large Ampliation of their Titles (q).

(F) He boldly impugn'd many false Traditions.] As, the arrival of Lazarus and Magdalen in [illegible] the pettie-ship of Darsena the [illegible] Gaul; the Came of the Kneel [illegible] Founder of the Carthusians; the Vision of Simon Stock; the Privileges of the Sabbatine Bull. [illegible] whole interest it was to maintain those Opinions, made terrible out-cries against him. He was with them a Destroyer of Religion. Ordinem posset quantamcunque sustinere, si reperiret; quam non tradition[illegible] licet unius aut alterius neque ad eorum propinquos, eoque minus ad reipsæ ad eorum Ecclesiæ sanctos fuere relatas, ex temporibus [illegible] tarum quibusdam quæ expungenda censeret, quæve illa credulæ plebi non [illegible] suadenda; quæve illa credula plebi non [illegible]

(i) Elog. p. [illegible]

(k) Ibid. p. [illegible]

(l) Ibid. p. [illegible]

(m) Ibid. p. [illegible]

(n) Ibid. p. [illegible]

(o) Ibid. p. [illegible]

(p) Elog. Launoi p. 19.

and ſome Saints would have been ſtruck out of the Calendar, if his Arguments had been minded. 'Tis worth while to ſee what Guy Patin ſaid (G) upon it. 'Twas a favourable aliquo commodo ſuo ingerebant, eas ſibi eripi agre patiebantur, nec qui id tentaſſet minus incuſabant, quam ſi firmiſſima religionis fundamenta convellere decreviſſet. Without being moved with their Clamours, he went on ſtill and undeceived not only, the Learn'd, but alſo ſome of the Vulgar. Vicit tamen inexpugnabili conſtantiâ Launoius hominum imperitorum, & malè feriatorum importunas inofficioſaſq; querelas, & fabulas eorum fabellas ita revicit, ut nullum jam patronum inveniant inter eos, qui aliquâ curâ veritatem indagant, multò pauciores quàm antea apud vulgum, & apud eos qui ne literas quidem norunt (a). He vigorouſly attack'd the Monks in two other Points; for (b) he ſhew'd the falſity of the pretended Privileges, by Virtue whereof they refus'd to acknowledge the Juriſdiction of Biſhops; and he expos'd the vanity of the Arguments they alledg'd to Appropriate to themſelves the Adminiſtration of the Sacrament of Penitence. Here follows what the Abbot de Marolles ſaid of him. 'He 'found the Art of diſcovering the moſt hidden 'Truths: And the lovers of them are as much 'oblig'd to him for it, as thoſe that are unqualified 'to diſcover or value them, think they have reaſon 'to complain of him, for having made ſo glorious 'Conqueſts. However they have nothing to re'proach him with: And it has not hitherto been 'poſſible for his Adverſaries to convict him of the 'leaſt falſhood, or of one falſe Inference from the 'Teſtimonies of the Writers concerning the points 'he has examin'd. 'Tis true, that what we have 'ſeen of him, is inconſiderable in compariſon of 'what we ought to expect; applying himſelf as he 'does to a very ſerious Study upon important Sub'jects: But the moſt Learned will always benefit 'themſelves by the reading of his Works, by reaſon 'of his Method, or the certain Knowledge of things, 'for which the pure Church will have no leſs 'reaſon to Glory, than infamous Superſtition to be 'vexed at it (c).

(G) What Guy Patin ſaid upon it.] (d) 'I 'give you notice, that I have delivered a little Pack'et to a young Man of Lyons—— You'll find in it, 'amongſt others, M. de Launoi's Book, wherein he un'dertakes to prove, that there was never ſuch a 'Man as Renatus, nor any Biſhop of Angers of that 'Name. 'Tis the ſame who has writ againſt Dio'nyſius the Areopagite, ſaying that he never came into 'France; and againſt the Scapulary of the Carmelites, 'againſt Magdalene, pretending too, that ſhe never 'came into France. He is a Doctor of Divinity, a 'Norman, a Man of a mean Look, but learned, 'and eſpecially in Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory. There are 'ſome here who call him a damn'd Soul, ſaying 'that he ought to be avoided, that he turns every 'year a Saint out of Paradiſe, and that 'tis to be 'fear'd at laſt, he will ſerve God himſelf ſo. Yet 'hitherto no Body has anſwer'd him. One of his 'Friends told me that he had been a long time Pen'ſioner (e) of the Jeſuits, who made uſe of him 'to approve their Books; but that at laſt, they had 'parted with him, becauſe he refuſed to give his 'Approbation to a new Doctrine they had a mind 'to Publiſh. What follows, is curious; I take it from Mr. Menage. (f) Mr. de Launoi, Doctor of Divinity of the Faculty of Paris pretended that many of our Saints had never Exiſted. Which occaſioned Mr. Feramus to ſay of him (i),

Tu quoque, Launoï, veri indagator & index,
Addita qui ſaſtis Numina falſa docet.

I made this Greek Epigram upon it,

Τὸν Λαυνοῖον ἐφὴς, τὸν εὑρετὴν Θεμιτῶνων
Πῖφι, πόθεν πλήγὰν ἀπὸ βόλα Ζηνὸς ἔπεσεν.

They ſay this laſt Verſe is taken out of Homer, ſpeaking of Jupiter who Kick'd Vulcan out of Heaven. But that very thing makes the beauty of my Epigram; it would be Ridiculous, were this Verſe my own: And I dare ſay it is very fine by reaſon of that Application, for which Mr. Daille the Father, a Man well vers'd in Homer, has often Congratulated me. The Abbot Faydit has not obſerv'd that it is only the laſt Verſe that is Homer's; he has quoted part of the firſt, as if it was to be found in the Iliad; and which is worſe, he pretends that Jupiter turned out all the Riff-raff of the Gods. 'His Words are theſe: '(g) Rome could not without In'dignation hear that Mr. de Launoi, as learned as 'he was, ſhould Uncanonize five or ſix unknown 'Saints, who in the times of Ignorance were in'troduc'd into the Breviary; and that like Homer's 'Jupiter (who turn'd out all the Rabble of the Gods, 'with one Kick on the Breech, diſpatching them 'from Heaven to Earth) this Doctor ſhould with 'one daſh of his Pen diſlodge from the Throne of 'Glory ſome Saints that Rome had over-eaſily plac'd 'there.

'(h) Ὁ πρῶτα ἁμαρτὼν
'Πῖφι, πόθεν πλήγὰν ἀπὸ βόλα Θερσίτεω.

'She has cried out againſt this Attempt; as a moſt 'horrid Sacrilege. She has put his Books into 'the Inquiſition, not being able to drag the Au'thor thither. She has decried him as a Man of a 'ſuſpected Faith, and an Enemy to the Saints. 'Tis certain that Homer (i) ſays no more than this, that Jupiter taking Vulcan by the Foot, threw him down from Heaven. If Mr Menage ſaid in Converſation the ſame thing as the Abbot Faydit, we muſt conclude from it, that he did not look ſo narrowly into it, as when he had Pen in Hand for the Publick, or that he flouriſh'd that Adventure in order to make it more agreeable, and more capable of the Parallel. However it be, here is a Paſſage out of the Continuation of the Menagiana, wherein Homer is made to ſay what he has not ſaid. '(k) Mr. 'Godefroy the Hiſtoriographer going abroad very 'early in the Morning the firſt day of the year, met 'in Harp-ſtreet Mr. de Launoi, who was going to 'the Sorbonne. He accoſted him, and embracing 'him, ſaid: Good Morrow and a good new 'Year to you, Sir; What Saint will you diſplace 'from Heaven this year? Mr. de Launoi, ſurpriz'd 'at this Queſtion, anſwer'd him; I diſplace no 'true Saints from Heaven whom God and their 'Merit have plac'd there; but ſuch as the Ignorance 'and Superſtition of the People have undeſervedly in'troduc'd into it, and without the Approbation of God 'and learned Men. This Anſwer was the occaſion of 'the Epigram I made upon M. de Launoi, wherein I 'compare him to Jupiter in Homer, who clear'd Hea'ven of all the Rabble of the falſe Gods, who had 'crept in amongſt the true ones, and who giving 'them a Kick, threw them Headlong from the 'Throne, and from the Stars into the Earth (l).

Did I not fear to make too many Digreſſions, I would ſay that it were to be wiſh'd that many learned Men were ſuffer'd to do what Mr. de Launoi did. The ſham Saints are no leſs Multiplied than thoſe who falſly pretend to Nobility; ſo that as Princes from time to time ſend out an Inqueſt, in order to reduce the Uſurpers of Quality to the State of Plebeians, the Clergy ſhould appoint ſome Commiſſioners, to Examine the Titles and Patents of Sainthip. If the Troops of the Church Triumphant ſhould come to a Muſter before good Commiſſaries, they would find many Fagots, not amongſt the Soldiers but amongſt the great Officers, I mean the Saints that are invok'd. The Calendar wants more to be Reform'd on that account, than with reſpect to the Preceſſion of the Equinoxes: And whereas a bare Defalcation of ten Days was ſufficient for this laſt Reformation, the other would require the leaving out of hundreds and thouſands. 'Tis a long time ſince the year cannot afford a Day for every Saint; they muſt be heap'd one upon a nother in the ſame [illegible]; and now we may ſay with Juvenal,

Nec turba deorum
Talis ut eſt hodie, contentaque ſidera paucis
Numinibus miſerum urgebant Atlanta minori
Pondere (m).

How many Senators ſhould we find in the Celeſtial Court (n) vitio creati, ſhould we proceed rigorouſly? See how many Volumes the Acta ſanctorum

(a) Ibid. (b) See his Elogy à p. 10. uſque ad p. 18.

(c) The Abbot de Marolles, Memoires, p. 160. See alſo his Catalogue of the Authors, who preſented him with their Books, voce Launoi.

(d) Patin, Letter 49. p. 207. of the 1. Tom. 'Tis Dated the 18. of November 1650. See alſo the 151. Letter, p. 594. of the ſame Tome.

(e) There is no probability that he ever was their Penſioner.

(f) Menage, Anti-Baillet. Tom. 2. p. 216.

(i) In his Elegy upon the Death of M. Du Puy.

(g) Extract d'un Sermon prêché le jour de St. Polycarpe p. 296.

(h) All the Faults that are in this Greek, are probably Faults of the Preſs.

(i) Homer. Iliad. l. 1. v. 591. There is in the 15. Book of the Iliad a Paſſage, which might ſeem to be more favourable to the Abbot Faydit, but at the bottom it is not.

(k) Suite du Menagiana p. 293. 294. Dutch Edit.

(l) The Greek Diſtich follows here in the continuation of the Menagiana, with ſome Faults probably of the Printers.

(m) Juven. Sat. 13. v. 46.

(n) See the Valeſiana p. 48. 49. Dutch Edit.

favourable Subject for the Jovial Humour of this Phyſician, and it afforded many (G) pleaſant Stories. It was a difficult thing for this learned Divine to write ſo many Volumes againſt the Maxims (H) of the Pope's Flatterers, and the Superſtitions, and pretended Immunities of the Monks, without creating himſelf many Enemies. He experienc'd in his latter years that he had offended a conſiderable Party. He

(a) It was printed at Antwerp in 1696. in 4.

(b) Beſſario Cardinalis cum inter Dives inepta quadam [illegible] Romæ quam plurimos referri videret quorum vitam improbaret, ſe valde dubitare dixit utrum verè eſſent quæ ab antiquis prodita fuerunt. Bodinus meth. hiſt. c. 4. p. m. 72. See in the Remark D. of the Article Bellai (William) the Application that has been made of thoſe Words of Beſſarion.

(c) In the Rem. P. towards the end.

(d) Michael Renigerus de Pii Quinti & Gregorii XIII. favoribus contra Eliſabetham Angliæ Reginam, Cap. XIII. fol. 108. Edit. London, 1582.

(1) Paul. Wan. Sermone de omnibus ſanctis.

(e) Id. Reiger, ib.

(2) Guil. Durand. rubrica de feſtorum ritu San-ctorum, l. 7.

(f) See the Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres Jan. 1687. p. 76.

(g) Tutæ viæ ad majorem Cautelam. (h) Joſſelom. Homil. 38. in Act. Apoſtol. See ſeveral other Paſſages in Meſnilius's Treatiſe De Purgatorio, p. 42, &c.

rum already amount to: One might apply to them this common Diſtich †:

Scriptorum gigantea quorum ſub pondere mollis
Triſtior Encelado bibliopola gemit.

Let this be ſaid, without Prejudice to the Eſteem that is due to their learned Compilations.

Nay, I muſt ſay to their Honour, that they reject a great many Fables, and that their Sincerity daily expoſes them to the ſame Complaints that were made againſt Mr. de Launoi. See Father Papebroch's Anſwer (a) to the exhibitio errorum of Sebaſtian de St. Paul, a Carmelite; you'll there find, that this Jeſuit has ſtruck many Intruders out of the Calendar, and that with very ſolid Reaſons. Theſe Intruders are not Saints of a Modern Date; but are very ancient: Cardinal Beſſarion (b) ſeeing at Rome the Canonization of ſome Perſons, whoſe Life he did not approve, cried out, that theſe new Saints made him call in queſtion the old Ones: Affe che queſti ſanti moderni mi fanno aſſai dubitare delli paſſati: but we may ſay, that there is infinitely more certainty in the Modern Saints, than in many of the Ancients. We can't doubt but the former lived on Earth; and we have almoſt demonſtrative Proofs, that the latter never did. An ingenious Man ſaid theſe other Day, in good Company, that if he was to addreſs to the Saints, he had rather chooſe the New Comers, Capiſtran for Inſtance, or Thomas de Villeneuve, than St Catherine, or St. Alexis. See the Remark of the Article Rizi Joſeph. You ſhall ſee (c) hereafter, that the Work of the Jeſuit Papebroch has dupleaded the Inquiſition.

A Canon of Piſaw, a good Preacher, and Profeſſor of Divinity in the XVth. Century, ſaid in one of his Sermons, that if there were as many Holy-Days as Minutes, the Year would not afford a Feaſt for each Saint, and he quotes Durandus Biſhop of Mende, who obſerves, that there are above Five Thouſand Saints for every Day. (d) Tanta (inquit ille 1) eſt Sanctorum numeroſitas, quod totum tempus anni non ſufficeret etiam ſi ſingulis horis, etiam ſingulis minutis, agerentur feſtum unius Sancti; deinde Durandum citat. Quia ſicut dicit (inquit) Guilhelmus in rationali pro quolibet die pluſquam: quinque millia Sanctorum concurrerent. The Author, who quotes the Sermon of this German Canon, adds, that All-Saints Day was appointed to ſupply the want of Days in the Year, and to prevent the Ill-will of thoſe Saints, who might be angry for having no Honour paid to them. (e) Vigente quum Pontificiorum Divorum tanta illis Authoribus fere infinitio ſit, in Supplementum cultus Sanctorum excogitatum eſt. Quoniam humani Cultus illos appetentes eſſe ſomniant, & in ſuos cultores proclivos, ne omiſſis & præteritis Divis Stomachandi nulla conſit, quod ſuo cultu oriatur: ſic enim has minutis etiam & manipularibus Divis, & non ſolum Patriciis & majorum Gentium, hoc omnium Sanctorum feſto & ſupplemento ſatisfactum eſſe putant, atque hoc Guilhelmi illius Mimatenſis Epiſcopi eſt quaſi ſalutari hoc pharmaco omnium divorum repulſæ & offenſa illucari debeant. Durandi verba hæc ſunt. (2) Propter ipſorum inquit multitudinem de illis ſpecialiter non valemus; ergo ut antea Idem ait propter Omiſſorum (inquit) feſtorum ſupplectionem inſtitutum eſt feſtum omnium Sanctorum. Thoſe who have made it their Buſineſs to draw Parallels, will not fail to remember, upon this occaſion, the Precaution of the Athenians, who conſecrated an Altar to the unknown Gods (f), becauſe they were afraid of neglecting the Worſhip of ſome revengeful Deities, whoſe Names and Qualities they were ignorant of. They thought they had lately ſuffered for it; ſo that to play a ſure Game (g), they reſolved to pay their Homage to thoſe very Deities which were unknown to them. This was the way to forget none of the Gods.

(G) It afforded many pleaſant Stories.] Here is one of Mr. de l'Ignorant Marville: 'Tis as good as that I have mentioned out of the Menagiana. 'He (b) Mr. 'de Launoi was a terrible Critick, formidable both 'to Heaven and Earth: He has diſplac'd more 'Saints from Paradiſe, than have been Canoniz'd by 'Ten Popes. He ſuſpected the whole Martyrology, 'and took all the Saints to task one after another, 'as in France they make an Inquiry into the Nobility: The Curate of St. Euſtachius of Paris, ſaid, 'Where ever I meet Doctor de Launoi, I make a 'very low Bow to him, and I ſpeak to him with my 'Hat off, and with the greateſt Reverence, for fear 'he ſhould take away my St. Eutachius, who has no-'thing to depend upon. Theſe laſt Words are very true; and here is a Paſſage of the Ménagiana, that confirms them. 'He (i) The Life of St. Eu-'chius is likewiſe a Heap of Fables: and I am very much ſurpriſed that the largeſt Parith in Pa-'ris ſhould have paſſed with the Name of one of 'the moſt famous and illuſtrious Martyrs we have, 'to take that of an unknown, and very impudent 'Saint. Mr. Ancillon (k) heard Mr. Daillé ſay, 'that one Day meeting him in Mr. Chamoly's Shop, 'a Bookſeller in Paris, they expreſs'd a great Friend-'ſhip and Eſteem for one another; and that as they par-'ted, Mr. de Launoi told him, Sir, I ſtrike every 'Month one Saint out of the Breviary, do you 'ſtrike an Error out of it. If Mr. de Launoi ſpoke in that manner, he did it only in Jeſt; for the Number of Saints that he attempted to degrade, is much leſs than all the Months of his Life. But he might without any Exaggeration, have compared the Saints that are deſtitute of Labarum, with all the Minutes of his long Life. See the excellent Hiſtory of the Church, publiſhed by Mr. Baſnage, in two Volumes in Folio. There (l) we find ſo many fabulous Saints and Martyrs depoſed, that in Compariſon of that Ocean, Mr. de Launoi's Enterprize is but a little Rivulet.

(H) Againſt the Maxims of the Pope's Flatterers.] To the very Root of the Evil. In ſecuring the Immunities the Monks pretended to, he thought it neceſſary to lay down that certain Thing, That the Pope can do nothing againſt the Canons of the Councils. He wrote many Letters upon that Subject, which have been ſo well approved in England, and thought ſo proper to mortify the Ultramontanes, that they have been [illegible] at Cambridge. He more eſpecially attacked Bellarmin; and we are told in the following Words, to what Condition he reduced this great Champion of the Popes: (m) In eo vero adverſarium tuto aggreſſurus eſt Cardinalem Robertum Bellarminum, qui abſtruſiſſima quæque Romanæ curiæ plenius defendenda ſuſcepit. Si quæ porro in eorum confirmationem deſumpta ex ſacris libris teſtimonia adduxit, clariſſimis demonſtrationibus, ea in pravum detorta ſenſum, & aliena intellecta quam ea ſanctiſſimi quique patres intellexerint, à quorum ſenſu in exponendis Scripturis non decedere, nihil aliud eſt quam fideliſſimos duces, & à Tridentina Synodo datos aſpernari, & in errores omnes ſeipſum conjicere. Si quos etiam canones aut patrum textus laudat Bellarminus, eos plerumque interpolatos oſtendit Launoius, & mala fide relatos. Sicque hominem armis Scripturæ & traditionis nudatum exhibent, velut nutritum in philoſophica paleſtra typum, qui adverſus invictam caſtrorum aciem in ſolidumque conatu dygladiatur; & tela ab Ariſtotele deſumpta juveniliter vibrat. Reſponſa, a Lutheran (n) Minuter, publiſhed a Book in 1685, which properly ſpeaking, is only an Abridgment of our Doctor's Letters. He put two Titles to it, which are to no purpoſe. The Running Title is, Joh. Launoius Theol. Pariſ. Anti-Bellarminus. But the Title prefixed to the Book is Johannes Launoius Theologus & Sorboniſta Pariſiensis teſtis & confeſſor veritatis Evangelico-Catholicæ in poſteriorem fidei capitibus controverſis adverſus Robertum Bellarminum & alios quoſdam ſedis Romanæ defenſores egregius & luculentus, nunc primùm editus contra Chriſtianum Lupum Gandavenſem, Emmanuelem à Schelſtrate Antverpienſem, Natalem Alexandrum Pariſienſem, Dominicum Co-

(b) Menagiana de Marville, Melanges d'Hiſtoire & de Literature, pag. 260. 267.

(i) Vide [illegible] p. 48.

(k) Ancillon, Melanges de critique, tom. 3. pag. 220.

(l) See the Preface of the Author of the Lives of the Popes, and the Women Martyrs, and Saints.

(m) In the Year 1630. in 8 l.

(n) Edw. Cawdrey, pag. 21.

(o) A Relation of Anglicanism and Miniſtry of St. Jones's Preſbyterian Hierarchy, printed in 1680. and reprinted in 1682.

He was forbidden (I) to hold Aſſemblies in his Chamber, as he had done for a long time once a Week; and his Printer (K) was brought into Trouble. He patiently bore thoſe Inſults, and ceas'd not to labour for the Publick: It may be ſaid that he Died with his Pen in his Hand; for he had a Book in the Preſs (L) in his laſt Sickneſs, and Corrected the Proofs the Day before he died. He was Buried in the Church of the Minimes, as he had order'd in his Will; but his Friends were not permitted to put upon his Tomb the Epitaph (M) which was prepared for him. I forgot

* Ex eodem Elog. pag. 30. & the Mercure Gallant for March 1678.

(a) Elog. Launoii, pag. 30.

(b) Hos animorum motus utcunque ſedabat Launoius, reique acerbitatem, benigna ut poterat interpretatione lenichat. Abſtinebat ipſe ſemper ab omni atrocitate verborum, Archiepiſcopum nec incuſari ab aliis, carpive coram ſe patiebatur. Sed tamen cum vir eſſet candidiſſimi pectoris, diffiteri non poterat, quin ſi id præſtitiſſet Pariſienſis præſul, laboraret vehementer ingrati animi vitio, quo cætera omnia facile continentur. Ib. par. 32.

(c) Elog. pag. 28. & ſeq.

(d) Mercure Gallant, for March 1678. p. 116. 167. Dutch Edit.

leſium, & Franciſcum Marcheſium Romanos vindicatus. The Author of this Book pretends, that John de Launoi is a Perſon fit to be put in the Appendix of Illyricus's Catalogus teſtium veritatis. Mr. Couſin ſpoke ſomewhat late of this Book of Reiſerus, in his Journal des Savans; he mentioned it only in the Journal of the 30th. of July, 1696, and in that of the 6th. of Auguſt following. Theſe Two Extracts may ſerve to know Mr. de Launoi's Character.

(I) He was forbidden to hold Aſſemblies.] Nothing was more innocent than thoſe Aſſemblies; the Converſation run only upon Learning, and yet he was told, that the King deſired they ſhould ceaſe (a). 'Twas thought the Archbiſhop of Paris was the Promoter of that Affair, and ſome People took occaſion from thence to ſpeak ill of him. Mr. de Launoi (b) did not allow himſelf that Liberty, nor would ſuffer that Action to be charged upon the Archbiſhop in his Preſence; but he ſaid however, that if he was accuſed of it with Reaſon, he was juſtly taxed with the greateſt Ingratitude.

(K) His Printer was brought into Trouble.] It was in the Year 1675, he was printing his Book concerning Simony, wherein amongſt other things, he writes againſt the Annats, and Confutes the Jeſuit Azorius, who wrote a Book towards the end of the XVI. Century, to clear them of Simony. They cauſed the Copies of this Book of Mr. de Launoi to be ſeiſed at the Printer's; they carried away thoſe which he deliver'd, and forbad him to ſell the reſt; but for a Fine of Forty Livres, that Prohibition was taken off (c).

(L) He had a Book in the Preſs in his laſt Sickneſs.] Let us ſee what Mr. de Viſé ſays (d) of him. 'It 'may be ſaid in ſome manner, that he died with 'Pen in Hand; for the Day before he cor- 'rected the Proofs of a Book he had written in De- 'fence of the King's Intereſts. 'Tis an Anſwer 'to an Italian Writer, who ſome time ſince printed 'a Tract againſt the Right of Secular Princes about 'the Impediments of Marriage. Mr. de Launoi 'had before maintained a quite contrary Doctrine in 'a Book publiſhed in 1674, wherein the Rights of 'the King, and of all ſecular Princes are ſo ſolidly 'eſtabliſhed, that that Work may be looked upon 'as one of the moſt uſeful to the State. It was an- 'ſwered in Italy, and as this Anſwer took from Se- 'cular Princes their Eſſential Right, which they 'have upon Marriage, to qualify or unqualify their 'Subjects for contracting, this great Man was 'not ſilent, but took care, when he died, of the 'Impreſſion of what he had writ to confute the 'Errors of the Italian Author. Thus all his Time 'was employ'd, either for the Church, or for his 'Prince; and he may be call'd, not only the Doctor 'of the King's Rights, but alſo the Defender of the 'juſt Authority of the Biſhops, the Deſtroyer of 'falſe Privileges, and the Doctor of the Liberties of 'the Gallican Church. The Author of Mr. de Launoi's Elogy, does not agree with the Mercure Gallant, with reſpect to the Book that was then in the Preſs. It was not according to him, an Apology for the Right of Princes over Marriages, but an Anſwer to Father Alexander. He tells us, that Mr. de Launoi began the Treatiſe concerning the Right of Princes at the Requeſt of Cardinal Bentivoglio. Mr. de Launoi being at Rome, when they were examining in France, whether the Marriage of the Duke of Orleans, Brother to Lewis XIII. with the Princeſs of Lorrain, was valid, met with Cardinal Bentivoglio in the Library of the Dominicans, and propoſed to him this Argument. If Princes have had the Power to make Laws about the Obſtacles to Marriage, they have it ſtill, in caſe it has not been taken from them: They have had it, and it can't be proved that it has been taken from them. Therefore. The Cardinal deſired Mr. de Launoi to write upon this Subject, and to explain this Argument. See the Margin (e). The Book was ſmall at firſt, but before it was publiſhed in 1674. it grew very large. Dominick Galeſius, Biſhop of Ruco, in the Kingdom of Naples, wrote againſt it. Mr. de Launoi had no ſooner read the Book of that Prelate, but he undertook to refute it, he had ſcarce finiſhed that Confutation (f), but he engaged to anſwer Father Alexander (g). His Anſwer was finiſhed, when he was ſeized with the Diſtemper of which he died in a few Days. This laſt Work was already in the Preſs. Thus ſhews, that Mr. de Viſé, and the Elogiſt don't agree concerning the Book which Mr. de Launoi had in the Preſs when he died.

(M) The Epitaph which was prepared for him.] Mr. de Launoi had made his Will Eleven Years before he died, and he had deſired Mr. le Camus, firſt Preſident in the Court of Aids, his old and intimate Friend, to be his Executor. M. le Camus faithfully acquitted himſelf of that Truſt, and cauſed an Epitaph (h) for the Deceaſed, to be made by Mr. Clement, an ancient Counſellor of the ſame Court. The Minimes having read and examined it, ſhewed a Letter of their General, which declared, that that Epitaph could not be admitted, ſince it attributed to de Launoi the Praiſe of having always maintained Orthodoxy; and ſome time after they declared, that both the Royal and Eccleſiaſtical Powers had enjoyn'd them not to tuſter any Inſcription in Praiſe of M. de Launoi. (i) Ubi illam (inſcriptionem) expenderunt, attulerunt proſpoſiti ſui generalis literas, quibus renunciabatur, nec probari nec recipi aſe poſſe inſcriptionem, quâ Launoio laus defenſæ perpetuæ veritatis, & optimæ famæ, maximæque venerationis apud probos quæſitæ tribuatur. Poſtea vetitum ſibi prædicarunt regia ſimul & ſuæ auctoritate, ne ullum apicem in capella ſua extare ſinerent, quo Launoii nomen commendaretur. See the Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres (k), and particularly a Letter to a Prelate of the Court of Rome, upon the Decree of the Inquiſition of the 7th. of December, 1690. I ſhall quote a Paſſage out of it, which is of uſe for the Hiſtory of our Doctor. The Abbot, who writ this Letter, obſerves, that the Court of Rome maintains its Rights with greater Policy than the Court of France: he obſerves, that the former plentifully rewards thoſe who write in its Favour, but that thoſe are neglected in France, who write for the Privileges of the Gallican Church. However, ſays the Author of that Letter, Poſterity ſhould know by ſome Marks of Honour, the Account that has been made of their Merit, and that they have been gratified for their Labours. But you know how this has been done with Reſpect to one of your Friends. We have not had a Man more zealous for the Doctrine of the Clergy of France, nor more indefatigably ſtudious to illuſtrate and defend it, than honeſt Mr. de Launoi, who beſides was a Man perfectly unintereſted. What has been done to the Honour of his Memory? You know it, they would not ſo much as allow his Friends to expreſs in his Epitaph, his Merit, and the Services he did to Church of France. Nay, they did in a manner ſtop his Mouth ſome Years before he died, by forbidding him to continue certain Conferences upon this Subject in his Houſe, where it may be ſaid, that more People learned to be the Defenders of our Liberties, than in all the Kingdom beſides. Nay, 'tis a Kind of a Miracle, that we have what he printed in his Lifetime upon the Superiority of Councils, and againſt the Infallibility of Popes, and upon other Subjects of this Nature; and we owe it to the Device he thought of, which was to give it Piece-Meal in Letters, which he writ to different Perſons, delivering himſelf by that Means from the intolerable Slavery of the Cenſures of ſome Doctors of his Time, without whoſe Pleaſure, no Book could be licenſed, and who ſeemed hired to put a Stop to all good Books, and to vex the Authors of them.

(e) It ſhould be inferred from thence, that M. Ancillon is miſtaken when he ſays, p. 330. of the 2d. Vol. of the Melange critique de literature, that M. de Launoi wrote that Book, being ordered to do it, and againſt his Will and his Opinion.

(f) Huic titulum eſſe voluit: Indices locupletiſſimi erratorum in libro ſcriptoris Italici contentorum. Elog. pag. 33.

(g) Qui Annatas à Simoniæ labe liberandas ſuſcepera, & Summam Theologicam Thomæ Aquinati tanquam vero ejus auctori aſſerendam. Ibid. pag. 34. See concerning that Work of Father Alexander the Journal des Savans, of the 18th. of November, 1675.

(h) It is in the Elogy, pag. 37.

(i) Elog. Laun. pag. 38.

(k) For September, 1680. pag. 1033.

(*) He

got to obſerve that he Died (N) in Ettree Houſe the tenth of March 1678. being above 77 years Old. He was a Man, to whom the Publick is vaſtly indebted. Had he only publiſhed the Book De autoritate negantis argumenti, he would have done great Service to the Republick of Learning; for he has given a thouſand hints in that Book, to diſtinguiſh Truth from Falſhood in Hiſtorical Matters. He had Diſputes with many Men, and amongſt others with Father (O) Nicolai a Dominican, and Mr Thiers (a).

He drew upon him all the Order of St. Dominick, for having freely reflected upon Thomas Aquinas. The marks of Reſpect, which Prudence and Gravity made him intermix with his Cenſures, did not prevent the Reſentment of the Dominicans; for after all, the Angelical Doctor appeared Guilty of great Ignorance, or Inſincerity, in the Allegation of many Paſſages deſign'd to confute the Heterodox. Father Baron indeavoured (P) to juſtify Thomas Aquinas, but did not ſucceed well in his Attempt. This will ſupply me with many Obſervations. Father Alexander took pains with

- Eloge, pag. 37. He was not therefore born the 21ſt. of December, 1603.

(a) Moreri affirms.

- See what Mr. Sallo, Journal des Savans of the 10th. of March, 1665. ſays concerning the Book of M. Thiers, againſt M. de Launoi.

(a) You'll find the following Words, at page 159, of his Memoirs, printed in 1656. His Eſteem for M. de Launoi, Doctor of Divinity, one of the greateſt Men of this Age for his Learning and Probity, is a ſign of his Judgment. And indeed, having ſuch a Man with him, he cannot be too careful of him: 'tis an ineſtimable Treaſure.

(N) He died in Ettree-Houſe.] The Cardinal d'Etrée being yet but Biſhop of Laon had in a manner ingroſſed Mr. de Launoi to himſelf. See Mr. de Marolles (a).

(O) With Father Nicolai a Dominican.] The Journal des Savans mentions Three Works of this Author. 1. (b) His two Diſſertations De concilio plenario quod contra Donatiſtas baptiſmi quæſtionem definivit. 2. His (c) Two Diſſertations De Baptiſmi antiquo uſu. 3. His (d) Book De jejunii Chriſtiani & Chriſtianorum abſtinentiæ vero ac legitimo ritu juxta veterem Eccleſiæ univerſalis uſum. The firſt of thoſe three Writings is entirely againſt Mr. de Launoi, who pretended that St. Auguſtin meant the Council of Arles, when he ſaid that the Error of the Donatiſts about the Nullity of the Baptiſm of Hereticks, was condemned in a General Council. Mr. de Launoi drew from thence a great many Conſequences againſt the Ultramontanes. The ſecond Book of the Dominican does not concern him; a Work of which the Proteſtants of France took Advantage, becauſe it contains a formal Condemnation of thoſe that force Infidels to be baptized. The Third Work of this Monk, is againſt M. de Launoi. Here is a Paſſage out of the Continuation of the Menagiana. 'I once told M. 'de Launoi, that he had offended all the Jacobins 'in his Writings againſt Father Nicolai, and that 'all of 'em would write againſt him. He anſwered 'me unluckily. I fear their Pen-Knife more than 'their Pen.

(P) Father Baron indeavoured to juſtify Thomas Aquinas, but ſucceeded not well in his Attempt. This will ſupply me.] Unprejudiced Perſons would judge thus of the Succeſs of his Diſpute, tho' they ſhould only compare his firſt Book with the firſt of his Adverſary. Much more would they make this Judgment, if they compared Mr. de Launoi's Reply and Rejoinder, with Father Baron's Reply. I only mention the Pieces of this Controverſy. A Letter (e) of M. de Launoi to M. Faure, is that in which he cenſures Thomas Aquinas. Father Baron's Anſwer is contained in Three Paragraphs (f) of the Second Section of the 1ſt. Book of his Apology for the Dominicans. M. de Launoi's Reply is in a Letter (g) to M. Fortin. I have not ſeen Father Baron's Reply; but I know that his Adverſary anſwered it in a Letter (h) dated from Paris the 1ſt. of Auguſt 1667. I know not whether this Diſpute went farther.

To give the Reader a Specimen of the Judgment which the Monks made of this Sorbonne Doctor I ſhall ſet down a few Lines of Father Baron, (k) Quiſquis hominum privatim, ſeu publicis ſcriptis intimus noverit, etiam ex amiciſſimis, non abnuet meum de illo judicium, aut verius votum. Optandum plane, ne mores ingenuos corrupiſſet nimio ſuarum cogitationum amore, & alios jure, vel injuriâ carpendi, in naturam inductâ conſuetudine. Unde ad minus, ut cætera omittam, illud incommodi accidit, ut magnum potius, quam bonum nomen videatur ambire, & doctiores viros voluiſſe inumbrare, neque, ut conveniebat ſapienti Theologo, ſatis cordi fuerit eſſatum illud medicorum, malum bene poſitum ne moveto Plura enim ab heroicis Temporibus communi priorum opinione recepta, quæ nihil Fidei adverſa, pietati etiam opportuna, auſus eſt, longe doctioribus, quam niterentur argumentis liceſſere; nullo alio operæ pretio quam ex ſumma morositate comparato: ſibi nomen, & juſtis poſſeſſoribus, falſum ex probabili opinione juris plerumque inque recepti. In the next Leaf he oppoſes the Character of Thomas Aquinas to that of this Sorbonniſt, and declares that Thomas would have made it a Scruple of Conſcience, and would have been aſhamed of thoſe Things, that Mr. de Launoi gloried in. The Angelical Doctor, adds he, would not have undertaken to ſhew, that the French have no reaſon to believe, that St. Dionyſius the Areopagite was their firſt Apoſtle; he would not have deprived the Inhabitants of Provence, of the Glory which accrues to them from the Arrival of St. Magdalen, nor the Carmelites, of their Deſcent from Elias, and of the Scapulary of Simon Stock, nor Monaſteries of their Exemptions. He had Letters things to write: and tho' he had perceived ſome Doubts in thoſe Things, and a want of Probability, he would not have medled with 'em; he would have reſpected thoſe Traditions which promote Piety, without doing Prejudice to Religion (l) Hi ſunt melora ferebenda (Divus Thomas) & ſubdubitatus etiam, ut erat emunctæ naris, aliquid inesſe, aut minus veriſimilis, ex mediocrium præcepto, malum bene poſitum noluiſſet primus movere, atque iſta longi temporis tradition rata & firma, quæ nihil obſunt fidei, proſunt etiam pietati, in diſputationem revocare, credidiſſe pertinere ad illius generis quæſtiones ab Apoſtolo damnatas, quæ lites generant, non ædificationem. If all the Circumſtances ſet forth by this Jacobin were true, there's no doubt but John de Launoi deſerved Condemnation, as being a Man, who to make himſelf talked of, and to ſatisfy his morose Humour, oppoſed many general Opinions, which had obtained time out of mind, and promoted Piety, being not contrary to Faith, and being grounded upon Proofs incomparably more ſolid than his Objections. This laſt Circumſtance would alone be ſufficient to condemn an Author, tho' he otherwiſe acted by good Motives: for 'tis undoubtedly true, that a long Poſſeſſion deſerves ſo much reſpect, as to oblige us to maintain it, all things being equal on both ſides. But if it be juſt to maintain it, when its Titles are as well grounded, as the Pretenſions of Innovators, it is much more reaſonable not to undertake to overthrow it when they are ſtronger than the Reaſons for the contrary. But this is not the Caſe of our Sorbonne Doctor: the Traditions he oppoſes, have no good Title, and his Arguments againſt them cannot be anſwered. Now in this Caſe, 'tis plain, that there is all the Reaſon in the World to bring the moſt general and ancient Opinions to a Tryal, eſpecially, when their Falſity keeps up a dangerous Devotion. 'Tis to be obſerved, that the Reaſons of this Doctor were ſo cogent, as to undeceive abundance of People: Nevertheleſs, the Vulgar have not been corrected: Things remain ſtilling on the ſame Foot in Provence, and elſewhere. They tell you ſtill the ſame Stories they told your Anceſtors, and you ſee the ſame Worſhip, and the ſame Ceremonies. This proves the Difference there is between private Perſons and the Publick. At certain times moſt Perſons are undeceived, and yet the Practice of the Publick remains the ſame. Circe ſaid that there was not an old Woman ſo ſilly as to give Credit to the Stories, that were formerly believed concerning Hell, and he adds this Reflection to prove that Fabulous Traditions vaniſh away in time out with greater ſucceſs [a] to ſhew, that Thomas Aquinas is the true Author of the Sum of Divinity, that is Aſcrib'd to him. Mr. de Launoi [b] had propoſed ſome Doubts upon that matter. Of all his Antagoniſts none had leſs regard for him (Q) than Father Theophilus Raynaud. I will not paſs over in ſilence [c] that he had ſtruck out of his Calendar St. Catherine Virgin and Martyr, and ſaid, that her Life was a Fable, and to ſhew that he gave no Credit to it, every year on this Saint's Day he ſaid a Maſs of Requiem [d]. I add that his Labours againſt the Worſhip eſtabliſh'd upon Fabulous Traditions [e] have been inſignifi-

(l) Ib. pag. 171

A REFLECTION upon the Inſignificancy of many Labours.

(f) The 1ſt. of the 1ſt. Part. (g) A pagina 119. uſque ad pagin. 134. (h) The 9th. of the 5th. part. (i) The 14th. of the 9th. Part. (k) Vincentius Baronius, Apol. ordin. Prædicat. l. 1. c. 119.

[a] See the Journal des Savans of the 12th. of November. 1675. pag. 264. Dutch Edit.

[b] See the Journal des Savans of the 12th. of Auguſt, 1675. pag. 226. Valeſiana, p. m. 36.

[c] Confer quæ Sebaſtianus Kortholtus memorat, p. 9. diſſertationis de puellis poetrins.

[d] See the Remark P.

(a) Cicero de natura Deor. lib. 2. pag. m. 199.

(b) Juven. Sat. 2. v. 149.

(c) Cicero de nat. Deorum, lib. 3. pag. m. 601.

(d) Id. ib. lib. 2. pag. 199.

(e) Scire velim, pretium chartis quotus arroget annus, &c. Horat. epiſt. 1. lib. 2.

(f) In his Diſſertation about the Worſhip of unknown Saints. See M. Baſnage, in the 2d. Tome of his Hiſtoire de l'Egliſe, p. 1038. 1039. and his Hiſtoire des Ouvrages des Savans for Auguſt, p. 372. & ſeq.

(g) See the ſame Books, ib.

(h) For March 1700. p. 356, and for April 1700. pag. 382.

(i) See Paſquier, Recherch. de la France, B. 8. chap. 12.

(k) Maribus antiquis res ſtat Romana virisque. Ennius apud Cicer. oratum ab auguſt. de civit. Dei, l. 2. c. 21. Vide etiam Vulcatium Gallicanum in Avidio Caſſio, f. m. 454. tom. 1.

(l) Quintil. l. 1. c. 6. p. 39.

(m) See the Preface of the new Editions of the Catechiſm of the Jeſuits, written by Paſquier.

that true Doctrines, and ſuch as are grounded upon the Nature of things, take deeper Root with Age, and that this was the Cauſe of the long Continuance and Increaſe of the Worſhip of the Gods. (a) Videmus ætates opiniones fictas, atque vanas diuturnitate evaluiſſe. Quis enim Hippocentaurum fuiſſe, aut Chimæram putat? quæve anus tam excors inveniri poteſt, quæ illa, quæ quondam credebantur, apud inferos portenta extimeſcat? Opinionum enim commenta delet dies, naturæ judicia confirmat. Itaque & in noſtro populo, & in cæteris, Deorum cultus, religionumque ſanctitates exiſtunt in dies majores, atque meliores. Juvenal complains alſo, that no Body believed any longer the ancient Doctrine concerning Hell.

Eſſe (b) aliquos Manes, & ſubterranea regna,
Et contum & Stygio ranas in gurgite nigras,
Atque una tranſire vadum tot millia cymba,
Nec pueri credunt, niſi qui nondum æra lavantur.
Sed tu vera puta.

Thus you ſee a great Change in the Opinions of private Perſons, and yet the publick Worſhip was ſtill the ſame, in Juvenal's and Cicero's Time. There were ſtill the ſame Feaſts, Proceſſions, and Sacrifices, not only in Honour of the Celeſtial Gods, but alſo in Honour of Pluto and Proſerpina, and the other infernal Deities. Men will always ſee more or leſs, a like Inconſtancy on one Hand, and a like Conſtancy on the other. Some Doctors better ſighted, and more courageous than their Brethren, will undeceive a abundance of private Perſons, and yet will cauſe no Change in the publick Ceremonies. The Ritual will laſt longer than the Faith on which it was built. Too many People will find themſelves concerned to maintain it, and will be zealous enough for that, though the Aguments they bring for it, are not better than thoſe that were urged to Cotta, in Cicero's Book above-mentioned. Amongſt other things, they alledged to him the Apparitions of ſome Deities; and to prove to him the Truth of theſe Apparitions, they urged the Foundation of ſome Temples, a Decree of the Senate, a Proverb. I expected ſome Arguments, ſaid he, and you bring only popular Reports. (c) Tum Lucilius: An tibi, inquit, fabellæ videntur? Nonne ab A Poſthumio ædem Caſtori & Pollucci in foro dedicatam, nonne S. C. de Vatieno vides? Nam de Sagâ, Græcorum etiam eſt vulgare proverbium; qui quæ affirmant, certiora eſſe dicunt, quàm illa quæ apud Sagram. His igitur auctoribus nonne debes moveri? Tum Cotta, Rumoribus, inquit, mecum pugnas, Balbe: ego autem à te rationes requiro. Mr. de Launoi might have uſed the like Anſwer, and many others; But as I have already ſaid, it was the Intereſt of many People to maintain the common Tradition. It ſeems, they did well conſider the Conſequences of the Principle, which one of Cicero's Interlocutors laid down. 'Tis ſuppoſed in Cicero, that an ill-grounded Doctrine can't grow old. (d) Quid enim eſt hoc illo evidentius? quod niſi cognitum, comprehenſumque animis haberemus, non tam ſtabilis opinio permaneret, nec confirmaretur diuturnitate temporis, nec unâ cum ſæculis ætatibuſque hominum inveterare potuiſſet. Etenim videmus cæteras opiniones fictas, &c. Doubtleſs, the Monks are more influenced by ſome other Reaſons than by this, to oppoſe John de Launoi, and thoſe like him. Note by the by, that the Argument drawn from a long Continuance, is made uſe of in Cicero to prove a Falſity, viz. the reality and Exiſtence of the falſe Heathen Gods. 'Tis therefore a Principle that may lead one into an Error; nevertheleſs, the Maxim, Opinionum commenta delet dies, may be urged againſt the falſe Worſhip of the ancient Greeks and Romans, ſince there has been no Country for many Ages, wherein their Religion, their Jupiter and their Juno, their Venus and their Neptune, &c. are acknowledged and adored. And thus they loſe their Cauſe, when 'tis ſuppoſed, that ſooner or later time will deſtroy falſe Doctrines. Note, that this Principle can't be alledged as a good Proof, unleſs one determines the Duration that is ſufficient to diſtinguiſh Error from Truth. If a Thouſand Years ſuffice, every Opinion that is a Thouſand Years old is true; but if you determine no time, 'tis in vain to conclude, that a Doctrine which has laſted Four Thouſand Years is certain: You know not what will happen, nor whether the Fifth Millenary may not compleat the Deſtruction of what has reſiſted the former Ages. A Thought of Horace (e) may be applied to this Subject.

I have one thing farther to obſerve. There is no Appearance that the Imitators of John de Launoi can do any Service whilſt Things are only carried on by way of a Diſpute. The Protectors of falſe Devotion will never yield; they find their Account in ſtanding to their Tenets, and they are powerful enough to preſerve themſelves from all Conſtraint. The Court of Rome will ſecond and ſupport 'em. The Roman Church ſeems to have adopted the Religion of the God Terminus of the Roman Republick. This God never yielded, no not to Jupiter himſelf: which was a ſign, ſaid they, that the Roman People ſhould never be worſted, nor yield an Inch of Ground to their Enemies. If any Pope ſhould be willing to ſacrifice ſomething to the Reunion of the Schiſmaticks, ſome inſignificant Devotions, ſome Superannuated Traditions, 'tis to be feared they would murmur againſt him, as much or more than the Heathens did againſt the ſcandalous Peace of the Emperor Jovian. The Jeſuits, notwithſtanding all their Power, have not been able to hinder the Inquiſition of Toledo from condemning many Volumes of the Acta Sanctorum, and 'tis certain that Storm came only from the Sollicitations of the Carmelites, and other Monks, who were angry becauſe Father Papebroch and his Aſſiſtant have rejected many Acts, and many old Traditions, as Apocryphal. They are to be commended for making themſelves odious to the Inquiſition. But then they'll become uſeleſs with reſpect to the Reformation of publick Abuſes; their Cenſures, though they were much more ſevere than they are, will ſerve only for the Inſtruction of Private Perſons. The Diſeaſe is paſt cure. Father Mabillon (f) has given very good Advice about the Worſhip of ſome Saints, and the Diſtinction of Relicks: What did he get by it? He was anſwered, Phyſician, heal thy Self. Reform firſt the Worſhip that is paid, in ſome Houſes of your Order of St. Benedict, to as dubious Saints as any. They repreſented to him the injury he did to the Church, and the Advantage he gave the Proteſtants (g). Is not this to oppoſe all his good deſigns? Mr. Thiers lets up againſt falſe Relicks, he examines where the Bodies of the Martyrs lie, he Publiſhes ſome Diſſertations upon the Holy Tear of Vendome, and upon St. Firmin. All this was loſt Labour. The King's Council ſuppreſſed his Book about St. Firmin, as the Biſhop of Amiens had Condemn'd a Letter, which he had Publiſhed upon the ſame Queſtion. See the Nouvelles (h) de la Republique des Lettres, and the third part of the Bibliotheca volante. The Fruits of a diſcreet Zeal are deſtroyed in the Bud. They build upon this Principle, that 'tis dangerous to Abrogate old Cuſtoms, and that Bounds ought not to be removed. The Proſperity of new Rome, juſt like that of old Rome, (i) is grounded upon the Preſervation of old Rites. Conſecrations muſt be complied with, Faith will not ſuffer 'em to be chang'd. (k) Sed illa mutari vetat religio, & conſecratis utendum eſt. In our Days, ſaid a Sub-Prior of St. Antony, (l) let us beware of Innovations.

(Q) Who had leſs regard for him than Father Theophilus Raynaud.] You need only read his Hercules Commodianus, where you'll ſee all the Paſſion imaginable. Thoſe who will not be at the pains of reading it, but will only conſider the following Words, will eaſily perceive, that our Doctor insignificant as to the Publick. I'll mention the Judgment (R) that Mr. de Vigneul-Marville gave of him. Which will give me occasion to relate a Particularity that is not very well known, and which does not agree with the little Friendship that was between this Doctor and the Jesuits, and with his Affection for Mr. Arnauld. The thing is, that his Opinion concerning Grace *, was contrary to the Doctrine of St. Augustin.

* See the Remark R. towards the end.

LAURENTIO (Nicolas) commonly called Cola di Rienzo, was one of those Men in the XIV*th*. Century whom the providence of God makes use of from time to time, as a Theatre, on which may be seen (A) the Vicissitudes of humane Life. He was the Son of a mean Tavern-Keeper, and of a Laundress. His Application to his Studies in his youth, and the natural strength of his Parts, made him a very able Man. He became most Eloquent, and had by Heart all the fine Passages of Cicero, Livy, Julius Cæsar, Valerius Maximus, and Seneca. He was a great Lover of Antient Inscriptions, and knew very well how to read them. He obtained a Notary's place which at that time was well enough Esteem'd; so that Gentlemen vouchsaf'd to accept of it. The Commissaries of the several parts of Rome having deputed him to Pope Clement VI, who resided at Avignon, he Harangued him so Eloquently that he got the Esteem and Affection of that Pontif, and the Admiration of that Court. This encouraged him to inveigh against the great Lords of Rome, who oppress'd the Citizens. Cardinal John Colonna bore him an ill Will for it; but having better consider'd the matter, he desisted from making him Odious to the Pope. Laurentio grew still hotter against those little Tyrants of Rome; and one Day he Declaim'd in the Capitol with so much freedom against them, that he received, as soon as he had done, two Boxes on the Ear. A Lord of the House of Colonna, who was then Chamberlain of Rome, and Thomas Fortificca Secretary to the Senate were they that Box'd him. He dissembled the matter, and went on Haranguing in the Capitol, and in several Churches, and making Emblems, to shew the bad Administration of Justice. The Persons concerned took this for a pastime, especially when they saw that his Orations were mixed with Jests, and that he threatned some of 'em with capital Punishment. In all likelihood they thought that he could do 'em no prejudice by reason of his Extravagances, but they were mistaken: For taking advantage of Stephen Colonna's Absence, who was gone from Rome with Soldiers to bring in Provisions, he Assembled the People, Harangued 'em, made Laws, drove all the great Men out of the City, assumed the Power of Judicature, and was declared Tribune August, and Deliverer of the People in 1346. The Faction of the Exiles was incapable of withstanding him, by reason of the little Union there was amongst 'em; and therefore he dispos'd of things according to his Fancy, and saw himself the Head of a new Roman Republick, in whose Name he wrote to other States, to the Emperor, and to the Pope himself. The better to strengthen his Authority, he condemned many People to

(a) Theoph. Raynaud. Syntagm. de libris propriis, n. 63. p. 67. Apopompæi.

Doctor was never so much abused. (a) Infamavit vir ingenii Joannes Launoyus, cui nihil adeo sacrum fuit, quod non fœdavit scriptione aliqua petulanti ac plusquam censoria. Calitibus ipsis non peperci, imo in hoc non semel conscavit ——— Is cum in me quoque incurrisset, urgente quodam infamatore Marsya, qui sua delicia, imò apertè hæretica commenta, contecta extremis propè digitis in ea Antemurali, ægrè tulit, ex persona amici ac civis nostri S. Theologiæ D. castigatus est; patefactis primum ejus fragoribus, quibus Herculem præstulit: Tum mendaciis, calumniis, loquacitate, feminilitate, aliisque faminini generis maculis, quibus satyra verius quam scriptio abeo in nos exarata, dehonestabatur: uta ut Commodi exemplo, Hercules simul terrificus, & fœmina, non nisi pellacis ac dolis armata, apparere voluisse in ea lucubratione videatur. Quæ causa fuit, cur Herculis Commodiani appellatione visus sit insignendus. This Jesuit in another place compares him to Ismael. (b) Homo Ismaelita, cujus manus contra omnes, Joannes Launoy.

(b) Id. ib. n. 72. p. 70.

(R) The Judgment that Mr. de Vigneul Marville gave of him.] 'Whatever esteem I have for 'Mr. de Launoi, it must be confess'd, that he had 'the predominant Fault of Criticks, which is to 'observe no measure, and to defend the worst 'Causes Obstinately. His Books about extream 'Unction, and Aristotle's Fortune and some others, 'are good Pieces; but it may be said in general, that 'this Doctor in all his Writings shews much 'more Learning than Judgement and good Logick. 'Commonly the main question is not what he 'handles best; but the Accessories are wonderful, 'ly which he frequently imposes upon the un-'attentive Reader (c).

(c) Vigneul Marville, Melanges d' hist. & de litterature, p. 267.

The Author of the Journal des Savans, affirmed, (d) that it cannot be said that Mr. de Launoi maintained bad Causes with Stubbornness; his particular Character was to love truth above all things, to seek for it without any prejudice, and freely to discover it, when he had found it, &c. Mr. de Vigneul Marville answered (e) that there are two ways of loving Truth; one, for the sake of it, and the other so far as we are concerned in it ——— That St. Augustin loved it for its own sake ——— that the generality of the Criticks don't do so, who love Truth only for the sake of the Glory it brings to those who make usual Discoveries; on which is more out of a Capricious Humour that prevails in them. I won't by, continues he, 'that Mr. de Launoi was 'one of those Adventurers, who go in quest of 'Truth, as the Knights Errants were formerly 'Ambitious of doing noble Exploits. But then it can't 'be denied that a great many very understanding 'Men did sometimes look upon him as a Critick 'who framed things, and did not always find the 'truth which he loved; for which we need only 'look upon those learned Men who writ against, or 'made Replies to him. One might have seen him (f) covered with the Dust of his daily Combats, and full of Bruises that remained in him after the Fight. Nay, this Author adds, that in Mr. Arnauld's Opinion he was not always Orthodox: he declared too much for a Divine very inferior to St. Augustin, and the Protestants of the Arminian Party, pretended to take great Advantage of it. This gives us to understand that he did not approve the Hippothesis of St. Augustin about Predestination; but we shall know much better, what his Opinion about that Doctrine was, if we read the Preface of a Treatise which is not as yet Published: Mr. Simon has inserted it in one of his (g) Letters, and informs us that Doctor de Launoi condemns St. Augustin's Opinions in that Work. This Letter is not very Advantageous to the Doctor, and gives us a very mean Notion of his Learning.

(d) See the third Tome of Vigneul de Marville, p. 266. Rouen Edition.

(A) In which may be seen the Vicissitudes.] The Heathens call this the Moments of (h) Fortune's good Humour; but they might have added, that this

(c) Ibid. pag. 267.

(f) Ibid. p. 269.

(g) Tis the 31st. of M. Simon's Letters. Charles Daniel at Trevoux in the year 1702.

(h) Quasi ex humili magna ad fastigia rerum Extollit, quoties voluit Fortuna jocari. Juven. Sat. 3. v. 39. Di quam plus hominis habent. Plautus in Captiv. prol. v. 22. Ludit in humanis divina potentia rebus. Ovid. de Ponto l. 4 Eleg. 3.

to Death, and amongſt others, he cauſed Martio de Porto, one of the petty Tyrants of Rome, to be Hanged. He received Embaſſies from many Princes and Republicks, and boldly ſummon'd the Pope to come and live at Rome, with the College of Cardinals. He was ſo ſucceſsful in the War he made with the Faction of the Nobles, that he intirely routed it. But then he did like moſt of thoſe, who make an Inſurrection under the fine pretence of Liberty. It is not the Tyranny they hate, but the Tyrants; they are vexed, that any ſhould exerciſe the Sovereign Power beſides themſelves. Laurentio had no ſooner overthrown the Tyranny of others, but he became a Tyrant himſelf, and he was treated, as he had treated others. He was forced to run away, and Hanged in Effigie at Rome as a Traytor. Having conceal'd himſelf for ſome time, he went to the Emperor, who permitted him, but without adding him to it, to go and wait upon the Pope. He was at firſt ill receiv'd, but after ſome Months Impriſonment, he followed the Pope's Legate to Rome. He there raiſed his Party to ſuch a degree, as to be able to make War again with the Colonna's: But his ſeverity to the People, and his Exactions render'd him ſo Odious, that they roſe againſt him. He thought his Eloquence would calm that Tempeſt, as it had on many other Occaſions; but he was miſtaken: and notwithſtanding his ſhewing himſelf to the People, and Haranguing them at his Windows, they ſet his Palace on Fire. He attempted to eſcape in a Beggar's Habit; and was almoſt out of Danger, when a certain little Man diſcover'd him. Another run him through the Belly. They gave him a thouſand Wounds; they dragg'd him through the Streets, and hung him by the Feet [a]. He was two days in that Poſture, after which the Jews Burnt his Corps in the Country [b]. Some of his Writings (B) are ſtill in being.

LAZZARELLI (N.) a Native of Gubio in Italy, was a very good Poet. He was for ſometime Auditor, or Judge in the Rota of Macerata, and afterwards he Dedicated himſelf to the Church, and became a Prieſt, and Provoſt of Mirandola. He Died in 1694, being above eighty years of Age. He Publiſh'd a Book (C) intituled la Cicceide, which has ſomething very curious in it. 'Tis a Collection of Sonnets, and of ſome other Poems, in which he horribly abuſes one Arrighini [c] a Native of Lucca, who had been his Colleague in the Rota of Macerata. His Verſification is wonderfully eaſie, natural, and fluent: he has a ſurprizing fruitfulneſs of Imagination, and ingenious and lively Thoughts; but all this turns upon ſo obſcene a Subject, and is inſpirited with ſuch a Satyrical, Revengeful, and ſometimes Profane Wit, that it is a juſt occaſion of Scandal. The Preface of this Book contains ſome Excuſes (D) which I ſhall make mention of.

LE-

[a] Taken from Proſper Mandoſio's Bibliotheca Romana centuria 2. num. 55.

[b] This happen'd the 8th. of September 1353.

[c] He has writ ſome Books and amongſt others a Volume di conſigli criminali to which he prefixed his Cut. See p. [illegible] of the Cicceide.

(A) Claudian. in Ruffin. l. 1. circa initium.

(b) Ad ann 1347.

(c) Ex Bibliotheca Romana Proſp. Mandoſii rent. 2. n. 55.

(d) M. Silvestre, Doctor of Phyſick, lent me a Copy of 'em at his return from Italy in July 1705 and told me the particulars mention'd in this Article.

(e) Voiture, Letter to the Duke of Enguien after the Battle of Rocroy in 1643. Tis the 141. Letter of Voiture.

(f) Virgil. Æn. l. 1. v. 204.

this Play generally ends like Tragedies. The Plot of the Play, which our Laurentio Acted upon the great Theatre of the World, was at laſt unravelled in the ſame manner. (a) Tolluntur in altum Ut lapſu graviore ruant.

(B) Some of his Writings are ſtill in Being.] The Letter he writ to thoſe of Viterbo is to be found in a Book intituled Proſe antiche di Dante, Petrarcha, Boccaccio & altri nobili & virtuoſi ingegni. Which contains alſo the Harangues, that Pandolfus Francus and Francis Baroncelli his Envoys to the Republick of Florence, made to the Florentin Senate. Some Letters that he writ to Charles King of the Romans, and to the Emperor Lewis of Bavaria are to be found in the fourteenth Tome of Raovius's Annals [d]. Petrarch made a fine Italian Poem in praiſe of Laurentio.

(C) A Book intituled la Cicceide hath ſomething very curious in it.] I have only ſeen (b) the ſecond Edition of it, which is of the year 1692. Here is the whole Title; La Cicceide legittima: in queſta ſeconda impreſſione ordinatamente diſpoſta, notabilmente accreſciuta, e fedelmente rincontrata con gli Originali dell' Autore. It is made up of two Parts: The Title of the firſt is le Teſticolate, and that of the ſecond is le Schinazzate. The Perſon Reflected upon in that Work, is denoted by the name of Don Ciccio. Note, that Ciccio is a Word the Neapolitans make uſe of, to ſignify Franceſco. The Romans inſtead of Ciccio ſay Cecco. The great deſign of the Author is to prove, that Don Ciccio is a Coglione. All the 318 Sonnets, which Compoſe the firſt part of the Cicceide, terminate in that. 'Tis the Center of the Sphere of its Activity. There is nothing wanting in that Sphere of Slander; it has all its Degrees, and they all terminate in the ſame Point. Lazarelli, which way ſoever he begins, always ends with the Coglioneria of Don Ciccio. This is violent. It had not been poſſible for Voiture to do any thing like it, for the Glory of the great Prince, to whom he wrote. (e) You that are a true Cæſar in Wit and Learning, a Cæſar in Diligence, Vigilance, and Courage, & per omnes caſus Cæſar, you have deceived the Opinion, &c. Our Poet turns his Ciccio on all ſides, (d) per varios caſus, per tot diſcrimina rerum, and makes a C. of him per omnes caſus. He traces him from the moment of his Conception to his Death, and goes ſtill farther; for he Jeſts upon his Coffin, his Burial, his Epitaph, &c. He purſues him to Hell, as Charon's Boat, and ſays he'll be Ferry'd over Gratis; and even that he may go over without a Ferry-Boat. He ſuppoſes, that Charon ſpoke to him thus:

E' (g) privilegio a pari tuoi conceſſo
Il poter ſenza imbarco, e pagamento
Hauere a l'altro margine l' acceſſo;
Mentre un tondo C—— gonfio di vento
Galleggiando leggiar, può da sè ſteſſo
Andar di là dal fiume a ſalvamento.

He left out of the ſecond Edition the Sonnets that were accounted moſt Prophane, and had been the cauſe of putting his Book in the Index. They concern'd Ciccio's Baptiſm, Confirmation, Extreme Unction and ſome other tickliſh Subjects. I have a Manuſcript Copy of 'em, and am adviſed to inſert one at leaſt here; that they who cannot ſee the Cicceide, a Piece but little known on this ſide of the Alps, may form an Idea of Lazarelli's Genius. I have pitched upon the Sonnet concerning extreme Unction (‡).

L'oglio ſanto.

Da la febre, da l' aſma, e da l'uſcita,
Don Ciccio ritrovava l' ammalato
Egià ridotto in ſi cattivo ſtato
Che'l ſean vicino all' ultima partita.
Quando, tal nuova il pouerello udita,
Dimandò l'oglio ſanto, e gli fù dato
Rimanendo coſi fortificato
Per ſuo franco paſſaggio a l' altra vita.
Ma fatta il Parochian la ſua funzione
Per la mente uno ſcrupulo gli corſe
D'aver fallato nell' operazione.
Però che in vece d'applicar l'unzione
Sì i cinque ſentimenti egli s'accorſe
Ch' applicata l'haveà ſopra un coglione.

(D) The Preface of his Book contains ſome Excuſes.] It ſeems to have been made by one of the Au(g) Cicceide p. 290.

(‡) Here are the ſix laſt Verſes of the Sonnet who aſk'd him to aſſiſt at his firſt Maſs.

ſo t'en prego,
Don Ciccio, inſtantemente,
Che a me
non lice far queſte funzioni,
Se tu nuedeſimo
non vi ſei preſente,
Stante che le Canoniche Sanzioni Prohibiſcono a tutti eſpreſſamente
L'uſo di celebrar ſenza coglioni.

LELAND (John) a Native of London, ſo induſtriouſly applied himſelf to the ſearch of the Engliſh Antiquities, and was thought ſo qualified to ſucceed in it, that King Henry VIII. gave him a very good Penſion, and the Title of his Antiquary. That Imployment began and ended with him. That he might well diſcharge the Duties of it, he went through all the Countries of England, he examined all the Ruins of old Monuments, he peruſed the Manuſcripts of Convents and Colleges; and having ſpent ſix years in his Travels, and Collected as many Memoirs as was poſſible, he undertook (A) many conſiderable Works: But he had not time to finiſh 'em, nor even to forward 'em. The Court did not ſupply him with the allowance that was due to him; and whether for this, or ſome other Reaſons, he fell into (B) a deep Melancholy, which Diſtracted him. He Died in that ſad condition. His Manuſcripts are in the Bodleian Library. They are (C) undigeſted Materials, that ſhew however his great Capacity. But it is more clearly known by a Book (D) in which he put his laſt Hand, and which deſerves to be Printed *. Camden has been accuſed of having made great uſe of John Leland's Manuſcripts *. Dr. Smith has confuted that Accuſation.

LEMNOS, An Iſle in the Ægean Sea near Thrace, and (A) famous upon ſeveral Accounts. It was thus named from the who was called Lemnos, and had Maids Sacrificed to her. The

(a) Lib. 4. Hist. cap. 4. pag. m. 401.

(b) Hellanicus, Sebellicus, Aemilius, &c. in Lemno, l. 1. c. 608. & Schottelius's Hexaemeron Lond. lib. 1. c. 564. a See the Remark E. at the end.

(c) Our Geographers do usually allow 2500 Paces to a common French League, &c. Vid. Cluver. Introduct. in Geograph. l. 3. c. 35.

(d) Salmas. in Solinum, p. m. 184.

(e) Apollon. Rhod. Argonaut. lib. 1. v. 601. & sch. ib.

(e) Salm. ubi supra.

(f) Steph. Byzant. voce Αθως.

(g) Plin. lib. 36. cap. 13. p. m. 305.

touched the left Angle of the Isle. This Testimony is sufficient to convince us, that the Antients had reason to say, that the Shadow of this Mountain reached the Isle of Lemnos; but that they did not well know the Measure of that Extent. It would be a distance of about Thirty Five French Leagues, (c) If we computed it by Pliny's Eighty Seven Miles. What abatements must we make, since Belon says only something above Eight Leagues? The following Passage shews, that Plutarch was in the same Error, as well as Pliny. (b) 'I know 'very well, that neither you nor I have ever been 'in Lemnos; yet we have often heard that Imbrick 'Verse, so frequent in every ones Mouth,

Le mont Athos couvrit le coupé
Du beuf qui est dedans Lemnos planté.

'For the Shadow of that Mountain falls, as it seems, 'on the Image of a brazen Heifer, which is in Lemnos, extending it self in length over the Sea, not 'less then seven hundred Stadia; not that the Mountain, which makes the Shadow, is of that Height 'as to cause it; but because the distance of the 'Light renders the Shadows of Bodies manifoldly 'greater than the Bodies themselves. The 700 Stadia of Plutarch, are 87500 Paces: So that he made the Distance still greater than Pliny and Solinus, Apollonius makes it equal to the Space that a Ship can sail from break of Day till Noon. Salmasius (d) proves, that according to the common Estimation of the antient Geographers, this signifies 250 Stadia, whence we may infer, that Apollonius lessens the Distance above half, which the others reckon betwixt Mount Athos and the Isle of Lemnos: and yet that he supposes it much greater, than Belon found it; for Eight French Leagues make only 100 Stadia. Note, that Apollonius observes, that the Shadow of Mount Athos reached as far as the City of Myrina.

(e) Ἀλλ' ὅτε δὴ κορυφὴν ὑπερέσχεθε νειόθι κούρης
Ὄσσα τε καὶ ὀλοὸν Πήλιον ἠερόεν,
Ὄφρα τε δὴ πρὸς ἔσπερον ἀντιβολήσῃ ἐόντα,
Ἀφραδέως ἀφύλακτον ἔπι, καὶ ἐπ' ἀμφίπολον νῆα.

Cæterum dubia luce pergentibus aperiebatur Athonis umbo
Thracius, qui Lemnum, licet tantum distantem,
Quantum insultare omnaria conficiat in meridiem,
Extantissimo inumbrat fastigio, vel Myrinam usque.

Salmasius (e) alledges Stephanus (f) Byzantius, to shew, that according to Pliny and Solinus, the Shadow of Mount Athos, could not have reached the Isle of Lemnos: he objects against them, that according to that Writer, that Shadow did not reach above 300 Stadia; but he would have more solidly confuted them, and many others, by Peter Belon's Testimony.

(B) Its Labyrinth was one of the Four Buildings of that kind.] The Three others were that of Egypt, that of the Isle of Crete, and that which King Porsenna caused to be built in Tuscany. Here follows a Passage out of Pliny. (g) De Ægyptio & Cretico Labyrinthis, fatis dictum est. Lemnius similis illis, columnis tantum centum quinquaginta mirabilior fuit: quarum in officina turbines ita librati pendebant, ut puero circumagente tornarentur. Architecti illum fecere Zmilus & Rholus, & Theodorus indigena. Exstatque adhuc reliquiæ ejus, cum Cretici Italicique nulla vestigia exstent. That is to say, according to Du Pinet's Version, 'so much for the Labyrinths of 'Egypt and Crete. That of Stalimene (2) was 'the same, except that it had 140 Marble Pillars 'more than the others, which were all turned 'with that Dexterity, that one Person could turn the 'Lathe in which they were made, so finely polished were the Irons and Axes that sustained 'em. More 'over, 'tis said, the Zmilus, Rholus and Theodorus, 'which were of the said Isle, made this Labyrinth, 'of which there are some Remains; and yet we 'can't find the least Footstep of that of Candy or of Tuscany. This Translator supposes, that the Three Architects of this Labyrinth, were Lemnians; but the Original affirms this only of Theodorus, who is perhaps the same that made a Book (h) concerning a Temple of Juno.

(C) That Vulcan——fell into this Island, where——set up a Forge.] Some Authors (i) say, that Jupiter threw him Head-long, and that if the Lemnians had not received him in their Arms, he would have lost his Life. But he himself says in Homer (k) that Juno kick'd him down, and that Eurynome and Thetis, the Daughters of Oceanus, caught him, and prevented his being killed. He says in another place of the Iliad (l), that Jupiter took him by the Foot, and threw him out of Heaven, and that having been a whole Day a coming down, he fell into the Isle of Lemnos at Sun-setting, that he was almost dead, and that the Inhabitants took him up. Perhaps it will be said, that Homer should have avoided contradicting himself; but what he says implies no Contradiction; he only relates two different Adventures. Valerius Flaccus supposes, that Vulcan fell upon the Shore of Lemnos, and that the Inhabitants hearing his Voice, ran to him, and gave him all manner of Assistance, so that he had ever since a great Affection for that Island.

(h) Lucian. de sacrific. pag. 354. tom. 1.

(i) Homer. Iliad. lib. 18. v. 394. p. m. 556.

(k) Il. il. lib. 1. v. 591.

(m) Jam summas Vulcania fugit
Lemnos aquas, libripes variis defleta laboris
Ignipotens; nec te Furiis & crimine matrum.
Terra, fuga meritique piget memorasse pudoris.
Tempore quo primum frenis insurgere coortos
Cœlicolum, & regni sensit novitate tumentes
Jupiter; æthereæ nec stare silentia pacis:
Junonem volucri primam suspendit Olympo,
Horrendum chaos ostendens, panamque baratri.
Mox etiam pavidæ tentantem vincula matris
Solvere, præcipiti Vulcanum vertice cæli
Devolvit: unus ille polo, noctemque diemque
Turbinis in morem; Lemni cum Lucifer tandem
Insonuit: vox inde repens ut perculit urbem,
Excivêre procul, miserentque favent que
Æternos ægro cunctantem poplite gressus.
Hinc edoctæ, superas postquam pater annuit arces,
Lemnos cara deo: nec fama notior Ætna
Aut Lipares domus.

(m) Valer. Flaccus Argonaut. lib. 2. v. 78. pag. m. 91.

Homer says (n) that Lemnos was the beloved Country of Vulcan.

(n) Ἠέ γε Λῆμνον ἀπενάσσατο θεσπεσίοιο
Ἡφαίστου, ὅθι μιν ποδάρκης δέξατο δῖος.
Il. ω. v. 753.
Simulabat se iterum in Lemnum pulchrè fabricatum oppidum, Quod illi terrarum multò charissimum est omnium. Homero Odyss. lib. 8. pag. m. 230.

Here follows a thing, which shews, that the most fabulous Traditions will last a long time. Belon, who travelled Turkey in the Year 1548, informs us (o), 'that there's no Inhabitant of the Isle of 'Lemnos, but knows something of Vulcan's History; and as the little Children of the Isle 'of Corfula will tell you the History of the Dolphin, as if it was a new thing; so every body 'in the Isle of Lemnos, relates the Adventures of 'Vulcan, but in a different manner. For some say, 'that he and his Horse broke their Thighs by 'their Fall, and that he was immediately cured by 'the Vertue of the Earth on which he fell.

(o) Belon, Observat. B. 1. ch. 29. p. 68.

(D) Was very remarkable by a kind of Earth, which had great Vertues. It cured Philoctetes.] Philostratus mentions a Particular very different from the common Tradition. He says, that Philoctetes was not tormented in the Isle of Lemnos, with the long Pains that were so much talked of. 'That 'brave Man, adds he (p), was immediately cured by the Earth of Lemnos, which is taken out 'of the very Place on which Vulcan fell from 'Heaven; for it has the Vertue of curing all sorts 'of violent and furious Distempers, and of stopping 'all Bloody Fluxes; but it cures no Biting of Serpents, except that of the Hydra. I shall set down some times many Flames broke out (F) of the Earth in that Iſland, particularly on the top of Mount Moſychlus. Two Maſſacres had been committed in the ſame Iſland, which gave occaſion [a] to ſome Proverbs. I have mentioned the firſt of theſe two Maſſacres, in the Article of Hipſipyle; that Country had in time, bin wholy diſpeopled by 'em, if the Argonauts had not prevented it. The Women had killed all the Men, and had no Mind to receive the firſt Comers; for hearing that a Ship was ſtanding to their Coaſt, they took up Arms, and ran to the Shore [b], fully reſolved to oppoſe the Invaſion; but when they came to know that theſe Foreigners were not the Thracians their Enemies, and that it was a Ship of the Argonauts, they ſhewed them all manner of Kindneſs, and declared to thoſe brave Men, that they might land in their Country, provided (G) they would take an Oath to lie with them. They accepted the Condition, and were ſo well pleaſed with the Performance of it, that 'twas thought they had entirely forgot their Expedition to Colchos: But Hercules, who

(p) Philostrat. in heroicis.

[a] See Eraſmus, Chil. 1. cent. 9. n. 27. & Chil. 2. cent. 10. n. 44.

[b] Apollon. Argon. lib. 1. v. 633.

interdum neceſſe) ſed faxum illud Lemnium clamore Philoctetео funeſtare.

Quod ejulatu, queſtu, gemitu, fremitibus
Reſonando mutuum flebiles voces refert.

[1] See alſo Sophocles, in the Tragedy intituled Philoctetes.

(F) Many Flames broke out of the Earth in the Iſle of Lemnos.] Euſtathius mentions this as the Reaſon, why the Ancients feigned that Vulcan fell into that Iſland. (a) [illegible] Quia olim ibi è terra erumpebat ſpontaneus ignis. The Scholiaſt upon Lycophron, quoting Hellanicus's Book concerning the Foundation of Chios, tells us, that the firſt Invention of Fire, and Arms, was owing to a Thunder-Bolt that fell upon a Tree in the Iſle of Lemnos. This he ſays, upon ſome Words of Lycophron (b) in which Fire is called Lemnian. What has been ſaid of Mount Moſychlus, is much the ſame with what has been reported of Mount Ætna. See Heſychius and Nicander, and the Scholiaſt upon the latter, with the Verſes (c) he alledges out of Antimachus; and don't forget theſe Words of Seneca.

(a) Euſtath. in lib. 1. Iliad.

(b) Τερψιγενὴς χθὼν Λημνίης πυρός. Conſurgens artus igne Lemnio. Lycophr. v. 227.

Qua (d) tanta nubes flamma Sicanias bibit?
Quæ Lemnos ardens? quæ plaga igniferi poli
Petens flagranti curvet in zona diem?

(c) You may ſee 'em in Bochart geogr. ſacra, lib. 1. cap. 12. pag. m. 432.

(d) Seneca in Hercule Oetæo, v. 1360.

At this rate they might well ſay, that Vulcan had his Forges in the Iſle of Lemnos.

(G) Provided they took an Oath to lie with them.] This Particular being contrary to the Decorum, which the Poets uſually obſerve, I ought to produce a Proof for it in the very Words of my Author; and therefore I ſhall ſet down this Greek Paſſage. (e) Λημνιάδες δὲ γύναικες ἐπεὶ ἐπύθοντο τοὺς Ἀργοναύτας [illegible] μάχῃ ἐπὶ πολὺν χρόνον ἐμάχοντο πρὸς ἀλλήλους· τέλος δὲ ἡ νικήσασα μάχη μεγάλη ἐγένετο καὶ φονώδης. The meaning of thoſe Words, is, that the Women of Lemnos took up Arms, and continued to threaten the Argonauts, till they ſwore that they would lie with 'em. Euripides ſays they fought with a great deal of Bravery. This Story will hardly be credited by thoſe, who do not mind the Circumſtances; but if we conſider on the one Hand, that theſe Women had deſtroyed all the Men of that Iſland, and on the other, that they reſolved upon ſuch a Maſſacre, becauſe their Husbands not being able to endure their ill Smells, applied themſelves to other Women, whom they made their Concubines, the thing will appear highly probable. Nor can it be a Wonder, that theſe Women ſhould have been ſo forward in their Advances, and that the Argonauts ſhould have diſcovered ſo little Tenderneſs and Galantry. The Warlike Equipage, and Martial Look of theſe Women, were no inticing Things. The cruel Havock they had made of their Fathers, Husbands, Sons, and Brothers, did certainly raiſe an Abhorrence for them. Beſides the Conſideration of the Reaſon, why they had committed ſuch a Slaughter, muſt needs have been an Obſtacle to the Love of the Argonauts; for they committed that horrid Crime, becauſe their Husbands grew out of Conceit with them by reaſon of (g) their Smell, which proceeded from their Breath; but ſome ſay it proceeded from their Arm-Pits, which we call to ſmell Ramiſh. Lactantius, upon the 5th. Book of Statius's Thebaid, follows this Opinion, for he calls this Smell of the Lemnindes, hircinum odorem. Dion Chryſoſtom ſom ſays likewiſe to the ſame Purpoſe in his 33d. Oration. Ἀφροδίτην γοῦν φασὶ τὴν Ἀφροδίτην λέγειν δυσκόλως πως μοιχᾶσθαι. As it is ſaid that Venus being exaſperated againſt the Women of Lemnos, infected their Arm-Pits. All things duly conſidered, one may eaſily perceive, that the Antients did not tranſgreſs the Rules of Probability, when they ſuppoſed, that the Companions of Jaſon had much ado to proміſe on the Shoar of Lemnos, what they would have asked and offered in other Places. The Women who came to a Parley with them, deſerved to be told what was ſaid by Catullus againſt one Ruſus, who wondred that all the Women he met with proved cruel.

(g) Meziriac upon Ovid's Epiſtles, pag. 557, 558.

Noli (h) admirari, quare tibi fœmina nulla
Ruſe, velit tenuem ſuppoſuiſſe ſuam.
Non illam rara labefactes munere veſtis,
Aut perluciduli delicijs lapidis.
Ladit te quadam mala fabula, qua tibi fertur
Valle ſub alarum trux habitare caper.
Hunc metuunt omnes: neque mirum, nam mala valde eſt
Beſtia, nec quicum bella puella cubet.
Quare aut crudelem naſorum interfice peſtem:
Aut admirari deſine, quur fugiunt.

(h) Catul. epigr. 70. p. m. 157. Ovid de arte amandi lib. 3. ſays Quem ſæpe admonui ne trux caper iret in alas, Neve forent duris aſpera crura pilis!

Horace alledged a like Reaſon to a Woman, who complained that he was unkind to her.

(i) Horat. epod. od. 12.

Quid (i) tibi vis mulier nigris dignißima barris?
Munera cur mihi, quidve tabellas
Mittis, nec firmo juveni, neque naris obeſæ?
Namque ſagacius unus odoror,
Polypus, an gravis hiſutis cubet hircus in alis,
Quam canis acer, ubi lateas ſus.
Quis ſudor victis, & quàm malus undique membris
Creſcit odor, cum &c.

Theſe Verſes of Horace have been thus tranſlated into French, by Robert and Anthony le Chevalier d'Agneaux.

Que me demandes-tu, femme ſur toute digne
D'elephans noirs? pour quelle cauſe à moy
Ny roide jouvenceau, ny d'épeſſe navine
Fais-tu de dons & de lettres envoy?
Car plus ſubtilement, que la bauge, où ſe cele
Le porc ſanglier, le chien n'odore ſin;
Je ſen s'aunez le poulpe, ou ſideſions l'aiſſelle
Au rouge pol loge un flair de bouquin.
Quelle ſueur luy croiſt, combien lui croiſt mauvaiſe
Es membres flacs un odeur, lors qu'étant, &c.

Some there are who attentively conſidering theſe Circumſtances, will judge perhaps, that the Rules of Probability had been better purſued, if the ſame Conduct had been aſcribed to the Argonauts, which Auguſtus obſerved, when Fulvia propoſing to him Peace (k) or War, he choſe the latter. But it is certain, that Probability has been ſufficiently guarded in the Epiſode of Lemnos, the Choice that the Argonauts made, being the more natural. Their Ship lay in the Road, and had bin ſhatter'd by a Tempeſt; They had occaſion for a Port in Lemnos, and there was a Neceſſity of their Landing. This they could who kept a-board the Ship, upbraided 'em with (H) their giving themſelves over to their Pleaſures, and obliged 'em to Re-imbark. Some pretend that they paſs'd two or three years a-ſhoar with the Women of Lemnos, and that the Iſland was by this means Re-peopled. The other Maſſacre was that of all the Children (I) begot by thoſe could not do without fighting; and they 'had already experienced the Valour of theſe Women; for they had fought courageouſly, and had not been worſted. They muſt either renew the Attack, or Retreat, or take an Oath, that they would grant theſe Women all they deſired. The Retreat was ſcandalous, whether before the Deciſion of a Second Battle; or after a freſh Attempt, as unſucceſsful as the former. What can be hoped from the Expedition to Colchos, might all Greece ſay, when our Heroes are baffled at the Iſle of Lemnos, repulſed by ſilly Women, and forced to fly? The Tempeſt deſtroy'd their Hopes of any good Succeſs in caſe of a ſecond Battle. All then that remained, was to ſubmit to the Neceſſity of the Oath demanded. And perhaps, thought they, the Cauſe of the Lemnians Averſion is over, or in a great Meaſure abated; and if the worſt come to the worſt, they could quickly free themſelves from the ungrateful Yoke, ſince nothing in particular was enjoyn'd 'em as to time or any other Circumſtance. Theſe might be the Conſiderations that obliged them to ſwear, and we muſt not believe they went upon Equivocations, or Mental Reſervations, or upon the Right which diſpenſes with an Oath taken by Force, & metu cadente in conſtantem virum. We ſhall ſee in the following Remark, that they kept their Promiſe very well.

(k) See the Article Lycoris.

(H) Hercules, who kept aboard his Ship, upbraided 'em——and obliged 'em to re-imbark.] There's ſome room to wonder, that being ſo much given to the Love of Women as he was, he ſhould not take a turn, as well as the reſt, with the Women of Lemnos; for though the Lemnian Dames, for Reaſons already mentioned, were none of the moſt tempting; yet we ſee no reaſon why he ſhould be nicer than the reſt of his Comrades. The Oath they exacted, ſay you, carry'd ſome Suſpicion with it, and ſince they could not think bare Promiſes a ſufficient Tye, he concluded they had an extreme Miſtruſt of their own Charms, and that ſomething was in the Wind which he could not well gueſs at; in ſhort, that it was not worth while to go aſhore. But once more, why ſhould he be ſo much more Squeamiſh than the reſt, he who had as Whoring a Conſtitution as the beſt of 'em? I own I'm at a loſs what to anſwer to this Difficulty, and ſhall therefore take up with the bare matter of Fact. Apollonius declares, that 'Hercules never would ſet Foot in the Iſland, but 'kept conſtantly aboard the Ship Argos, that he 'might have a right to reprove his Companions, 'who ſuffered themſelves to be drawn away by the 'Careſſes of the Lemnian Women, and never once 'thought of purſuing their Enterprize; which he 'did with ſo much the more freedom, as he him'ſelf was not liable to the ſame Imputation (a). Valerius Flaccus repreſents theſe young Hero's to intent upon ſolacing the Widows of Lemnos, that they had not Leiſure to think of embarking. They had quite forgot themſelves in the Iſland; The Game pleaſed, and Hercules was forc'd to drag 'em thence by Dint of Reproach, and talk very coarſly to Jaſon, Chief of the Enterprize.

(a) Meurſius ubi ſupra, p. 585. 586.

Urbe (b) ſedent læti Minyæ, viduique vacantes
Indulgent thalamis; nimboſque educere luxu;
Nec jam velle vias: Zephyroſque andire vocantes
Diſſimulant; donec reſilles Tyrinthius Heros
Non tulit; ipſe rati nocturnos atque integer; urbis
Invidiſſe deos tantum maris æquor adortis,
Deſertaſque domos, fraudataque tempore ſegni
Vota patrum; quid & ipſe viris cunctantibus aſſit?
O miſeri, &c.

(b) Valer. Flaccus, l. 2. v. 370. p. m. 101.

I obſerved in another (c) place that the beſt Prize had fallen to Jaſon's ſhare; the Queen of the Iſland fell in Love with him, and gave him the tendereſt marks of her Eſteem. The Remonſtrances of Hercules awak'd theſe Hero's out of their Golden Dream: They Re-imbarked without ſhewing any regard to the Tears (d) of their Lemnian Miſtreſſes. Ovid (e) ſuppoſes that they tarried two whole years with them, but Apollonius informs us that their ſtay was much ſhorter, and this indeed is moſt likely, for had they paſſed two whole years in theſe delights there had been no need of ſtriking the Lyre of Orpheus to draw 'em away, that irreſiſtleſs Lyre to which the Stones (f) themſelves obey'd. Now 'twas found neceſſary to have Recourſe to this Machine, elſe they never had been able to tear themſelves from their Wives of Lemnos.

(c) In the Article of Hypſipyle.

(d) See Valerius Flaccus ib. v. 393. & ſeq.

(e) Ovid. in Epiſt. Hypſipyle.

(f) Ovid. Metam. l. XI. v. 2. & 42.

(g) Orpheus in Argonauticis, v. 478. p. m. 34.

Aliaque alius commiſcebatur, & obliti fuiſſent itineris ſui,
Niſi quidem revocatoriis monitis, ſuavique cantu
Noſtro perſuaſi, deſcendiſſent ad navem nigram,
Remigationem deſiderantes, recordatique fuiſſent laboris.

Let's Note an Error of Barthius. He ſays, Ovid makes the Argonauts ſtay three years in this Iſland, and thus he proves it. (h) Sic enim ipſum penes Jaſoni ſcribit bona noſtra Hypſipyle.

(h) Barth. in Statium, Tom. 3. p. 228.

Tertia meſſis erat, cum te dare vela coactus,
Impleſti lacrymis talia verba tuis.

If he had taken notice of the foregoing (i) Verſe, he would have ſpoken only of two Years; and this may ſhew us how much it concerns Writers not to run too faſt, but patiently examine what goes before, and what follows the Places they deſign to allege. Three Harveſts do not ſignify Three Years; they lie almoſt within the compaſs of two, as three Sundays within the compaſs of two Weeks.

(i) Hic tibi ſubque ſcilas, ſubque cacumina mentis.

(I) The other Maſſacre was that of all the Children begot by thoſe of Lemnos.] To give a juſt Comment on this Article, I muſt take notice (k) that the Athenians having expelled the Pelaſgians out of Attica, gave 'em the Country which lies at the Foot of the Mountain Hymettus (l) for a Habitation. This was in Recompence of the pains the Pelaſgians had taken in building the Walls of the Citadel of Athens. They Cultivated the Country which had been aſſigned 'em with ſo much Induſtry, that of the worſt Land thereabouts they ſoon made it the beſt. And this was the reaſon why the Athenians outed 'em. The Hiſtorian Hecataus aſſigns no other reaſon for it. But they themſelves would never own the Injuſtice, they pretended that a great many of their Children, Boys and Girls (m) going to fetch Water from the nine Fountains, had a horrible Affront put upon 'em by the Pelaſgians, who not content with that Inſult, had made preparations for an Irruption, and were duly Convicted of it. The Athenians maintained that they might juſtly have put 'em to Death, and that they had ſhew'd a great deal of Clemency in having only expelled 'em. The Pelaſgians withdrew into ſeveral Parts, and particularly into the Iſland of Lemnos. They watched an opportunity to Revenge themſelves; and as they knew the time of the Athenian Feſtivals, they laid an Ambuſh for the Women of Athens, who were Celebrating the Feaſt of Diana at Brauron, carried off a great number of 'em, and afterwards made uſe of 'em as Concubines. They got a great many Children by 'em, whom they brought up in the Language and Manners of Athens. Theſe Children wax'd Proud, and ſcorn'd to keep Company with thoſe that were Born of Lemnian Mothers; and if any of 'em happen'd to quarrel with another Child who was a Pelaſgian by Father and Mother, they went in a Body to his Aſſiſtance, and affected a Superiority in every kind of Reſpect. The Pelaſgians obſerving this, concluded that a parcel of Baſtards who knew from the very Cradle how to form Leagues againſt the Legitimate Children, and pretended to matter 'em, might prove very dangerous one Day. They therefore ſlew 'em all; and ſome time after they ſlew their Athenian Concubines too. This Tranſaction was followed by a notable Sterility, which extended equally to their Wives, (k) Herodot. l. 6. c. 137. & ſeq.

(l) Herodotus pronounces it ſo; others ſay Hymetta.

(m) Herodotus obſerves that neither the Athenians, nor any other of the Greeks had Slaves in thoſe Days.

those of Lemnos, on their Athenian Concubines. This Island was mightily plagued with Grashoppers, the true Reason of their taxing each Inhabitant in such a certain Number of 'em, and of their Worshipping the Birds which went forth to destroy 'em. Great regard was had here for (L) Bacchus, and for Diana, but none at all for Venus, who on her part had never shewed any Kindness to this Country: A deadly Affront had been put upon her in this Island of Lemnos; for here it was that Vulcan exposed her linked with the God Mars; and here he gave all the Gods the Pleasure of seeing her surprised in a flagrant Sin. Homer (b) is of another Opinion; He lays the Scene of this Adventure in Heaven above. The Persians made themselves Masters of this Island in the Reign of Darius the Son of Hystaspes, and placed a Governor over it, who treated the People inhumanely. Miltiades subdued it a long time after. Herodotus

(a) See the Scholiast of Statius in Theb. l. 5. v. 50. & Homer. Odyss. l. 8. (b) Herodot. l. 6. c. 26. 27.

Wives, and to their Fields, and to their Flocks. They applied themselves for Relief to the Oracle: Apollo ordered 'em to make all the satisfaction to the Athenians that they should demand. They went to Athens and declar'd their Readiness and good Intention; but when a Country was demanded of 'em resembling a Table which was laid in the Prytaneum, and spread with all manner of good things; They answer'd, we'll comply, when a Ship shall Sail in twenty four hours from your Country to ours, by a North-West. They thought they had provided nothing considerable, the Situation of Athens with respect to Lemnos. Miltiades many years after seiz'd on the Thracian Chersonnesus, from whence he let Sail to Lemnos, and declar'd to the Inhabitants that the condition of their Promise was accomplished, and consequently they were oblig'd to leave the Country. The Hephestians obey'd, but the Pelasgians refused, alledging that the Chersonnesus was not Attica. Miltiades Besieg'd them, and forced them to surrender. This is the Account of Herodotus (a). His Narrative is not altogether like that of Cornelius Nepos, concerning the conquest of the Isle of Lemnos; for the latter tells us (b) that Miltiades before he subdued the Chersonnesus, address'd himself to the Lemnians, Summoning them to retreat Voluntarily elsewhere, and that they made him the Answer above mention'd; that having Conquered the Chersonnesus, he returned to Lemnos, and demanded the Performance of the Agreement, and that the Lemnians not daring to refuse him, yielded up the Island. Cornelius Nepos calls them Carians, and not Pelasgians. It appears from several places of Thucydides, that the Inhabitants of Lemnos, were on the Athenian side, in the Peloponnesian War. They had then (c) the same Dialect and the same Laws as the Athenians.

Note, that Herodotus observes that a Lemnian Action, among the Greeks, imported a crying Iniquity, on account of the Massacre of the Athenian Concubines, &c. and the Barbarousness with which the Lemnian Women dispatch'd their Husbands, without sparing even King Thoas. This is the true Sense of this Historian's Words, and 'tis without Reason that a learned Critick has found fault with them. (d) Verba Herodoti, ubi de Thoante sermo est, omnino mendosa sunt. (e) [illegible] Nemo enim de Thoante hoc tradidit. Igitur duæ voces, aut sunt glossemata sunt, aut corrupta est prior, & legendum [illegible]. Barthius does not explain his thought clearly: For we know not what he means by these Words, Nemo de Thoante hoc tradidit. Does he mean that no Body has related that the Lemnian Women, favour'd or assisted by Thoas, rid themselves of their Husbands! But this is not Herodotus's Sense. Does he mean that all Authors agree that Thoas was not kill'd, and that therefore there is a fault in this Passage of Herodotus, if 'tis pretended that he was included in the number of the Lemnians kill'd by the Women. But in this case he's mistaken; since there are Authors who say that the Women understanding that Hypsipile had not kill'd her Father, Thoas made so diligent search that they found him and kill'd him (f).

Erasmus has committed some Faults in Abridging Herodotus's Narration: he says (g). in the first place, that the Lemnians carry'd off the Athenian Women during the Celebration of Minerva's Feast at Brauron. He should have said Diana instead of Minerva. 2. He adds that the Athenian Concubines would not suffer their Sons to Marry the Legitimate Daughters of the Lemnians; Herodotus does not say so, but supposes these Bastards were kill'd before they were Marriageable. Erasmus's third fault is his affirming that after this Massacre the Lemnians were afflicted with Barrenness, Pestilence and many other Evils. Herodotus mentions only the Barrenness (h) of the Earth, and of the Women. 4. Erasmus most falsely imputes to him the saying that these Evils were partly the cause of the Proverb Lemnia Mala. 5. And that the other cause of its Origine, was, that the Lemnian Women not able to bear the Stench of their Husbands, kill'd them all by the assistance of Thoas. 'Tis true Herodotus touches by the by as one of the Reasons of the Proverb, the Slaughter these Women made; but he does not say that their Husbands stunk, and he affirms that Thoas was no more spar'd than the rest. Benedict in his Paraphrase of Pindar, is grossly mistaken, for instead of saying that the Lemnians were disgusted at the ill smells of their Wives, he (i) affirms the Women were incommoded with the stink of their Husbands. This fault has not been Corrected in the Oxford Edition of Pindar 1698. The Scholiast from whom Benedict had taken a Passage not long before (k) might have preserved him from falling into Erasmus's Sense, Mr. Moreri falls into it at full length, tho he has not Copied all the Faults of this Learned Man. He has only catch'd at a very few Faults which he met with in his Additions The Pelasgi, says he, (l) drove away the Women of Athens, and got Children by 'em, whom they afterwards kill'd, observing that they had Inclinations contrary to theirs. And the Women kill'd their Husbands by the assistance of Thoas. Every one sees that this is aligning the Reason, in too indefinite and unlikely a manner, which induced the Lemnians to kill their Bastards. And plainly telling us that the Action of these Women succeeded the Massacre of these Bastards: A Circumstance a Falsity as the pretended assistance of Thoas.

(K) And Worshipping the Birds that went forth.] Here's a very curious Passage. (m) In Cyrenaica regione lex etiam est ter anno debellandi eas, primo ova observendo, deinde fœtum, postremo adultas: desertoris pœna in eum, qui cessaverit. Et in Lemno insula certe mensura præfinita est, quam singuli enecatarum ad magistratus referant. (n) Gracculos quoque ob id colunt, adverso volatu occurrentes earum exitio. Let us also hear Plutarch, tho' he differs from Pliny as to the kind of Bird which the Lemnians ador'd. The Ægyptians says he, (o) Worship'd the Ox, the Sheep, and the Ichneumon, on account of the service and benefit they receiv'd by them, as the Inhabitants of Lemnos honour'd the Larks, because they found out the Grass-hoppers Eggs and broke them.

(L) Great regard was had here for Bacchus and Diana, but none at all for Venus.] Thoas King of Lemnos was the Son of Bacchus and Ariadne (p); no wonder then that the Worship of Bacchus should be well Establish'd in this Island. 'Twas in a Temple of this God that Hypsipile (q) conceal'd her Father in the Night of the Massacre. Strabo informs us that the Mysteries of Samothrace, and Lemnos, had a near conformity enough with the Ceremonies the Bacchantes observed (r). Besides this Island was so fruitful in Wine, that this alone might make it considered as a Country Consecrated to the same God. Quintus Calaber (s) calls it [illegible] vitibus abundantem. Our Travellers, say it still deserves

(a) Herod. ubi supra. (b) Cornel. Nep. in vit. Miltiad. (c) Thucyd. l. 8. p. 548. (d) Barth. ad Stat. Theb. l. 5. v. 50. p. 1013. (e) See Valesius's Greek in the Edition of Herodotus. Hujus loci emendationis est mentio apud Suidam in voce [illegible]. Ex hoc factum, & ita interpretandum, quæ vitiose ab aliis dicta sunt. Thoante sacrificatum, ubi receptum est per Græciam ut tetenderint quique facinora Lemnia appellentur. (f) See Mezeriac upon Ovid's Epistles, p. 501. See also pag. 558. (g) Erasm. adag. chil. 1. centur. 9. n. 27 p. m. 302. MISTAKES of Erasmus, &c.

(h) [illegible] Pariter fame & liberorum orbitate vexati. Herod. ubi supra, cap. 139. (i) Quin etiam in Lemnum venerunt (Argonautæ) - - - & cum Lemniadibus mulieribus concubuerunt omnesque ejus insulæ gravedinis offensæ, occiderant, rem habuerunt Paraphr. Pindari Od. 4. Pyth. p. 330. (l) Moreri under the Word Lemnos. (m) Plinius, lib. 11. cap. 29. p. m. 526. (n) Father Hardouin makes a good Remark here, Corniculârum, says he, egenere avis est graculus veterum Latinorum: nos Chouchas vocamus, ut recte Belonius admonet, lib. 6. cap. 3. & 7. (o) Plut. de Iside & Osiride. (p) Ovidius, epist. Hypsipyl. Apollon. lib. 1. Argon. & multi alii apud Mezeriac ubi supra, pag. 532. (q) Val. Flaccus, lib. 2. v. 254. (r) Strabo lib. 10. pag. 321. (s) Quint. Calab. lib. 9. v. 337.

Herodotus tells a Story on this Occaſion, which is not eaſily reconciled (M) with that of Plutarch. Ubbo Emmius [a] aſſures us, that the Amazons reigned here long before the Deſcendants of the Argonautes inhabited the Iſland. I ſhould be glad to know in what good Author he has met with this. I find in Vitruvius [b], that the Romans beſtowed the Revenues of it on the Athenians. If what Strabo wrote upon it, had been preſerved to us, I don't doubt but we ſhould have found in him ſome Particulars of great Curioſity; but that part of this excellent Geographer's Book, is loſt to us, and yet Mr. Moreri [c] cites him as an Author, who ſpeaks of it in a very particular manner. Lemnos is at this Day called Stalimene. The Turks beſieged it in the Year 1475, and were obliged to raiſe the Siege. 'Twas on this Occaſion, that a Maid, called Maruſſa [d], manifeſted an extraordinary Courage. Mr. Moreri makes mention of it, but he falſely ſuppoſes, that ſhe lived in the XIVth. Century. He adds, [e] that Mahomet II. wreſted this Iſland out of the Hands of the Venetians. That's not exact, ſince he obtained it by a Treaty of Peace, [f] in the Year 1478. The Venetians re-conquered it in the Year 1656. The Turk recovered it the Year following, after a tedious Siege. I had like to have forgot the Flower called Lychnis. See the Margin [g].

[a] Ubbo Emmius, l. 7. de Veteri Græcia, p. 147. Note, that if he goes upon what Strabo, l. 11. p. 348. relates, that the Amazons had built the City of Myrina, his Foundation is naught; for there were ſeveral Cities called Myrina. [b] Vitruv. lib. 7. c. 7. [c] Under the Word Lemnos. See Vincenzo Coronelli Biblioteca Veneta Tom. 1. p. 724. [d] Under the Word Stalimene. [e] Under the word Lemnos. [f] Pimoli ibid. p. 738. [g] The Flower Lychnis grew no where in ſo much perfection as in the Iſle of Lemnos. It ſprung from the Water in which Venus had Bath'd her ſelf after having lain with Vulcan. See Athenæus, l. 15. p. 681. 2.

LEN-

(a) See Pelon ubi ſupra l. 1. c. 25.

(b) Plutarch. de virtutib. mulier. p. 247.

(c) Lib. 1. p. m. 55.

(d) Cap. 5.

(e) In libr. 1. v. 209.

(f) Barth. in Statium Tom. 3. p. 166. 167.

ſerves this Epithet (a). As for the Worſhip of Diana I ſhall content my ſelf with pointing out the place where Plutarch tells us that the Lemnians (b) being driven out of their Iſland, carried about with them the Image of Diana, which they had taken from Brauron. I ſhall obſerve alſo that they Stampt the Figure of this Goddeſs upon their ſealed Earth. See Saumaiſe in his exercitationes Plinianæ in Solinum, p. 1156. All the Authors who ſpeak of the Rage of the Lemnian Women againſt their Husbands, obſerve that the Smell which rendered 'em ſo inſufferable, was an effect of Venus's Anger, who ſaw herſelf neglected and deſpiſed in this Iſland. See (c) Apollodorus, (d) Hyginus, (e) Apollonius's Scholiaſt, &c. We have ſtill an Error to cenſure in Barthius. He believes that in after times the Lemnians Conſecrated an Image of Venus, which was one of the moſt exquiſite Shrines of Antiquity. Venerem etiam Lemniam, ſays he (f), inter pulcherrima ſimulacra cultam poſtea diſcimus ex Luciani Imaginibus. Item Lemniam Minervam, à Lemniis dedicatam, quod omnium fuerit Phidiæ operum elaboratiſſimum, Pauſania Atticis. He has reaſon to ſay, that the Minerva which was Phidias's Maſter-piece, was Dedicated by the Lemnians. Pauſanias ſays that for that reaſon ſhe had the Surname Lemnian. See the 28*th.* Chap. of his firſt Book; but Barthius is wrong, in diſtinguiſhing it from the Image which Lucian mentions, and pretending that Lucian has ſpoken of a Lemnian Venus. He has indeed mentioned a Minerva ſo Named. This can't be Diſputed if we obſerve the Remark he has made (g) that this was the moſt excellent Piece of Phidias, and that which he freely ſet his Name to.

(g) Lucian. in imagin. p. 5. Tom. 2.

(M) Herodotus tells a Story on this Occaſion, which is not eaſily reconciled with Plutarch.] This laſt Author relates, how the Tyrrhenians, having ſeized the Iſles of Lemnos and Imbros, forced away the Athenian Women from Brauron, and had Children by 'em. This Race was expell'd theſe Iſlands by the Athenians, who look'd on 'em as next to Barbarous. They ſet Sail towards Peloponneſus, and Landing at Tenarus, did good Services to the Lacedæmonians in the War with the Heilotes, and obtained in Recompence the Privileges of Citizens, and the liberty of Marrying into the other Families of Lacedæmon, but not of attaining to publick Offices or Councils. This Excluſion made theſe People ſuſpected of a deſign to Embroil the State; their Perſons were ſecured, and they were kept in cloſe Confinement, till the Proofs were prepared for Convicting 'em of the Conſpiracy. Their Wives obtaining leave to Viſit 'em, chang'd Habits with the Men, by which means they got away, and left them in their ſtead. Having ſeiz'd Mount Taigetus they joined with the Heilotes, and became ſo Formidable to Lacedæmon, that it was thought proper to Capitulate with them. Their Wives were reſtor'd; and they had Money and Ships given 'em, and a promiſe of owning 'em as Relations, and as a Colony of Sparta, wherever they ſhould ſettle themſelves. They accepted the Conditions, and ſome went and ſettled at Malar, others at Crete. The latter after ſeveral Battles, made themſelves Maſters of Lyctus, and ſome other Towns, and hence the Inhabitants of Lyctus pretended that by the Mothers ſide they were related to the Athenians, and look'd on themſelves as a Colony of Lacedæmon (b). This is Plutarch's Account. Thoſe whom he calls Tyrrhenians, and a little after Pelaſgians, are the very ſame whom Herodotus calls Pelaſgians. Theſe Two Names belong (i) to the ſame People, and it muſt not be imagined, that the Authors who have ſaid (k) that the Iſle of Lemnos was inhabited by the Tyrrhenians, differ from thoſe who ſay it was poſſeſs'd by the Pelaſgians; ſo far then there is no difference between Herodotus and Plutarch: But when the latter affirms, that the Poſterity of the Athenian Women carried off at Brauron by the Tyrrhenians, who had ſettled in the Iſles of Lemnos and Imbros, were expell'd thoſe Iſles by the Athenians, he contradicts Herodotus, who pretends that the Lemnians themſelves deſtroy'd all the Children begot by 'em upon theſe Athenian Women. Theſe two Hiſtorians differ widely in point of Time. The one will (l) have Miltiades expell the Lemnians, the other makes that Expulſion much more ancient, at leaſt confounds what he ought to diſtinguiſh. The Hiſtory of theſe Women, who procured the Liberty of their Husbands, relates to a Time, in Herodotus, much earlier than Miltiades, and has not one of the Characters which Plutarch attributes to it.

(b) Taken from Plutarch de virtut. mulierum p. 247.

Let's now ſee Herodotus's Account (†). The Inhabitants of Lemnos, deſcended from the Argonautes, were expelled this Iſland by the Pelaſgians, who forced away the Athenian Women from Brauron. They retired to the Country of the Lacedæmonians, and gave out, that they were the Poſterity of the Argonautes, and that being driven out of their Country, they returned to their Anceſtors, and begged leave to live amongſt them. The Lacedæmonians remembring that Caſtor and Pollux had been in Jaſon's Expedition, gave theſe Fugitives a kind Reception, allowed 'em Lands, and incorporated them into their Tribes. Theſe Refugees contracted new Marriages, having firſt parted with the Wives they had brought from the Iſle of Lemnos, to ſome of their Neighbours. It was not long before they grew Proud, would needs domineer, and became guilty of very ill Actions. They were impriſon'd, and their Death reſolved on, but the Wives ſaved 'em by changing Habits, as I mentioned before. The Deſign was ſtill continued, of putting 'em to Death, but Theras, who was preparing to found a Colony, interceded for 'em, and promiſed to take 'em away with him, and prevent any farther Danger. His Requeſt was granted. Moſt of 'em diſperſed themſelves, the reſt followed Theras, who founded a Colony in the Iſland (m) which bears his Name. Note, that he had been (n) Tutor to Euriſthenes and Procles, the Sons of Ariſtodemus, one of the Leaders of the Heraclidæ, who returned into Peloponneſus; and from thence conclude, that he flouriſhed Six Hundred Years, or thereabouts, before Miltiades. Note (o) alſo, that Pindar's Scholiaſt relates the thing almoſt juſt as Herodotus does, and that both obſerve, that Battus deſcended from and that both obſerve, that Battus deſcended from one of the Lemnians of Theras's Colony, founded the City of Cyrene.

(i) See Cluverius in Italia antiqua, l. 2. c. 1. & Strabon, l. 5. p. 253.

(k) Schol. Apollonii in libr. 1. v. 608.

(l) That's to ſay, Herodotus.

(†) Herodot. l. 4. c. 145. & ſeq.

(m) The Iſland of Thera.

(n) Herodot. ibid. c. 147.

(o) Scholiaſtes Pindari in Od. 4. Pyth. v. 88. p. 218. Edit. Oxon. 1698. he'll have it that the Priſoners were delivered by their Mothers.

He

LENTULUS (Scipio) was a Neapolitan, who forſook the Romiſh Church and embraced the Reformed Religion in the XVIth. Century. He was [a] Miniſter of Chiavenne, in the Country of the Griſons, and he employ'd his Pen (A) in the Defence of an Edict which the Griſon Leagues publiſhed in 1570, againſt the Sectaries. They failed not to encounter this Edict, with the Arguments for Toleration, which the Reformed themſelves alledged againſt the Roman Catholicks, in the Countries under Perſecution: But our Lentulus anſwered theſe Reaſons. He is the Author [b] of an Italian Grammar, printed at Geneva in 1568.

[a] Epitome Bibliroth. Geſneri.

[b] Ibid.

LEO I. ſirnamed the Great, took Poſſeſſion of the Papacy, the 10th. of May, 440. He was a Man of great Abilities and Courage, a great Maſter of Eloquence, and well skilled in Affairs. Nor did he want Opportunities of diſcovering his great Talents: he found Exerciſe enough for 'em, from the Hereſies he had to engage, and the Ravages committed in the Roman Empire. His Zeal againſt the Manicheans, the Priſcillianiſts, Pelagians, Neſtorians, and Eutychians, was vigorouſly ſeconded by the Penal Laws of the Emperors, executed with great Severity. He did not diſapprove the coming, even to the Effuſion of (A) Blood. His [illegible] to (B) Attila, produc'd

He that ſays this is foreign to my Subject, will be to blame, and that for two Reaſons, 1ſt. Becauſe Criticiſm requires, that I ſhould ſhew the Differences between Herodotus and Plutarch; and next, I I am obliged as an Hiſtorian, to collect the Adventures of the Inhabitants of the Iſle of Lemnos.

(A) He imploy'd his Pen in Defence of an Edict.] The Epitome of Geſner's Bibliotheque mentions this Work of Lentulus, as a Piece that was never printed. Ejuſdem liber de jure Magiſtratuum in puniendis hæreticis, quo Sylvii cujuſdam epiſtolam hæreticis patrocinantem refutat nondum editus. This you find in the 744th. Page of the Epitome, Zurich Edition, 1583. At laſt the Book was printed at Geneva, by John le Preux, in 1592. in 8vo. This is the Title: Reſponſio orthodoxa pro edicto Illuſtriſſimorum D D. trium fœderum Rhetiæ, adverſus hæreticos, & alios Eccleſiarum Rheticarum perturbatores promulgato; in qua de Magiſtratûs authoritate officio in coercendis hæreticis, ex verbo Dei diſputatur. I know ſome Perſons, who having read in the Catalogue of the Oxford Library, that Lentulus's Apology for the Edict of the Griſon Leagues, was printed in 1502, over-ſtrained their Imagination, to find what Sect this could be, which gave Birth to that Edict among the Griſons, in the Beginning of the XVIth. Century. They ſifted many Books, and conſulted thoſe who had Libraries, and who exhauſted themſelves in Conjectures. At laſt, the true Date of the Edition was diſcovered, and a new Inſtance given of the Confuſions into which the Faults of the Preſs caſt Authors, on Thouſands of Occaſions. Mr. Voetius (a) obſerves, that the Sectaries proſcribed by the Edict of the Griſon Leagues, were Arians, or ſomething worſe; and that Lentulus gave the Particulars of their Blaſphemies in his Preface. He obſerves alſo (b) that Lentulus's Orthodox Anſwer, pro edicto, &c. confuted the Complaints publiſhed by an Anonymus Author in 1570, againſt the Edict of the Griſons, and that it came out in 1578. This is very different from what is found in Geſner's Epitome.

(A) The coming even to the Effuſion of Blood.] You'll quickly have the proof of this in a Paſſage of Mr. Maimbourg. It relates to the capital Puniſhment inflicted on Priſcillian, and many of his Followers, and the Exile to which many others were Condemn'd, which Sulpitius Severus highly diſapprov'd, as a thing of moſt pernicious Example. ' (c) Becauſe he believed nothing like it had been ' ſeen before. As to the point of Puniſhment, no ' one will pretend but he is in the wrong. For all ' the World knows that Conſtantine Baniſh'd the ' Biſhops who refus'd to Subſcribe the Condemnation of Arius; that he Puniſh'd alſo with Exile, ' as did the other Emperors after him. As to the ' Penalty of Death, 'tis true it had not hitherto ' been inflicted on Hereticks; not but this ſeverity ' may be moſt juſtly exercis'd againſt 'em, as in ' after times it frequently has. And not to ſpeak ' of thoſe who have proved in their Writings, that ' it was not only Lawful but very Expedient to ' treat Heretics after this manner, we need only ſee ' what St. L[illegible] written upon it, when giving ' the neceſſ[illegible]ers (as we ſhall cite him and ' ly) to act [illegible]ain againſt the Hereſ[illegible]cillian, he pra[illegible]s Maximus for an A[illegible] this ' kind. (d) That the rigour and ſeverity of his Juſtice againſt that Hereſiarch and his Diſciples, whom this Prince put to Death, was a great Relief to the Clemency of the Church. For tho' the Church contents it ſelf with that Lenity of Judgment which the Biſhops exerciſe according to the Canons, againſt obſtinate Hereticks, and admits of no bloody Executions, it is however much Aided and Supported by ſevere Conſtitutions of the Emperours, ſince the fear of ſo rigorous a Puniſhment ſometimes makes Hereticks have Recourſe to the Spiritual Remedy, to cure the Mortal Diſeaſe of their Hereſie, by a ſincere Converſion.

(B) His Deputation to Attila, produced an admirable Effect.] As this is one of the fi[illegible] Pieces in the Life of this Pope, it deſerves to [illegible]e a little inlarged on in this Place. Attila ha[illegible] himſelf Maſter of Aquileia, and almoſt reduced it to Aſhes: He had ravaged all upon his march from Aquileia on to Pavia and Milan. He had made himſelf Maſter of theſe two great Cities, and had treated them as he had the reſt, laying them both in Rubbiſh——(e) So many diſmal Meſſages arriving upon the back of one another at Rome, cauſed a great Conſternation there. ' The Senate was aſſembled to deliberate, whether the Emperor ſhould ' quit Italy, as Aetius adviſed him: They could not ' reſolve what Courſe to take. (f) To defend Rome ' in the Condition it was, againſt that innumerable ' Multitude of Barbarians, ſeemed utterly impoſſible; to forſake it, and fly, and ſeek a Sanctuary ſomewhere elſe, was the laſt Diſgrace to an Emperor, who ought rather to die honourably, than ' live after ſo ſhameful a Piece of Cowardice. What ' then muſt be done? A Medi[illegible] was found betwixt ' theſe two Extreams, which [illegible] to ſend an honorable Ambaſſy to Attila [illegible]tain Peace of him, ' upon any tolerable Con[illegible]. This being reſolved on, it was thought [illegible] no one could better ' acquit himſelf of that Imploy, than the Holy ' Pope Leo, to whom the Strength of his Parts, his conſummate Prudence, his Addreſs, Vertue, Learning and Eloquence, joyn'd with the Dignity of Sovereign Pontiff, which rendered him venerable ' to all the World, had obtained the Reputation, [illegible] ' being univerſally acknowledg'd the greateſt M[illegible] ' of his Time. The Emperor therefore conjure[illegible] ' him to accept this Imploy, which he moſt willingly did to ſave the Capital City of the Empire, and ' the Holy See from the Invaſion of the Barbarians. ' To honour the Embaſſy, and the Pope, at the Head ' of it, he had for his Aſſiſtants two of the greateſt ' Men of the Empire, Avienus and Trigetius, one ' of which had been Conſul, the other Prefect of ' Rome. Some Senators were added to them, among ' whom was the Father of Caſſiodorus, who, carried ' away by a filial Affection in one (z) of his Epiſtles where he ſpeaks like an Orator, making ' the Encomium of his Father, Aſcri[illegible]him all ' the Honour, and Effect of this impo[illegible]mbaſſy. ' But in his Chronicle, where he ſpeaks like an Hiſtorian, he unſays it again, and gives the whole ' Glory to St. Leo, as all other Authors before him do. ' Attila gave (g) a favourable Reception to this ' Embaſſy, in the Neighbourhood of (h) Mantua, ' not [illegible]rom the place where the River Mincio diſcharges it ſelf into the Po; And as Savage as this Pr[illegible] was (i) he paid all kind of Honours to the Pope. He favourably heard his Speech, which he ' ordered

(a) Gisbert. Voetius, Tolit. Eccleſ. tom. 2. pag. 539.
(b) Ibid. pag. 386.
(c) Maimbourg's Hiſtory of the Pontificate of St. Leo, lib. 1. pag. 55, 56, Hol. Edition.
(1) Profuit diu iſte diſtrictio Eccleſiaſticæ lenitari, quæ etſi ſacerdotali contenta judicio cruentas refugit ultiones: ſeveris tamen Chriſtianorum Principum conſtitutionibus adjuvatur, dum ad ſpiritale nonnunquam recurrent remedium, qui timent corporale ſupplicium. S. Leo epiſt. 95. ad Turib.

(d) Maimbourg, ib. liv. 3. pag. 219. ann. 452.
(e) [illegible] pag. 221.

(z) Tota legatione dignanter accepta, ita ſummi Sacerdotis præſentia Rex gaviſus eſt, ut bello abſtineri præciperet. Proſper in Chron. à Duchenio vulgato, apud Maimb. ib. pag. 223.
(b) Maimbourg, ib.
(i) Ibid. pag. 224.

duced an admirable Effect: But the Miracle which is (C) added to it, is no better than a Fable. His Eloquence had not the same success with (D) King Ginseric, nor yet was it wholly fruitless. They who say (E) he cut off his own Hand, on having 'ordered to be Interpreted, and found it so fine and 'judicious, so forcible and moving; that this Attila, this Scourge of God, this Enemy of Mankind 'whose sight alone struck a Terror into the most undaunted, [illegible] very Name made all the Earth 'to Tremble [illegible] immediately softened; of a Ravening 'Wolf, as [illegible] before he became gentle as a 'Lamb, granted him out of Hand the Peace 'he desired: And that without exacting any grievous Conditions, promising inviolably to observe it 'on his part; after which [illegible] his Course, he 'March'd back beyond [illegible] from whence 'he returned no more.

(C) The Miracle which is added to it, is no better than a Fable.] If I alledged the Authority of a Protestant Writer, I should startle the tender Minds of the Romish Communion; wherefore I choose to cite a Man who lived a long time among the Jesuits, and is inclined to nothing less than favouring the Anti-Catholicks. His Words are these. (a) 'I know 'what is commonly said to make the thing more 'wonderful, that Attila's Captains asking him the 'reason of his having [illegible]ur'd this Pope so far as 'to obey him in all [illegible] Commands, this Prince 'Answered 'em Trem[illegible], that all the time Leo 'was speaking, he saw a venerable old Man stand 'by his side, who holding a naked Sword in his 'Hand, threatned to kill him, unless he granted 'all that the Pope desired. But I am oblig'd to say 'that one [illegible] dispense with the believing any 'thing [illegible] without being thought incredulous; 'for this Vision is not to be found in the Breviary 'of Pius, since our Learned Archbishop Mon-'seigneur Francis de Harlay has restor'd it to its 'genuine State; having taken great care to re-'trench all that was Apocrypha, or very Suspi-'cious in it; and to insert for the Lessons, the fi-'nest Pieces of the Fathers, such as are best suited to the Subject which offers, and to the Feast 'which is Celebrated. I shall boldly say then, that 'we may without scruple be of their Opinion who 'don't give credit to this Apparition: For Antient 'Authors as Jornandes, Theophanes, Suidas, Count 'Marcellinus, Cassiodorus, Anastasius, and others 'who have written of this Embassy of St. Leo; not 'to mention St. Prosper who was then at Rome, and 'has related all the Circumstances of it, and St. 'Leo himself who mentions it in one of his (3) 'Sermons, say nothing of this Vision, which they 'would not have suppress'd if it had been true. 'Very far from it, [illegible]stead of attributing this 'Condescention of [illegible] to the fear he had of this 'Apparition, and [illegible] Menacing Sword, they 'Unanimously agree that it was an effect of the 'Majestick Presence, and Persuasive Eloquence of 'St. Leo, which softned and subdued the Heart of 'this Barbarian; and the Holy Pope, who was 'far from glorying in it, declares it ought to be 'Ascrib'd, not to the Influence of the Stars, as 'some of the Profane would have it, but to the 'infinite Mercy of God alone (1) who suffered 'himself to be intreated by the Intercession of his 'Saints, and thereupon vouchsafed to soften and 'change the Hearts of the Barbarians. Here's no-'thing in all this that intimates this Vision. That 'which has made it current of late, is its being 'found in the History called Miscella, which is 'falsely Ascrib'd to Paul the Deacon. But beside 'that the Ancient Editions of this Compiler have 'it not, which shews it was added at Pleasure, 'without Proof, or Authority; beside that this 'History [illegible]tains many other palpable Falsities, the 'A[illegible] is mentioned in it only upon an un-'co[illegible]port, in these terms (d) Ferunt post dis-'cessum Pontificis interrogatum esse Attilam à suis, 'etc. 'Tis said that after the departure of the 'Pope, Attila being ask'd by his Attendants, &c. I 'have reason therefore to say that we are at liberty 'to reject this Vision, and that we ought not to 'seek a further Miracle in it, than what [illegible] Leo 'himself perform'd, in softning and ch[illegible] by 'his Eloquence the Heart of the most [illegible] all 'Mankind, and the most formidable, to [illegible] a de-'gree, that he obtained from him on the spot, an 'uncondition'd Peace, and a Promise to depart 'out of Italy. What's most remarkable herein, 'is, that this great Man who turn'd the 'Hearts of these barbarous Infidels, with so 'much ease, should be unable to do as much by 'his Letters with respect to Heretick's. These last Words afford the Historian a happy Transition.

(a) Id. ib.

(3) Serm. in Oct. Apost.

(1) Quo-[illegible] ei[illegible] vinæ [illegible] furas flexa sententia est. Non sicut opinantur impii stellarum affectibus, sed ineffabili Dei omnipotentis misericordiæ deputantes, qui corda furentium Barbarorum mitigare dignatus est. Miscell. l. 15.

(D) Had not the same success with King Ginseric, nor yet was it.] The Empress Eudoxia, Valentinian's Widow, had been obliged to marry Maximus, who Usurp'd the Throne after having got Valentinian Assassinated. This Maximus had the impudence to tell Eudoxia, that the Passion he had to enjoy her, was the only Motive which induc'd him to destroy the Emperor. Eudoxia furiously (b) inraged at so Villanous a Declaration —— sent secretly one of her chief Confidents to Carthage, to Ginseric King of the Vandals, who had made himself Master of Africa, Conjuring him by all the powerfullest Motives she could suggest, especially by the easiness of the Enterprize, all being defenseless at Rome as in full Peace, to come with all Expedition, and Revenge the Death of Valentinian his Ally, and deliver her from her Oppression under the Tyranny of the most Cruel, and Villanous Man alive. This Barbarian King, who had then in the Port of Carthage a good Naval Force, failed not to lay hold of the Opportunity; he imbark'd his Forces, and Landed in Italy without the least opposition; he advanc'd towards Rome and had the Pleasure without (c) ever dra[illegible] his Sword, to see the City surrender at dis[illegible], all the Gates being thrown open to him. [illegible] it was that St. Leo seeing his poor Flock [illegible]pos'd to the fury of these Wild Beasts, like the good Shepherd who lays down his Life for his Sheep, went forth and Address'd himself to this Vandal and Arian King, whom he knew to be the mortal Enemy of the Catholicks, and especially of the Bishops, on whom he had discharg'd all his Fury in Africa, treating 'em with a barbarous Cruelty, in a much more inhumane manner than any others. Nevertheless this cruel Man who was just ready to enter Rome, resolv'd to destroy all with Fire and Sword, stop'd short, at the sight of this Venerable Pontif; and as if that August and Saint-like Majesty which shone in his Face, had chang'd all at once, the Tyger's Heart within him, into that of a reasonable Man, he paid him all the honour that was owing to the Head of the Church. He patiently heard all he had to say; and if his Eloquence did not then work the same Miracle that it wrought before upon Attila, in causing him to return from whence he came, yet it perform'd three others of a very remarkable Nature. For it was so persuasive as to obtain a promise, that neither the Inhabitants should be put to the Sword, nor their Houses Fired, nor the three principal Churches Profaned, to Wit the Constantian, that of St. Peter in the Vatican, and that of St. Paul without the Walls. He kept his Word: And having given Rome to be Plunder'd by his Soldiers for fourteen Days together, he returned in his Ships laden with Spoils, and with noble Prisoners, to be let to Ransom; among whom was the Empress Eudoxia, and the Princesses Eudocia and Placidia her two Daughters, whom he Treated perfectly like a Gallant Man.

(b) Idem Maimb. ib. l. 4. p. 246. ad ann. 455.

(c) Id. ib. p. 247.

(d) Fuerunt qui scriberent enim piæ mulieris specie prælantis, oculo manui Pontificiæ religiosè admoto perculsum, mulierem neque participe, neque conscia, cœui aliquid contraxisse. Theoph. Raynaud. Hoplotheca. Sect. 2. serie 3. c. 10. p. m. 361. Cum ipso die Paschatis, pro more recepto, mulierculam ad figendum manu suæ osculum admisisset, humanum quippiam passus, manus illius abstersione se multavit: secutus illam Christi vocem: Si manus tua scandalizat te, abscinde eam. Id. ibid. serie 3. c. 20. p. 409.

(E) That he cut off his own Hand.] 'Tis said that a Devout and Handsome Woman was according to custom admitted on Easter Day to Kiss this Pope's Hand: He perceiv'd I know not what Emotions which favour'd too much of Flesh and Blood, (d) and thought himself obliged to obey the Precept of Jesus Christ in the Rigor of the Letter. If thy Hand offend thee cut it off. But being by this Mutilation rendred incapable of saying Mass any more, there arose a Murmuring among the People, which made him earnestly be[illegible] the Restitution of his Hand: 'twas gr[illegible] him; and from that time, say they, the Custom of Kissing the Pope's Foot was chang'd into that of Kissing his Hand. Others say, that St. Leo cut off his Hand having felt ſome irregular Motions whilſt a Woman Kiſs'd it, and add that he was reſtor'd by the Ardency of his Prayers, vent a couple of Fables. The beſt Edition of his Works is that of Father [a] Queſnel. Some of the Books aſcrib'd to him in that Edition, are attributed by (F) other Authors to St. Proſper. A learned Diſpute has been ſtarted upon this Matter. A famous Miniſter (G) has a little Embarraſs'd himſelf by placing the Epocha of Antichriſt in the Pontificate of St. Leo. This Pope Died in 461.

[a] Printed at Paris in the year 1675. See the Journal des Savans of the 17. of February 1676. and Du Pin's Bibliotheque tom. 3. part 2. p. 164. Edit. of Holland.

LEO X. Elected Pope the eleventh of March 1513. was call'd John de Medicis. He had been honour'd with a Cardinal's Hat at fourteen years of Age by Pope Innocent VIII. and a long time after, with the Dignity of Legat by Pope Julius II. He diſcharg'd the Functions of it in the Army which was beaten by the French near Ravenna in the year 1512. Here he was taken Priſoner; and during his Confinement he under the Reproaches of his Conſcience, for having conferr'd Holy Orders on an undeſerving Perſon. Cùm autem ſanctus Leo eam ob cauſam ſacrificare deſiſſet, idque in populo Romano murmur non leve excitaret, impetravit à Deo ardentiſſimis precibus, ut manus abſciſſa ſibi reſtitueretur. Ex eo tamen tempore, abolito uſu manibus Pontificis oſcula figendi, inductus eſt uſus figendi oſculum pedibus. Scribunt hæc de ſancto Leone varii; ac nominatim Sabellicus, l. 5. Andreas Eborenſis, tit. de Caſtitate, ac Majolus, lib. 1. de irregularit. c. 14. n. 4. qui addit, aliquos aſſerere, contigiſſe ut ſanctus Leo manum ſibi abſciderat, actus ſcelo erga ſe odio, ob male impoſitas alicui manus, & præcipitem indigni hominis initiationem (a). The Author from whom I take this Paſſage baniſhes it into the Land of Fables, and obſerves that the cuſtom of Kiſſing the Pope's Hand on Eaſter-Day, has not been interrupted for either Sex: And as to the Scruple about the Ordination raſhly conferr'd, he gives this account of the Origin of it: (b) Quod ad eos attinet qui hanc narrationem referunt ad manus indigno appoſitas, videntur adducti ad hanc fabellam de ſancto Leone confingendam, ex lectione revelationis ex Moſcho deſcripta capite 149 Prati ſpiritualis. Quod ſcilicet ſancto Leone pro peccatis ſuis ferventer precato, apparuerit ei B. Petrus, dicens exoraſſe ſe ei omnium erratorum veniam, ſalva diſtinctione peccatorum, ſi qua fuiſſent ab eo admiſſa ob indignorum ordinationem. At aliud eſt quod hac revelatione continetur, aliud quod habet fabuloſa calumnia quam retulimus.

(a) Id. ib. p. 409.

(b) Ibid.

(c) Paulus de Angelis ubi infra. (d) Paulus de Angelis in deſcript. Baſilicæ S. Mariæ Majoris de urbe apud Daniel. Papebrochium, reſp. ad embl. error. p. 14.

SOME ſay that the Hand which Leo cut off, to extinguiſh a Laſcivious Flame, (c) ut libidinis ignem reſtingueret, was reſtored him by Virtue of an Image of the Holy Virgin, (d) and that this Image was of St. Luke's Pencil. St. Antonine and many others relate this, and yet Baronius can hardly believe it (e).

(e) Papebroch. ib.

(F) Are attributed by other Authors to St. Proſper.] Father Queſnel pretends that the two Books concerning the calling of the Gentiles; the Letter to Demetriades, and the Chapters concerning Grace and Free Will, are not St. Proſper's, as is commonly believed, but St. Leo's. See the Book (f) Intituled, De veris Operibus SS. Patrum Leonis Magni & Proſperi Aquitani, Diſſertationes criticæ, quibus Capitula de Gratia, &c. Epiſtolam ad Demetriadem, nec non duos de Vocatione omnium Gentium libros Leoni nuper adſcriptos abjudicat, & Proſpero reſtituit Joſephus Antelmius, Presbyter & Canonicus Eccleſiæ Forojulienſis. The Abbot Antelmi has vehemently oppoſed this Pretention, and maintained that Proſper is the true Author of the Sermons which go under St. Leo's Name. What's obſervable in this Diſpute, is, that both Parties alledge the conformity of Style; one to prove that theſe Works are St. Leo's, the other, that they are not his but St. Proſper's (g). The pains the Abbot Antelmi has been at on this occaſion is very remarkable: He has made Tables in two Columns, in which he compares ſeveral Paſſages of St. Proſper, taken from the Books which are confeſſedly his, with other Paſſages out of thoſe which are Diſputed, and ſhews a great Conformity betwixt the reſpective places of one and the other. Theſe Parallels with regard to St. Leo's Sermons, ſhew us (h) a way of ſpeaking ſo peculiar, Expreſſions, and Turns ſo ſtudied and ſo neat, that it ſeems impoſſible they ſhould be compoſ'd but by one and the ſame Head. All this hinders not Mr. du Pin's (i) ſaying that the Abbot Anthelmi's Syſtem upon the Sermons that bare the name of St. Leo, ſeems to him Chimerical, and that the Proofs he brings are extreamly weak. Nay farther, he denies that Conformity of Style, alledg'd by Mr. Antelmi, and the conſequence he would draw from it (k). 'If a Body would be at 'the pains of Collecting the Paſſages alledg'd by 'him, he muſt find that there is no Conformity of 'Style betwixt the two Authors, tho' we meet 'with the ſame Words in both. And beſides, tho' 'there ſhould be ſome ſmall reſemblance of Style 'between St. Proſper's Writings and thoſe of St. 'Leo, ſhould not we have more reaſon to ſay that 'St. Proſper had imitated his Maſter, whom he 'often heard Diſcourſe, and Preach, whoſe Sermons 'he had Read, and perhaps Copied to preſerve 'em 'in ſcrinio Romanæ Eccleſiæ, ſuppoſing he was 'Notary of the Church of Rome. Here is a Fact 'which confirms ſome Reflections in the Dialogues (l) on the Chimerical Cabal. See the Article Eraſmus, and that of Julius II.

(f) Printed at Paris in 4to. in 1689.

(g) See the Journal des Savans 1689. p. 290. 294. 301. 321. Edit. de Holl.

(h) Ibid. p. 321.

(i) Du Pin Biblioth. Tom. 3. part. 2. p. 157.

(k) Id. ib. p. 158.

(l) Pag. 150. and the following.

(G) A famous Miniſter has a little Embarraſs'd himſelf.] (m) According to him, Idolatry in the days 'of St. Leo was rank enough to make the Church 'Anti-chriſtian, and Leo himſelf Antichriſt, 'and yet the ſame Miniſter had wrote the fol-'lowing Words in his thirteenth Letter of this 'year. Whilſt Anti-chriſt was little, he did not deſtroy the Eſſence of the Church. Leo——and 'ſome of his Succeſſors were good Men, as far as 'Goodneſs and Piety are conſiſtent with an exceſſive 'Ambition. 'Tis certain alſo that in his time the 'Church was engaged very far in THE IDOLATRY 'of Creature-Worſhip, which is one of the Characters 'of Anti-chriſtianiſm: And tho' theſe Evils were 'not yet extream, nor ſuch as might have DAMN'D 'the Perſon of Leo, who had otherwiſe good Qualli-'ties; yet they were enough to lay the Ground-plot 'of Anti-chriſtianiſm. You ſee then that a Man is not Damn'd tho' he be an Idolater, and not only an Idolater, but even Engaged very deeply in the Idolatry of Creature-Worſhip. If a Man be not of the number of the Saints, and that we muſt raze St. Leo out of this Catalogue, he may at leaſt be of 'the number of good Men; and the Sin of Idol-'latry is not ſo extream as that he ſhall forfeit Sal-'vation by it. Let's urge this matter farther. We have prov'd in the Book of Variations (1) and elſewhere, from the expreſs Words of St. John (2) that the Beaſt and Anti-chriſt have Blaſphem'd and been Idolatrous from their Birth, and during the whole courſe of the 1260 Days of their continuance. The Miniſter would fain have Diſſembled this, that he might not be oblig'd to charge theſe Crimes on the Times and Perſon of St. Leo, St. Simplicius, St. Gelaſius, and other Holy Popes of the fifth Century: But at laſt he is forced to be plain. (3) 'Tis certain, ſays he, that all the Characters 'of the Beaſt commenc'd from that time. The Gen-'tiles or Pagans began in the days of Leo to tram-'ple the Church of God under Foot: For Paganiſm 'which is the Worſhip of Creatures entred into it: 'Then began the Blaſphemy againſt God and his 'Saints; for to take from God his true Worſhip, to 'give it to the Creature, is Blaſphemy againſt 'God. Thus you ſee Anti-chriſtian Blaſphemy and Idolatry Eſtabliſh'd under St. Leo: He himſelf could not be exempt from it ſince he was the very Anti-chriſt; and indeed it is certain, that he honour'd Reliques, and Solicited the Aſſiſtance of the Prayers of the Saints no leſs than others. Here then

(m) Mr. de Meaux, 3. Advice to the Proteſtants upon the Letters of the Miniſter Jurieu againſt the Hiſtory of Variations, p. 86. Edit. Holland.

(1) Var. XIII. n. 21. Apocal. Advice to the Prot. Averiſſ. ans Prot. n. 27. 28. p. 612. 613.

(2) Apoc. XI. XII. 6. 14. XIII. 5. 6.

(3) Lett. XIII. p. 99. 2. c.

he made a ſtrange Experiment of the Force of (A) Superſtition, even over the Minds of common Soldiers. 'Tis thought that nothing contributed more to his Elevation to the Popedom, than the Wounds (B) he had receiv'd in the Wars of Venus. His Expences were Exceſſive on the Day of his (C) Coronation; and he led a Life little ſuitable to a Succeſſor of the Apoſtles, and perfectly (D) Voluptuous. He took too

'then we find not only an Idolater, but the Head 'of the Antichriſtian Idolatry in the number of 'the Elect, and that Idolatry hinders not Salvation. As this is a Diſpute between private Perſons, and not a Controverſie upon the general Doctrines of the two Communions, I may be allow'd to ſay that the perplex'd Author made the beſt choice he could in Humane Prudence; which was to be ſilent: He would not even ſeem to know that his confuſion had been expos'd to the Eyes of the Publick.

(A) The force of Superſtition even over the minds of Soldiers.] The Conquering Soldiers expreſs'd ſo great a Veneration for him, that they humbly beg'd pardon for their Victory, beſeech'd him to give them Abſolution, and promis'd never to bear Arms more againſt the Pope. This I learn from Cardinal Palavicini, after his having obſerved, that in Contempt of the Royal Authority, the Milaneſe look'd upon the Cardinals of the Aſſembly of Piſa with Averſion. (a) In Milano con vilipenſione dell' autorità Reale furon vicevuti non come Cardinali, Grado riveritiſſimo nella Chriſtianità, mà come huomini peſſiferi e ſcelerati, e comete di ſciagura ne' paeſi dove giugneſcero. Anzi, non oſtante che i Franceſi riportaſſono la memorabil vittoria di Ravenna, e conducceſſero priggione à Milano il Cardinal Giovanni de' Medici legato dell' Eſercito pontificio, che poi aſſunto al Pontificato preſe il nome di Leon Decimo; non ſi tennero i ſoldati vincitori dall' andare con incredibil frequenza à venerar come Legato del Vicario di Criſto èl lor prigioniero; ricevendone l' aſſoluzione ch'egli havea podeſtà di dar loro per haver combattuto contro alla Chieſa, con promeſſione d'aſtenerſene per innanzi.

(a) Palavic. Iſtoria del Concilio di Trente l. 1. c. 1. n. 2. p. m. 45. See alſo Paulus Jovius in vita Leonis X. l. 2. p. m. 110.

(B) Wounds he had received in the Wars of Venus.] I have ſo often given the reaſon why I chooſe rather to cite Catholick than Proteſtant Writers upon ſuch occaſions, that without further Preamble, I ſhall here produce the Words of a French Hiſtorian, and a bitter Enemy to the Proteſtants. (b) 'Three Months had not paſt ſince 'the return of Cardinal de Medicis to Florence, 'when the Death of Pope Julius II. oblig'd him to 'leave it and go back to Rome. He was carried in 'a Horſe Litter by reaſon of an Impoſthumation in 'thoſe Parts, which Modeſty won't allow us to 'name, and Travell'd ſo ſlowly, that the Popes 'Obſequies were over, and the Conclave Sitting, 'when he arrived. (c) The Conclave had not bin 'ended ſo ſoon as it was, the young and old Cardinals perſiſting in contrary Opinions with equal 'Obſtinacy, if an odd Accident had not brought 'em to agree. The Cardinal de Medicis being extreamly hurried by the number of Viſits he made 'every Night to the Cardinals of his Faction, his 'Ulcer broke and the Matter which came from it, 'ſent forth ſuch a ſtench, that all the Cells which 'were ſeparated only by ſlight Partitions, were 'perfectly Poyſon'd by it. The old Cardinals, whoſe 'Conſtitutions were leſs capable of bearing the 'Malignancy of a corrupted Air, conſulted the 'Phyſitians of the Conclave, to know what they 'ſhould do; theſe Phyſitians who had ſeen Cardinal de Medicis, and judg'd of his State more by 'the ill Humours which flowed from his Body, 'than by that ſtrength of Nature which drave them 'out, Anſwer'd, being firſt gained by the Promiſes of Bibiana, that Cardinal de Medicis had 'not a Month to live. Their paſſing this Sentence of 'Death upon him was the cauſe of his being choſen 'Pope, the old Cardinals who thought to out-wit 'the young, agreeing to give 'em a ſatisfaction, 'which could not as they preſumed, laſt very long. 'They waited upon 'em and let 'em know, that 'they at laſt yielded to their Obſtinacy, on condition they would remember to do 'em as 'good a turn another time. Thus Cardinal de Medicis was Elected Pope, upon a falſe Information, 'being not full thirty ſix years old; and as Joy is 'one of the moſt Sovereign Remedies, he ſoon recovered ſo perfect a State of Health, that the old 'Cardinals had time enough to Repent 'em of their 'being over Credulous. Not to conceal any thing, I'm obliged to acquaint my Reader, that Paul Jovius does not place this Ulcer in the place where Varillas does; but in the Fundament (d) which does not ſuppoſe a vicious Cauſe: and with the ſame ſincerity I add that this Pope Aſcended the Throne with a great Reputation of Chaſtity, if we believe Guicciardin, (e) and was reckon'd very continent from his Youth, if we credit Paul Jovius. (f) Conſtat tamen eum, quod à primâ adoleſcentia opinione omnium ſummam continentiæ laudem fuiſſet adeptus, non importuna quadam pudicitia, ceſſitatique præſidia quæ ſiviſſe quando nequaquam priſtinæ vitæ more tam multis delicatiſque obſonüs uteretur. Whence we muſt conclude that the Papal Dignity was that which Ruined Leo X's good Morals: He grew Corrupt, when he ſhould have grown better; and Laſtly, I obſerve, that the Senſe in which I Alledge Varillas's Words, and which Mr. Sekendorf gives us, is gathered only from Conſequences, and ſuch as don't neceſſarily follow from 'em.

(b) Varillas, Anecdotes of Florence, l. 6. p. 253.

(c) Id. ib. p. 257.

(C) His Expences were Exceſſive on the Day of his Coronation.] He would be Crown'd upon the ſame Day on which he loſt the Battle of Ravenna, and his Liberty, the year before, and rode the ſame Turkiſh Horſe which he rode on the Day of that Battle; he Ranſom'd him from the French; and as he loved him mightily, he had him very well kept and Pamper'd to an extream old Age. Ejus etiam in pompa illo eodem equo Hiſpanico nactus ... veſtium captus fuerat, quem ab hoſte ... redemptum ita adamavit, ut pollea uſque ad extremam ſenectutem ſumma cum indulgentia alendum curaverit (g). And as his Head was filled with the Magnificences of Ancient Rome, and the Triumphal ... of the Antient Comus, he endeavour'd to revive thoſe fine Shews, and was ſo well ſerv'd in this Deſign, that ſince the Irruption of the Goths, there never was ſeen in Rome any thing more Magnificent than his Coronation. See the Deſcription of it in Paulus Jovius (h). He agrees with Guicciardin, that the (i) Expence of it amounted to a hundred thouſand Ducats. Father Gretſer cenſures Mr. du Pleſſis for laying it coſt a Million, (k) nec minus agit Pleſſæus cum Leone X. quem die coronationis ſuæ decies centum aureolorum millia, hoc eſt ut vulgo loquimur millionem conſumpſiſſe ferebat. This is found in the Latin Edition which Father Gretſer made uſe of. But in the French Edition which I uſe, Mr. du Pleſſis Mornai quotes only the hundred thouſand Ducats of Guicciardin.

(g) Jovius in vita Leonis X. l. 1. p. 190. col. 1. n. 3. & col. 2. litera e.

(h) Jovius ibid. p. 129. 130.

(i) Guicciard. l. 11. fol. m. 320. verſo.

(k) Gretſer. in Exam. Miſter. Pleſſæani p. 361. citing the 6th. p. of the Myſtery.

(D) A life——wholly voluptuous.] Paul Jovius can't be accus'd of being too ſparing of his Incenſe to Leo the Tenth, but on the other Hand, it muſt be owned, he explains himſelf clearly enough upon the Vices of this Pope, not to leave an intelligent Reader in ſuſpence: The Pleaſures, ſays he, into which he too frequently plung'd himſelf, and the lewd Action, objected to him, tarniſhed the Luſtre of his Vertues. He adds, that a Temper more eaſie and complaiſant, than vicious, caſt him into the Precipice, having about him ſuch People, as inſtead of admoniſhing him of his Duty, only talked to him on Subjects of Pleaſure. The Original is more nervous than the Abſtract I give of it, and therefore I ſhall deliver it in Paul Jovius's Words. Has præclaras liberalis excelſique animi virtutes, cum nimia ſæpe vita luxuria, tum objecta libidinum obſcœnitas obruebant: ita tamen, ut jucunditate blandæ facilisque naturæ potius, ac regia quadam licentiam, quam certo depravati animi judicio in ea vitia prolabi videretur, quum frequenti blandientium turba cubiculi fores obſeſſæ paucos admitterent, qui aliquo decoris verecundique hominis ſolutos mores cohiberent, amicorum optimis ad ea conniventibus, ac libenter ſeſe illecebrarum miniſtris immiſcentibus, ne gratiam apud ſummos principes in lubrico poſitam in diſcrimen adducerent, fingratum auribus potentium reprehendentis officium honeſtatis atque benevolentiæ ſpecie ſuſceptiſſent. Verùm hominem hilaritati humanitatique ſem-

(d) Propterea medicatum ... Romanum modo ... ulcuſculum ... de anima contendit. Jovius vita Leonis X. l. 3. p. 120.

too much Pleasure in Hunting. 'Tis said his Sight at this Sport, was surprizingly (E) quick. As he had been bred by Preceptors [redacted], who instructed him thorowly in the Liberal Arts, he loved and protected Men of Parts and Letters. He favoured the Poets in a particular manner, and that without preserving always the Degree (F) of Gravity which his Character required. This appeared on many Occasions, and even in the Priviledges he granted to Arioſto's Poems. In a Word, let us say, that Scholars

Among others, Peter Æginera, a Greek, who explained Aristophanes at Bologna, and had taught him the Greek Tongue. See the Letters of Langius, p. 473.

Jenſibus facile ſervientem minus in modum incitabant plerique Cardinales opibus ataeque floreutes, qui illuſtri loco nati, ac liberaliter educati, regio luxu vitam in venationibus, conviviis, atque ſpectaculis libentiſſimè traducebant (a). A little after he owns, that this Pope was charged with the Crime of Sodomy. (b) Non caruit etiam infamia, quòd parum honeſtè nonnullos è cubicularits (erant enim è tota Italia nobiliſſimi) adamare, & cum his teneriùs aeque liberè jocari videretur. Sed quis, vel optimus atque ſanctiſſimus Princeps in hac maledicentiſſima aula lividorum aculeos vitavit? & quis ex adverſo tam malignè improbus ac invidiæ tabe conſumptus, ut vera demum poſſet objectare, noctium ſecreta ſcrutatus eſt? I omit what is told us (c) of the Luxury of his Table, and the Buffoonries acted at it. I have touched upon this in the Article of Hadrian VI. Leo the Tenth's Succeſſor, and Reformer of his Luxury, as we are going to ſhew. The other Day the Queries of the deceaſed Pope Leo, deputed one of their Number, and ſent him to the Pope to beſpeak him in behalf of the reſt: The Pope inquired how many they were in the Retinue of Leo; he anſwered, An Hundred. Adrian ſigning himſelf with the Sign of the Croſs, as aſtoniſhed at ſuch a Superfluity, ſaid, that Four were enough for him, but that he was content that Twelve ſhould be placed upon the Liſt, ſince ſo many were neceſſary to exceed the Number which the Cardinals kept. In ſhort, it's the common Opinion that this Pope will be a good Husband, and a good Keeper for the Church, which is in Truth very ſtraitned, conſidering the Prodigality of his Predeceſſor. This is what we find in a Letter of Jerome Niger, written from Rome the firſt of September 1522, it's inſerted in Ruſcelli's Collection, tranſlated by Belleforeſt. I have made uſe of the Tranſlation and the Marginal Note, as it ſtands here.

(a) Jovius ubi ſupra, pag. 188.

(b) Id. ib. pag. 192.

(c) Mire quoque favit Pogio ſeni, Pogii hiſtorici filio, itemque Moro nobili à gulæ intemperantia, articularibus doloribus diſtorto, & Brandino equiti, Marianoque ſannioni cucullato facetiſſimis helluonibus, & in omni genere popinalium delitiarum eruditiſſimis. Verum feſtiviſſimis eorum facetiis, falſiſque & perurbanis ſcommatibus magis quam ullis palati lenociniis oblectabatur. Id. ib. pag. 191.

(d) Molles aditus, & quæ molliſſima fandi Tempora. Virgil. Æn. lib. 4. verſ. 423, & 293.

(e) Jovius ubi ſupra, p. 196.

(f) Ibid. pag. 197. verſo.

(E) 'Tis ſaid his Sight at this Sport was ſurprizingly quick.] This we ſhall ſpeak of preſently, after having taken Notice of Leo X's violent Paſſion for Hunting. He was wonderfully pleaſed with it; he underſtood and obſerved the Laws of it much better than thoſe of the Goſpel, and he could not bear any one's diſturbing his Sport; he had no Mercy on thoſe, who through Imprudence, or otherwiſe, occaſioned the Eſcape of the Game. He gave 'em all manner of ill Language. He was ſo much out of Humour when the Chaſe did not ſucceed, that no Body durſt ask him a Favour; but tranſported with Joy, if it ended luckily; and theſe were the favourable Moments for obtaining whatever was deſired of him (d). Paul Jovius tells it very elegantly. (e) Venationibus & aucupiis nobilioribus adeò perditè ſtudebat, ut ſpureiſſimas ſæpe tempeſtates inſalubreſque ventos, & frequentia manſionum ac itinerum incommoda obſtinatè contemneret——(f) In venando autem ſicuti præcepta artis ad normam exactioris diſciplinæ patientiſſimè obſervare erat ſolitus, ita ſeveritatem aſperè admodum vir alioqui leniſſimus ſemper exercuit; in eos præſertim, qui petulanti diſcurſu aut vocibus temerè editis improviſa feris effugia præbuiſſent: ita ut claros ſæpe viros acerbiſſimis contumeliis oneraret. At ſi quando imperitia, vel fortuito errore hominum, aut feris ſubtiliore aliquo inſperata fuga compendio ſervatis, vel iis denſo in nemore contumacius latentibus infeliciter venaretur, incredibile eſt quali vultus animique habitu dolorem iracundiamque præferret. Propterea amici familiares ea temporis momenta provocandæ liberalitati maximè adverſa ſedulo devitabant: quando aliàs ſecundum opinam venationem, ac præſertim vario ac inſigni labore aliquo nobilem, maxima beneficia incredibili benignitate collocaret.

As to his Sight, here is a Paſſage which I take from a Book of the Sieur des Accords (g). Pope Leo having [redacted] theſe Numeral Letters to be pla-

(g) Des Accords, Bigarrures, chap. [redacted] m. 105.

'ced under an Inſcription, to ſignify the Year 'of his Pontificate, they were [redacted] terpreted. M.CCCC. LX. Multi Cardinales [redacted] runt eum Leonem decimum. Now I muſt, by the way, 'that I don't know why he ſhould be called blind, 'ſince by the help of Glaſſes he could ſee Sparhawks, and Vultures, at the higheſt Soar; but in requital, when he read, he clap'd the Paper to 'his Noſe, [redacted] hardly diſtinguiſh 'a Letter; [redacted] informs us, in his Schematibus Celeſtibus. Which puts me in mind of 'a certain honeſt Curate, who can't read the Church 'Books of the faireſt Character, without Spectacles, 'and yet ſhall diſtinguiſh the ſmalleſt Dice, and is never to be put upon. Paul Jovius confirms this but in part; for he ſays, that Leo read the ſmalleſt Print with great Eaſe, when he brought the Paper near his Eye. (b) Subtrahebant magna ex parte oris ſuavitatem, obeſa mala & [redacted]li extantes convolutique & bebetes, verùm ſi [redacted]am inſpicienda propius admoveret, ſupra fidem [redacted]mi: ſupplices enim libellos, vel minutiſſimis [redacted]ris, & crebris ſyllabarum compendiis properanter exaratos celerrimè & diſtinctiſſimè lectitabat: admota autem criſtallo concava, oculorum aciem in venationibus & aucupiis adeò latè extendere erat ſolitus, ut non modò ſpaciantes [redacted] ſinibus, ſed ipſa etiam diſcernendi felicitate cu[redacted] anteiret. I have juſt conſulted Luke Gauric's [redacted] that des Accords cites, and don't find he ſays [redacted] that Leo X. could not ſee when he claps the Paper cloſe to his Noſe. Let us cite Gauric, and admire the Impertinence of his Attributing to the Planets the different Qualities of the Right and Left Eye of this Pope. (i) Sol cum ſtellis nebuloſis, oculi dextri aciem penitus bebetavit cum multis lineis tranſverſis. Luna in ſexta cæli ſtatione ſub Geminorum aſteriſmo ad Martis tetragonam radiationem defluens, oculi quoque ſiniſtri lucem impediebat, adeo quidem quod nec legere, neque aliquid intueri poterit abſque conſpicilio magno chriſtallino, non autem illius aciem prorſus deſideravit, quoniam ſalutaris Stella Jovis, Lunam trigonica radiatione intuebatur, & ita literas lectitabat naſo proximiores & oculo, ſed eum illo vitreo ocello ſuſpiciebat Accipitres, Aquilas, Aſtures, altius volitantes, & longe melius quam alii venatores, ibatque ſæpius ad venationes Leporum, Caprearum ſilveſtrium, & vulpium, illa[redacted]optime conſpiciebat, quæ à canibus leporariis [redacted]ſis capiebantur.

(b) Jovius ubi ſupra, pag. 211.

(i) [redacted] nenſis, Epiſcopus Civitatenſis in tractatu Aſtrologico in quo agitur de [redacted] num accidentibus per proprias eorum [redacted]

(F) He favoured the [redacted] ——without preſerving that Degree of Gravity.] The Pleaſures he allowed himſelf with them, ſometimes ſunk into Buffoonry. Quernus, who had been ſolemnly crowned, and promoted to the Honour of Poet-Laureat (k), was little better than a Farce-Player. He uſed to come to Leo the X's Dinner, and eat at the Window, the Scraps which were returned him from Hand to Hand. They gave him the Poor [redacted] Wine plentifully, but upon Condition, that [redacted] would make extempore Verſes on the Subjects that were given him. He was obliged at leaſt to furniſh a Diſtich; and if he fail'd, or if his Verſes were good for nothing, he was condemned to drink a great deal of Water with his Wine. (l) Fuit dira inter inſtrumenta erudita voluptatis longè gratiſſimus, quum canante Leone porrectis de manu ſemeſis obſoniis, ſtans in feneſtra veſceretur, & de principis lagena perpotando, ſubitaria carmina facitaret; ea demum lege, ut perſcripto argumento bina ſalte[redacted]na ad muſicam, tributi nomine ſolverentur, & [redacted]am ſtevili vel inepto longe dilutiſſimè foret [redacted]endum. Sometimes the Pope too ſet himſelf to make extempore Verſes with his Arch-Poet, which ſet all the Company a Laughing. What want of Gravity was this! (m) Ab hac autem opulentia hilarique ſagina, vehementem incidit in podagram; ſic ut belliſſimè ad riſum moverit, quum de ſe canere juſſus, in hunc hexa[redacted]um erupiſſet;

(k) Jovius in Elog. c. 82

(l) Id. ib. pag. 191.

(m) Ibid.

larsand (FΔ) Buffoons, equally shared his Friendship. He had not the same Relish for (G) Theological Studies. I shall not vouch the Story that has been made, that he once ridiculed the whole Christian Doctorine (H) as a meer Fable. He had the Industry to ruine the Council, which the Emperor and the King of France had set up against Julius II. and he made the Council of Lateran triumph, obtaining of Lewis XII. all the Submissions he could desire. He obtained of Francis I. a much more solid Advantage by the Concordat, concluded between 'em in the Year 1515. This did not make him a jot more favourable to France. He formed Leagues against her, and

(a) See the Article of Julius I. Remark G.

Archip[illegible] facit versus pro mille poëtis,

Et demum haftaret, inexpectatus Princeps hoc pentametro peregrina respondit;

Et pro mille alii[illegible].

Tum verò astantibus obortus est risus: & demum multis maximus, quum Quernus stupens & interritus, hac tertium non inepte carmen induxisset.

Porrige, quod faciat mihi carmina docta Falernum.

Idque Leo repente mutuatus, à Virgilio, subdiderit,

Hoc etiam enervat, [illegible]que pedes.

One Day a Poet pre[illegible] him with some Latin Verses in Rhime; the Pope, to divert himself, gave him no other Recompence than an extempore Flight, containing an equal Number of Verses in the same Rhymes. [illegible] Poet vexed to see that Leo gave him nothing, [illegible] the following Distich.

Si tibi [illegible] numeris numeros fortuna dedisset,
Non esset capiti tanta corona tuo.

Hereupon the Pope extended his usual Bounty (a). By this we may see, that he turned every thing to his Diversion. But here's a matter that clearly discovers the buffooning Spirit, which then reigned in the Pope's Palace. A Man having something to ask of Leo X. and finding himself tortured for several Days, with ungrateful Delays, which made him despair of being introduced, bethought him of this Stratagem. He acquainted Leo's Great Chamberlain, that he had the admirablest Verses to shew the Pope, that ever were made. The Chamberlain, transported with joy, goes immediately to the Pope, and tells him, he had lit on the very top of Fools, and the fittest thing alive——to divert him. 'Twas the way of Leo's Courtier's to find out such as were half-witted, and (b) compleat the Disorder of their Br[illegible], for the Diversion of the Head of the Churc[illegible] but they I now speak of, were the Cullies of [illegible] pretended Poet. For when he was admitted to the Pope's Presence, he let him know the true Reason which induced him to counterfeit a half-witted Poet, and declared his real Business. They who understand Latin, will read this with more Satisfaction, in the Words of Nicius Erythræus. (c) Hoc hominum ridicule insanientium, [illegible]ere non minimum delectabatur Leo X. Pontifex Maximus, cujus Gnathones, quos circa se habebat, dabant operam ut eos, quibus levis mens esset, ad insaniam adigerent, seque eos esse, qui non essent, arbitrarentur. In quo mirabiliter lusus est à quodam, cui petenti aditum convenienti non dabat: qui cum multos dies expectasset, atque omnes ad Pontificem allegationes difficiles, omnes aditus arduos intercluso[illegible]que videret, seducto Pontificii cubiculi præfecto in aurem dixit, se esse poëtam, solum præter cæteros, qui sua vellet carmina Pontifici tradere, quibus lectis obstupesceret, horreret, ad incredibilem admirationem efferretur. Quo ille audito, venit atque avibus ocius advol[illegible] Leonis cubiculum, atque hilaritate lætitiæ [illegible]ens, Invenimus, inquit, perfectæ insaniæ hominem, qui tibi voluptati maxima erit. At ille simulatè intromissus, ex illis se integumentis simulationis evolvit, causam, cur insaniam simulasset, aperuit, negotium, quod volebat, exposuit. Itaque ille deridiculo eos habuit, quibus ludendus tradebatur. Was it maintaining the Decorum of the Papacy to expedite a Bull so favourable to the Poems of Arioste? [illegible] Hippolyte d'Est, to whom the Orlando Fu[illegible] of this Poet was dedicated, judged very w[illegible] it, when he asked the Author, Messer Ludovico dove Diavolo havete pigliato tante coionerie, Where the Devil could you find so many Fooleries? Leo X. was infinitely more debonaire to this Author. '(d) 'Almost at the same time that he thundred his 'Anathema's against Martin Luther, he was not 'ashamed to publish a Bull in favour of the pro'fane Poems of Lewis Arioste, threatning those 'with Excommunication, who found fault with 'em, or hindred the Profit of the Printer. We shall see elsewhere that he was a great Admirer of Plays.

(d) David Blondel's Examinat. of Pope Innocent X's Bull. pag. 3.

(FΔ) Scholars and Buffoons equally shared his Friendship.] The Historian, Peter Matthew (e), having said, that Leo X. loved Buffoons, as much as the learnedst Men in Italy, and changed his Humour from one Extream to another, alledges these Words of Peter Aretin. 'E beato colui chi e pazzo e ne la 'pazzia sua compiace ad altri e a se stesso. Certamente Leone hebbe una natura da' stremo à estremo, e non sarìo opra da ognuno il giudicare chi 'piu gli dilettasse, o la vertue de i dotti, o le ciancie 'de i buffoni, e dicio fa fede il suo hauer dato à l'una e à l'altra specie essaltando tanto questi quanto 'quegli. Peter Matthew, who so often cites the same Aretin, took much more Pains than Mr. Me-[illegible] (f).

(e) Matthieu's History of Henry IV. liv. 7. tom. 2. pag. m. 710.

[illegible] had not the same Relish for Theological Cardinal Salaviem could not deny it; he [illegible]ly confesses, that Leo X. valued those more, who understood the Mythology of the ancient Poets, and profane Learning, than those who understood Divinity, and Ecclesiastical History. His Words, which are more frank, and have less of the Bias than usual, are these. (f) Gli opponeil Soave, ch'egli havesse maggior notizia di lettere profane che sacre ed appertenenti alla religione: nel che io non gli contradico. Havendo Leone ricevuto da Dio un ingegno capacissimo e singolarmente studioso; ed appena uscito dalla fanciullezza veggendosi posto nel supremo Senato della Chiesa; mancò al suo debito con trascurar nella letteratura una parte non solamente al più nobile, mà la più proporzionata al suo Grado. E s'accrebe tal mancamento quando in età di trentasett anni costituito Presidente e Maestro della religione, non solo continuò di donarsi tutto alle curiosità degli studi profani; mà nella Reggia della medesima religione con maggior cura chiamò coloro à cui fosser note le favole della Grecia e le deliziè de' Poeti, che l'Istoine della Chiesa, e la dottrina de' Padri. Non lasciò ei veramente di rimunerar la Scolastica Theologia, onorandola con la Porpora in Tomaso di Vio, in Egidio da Viterbo, e in Adriano Florenzio suo Successore, e coll' ufficio di Maestro del Sacro Palazzo in Silvestro da Prierio; le cui penne illustrarono immortalmente quella sacra disciplina. Mà nè co' Teologi usò di conversare come co' Poeti; ne promosse l'erudizione sacra come la profana; lasciando la Chiesa in quella scarsezza in cui la trovò di persone che dopo l'infelice ignoranza di molti secoli ravvivassero la prima, come si ravvivava già la seconda. It were to be wished that these two Historians always agreed so well.

(f) Palavic. ubi supra, cap. 2. n. 2. pag. 50.

(g) Cardinal Bembo, Secretary (these two Qualities don't well agree, Bembo was not a Cardinal under Leo X.) quoting a Passage out of the Gospel to him, upon some Occasion, he was so presumptuous as to tell him, what a deal of Service hat this Fable of Christ done us, and our whole College. Du Plessis, Mystere d'iniquite, pag. 784.

(H) He ridiculed the whole Christian Doctrine, as a meer Fable.] The Story goes, that Secretary Bembo alledging something from the Gospel, he answered him, It's well known of old, how profitable this Fable of Jesus Christ has been to us. Quantum nobis nostrisque ea de Christo fabula profuerit satis est omnibus seculis notum. This Story is found in the Mystery of Iniquity (g), and in abundance of other Books: but still without being supported by Citations, or having any other Foundation than the Authority of Balaus: [illegible] that Thirteen or F[illegible] Hundred Authors, [illegible]less, who have copied [illegible]om one another, ou[illegible]e reduced to Balaus [illegible]ngle Testimony, a [illegible]mony manifestly [illegible]onable, since he wrote in open War against [illegible]pe, and against all the Roman Church. No

(b) Taken out of a Book, intitled, [illegible] from the Italian of Antonio Maria Spelta, Historiographer to the King of [illegible] Paris Roan, 1635. t. Par. pag. 103, 104.

(c) Erythræus Pinacothec. 2. cap. 33. pag. 110. in vita Leonis X. lib. 4. pag. 189 190. where he speaks of Evangelick Musician Tarascon, and the Poet Raraballus.

and took that Affair ſo much to Heart, that having received the News of the Misfortunes of the French, he died, 'tis ſaid (I) of meer Joy *. Not but there are Writers

* In the beginning of December 1521.

No Tribunal in the World receives the Depoſitions of ſuch a Witneſs ſwearing that he has ſeen or heard ſo and ſo, for when once the Perſon appears to be his Enemy againſt whom he depoſes, the Challenges of the accuſed Party are declared valid. Since Books of Controverſy then are Pieces which the Parties produce in a Suit pleaded before the Publick, 'tis certain, that the Teſtimony of a Proteſtant Controvertiſt upon a Fact reflecting on the Catholicks ought to be reckoned as nothing. The Publick, which is judge of the Proceſs, ought to reject all theſe Teſtimonies, and have no more regard to them, than to things which never happened. Private Perſons are permitted, if once perſwaded of the Probity of Balæus, to believe what he affirms; but they ought to keep their Perſwaſion to themſelves, and not produce it to Publick View, as a juſtifiable Warrant of an Allegation againſt their Adverſaries; Which in my Opinion, is a thing not ſufficiently obſerved.

They tell another Story, which lies open to the ſame Battery as the former. It is ſaid, that Leo hearing two Men diſpute, one whereof denied, the other affirmed the Immortality of the Soul, pronounced, that the Affirmative ſeemed true, but that the Negative was more proper to give a Man a cheerful Air. Leonis X. Papæ dictum refert (Lutherus) qui audita diſputatione in qua unus immortalitatem animæ defendebat, alter oppugnabat, dixerit, tu quidem vera videris dicere, ſed adverſarii tui oratio facit bonum vultum, id eſt lætiorem mentem (Ital. buona cera) ex Epicuri ſcilicet ſententia. Luther is the Man who ſays this. We may, if we pleaſe, believe he ſpoke truth, but we ought not to allledge his Teſtimony; he is a Perſon at a Pen War with the Pope; he is an Enemy perſecuted and fulminated, by Anathem's; the judicial Practice requires, that he ſhould be rejected, and even his Oath not admitted; he ought either to prove what he ſays, or ſay nothing. A famous Profeſſor of Divinity at Zurich, relates this Story, upon the Teſtimony of a Man, as exceptionable as Luther himſelf. (b) Qualis fuerit Leo——conſtabit——ſi de ejus——impietate & atheiſmo nonnihil attexuerimus. Ille ſcilicet Doctor Johannis XXIV. animum in corporis domicilio ſic inſinuatam ſtatuentes, ut extra illum carcerem non duret; juſſit aliquando (uti Recul. t. Synod. Trid. par. 2. cauſ. 8. p. 266. comprobatum videre eſt) perſonatos Philoſophos duos, ceu morientes ex adverſo ad menſam aſſiſtere; quos animi gratia de immortalitate animæ diſputantes audiret; alterum qui affirmaret, & qui impugnaret, alterum. Cumque finita diſputatione judicium in arbitrium Pontificis hi rejicerent; ille ſic definita ſententia controverſiam diremit: Etſi tu, inquid ad affirmantem, pulchras & bonas rationes habeas; tamen ego ſententiam hujus, negantis, probo, ceu firmiorem, & quæ faciat bonum vultum. He afterwards relates the Anſwer, that 'tis pretended he made Bembus; and as he well perceived that things of this Nature need being proved by the Teſtimony of Catholick Authors, ſee how he orders it; he Alledges the Nephew of the famous Count of Mirandola. (c) Et ne ab hæreticis hæc conficta clamitent ei ex aureâ ejus rei notâ hîc & alterum (d) teſtem damus, qui & ſcire debebat, & cauſam cur mentiretur non habebat, Johannis Pici, Mirandulani Comitis nepotem ex fratre minimè degenerem, qui in illo Piſani & Lateranenſis Conſilii conſiliis, quæſtionem tractans, utrum Concilia vel Pontifices errare poſſint, inter alia de Leone hoc loquens: Meminimus, inquit, Pontificem creditum & adoratum, qui nullum Deum credens, omne infidelitatis (ἀσεβείας) culmen excederet: peſſimaque ejus opera in coëmendo Pontificatu, in omnigenis ſceleribus exercendis, id ipſum teſtabatur: ſed & peſſima quoque dicta confirmabant. Namque faſſum eum affirmabatur domeſticis quibuſdam, nullum ſe Deum aliquando, etiam dum Pontificiam Sedem teneret, credidiſſe, quæ ejus verba libro de fide & ordine credendi, theorem. 4. p. 259. 290. legere eſt. It will perhaps be not unacceptable to procure here more at Length and in Engliſh, John Francis Picus's Relation. '(e) 'Treating alſo the queſtion, whether Councils or 'Popes may Err; in it ſelf eaſily decided, ſince 'he Preſuppoſes that they may ſwerve from the 'Holy Scriptures, he tells us that many Councils 'have actually Erred, many Popes fallen into Hereſie; it often happening, that he who was look'ed on as Supream of the Church, either did not 'rightfully preſide, or was not capable of ſo doing; 'For, ſays he, I. Hiſtory informs us that a Woman 'was made Pope; and I remember, that in our Age 'a Learned Man approved in his Morals, and digni'fied with Honours in his Order, pronounc'd, tho' 'not publickly, that he who was reckoned Pope, was 'not ſuch by Virtue of his Exerciſing the Popes Of'fice (before he was Elected by two parts in three of 'the Cardinals) againſt the Laws of the Church, 'which Decree, that ſuch a Man, not only is not 'Pope, but is even abſolutely unqualified, and in'capacitated for the Office, as being under an Ana'thema. II. We remember alſo another choſen and 'adored as Pope, who yet in the opinion of many 'great Men, neither was, nor could be ſo, becauſe 'he did not believe a God, and was at the very high'eſt pitch of Infidelity, which he teſtified by his moſt 'wicked Works, having bought the Popedom and 'Exerciſed in it all manner of Iniquity, and even 'confirm'd it by his moſt deteſtable ſayings; for it was 'affirmed, that he confeſs'd to ſome of his Dome'ſticks, that at the very time he poſſeſs'd the Ponti'fical See, he did not believe a God. III. We have 'heard of another, who declared to one of his Friends, 'when alive, that he did not believe the Immortality 'of the Soul; but being Dead, he appear'd to him, as 'he was awake, and declar'd, that he experienc'd an 'Immortality, being Damned to Eternal Fire by the 'juſt Judgment of God. Mr. Du Pleſſis had fancy'd, that the firſt of theſe three things related to Julius II., and the ſecond to Leo X. Coeffeteau (f) was content to Anſwer, that Du Pleſſis entering into the Conſcience of all Mankind, had made this Application without Proof or Judgment; but Gretſer Anſwered to more purpoſe: He (g) ſhewed that none of theſe three things concerned Leo X. Since John Francis Picus's Book was Printed in the Pontificate of Julius II. Mr. Rivet acquieſced in this Cenſure whoſe Words are theſe. (h) As to the Application made by our Author to Julius II. and Leo X. of what he ſaid of ſome Popes, that many great Men did not look upon 'em as ſuch, for the Reaſons he gives, it matters not at bottom, to whom the Packet is Addreſs'd, provided it's certain, that it is to the Popes, of one of which he ſays, that it was maintained, he believed no God, that he was at the utmoſt pitch of Infidelity, and even declared that he did not believe a God. If you will exempt Leo X. of whom poſſibly he might not have ſpoke, becauſe he Dedicated his Books to Julius, unleſs he inlarg'd them afterwards, as is uſually done) yet it can't be deny'd as to Alexander VI. He had in him (i) ſays Guicciardin, neither Truth, nor Faith, nor Religion. This is what Mr. Rivet ſays. Note, that Simony or the Purchaſing the Popedom, is not imputable to Leo X. if we believe Guicciardin (i).

If Mr. Heidegger, who had ſo good a Memory, had remember'd this, he would not have believed, that John Francis Picus was a Witneſs of the Impieties of Leo X. His miſtake may and ought to ſerve for a Leſſon to many others. Let us conclude, that the Duty of a good Judge permits not to give Sentence againſt this Pope, while we have no ſtronger Depoſitions. We ſhall ſee in the other Notes (k) whether his Apologiſts reaſon right.

(I) He Died, 'tis ſaid of meer Joy.] 'Having 'rekindled the War between the Emperor Charles 'and the King of France, in order to drive the 'French out of Italy, the News was brought him 'at one of his Seats of Pleaſure called Maliagno, 'of the taking of Milan, and Parma from 'em, 'which gave him ſuch an exceſs of Joy, that 'he was ſeiz'd with a ſlight Fever that very Night, 'of which he Died a few Days after (l). Theſe are Mr. Du Pleſſis's Words. All Hiſtorians agree that Leo X. received this good News with a wonderful ſatisfaction, but I don't find many that ſay he Died of meer Joy upon it; and tho' they affirm'd it ever ſo poſitively I ſhould ſcarce believe 'em; for they who Die of this Paſſion, Die ſuddenly, oppreſs'd, according to all appearance, by two great an effuſion of Bloud into the Ventricles of the Heart. If the

(a) Commentar. in caput 19. Geneſeos, verſ. 13. fol. 132. apud Seckendorf. Hiſtoria Lutheran. lib. 3. p. 676. col. 1.

(b) Heidegger. Hiſtor. Papatus, pag. 204. 205.

(c) Id. ib. pag. 205.

(d) and yet what Mr. Heidegger advances, is not mentioned by the Nephew of John Picus, as a thing which was ſaid a Pope had confeſſed. He does not ſay that he had heard it from the Pope himſelf.

(e) Du Pleſſis Mornai, Myſtere d'iniquité, pag. 590.

(f) Reponſe au Myſtere d'iniquité, pag. 1233.

(b) Intolerabilis porro & plane diabolica calumnia eſt, cum ſcribit Pleſſæus, ea quæ Theoremate quarto Joannis Franciſci continentur, de quodam Pontifice, qui domeſticis confeſſus fuerit, nullum ſe Deum aliquando, etiam cum cathedram Pontificiam teneret, credidiſſe, ad Leonem X. pertinere; nam Joannes Franciſcus Picus edidit Commentarium de Fide & ordine credendi ante Leonis Pontificatum & inſcripſit enim Julio II. Quomodo igitur relationi illa ſua & Hiſtoriæ ſeu fabellæ Leonem X. denotare potuit? Gerdes, in Examine Myſter. Pleſſ. pag. 573.

(i) Rivet Remarques ſur la reſponſe au Myſtere d'iniquité 2. Partie, pag. 646.

(l) Hiſt. d'Italie livre 1.

(k) See the Remark N.

(k) In the Remarks O, and P.

(l) Du Pleſſis ubi ſupra.

tens who affirm he was Poyſoned. He did not always obſerve a Conduct (K) agreeable to the Emperor Maximilian. The ſordid Traffick, to which he reduc'd (L) the diſtribution of Indulgencies, gave Birth to Luther's Reformation, as every Body knows. Some ſay, he ſpoke honourably (M) of this Reformer in the beginning. I don't find, that Guicciardin abuſes this Pope ſo much (N) as Mr. Varillas inſinuates; but Paulus the firſt Impreſſions of a violent Joy be withſtood, as was done by the Pope, a Man is better afterwards, inſtead of being ſeized with a dangerous Fever when other Reaſons do not occaſion it. Johan Creſpin's Account ſeems much more probable, who ſuppoſes that Leo X's Death was ſudden, but not of that ſudden kind which is occaſioned by a ſurprize of Joy. (a) Hearing that the French were beaten at Milan by the Emperor's Forces, and driven out of Italy, which indeed was not done without his help: As he was Drinking and making Merry, and wonderfully rejoyced at the News, 'tis ſaid that he ſuddenly gave up the Ghoſt, he who believed neither a Heaven nor Hell after this Life. Sannazar's diſtich produced by this Author (b) favours the ſuppoſition of ſudden Death; but yet it is certain, that the Diſtemper Leo Died of, laſted ſome Days (c). Famien Strada has given two Relations (d) of this Pope's Death, one in Livy's Stile, the other after the way of Tacitus. They are fine and well wrought.

I muſt here obſerve a blunder of Guicciardin's Tranſlator. News came, ſays he, that Pope Leo Died the firſt Day of December a ſudden Death. For having received in his Villa of Mariagno where he often diverted himſelf, the News of the taking of Milan, he fell into ſuch an exceſſive Joy, that that very Night he was ſeiz'd with a ſlight Fever; being carried to Rome the day after, tho' the Phyſicians at firſt made light of his Diſtemper, he Died within few Days, not without ſuſpicion of being Poyſon'd (as was ſaid) by Barnabas Maleſpine his Chamberlain, who was appointed to help him to his Drink (e). What an Abſurdity is it to ſay almoſt in the ſame Period, that a Man died a ſudden Death, and that he Died of a ſmall Fever, ſlighted at firſt by the Phyſicians. Guicciardin was not capable of ſuch an overſight, he did not ſay this Death was ſudden (f), nor has he Connected (g) the Pope's great Joy with the Fever, as the cauſe of that effect. This Connexion is a more than Poetical Licence of the Tranſlator. Note, by the way, what cloſe regard is to be had to the Words of the Original, when we would faithfully Tranſlate.

(K) A Conduct agreeable to the Emperor Maximilian.] He had conceived good hopes of Leo X. but when he was inform'd of this Pope's Engagements with the French, he cried, (b) If this Pope had not deceived me, he would have been the only Pope, whoſe Honeſty I ſhould have had reaſon to commend.

(L) He reduced the Diſtribution of Indulgences.] It became a kind of Monopoly, and Indulgences were let out to Farm; the Commiſſioners appointed for the Collection of the Sums, bought their Commiſſions of the Pope, after which they ſtuck at no kind of Exaction, and obſerved Decorum ſo little, that the Powers for releaſing Souls out of Purgatory were Play'd for in the Taverns, as we are aſſured by Guicciardin. Haveva ſparſo per tutto il mondo ſenza diſtintione di tempi e di luoghi, indulgentie ampliſſime, non ſolo per poter giovare con eſſe quelli, che ancora ſono nella vita preſente, ma con facultà di potere oltra queſto liberare l' anime de' defunti dalle pene del Purgatorio: le quali, perche era notorio che ſi concedevano ſolamente per eſtorquere danari da gli huomini; & eſſendo eſſercitate imprudentemente da Commiſſarii deputati a queſta eſattione, la più parte de' quali comperava dalla Corte la facultà di eſſercitare; haveva concitato in molti luoghi indignatione, e ſcandalo aſſai, e ſpecialmente nella Germania, dove a molti de' miniſtri era veduto vendere per poco prezzo, o giocarſi ſu le taverne la facultà del liberare l' anime de' morti dal Purgatorio (i). The diſcontent of the People grew greater, when it was known to what uſe theſe Sums were deſtin'd: Almoſt all the Money that was raiſed by 'em in Germany, being Converted to the uſe of the Pope's Siſter.

(M) He ſpoke honourably of this great Reformer.] This Particular had hardly been known, if Colomiés had not mentioned it: Mr. de Seckendorf learnt it from him (k), being Advertiſed by a Counſeller of Spire, that it was to be found in Colomiés's Opuſcula, the Paſſage is this. '(l) M. Voſſius having told me that he remembered, he had read 'in Bandel's Tragical Hiſtories, an Elogy given to 'Luther by Pope Leo X; I went immediately into 'his Library, where turning over the Hiſtories of 'this Author, See what I found in the Preface 'to the twenty fifth Novel of the third Part. Nel principio che la Setta Lutherana comincio à germogliare, eſſendo di brigata molti Gentilhuomini, ne l'hora del meriggio, in caſa dal noſtro virtuoſo Signor L. Scipione Attellano, è di varie coſe raggionandoſi, furono alcuni che non poco biaſimarono Leone X. Pontefice, che ne i principii non ſi metteſſe remedio, & l'hora che Frate Silveſtro Prierio, Maeſtro del ſacro Palazzo, gli moſtrò alcuni punti d'hereſia che Fra Martino Lutero haveva ſparſo per l'opera, la quale de le Indulgentie haueva intitolata; perchioche imprudentemente riſpoſe, che Fra Martino haveva un belliſſimo ingegno, e che coteſte erano invidie Frateſche. Words which Sleidan would not have failed placing in the front of his Hiſtory, if he had known 'em.

(N) So much as Mr. Varillas inſinuates.] This Author wrote a great many Books againſt the Houſe of Auſtria, which would have been Printed perhaps, if Mr. Colbert had not repreſented after the Pyrenean Treaty, that it would look ill to diſcontent the Spaniards by allowing the Impreſſion of ſo many injurious Volumes. We have ſeen the Plan of this great Work, in a Writing called the Politicks of the Houſe of Auſtria. The Author ſets out by a kind of Apology for the liberty he has taken in touching the Vices of Princes. I only, ſays he (m), imitate the Stile, and Copy the reverſe of the Picture, which Livy has given of Hannibal (1) and I have even come ſo much ſhort of others in this Point, that no Perſon of what condition ſoever is found ſo ill Treated in my Book, as Pope Leo. X. is in the Elogy which Guicciardin has made of him (2) and for which he has no where been cenſured as I can find. (3) 'Tis manifeſt this Elogy of Leo X. is here Alledged as a very Satyrical Piece, otherwiſe 'twould be Abſurd to propoſe this Inſtance. Now 'tis certain there is nothing in Guicciardin that Anſwers this Idea. The twelfth Book cited by Mr. Varillas is leſs to his purpoſe than the following. 'Tis in the thirteenth Book, that we find the Deſcription of the Trade of Indulgences, as we have ſeen above, and in the fourteenth the Cenſure of this Pope's extravagant Expences, and his inclination to the Diverſions of Muſick and Farces. (n) Egli per natura dedito all'ocio, & a' piaceri, & hora per la troppa licenza, e grandezza alieno ſopra modo dalle faccende, immerſo ad udire tutto'l giorno muſiche, (4) facetie, e buffoni, inclinato ancora troppo più che l'honeſta a piaceri; pareva doveſſe eſſere totalmente alieno dalle guerre. In fine, we find in the ſame Book a general Judgment on the Conduct of this Pope; 'tis mixed with Praiſe and Diſpraiſe, and can neither be reckoned a Satyr, nor even a Deſcription of too little Reſpect. Theſe are Guicciardin's Words. (o) Principe nel quale erano degne di laude, e di vituperio molte coſe, e che ingannò aſſai l'eſpettatione, che quando fu aſſunto al Pontificato s'haveva di lui: concioſia ch' e' riuſciſſe di maggior prudenza, ma di molto minore bontà di quello ch'era giudicato da tutti. When this Hiſtorian ſpeaks of Leo the X's Election, he does it in a manner very much to the Glory of this Pope. He owns he was free from Simony, and all other evil Suſpicion, and that the Reputation of the Elected Cardinal, ſtood very well in Point of Manners. (p) Stuti di queſta elettione quaſi tutta la Chriſtianità, grandiſſimo piacere, perſuadendoſi univerſalmente gli huomini che haveſſe a eſſere rariſſimo Pontefice, per la chiara memoria del valore paterno, e per la fama che riſonava per tutto della ſua liberalità, benignità, ſtimato caſto e di perfetti coſtumi, e ſpecialmente che a eſſempio del padre haveſſe a eſſere

(a) John Creſpin, Etat de l'Egliſe, ad ann. 1521. p. m. 516.
(b) Sacra ſub extrema ſi forte requiritis hora Cur Leo non poterat ſumere? vendiderat.
(c) See Paulus Jovius ubi ſupra, p. 209.
(d) Proluſ. Academic. l. 2. p. m. 247. & ſeq.
(e) Homodey, Tranſlation of Guicciardin lib. 14. c. 14. fol. 143. ad ann. 1521.
(f) Morì di morte inaſpettata. Guicc. l. 15. fol. m. 415. verſo.
(g) Ricevutone incredibile piacere; ſoprapreſo la notte medeſima di piccola febbre, e fattoſi il giorno ſeguente portare à Roma, &c. Id. ibid.
(h) Niſi me hiſ quoque Papa [illegible] fefellerit, illis unicus eſſet cujus bonum fidem laudare poſſem. See Seckendorf, Hiſt. Lutheran. l. 1. p. 42. col. 1. See alſo Heidegger, Hiſt. Papatus, p. 201.
(i) Guicc. l. 13. fol. 395. verſo. See alſo Fra Paolo lib.
(k) Hiſtor. Lutheran. l. 1. p. 40. col. 2. litera, b.
(l) Colomiés, Recueil de particularitez, p. m. 111.
(m) Varillas, Politique de la maiſon d'Autriche chap. 73. 74. Edition de la Haie, 1688.
(1) Dans le 21. livre.
(2) In the 12*th. Book of his Hiſtory.*
(3) Not even by le Beuy.
(n) Lib. 14. fol. 398. verſo.
(4) Quali ſorte di buffonerie, e di facetie piaceſſero a Papa Leone; ſi può raccoglier dal l. 4. della vita di lui del Giovio: dove done, che furon recitate Comedie, ſi fece profeſſion di fare impazzire huomini, & altre piacevolezze tali: onde il Tarſcone ſi perſuaſe d'eſſere gran Muſico, il Baraballo fu laureata Poeta, e mandato in l'Elefante, & i Paraſiti furon ſommamente favoriti.
(o) Guicc. ibid. fol. 416.
(p) Idem l. 11. fol. 326.

Paulus Jovius's Apology; to me ſeems (O) trifling: It advances a Queſtion, whether he ought to be reckoned an Atheiſt. The other (P) Apologiſt has not ſucceeded much better. There's no need of confuting Mr. Varillas; but by himſelf. I ſhall produce

Vossius, Diſputat. tom. 1. pag. 204.

(a) See above the Words of Paulus Jovius; Remark D.

(b) Ita natus & factus, ita altus atq; educatus, ita denique eruditus atque inſtitutus hic eſt, ut nemini ſecundus ingenio, nec æqualibus induſtria, nec præceptoribus literatura, neque gravitate ſenibus conceſſerit. Nativa in eo probitas, & genuina: diligentia quoque parentis ita impenſe culta eſt, ut ex illius ore non modo non verbum dictu fœdius, ſed ne levius quidem unquam aut etiam licentius exciderit, Nonactio, non geſtus, non inceſſus in illo notatus: non aliud poſtremo quod in deteriorem partem conſpiceretur. Sic in viridi ætate cana maturitas, ut qui loquentem ſenes audiant, proavitam in eo, nos paternam certe indolem agnoſcamus. Cultum & religionis penetiam cum laſte meditatus ſupra, p.

(O) Paul Jovius's Apology to me ſeems trifling.] The Reaſons this Author gives to juſtifie Leo X. may be reduced to Four. 1. He pretends (a) that it was not from a vicious Nature, but a gentle, eaſie, and magnificent Temper, that this Pope, beſet by a voluptuous Crew, ingaged a little too far in Pleaſures. This is but a poor Excuſe; there are a great many Proſtitutes, who may be juſtified upon this Principle. They are not naturally wicked, brutal and cruel; a great Stock of Good-nature, Facility and Complaiſance, makes 'em fall into the Snare of the Tempter. I ſhall by the way, obſerve, that Politian has ſaid Wonders of Leo X. This he did in a Letter he wrote to Pope Innocent VIII. when this Youth was made a Cardinal. See the Margin (b). Paul Jovius ſays in the 2d. Place, that if Leo be compared with his Predeceſſors, he will be found very Chaſte. Si aliqua ex parte eo nomine fugillari inclyta virtus potuit, Leo certè cum ſuperiorum principum fama comparatus æſtimatione rectiſſima continentiæ laudem ſanet (c). This Excuſe is no better than the former. 3. He ſays, this Pope having had a good Reputation as to Continence, precautioned himſelf afterwards againſt the Attacks of Impurity, by renouncing high Food, and by Regular Faſtings. (d) Conſtat tamen eum, quod à prima adoleſcentia opinione omnium ſummam continentiæ [illegible] dem fuiſſet adeptus, non importuna quadam pud[illegible] caſtitatisque præſidia quæviſſe: quando nequaquam priſtina vita more tam multis delicatiſque obſonijs uteretur: Itemque animo verè pudico die mercurii carnes non edere, die autem Veneris nihil guſtare præter legumen & olera, ac die demum Saturni cœna penitus abſtinere, incorrupta lege inſtituiſſet. This is worth more than all the reſt. 4. Laſtly, he ſays, that we ought to make a great Difference betwixt the Vices, which belong to a Sovereign as ſuch, and thoſe which belong to him as a Man. And he alledges the Emperor Trajan ſo beloved of the Roman People, that 'twas the heighth of their Wiſhes that the Succeeding Emperors ſhould reign as well as he; and yet no one was ignorant of the Sodomy and Drunkenneſs of Trajan. His meaning is, that Leo X's Vices were not repugnant to the Qualities of a good Sovereign, but to thoſe of a good Chriſtian only, and therefore the Irregularities of his Youth ought to be pardoned, ſince they did not hinder his being a good Prince. (e) Alia principis, alia hominis eſſe vitia quis neſcit? hæc uni privata conditione quum noceant, etiam aliquibus fortaſſe proſunt: illa verò ab dira poteſtate, & luctum & calamitatem univerſis mortalibus apportabant: idque veriſſimum eſſe conſtat præclare quondam populi Romani teſtimonio, qui neminem ſibi principem Trajano meliorem exoptavit, quanquam eum illicitæ libidinis ac ebrietatis cenſura notaſſet. Sed demus aliquid humanitati Leonis, uti in ſumma licentia fervidæ ætatis ac proſpera valetudinis uſum agerimò ſuſtinenti, poſtquam in magnis ſalutaribuſque virtutibus optimi atque benefici cognomentum facile meruerit.

Generally ſpeaking, this Author's Maxim is true: It is very poſſible for a Prince to be an honeſt Man, and at the ſame time but a poor King; that is, a King, who can't maintain the Honour of the Laws, nor Remedy the Diſorders of the State. On the other hand, 'tis very poſſible for a Prince to be an ill Obſerver of thoſe Rules of Morality, which preſcribe the Duties of a private Station, and yet be a good King, that is, a King, who maintains Order in his State, and wiſely diſtributes Puniſhments and Rewards, without being Burthenſome to his People, by Impoſts, and pecuniary Edicts. But 'tis very rare, that a Voluptuary and a Prodigal, as Leo X. was, is a good Prince; to ſupply [illegible]nces, he muſt be burthenſome to his Subje[illegible] for the moſt part diſtribute his Favours, [illegible]g to the Humour of the Miniſters of his Pleaſures, and conſequently to unworthy Perſons, whoſe evil Adminiſtration he has not leiſure to inſpect, being too much taken up with his Pleaſures, to allow the [illegible]tions of Royalty, that Application which th[illegible]nd. It were eaſie to ſhew, that Leo X's S[illegible]re ſufficiently loaded. Beſides, 'tis not conſidered, that Leo's principal Dignity was of a Sacred and Eccleſiaſtical Nature. So that to know whether he diſcharged his Duty, the great Queſtion is not, whether he has [illegible]oral Dignity demanded, it be[illegible]tifie him, without ſhewing, that he diligently acquitted the Duties of his other Dignity, that is, obſerved the Precepts of the Goſpel, and omitted nothing to recommend the Practice of 'em to others. This was his principal Function, and here his Apologiſt is forced to forſake him. (f) In his vero quæ rem divinam reſpicerent nequaquam ſecunda fama prægravari eſt viſus. Nam indulgentias vetera Pontificum ad parandam pecuniam inſtrumenta adeo [illegible]atque affluenter provinciis dedit, ut fidem [illegible]a poteſtatis elevare videretur.

I muſt upon this Occ[illegible]ſion ſay, that this Blending the Temporal with the Eccleſiaſtical Authority, in the ſame Perſon, is generally the bane of the Evangelical Spirit. This Combination had place among the Pagans (g), and was not unſerviceable to the Temporal Splendor of Religion. [illegible] commonly ſerves the ſame Ends in Ch[illegible]; but produces an extreme Corruption of [illegible]ers. The Eccleſiaſtical Character ought to prevail, and be predominant, ſince the other Dignity is only an Acceſſory; and yet it is almoſt always ſwallowed up by its Colleague. The joining theſe two together, is like the joining a dead Carcaſs (h) to a living Body; a fatal Conjunction, where the dead communicates its Stench to the Living Body, and receives no vital influence from it. The World, the Fleſh, the weak part draws after it the Reſolutions, and good Purpoſes, juſt as in a Syllogiſm, the weakeſt of the Premiſſes, is the Rule of the Conſequence (i). The Author of the Critique generale (k) ſpeaking of the Diſtinction, between a Pope pronouncing ex Cathedra, and the ſame Pope, pronouncing in another manner, has related the fine Saying of a Peaſant in the Electorate of Cologne. I had a long time thought, that this good Saying was preſerved only by Tradition, but I was miſtaken. It has been in print in grave Books for above an Age. [illegible]n has inſerted it in one (l) of his, and copied Fulgoſius (m). Here is the whole Story; 'th[illegible], the Elector of Cologne is not expreſſly mentioned, 'There goes a pleaſant Story of a German Clown, who being at work in his Field, ſaw his Biſhop paſs by, attended by a Train more becoming a Peer, than one who calls himſelf the Succeſſor or Deputy of an an Apoſtle; being highly ſcandaliſed at it, he could not forbear laughing, and laughed ſo lou[illegible] that the Reverend Gentleman would needs k[illegible] the Reaſon of it. The Clown anſwered in his n[illegible]tural way, that is, as a true and plain Perſon; I laugh when I think of St. Peter and St. Paul, and ſee you in ſuch an Equipage. How is that, ſaid the Biſhop? Do you aſk how, ſays the Fellow? they were ill adviſed to walk alone on Foot throughout the World, when they were the Heads of the Chriſtian Church, and Lieutenants of Jeſus Chriſt, the King of Kings; And thou, who art only our Biſhop, go ſo well mounted, as have ſuch a Train of Hectors, that thou reſembleſt more a Peer of the Realm, [illegible]a Paſtor of the Church. To this his Rev[illegible] replied, But my Friend, thou doſt not conſi[illegible]hat I am both a Count and a Baron, as well [illegible]my Biſhop. At which the Ruſtick laughed more than before; and the Biſhop aſking him the Reaſon of it, he anſwered, Sir, when the Count and Baron, which [illegible] you are, ſhall be in Hell, where will the [illegible]be? This confounded the Right Reverend, [illegible]proceeded on his journey without anſwering [illegible] (n).

(P) Another Apologiſt has not ſucceeded much better.] We'll ſay a Word or two concerning the manner nutricis exſunit: etiam tum ab [illegible]alis ſacra officia. Politian, Epiſt. 5. lib. 8. [illegible]ovius ubi ſupra, p. 192. (d) Ibid. pag. 193. (e) Ibid. [illegible]92, 193.

(f) Jovius ib. p. 193.

(g) Rex Anius Rex idem hominum Phœbique ſacerdos. Virgil. Æn. l. 3. v. 80.

A THOUGHT on the uniting the Spiritual and Temporal Authority in one Perſon.]

(b) Mortua quinetiam jungebat corpora vivis Componens manibuſque manus [illegible] (Tormenti genus) & ſanie, taboque fluentes Complexit in miſero longa ſic morte [illegible] Æneid. l. 8. v. [illegible]

(i) Concluſio ſequitur debilio[illegible]m [illegible]

[illegible]l. de [illegible]s 3. edition.

(l) De ſacris Eccleſ. miniſter. l. 1. c. 4.

(m) Bapt. Fulgos: factor & dictor memorabil. lib. 6. c. 2. fol. in 198.

(n) Pierre Viel, a Doctor of Sorbon, in his Treatiſe of Simony, chap. 6.

a long Paſſage from his (k) Anecdots, containing a juſt abſtract enough of Leo the Xth's Character, from whence I deſire my Reader to fill up what is wanting in the Body of this Article. Mr. Varillas is miſtaken (R) again about Paulus Jovius. Men of Letters, of what Religion or Nation ſoever, are bound to praiſe and bleſs the Memory of this Pope, for the Care he had taken to recover the Manuſcripts of the Antients; he ſpared neither Pains nor Coſt in ſearching for 'em, and procuring very good Editions. I have two Anecdote Letters, which are (S) a Proof of this, and which People will undoubtedly be glad to find here.

LEON

manner th[illegible] Authors would accuſe Leo X. of Irreligion. [illegible]fetau (a) makes no other Apology than theſe Words of Onuphrus Panvinius. (b) Erat rerum divinarum diligens obſervator, Rivet (c) replies, that there 'are many [illegible] and many A- 'theiſts, who exactly [illegible] ceremonies to 'conceal their Impi[illegible] Leaves, who a- 'mongſt Friends ſay, they do it ad morem, non ad 'rem, legibus juſtæ, non diis gratæ. Sannazar, who 'makes him die without receiving the Sacraments, 'becauſe he had ſold them before, does not repreſent 'him ſuch as Onuphrius would paint him to us. Note, that Sannazar does not pretend, that Leo refus'd the Sacraments. If this Pope did not commu- nicate, &c. on his Death-Bed, 'twas becauſe of his Delirium. James [illegible]ſer, beſides Panvinius's Words, alledges Leo [illegible] Bull, againſt Luther. (d) Bulla qua Leo Lut[illegible] errores damnat immanem hanc Pſeudologiam perſpicuè redarguit. This is pitiful; for though this Pope had had no Religion, he would however have followed the ordinary Stile in his Bull, and have expreſſed great Zeal againſt a Heretick, who diſputed with him an Authority on which all his Temporal Happineſs depended. Palavicini (e), [illegible] ing to anſwer the Reproach which Father [illegible] caſt upon this Pope, of having [illegible] no regard for Religion, does three Things; he [illegible] ledges 1. Politian's Teſtimony (f). 2. The Facts of the Pope. 3. The Majeſty and good Grace, with which Leo celebrated Maſs. The ſecond of theſe Three, if the Fact be really ſo, as Paulus Jovius (b) has related it, is in my Mind, a good Proof of Religion, when we well conſider the Circumſtances. The firſt ſignifies nothing, for Children to a certain Age, are firmly perſwaded by the Lectures of their Catechiſt, and raiſe no Objections againſt 'em. If they become irreligious, 'tis when they are their own Men, and corrupt themſelves by a bad Converſation, or by a wrong Way of Philoſophizing. The laſt thing is rather a Talent of the Body, than a Sign of the Perſuaſion of the Soul. Let us ſee what Paulus Jovius ſays. Sacra confecit, ſingulaque ceremoniarum obivit munia ſingulari cum majeſtate, ut non falſo [illegible] ſuperiorum Pontificum eo auguſtius & decen[illegible] ſacrificaſſe diceretur (i). 'Tis very probable, that Onuphrius means no more when he ſays, he was rerum divinarum diligens obſervator, & ſacris ceremoniis deditus. A proof of Religion abſolutely equivocal.

(k) A long Paſſage from his Anecdotes.] We find it in the Preface of this Book, and it contains what follows. 'Guicciardin—— repreſents (l) this 'Pope as an accompliſhed Model of modern Policy, 'and the greateſt Stateſman of his Age. He ſets 'him above King Ferdinand the Catholick, and 'makes him triumph in his Youth over all the Arti- 'fices of this old Uſurper. 'Tis to himſelf alone he at- 'tributes the Secret of getting all his Deſigns ſecond- 'ed by the Councils of Spain, whether they would 'or no. After having eſtabliſhed theſe Wonderful 'Principles, there are no ſhining Vertues, but what 'heighten the Picture of Leo X. He forms at 'Twelve Years of Age, when he was made Cardinal, 'thoſe vaſt Projects, which he executed afterwards, 'when he was exalted to the Chair of St. Peter. 'He negotiates with the States of Venice to ſave the 'Ruins of his Houſe, which had been near'd againſt 'the [illegible] of our Charles VIII. He changed 'not [illegible] olution upon ſeeing his Brother loſt in 'the paſſing of a River. He had no other Thoughts 'than the educating the only Son; which this Bro- 'ther had left in the Cradle, upon which he returns 'to Rome, where his Intrigues recommended him 'to the Favour of Pope Julius II. and occaſioned 'his being choſen Legate in the Army [illegible] to 'drive the French out of Italy. He is [illegible] on- 'ner at the Battle of Ravenna, but makes [illegible] eſcape 'in an unlucky Conjuncture for him, Julius happen- 'ing [illegible] to die; he enters into the Conclave, 'where he takes ſuch Advantage of the Frolicks of 'the young Cardinals, who were obſtinately bent on 'making a Pope of their own Standing, that he inclined 'their Votes in favour of himſelf. He joins with 'the Spaniards, and manages their Friendſhip, as 'long as it is uſeful towards re-eſtabliſhing his Fa- 'mily in the principal Functions of the Magiſtra- 'cy of Florence; but as ſoon as Fortune turns her 'back upon 'em, and he finds the Council not in- 'clined to ſee him uſurp the Dutchy of Urbino, and 'inveſt his Nephew with it, he treats with the 'French upon that Condition; he draws up the fa- 'mous Concordat, in which he baffles the Cunning 'and long Experience of the Chancellor Du Prat. 'he careſſes Francis I. as long as that King is in a 'Condition of doing him Service; but no ſooner ob- 'tains of him all he deſired, but he quits him 'to reconcile himſelf with Charles V. He projects 'a new League with him, to re-eſtabliſh the Sforza's 'in the Dutchy of Milan. He ſucceeds in it 'better than he expected, and conceives a Joy on 'the News of his Succeſs, which gave him his 'Death.

(R) Is again miſtaken about Paulus Jovius.] This Hiſtorian, if we believe Mr. Varillas, has not wrote the Hiſtory ſo much as an Invective againſt Leo X. Paulus Jovius, ſays he, (l) makes him paſs for a Son of Violence, and a Man who would carry every Thing by main Force. He poſſeſſes him with the Warlike Humour, as his Predeceſſor Julius II. had; he makes him even before his Exaltation conceive a diſdainful Contempt for the reſt of the Sacred College, founded on an imaginary Precedency of the Houſe of Medicis, before all the reſt in Italy; He makes him carry on his Scorn to Actions of the greateſt Renown, and even the moſt auguſt Ceremonies. He takes him to be the Source and Foundation of the Obſtinate War againſt the Duke of Urbino, and all the other Quarrels which happened through the whole Courſe of his Pontificate. In a Word, he'll have Vanity, but an haughty and ſhocking Vanity, to have been his ſtrongeſt Paſſion. If you deſire to know how Paul Jovius came to penetrate ſo far into the Soul of Pope Leo, as to be able to pronounce ſuch a deciſive Judgment, he anſwers you before-hand, that he was the Creature of this Pope; that it was he who made him quit the Profeſſion of Phyſick, and the Pretenſions to Churches at Padua, to engage in the Eccleſiaſtical State; who made him Biſhop of Como, and choſe him for his Confident and Aſſiſtant, in the Councils wherein the moſt Important and Secret Reſolutions were taken; who engaged him to write the Hiſtory of his Time, who implor'd his good Offices for him in France and Spain, that Authentick Pieces might be communicated to him, ſuch as were neceſſary for the perfecting his Works; and who diſcovered himſelf to him without Reſerve, in frequent and familiar Converſations. The preceding Remarks make it appear, that Paulus Jovius does not conceal the Faults of Leo X. but 'tis certain, that the Vice which Mr. Varillas ſpeaks of, is that of all others, which Paul Jovius ſpeaks of, is that of all others, which Paul Jovius ſpeaks of, is that of all others, which Paul Jovius the leaſt imputes to him; for it is certain he gives him the contrary Vertue. Pontifex, ſays he (m) cujus mite ingenium facilemque naturam in Specimen caterarum virtutum omnes illo tempore laudabant, clementius agendum ſibi——exiſtimarit. This Author was never Biſhop of Como; nor did he obtain the Epiſcopal Dignity from Leo X. but Clement VII (n). This intimate Confidence, and Admiſſion into the moſt ſecret Councils, ſeems to me a miſſion into the moſt ſecret Councils, ſeems to me a Romantick Fiction, of which there is not the leaſt Footſtep in the Writings of Paulus Jovius.

(S) I have two Anecdote Letters which are a proof of it.] They were communicated to me by Mr. [illegible] de Seid[illegible]vy-Councellor to his Pruſſian Majeſty; he had [illegible] fine Library of his Father's, and hath conſid[illegible]encreaſed it, eſpecially with choice Books, [illegible]anuſcript Pieces; he brought ſeveral from [illegible] in a Journey he made thither, and he very

(a) Reponſe au Myſtere d'iniquité pag. 1227.
(b) In vita Leonis X.
(c) Remarques ſur la Reponſe au Myſtere d'iniquité 2. partie, pag. 640.
(d) In Examine Myſterii Pleſſæan. pag. 563.
(e) Iſtor. del Concilio, l. 1. c. 1.
(f) Sarebbe ſta to un perfetto Pontefice, ſe con queſte [illegible] cognitione delle coſe della religione, & alquanto piu d'inclinatione: ma [illegible] contra delle quali non moſtrava haver gran cura [illegible] Paul. Iſtor. Concil. lib. 1. pag. 5.
(g) See the Remark O.
(h) See the Remark O.
(i) Paulus Jovius in vita Leonis X. lib. 4. pag. m. 212.
(l) In the 12 firſt Articles of his Hiſtory.
(l) Preface to the Anecdotes of Florence. He cites Paulus Jovius in his Book, and in his particular Eloge on Leo X. Two unexact Citations; for the general Hiſtory of Paul Jovius comprehends ſeveral Books; and he has not wrote a particular Elogy on this Pope; but the Hiſtory of his Life.
(m) Jovius Hiſtoriar. lib. 11. ſub fin. See him alſo in vita Leonis X. pag. m. 109.
(n) The 13*th. of* January, according to Ughelli, Ital. ſacra tom 7. pag. 744.

[a] Cieca in Proœmio.

LEON (Peter Cieca) Author of a Hiſtory of Peru. He left [a] Spain, his Native Country, at Thirteen Years of Age, to go into America, where he ſojourned Seventeen Years. He obſerved there ſo many Curioſities, that he reſolved to put 'em in Writing. I ſhall mention ſome of 'em (A), if only to ſhew the Injuſtice of thoſe who pretend that 'twas the Chriſtians firſt taught the People of America to be wicked. This cannot be ſaid without a great many Reſtrictions, and poſſibly in ſome of the very well deſerves ſuch a Treaſure; for he is a learned Man, and takes a great deal of Pleaſure in favouring the Sciences. The Copy he had the Goodneſs to ſend of theſe two Letters of Leo X. is faithful and exact, he has the Originals by him, written in Sadolet's own Hand. I ſhall obſerve by the by, that there was printed in the Nova literaria Maris Baltici & Septentrionis (a), for the Month of November 1699, a Letter written on a Subject of the ſame Nature to his Daniſh Majeſty, by Leo X. the 8th. of November 1517. Mine are as follows.

(a) Pag. 348.

Venerabili Fratri Alberto Moguntin, & Magdeburgen. Archi-Epiſcopo, Adminiſtratori Halberſtaten. Principi Electori ac Germaniæ Primati.
LEO. PP. X.

VEnerabilis Frater, Salutem & Apoſtolicam benedictionem. Mittimus dilectum filium Joannem Heytmers de Zonvelben, Clericum Leodienſis diœceſeos, noſtrum & Apoſtolicæ ſedis Commiſſarium ad inclitas Nationes, Germaniæ, Daniæ, Sueciæ, Norvegiæ & Gothiæ, pro inquirendis dignis & antiquis libris qui temporum injuria pereunt, in qua re nec ſumptui nec impenſæ alicui parcimus, ſolum ut ſicut uſque à noſtro Pontificatus initio propoſuimus, quid Altiſſimo gratum ſit hoc & ſuorum, virtutem generis humani ſolos ſapientiæ literatos, quantum cum Deo poſſumus, foveamus, extollamus ac juvemus. Acceperunt autem preces Fraternitatem Tuam, ſeu in locis ſatis frequentatione poſſis eſſe ex dictis antiquis libris, præſertim Romanarum Hiſtoriarum non paucos qui nobis deſiderati non parum forent. Quare cum in animo nobis ſit tales libros, cuicunque ad manus venire potuerint in hanc urbem deferri pro communi omnium literarum utilitate, Fraternitatem Tuam eâ demum qua poſſumus affectione hortamur, monemus & cuixta ac debitum obſecramur, ut ſi rem gratam unquam facere animo propoſuit, vel eorundem librorum omnium excuſa fideliter & accurate ſcripta, vel quod magis exoptamus ipſamet libros antiquos ad nos tranſmittere quanto citius curet, illos ſtatim receptura, cum deſcripti hic fuerint, juxta obligationem per Cameram noſtram Apoſtolicam factam, ſeu quam dictus Joannes Commiſſarius noſter præſentium lator ad id mandatum ſufficiens habens nomine dictæ Camera denuo duxerit faciendam. Et quia dictus Joannes promiſit nobis ſe brevi daturum triceſimum tertium librum Titi Livij de bello Macedonico, illi commiſimus ut eum ad manus Tuæ Fraternitatis daret, ut ipſa quam primum poſſet per fidum nuntium ad nos, vel dilecto Filio Philippo Beroaldo Bibliothecario Palatij noſtri Apoſtolici mittat. Quoniam vero eidem Joanni certam ſummam pecuniarum hic in urbe enumerari fecimus pro expenſis factis & fiendis, & certam quantitatem debemus, volumus, & ita Fraternitati Tuæ committimus & mandamus, ut poſtquam acceperit prædictum librum Titi Livii ipſi Joanni ſolvat ſeu ſolvi faciat centum quadraginta ſeptem ducatos auri de Camera ex pecuniis indulgentiarum conceſſarum per illius Provincias in favorem fabricæ Baſilicæ Principis Apoſtolorum de urbe; quam quidem pecuniarum ſummam in computis Tuæ Fraternitatis cum Camera Apoſtolica admittemus, prout in præſentiâ per præſentes admittimus; & admitti mandamus. Juvet præterea eundem Joannem ſalvis conductibus litteris & auxiliis, & illi per Provincias ſuas aſſiſtat pro libris extrahendis, & pro illo etiam fide jubeat, ſi opus eſt, pro dictis libris intra certum tempus à nobis reſtituendis & ad ſua loca remittendis. Quod ſi Fraternitas Tua fecerit, ut omnino nobis perſuademus, & ingens nomen apud Viros literatos conſequetur, & nobis rem gratiſſimam faciet. Datum Romæ apud S. Petrum ſub annulo Piſcatoris die XXVI. Novembris M. D XVII. Pontificatûs noſtri anno quinto.

JA. SADOLETUS.

This is the firſt of the Two Letters Leo's the Second. Something there is in it, which inclines us to think, that the entire Hiſtory of Livy was then in being. Our de Seidel thinks it reaſonable to believe, that a Canon of Madeburg, who was a Miniſter of State to the Marquis Joachim Frederick, Adminiſtrator of that Archbiſhoprick, made good uſe of the Confuſion things were then in, and took ſeveral Manuſcripts out of the Library, particularly this Livy, to enrich his own. It fell to his Heirs, who kept the Manuſcripts very cloſe, becauſe they had come unjuſtly by 'em. At laſt the whole was deſtroy'd, when the Town was pillaged in the Year 1631.

Venerabili Fratri noſtro Alberto Archiepiſcopo Moguntin. Principi Electori & Germaniæ Primati.
LEO PP. X.

DIlecti (b) filii, Salutem & Apoſtolicam benedictionem. Retulit nobis dilectus filius Joanne, Heytmers de Zonvelben Clericus Leodienſis diœceſeos quem nuper pro inquirendis antiquis libris, qui deſiderantur ad inclitas nationes Germaniæ, Daniæ, Norvegiæ, Sueciæ & Gothiæ noſtrum & Apoſtolicæ ſedis Specialem nuncium & Commiſſarium deſtinavimus, à quodam, quem ipſe ad id ſubſtituerat, accepiſſe literas, quibus ei ſignificat in veſtra Bibliotheca reperiſſe Codicem antiquum, in quo omnes Decades Titi Livij ſunt deſcriptæ, impetrâſſeque à vobis illas poſſe exſcribere cum originalem codicem habere fas non fuerit. Laudamus profecto veſtram humanitatem & erga ſedem Apoſtolicam obedientiam. Verum, dilecti filij, fuit nobis ab ipſo uſque Pontificatûs noſtri initio animus, Viros quovis virtutis genere exornatos, præſertim literatos, quantum cum DEO poſſumus, et tollere ac juvare. Ea de cauſa hujuſcemodi antiquos & deſideratos libros, quotquot recipere poſſumus, prius per viros doctiſſimos, quorum copia DEI munere in noſtrâ hodie eſt curiâ, corrigi facimus, deinde noſtra impenſa ad communem eruditorum utilitatem diligentiſſime imprimi curamus. Sed ſi ipſos originales libros non habeamus, noſtra intentio non plane adimpletur, quia hi libri, viſis tantum exemplis, correcti in lucem exire non poſſunt. Mandavimus in Camera noſtra Apoſtolicâ ſufficientem præſtare cautionem de reſtituendis hujuſcemodi libris integris & illeſis eorum Dominis, quam primum hic erunt exſcripti, & dictus Joannes, quem iterum ad præmiſſa Commiſſarium deputavimus, habet ad eandem Cameram ſufficiens mandatum, illam obligandi ad reſtitutionem prædictam, modo & forma quibus ei videbitur. Tantum ad commodum & utilitatem Virorum eruditorum tendimus; De quo etiam dilecti filii Abbas & Conventus Monaſterii Corwienſis Ordinis S. Benedicti Paderbornenſis diœceſeos noſtri locupletiſſimi poſſunt eſſe teſtes, ex quorum Bibliotheca cum primi quinque libri Hiſtoriæ Auguſtæ Cornelii Taciti qui deſiderabantur, furto ſubtracti fuiſſent, illique per multas manus ad noſtras tantum perveniſſent; Nos recognitos prius eoſdem quinque libros & correctos à Viris prædictis literatis in noſtra Curia exiſtentibus, cum aliis Cornelii prædicti operibus, quæ extabant, noſtro ſumptu imprimi fecimus. Deinde vero, re compertâ, unum ex voluminibus dicti Cornelii, ut præmittitur, correctum & impreſſum, ac etiam non inordinate ligatum, ad dictos Abbatem & Conventum Monaſterii Corwienſis remiſimus, quod in eorum Bibliotheca loco ſubtracti reponere poſſent. Et ut cognoſcerent ex ea ſubtractione potius eis commodum quam incommodum ortum, miſimus eiſdem pro eccleſia Monaſterii eorum indulgentiam perpetuam. Quocirca vos & veſtrum quemlibet, ea demum qua poſſumus affectione in virtute ſanctæ obedientiæ monemus, hortamur, & ſincerâ in Domino caritate requirimus, ut ſi nobis rem gratam facere unquam animo proponitis, eundem Joannem in dictam veſtram Bibliothecam intromittatis, & exinde tam dictum codicem Livii, quam alios qui ei videbuntur per eum ad nos tranſmitti permittatis, illos eoſdem omnino recepturi, reportaturique à Nobis præmia non vulgaria. Datum Romæ apud S. Petrum, ſub annulo Piſcatoris, die prima Decembris M D XVII. Pontificatûs noſtri anno quinto.

JA. SADOLETUS.

(b) Mr. de Seidel believes, that this Letter was writ to the Canons of Magdeburg, ſince Albert of Brandenburg was Archbiſhop of Mayence, as well as of Magdebourgh.

(A) I ſhall mention ſome of 'em, if only to ſhew.] He ſays, that the Grandees in the Valley of the Countries of the new World, the ſtupid and ſimple Inhabitants might honeſtly and frugally have lived up to the Laws of Nature, and learned Knavery and Debauchery only by their Commerce with the Chriſtians; but generally ſpeaking, the Corruption of the Americans was ſo brutal and Enormous, that we can't ſufficiently deteſt it. The Deſign of our Cieca [a] was to give an entire Hiſtory of Peru in Four Parts: We don't know whether he finiſhed 'em all; but his firſt Part was printed at Seville in the Year 1553. He [β] began it in 1541, and finiſhed it in 1550. He was at [a] See Nicolas Antonio Bibliotheca Scriptor. Hiſp. tom. 2. pag. 146.

[β] Cieca in fine operis.

of Nove, indeavoured to take from their Enemies, as many Women as they could, that they lay with 'em, and reared the Children they had by 'em, very delicately to the Age of Twelve or Thirteen; when finding 'em well fatted, they killed and eat 'em. This among them, was reckoned a moſt delicious Banquet. (a). Let's hear what Treatment the Inhabitants of this Country gave their Priſoners of War. They reduc'd 'em to the Condition of Slaves, they lay with the Women, and eat all the Children that were the Fruit of thoſe Marriages, and afterwards eat the Slaves themſelves, when they were no longer able to get Children. (b) Mangiavano i figlivoli de quei ſchiavi, & poi mangiavano gli iſteſſi ſchiavi quando erano tanto vecchi, che non potevano generare. The firſt time the Spaniards entered this Valley, a great Lord called Nabonuco, came in a friendly manner to ſee 'em, attended by ſome Women; About Bed-time, two of 'em ſtretched themſelves at full Length, on a Carpet, another laid her ſelf a croſs to ſerve as a Pillow to Nabonuco, two others laid themſelves over him for a Quilt. He laid himſelf along upon the two firſt, and taking another Woman by the Hand, who was very handſome, was aſked what he deſigned to do with her; he anſwered, he deſigned to eat her, and beſides to feaſt upon a Child he had got by her. (c) The Author obſerves, that in the Country of Quito, the Women till the Ground, and take care of the Harveſts; and that the Men imploy themſelves only in Spinning, and keeping Houſe (d). They worſhipped the Sun in Peru, and one of the principal Acts of Adoration, was the offering him Six Teeth, which the Votary drew upon the Spot. (e) There were ſeveral Provinces in that Country, where the Ideas of Honour, as to Chaſtity, were wholly extinguiſhed. One of their Diverſions was ſinging the brave Actions of their Anceſtors; This they did dancing to the Sound of a Drum, and drinking till they were drunk; then they took out the Woman they lik'd beſt, and enjoy'd her before all the Company, and no Body found any manner of Fault with it. (f) Alcuni pigliano quelle donne, che gli piacciono, & condottele in certe caſe, sfuocano con quelle la lor luſſuria, non ſolo recando a biaſmo, perche non cognoſcono qual dama ſi conſerva con la verecondia, ne tengono conto di honore, e manco riguardano al mondo. Thus wee ſee what we are to think of thoſe who come and tell us of the good Morals of the Americans, and pretend, we have taught theſe Nations to be wicked, after we had brought the Light of the Goſpel among 'em. The moſt debauch'd Spaniards had never ſeen in their own Country, what they ſaw in the new-found World, Women running after 'em in furious Tranſports of Luſt, and provided with ſome uncommon Philtre to heighten the Pleaſure. See ſome Italian Lines upon it. (g) Nell' Iſtorio del l'Indie natra Amerigo Veſpucci d'eſſer capitato ad una certa coſa, dove trovò femmine di tanta libidine, che come ſpiritate correvano dietro a' ſuoi marinari, perche n'aſſero con eſſo loro; e dice, che havevano una ſugo di non sò che erba, col quale bagnando le parti genitali de gli huomini, non ſolo cagionano, ut citius, ac ſæpius erigerent, ſed etiam quod eorum panis in inſolitam excreſceret magnitudinem: il che piacevo loro mirabilmente.

Here's ſomething ſtill worſe. The Author informs us, that in the Province of Carthagena, the Men look on the Bride's having her Maidenhead, as a Diſhonour, and refuſe to conſummate the Marriage, till this Blot in her Eſcutcheon has been well rubbed out by her Friends or near Relations. In ſome Places they leave this part to the Mother's Skill; but for fear of Deceit, they'll have the Operation perform'd in the Preſence of Witneſſes. (h) In certe parti della provincia Cartagena, quando maritano le figlivole, & ch'ella ſpoſa deve andare à' mariti, le madre della giovane in preſentia d'alcuni ſuoi parenti le taglia la virginità con le dita, & che riputano, che ſia ſtato più honore mandarla à marito ſol corrotta, che con la ſua virginità. Ma tra queſti co-

(a) Pedro Cieca, hiſtoria del Peru, cap. 12. fol. m. 13.

(b) Id. ib. fol. 23. verſo.

(c) Id. ib. fol. 24.

(d) Id. ib. cap. 40. fol. 78. verſo.

(e) Id. cap. 49. fol. 99.

(f) Id. cap. 42. fol. 82. verſo.

(g) Alaſſandro Taſſoni, Penſieri diverſi, lib. 5. cap. 30. pag. 145.

(h) Cieca, cap. 49. Fol. 99.

ſtumi uſati da loro, era miglior di alcune terre, che parenti, ò amici toglievano la virginità alla giovane & con queſta conditione la maritavano, & il marito la riceveva. Diodorus Siculus, aſcribes the ſame Humour to the Iſles (i) which we at preſent call Majorca and Minorca. He affirms (k), that in the Celebration of their Marriages, the Husband did not injoy the Bride till all the Relations and Friends, who were invited to the Wedding-Feaſt, had enjoy'd her round, each according to the Rank which his Age gave him. 'Tis very ſtrange, that a Nation (l) ſo laſcivious, ſhould be ſo little jealous; for generally ſpeaking, the more People are inclin'd to this brutal Pleaſure, the more ſubject they are to Jealouſie. Witneſs the Turks and Moors. The latter are the fartheſt in the World from this Humour of the Americans, in the Province of Carthagena: there's nothing they inſiſt on in the Bride ſo much, as the Maidenhead, and if they are not well convinced they have had it, the Day after the Marriage they ſend her back to her Relations. See de Maroc's Voyages, publiſhed by Mr. de St. Olon, in 1695. There lives a People on the Borders of the Red Sea, who are difficult on this Article, to a degree of Phrenſy, they are not ſatisfy'd, unleſs Precautions are taken from the very Cradle, which oblige the Bridegroom to begin by a kind of Chirurgical Operation. Cardinal Bembo's Latin will let us into the meaning of this. (m) Aliis poſt hos relictis populis, mare rubrum ingreſſi, complures nigrorum item & bonorum hominum, ac bello fortium civitates adierunt: qui natis ſtatim fœminis naturam conſumunt, quoad urina exitus ne impediatur: eaſque cum adoleverint, ſic conſutas in matrimonium collocant; ut ſponſi prima cura ſit, conglutinatas atque coalitas puellæ oras ferro interſcindere: tanto in honore apud homines barbaros eſt non ambigua ducendis uxoribus virginitas. How can Man be ſubject to Follies ſo diametrically oppoſite!

(i) Their old Name was Baleares.

(k) Diodor. Sicul. lib. 5. cap. 18.

(l) The Baleares were ſo laſcivious, that when a Cortair brought Women to their Market, they gave three Males for one Female. Id. ib. cap. 17.

(m) Petrus Bembus, hiſtor. Venet. lib. 6. fol. m. 130.

Let's return to the Americans. The moſt part remove the Grievance themſelves, which their married State might be ſubject to, if the Women contracted came Maids to the Nuptial Bed. One would think they were reſolved to truſt only to themſelves; they leave nothing to do for the Relations or Friends, I mean, that before ever they ſpeak of Contract, or Marriage, they do all they have a Mind to with thoſe they afterwards Marry. (n) Si maritavano alla foggia de i lor vicini: & odo dire, che alcuni, è la maggior parte prima, che ſi maritano, togliono la virginità à quelle luſſuriosamente. However, this Contempt of Virginity is not the general Taſte of the Americans. There are many American Nations, where the Husbands require it; but the greateſt part miſs their Aim, they come too late. (o) La maggior parte de gli Indiani ſi maritano con le figlivole & ſorelle d'altri, ſenza ordine, & pochi trovano le mogli vergini. What the Author obſerves concerning Sodomy, is hideous; 'tis openly and publickly practiced. (p) Non ostante ch'haveſſino molte donne belliſſime, tuttavia (ſi come da loro iſteſſi) usavano publicamente il triſto vicio della ſodomia, & anco ſe ne vantavano alla ſcoperta. There were even Temples, in which it was committed as an Exerciſe of Piety (q); an Abomination unknown to the Paganiſm of ancient Greece, though the Proſtitution of Women in Honour of the Gods, was very common. I have not obſerved in Cieca, that there were any People in this World, but what cover'd their ſecret Parts; but other Relations poſitively affirm it, and with this very ſtrange Circumſtance, that thoſe of the Female Sex, who had their Virginity, concealed nothing, but thoſe who had loſt it, cover'd their Natural Parts. (r) Hiſpanis ulteriora tentantibus, terræ eſt oblata, continens paulo minus decies centena millia paſſuum ab Hiſpaniola protenſa meridiem versus: Atque ea populi ſub rege bellum cum finitimis gerentis occurrerunt: quorum fœmina virum paſſa nullam partem corporis, præter inguinibus, virgines ne illam quidem tegebant. This is very ſurprizing, (n) Cieca, cap. 49. fol. 99.

(o) Idem, cap. 19. fol. 37. verſo.

(p) Idem, cap. 49. fol. 99. verſo. See alſo, cap. 52. fol. 104 verſo.

(q) Idem, cap. 64. fol. 128.

(r) Petrus Bembus ubi ſupra, fol. 127 verſo.

at Lima, the Capital of the Kingdom of Perû, when he put the last Hand to it, and was then Thirty Two Years of Age [a]. This Book has been (B) tranſlated into Italian.

LEONTIUS, an Athenian Philoſopher towards the end of the IVth. Century, had a Daughter whom he inſtructed in the Sciences, and who made an extraordinary Woman. Perceiving, that ſhe was no leſs admirable for the Advantages of the Body, than Talents of the Mind, he believed her Learning and her Beauty might very well ſerve her for a Fortune. For this Reaſon he left her nothing in his Will, dividing all he had between his Two Sons. This Injuſtice of [illegible], was the Occaſion of her coming to the Empire; for ſhe it was, who under the Name of Athenais, appeared ſo agreeable to the Emperor Theodoſius, and the Princeſs Pulcheria, that Theodoſius marry'd her. The Suit ſhe commenced againſt her Brothers, on Account of her Father's Will, obliged her to implore [illegible]'s Protection; and hence came her good Fortune [b]. Father Garaſſe (Z) has [illegible] this. Conſult the Diſſertation [c] which I cite.

LEONCLAVIUS (John) one of the learnedeſt Perſons of the XVth. Century, was born in Weſtphalia, and was much a Gentleman. He ſpent near Two Years in the Court of the Duke of Savoy, on a Buſineſs of Lazarus Swendius [d]; and afterwards travelled a long time in the Retinue of Baron Zerotini. He lived alſo ſome Years in the Family of the Baron of Kiltz. He had been invited to Heidelberg, to be Greek Profeſſor; but the Death of Prince Caſimir made that Invitation uſeleſs [e]. During his Stay in Turkey, he collected excellent Materials for the [illegible] the Ottoman Hiſtory; and 'tis to him the Publick is indebted for the beſt [illegible] Accounts we have of that Empire. He had joined to the Knowledge of the Learned Tongue, a competent Skill in the Law, which qualified him (B) for tranſlating the Baſilicæ. His other ſince the Laws of Decency are every where more relax for Women than for Maids.

[a] Id. ib. [b] See in Mr. Menage, Hiſtoria mulierum philoſopharum in calce Diogenis Laertii, p. 490. The entire Paſſages of the Author Chronici Paſchalis, of Socrates, of Evagrius, of Nicephorus, about the Conſequences of the Wife of Leontius. [c] Sebaſt. Kortholtus de puellis poetriis, pag. 12. & ſeq. [d] He was General of an Army. [e] Taken from Melchior Adam in vitis Philoſophorum, pag. 379. (a) See Cieca, cap. 8. 48. 51. & paſſim alibi. (b) Idem, cap. 43. fol. 17. & cap. 49. fol. 99. (c) Id. ib. (d) Idem, cap. 4. fol. 8. verſo & cap. 20. fol. 39. (e) Idem, cap. 41. fol. 82. verſo. (f) Ibid. (g) Nicol. Anton. Bibliotheca Script. Miſc. tom. 2. pag. 146. (h) Religuus valde abominibus deſiderantur. Id. ib. (i) Somme Theologique, liv. 2. pag. 182.

Note, that this aſtoniſhing Corruption, which had extinguiſhed the Laws of Humanity and Modeſty [illegible] had ſunk theſe People into utter Barbariſm, into the Rage Cuſtoms of Canibals, and the moſt monſtrous Lasciviouſneſs, had not extinguiſhed or ſtifled the Ideas of Religion. They believed the Immortality of the Soul: This appears by all their Funeral Ceremonies (a); they adored the Sun (b), they believed in the Creator of all Things (c), they offered Sacrifices to their Idols, and even ſpared not human Blood (d). The Author obſerves over and over, that they worſhip the Devil; but 'tis under the Notion of a Being extreamly Powerful, and which notwithſtanding its Wickedneſs, has ſomething in him of Divine. Indiani di Tacunga credono l'immortalità dell' anima, quanto intendiamo da loro, & che ut ſia un Creatore del tutto. Conſiderando la grandezza del cielo, il muovimento del Sole, della Luna, & altre coſe maravigliuſe, quantumque accecati dal Demonio, credono, che eſſo habbia poſſanza in ogni coſa. Benche al cuni conoſcendo le ſuemalvagità, & come è ſempre buggiardo, & gli tratta peſſimamente, lo hanno in odio, ma pur l'ubbidiſcono per timore, credendo, che ſia in lui qualche Dività (e). He obſerves, that the Prieſts live holily, and are much (f) reſpected.

(B) Has been tranſlated into Italian.] Nicolas Antonio (g) obſerves, that the Spaniſh Edition of Sevil, 1553, in Folio, was followed the Year after, by that of Antwerp, in Octavo, and by an Italian Edition of Rome, 1555, in Octavo. He ſays, that Auguſtin de Gravaliz is the Author of the Italian Verſion. I add, that it was printed at Venice, Appreſſo Giordano Ziletti, in the Year 1557, in Octavo. This is the Edition I make uſe of, and the Name of the Printer in the Title, but I find in the laſt Page theſe Words: In Vinegia, appreſſo Domenico de Farri, ad inſtantia di M. Andrea Arrivabene M. D. LVI. Nicholas Antonio did not know of this Edition. He ſays, that the other Parts of this Hiſtory (h) were impatiently expected.

(Z) Father Garaſſe has ill related this.] God ſeems to act, ſays he, (i) like the Philoſopher Leontius, in the Days of Yore, who having Three Daughters, one of exquiſite Beauty, and the two others much deformed, left no Fortune to the firſt, ſaying, ſhe was the beſt provided for (as in effect ſhe was, for her Beauty made her an Empreſs) and gave all his Eſtate to the other Two, ſaying, that with all that, they would have enough to do to find Husbands; for all to Ladies of themſelves Beautiful, Good and [illegible] God gives them no other Dowry, &c. The Authors, who ſpeak of Athenais, give her two Brothers, and not two Siſters, ſo that [illegible] his Licentiouſneſs in a modern Au[illegible] only to change theſe Brothers into Siſters, but [illegible] make 'em frightfully Ugly, and put ſuch diſ[illegible] Words into their Father's Mouth.

(d) The beſt Accounts we have of that Empire.] See what Mr. de Thou ſays of him. (k) Juris Romani Gracique conſultiſſimo, & rerum Turcicarum apprime perito; ad quas linguæ ipſius Byzantinæ peregrinationes comparatam cognitionem, eruditam ultima hiſtoria Græca lectionem, & acre ac admirandum judicium attulit, quod non ſolum ſcripta ab ipſo dum viveret publicata, ſed in his quæ poſt mortem ejus edita ſunt, eluxit. Leunclavius compoſed Hiſtoria Muſſulmanica Turcarum libri 18. Apologetici duo, prior eſt libitinarius indem Oſmanidarum; poſterior continet epiſtolas de rebus Turcicis. Commonefactio de præſenti rerum Turcicarum ſtatu. Annales Turcici cum ſupplemento, & pandectis hiſtoriæ Turcicæ. This laſt Work is properly but the Tranſlation of a Book written by the Turks themſelves: I mean of the Turkiſh Annals, which Jerome Beck of Leopoldſdorf, Ferdinand's Embaſſador, brought from Conſtantinople in 1551. [illegible] cauſed them to be tranſlated into High Dutch by [illegible] Spiegelius (l), and afterwards Leonclavius tranſlated them into Latin (m).

(B) For Tranſlating the Baſilicæ.] I mean the Abridgment of the Baſilica: His Work is Intituled Verſio & nota ad ſynopſim 60. librorum Baſilicon, ſeu univerſi juris Romani, & ad novellas Imperatorum. 'Twas Printed at Baſle in the Year 1575. Melchior Adam ſpeaks thus of it: (n) Evulgavit cum annotationibus ſumgnintæ librorum [illegible] universi juris Romani auctoritate principum Romanorum in Græcam linguam tranſtuli, Eclogam ſive Synopſin antea non viſam: item Novellarum antea non publicatarum librum. Mr. Teiſſier muſt give me leave to obſerve, that the manner of his relating this Title may miſlead the Reader: He has alſo Publiſhed, ſays he, (o) ſexaginta libros [illegible], Eclogam ſive Synopſin, & Novellas cum notis. This is ſuppoſing the Baſilica intire together with a ſecond Book intituled Eclogæ ſive Synopſis, and conſequently Multiplies and confounds things. The ſame Author citing Melchior Adam affirms, that [illegible] calls Leonclavius the moſt learned Lawyer [illegible] and ſets him upon above the Great Cujas. [illegible] Melchior Adam ſays not a Word; and beſides what we find in Leunclavius's preface in the ſecond *Scaliger*ana, is much beneath this Character. (p) Bayle [illegible] has wrapped the beſt concerning this [illegible] Leunclavius fuit Weſtphalus, ſed non [illegible] [illegible] appellatus Græca Conſtantinopolitanis [illegible] [illegible] Græca Juriſconſultorum intellexit, [illegible] Verarum non imaginum ex [illegible] [illegible] qui paulo ante obſcura multa [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] clavius debebat ſcorta ſecum. Cluſius cum ab[illegible] other Versions were (C) esteem'd, tho' the Criticks have pretended to find faults in 'em. What he Publish'd of Cæsarius, put James de Billy into a mighty Passion (D). He [a] Died at Vienna in Austria in June 1593. near sixty years of Age [b].

(k) Thuan. lib. 104. ſub fin. (l) Interpreter of the Turkiſh Laws into Ferdinand. (m) [illegible] rum Othmanidarum, de Turciſia lingua ſcriptos, & ſtudio Hieronymi Beck à Leopoldſdorf. [illegible] tinopoli advectos juſſuque Ferdinandi [illegible] (n) Vitis Philoſophor. pag. 38[illegible] (o) Teiſſ. addit. à Eloges, tom. 2. p. 187. (p) Teiſſ. ibid. pag. 186. (q) Scaligerana p. m.

LEONICENUS (Nicholas) was Born at Lunigo in Latin Leonicum, in the Vicentine in Italy in 1428. He taught Physick in the University of Ferrara for above sixty years [c]. He was not only excellent in his Profession; but also very well vers'd in the liberal Arts. He was the first [d] that Translated Galen's Works into Latin. As admirable [illegible] his Learning was, his Virtue was much more so. No Body could be more di[illegible]g'd from the Pleasures of Sence. Sobriety, Chastity, and a Contempt of sordid Gain were the distinguishing Vertues of his Life, (A); and 'twas to this great purity of Manners, that he (B) attributed the vigourous Health he enjoy'd to an extream old Age; for he (BΔ) lived ninety six years. His Merit must needs have been Illustrious, since the [illegible]ligers (C) mention it with commendation. I question whether we are [illegible] what one of them says, that Leonicenus afflicted (D) with the

[a] Melch. Adam. ubi supra.

[b] Thuan. Hist l. 104. sub. fin.

[c] Merclinus in Lindenio renovato, p. 837.

[d] Primus Græca Galeni volumina Latinè interpretando studiosis perdiscenda demonstravit. Jovius Elog. c. 70.

familiarissimè. Thus speaks the second *Scaliger*ana. Leonclavius's Learning is more praised in it than his Morals, since we are here inform'd that he always kept a Punk in his House. Let us not forget his Jus Græco-Romanum (a) in two Volumes in folio, and his nota ad paratitla seu ad collectionem constitutionum Ecclesiasticarum (b) in 8vo.

(a) Græcè & Latinè, à Francfort. 1560.

(b) At Francfort 1593.

(C) His other Ve[illegible] were esteem'd, tho' the Criticks.] (c) 'He [illegible] of the famousest Translators, that Germ[illegible] ever produc'd. He has 'given us the Version of Xenophon three times 'Revis'd; that of Zosimus; that of the Annals of 'Constantine Manasses; and of those of Michael 'Glycas; [illegible] of the Abridgement of the sixty 'Books [illegible] Basilica; and of several Works of 'St. [illegible] Nazianzen——He has [illegible] 'Corre[illegible]xylander's Versions of Dion, and the [illegible] 'Chalcondyle by Clausar. Mr. Baillet, whose Words these are, Ushers 'em in with the Praises, Mr. Huet has given this Translator. They are very Advantagious. The Notes on Zosimus in the English Edition 1679, don't give such an Idea of this Man's Capacity. Henry Stephens furiously Criticiz'd his Translation of Xenophon and had several unlucky charges of his Adversary to get over. Mr. Baillet mentions this Dispute; This is what Melchior Adam tells us of it. (d) Litem tamen ei super ista interpretatione Xenophontea criticam & Grammaticam movit Henricus Stephanus, vir & typographus clarissimus, edita in ejus errores insignes inquisitione autoschediastica. Contra & Leonclavius de Stephano conqueritur, quod contra fidem datam, & præter officium viri boni, Xenophontis à se Latinè redditi exemplar, sicut & Zosimi, detrimerit. Et fassus est Stephanus accepisse se illam Xenophontis versionem ab [illegible]ter octodecim; post tredecim aut quatuordecim amplius annis sibi non visam, sed cum è sua suppellectile libraria, militum incuria, tempore aliquos libri incendio periissent: nescivisse, an in illorum numero Xenophon à Leonclavio versus, fuisset. Tandem, interjecto anni amplius spacio, librum inventum fuisse, situ obsitum, & membrana crassa, qua involutus erat, conservatum.

(c) [illegible] quæstionibus & responsis Philosophicis, præcipuè verò Theologicis.

(d) Melch. Adam. ubi supra.

(D) Of Cæsarius put James de Billy into a mighty Passion.] Leonclavius Published four Dialogues (e) of Cæsarius, Brother to St. Gregory Nazianzen, which he had Translated into Latin. 'Tis disputed whether this Work ought to be Ascribed to Cæsarius. Father Labbé has put off the inquiry to another time. Plura, says he (f), adversus Leonclavium primum eorum (dialogorum) editorem declamavit Jacobus Billius Prunæus præfatione in decimam orationem sancti Nazianzeni, qua alias expendemus accuratius. Lambecius (g) espouses Leonclavius warmly against James de Billy's Invectives.

(e) [illegible]

(f) De Scriptor. Eccles. Tom. x. p. 217.

(g) Lambectus, Biblioth. Cæsar. l. 4. p. 31. & sequent.

(A) Sobriety, Chastity, and an Aversion for sordid Gain.] [illegible] had not been of a gay Humour, and [illegible]miliar, he might have pass'd for a true Scrick[illegible]at little, Drank less, abstained from Wine [illegible] Women; all Dishes were alike to him; he took without choice whatever Food was set before him, and could hardly distinguish one Piece of Money from another: (b) Cibi & vini maximè abstinens, somnique minimi, præsertim verò Veneris continentissimus, usque adeo mollioris vitæ voluptatibus addixit, ut pecuniæ, luxuria instrumentum, quanquam quidem merito nota contemneret [illegible]um, & nulla delectum cura cibum caperet; [illegible]um & fortunæ quærentes——cum hercle perfectum & fortunatum præstet, nisi honesto ori liberalis hilaritas officium præstet,

(B) That he Atributed the vigourous Health.] This Paulus Jovius tells us as from his own Mouth. (i) Quum ego aliquando comiter ab eo peterem, ut ingenuè proferret, quonam arcano artis uteretur, ut tanto corporis atque animi vigore vitia senectutis eluderet: Vividum, inquit, ingenium perpetua, Jovi, vitæ innocentia, salubre verò corpus, hilari frugalitatis præsidio facilè tuemur. He had been saying (k) that Leonicenus at ninety years of Age had all his Senses perfect, and a very faithful Memory; that he Walked without a Stuck, and did not stoop, tho' very tall. By the way a Virtuous Life has not always the effect, which Leonicenus Ascribes to it. There are those, who might dispute the Crown of Chastity and Sobriety with him, and whose Conscience is as clear as his, whose [illegible]withstanding are few and evil, they liv'd [illegible]ort while, and yet were often Sick.

[illegible]ll add to Paulus Jovius another Witness. I remember a Passage in Melchior Adam, by which one might gather, that Leonicenus had told Paul Langius his Disciple, that he took the Chastity of his Youth to be the cause of his long Life. (l) Audivit in Italia (Joannes Langius) —— Nicolaum Leonicenum, Dioscoridis illustratorem: qui annum ætatis attigit nonagesimum sextum, cum amplius sexaginta annos Ferrariæ docuisset. Hic dixit, se viridi vegetâque uti senectâ, quia castam juventutem virili ætati tradidisset: edidisseque opusculum, in quo omnibus ægris salutem & vitam rationi conciliarique posse docuit. You see in this Passage that he was the Author of a Book designed to maintain, that all kind of Distempers were curable. Undoubtedly he excepted that of old Age, at least Acknowledged this Distemper incurable. He had the experience of it; for observe what Langius an Eye-Witness says of him. (m) Ferrariam igitur veni[illegible], ubi Leonicenum, elegantioris medicinæ illustratorem, admodum senem, & jam ex senio marasmo tabescentem, convenimus: quem, senile ætatis ejus decus veveriti, perplexis de erroribus Plinii problematibus obtundere nolebamus. The Letter, in which Langius says this, is without Date: And therefore we can't judge by it, whether Paul Jovius is mistaken as to the Vigour of Old Leonicenus.

(i) Ibid. p. 163.

(k) Pervenit ad nonagesimum annum integerrimis sensibus, vegetaque memoria, nec incurva quidem cervice, quum esset statura celsissima & time Scipione venerabilis. Id. ibid.

(l) Melch. Adam in vitis Medicor. p. 140. 141.

(m) Joannes Langius Epist. Medicin. 2. l. 2. p. m. 472.

(BΔ) He lived 96 years.] Naudæus is mistaken, when he makes him live above a Century. I shall give his own Words because they contain other very curious matters. Hippocrates, Galenus, Avenzoar, Leonicenus, cogitate vos quantum tempore, loco, vivendi ratione inter se discrepantes, hoc uno vitæ termino plane conveniunt, quem omnes ultra centesimum annum protraxere (n).

(n) Naudæus in Pentade quæst. Latrophilolog. p. m. 44.

(C) The two Scaligers mention it with commendation.] See in what Terms: (o) Leonicenus à patre semper imprimis commendatus, & Medicorum sui temporis facilè princeps judicatus. Thus for the Father: And as for the Son. De eo viro non nisi honorificè prædicare debemus, vel eo nomine quod primus Philosophiam & Medicinam ipsam cum humaniores Philosophiam & Medicinam ipsam cum humaniores litteris conjunxit. Primus enim ille nos docuit, homines quæ sint bonis literis Medicinam tractant, esse similes iis qui in alieno foro litigant (p).

(o) Scaligerana prima, p. m. 97.

(p) Joseph. Scaliger ep. 19. p. 104.

(D) Afflicted with the Falling-Sickness in his Youth and Infirmary of Life.] Mirum prætereà, continuus hic [illegible]ensis de viro. A puerilis, hoc è cunabulis ipsis [illegible] unum morbo exhibitus adeo vexabatur, [illegible]ud sævedierat, pertimuit vitæ plane sibi manus [illegible]. Sed post trigesimum annum plane eo male [illegible], omnibus membrorum ita functum officiis int[illegible] nulla morbi suspicione ad 94. annum per- the Falling-Sickness in his Youth, was so weary of Life, that he had like to have laid violent Hands on himself. This able Physician wrote (E) several excellent Works, and had a good Vein at Poetry. (F) He Died in 1524. He set up for a mighty Critick on Pliny, which did not please his Disciple Caleagninus, whose Words (G) I shall cite. They make much for the honour of Leonicenus.

He did not apply himself to the Practice of Physick; and being asked the Reason, he « Answered, that he did more service by Teaching other Physicians, than if he himself made Visits to the Sick.

« Idem mihi respondit Nicolas Leonicenus Ferrariæ, demiranti cur artem medicandi quam profitebatur ipse non exerceret, plus, inquit, agit docens omnes medicos. Erasm. Apoph. theg. l. 3. p. m. 163.

LEONIN (Elbert or Engelbert) in Flemish De Leew, a Native of the Isle of Bommel in Guelderland, was one of the ablest Lawyers of the XVIth. Century, and well vers'd in State Affairs. He studied first in his Native Country, then at Utrecht, afterwards at Emmeric, and last of all at Louvain. He did not confine himself to the Study of Humanity in this last Town, under the learned Petr Mannius, but apply'd to the Law, and became a Licentiate in that Faculty in 1547. He afterwards went to Arras to learn the French Tongue, returned to Louvain at the years end, and Married a Daughter (A) of the first Professor of the Civil Law. A Professor's Chair in the Canon Law becoming vacant in the second year of his Marriage, he was Nominated to fill it. This he did most worthily, and grew famous as well by his Lectures, as by his Answers, to several Law Cases sent him from all Parts of Europe. He Succeeded Gabriel Mudæus first Professor of Civil Law in 1566, and from that time saw his Reputation daily increase; the great Lords and Magistrates of the Low-Countries condescending to Visit and Consult him. Even those, who were at Variance among themselves, agreed in intrusting him with their most secret Affairs and Differences, and refus'd not his Arbritation, tho' the Obstinacy of their Passions rendered ineffectual his endeavours to reconcile 'em. He had the honour to be intimately beloved by the Prince of Orange; and this was one Reason, why he never would return into the Interests of the King of Spain, after he had once embraced that of the Lords and Provinces Associated in defence of their Liberty. I shall give (B) his other Reasons below. He was chosen Chancellor of Guelderland after the Death of Arch-Duke Matthias in 1581. And one of the Embassadors of the States to the King of France after the pervenit. Et si bene memini, triduo antequam decederet è vita, operam dederat lectioni. Here's a condition to be envy'd; not because Leonicenus lived 96 years; that alone were a poor thing, and rather a Curse than a Blessing; but because he had preserv'd to this old Age the use of his Understanding, his Memory and his Senses, and that his last Sickness was (†) very short.

† I speak thus, having a regard to the Passage of Scaliger and not to that of Langius. (a) Jovius ubi supra, p. 162. (b) He says also, that Imperiorum lacrymis publicatis summa eloquentiæ commendatio occurrerat. Ibid. (c) Id. ib. p. 163. (d) Celius Rhodigin. Antiq. lect. l. 6. c. 16. p. m. 298. (e) He calls him nostri temporis plane coryphæus, an liv. 26. c. 30. (f) Lilius Gregor. Gyraldus de Poëtis suorum tempor. dial. 2. p. m. 564. (g) Apud Erasm. in Epistol. 54. l. 20. p. 1019. Mr. Pope Blount attributes this to Erasmus

(E) Leonicenus wrote several excellent Works.] The Translation of many Tracts of Galen, of Hippocrates's Aphorism and Aristotle's first Book De partibus animalium. De Plinii & plurium aliorum Medicorum in medicina erroribus. De tribus doctrinis ordinatis secundum Galeni sententiam. De formativa virtute. De Dipsade & pluribus aliis serpentibus, quadam de herbis & fructibus, animalibus, metallis. De morbo Gallico, sive Neapolitano. Contra fautorum translationum obtrectatores apologia. A Book Intituled Antisophista, which made Paulus Jovius say, that (a) nemo errores Sophistarum importuna garrulitate cuncta fedantium eloquentius atque validius (b) confutavit (quàm Leonicenus.) He Translated (c) Dion's History into Italian, and Lucian's Dialogues to oblige Hercules Duke of Ferrara, who did not understand Latin. I forgot his Treatise De vipera, against which Rhodinus tells us a Learned Man has written. (d) Nec me fallit ex eruditioribus quemdam edito etiam libello, Marassum à vipera disparasse, quo Nicolai Leonicensi viri undecunque scientissimi (e) placita uberius de hujus animalis natura convellat.

(F) Had a good Vein at Poetry.] This Giraldi assures us. Erat & Leonicenus merito inter poëtas collocandus, nam cùm senex optimos versus faceret, & interdum è Græco in Latinum transferret, tum in juvenili suâ ætate non modo meditatos argutè & doctè composuit, sed etiam ut sæpè mihi memorare solitus fuit, ex tempore & impræmeditata carmina cecinit (f).

(G) I shall cite the Words of Caleagninus.] They are found in a Letter he writ to Erasmus the sixth of July 1525. Leonicenus medicus, says he (g), jam mensis aliquot hunc vitæ minimum absolvit, vir ad æternitatem natus, quem ego ultimum heroum & aurei sæculi reliquias appellabam. Ea illa enim ætate quæ magnum habuit ingeniorum provenum, & Hermolaos, Politianos, Picos, Ficinos, Merulas, Domitios, nobis tulit, hic ultimus decessit jam propè centenarius, integris, quod mirum videatu, adhuc sensibus. Multa scripsit, multa versis Græcis, multa in Sylva medica jam emendatiora nobis restituit, Adversus barbaros medicos perpetuas inimicitias exercuit: quin & Plinium, à quo proposito frustra hominem sæpe deterrui, inclementer nimis semper insectatus est. Denique quod paucis contigit, ultimam posteritatem suam vidit: ejus obitum acerbè tulit, tum privato nomine, fuerat enim mihi præceptor, tum publico: videbam enim rem Latinam ejus morte insigni plagam accepisse.

(A) And Married a Daughter of the first Professor of the Civil Law.] Her Name was Barbe (b) de Haze. If her Husband deserv'd the Sirname (i) Longolius on account of his tallness, she deserv'd a particular Sirname on account of her long Life. Valerius André (k) tells us, she lived 52 years with her Husband, and 36 a Widow. She was twelve at least when she Married. Add these numbers together, and they'll make an intire Century. There will be no Error in the Calculation, tho' there is in Valerius André's way of reckoning: according to him we must allow at least a year betwixt the Licence and the Marriage of Leonin: The Licence was taken out in 1547: Leonin must be Married then in the year 1548, now he Died in 1598. How then can it be said that he lived 52 years with his Wife? All this I know appears from his Epitaph (l) but we ought to conclude from it, that he Married Barbe de Haze in 1546, and Valerius André is to blame in not seeing his fault Computation.

(b) Valer. Andreas Bibl. Belg. p. 197. (i) Id. ib. (k) Vixit in primo atque unico matrimonio annos quinquaginta duos. Superstes vidua Returnlam ad suos reversa annis XXXVI, marito supervixit. Id. ib. p. 199. (l) It's to be found at length in the Athenæ Belgicæ of Sweert, p. 225. 226.

(B) I shall give his other Reasons below.] We find in him a rare Example of Constancy, for being once imbarked with the States, he unalterably continued the same course till his Death, tho' a Zeal for Religion was no tie on him. 'Tis no extraordinary thing to see People Die in the Party they have espoused at the beginning of a Faction or Revolution; but if the Train of such an Enterprize has been long and perplexed, one while Favourable, another Disadvantagious, you commonly see the same Persons quit and Re-espouse three or four times the same Interest, and 'tis the greatest Chance if they end as they began. Death seizes 'em, when they are returned to their first starting place: Some years more would have caused 'em to repair perhaps to the opposite Standard. The surest way of preventing ficklenesse, is either to embrace out of an Ardent Zeal, the Religion of the Revolting Party, or so to irritate your Prince, as to leave no room for confiding in the Indemnity promised; nothing of all this was the cause of Leonin's Constancy, which was very long and without interruption. What then was the Death of the Prince of Orange in 1584, he made the Speech [a] at the Audience they had of Henry III, and in the Conferences concerning the Offer of the Sovereignty. He Harangued at the Hague in the Name of the ſame States the Earl of Leiceſter, whom the Queen of England had given 'em for Governour. He work'd himſelf into the good Graces of this Earl, and the other Engliſh Lords, and adviſed 'em to exerciſe their Authority with Moderation; but contrary Counſels prevail'd. He Died at Arnheim [b] the fourth of December 1598. in the 79*th*. year of his Age [c]. He never Profeſſed the Proteſtant Religion, and behav'd himſelf (C) ſomewhat too freely on this Head. We have ſeveral (D) Books of his Writing.

[a] His Epitaph in Swert Athen. belg. p. 225. imports that it was the 6th.

[b] Taken from Valerius André Bibloth. Belg. p. 179. & ſeqq.

[c] Taken from Lipſius Cent. 3. Ep. 68. I have quoted the Manuals under the Article of Epicurus.

LEONTIUM, an Athenian Courtezan, made her ſelf famous firſt by her Lewdneſs, and next by her Application to the Study of Philoſophy. The ſecond Profeſſion would have repair'd the Diſgrace of the firſt, if Leontium had renounc'd the buſineſs of Love, when ſhe betook her ſelf to Philoſophy; but 'tis ſaid ſhe abated nothing of her Pleaſures; and that following Epicurus's Sect, ſhe Proſtituted her ſelf to all his School. 'Tis ſaid too that he himſelf came in for a ſnack, and that he made no ſecret of it [a]. They who pretend, that the Scandals raiſed on his Morals, are a Malicious Imputation of his Enemies, won't own there paſs'd any thing diſhoneſt betwixt him and Leontium; but they can't deny, that he has expreſs'd a deal of Friendſhip for her [b] in his Letters: This they can't allow without leaving room for ſcurvy Conſequences. She was either the Wife or the Concubine of Metrodorus [c], and had a Son by him, whom Epicurus recommended to his Executors. This affords an Argument againſt the Letter, in which 'tis ſuppoſ'd ſhe complains of the Moroſe and Diſguſtful Humour of this old Gallant. Some take her for (A) the ſame Leontium, who was Miſtreſs to the Poet Hermeſianax. There's more certainty that ſhe were his Motives theſe. He injoy'd the intimacy and particular Friendſhip of the Prince of Orange. This made him ſuſpected by the Royaliſts and by the King himſelf. They believed he was an Accomplice in the Rebellion; this however, ſays he, was a Falſhood (a), but he did not think fit to truſt thoſe who falſly ſuſpected him. Beſides he was a Counſellor of State to the New Republick, he had been employ'd in the greateſt Affairs: (b) He thought it a Villany to reveal 'em to the other Party, as he muſt have done, if he had changed ſides. Beſides he was of Solon's Opinion, that in Civil Wars, an honeſt Man ought to embrace the weakeſt ſide, and the moſt expoſed to danger. (c) Sed & Solonis dictum, inquit, ac conſilium ob oculos habebam, quod Ioues vir in civilibus diſſenſionibus partem eligere debeat inferiorem, & magis periculoſam. A Man muſt be a thorow Philoſopher, to give ſuch Advice, and much more ſo to follow it. But how comes it, that Solon did not adviſe to ſtick by the reaſonable ſide? I believe we may anſwer for him, that each of the contending Parties, in a Republick, Alledge the Publick good, and that with ſuch a train of Objections, and Anſwers, that private Perſons can't eaſily diſtinguiſh the right from the wrong. What remains then, but to engage in the leaſt powerful Faction? The reaſon's plain, becauſe it's generous to aſſiſt the weak againſt the ſtrong, and becauſe the Temptation to commit Acts of Injuſtice is greater in the prevailing, than in the weaker Faction. You'll ſay that one would be no more moderate than the other, if it had equal power. I grant it; but as long as Inability deprives it of occaſions of Tyranny, you ought to ballance and avoid being an Abettor of Violences. If it becomes uppermoſt, quit it, for fear it ſhould draw you into oppreſſive Methods in its turn. This by the by, and on occaſion of Solon's Maxims, with this Corrective, however, that at the bottom, you know not which is right and which wrong.

[a] See the Article of Epicurus. (b) Laertius de vitis Philoſoph. l. 10. n. 5.

(a) Veniſſet in ſuſpicionem apud Regios, a que etiam Regem ipſum alicujus molitionis contrariæ, &c, quod deceritus, ſeditioſorum conſilius conſentire diceretur, quodà ſe ſcribit fuiſſe alieniſſimum. Valer. Andr. ib. p. 198.

(b) Idem ib.

(c) Id. ib.

(C) Somewhat too freely on this Subject.] He would have Religion reduc'd to a great ſimplicity, and all left to the Judgement of God and the Angels, that exceeds the reach of Humane Underſtanding. We ought, ſays he, to admire and adore the Deity rather than define it. (d) Ego ſimplicem religionem ampleƈtendam ſemper prædicavi, & etiam nunc prædico, prorſus divina & humani ingenii captum excedentia, divinitati & ſecreto Dei atque Angelorum judicio relinquens: honorandam potiùs & admirandam divinitatem quàm definiendam judicavi. Enixè laboravi, ut nimium ſubtiles diſputationes è Republica ejicerentur, de quo memini in Oratione ad Ordines habita, quæ poſt primam Centuriam Conſiliorum meorum impreſſa eſt. St. Aldegonde could find nothing that was not valuable in him, except his Averſion to Theological Subjects: You are Shipwracked, ſays he, Writing to him, on thoſe Maxims do no injury, live honeſtly, &c. To me this looks like making the Labours of the Prophets and Apoſtles of no effect. (e) Illustris Leoninus, Hugenus Altada, atque inter proceres religionis reformatæ nunquam nomen deleturi. Ille honeſtate civili contentus, religionem omnem ſuſpexit atque habebat: nec enim ipſi graphicè ſcripſit Ibid. Epiſt. Belgarum centur. 2. ad fin. [illegible] eſt in te quod non ſit ſuaviſſimum, ſi hæc omnia non eſſent, quod nimium es affectus. Dum convivas illis formulis, quid dee formulis? vos omnes, Neminem lædere, honeſtè vivere, aliſque tam quam ſcopulis inhærere, vobis mihi Apoſtolorum omnium ac Prophetarum libertas omnem pompam inanem ducere. The place here cited, is upon the three Illuſtrious Men who Died in the new Countries in 1598, deſerves our notice. The (f) [illegible] beginning with publick Affairs, grew [illegible] treat. But the third call'd [illegible] his Cloſet to the acquiring [illegible] ſpent the reſt of his Life [illegible] Speaks of our Leoninus, that [illegible] derivd from Nature, what the Precepts of the Old Philoſophers aimed at; he was in a manner free from Paſſion, he followed the Republican Party, not through Intereſt or Prejudice, but becauſe he found himſelf Embark'd in it. (g) Illustris Leoninus in umbra ſtudiorum quondam educatus, & ante pacem Gandavenſem regiarum partium miniſter, tunc ſum mus Gelriæ juridicus conſulus publicus immunebatur, homo naturæ conſpicuus, quo veterum magiſtrum præcepta minutius, ut affectu pene omni vicerit, alios quidem, ut partes quoque non ſtudio ullo, ſed quæ ſic invenerat, ſequeretur.

(f) The [illegible] Commonwealth.

(g) Gerardus Hiſpanus de vitis Hiſtoricis Belgicis, l. 7. p. 570. Edit. Amſtel. 1708. in 12.

(D) We have ſeveral Books of his Writing.] Moſt of 'em came out after his Death: As we may know by the dates added to the following Titles: Centuria conſiliorum, at Antwerp 1584 in 8. We ſee at the end of this Work Oratio habita in conventu Ordinum Generalium, Antwerpiæ, anno 1579. tempore Colloquii Colonienſis, de bello, reformanda pace per Belgium. His ſeven Books Emendationum ſive Obſervationum, were Printed at Arnheim in 1610, in 4to. Prælectiones ad tit. Cod. de jure Emphyteutico, at Francfort 1600. in 8vo. ad libr. Cod. in quo tituli & leges omnes ad uſum fori criminalis explicantur, at Cologne 1604. in 4to. Commentarius ad tit. D. de uſufructu, Leyden 1609. in 8vo. His Diſſertation, De Imperatore Belgii vulgo Lombardis was Publiſhed by Boxhorn (h). I omit ſeveral Books (i) he deſigned for the Preſs, which are kept in his Grandſon Albert Zoſius's Cloſet Advocate of Utrecht.

(h) Taken from Valer. Andr. ubi ſupra p. 199.

(i) Valer. Andr. ib. gives the Titles of 'em.

(A) The ſame Leontium, who was Miſtreſs to Hermeſianax.] Athenæus ſpeaks (k) of this Miſtreſs, and produces a long Copy of Verſes, taken out of the third Book of Elegies, which Hermeſianax had wrote in praiſe of Leontium. Mr. Me-

(k) Lib. 13. p. 597. c

she applied her self in good earnest to (B) to Philosophy, and even became (C) an Author. Note, that her Metrodorus was one of the chief Disciples of Epicurus. She had a Daughter, who carry'd her self very ill, and died (D) a violent Death, as we shall see below.

LEOVITIUS (Cyprian) a famous Astronomer. He set up for Astrological Predictions, but had no Success in them. Bodin has censured (A) him severely. Lewis Guyon (B) copying Bodin as a true Plagiary, knew not how to make use of what nage (a) is of Opinion, that she is the same with Epicurus's good Friend; and Censures Vossius for reckoning (b) Hermesianax in the number of the Poets, whose Age is unknown. This Poet's Verses preserv'd by Athenæus, contain a long List of Amorous Persons; and 'tis probable the whole Work turned on some such Subject; for Antoninus Liberalis has taken (c) from the second Book of these Elegies an History of Love. Parthenius has taken from the same Poet the 5th. and 22d. of his Stories. As to the 22d. he cites Hermesianax in general, but as to the fifth, he cites him thus Ἑρμησιάναξ ἐλεγείᾳ. It is plain we must read (d) Ἀντίμαχος, and not Ἀλκαῖος. Mr. Menage adds that Hermesianax writ an excellent Poem upon his native City Colophon, mentioned by Pausanias (e). Doubtless Vossius misled Mr. Menage by these Words: (f) Hermesianax Colophonius, poëta Elegiacus de patria Colophone egregium carmen condidit, ut ex Pausania cognoscere est. Pausanias leaves no room for Ascribing such a performance to him. He only says he do's not believe Hermesianax was Alive, when Lysimachus destroy'd the City of Colophon; for, adds he, he'd certainly have Lamented the Ruin of this City in some part of his Poems. (g) Ἑρμησιάναξ δὲ ὁ τὰ ἐλεγεῖα γράψας οὐκ οἶδα εἰ ἔτι ἐπὶ τοῦ Λυσιμάχου ἔζησεν· ἐπεὶ γοῦν καὶ ἐν ἐκείνοις ἐποίησε μνήμην τῆς Κολοφῶνος ἁλώσεως. Phœnix Colophonius iamborum scriptor eam excisionem deploravit; nam Hermesianax qui elegos scripsit, ad illud usque tempus superstitem fuisse non crediderim, neque enim is in aliqua earminum suorum parte excisam Colophonem non deflesset. You see he had been speaking of the Poet Phœnix, a Native of Colophon, who had written Elegies on that Subject. We may collect from this Passage of Pausanias, that Hermesianax was Cotemporary with Epicurus, and therefore Chronology will allow 'em both to love the same Leontium. Pausanias would not have expressed himself as he did, if this Elegiack Poet had preceded Epicurus many Years. Note, that this Lysimachus, who destroyed Colophon, is one of those who shar'd the Conquests of Alexander.

(a) Menagius Histor. mulierum philosopharum, ad calcem Diogenis Laertii, p. 498. n. 70.

(b) In Tractu de poet. Græcis.

(c) Metamorph. c. 30.

(d) See Vossius de Hist. Græc. p. 374.

(e) Est autem Hermesianax ille, idem qui de patria Colophone egregium carmen condidit Pausaniæ memoratum. Menagius ubi supra.

(f) Vossius de Poetis Græcis p. 90.

(g) Pausanias l. 1. p. 8.

(B) She applied her self in earnest to Philosophy.] Hence it was that the Painter Theodorus drew her in a Meditating Posture. (h) Leontium Epicuri cogitantem.

(h) Plinius l. 35. c. 11. p. m. 236.

(C) Became an Author.] She wrote against Theophrastus, who was one of the greatest Pillars of Aristotle's Sect, and the Ornament of his Age. Cicero informs us, that this Book was very politely Written. Non modo Epicurus, says he (i), & Metrodorus, & Hermachus contra Pythagoram, Platonem, Empedoclemque dixerunt, sed meretricula etiam Leontium contra Theophrastum scribere ausa est, scito quidem illa sermone & Attico, sed tamen tantum Epicuri hortus haluerit licentiæ, & solutis queri. These last Words have exercised the Criticks; they construe 'em several Ways, and I question whether any of 'em has hit on the right; however, we know the drift of the Author. He would exaggerate the Licentiousness of Epicurus's School; the better to effect this, he alledges the Confidence of Leontium. But Cicero, as great an Orator as he was, has not been so happy as Pliny, in giving a lively Idea of the Indignity he conceived in Leontium's Enterprize. We learn from Pliny, that this Woman's Boldness occasioned a Proverb, the meaning of which was, that there was no Remedy but a Rope, if Men of the greatest Parts were insulted at this Rate. (k) Ceu vero nesciam adversus Theophrastum, hominem in eloquentia tantum ut nomen divinum inde invenerit; scripsisse etiam feminam & proverbium vide Natum suspendio arborem eligendi.

(i) De natura Deorum l. 1. p. m. 135.

(k) Hier. in præfat.

(D) A Daughter, who——died a violent Death, as we shall see.] She was called Dan[illegible] point of Gallantry she followed her Mother[illegible] but I don't know whether ever she trouble[illegible]ad with Philosopy. Athenæus says nothing [illegible]nd he is the only Author, from whom I le[illegible]thing of her. He says (l) she took up [illegible]fession of a Courtezan, and became Concu[illegible]ophron, Governour of Ephesus. She insinuated her self also into the Favour of Laodice, even so far as to be her Oracle and Confident. Understanding that Laodice designed to p[illegible]n to Death, she gave him the Signal to re[illegible]he Hint; and pretending to have [illegible]something, without which he could not answer [illegible]the Point, upon which he was examined. He obtained time to recollect himself, but he appeared no more, and escaped by Night to Corinth. Laodice had no sooner discovered, that Danae was the Cause of his Escape, but she condemned her to the Precipice; Danae knowing her Death unavoidable, was haughty enough not to answer to Laodice's Interrogatories; but she was not so silent, as she went to E[illegible]on; she dropt a most insolent Murmur again[illegible]vidence. 'Tis not without reason, said he, t[illegible]o many despise the Gods; the only recompence they give me for saving the Life of my Husband, is a Precipice: Whilst Laodice, who has murthered hers, enjoys a Crown (m).

(l) Cum ad præcipitium duceretur, dixisse, à multis non injuria Deos contemni. Nam quod, inquit, vitum meum servavi, hanc mihi gratiam Dii rependunt: quod autem Laodi[illegible] m[illegible] tertiecerit, in maximo honore[illegible]ft, Id ibid. ex Phylarcho.

(m) Ἀπεγγελάντων δὲ ἐπὶ τὸν προμηθευόμενον, ὡς δύναιτο τὴν ψυχὴν μὴ ἀνδρὸς σώσασα, τοιούτου χάριτα παρὰ τῆς δεσποίνης λαμβάνει. Ἀσεβῆσαι δὲ τὸν ἴδιον ἀνδρα δοκοῦσα, παλαιότατα τιμᾶς ἐξέτισε.

(A) Bodin has censureed him severely.] His Words are these. (n) Leovitius [illegible]foretold as a certainty, that Maximilian the E[illegible]r should be universal Monarch of Europe, to [illegible] the Tyranny of other Princes——which is [illegible] yet come to pass, and there's no great likelyhood it ever will. But he did not foretel what happen'd a Year after this Prophecy, that Sultan Solyman should besiege and force the strongest Place (o) of the Empire, nay of Europe, in the sight of the Emperor and Imperial Army, without the least Opposition——It's very strange, that Leovitius should see nothing of the great Changes which have happen'd in his three Neighbouring Kingdoms; how could he foreknow the end of the World, which has not been revealed to the Angels? The only reason he gives is this, that the Religion of Jesus Christ, and the World, must end under the Aequatique Triplicity, since Jesus Christ was born under it; hereby supposing a second Deluge; which is no less impious than ignorant, even upon the Maxims of Astrologers, who agree, that no Planet ever ruined its own House. Now its certain, that Jupiter is in Pisces in the great Conjunction of the Year M D LXXXIII. and LX[illegible] and that the Conjunction of these two Plane[illegible] always amicable, if we take the Authority of Plato[illegible] Timæus, or that of the Hebrews, who say, that the Dissolution of the World is caused successively, first by Water, and afterwards by Fire. Add to this Passage, that (p) of the 554th. Page, where we see, that this Astrologer had precisely fixed the end of the World to the Year 1584. Since he has so positively asserted it, that [illegible] of [illegible]; ib. cannot be any ways doubted, why wou'd he cut out A[illegible] manacks for Thirty Years after the end of the World? Is a question Bodin (q) very reasonably asks. But this supposes, that Leovitius's Ephemerides extended to the Year 1614. Yet Gesner's Epitome, Thuanus (r), and many others Witness, that they reached only to the Year 1606. They were printed at Augsburgh in 1557. As to his Prognostiton in viginti annos, it was printed in 1564, and translated into French the Year following. This is the Book Bodin has in his Eye, when he charges Leovitius with Ignorance about the taking of Sigeth.

(n) [illegible]ciat. Bodin, il. pag. 554. (q) Ibid. (r) Thuan. lib. 5[illegible]109. (s) In the 2d. Volume of his Diverses lecons, pa[illegible]. & seq. (u) Thus he calls him.

(o) That's to say, Sigeth. See the [illegible] of

(p) Cyprian Leovitius affirms in his Writings, that the End the World will happen in the Year 1584. Procul dubio, says he, alterum adventum filii Dei & hominis in majestate gloriæ suæ

(B) Lewis Guyon, copying Bodin, [illegible] know how to make use of.] The Twenty t[illegible]pter of Guyon's (s) third Book, contains h[illegible]ny thing but what is taken from Bodin, both [illegible]to the Matter and Expression, and yet Bodin is not so much as once cited by him. Besides, Lewis Guyon makes a very ill use of Bodin's Observations; I'll give [illegible]an Instance of it. Leovitius (t) had foretold, says he (u), as a certainty, that Maximilian the Emperor should

what he stole; but he tells a pleasant Story enough about the Fright (C) Leovitius put People in by his false Prediction of the End of the World. This great Astrologer died [a] at Lawingen in 1574. His Death spar'd him some Shame.

LERI (John de) a Protestant Minister, was of [b] Burgundy. He was a Student at Geneva, when Letters came from Villegagnon, desiring some Pastors might be sent him to Brasil. He made that Voyage with the Two Ministers, which the Church of Geneva sent thither in 1556. They arrived at the Isle of Coligni under the Tropick of Capricorn, in March 1557. Leri parted from that Country, with some others, the 4th. of Jan. 1558, and arrived at the Port Blavet, in May the same Year [c]; wrote (I) [illegible]ation of this Voyage, which has been commended by M. de Thou [d], and Lescarbot has inserted the Abstract of it in his History of New France. He was admitted Minister after his Return from America; I can't justly tell where he exercised his Function, but I know he [illegible]at Sancerre when that Town was taken, in 1573. He published a Relation of [illegible] Siege, and the sad Famine the Besieged underwent. The Mareschal de [illegible]re gave him a Pass [e] to go where he pleased, even before the Capitulation was sign[illegible]. He went to Berne, and met with a good Reputation from Monsieur de Coligni, Son to the Admiral, for which he expressed his Thanks, by dedicating

[a] Buchol-cer in Ind. Chronolog. p. m. 639.

[b] A Native of Margel, in the Dutchy of Burgundy.

[c] Consult his Relation.

[d] Thuan. lib. 16. p. m. 335. See also Varillas, Hist. de l'heresie liv. 21. pag. 18.

[e] Historia de Sancerri obsidione, pag. 47, 48. Edit. Heidelb. 1576.

should be Universal Monarch, to chastise the Tyranny of other Princes——which is not yet come to pass, and there's no great Likelihood it ever will. These are Bodin's express Words, [illegible] were good Sense in the Original, but they a[illegible]d in the Transcriber, for when Guyon m[illegible] of 'em (a) Maximilian the Emperor had be[illegible] long time dead. Was it not smartly said then, that there was no great Likelihood he should ever be universal Monarch? Bodin, who used these Words in his French Edition, because Maximilian was then alive, took care to leave 'em out [illegible]the Latin Edition, Publish'd (b) after this E[illegible]'s Death.

(a) Lewis Guyon Dates the Epistle Dedicatory of the 2d. Vol. the 1st. of June 1613. Maximilian Died in 1576.

(b) In the year 1583. See his [illegible] 625. Edit. 1601. in 8vo.

(C) About his Fright Leovitius put People in.] Let us make use of Lewis Guyon's Words. '(a) 'In the Year 1584, a Rumour was spread almost 'throughout Christendom, that the World should 'certainly be at an end that Year: all the Astro-'logical Mathematicians had affirmed it in their Al-'manacks, and many Curates and Preachers told it 'to their Congregations, which put the People into 'such a fear, that Multitudes received the Holy Sacra-'ment, having first fasted and confessed their Sins. 'In some Burroughs of this Country, and of 'Marche, which I forbear to name, the People made 'their Wills, and I happening to be by, let 'em un-'derstand, that if all perished, there would be none 'to inherit; and besides, that all their Goods must pe-'rish too. Pantagruel made the same Remonstrance 'to Panurge, who being tossed at Sea in a dreadful 'Storm, and seeing the Danger which he had not 'been used to, despaired of escaping, and instead of 'labouring like the rest, to cut down the Masts, 'lower the Sails, and [illegible]he Lading over-board, 'talked only of mak[illegible] Will, and roar'd and 'swore for Pen, Ink [illegible]d Paper; but Pantagruel 'refuted, telling him, either we shall all pe-'rish, or all be saved; if all perish, who'll carry 'your Will to your Relations? If all are saved, 'your Will signifies nothing. At the same time, 'the poor ignorant People kept solemn Fasts Month 'after Month, and gave great part of their Goods to 'Churchmen, in order to prolong the time of the 'great and last Judgment. This Opinion proceeded 'from Cyprian Leovitius, a German. Here's an Au-thor who wou'd insinuate, that Churchmen artfully kept up this Terror, on purpose to quicken the Of-ferings; they fished in troubled Water; they make their Advantage of every thing. I like his Obser-vation on the Contradiction the People fell into. They firmly belived the end of the World, and yet made their Wills; what an Absurdity is this? I wonder Mr. Petit (d) could mention two or three Predictions of this Nature, made by Stoffler and Regiomontanus, and forgot this of our Leovitius.

(a) Guyon ubi supra p. 577. 578.

(d) Petit, Intendant of the Fortifications, Dissertat. sur la nature des Comets, p. 337. 338.

A Ma[illegible]eal of Wit and Learning, and a Pro-fessor in [illegible]thematicks, has lately communica-ted to me an Extract he has made of a Book of this Astronomer. I make no Alteration in his Letter. 'A small Book in Quarto, of Leowicz's, De con-'junctionibus magnis insignioribus superiorum plane-'tarum, &c. in quarta monarchia cum eorumdem 'effectuum historica expositione. He observes the[illegible] 'junctions of Saturn and Jupiter from our S[illegible] 'time, and a little before, to the Year 15[illegible] 'tends had a Relation to the Circumstances of these 'great Conjunctions. He afterwards makes his 'Prognosticks and Predictions for the Years to come, 'to the Year 1584. Here, as in all the Book, he 'finds a Thousand great Events, with which he 'honours the Eclipses, Comets, and Conjunctions; 'a Notion unworthy a Person of good Sence. Last-'ly, he foretells the Conjunction of Jupiter and 'Saturn in Pisces, in May 1583, and the Conjun-'ction of almost all the Planets in Aries, about the 'latter end of March, and the beginning of April '1584, attended with an Eclipse of the Sun in the '20th. degree of Taurus, he doubts not but all this 'will bring on a Comet, and the Comet produce the 'end of the World, at the end of the Watery, and 'beginning of the fiery Trigon. He gives an 'admirable Reason for it, which has been contra-'dicted by Experience. The World, says he, be-'gan by the Conjunction in the Trigon of Fire, 'therefore it will end by that of Water. I answer, '1. Nego antecedens. 2. Nego consequentiam. 'This is not all; the Year 1584, or at latest, the 'Year 1588, is the end of the Watry Trigon, there-'fore the World will end at that time; for 'twere 'not worth while to wait 800 Years more for ano-'ther Watry Trigon, and the entire Revolution; 'besides that, the World at that rate would last near '6400 Years, which is manifestly against the Pro-'phecy, quod cum prophetia manifeste Pugnat, &c.

(D) Died at Lawingen.] It's a Town of Swabia upon the Danube. Leovicius made it his ordi-nary Abode. Here Tycho Brahe made him a Visit in 1569, and had much Discourse with him at eTa-ble about Astronomy (e). Mr. de Thou is mistaken as to the Town Leovicius died in: he says (f) it was at Ausburg.

(e) Gassendus in vita Tychon. Brahei, l. 1. p. 391. Volum. 5. Operum. He calls this Town Lauginga.

(f) Ubi supra.

(I) He wrote a Relation of this Voyage.] The Accounts he gave of this Country, made his Friends desire him to publish a Book of 'em. He finished it in the Year 1563, and sent the Manuscript to be re-vised by a Friend; but 'twas taken away at one of the Gates of Lions, from the Messengers, by whom he returned it. Not being able to recover it, and giving it for lost, he set about composing it anew, and lost it a second time; for escaping from Charité, upon the Loire, and making the best of his way to get into Sancerre at the time of the Massacre of St. Bartholomew, he left all his Books and Papers expo-sed to the Pillage. Yet he recovered his first Work at Lions, in 1576, at a time when he least expected it, and published it the Year following (g). There were many Editions of it. I make use of the Third, which is that of the Year 1594, for the Heirs of Eu-stachius Vignon. I have cited many Things from it in (h) this Dictionary. One Observation which this Author makes (i), has been much taken No-tice of; viz. that in regard of what we call Reli-gion, it may be properly said, that these poor Savages have none, and not only so, but that if there be a Nation which lives without God in the World, it is truly this. The Minister Peter Richier confesses as much in a Letter he wrote from this Country. He expresses in it his Concern to see no Likelihood that these Pe[illegible] ever be converted to the Gospel, since the[illegible] only ignorant of the Differences of Good and [illegible]ut even of the Existence of a God.

(g) Taken from the Preface of John de Leri.

(h) In the Articles Richer & Villegagnon.

(i) See le Fevre Saumur, Preface of his Treatise of Superstition.

(k) John de Leri, ibid.

dicating to him the Relation of his Voyage to Brasil. I have not yet been able to discover the rest of his Adventures. La Croix du Maine has committed (Z) Three Faults.

LESBOS, an Isle of the Egean Sea, near the Hellespont, and the Continent of Asia, was famous of old for [a] its good Wine, [b] its Marble, the Fertility of its Soil, the Illustrious Men (A) it had produced, and for many other Things besides. Cadmus, or Cadmilus, one of the Cabiri, inhabited it, and there became the Father of Prylis, who was an extraordinary Soothsayer, and very ill affected to the Trojans [c]. It held the seventh Place (B) amongst the great Isles of the Mediterranean Sea. The Greeks [d], under the Conduct of Graus, Great Grandson of Orestes, the Son of Agamemnon, settled a Colony there, which grew so flourishing, that this Colony, and the City of Cumæ, were looked on as the Metropolis of all the Greek Colonies, which made up Æolia, and were in all about Thirty in Number. Pausanias [e] pretends, that Penthilus was that Son of Orestes, who settled in the Isle of Lesbos. It had gone under several Names: Pliny [f] mentions Six, and yet omits that of Issa, which Strabo and Hesychius have both observed. It had [g] Nine considerable Cities, but in Strabo's and Pliny's time, there scarce remained Four, namely, Methymne, Eressus, Pyrrha, and Mitelene. The Lesbians forfook the Athenian Interest in the Peloponnesian War, and were rigorously punished for it. The Sentence, which condemned all the Males of Mitylene above the Age of Sixteen to Death, was very near being executed; but by good Fortune, the Counter-Order of the Athenians arrived in the nick of Time. Thucydides [h] gives a very particular Account of it. Some ascribe to the Lesbians an (C) Invention of so abominable a Nature, that the English Tongue wants Words to express it.

[a] Plin. lib. 14. cap. 7. & 15. See Cerda on Virgil, Georg. lib. 2. v. 90.
[b] Plin. lib. 36. cap. 6.
[c] See the Remark B.
[d] Strabo, lib. 13. init. pag. 400.
[e] Id. ib. pag. 428.
[f] Pausan. lib. 3. cap. 2. pag. m. 207.
[g] Plinius ubi infra.
[h] Strabo, lib. 1. pag. 41.
[i] Plin. lib. 5. cap. 31. p. m. 621.
[h] Thucydid. lib. 3.
(a) Richier in a Letter dated from France Antartick March 31. 1557. It is the 237. among Calvin's Letters.

(a) Bonum à malo non secernunt, denique vitia quæ natura in cæteris gentibus naturaliter arguit, loco virtutis habent. Saltem vitiorum turpitudinem non agnoscunt, adeo ut hac in re à brutis parum differant. Cæterum quod omnium pernitiosissimum est latet eos an sit Deus, tantum abest ut legem ejus observent, vel potentiam & bonitatem ejus miventur: quo fit ut prorsus sit nobis adempta spes lucri faciendi eos Christo: quod ut omnium est gravissimum, ita inter eluvies maximè agri ferimus. But, adds he, 'twill be objected, that they are a Tabula rasa, which will easily receive a Tincture of the Gospel, as having no contrary Impressions. To this he gives no other Answer, than that the Difference of Language is a great Obstacle, and that the Interpreters they must imploy, were Papists. Studio quidem qui mox objicies eos tabulam rasam esse quæ facile suis possit depingi coloribus, quod nativo hujusmodi colorum splendori nihil habeat contrarium. Sed novit ille quantum impediat Idiomatum diversitas. Adde quod desunt nobis interpretes qui Domino sint fideles.

(Z) La Croix du Maine has committed three Faults.] I. He says (b), that John de Leri was Minister of Geneva in 1558. II. That his Book is the Translation of the History of a Voyage to Brasil. III. That this Voyage was made in 1555.

(A) For the Illustrious Men it has produced.] Pittacus, one of the Seven Wise Men, the Poet Alcæus; the famous Sappho; the Rhetorician Diophanes; the Historian Theophanes were Natives of Mitylene, as also Potamon, Lesbocles and Crinagoras. Eresus was the Birth-place of Theophrastus and Phanias, the Disciples of Aristotle. The Musician Arion, whose Adventure is so celebrated, was of Methymna. Amongst the famous Lesbians are also reckoned the Historian Hellanicus, Terpander the Musician, and Callias, the Interpreter of Alcæus and Sappho's Verses (c), This is the Catalogue Strabo has left us. The Poet Lesches is omitted in it, who was Author of a small Iliad, and a Native of Lesbos (d).

(B) It held the Seventh Place amongst the great Isles of the Mediterranean Sea.] Consult Mr. Bochart (e), who produces on this Subject the Testimonies of a great many Writers. This gives him a Handle to derive the Word Lesbos from a Phenician Root; for he discovers, that this Word signifies, ad septimam (subintelligo) insulam; and supposes, that at first the Phenicians gave this Name to a Town in the Island, and afterwards to the Island itself. He proves by the Authority of Stephanus Byzantinus, that Lesbos, one of the Five Towns of the Island, was the Reason of the Islands being called Lesbos. His Conjectures are learned and refined; but methinks the Phenicians needed more time to discover, that this was the Seventh of the large Islands of the Mediterranean. Such a Knowledge supposes Voyages and Comparisons between Sicily, Sardinia, and the other Islands which make up this Phiads, or Septenary Number, and we don't find that they who seek new Countries or Habitations, and settle on them, wait for any considerable time before they give Names to 'em. Mr. Bochart does not alledge the Words of Lycophron, which teach us, that Cadmus liv'd in this Island. He owns, this Cadmus is not the Phenician; but Mercury, one of the Cabiri. Let us produce Lycophron's Passage:

(f) Ὅτε γὰρ σὺ Καδμεῖος ἄναξ ἐν πεμπάτῳ
Ἴσσης φιλίσσων ἀντρωπὸν πόσιν,
Τέτμῃσι ἐξ Ἥλιοιο νήλιτον τροπὰς,
Τὸν αὐθαίμων τριακοντούτιδα πρόλιν,
Τέμνων πρὸς ἀκτὰς ἡμιθέων.

Utinam te, Pryli, Cadmus insula
Issa non genuisset, hostium ducem,
Quartum ex Atlantis miseri semine,
Cognatorum tuorum everforem,
Patrem ad optima verissimum.

(f) Lycophr. v. 219. pag. m. edit. Cantabr. 1697.

It's plain, the Poet speaks of a Cadmus different from Europa's Brother, and that he means Mercury by this Name, for he makes him the Grandson of Atlas, and Father of Prylis. The Commentary of Isaac Tzetzes, informs us, that (g) Lycophron in this place uses the Word Cadmus by an Abbreviation, instead of Cadmilus, which he had made use of in the 162d. Verse, and which is the Name (h) the Baotians gave the God Mercury. It tells us also, that Mercury had a Son called Prylis, by the Nymph Issa, who being gained by Polamedes's Presents, foretold to the Greeks when they landed at the Isle of Lesbos, that a Wooden-Horse should be the Engine by which they should subdue the City of Troy.

(g) Tzetz. in Lycophr. v. 223.
(h) Id. ib. v. 219.

(C) An Invention of so abominable a Nature.] I shall not only forbear describing in any Words of our own Language, but even avoid repeating in Latin, what very grave Writers have not stuck at to make it understood. However, since the great Erasmus thought it allowable to insert in his Collection of Adages, that amongst the rest which arose from their Abomination, I may be permitted to copy some Passages of his Remarks. Sinunt, says he (i) turpitudinem quæ per os perpetratur, fellationis opinor, aut irrumationis, primum à Lesbiis authoribus fuisse professam, & apud illos primum omnium familiam tale quiddam passam esse. Interpres hujus rei testem citat Theopompum in Ulyssea & Stratidem in Troilo. By Interpres he understands, Aristophanes's Scholiast upon these Words of the Comedy, called Vespæ, μάλιστα δὲν ποιήσειν τοὺς ἐμπιόντας ἃ ἐκεῖνοι ἐποίουν, quæ combibones jam sunt commissuri. I don't think he has hit upon Aristophanes's Thought, in these Words. (k) ὅτι δὲ μετὰ τῆς λύρας ἐπῄεσαν τοῖς ἀνδράσι

(i) Erasmus on the Proverb λεσβίζειν. It's the 70th. of the 7th. Century of the 3d. Chiliad, p. m. 795.
(k) Aristoph. in Ἐκκλησιαζ. Vid. Suid.

Bizz.

it. Few People have mentioned the Oracle (D) of this Island. It's called at present Mytilene, I shall speak of it under this Word, and collect several Things, which I omit here.

LESCARBOT (Mark) an Advocate in the Court of Parliament, has written a (A) History of New France. He had lived for some time in this Country. He afterwards attended Peter de Castille, Ambassador from Lewis XIII. to the Swiss Cantons. And as he took a Delight in Writing Accounts of the Countries in which he travelled, he wrote a Description of the Thirteen Cantons in Heroick Verse, and published it at Paris in 1618. He was born at [a] Vervins.

[a] Lescarbot, hist. de la Nouv. France, liv. 2. ch. 5. p. m. 179.

LESLEY, an illustrious Family of Scotland, descended from one of the (A) chief Gentlemen, who came over from Hungary into England, and afterwards into Scotland, with Queen Margaret [b], about [c] the Year 1067. His Name was Bartholomew; he married one of this Queen's Maids of Honour, and had a Son by her called Malcolm. Some say, that his Wife was the Queen's own Sister. He got the Esteem of the King of Scotland, and received distinguishing (B) Marks of it, by having, among other Actions, built, and bravely defended the Fortress of Edenborough. He died loaded with Years, and covered with Glory, in 1120. His Successors in the Right

[b] She has been canonis'd; she is the Saint Margaret. See the Art. Drummond.

[c] Malcolme III. reigned then in Scotland.

βίαν, . . mihi at videre labda juxta Lesbios. The Sense he gives them, seems cold and forc'd. Nor is it any wonder he has done no better upon this Passage, since Mr. le Fevre of Saumur, explains it two Ways, and that rather by Conjecture, than by any Piece of Learning proper to explain it. Alludit, says he (a), ad faditatem Lesbiam. [Tanta mihi prurigine videris correpta ut vel medium virum glubere, tenta viri vorare possis] fortasse id etiam eo dictum est quod eam divaricatis cruribus decumbentem videres. Galen has mentioned the Lesbian Filthiness, but without explaining what it was. He did not think it necessary, at a Time when every Body understood this Expression; but a world of Greek Words are grown almost unintelligible in the Course of many Ages, and it makes the Criticks sweat to guess what the Antients meant by 'em. The Learned Mercurialis indeavoured to find the meaning of this Passage of Galen. Galenus, says he (b) 10. de Simp. med. cap. 1. Xenocratem damnans, quod stercora agri voranda daret, probrum ait gravius esse, κοπρισμὸν, id est, stercorivorum audire, quàm follatorem, aut cinadum. Subjungit deinceps: ἢ τὸν διεχρεωργὸν μᾶλλον βλασφημεῖσθαι τῆς κοπρίζουσης, τὸν λεσβιάζοντα. Qui verò sint phœnicissantes, & Lesbiassantes apud ipsum, nullibi explicatum habetur. Ego itaque reperio, spurcissimam quandam apud Phœnices libidinis speciem extitisse, qua viri  lingebant, quæve interdum impurissimos homines Romanos usos esse memoria mandatum est. Nam Seneca . . . . . Hos cunnilingos frequentissimè diffamatos, apud Martialem est reperire: qui fortasse phœnicissare dicebantur, quòd labia sanguine rubea sapissimè gererent, unde Martialis. . . . . Jam verò λεσβιάζειν, quid esset, ab aliquibus explicatur, obscœnum fuisse turpitudinis genus, quo viri inguina puerorum, vel virorum ore & labiis tractabant, irrumationem aliàs vocatam, & sæpè phœnicissantes labea rubicunda sibi reddebant, sic Lesbiassantes alba. Ob quod Catullus ad Gellium:

Nescio quid . . . . . .

. . . . . .

Hesychius tamen aliter videtur sensisse, sed qua auctoritate aut ratione ductus, ignoro. I have suppress'd some Words and Passages in this Place of Mercurialis: not as I pretend, that this Learned Physician had not a right to speak out as he has done. A Commentator or Interpreter, who only makes use of the Authority of such a Writer as Martial, known to all the Republick of Learning, is not to be blamed. Either we must banish the Antient Authors, or in the Explication of a difficult Passage suffer their own Words to be produced. However, I was loath to cite the Passages from Mercurialis intire, we must sometime submit to the Scruples of the Mode.

(D) Few People have mentioned the Oracle of Lesbos.] Philostratus, if I mistake not, is the only Person who gives us any Tydings of it. He says, (c) Philoctetes departed voluntarily from the Isle of Lemnos, after that Diomedes and Neoptolemus, Sons of Achilles, ' had acquired him in the Name of all ' the Grecian Army, and declared the Oracle they ' had received from Lesbos, concerning his Arrows; for adds Philostratus, The Greeks make ' use of their own Country Oracles, as the Pythian ' that of Dodona, and all others, in Vogue and ' Reputation, where approved Predictions were ' delivered, as that of Bœotia and Phocis: But as ' Lesbos was not far from Troy, the Greeks at the ' Siege, sent to the Oracle which was there dispensed by Orpheus. For, after the bloody Murther ' committed on him by the Thracian Women, his ' Head arriving at Lesbos, lighted on a Rock there: ' from this Rock the Oracular Answers were given, ' whither not only the Lesbians, but the other Æolians also, and the Ionians their near Neighbours, ' and even those about Babylon resorted for Advice; ' for he foretold abundance of things to the Kings ' of Persia, and to the Elder Cyrus among the rest, ' to whom 'tis said he gave this Answer, What's ' mine, O Cyrus, is all thine, hereby intimating, ' that he should become considerable among the Odrysians, and all over Europe. In reality, Orpheus heretofore obtained great Consideration and ' Credit by his mighty Wisdom and Knowledge, as ' well with the Odrysians, as among all the other ' Greeks, who celebrate his Mysteries. But by this ' Answer, he furthermore intended to signify what ' should finally befall Cyrus; who venturing beyond ' the Danube, to subdue the Massagetes, and Isedonians, a People of Scythia, died by the Hands of a ' Woman, who commanded 'em, and who cut off ' his Head, as the Thracian Women had formerly ' serv'd Orpheus (d).

(A) An History of New France.] It contains an Account of the Navigations, Discoveries, and Settlements made by the French, in the West-Indies, and New France, with the Approbation and Authority of our most Christian Kings; and their different Fortunes in the Execution, for an hundred Years past, to this present time. Wherein is comprised the Moral, Natural, and Geographical History of the said Province; with Maps and Draughts of it. I use the second Edition, which is that of Paris, by John Mill, of 1611, in Octavo. This Work is curious enough; The Author intermixes it with many learned Observations. He begins with the Description of the Voyage of John Verazzan, a Florentine, who was sent into America by Francis I. in 1524. This was the first Voyage into that part of the World, under the Protection of the Crown of France.

(A) One of the chief Gentlemen.] He's said to be descended from a most ancient Hungarian Family, and particularly from one Lesly, who was Son-in-Law to an Emperor. (e) Originem suam duxisse asseritur ex pervetusto sanguine Hungarico, & specialiter à Lesko quonam, qui, ut antiquissima referunt Familiæ monumenta, perhibetur exstitisse magnus Imperatoris Locumtenens, cujus etiam filia ei in thori consortem est concessa. Ab hoc porro vetusto Leskaorum cognomine varia ad hæc usque tempora loca in Hungaria suum nomen derivarunt, quæ inter LESLINIA, LESSILIA, LELES ac alia temporum vicissitudine denominationem immutantia possunt recenseri.

(B) And received very distinguishing Marks of it.] The Method King Malcome took to know the Lands he should allot him, has something singular in it. He ordered our Bartholomew to ride a whole Day towards the North, and bait his Horse in every County, and he gave him all the Lands for a Mile round (f) the Place where the Horse baited: Here's the

(a) Tanaquillus Faber in hac verba Aristophanis λέσβια σκώμματα epist. lib. 2. pag. 267. 268.

(b) Hieron. Mercurialis variarum lectionum, lib. 4. cap. 13, pag. m. 221. 222.

(c) Philostratus in Heroicis, in Philoctete. I make use of the Translation of Vigenere, fol. 253. of the 2d. Tome. Edit. in 4to.

(d) Here's an Example of the Jargon Answers of the Oracles of Paganism, for what can be more strained than the Interpretation of the Answer to Cyrus.

(e) Laurus Leskæana, pag. 1. See the whole Title of this Work in the Body of this Article in the Margin.

(f) Compare what has been said in the Article Hay.

right Line lived in Splendor (as well by the new Benefits conferred on 'em by their Princes, as by the Marriages, which allied 'em to the nobleſt Families,) down to David Leſley, who was the Eighth from Bartholomew. This David, after having made War in Paleſtine againſt the Saracens, for Seven Years, return'd into Scotland, and though he was Eighty Years old, married, and had a Son, who was the firſt that had the Title of Baron of Leſly. His Iſſue failed in the Seventh Generation, in the Perſon of George, Baron of Leſly, who died very much in Debt. His Widow married John Forbes, who paying off the Creditors, became poſſeſſed of the Barony of Leſly [a]. All the Leſlies now in being deſcended from two Collateral Branches; that of ROTHES and that of BALQUHANE. The Branch of Rothes began in Normand Brother to David, and advanc'd it ſelf wonderfully in Riches and Honours. Geo Grand-Son to Normand, was the firſt who had the Title of [b] Earl of Rothes. The right Male Line of his Deſcendants became extinct in 1681. by the Death of John Earl of Rothes whom King (C) Charles II. created Duke, and raiſed to the greateſt Employs. The Collateral Branches (D) are very Numerous, from one of which deſcended James Leſly, who ſignaliz'd himſelf in the Service of the Great Duke of Tuſcany, where he was Collonel. As for the Branch of Balquhane, it began in the Perſon of George ſecond Son to Andrew, which Andrew was the ſixth Lord Leſly from Bartholomew the Founder of the Family. George firſt Baron of Balquhane got ſeveral Lordſhips in Grant from King David Bruce, and Died in the year 1531. His Poſterity, Subdivided into (E) ſeveral Branches, has produc'd a great many Perſons of diſtinguiſh'd Merit. It reckon'd three Generals of Armies at the ſame time; one (F) in Scotland, one in (G) Ger-

[a] It ſtill belongs to the Family of Forbes.

[b] His Predeceſſors were only Barons.

(a) Laurus Leſlæana fol. 4.

the Latin Hiſtory in which we ſhall find this Reward, with all its Circumſtances. (a) Fuit Bartholomæus tantæ æſtimationis apud Regem Malcolmum, præſertim ob arcem Edinburgenſem valide à ſe munitam, & ſtrenuè dein propugnatam; ut eum non ſolum Equitem Auratum creârit, & toto vitæ tempore dictæ arci præfecerit; ſed præterea in præſtitorum obſequiorum mercedem ei conceſſerit; ut, ubi DUMFERMILINGO ſeptentrionem verſus ſuper eodem equo unâ die [illegible] ageret; intra quamcunque Provinciam ad pabula [illegible] ſemel deſcenderet; eam totam circumcirca agri [illegible] ad mille paſſus hæreditario jure ſuum faceret. Primò itaque deſcendit ad FECHIL, nunc dictum LESLIE in Fifa; alterâ vice apud INNERKLEPAD in Anguſia; tertiò apud FESKIE, ſeu ESKIE in Mernia; quartò apud CUSHNIE in Marria; & ultimatim demum ad locum dein LESLIE nuncupatum in Gariotha, ubi equus defecit: reducem cum Rex interrogaret ubi equum reliquiſſet, reſpondiſſe ei dicitur, At the Leſſe Ley beſide the mair: Latine: In campo minori prope majorem, tunc Rex advertens locum cognomini convenire; Lord LESLYE ſhall thou be, and thy Heirs after thee. Latine: Dynaſta de LESLEY eris tu, & hæredes tui poſt te: ſimulque donationem omnium illarum poſſeſſionum illi confirmavit; quam & ratam habuit Alexander primus, ejus filius; uti hac ſuper re adhuc tempore Joannis LESLÆI Epiſcopi Roſſenſis extabat diploma Regium apud Baronem de LESLIE; multique ex his fundis etiamnum à Comite de ROTHES LESLIE, ceu ſuperiore ſuo dependent.

(C) Whom King Charles II. created Duke, and raiſ'd.] This John of Rothes had Married Ann Lindſay Daughter to the Earl of Crauford: He had only two Daughters by her, the Eldeſt was Married to (b) the Eard of Haddington, and the Youngeſt to the Marquis of Montroſs, and afterwards to John Bruce Baron of Kinloſſe. The Son of the Eldeſt took the Name and Arms of Leſlie, and will be Earl of Rothes after the Death of his Mother (c). The Titles and Places with which King Charles II. honoured John Earl of Rothes, are theſe. Hic Joannes poſt infelicem pugnam ad WORCESTER diu in Anglia captivus detinebatur; Rege dein Carolo ſecundo ad Regna reverſo, factus eſt primò Regiarum cæcubiarum Præfectus, mox theſaurarius, & omnium Scoticarum copiarum Generalis, paulò poſt ſupremus Commiſſarius, ac demum uſque ad mortem magnus Regni Cancellarius; creatus fuit ab eodem Rege Dux de ROTHES, & Marchio de BAMBRIGH, &c. quæ dignitas etiam ad mares poſteros devoluta fuiſſet, niſi eis carniſſet.

(b) He's of the Family of Hamilton.

(c) Laurus Leſlæana.

(D) The collateral Branches are very Numerous.] That of the Lords of Lindors, that of the Lords of Newmarks, that of the Barons of Newtown; that of the Lords of Burdsbank, of Aikenway, and of Pitnamon (d).

(d) Ibid.

(E) His Poſterity Subdivided into ſeveral Branches.] Beſides the direct Line, there [illegible] Branch of the Lairds of Kinearie, that [illegible] Barons of Wardes, that of the L[illegible] of Buchairne, that of the Lairds of Cliſſon, that [illegible] the Lairds of Newleſtie, that of the Lairds of Kininvie, and that of the Barons of Pitcaple, that of the Lairds of Crichie, and that of the Earles of Roſſe (e).

(e) Ibid.

(F) One in Scotland.] He was of [illegible] Branch of Kinchvy, Son to George Laird of [illegible] ir. He [illegible] the Art of War in Germany [illegible] had very [illegible] Employs in the Armies of the [illegible] of Sweden. [illegible] he return'd into his own Country he was appointed Generaliſſimo of all the Scotch Forces. He was created Earl of Levin by King Charles I. and Died in 1650, at ſeventy years of Age. His Grandſon ſucceeded him, and left only Daughters (f).

(f) Ibid.

(G) One in Germany.] His name was Walter, the Son of John, the tenth Baron of Balquhane. He went young into Germany. The Service he did his Imperial Majeſty, when Wallenſtein was kill'd, obtain'd him a Regiment and many other Favours. Ferdinand III. made him Count of the Empire, Marſhal de Camp General, Privy Counſellor, and Governour (g) of a Province. He was Embaſſador for his Imperial Majeſty at Rome, and in other Courts; and was ſent to the Port for the Ratifications of the Peace concluded in 1664. He had been made Knight of the Golden Fleece before. The Jeſuit Paul Taffarner his Con[illegible]r, has Publiſh'd a Relation of that Embaſſy [illegible] ntinople. Count Walter Leſley Died at [illegible] his fourth of March 1667, in the 61ſt. ye[illegible] his Age. He was Married to Anne Frances of Dietrichſtein, Daughter to Prince Maximilian de Dietrichſtein High Steward of the Emperor's Court, but having no Child by her, he made his Nephew James Son to Alexander, fourteenth Baron of Balquhane his Heir. He had ſent for him long before into Germany, and had been an excellent Patron to him. This Neph[illegible] roſe from the loweſt Military Degree to the Poſt of Mareſchal de Camp General. He Married Mary Thereſa de Leichtenſtein, Daughter to Prince Charles of Leichtenſtein Duke of Troppau, by whom he had no Children. He left all his Eſtate to two Nephews (h). Theſe are the Titles that are given him in an Epiſtle Dedicatory (i). Jacobo S. R. J. Comiti de Leſlie, Libero Baroni de Balquhane, Domino Neoſtadii ad Mattoviam; Pettovii, Furnezz, &c. S. C. M. Camerario, & Conſiliario Aulæ Intimo, Conſilii aulæ Bellici Int. Auſt. Præſidi, Generali Campi Mareſchallo, Peditum Regiminis Colonello, &c. The following Elegy is given him in the [illegible] Epiſtle. Tu ex virtuti; quibus per Germaniam [illegible] ngariam, Belgium inter fuſti prælia, nunquam victus, plerumque victor diſceſſiſti: Intra ultimum tantùm biennium, quo ante gravem agritudinem Tuum caſtra frequentare licuit, Viennam introducto opportunè præſidio imminentem contra hoſtem provide munivit, & allatis poſtmodùm à Te ipſo inter primos, ſuppetiis [illegible] ſtrationem ingenter promovit, Tandem à [illegible] Auſtria ſemel fortiter repulſi; Virtu- [illegible] Siſeianam, Natinum, aliaque propugnacula, bar-

(g) Supre[illegible] mus confinium Sclavoniæ ac Petriniæ Præ[illegible]

(h) Ibid.

(i) That of the Laurus Leſlæana, written in 1692.

Germany, one in (H) Muscovy; I speak of 'em in the Remarks. The famous Bishop of (I) Rosse in the Reign of Mary Stuart, was of this Family. Moreri speaks of him under the word Lesly.

LESSEVILLE, (Eustachius Leclerc de) Bishop of Coutance, was Son of Nicholas Leclerc de Lesseville Lord of Thun, and Enquemont, who Died Dean of the Chamber of Accounts; and of Katherine le Boulanger, Sister to the President le Boulanger, who had been Provost of the Merchants, and Died in the Grand Chamber as he was giving his Opinion. As Nicholas Leclerc de Lesseville had several Children, and that Eustachius was only the third, having before him Antony, Lord of Enquemont, who Died young, and Charles who Died Dean of the Great Counsel, he designed himself for the Church, and went to Study in the Sorbonne, which was not usual at that time for Persons of Quality. He was not full twenty years of Age, when he was Nominated Rector of the University; and 'twas he first taught the University to go in Coaches whereas they always walk'd a-Foot before. Which made Henry IV. say, that his Eldest Daughter, meaning the University, was a very Dragletail. Eustachius had so strong a Call to the Church, that he was ordain'd Priest before he had any Title to a Benefice. He was Doctor of the House and Society of Sorbonne, and quickly after Lewis XIII. chose him for one of his Almoners in ordinary. He afterwards treated about a Place of Councellor in Parliament; and was preferred to the cure of St. Gervais at Paris, in the times of the Troubles, which saved him his Life: For being in the Town-House with several Deputies, both of the Parliament and of other Societies, and the People, as all the World knows, having got up in Arms, and Murder'd several Deputies, and amongst others the Sieur le Gras Master of Requests, who had Married his Sister whom we speak of, some Carmen and others of the Rabble thought it their Duty to Rescue their Pastor. Accordingly they forc'd their way thro' the rest of the Mob, and carried him off out of the midst of the Assembly, and conducted him to his House in safety. Some time after, he was prefer'd to the Abbey of St. Crespin near Soissons, and the Barony of St. Ange, and was made Honorary Canon of the Chapter of Brionde, which gives the Title of Count. At last the King gave him the Bishoprick of Coutances, vacant by the Cession of Claud Auvri, Treasurer to the Holy Chappel at Paris. Tho' he did not live long after, yet he failed not to gain the Esteem and Friendship of all his Dioceis, where his name is still in Veneration. He was particularly distinguish'd by a great capacity for Affairs, and a profound Knowledge in Divinity and Law. As he was Doctor of Sorbonne, and had been fourteen years Councellor in Parliament, he was equally vers'd in both these Sciences, which made him Arbiter of the most important Affairs of the Province. He Died at Paris, the fourth of December 1665. during the Assembly of the Clergy, to which he was deputed, and was Buried in the Augustins in the Burying place of his Ancestors. Leclerc de Lesseville bears Azure three Crescents Or.

LEUCAS [a] was at the beginning a Peninsula, joining to the Continent of Acarnania, but became an Island by the industry of the Corinthians [γ]. They cut the Isthmus, and built a City upon the Canal, which they called Leucas, whether they Transported the Inhabitants of Neritus. This undertaking [δ] did not much promote Navigation; and if we believe (A) Pliny, the Sands droven in by the Winds, restored the Isthmus. In the Article of St. Maure [ζ] we shall speak of its present State. As to its State of Old, if any circumstance of it deservers to be related, it's,

(B) I

[a] Taken from a Book Printed at Grats in 1692. apud Haeredes Widmanstadii, it is intituled Laurus Lesliana explicata, sive clarior enumeratio personarum utriusque sexus cognominis Leslie, una cum affinibus, titulis, officiis, dominiis gestisque celebrioribus breviter indicatis, quibus à sexcentis & amplius annis prosapia illa floret; ex variis authoribus, manuscriptis, & testimoniis fide dignis in unum collecta.

[δ] Strabon. l. 1. p. 46. & l. 10. p. 311.

[γ] Cypselus had sent 'em to settle a Colony on this Coast.

[ζ] See Caulabon upon Strabo ubi sup. 311.

barbaris cæsis, & Cæsareis finibus longè, latèque in Sclavonia propagatis feliciter expugnasti; pauca Turorum millia ad Ternavizam contra Ottomanici exercitus robur rarâ industriâ, & fortitudine servasti; ac demum ad Gloria Tuæ cumulum Pontes Effekianos, & civitatem inter hostes cum exigua militum manu plurium dierum confecto itinere flammis injectis audaciter incineraſti, festivisque quasi ignibus Tuos Triumphos adornasti: Quid si biennio solùm tot, & tantas Laureas messuisti; quot hactenus, & quantas messuisses, si infirma Tua valetudo permisisset?

(H) One in Muscovy.] His Name was Alexander, he was of the Branch of Crichie. He came to be General, after a long Series of great Services done the Czars of Muscovy in their Armies, and was made Governour of Smolensko. He Died in the year 1661 at 95 years of Age. There were at that time in Muscovy seven Colonels, abundance of Captains, and other inferiour Officers of the Name of Leslie.

(a) Laurus Lesliæana, ibid.

(I) One famous Bishop of Rosse.] He was descended from Malcolme, Son of Andrew, third Baron of Balquhane. His Father was an able Lawyer, who after he had Travelled into Italy, France, the Netherlands, and England, Died the sixteenth of March. The Prelate we speak of had a great share in the Esteem of Queen Mary; she made him a Judge in one of the Courts of Scotland, admitted him a Member of her Privy Counsel, and imployed him in State Affairs. He was appointed Commendator of the Abbey of Lindors, and at last Bishop of Rosse. He did great Services to this Princess, and was Imprison'd in England on her account, tho' an Embassador from the King her Son. He Negotiated her Liberty at Rome, at Vienna, and at several other Courts, and afterwards Died at Brussels in 1595. He wrote several Books, and amongst others, a History of Scotland (b).

(A) If we believe Pliny.] He seems to fall into a Contradiction here, for in the 90*th*. Chapter of the second Book, he reckons Leucas among the Countries, which had been separated from the main Land by the Violence of the Sea; in another place he (c) attributes it to the Labour of the Inhabitants. Leucadia ipsa peninsula quondam Neritis appellata, opere accolarum abscissa à continenti, ac reddita ventorum flatu congeriem arenæ accumulantium. Strabo in the two places I have (d) quoted favours him as to the last Passage, but not as to the first. Ovid (e) seems more favourable to him in respect of the first, than the latter, when we consider what he makes Pythagoras deliver concerning the changes of Nature.

Leucada continuum veteres habuere coloni,
Nunc fretum circumcunt. Zancle quoque juncta fuisse.
Dicitur Italiæ, donec confinia pontus
Abstulit, & mediâ tellurem reppulit undâ.

[b] Ibid. fol. T. It's cited under the Name of Joannes Lesleus.

(c) Plin. l. 4. c. 1.

(d) In the Margin of the Text at the Beginning.

(e) Metamorph. l. 15.

After

(B) I think, the ceremony there of leaping down a Precipice. There seems to have been a Set of People who engag'd themselves (C) as if they had been hired to it, to give this Spectacle once at least every year.

LEUCIPPUS a Greek Philosopher. The place of his Birth is not agreed on, but almost all Authors own him to have been the Inventer of the Atomical System; so that we must not stand to (A) Posidonius's Testimony. It can't be denied that in some things, the Cartesian System (B) resembles that of Leucippus; and Epicurus is to blame

(a) Ex Livio l. 43.
(b) Opera accolarum abscissa continenti ac reddita ventorum flatu. Plin. ubi supra.
(c) Strab. l. 10. p. 311.
(d) Propterea dicebatur locus ille ἄλμα τῶν ἐραστῶν. Scalig. in Auson. cupid. crucif. Τὸ ἅλμα τὸ τῆς Λευκάδος πολὺν παρεσκευάκειν. Saltus quo finiri amores creditum est. Strabo l. 10. p. 311.
(e) Ptolemy Son of Hephestion, apud Phot. Bibl. n. 191. p. 491.
(f) Hinc fe Deucalion Pyrrhæ succensus amore Misit, & illæso corpore pressit aquas. Nec mora: versus amor tetigit lentissima Pyrrhæ Pectora; Deucalion igne levatus erat. Ovid. Epist. Sappb.
(g) Ampelius in libro memoriali c. 8. Athenæus l. 14. c. 3. Servius in Eclog. 8. v. 59. & in Æn. l. 3. v. 274. & 279. See Scaliger & Vinet in Auson. Cupid. crucif.

After all, we can't entirely excuse Pliny, not even by Father Hardouin's Expedient, who would have it acknowledged, that Leucas had been twice rejoined to the Continent, because at the time of the Roman War with Philip King of Macedon, Leucas was a (a) Perinsula, and in Livy's and Strabo's Time, it was an Island. By this Rule Leucas must have been an Island all the time betwixt this Roman War, and the Reign of Augustus, and re-became a Peninsula and held so all the time betwixt Augustus and Pliny. If it had been made an Island by the Violence of a Tempest, he should not have observ'd a Counteraction (b) betwixt the labour of the Inhabitants and that of the Winds. It must therefore be said that the Inhabitants made their Country an Island. But in this case, how shall we reconcile what Pliny had said in the nineteenth Chapter of the second Book perrupit mare Leucada? This event must doubtless have preceded the War against King Philip; but in these former times, we find it was the Corinthians, and not the Sea, which cut the Neck of Land.

(B) The Ceremony of leaping down a Precipice.] There stood upon the Promontory of Leucas a Temple of Apollo, and there was an Antient Custom (c) that annually on the Festival of this God a Criminal should be thrown from the top of this Promontory, in order to avert all impending Evils. However they fasten'd a great many Feathers, and live Birds to the Criminal, whose flight, it was hop'd, would break the Violence of the Wretch's Fall. They indeavour'd to catch him at the bottom in small Barges lying round in a Circle, and if he were saved, they only Banish'd him. All this was enacted by publick Authority, and for the publick Good; but there were private Persons who Voluntarily took the Precipice, to put an end to the pains they suffer'd from Love. Whence this Place was called (d) the Lovers Leap. Strabo informs us on Menander's Authority, that Sappho desperately in Love with Phaon, who slighted her, was the first who took the Leap of Leucas: He cites Menander's Verses; but probably he had not quoted the whole Passage: for by what he has quoted it does not appear that Sappho was the first who try'd this frightful Somerset. Besides Strabo do's not come over to this Poet's Opinion: He says, that they who have most exactly search'd into Antiquity, declare that Cephale was the first who made the Tryal of that desperate Remedy, when she was in Love with Procla. An Author (e) which Photius has given some Extracts of, traces the Origin of this Practice. He says, that Venus after the Death of Adonis, sought him every where, and found him at last at Argos, in the Isle of Cyprus in the Temple of Erithian Apollo. As she made no secret to this God of her Passion for Adonis, he led her to the Rock of Leucas, and bid her throw her self Head-long from that Precipice. She took his Advice, and finding her self cured of her Passion, she desired to know the reason of it. Apollo Answer'd, that by Virtue of his Gift of Prophecy, he had discover'd that Jupiter finding himself smitten with the Love of Juno, came constantly to Perch upon this Rock, and thus abated the violence of his Flame. He adds that Numbers of both Sexes had been cured of their Love by leaping from the top of this Mountain. Photius gives us a long Catalogue of Persons who had Recourse to this Remedy. Some found themselves cured, others lost their Lives by it. I have not met with Calyce among 'em, and am the less surpriz'd, because he omits the unfortunate Sappho. She tells us in an Epistle written by her Secretary Ovid, that (f) Deucalion in Love with Pyrrha the coy, took the Leap of Leucas, without hurting himself; upon which his Passion wore off, and Pyrrha began to love him in her turn. Several (g) have mention'd this strange Remedy of Love, and others have even said, that some took this Leap for another reason, namely to learn News of their Relations.

I have said that Calyce is not to be found in the Catalogue of the Leucas-Leapers. She had fall'n in Love with a young Man called Evathlus, and in vain sollicited the Goddess Venus to bring about their Marriage. Evathlus persisted in his obstinate Coldness, and Calyce took a Journey to the Precipice of Leucas (h). I believe if the Account were faithfully cast up, we should find that more Women than Men had taken this desperate Leap.

(C) Who engag'd themselves every year.] A Passage of Servius has furnished Vinet (i) with this Conjecture. Servius's Words are these: (k) Feminas in sui amorem trahebat (Phaon) in quels fuit una qua de monte Leucate cum potiri ejus nequiret, abjecisse se dicitur; unde nunc auctorare se quotannis solent qui de eo monte jaciunt in pelagus. Vinet thinks this Passage ought to be restor'd thus, unde nunc auctorare se quotannis solent qui se de eo monte jaciunt in pelagus. And that this may signify there were some who veutured for a Sum of Money to take this Leap, as others Articled at such a Price to kill one another on the Amphitheatre. The curious will do well to search to the bottom of this particular. 'Tis certain they ingag'd themselves by a Vow to take this Leap: As appears by the Answer of a Lacedæmonian, who was Slav'd for Recoiling at the sight of the Precipice. I knew not, said he (l), that my Vow would have need of another Vow still greater. Menander's Verses cited by Strabo (m) testify that Sappho made a Vow to Apollo before she threw her self over, that is, probably, she Consecrated that Action to the God. I forgot to say, that there were two Verses of Anacreon concerning the Lovers Leap. Scaliger (n) mentions 'em, but I think that they (o) who say Hephestion has preserved 'em, are mistaken.

(A) To Posidonius's Testimony.] According to which, we must believe that a Phœnician Philosopher called Moschus, who lived before the Siege of Troy, was the Inventer of Atoms; for see what Strabo tells us (p) Εἰ δὲ δεῖ Ποσειδωνίῳ πιστεύειν, ἢ τὰ περὶ τῶν ἀτόμων δόγματα παλαιὸν ἦν ἀνδρὸς Σιδωνίου Μόχου πρὸ τῶν τρωϊκῶν χρόνων γεγονότος. Imo si Posidonio credimus, antiquum de atomis dogma Moschi est, hominis Sidonii qui ante Trojani belli tempus vixit. Sextus Empiricus observes the same thing, and in the same manner as Strabo, that is to say, citing Posidonius, with I know not what signs of distrust (q), which does not appear in Strabo with respect to the other Original Doctrines of Phœnicia. If to this you add the Fabulous Spirit, which Cicero has discover'd in the ways of his (r) Master, you'll be of the Opinion of the Learned Dr. Thomas Burnet, who does not believe, that Moschus ought to be Acknowledged the Inventer of the Hypotheses maintained by Leucippus and Democritus. (s) Video rem totam in unius Posidonii fidem referri, & de hujus fide utrumque authorem subdubitare; cum itaque Atomorum hypothesin invenisse Lucippum aut Democritum multo plures, & probatiores fidei testes affirment: & inter alios hujus ipsius Posidonii discipulus Cicero: his ego libentius assentior; maxime, cum idem Cicero huic philosopho falsidici notam adjicere non vereatur: Quædam etiam Posidonius, pace magistri dixerim commiscri videtur. Perhaps Posidonius was a little touch'd with the Distemper which Reigns in all Ages. We take as much as in us lies the glory of an Invention from those who boast of it, or are not of our Party; and had rather find another Inventer, in the remotest Times and Places.

(B) The Cartesian System resembles.] The Distemper I have been mentioning, appears in our Age, with respect to Mr. Descartes. They endeavour to Rob him of all the glory of the Invention, and divide it amongst other Philosophers, Antient and Modern. I enter not into that enquiry; but only say that in some things, there is reason to believe he has only reviv'd old Notions. For Example, is not the Hypothesis of the Porters, Leucippus's?

(b) Strabo, apud Athen. l. 14. c. 3. p. 619.
(i) In Auson. Cupidin. crucif.
(k) In Æn. l. 3. v. 279.
(l) Plutarch. in Apophth. Lacon.
(m) Lib. 10. p. 311.
(n) In Cirin Virg. p. 69.
(o) Mr. de Longepierre's Life of Sappho.
(p) Strabo. l. 16. p. 512.
(q) Δημόκριτος δὲ καὶ Ἐπίκουρος ἐκ τῆς Φοινικίας ἱστορίας (subaudi λαβόντες εἶναι τὰ τοιαῦτα φασὶ) εἰ μὴ τι παρὰ χρείαν τῶν Φοινίκων ἐπιτηδευμάτων ἐξεῦρον ἢ ἐξ ἑαυτῶν ἐπενόησαν. Ἀπὸ Μόχου τινὸς ἀνδρὸς φυσικοῦ καὶ παλαιοῦ τὴν ἀρχὴν ἔχουσι. Democritus vero & Epicurus atomos (dixerunt esse verum omnium elementa) utli si antiquiorem esse hanc doctrinam sit statuendum, & ut ait Stoicus Posidonius, a Moscho viro quodam Phœnice adductam. Sext. Empiricus adverso Mathem. p. 367.
(r) Cicero had been the Disciple of Posidonius.
(s) T. Burtenius, Archæolphiloloph. l. 1. c. 6. p. 314. Edit. Amstel. 1694.

blame (C) in not having acknowledged how much he was indebted to this Philosopher's Invention. They who have so much Ridicul'd the Invention of Atoms, have not applied the (D) Distinguo with all the exactness that is necessary.

I

(a) Daniel Huetius, Censura Philosophiæ Cartesianæ, cap. 8. pag. m. 213. 214.

(1) Laert. & Hesych. in Leucippo, Democrito & Epicuro.

(b) Τὰ μὲν λεπτὰ μᾶλλον φερόμενα διὰ τὸ κενὸν ἐνδίδοναι πρὸς ἄλληλα· τὰ δὲ ἀγκιστρώδη συνέχεσθαι ἐκ τῆς συμπλοκῆς. Ἐπὶ πλεῖστον δὲ τὸ περιέχον ἐκθεῖν. Ἀναγκαίως

I have often wonder'd, why Leucippus, and those who have trod in his Steps, never bethought 'em of saying that each Atom had an inherent Vital Principle. This Supposition would have deliver'd 'em from a great part (E) of their Perplexity, and there's as much Foundation for it as for the Eternity, and inherent Motion, which they Attribute jections by way of Retortion. Would we make a sound Judgment of Leucippus's System, we must follow that of Dr. Thomas Burnet. Here's what he says of it: (a) Ad hanc sectam Eleaticam aggregari solent Leucippus & Democritus, viri celebres & eximii, qui hypothesin Atomorum invexerunt; quæ licet, mea sententia, falsa sit & male fundata, dedit tamen occasionem philosophandi strictius & accuratius. Hi enim non quærunt corporum principia, aut agendi vires inter numeros, proportiones, harmonias, ideas, qualitates, aut formas elementares, ut ab aliis factum est: sed ipsa adeunt corpora, eorumque conditiones Physicas & Mechanicas examinant, motum, figuram, partium situm, tenuitatem aut magnitudinem, & similia: & ex his cujusque virtutes æstimant, actiones definiunt, effecta explicant, idque recte solideque, ut mihi videtur, hucusque. Quod vero has minutias individuales esse vellent, aut innatum impetum habere, aut inclinationes ad certa loca, aut denique inanibus spatiis disjungi, hæc & hujusmodi, non tantum gratis dicta sunt, sed etiam clarâ rationi repugnantia. Utcunque, cum viam aperuerint ad faciliorem differendi methodum circa res physicas, & in hac parte de republica literariâ non male meruerint, illos laude sua non fraudemus.

(E) This Supposition would have deliver'd them from a great part of their Perplexity.] They might then have had some sort of Answer to an Objection, which they have never been able to solve: 'Tis that which Plutarch (b) proposes to Colotes the Epicurean, and which Galen has urg'd with great force, as we have seen in his Article. It consists in this: That every Atom being destitute of a Soul, and sensitive Faculty, 'tis Evident no Combination of Atoms, can become an animate and sensitive Being. But if every Atom had a Soul and Sensation, we might easily conceive how a Combination of Atoms should make a Compound capable of certain particular Modifications, as well with respect to Consciousness and Sensation, as with respect to Motion. The diversity observable betwixt the Passions of rational and irrational Creatures, might in general be explain'd by these different Combinations of Atoms. 'Tis therefore very surprizing, tho' Leucippus overlook'd the Interests of his System in this Point, that those who came after him should be so blind as never to have added so material an Article; for the easiness of improving the Inventions of others, and the stress of the Dispute might very well have enabled 'em to carry their Views farther than Leucippus had done. We have reason to believe that Democritus had in some measure Remedied the Faults in this Hypothesis. The Passages I have quoted in his Article, seem to intimate, that he assign'd a Soul to every Atom, which is confirm'd by the Testimony of Plutarch: 'Democritus supposes 'that all things are endued with some kind of Soul, 'even Carcasses themselves, for as much as they 'manifestly partake of some degree of Heat and 'Sensation, the greatest part being Evaporated (c). But as none of Democritus's Writings are preserv'd to us, 'tis no easy matter to give a just and exact Summary of his Thoughts on this Head; and besides, we know that this Notion has not been follow'd by the Sect of the Atomists. Neither Epicurus, nor his Successors ever maintained that Atoms were indued with Life or Sense, and they have consider'd the Soul, as a compound of several Parts. They maintain'd that all Sensation ceas'd by the Disunion or Analysis of the parts of this Compound. See below (d) the Discussion of a Critical Remark of Plutarch upon Epicurus. They would have found another great advantage in the Hypothesis of animated Atoms; for their Indivisibility might have furnish'd some Answers to an unsurmountable Objection, which their Opinion is exposed to, who maintain, that Matter may think, that is, be capable of Sensation and Consciousness. This Objection is founded on the Unity, properly so called, which must belong to thinking Beings; for if a thinking Substance were no otherwise one, than as a Globe is one, it would never see a whole Tree; it would never feel Pain upon the Blow of a Stick. To explain this, let us consider the Figure of the four Parts of the World upon a Terrestrial Globe; no one part [illegible] of this Globe contains all Asia, or even the whole River. The part which represents Persia, is not the same with that which represents the Kingdom of Siam; and you distinguish a right side and a left in that part which represents Euphrates. From hence it follows that the Globe is incapable of knowing the Figure, if it is worn'd with, because we can suppose no one thing in it which should say, I know all Europe, all France, all the Town of Amsterdam, all the Vistula; each part of the Globe could only know that Figure or portion of a Figure, which fell to its Lot; and this portion would be too small, to represent any one place intire; nay, it would be absolutely useless, that the Globe should be capable of Knowledge; no one Act of Knowledge could result from that Composition, at least its Acts of Knowledge would be very different from those which we experience; for these represent to us all the Object at once, a whole Tree, or whole Horse, &c. An evident Proof, that the Subject affected with the whole Image of these Objects, is not divisible into many Parts, and consequently that Man, as a thinking Being, is not Corporeal, Material, or Divided, or Compounded of many [illegible]. If otherwise, he'd be perfectly insensible of the stroke of a Cudgel, since the pain would divide its self into as many Particles as the Member smitten consists of. But these Members consist of infinite Particles; so that the portion of Pain, which belonged to each part, would be too small to be perceiv'd or felt. If you Answer that each part of the Soul communicates its Passions to the rest, I'm ready to come over you with two or three Replies, which will throw you back again into the Mire.

I tell you in the 1st. place, that it appears no more possible for the Parts of a Globe to communicate their Pain, than to communicate their Motion. Now 'tis most certain, that each part preserves that quantity of Motion which falls to its Share, and communicates nothing of it to others. Push a Globe; the Motion you communicate to it, equally distributes it self to all the Particles of this Moveable, to each according to its Bulk, and from that time forward, till the Globe [illegible] moving, there's no new Dividend made of [illegible] Motion among its Parts. Why then should you suppose any other Law with respect to Thought; for Instance, with respect to the Pain you might excite in this Globe, by a kick with the Foot? Ought you not to say, that this Pain distributes it self through the whole Globe, and that each part partakes of it, in Proportion to its Magnitude, and retains what falls to its Share? In the 2d. place, I desire your Answer to this short Question. How does the Part A. of the Soul; communicate its Pain to the Parts B. and C. Do's it transfer by fairly divesting it self, in such a manner, that the same numerical Pain, which was lately in the Part A. is now found in the part B? If so, it destroys a most certain and true Maxim (e) That Accidents don't pass from one Subject to another. Besides, it destroys your own Supposition. Your Design is, to shew, that the Pain of a Kick with the Foot must be very smart, though divided into infinite Portions, and you suppose that the Portion, which falls to one part of the Soul, quits that part, and fixes on another. But this way of communicating will not augment the Sensation; for as fast as one part of the Soul communicates it [illegible] Pain, an increase to that degree which we call Intensive, is infallibly prevented, and thus the Difficulty subsists in its full Force. One can't conceive why a Pain, because divided into Infinite Parts, should be an insensible Sensation. You'll say then, that one [illegible] the Soul communicates its Pain to the rest, but retains it, that is to say, produces in the [illegible] Parts a Sensation like its own. But my Objection reverts. This like Sensation produc'd

THAT which thinks ought to be indivisible, the Advantage which the System of Leucippus would have had by Assigning a Soul to each Atom.

(a) Archæolog. philosoph. l. 1. c. 12. p. m. 378.

(b) Plut. adv. Colot. p. 1111.

(c) Ὁ δὲ Δημόκριτος πανταχοῦ μεταξὺ φησὶ ψυχῆς καὶ νοῦ διαφορὰν εἶναι, τὰ γὰρ νοερὰ τῶν σωμάτων, φησὶν, ἀεὶ διαφανῆ τινα σημεῖα καὶ ἀναθυμιάσεις μᾶλλον ἢ πλῆθος ἐμφαίνειν. Democritus porrò omnia ait quandam habere animam, etiam cadavera: quòd hæc sem, er perspicuè aliquid obtineant caloris & sensûs, majori parte expirata. Plut. de plac. Philos. l. 4. c. 4. p. 908. F.

FROM hence that each Atom apart is inanimate, it follows that no Collection or Combination of Atoms can think.

(d) In the Remark N. of the Article Lucretius.

(e) Accidentia non migrant de subjecto in subjectum.

bute to their Indivisible Corpuscles. Let's observe that there was a Sect of (F) Philosophers in the East, who admitted the Hypothesis of Atoms, and a Vacuum; with this amendment, that God had Created those Atoms. And remember that the Vacuum which Gassendus had restor'd, and Descartes overthrown, gets Ground daily, and becomes a new, is it not received into a Subject divisible, ad Infinitum? It will consequently then divide it self into infinite Parts, after the manner of the first, and by this Division each Subject, or each part of the Substance will have only a Degree of Pain so small, so inconsiderable, as not to be felt. Now Experience teaches quite the contrary. My IIId. Reply shall be, that you multiply infinite Things in vain. You can never bring your Notion to bear, but by supposing a Thing inconceivable; to wit, that the Image of a Horse, or of a Square, being received into a Subject infinite Parts, preserve themselves in every Part. This is the Absurdity of the Intentional Species, which the Schoolmen dare hardly any longer advance. It's an Absurdity greater than that of those Doctors, who say the Soul (a) is all in all the Body, and all in every part. But I let that pass, and only ask you, whether your Supposition do's not manifestly include this Monster, that in a famish'd Dog there are infinite Substances, which feel the Gnawings of Hunger, and in a Man who reads, infinite Things, which read and know each other they read. Mean time, we all know by Experience, that there's only one thing in us, which knows that it reads, that is Hungry, that it feels Pain or Joy, &c. To what end then serves this Multiplicity of Substances, which read in every Reader, which hunger and thirst in every Animal, &c. This Consequence you cannot deny, since to disengage your self from the Inconveniencies to which you are exposed by the Division of Thought into as many parts, as there are parts in the Substance of a material Soul, you are forced to affirm that the Parts of the Soul, by reciprocally communicating their Modifications, preserve the Sensation entire in every part. This puts me in mind of a very good Argument, which a Sect of Philosophers, whom I shall mention in the following Remark, imploy'd to maintain the Spirituality of God. If God is a Body, said they, the Perfection of his Being is found either in all the individual Substances of his Body, or in one alone. If in all, there are then many Gods; if only in one, the rest are superfluous (b). Si Deus est corpus, tum Divinitas & Veritas ejus perficietur vel in universalitate & complexu Substantiarum individuarum corporis illius, quod habet, vel in una tantùm. Si perficiatur in una, tum nulla est utilitas reliquarum, sed sunt superflua: nullaque est ratio essentiæ illius corporis, (quia una substantia individua non potest corpus constituere.) Si in omnibus erunt Divinitates multæ, & singulis perficiatur; sed verò jam demonstrârunt, non verò Deus unus. Ergo. Deum esse unum. You'll tell me (†) perhaps, that the Soul does not see all the parts of a Horse at once, but one after another, that this Succession is so quick, that it is imperceptible, and that the Impression received the first Instant, lasts long enough, to be united with the Impression of the following Instant; whence it happens, that the Soul believes, it sees the Parts of an Object, which really acts no longer upon it. Thus the Soul thinks, she sees a Circle of Fire; when one turns round a Flaming Stick. She sees the Parts of this Circle successively, and yet she thinks she sees 'em all at once. Which proceeds from hence, that the Impression she has received, lasts longer than the Action of the Object. I answer, that this Subterfuge will not bring you off. It signifies nothing against my last, nor even against some of my former Objections, it can only serve to dazzle a little on account of the Disproportion betwixt the Greatness of the Object and the Smallness of the thinking Substance. But what could you reply, should I say, that a Man attentively beholds an immoveable Body, a Wall for Example, the same part of the Object which struck him the first impreceptible Instant, must strike him every following Instant; for no Reason can be assigned, why it should cease acting on the Soul. It acts, then at the same time, as all the other Parts; but tell me if you can, how the Image of a Wall can be fitted all at the same Instant, to a Subject divisible ad Infinitum. This and many other Arguments to be seen in the Writings (c) of some Moderns, invincibly proves that Thought is incompatible with a compound Being.

I have enlarged on this matter, on purpose to confirm what I had before laid down, that Leucippus, Epicurus, and the other Atomists, might have warded many unanswerable Objections, if they had bethought themselves of giving a Soul to every Atom. They would thereby have united Thought to an indivisible Subject, and they had as good ground to suppose Atoms animated, as to suppose 'em uncreated, and endued with a moving Virtue. 'Tis as difficult to conceive this Virtue in an Atom, as that of Sensation. Extension and Solidity, constitute the whole Essence of an Atom in our Idea. The Power of moving is not included in it. It's as foreign and independant of Body and Extension, as that of Consciousness. Why then, since the Atomists supposed in their Corpuscles a self-moving Force, would they rob 'em of Thought? I know they could not have avoided all Difficulties, by arbitrarily ascribing it to 'em, they might still have been pressed (d) with invincible Objections. Yet there had been some Glory in parrying a Thrust here and there. Let us observe, that very great Philosophers have made the principal Properties of the Soul to consist (e) in a self-moving Power. 'Tis by this Attribute they have characterized and defined it. Would any one then have thought it strange, that they who gave Atoms the Principle of Motion, should give 'em a Soul too.

(F) A Sect of Philosophers in the East, who admitted the Hypothesis of Atoms.] The famous Rabbi Maimonides speaks at large of this Sect of Philosophers. They were called (f) The Speakers. They principally exercised themselves (g) on these four Points. 1. That the World is not eternal. 2. That it was created. 3. That its Creator is one. 4. That he is incorporeal. This Rabbi mentions the Twelve Principles, they laid down for their Foundation. The second of which was, that there's a Void, and the Third, that Time is made up of indivisible Instants. It does not appear, that their Atoms were like those of Leucippus; for they (h) gave 'em no Magnitude, and made 'em all exactly alike. Maimonides presses 'em hard (i) on their being forced to deny, that one moveable went faster than another, and that the Diagonal of a Square was longer than one of its sides. These Difficulties obliged 'em to say (k) that the Senses deceive us, and that we must trust to our Reason alone. Some even (l) went so far, as to deny the Existence of a square Figure. Let us say by the by, that they might have retorted these Difficulties, and let's challenge all the Patrons of Divisibility in infinitum, to answer the Arguments which prove that the Diagonal of a Square, is not longer than one of the Sides. For the rest, these Arabian Philosophers supposed in part, what I have said Leucippus ought to have done; they taught, that every Atom of Animate Bodies, was animated, and every Atom of Sensitive Bodies, sensitive, and that the Understanding resided in an Atom. There was no dispute among 'em on this Point; but as to the Soul, they divided into two Opinions about it; some said, she was lodged in one of the Atoms, of which Man for Example is composed. Others compounded her of many very subtil Substances. They were divided much the same as to Knowledge. Some Placed it in a single Atom, and others in each of the Atoms which constitute the knowing Person. (m) Vita, ex ipsorum sententia, existit in unaquaque particula corporis viventis. Ita dicunt, quamvis particulam Animantis sensu præditi, sensilem quoque esse. Nam Vita, Sensus, Intellectus & Sapientia ipsis sunt Accidentia, non minus quàm Nigredo & Albedo. De Anima dissentiunt. Quidam statuunt, Animam esse accidens existens in uno aliquo atomorum illorum, è quibus homo verbi gratiâ compositus est; totum autem compositum vocari Animatum, quia substantia illa individua vel atomum illud in eo continetur. Alii dicunt, Animam esse compositam ex multis subtilissimis substantiis accidens quoddam habentibus, quo unantur & conjungantur, & animata (n) fiant, substantiasque illas cum substantiis corporis commiscent. Ex

(a) Tota in toto & tota in singulis partibus.

(b) Moses Maimonides in Doctore perplexorum parte I. cap. 76. p. m. 176.

(c) No one in my Opinion has treated this Important Question about the Immortality and Indivisibility of whatever thinks more sublimely and solidly than Dom [redacted] Benedictin of the Order of St. Maur, in his excellent Work of the Knowledge of One's [redacted] THER the Perception of a Body in former [redacted] Soul.

(d) See those which St. Augustin proposes in his 56*th. Epist. p. m.* 273. & seq.

(e) See Aristotle de anima, lib. I. cap. 2. & Plutarch de placitis Philosophor. lib. 4. cap. 2.

(f) See the Marginal Note of Buxtorf, at the beginning of the 60*th. Chap. of the* 1*st. Part of his Translation of* More Nevochim, sive Doctoris perplexorum, de Mosis Maimonides.

(g) Maimonides, ib. cap. 73. pag. 148.

(h) Id. ib. pag. 149.

(i) Ibid. pag. 150.

(k) Ibid. pag. 151,

(l) Ibid.

(m) Id. ib. pag. 152. 153.

(n) I believe it ought to be read Animatæ, and so the Opinion of these Philosophers would be, that each part of the Soul is animated.

becomes the favourite Doctrine of the (G) famouſeſt Mathematicians.

Ex quibus vides, illos Animam quoque inter Accidentia referre. Intellectum quod attinet, unanimi conſenſu affirmant, quòd ſit accidens in ſubſtantia quadam individua totius Intelligentiæ. De Scientia hærent, an ſit accidens exiſtens in unaquaque ſubſtantia individua ſcientiæ, an in una tantum?

(G) The Vacuum——becomes the favourite Doctrine of the famouſeſt Mathematicians.] Plutarch (a) affirms 1. That a Vacuum was rejected down from Thales to Plato. 2. That Leucippus, Democritus, Demetrius, Metrodorus, and Epicurus, admitted an infinite Void. 3. That the Stoicks taught, that all was a Plenum in the World, and beyond it an infinite Vacuum. 4. That Ariſtotle acknowledged beyond the World, only ſo much Vacuum, as was ſufficient for the Heavens to breath in; adding, that the Heaven is Fire. I don't know where Ariſtotle has taught this Doctrine, but I know where he denied (b) that there are Bodies beyond the Heaven, which ſuppoſes his admitting an infinite Vacuum, for nothing could be more abſurd, than ſuppoſing above the higheſt Heaven, a void and finite Space. Note, that he teaches in the ſame Place, that there is neither Place, nor Void, nor Time, above the higheſt Heaven; however, it's only a Queſtion about the Word; for he rejects the Void, only as defined to be a Space, which contains no Body but which may contain it. He maintained, that it was not poſſible, there ſhould be Bodies above the World; therefore he could not admit a Vacuum according to this Definition; but he had doted, if taking the Void ſimply and generally, for whatever contains or includes any Body, he had ſaid, that beyond the laſt Celeſtial Sphere, there was no Void. Chriſtian Philoſophers profeſſing his Doctrines, have taught what Plutarch attributes to the Stoicks, that all is full within the World, and that beyond it there's an infinite Void. This they call the Imaginary Spaces, and don't believe it to be a Vacuum properly ſo called, though it includes no Body; for by a Vacuum, or Void, they underſtand the Space, which containing no Body, is yet ſurrounded by Bodies on all Parts. 'Tis manifeſt, that this Definition belongs not to the imaginary Spaces. As concerning the Plenitude of the World, they have admitted it, as a Fundamental Point, dear and precious to Nature; ſaying, ſhe had ſuch a Horror for a Vacuum, that ſhe'll rather violate her own Laws, than ſuffer it to wriggle it ſelf in on any ſide. She makes light Bodies deſcend, and heavy Bodies aſcend, as often as a Vacuum threatens, ſay they; theſe Motions are contrary to her own Laws, and commit a Rape on the Elements, but what ſhall we do in this caſe, is it not lawful and juſt, of two Evils, to chooſe the leaſt? The Modern Philoſophers have ſufficienly ridiculed theſe Viſions. Galileo and his Succeſſor Toricelli, reſtore the Doctrine of a Vacuum; Gaſſendus, the great reſtorer of Leucippus's Syſtem, brings it into Faſhion, and pretends to prove it demonſtratively. Mr. Deſcartes declares for a Plenum, and puſhes the thing much farther than Ariſtotle's Followers had done; for he not only maintains there's no Vacuum, but alſo, that its abſolutely impoſſible there ſhould be any; he goes upon this, that the Vacuum having all the Properties, and all the Eſſence of Body, that is, its three Dimenſions, 'twere a Contradiction in Terms to pretend, that the Vacuum is a Space, without Body. The Idenity he eſtabliſhed betwixt Space and Body, was thought by moſt People a great Paradox; they cried out, that he detracted from the Divine Omnipotence, as teaching, that God himſelf could not by a Miracle effect, that a Veſſel remaining a Veſſel, ſhould not be filled with ſome Body. This is doubtleſs a Conſequence of his Doctrine, but which does not ſtrike at the Omnipotence of God; the Queſtion is not concerning the Omnipotence, but only whether whatever has three Dimenſions is a Body. Many have thought Mr. Deſcartes's Arguments very ſolid, and believ'd that by the help of his ſubtil Matter, Motion and Plenitude might be eaſily reconciled, and they have found a Paralogiſm (c) in the pretended Demonſtrations of Mr. Gaſſendi. Thus the Reign of the Plenum ſeemed to be better eſtabliſhed than ever, when to our great ſurprize, we found ſome mighty Mathematicians of the contrary Opinion. Mr. Hugens (d) has declared for a Vacuum, Mr. Newton (e) has taken the ſame ſide, and hath ſolidly oppoſed this Hypotheſis of Mr. Deſcartes, as inconſiſtent with Motion, Levity, and ſome other Phænomena. Mr. Fatio is of Mr. Newton's Opinion, and I have heard him ſay, that the Exiſtence of a Vacuum is not a Problem, but a certain Fact, and Mathematically demonſtrated. He added, that the void Space is incomparably greater than the full. This new Sect patronizing a Vacuum, repreſents the Univerſe as an infinite Space, in which are ſcatter'd certain Bodies, which in Compartſon of that Space are no more than as Ships diſperſed here and there on the Ocean. So that they, whoſe Sight ſhould be good enough to diſtinguiſh what was full, from what was empty, would cry out, (f) apparent rari nantes in gurgite vaſto. What's perplexing to the new Patrons of a Vacuum, is, that they find the Carteſian Arguments againſt the Nothingneſs of Space very ſtrong, ſo as they dare not maintain, that Space is a pure Privation. When therefore they are aſked, what theſe Spaces are, which have really three Dimenſions, are diſtinct from Body, and ſuffer themſelves to be penetrated by Bodies, without making any Oppoſition, they know not what to anſwer, and are almoſt induced to adopt the Chimera of ſome Peripateticks, who had the Boldneſs to ſay (g) that Space is nothing, but the Immenſity of God. This would be a very abſurd Doctrine, as Mr. Arnauld has ſhewn in the Work (h) where he pretends, that Father Mallebranche ſeems to attribute to God a formal Extenſion. Note, that Mr. Hartſoeker, a good Phyſician and Mathematician, has taken the mid-way betwixt Deſcartes and the new Followers of a Vacuum, for if on one Hand he pretends, that Motion is impoſſible in the Carteſian Syſteme, he'll on the other ſide have the fluid Expanſe, in which Bodies float, and ſcud at their eaſe, not to be a pure Space, or penetrable Extenſion (i).

From this we may collect two Things. One is, that theſe great Mathematicians, who demonſtrate a Vacuum, give the Scepticks greater Pleaſure, than they imagine. Obſerve how. The Mind of Man has no Ideas more clear and diſtinct than thoſe of the Nature and Attributes of Extenſion. This is the Foundation of Mathematicks. Now theſe Ideas manifeſtly ſhew, that Extenſion is a Being, which has partes extra partes, and which conſequently is diviſible and impenetrable. We know by Experience the Impenetrability of Bodies; and if we ſeek the Origin and Reaſon of it à priori, we find it with the utmoſt Perſpicuity in the Idea of Extenſion, and of the Diſtinction of the Parts of extended Being, and can't poſſibly conceive any other Foundation of it. We conceive Extenſion, not as a Genus, which contains under it two Species (k), but as a Species, which has under it only Individuals. Whence we conclude, that the Attributes found in any one Extenſion, are found alſo in every other. In the mean time, here are Mathematicians, who demonſtrate a Vacuum, that is an indiviſible and penetrable Extenſion, ſo that a Globe of four Feet Diameter, and the ſpace it fills, which is alſo of four Feet, are no more than four Feet of Extenſion. There is therefore no truſting to any clear and diſtinct Ideas, none upon which our Mind can bottom, ſince that of Extenſion is found to have miſerably deceived us. This Idea had induced us to believe, that whatever is extended, has impenetrable Parts; but here's now a Space Mathematically demonſtrated, a Space, I ſay, with Three Dimenſions, which is immoveable, and which ſuffers other Dimenſions to paſs and repaſs, without moving it ſelf, or opening for 'em. The ſecond thing I have to ſay, is, that Spinoza's Syſtem is choak'd by this twofold Extenſion in the Univerſe, one penetrable, continued, and immoveable, the other diſpenetrable, and ſeparated into Parcels, which are ſometimes ſeparted a Hundred Leagues from one another. I believe the Spinoziſts would find themſelves ſtrangely puzled, if they were forced to admit Mr. Newton's Demonſtrations.

I mentioned above, an Obſervation of the Philoſophers of the Sect of the Speakers. The Rabbi [illegible] confutes it after this manner (l):

(a) Plut. de placit. Philoſoph. lib. 1. cap. 18. pag. 883.

(b) Ariſtotel. de cœlo, lib. 1. cap. 9. pag. m. 348.

(c) See the Art of Thinking, 3d. part. chap. 18. n. iv, p. m. 28. & ſeq. and note, that Ariſtotle, lib. 4, Phyſ. cap. 7. p. 286. gives a Sketch of the Anſwers which Mrs. of Portroyal makes to Gaſſendi.

(d) See his Diſcourſe on the Cauſe of Gravitation, pag. 162.

(e) Newton. Philoſ. Natur. prine. Mathem. pag. 411.

(f) Virgil. Æneid. lib. 1. v. 118.

(g) See de Rodon, in the 6th. Chap. of 1ſt. Part of his Phyſicks abridg'd, p. m. 35.

(h) Among other Writings of his, ſee his Defence, printed in 1684.

(i) Hartſoecker, Principles of Phyſicks, chap. 1.

(k) See the Defence of Mr. Arnauld, part 5. pag. 371. and the following.

(l) Moſes Maimonides ubi ſupra, pag. 176.

LÆVIUS, a Latin Poet. It is not certainly known when he lived; but it's probable, 'twas before Cicero's time. He wrote a Poem, intituled, Erotopægnia, that is, the Sports of Love. Aulus Gellius quotes two Verſes from it. Apuleius [a] gives us ſix from the ſame Poet, but does not ſay what Work of his he takes 'em from. Lævius writ a Poem, called the Centaurs. Feſtus cites it as the Word Petrarum. I (A) ſhall obſerve ſome Faults.

Noct. Attic. lib. 2. c. 24.
[a] In Apologia.

LEUWENTZ, a Town of Hungary. I mention it only to correct two groſs Faults of (B) Moreri's Supplement.

LICINIA, a Veſtal, puniſhed for her Unchaſtity, about the 640th. Year of Rome. There were three lewd Veſtals all at the ſame time. Lucius Metellus, the Pontifex Maximus, not having puniſhed this Diſorder ſo rigorouſly as he ſhould have done, was proſecuted for his Remiſſneſs on an Impeachment of Sextus Peducæus, Tribune of the People. He condemned only [γ] one of the Three Veſtals, and acquitted the other Two [δ]. Licinia was one of the latter; though no leſs guilty than ſhe that was condemned. They were both mightily cry'd out againſt for the Numbers of their Gallants, and they accuſed one another. At firſt, they had to do but with a few of their beſt Friends, and that under the Seal of ſworn Secrecy, declaring to each, that he was the only Perſon, who had received the Favour; afterwards, the Number of Sharers encreaſed at a ſtrange rate; for the longer they liv'd in this Diſorder, the eaſier it was to convict 'em of it. They had then reaſon to fear Tell-tales; and could think of no better way of obliging all to Silence, than granting to all the laſt Favour. This did not pleaſe the firſt Gallants: However, they durſt not make a Noiſe; too loud Complaints would only have betrayed 'em. The Evil took ſuch a Head, that the two Veſtals made no longer any Difficulty of giving themſelves up to ſeveral Gallants, and that in Sight and Hearing of each other [ζ]. For ſome time I'll ſuppoſe they might have lived together in a good Underſtanding. However it be, 'tis certain, that each had the other's Brother for Gallant; a great many of both Sexes, Freemen and Slaves, were privy to the Intrigues of theſe Veſtals; nevertheleſs, their Crime remained a ſecret for a long time, as to what we call the Publick. At laſt, one Manius, who had been the firſt Inſtrument or Pimp to the Amour, turn'd Informer. He had not been made free, nor recompenced to the Height of his Expectation; and beſides, was a Man, who delighted in Miſchief [ε]. I have already ſaid, that the Pontifex Maximus, the proper Judge of Offences of this kind, had not the neceſſary Severity. The Diſcontents which his Lenity had occaſioned, was the reaſon of giving Lucius Caſſius a Commiſſion, (C) to re-examine the Proceſs. He was a vigorous inflexible γ She was called Emilia.

δ Aſconius Pedianus in Orat. pro Milone.
ζ See the Excerpta of Dion, tranſlated by Henry Valois, pag. 627. 628.
ε Dio ib.
ζ Ibid.

Hanc rationem ſi conſideraveris, invenies illam ſuperſtructam eſſe propoſitioni ipſorum prima & quinta, ac proinde nullius eſſe ponderis. Poteſt enim illis dici, Corpus Dei non eſt, ut dicitis vos, compoſitum ex conjunctione particularum ejuſmodi individuarum, quales Ipſe creavit; ſed eſt corpus unum continuum, nullam niſi in Cogitatione admittens diviſionem. The Anſwer this Rabbi ſuppoſes might be made, is not very wide of their Poſition, who admit a poſitive Space, which is the Deity it ſelf.

(A) I ſhall obſerve ſome Miſtakes.] Since Voſſius (a) had been appriſed of theſe two laſt Citations, which I obſerve, 'tis very ſtrange, he ſhould reckon Lavius among the Poets, of whom we know no more, than that they lived before the Days of Charlemagne. But this is a ſmall Slip in Compariſon of the Blunder of an Author (b), who has corrected in Aulus Gellius, Livius, inſtead of Lavius, imagining that Aulus Gellius had cited Livius Andronicus. How could this Livius be cited in a Paſſage, which concerned a Law (c) made in the 656th. Year of Rome? how, I ſay, could he be cited on this occaſion, who was a grown Man in the 514th. Year of Rome? For one (d) of his Comedies had been acted that Year. The Author I confute, pretends, that Naevius and Pacuvius flouriſhed after Livius Andronicus; but had not he ſeen a Paſſage in Aulus Gellius, which manifeſtly proves, that this Livius could not be acquainted with this Licinian Law? Aulus Gellius tells us (e) that Nævius had one of his Comedies acted in the 519th. Year of Rome, and that he bore Arms in the firſt Punick War.

(a) De Poët. Lat.
(b) Philippus Carolus, Animadverſ. in Gellium, pag. 163.
(c) This was the Sumptuary Law of Licinius.
(d) This was the firſt that was acted in Rome. See Cicero in Bruto.
(e) Lib. 17. cap. 21.

(B) Three great Faults of Moreri's Supplement.] I. To affirm, that this Town depends on the Archduke of Auſtria, is abuſing his Reader; for 'tis ſuppoſing, either that this Town is annexed to the Archduchy of Auſtria, or that it belongs to a Prince diſtinct from his Imperial Majeſty, and yet known by the Title of Archduke of Auſtria. Both of which are falſe. Nothing was eaſier than underſtanding this Phraſe of Mr. Baudrand, which has been miſconſtrued, ſub dominio Auſtriacorum etiamnum. Mr. Baudrand had wrote his Dictionary (f) before the Loſſes which the Turks had ſuffered in Hungary, and whilſt they were in Poſſeſſion of their laſt Conqueſts, and particularly of Newhauſel, of which he had been ſpeaking. For which Reaſon he thought himſelf obliged to obſerve, that the Houſe of Auſtria was ſtill in Poſſeſſion of Leuwentz; for having ſaid before, that this Town depended on the Government of Neuhauſel, he led his Readers to believe, that this Place had been alienated ever ſince the Ceſſion of Neuhauſel to the Turks, by the Treaty of 1664. The IId. Fault is moſt abſurd. Mr. de Souches, who beat the Turks at Leuwentz in 1664, was not General of the French, tho' he was a Frenchman. He ſhould here have diſtinguiſhed theſe two Things the more carefully, becauſe the French had extreamly magnify'd the part they had in the Defeat of the Turks at the Paſſage of Raab in 1664. Mr. Baudrand is ſecure from this Criticiſm, tho' his Phraſe Grandi clade affecti fuere à Souchio Duce Gallo, is a little too equivocal.

(f) Printed at Paris, 1682.

(C) Of giving (g) Lucius Caſſius a Commiſſion to re-examine the Proceſs.] Aſconius Pedianus gives us this Account of it: Ob quam ſeveritatem quo tempore Sextus Peducæus Tribunus plebis criminatus eſt L. Metellum Pontif. Max. totumque collegium Pontificum male judicaſſe de inceſtu Virginum Veſtalium, quod unam modo Æmiliam damnaverat, abſolverat autem duas, Martiam & Liciniam, populus hunc Caſſium creavit qui de eiſdem virginibus quæreret, iſque & utraſque eas & præterea complures alias nimia etiam, ut exiſtimatio eſt, aſperitate uſus damnavit. Inſtead of alias, I ſhould read alios, for the Number of the Veſtals was too ſmall, to ſay, after the Condemnation of two, that many others were condemned. We muſt ſay then, that theſe many others of Aſconius, were the Gallants, the Bawds, &c. of the Veſtals. Dion obſerves, that the Criminal Veſtals involv'd abundance of People in their Misfortune: Αι ἱερειαι τὸ μεγιστον αὐται τῶ τε ἀλλῳ τῆς πολεως ἀλλα, συχνοις δὲ καὶ ἰδιωταις μεγαλων κακων αἰτιαι ἐγενοντο, ὡς τε πολλοις ἀνδρασι διʼ αὐτὰς ἐπαρχθη-(g) See the Article Caſſius.

Virgines Veſtales ipſæ quidem maximam mali ac dedecoris partem tulere; ſed tamen alios quoque plurimos flexible Judge, as I have ſhewn in ſpeaking of him. Licinia was far from escaping out of his Clutches: For how could ſhe hope to eſcape the Sentence of Death when (D) Martia her Companion, who had toy'd with only one Roman Knight, could not eſcape? Caſſius's ſevere Methods for the diſcovering and convicting the Accomplices, were ſo extraordinary, that they were thought to have exceeded the juſt Bounds [a].

[a] See in the Remark A, the Words of Alconius Pedianus.

LYCOPHRON, the Son of Periander, King of Corinth, had a very odd Deſtiny. He was Seventeen Years old when Meliſſa his Mother was kill'd by Periander, and had a Brother [b] a Year elder than he. Procles their Grandfather by the Mother's ſide, King of Epidaurus, invited 'em to his Court, and when he ſent 'em back to their Father, he told 'em they ought not to forget who it was that [illegible] their Mother. Lycophron, was ſo ſtruck at this Saying, that being returned to Corinth, he ſet on a ſtubborn Reſolution of Silence, and would neither ask his Father a Queſtion, nor anſwer him. Periander inraged at his Carriage, expell'd him his Houſe, and underſtanding from his eldeſt Son, what Procles had ſa[illegible] he forbad thoſe who had received Lycophron into their Houſes, to entertain [illegible]er. The young Man conſtrained to decamp, found a Reception elſewhere, for ſome Days; but as ſoon as his Quarters were known, Orders were ſent to his Landlord to turn him out of Doors; at laſt, a Decree was publiſhed, impoſing a Fine at Diſcretion, to Apollo, on any, who either lodged, or vouchſafed to ſpeak to him. This Order was obeyed, and Lycophron lay for Four Days and Four Nights in the Streets, without Eating or Drinking. Periander touched with Compaſſion, went then to ſpeak to him, and tenderly repreſented, how much better it were for him to ſucceed to his Riches and Crown, than make himſelf miſerable by a miſtaken Reſentm[illegible]ll the Anſwer he could get from him was, that he ought to pay the Fine, ſi[illegible]ad ſpoken himſelf to his Son. Periander finding the Diſeaſe incurable, ſent Lycophron away to Corfou, and there let him run, without ever once thinking of him, till he found old Age coming on, and rendring him incapable of diſcharging his Kingly Functions. The Incapacity of his other Son obliged him to ſend and offer Lycophron the Go[illegible]ment. He ſlighted the Propoſition, and would not vouchſafe, ſo much as to [illegible] to the Meſſenger. His Siſter was diſpatched to him, and vainly repreſented all [illegible] Sweets of Sovereign Authority. At laſt a Propoſal was made, that he ſhould co[illegible] and Reign at Corinth, and his Father would Reign at Corfou. He accepted the Condition; but the Inhabitants of Corfou ſlew him, to prevent a Change which was not to their Advantage. This, in my Opinion, is ſuch an Abridgment (X) as ought to be made of Herodotus's Narration [c].

[b] Diogen. Laert. in vita Periandri calls him Cypſelus.

[c] Taken from Herodotus, lib. 3. cap. 50. & ſeq.

LYCOPHRON, a Greek Poet. You'll find in Moreri, what Countrey he was of, and when he lived. The Poem (Y) which we have of his, is a very obſcure Piece; but in my Opinion, he muſt have had not only a deal of Learning, but a great deal of Wit, to compoſe ſuch a Book. You'll find in Mr. le Fevre [d] Abundance of learned and ingenious Thoughts on the Obſcurities of it. I know not why he ſhould ſay, that Suidas has preſerved the Names of Twelve or Thirteen Tragedies written by Lycophron; for we find in Suidas, the Titles of Twenty. This Poet was killed

[d] Life of the Greek Poets, p. m. 135. & the following.

(a) Excerpta ex Dione. p. 620.

(b) Dio. ibid.

(c) See the Penſees diverſes ſur les Cometes, pag. 508.

(d) Cum pœne in pluribus virginibus & quæ inconſultius ſe viris miſcuiſſent, Veſta ſane neſciente, ſit inceſtum vindicatum: in reſiduis impunitatem fecerint, non caſtitas ruitor, ſed impudicitia felicior. Minut. Felix, p. m. 236.

(e) Diog. Laert. in vita Periandri.

in graviſſima mala conjecere, & univerſam civitatem ſuo ſcelere perturbavere (a).

(D) Martia her Companion, who had toy'd with only one.] If her Companions had been as moderate as ſhe, 'tis probable, they might have violated their Rule with Impunity. Poſſibly too, Martia would neither have loſt her Reputation nor her Life, if to redreſs the Lenity of the former Judges, the too rigid Lucius Caſſius had not been commiſſioned. (b) Μαρκια μεν γε τις και ετερα τοιαυτα γεγενηται, ουδεν αν διελαθεν ει μη τις ζηλωτης επι τον αλλον επι πλειστον ηρεθισεν ει μη επι τοσουτον . . . . δια ταυτα ει τις καλοιτο ο μονον τον ιλεχθεντα μονον αλλα ει τις, αλλον πασιν τοις αιτιωτατον μονον τω συμβεβηκοτι ενεγκοντα. Marcia quidem ſeorſim cum uno equite Romano rem habuerat, ac fortaſſis latere potuiſſet, niſi latius porrecta quæſtio eam quoque involviſſet——Itaque odio admiſſi tanti ſceleris non modo de convictis, ſed de omnibus qui delati erant ſupplicium ſumptum. 'Tis a remarkable thing, and which diſcovers much the Empire of Conſtitution, that the Veſtals fell into Incontinence, in ſpight of the dreadful Puniſhment and prodigious Infamy, they were expoſed to, (c) and in ſpight of the actual Puniſhment of their Companions. Minutius Felix has touched upon this (d).

(X) This is the Abridgment I think ought to be made.] Diogenes Laertius (e) has mangled this Narration. Mr. Moreri, not content to mutilate, and falſifie, has perplexed it with an obſcure Jargon. What he ſays of Lycophron's being averſe and conſtantly refuſing to return to Corinth, is formally contradicted by Herodotus. Mr. Hoffman is in the ſame Error.

(Y) The Poem which we have of his.] Its intituled Alexandra, and contains [illegible] Train of Predictions. The Author ſuppo[illegible] Caſſandra, Daughter of Priam, is the Ora[illegible] which foretold all theſe Things; but however, 'tis not ſhe that ſpeaks, but a Man, who gives a faithful Account to Priam, of all Caſſandra's Prophecies (f). Dedion, Orus, and Theon had written Notes upon this Poem, which are long ſince loſt (g). Tzetzes's Commentary is ſtill in being: Amongſt the Modern Criticks, [illegible] Canterus, and John Meurſius have learnedly imp[illegible]ed themſelves on Lycophron's Alexandra. Meurſius's Edition is accompanied with a Latin Tranſlation, compoſed by Joſeph Scaliger, and ſuited to the Character of the Original, as being very difficult to underſtand, and thick ſet with barbarous Terms.

(f) See [illegible]ment.

(g) See Voſſius de Poet. Græcis, pag. 64.

The beſt Edition of this Poet, is that which was publiſhed at Oxford in 1697, in Folio. Mr. Potter, who procured it, has done all that was proper to recommend it. He has corrected the Greek Text; over againſt each Verſe of Lycophron, he has ſet down William Canterus's Latin Tranſlation, which is in Proſe; Under it the Commentary of Iſaac Tzetzes with the Corrections and various Readings. He [illegible] Scaliger's Verſion, which is in Iambick Ver[illegible]ſelf, and then the Notes of Canterus, the C[illegible]mentary of Meurſius, and his own, which are very learned. All this is ſupported with many exact and commodious Indexes. Mr. de Boiſſieu aſſures us (b) that his Father, who was well vers'd in ſeveral Languages, and [illegible] famous for Learning as Arms, had written a [illegible]entary on Lycophron; but he does not tell us, whether this Work was ever printed.

(b) Dionyſius Salvagnius Boeſſius not. ad Ovidium in Ibin. v. 389. pag. 77. Ed. 1633. in 4.

Ovid's

[redacted] killed by an Arrow; Ovid (Z) is the only Author who informs us of this particular.

LYCORIS. 'Tis the name Virgil gives a famous Curtezan, whom other Authors call Cytheris. He speaks of her in his 10*th*. Eclogue, and that to comfort (A) a Friend of his in Diſtraction on her preferring Mark Anthony before him. We have ſpoken amply elſewhere « of Mark Anthony's Fondneſs for Cytheris; but not given the Hiſtory of this Woman fully enough. Let us ſay then, that ſhe was a famous Comedian whom Volumnius (B) fell in Love with, and made Free. This was the reaſon of her taking the name Volumnia, in her Travels with Mark Anthony through the Towns of Italy. [redacted] Anthony cauſed great Honours to be paid her, carried her about in an open Litter, and made his Mother's Equipage follow, as 'twere to make up the Train of this

« In the Article Fulvia, Remark Q.

(a) [redacted] periiſſe Lycophrona, narrant, Hæret in fibris miſſa ſagitta tuis. Ovid. in Ibin, v. 533.

(b) Not. in Ibin Ovidii apud Boiſſeu, p. 107.

(c) Comment. in Ibin. p. 107.

(d) Arnob. l. 6. p. m. 193.

(e) Theodoret. l. 8. de Grac. affect. curat.

(f) In Eclogam 10. Virgilii.

(g) See Scaliger in Euſebii Chron. 1990. p. 167.

(h) Amorum ſuorum de Cytheride libros [redacted] ibid.

(i) Ubi ſupra.

(k) Velitabatur in eſſedo Trib. plebis: lictor [redacted] inter quos apertâ lectica MIMA [redacted] municipales homines honeſti obviam neceſſario prodeuntes, non vero illo & mimico nomine, ſed VOLUMNIAM confalutabant. Cicer. Philipp. 2. p. m. 736.

In the 11*th. Letter of the* 10*th. Book to* Atticus, he calls Cytheris [redacted] whom Mark Anthony carried about with him, Plutarch in Antonio, calls her Cytheris. (l) Epiſt. 26. l. 9. ad famil. (m) The 32*d. of Book* 7. ad famil. (n) Abram in Cicer. Orat. Tom. 2. p. 645.

(Z) Ovid the only Author who informs us of this particular (a).] [redacted] Volumnius (b) who pretends that [redacted] Lycophron, is miſtaken, as the Learned [redacted] Boiſſeu (c) obſerves. He ſhews that Theodoret does not ſpeak of Lycophron's Death, nor even of the place of his Sepulture. For inſtead of Lycophrone it ought to be read Leucophryne; as appears by this Paſſage of Arnobius: (d) Leucophryna monumentum in fano apud Magneſiam Dianæ eſſe, Myndius profitetur ac memorat Zeno. Theſe are Mr. de Boiſſeu's Words: De obiitu Lycophronis ne verbum quidem apud illum (Theodoretum) reperitur: deinde Th[redacted]i locus (e) ——ubi ex Zenone, Lycophrone in Dianæ Magneſiæ templo conditum eſſe refert plane depravatus eſt, & pro Lycophrone, reponendum eſt Leucophryne, cujus monumentum erat apud Magnetes in Dianæ templo, ut ex eodem Zenone tradit Arnobius. I wonder Mr. le Fevre has not mentioned this paſſage of Ovid.

(A) Anthony to comfort a Friend of his.] This Friend, I believe Servius (f) was the Orator Caius Asinius Gallus, the Son of Asinius Pollio. [redacted] as Servius adds, that this Gallus is the firſt, who was made Governour of Ægypt, the Learned ſuſpect his Commentary; for it's manifeſt he has confounded the Poet Cornelius Gallus with the Orator Asinius Gallus (g). The firſt who obtain'd of Auguſtus the Government of Ægypt immediately after the Conqueſt of this Kingdom, was the Poet Cornelius Gallus. 'Tis probably to him, that Virgil Addreſſes his Eclogue of Conſolation, on the barbarous Infidelities of the Curtezan Cytheris. The Perſon to whom the Poet Inſcribes it, Compoſed four Books of Poems upon his own Amours (h). There are ſome Fragments of 'em in being, if we believe the Criticks.

(B) Whom Volumnius fell in Love with and made free.] Servius declares that Virgil's Lycoris was the Curteſan Cytheris, whom Volumnius had made Free; Hic autem Gallus amavit Cytheridem meretricem libertam Volumnii (i). He does not ſay ſhe was a Comedian, but [redacted] we learn elſewhere. We know that the Curteſan Cytheris, Mark Anthony's Miſtreſs called her [redacted] Volumnia (k). For what reaſon, if not becauſe Volumnius had made her Free? Now Mark Anthony's Catheris was a Comedian; and therefore ſhe that Servius ſpeaks of, muſt have been ſo too. The only thing to be prov'd, is that Volumnius lov'd her. This proof I take from one of Cicero's Epiſtles, and 'tis this: (l) accubueram [redacted] a noua —— apud Volumnium Eutrapelum, & quidem ſupra me Atticus, infra Verrius —— infra Eutrapelum Cytheris accubuit. In eo igitur, in quis, convivio Cicero ille quem adſpectabant, cujus ob os Graji ora obvertebant ſua? non me Hercule ſuſpicatus ſum illam aſſore: ſed tamen ne Ariſtippus quidem ille Socraticus erubuit cum eſſet objectum habere eum Laïda: habeo, inquit, non habeor à Laide. 'Tis plain that Cytheris is here a Courtezan, whom Volumnius entertain'd at Bed and Board. This Epiſtle of Cicero was written in the 730*th*. year of Rome. He wrote another (m) to Volumnius the ſame year, but without ſaying a word of the Curtezan. Father [redacted]ayan, who imagin's the contrary, had not [redacted] conſider'd it; ' ad hunc amorem, l. 7. ' Epiſt. 25. alludit ſcribens ad eundem Volumnium, Ut ' nihil ſit tam [redacted] quod non alicui venuſtum eſſe ' videatur (n). This intirely relates to an ill Reliſh for Jeſts. Cicero's meaning is, that there's no Jeſt ſo flat or inſipid but one or other is pleaſed with. For the reſt we don't learn which way Cytheris came to be turned over from Volumnius to Mark Anthony, whether by Grant or Purchaſe, or through the natural inconſtancy and ingratitude of the Miſtreſs. I ſhould rather believe the firſt, it being certain that Volumnius was one of Mark Anthony's good Friends.

This appears from the following Paſſage of Cicero: (o) Scripſi ad Antonium de legatione, ne ſi ad Dolabellam ſolum ſcripſiſſem iracundus homo commoveretur: quod autem aditus ad eum difficilior eſſe dicitur, ſcripſi ad Eutrapelum, ut is ei meas litteras redderet, legatione mihi opus eſſe. This he writ to Atticus a few Months after the Death of Julius Cæſar. 'Tis the ſame Volumnius, if I miſtake not, that Cicero means in the thirteenth Philippick, giving a Liſt of Mark Anthony's Gaming Club. (p) Cornelius Nepos tells us, that Volumnius, Mark Anthony's intimate Friend had a conſiderable Poſt in his Army. (q) Familiarica ejus (M. Antonii) ex urbe profugientes quantum potuit texit (Atticus) quibus rebus indiguerunt adjuvit: P. vero Volumnio ea tribuit ut plura à parente proficiſci non potuerint —— (r) L. Julium Calidium —— —— propter magnas ejus Africanas poſſeſſiones in proſcriptorum numerum à P. Volumnio præfecto fabrum Antonii, abſentem relatum, expedivit. Thus Volumnius's Houſe was a Sanctuary to Pomponius Atticus (ſ) during the Rage of the Triumviral Proſcriptions. It's impoſſible, I think, to determine, whether our Volumnius is the ſame who was killed in cold Blood by Brutus's Men (t). The grounds for doubting it are 1. that Plutarch calls him who was killed by Brutus's Party, a Comedian. (v) [redacted] Erat quidam Volumnius mimus & Sacculio Sannio capti. Hos Brutus quum contemneret, adductos ad eum accuſaverunt amici ejus ne tunc quidem à dictoriis & contumeliis in ipſos faciendis temperare. 2. That he tacks him to a Buffoon. And 3*ly*. obſerves that Brutus deſpis'd 'em both. This do's not agree with the Volumnius mentioned by Cornelius Nepos. But on the other Hand, the drolling humour perfectly ſuits him; that Itch of Witticiſm which Plutarch's Volumnius was ſo over-run with, that he could not forbear darting at thoſe who kept him in a Jail. One of Cicero's (w) Epiſtles, which I have before cited, ſhews, that Volumnius Eutrapelus (x) was a great Jeſter. Cicero feared no Man but him in this way, and recommends two things to him; one that he would not ſuffer the ſilly Quibbles, ridiculous Puns, and pitiful Rebus's, which ran about in his Name, and in his abſence from Rome to be aſcribed to him; the other, that he would aſſert the Rights of a genteel Converſation againſt the fatal Incroachments of an uncourtly Buffoonry. Is not this repreſenting Volumnius as a Top-Wit of the Town? (y) Quibus in litteris omnia mihi perjucunda fuerunt, præter illud, quod parum diligenter poſſeſſio ſalinarum mearum à te procuratore defenditur. Ais enim, ut ego diſceſſerim, omnia omnium dicta, in his etiam Seſtiana, in me conferri. Quid? tu id pateris? nonne defendu? non reſiſtu? equidem ſperabam, ita notata me reliquiſſe genera dictorum meorum, ut cognoſci ſua ſponte poſſent. After theſe Words Cicero gives him a juſt Standard of his own ſayings, and deſires Volumnius to vouch even upon Oath (z), that whatever won't bear ſuch a Teſt, never came from his Mint. Urbanitatis poſſeſſionem, amabo, quibuſvis interdictis defendamus; in qua te unum metuo, contemno ceteros. Here's another very great Elegy: (b) Opus eſt hinc limatulo & polito tuo judicio, & illis interioribus litteris meis quibus ſæpe verecundiorem me in loquendo facis. Can a Man of this Merit and [redacted] character be the

SOME particulars concerning Volumnius.

(o) Epiſt. 8. l. 15. ad Attic.

(p) Addite Antonii colluſores & ſodales Eutrapelum, Melam, Cœlium, &c. Philipp. 13. circa init.

(q) In vita Attici, c. 9.

(r) Ibid. c. 12.

(ſ) Ibid. c. 10.

(t) Plutarch. in Bruto.

(v) Id. ib.

(w) The 32*d of the* 7*th Book ad famil.*

(x) He was probably called ſo because of his facetious Humour. See the Article Erasmus.

(y) Cicero ibid.

(z) Ut ſacramento contendas mea non eſſe. Ibid.

(a) Ibid.

(b) Cicero ad Volumnium, Epiſt. 33. l. 7. ad famil.

this Curtezan *. 'Twas upon this occasion that Lyons (C) were yok'd in Mark Anthony's Chariot. Another Author says no more than that Cytheris's Train (D) was not inferiour to that of her Gallant's Mother. He'd have told us a piece of News, had he affirmed, that they who expected favours from Mark Anthony made their Court more Cringingly to his Mistress than his Mother. Servius would have done us a Pleasure, if he had mark'd the time with (E) somewhat more exactness when this Curtezan fol-

* See the Article Lulvia Remark F.

the Comedian mentioned by Plutarch? Is it not more probable that this Comedian was a Man made Free by Volumnius, and that like Cytheris he took the name of his Master, to whom he ow'd his Liberty? I determine nothing. I believe Plutarch might easily be mistaken, for the following Reasons. Volumnius according to all appearance gave a full swing to his rallying and jocose Humour, and had no more regard to Decorum, or his own Quality than an errand Comedian. This was almost unavoidable in a Man who like him had a talent at witty Turns, and an intimate acquaintance with Mark Antony, the most liberal Man in the World to those who knew how to divert him, and to the Comedians in particular with whom his House was always crowded. (a) Agrum Campanum, qui cum de vectigalibus eximebatur ut militibus daretur, tamen infigi magnum Reip. vulnus putamus: hunc tu compransoribus tuis & collusoribus dividebas: mimos dico & mimas P. C. in agro Campano collocatos. We have seen above that Volumnius was one of his Jesters, the Passage I have cited, gives the same Title to the Comedians of both Sexes. It happened then perhaps, that Volumnius mixing daily with this sort of Cattle at Mark Anthony's, and Drolling and Buffooning as much as they, came to be treated as a Comedian, so that Plutarch honestly mistook him for a Man of that Profession. A (b) learned Critick assures us that Plutarch's Volumnius is the same with Cicero's. I shan't venture to join with him and chuse rather to say non liquet: Tho' I own this Critick's Opinion seems much more probable, than that of any one who should affirm the contrary. I shall only observe concerning our Volumnius, that 'tis of him Horace is supposed when he says that Eutrapelus gave fine Cloaths to such as he designed a mischief to. This doubtless was founded on one of his common places, in which he explains by what degrees Vanity betrays Men into the vilest Practices.

(a) Idem Philipp. 2. p. 761.

(b) Petrus Victorius, in the Cicero of Gravius, Epist. ad Familiar. tom. 1. p. 434.

(c) Horat. Epist. 18. l. 1.

(d) Plinius, l. 8. c. 16. p. m. 161.

(e) The 13th. of the 16th. Book.

(f) See Gravius's Cicero, Epist. ad Atticum, tom. 2. p. 181.

(g) Vehebatur in effedo Tribunus plebis: Lictores laureati antecedebant, inter quos apertâ lectica mima portabatur. . . . Sequebatur rheda cum lenonibus comites nequissimi.

(h) Abram in Cicer. Orat. tom. 2. p. 645.

(i) It relates to the time after the Battel of Pharsalia Λιονίδι ἅμαξαν ἐνζευγνυμένη, leonibus junctâ currus, in Antonio p. 920. E.

(c) Eutrapelus, cuicunque nocere volebat,
Vestimenta dabat pretiosa: beatus enim jam
Cum pulchris tunicis sumet nova consilia & spes:
Dormiet in lucem: scorto postponet honestum
Officium: nummos alienos poscet: ad imum
Thrax erit, aut olitoris aget mercede caballum.

(C) That Lions were Yoked in Mark Anthony's Chariot.] He was the first among the Romans who put 'em to this kind of Service. (d) Fugo subdidit eos primusque Romæ ad currum junxit M. Antonius, & quidem civili bello cum dimicatum esset in Pharsalicis campis, non sine quodam ostento temporum generosos spiritus jugum subire illo prodigio significante: nam quod ita vectus est cum Mima Cytheride supra monstra etiam illarum calamitatum fuit. According to these Words of Pliny this sight had never been seen in Italy till after the Battle of Pharsalia: And yet Cicero seems to say the contrary in one of his Epistles (e) to Atticus before this famous Battle, Tu Antonii leones pertimescas cave! nihil est illo homine jucundius. He means I think, that Atticus ought to be afraid, because Cæsar's Lieutenant had his Chariot drawn by Lions. He affirmed this more clearly, if Victorius's Conjecture be right. This learned Critick (f) will have it read leonibus instead of linquibus in the Passage of the 2. Philippick which I cite in the Margin (g). His reasons are specious, and I could easily believe him in the right with Father Abram (h). In this case (i) Plutarch and Pliny would not have been faithful Historians; for 'tis certain that the Words of the 2. Philippick relate to Mark Anthony's Cavalcades through the Towns of Italy in honour of the Comedian Cytheris, whilst Cæsar made War in Spain, upon Pompey's Lieutenants a year before the Pharsalian Battle. However it be, I venture to say, without any regard to Cicero's Words, that Andrew Alciat is Guilty of a gross fallhood, in supposing Mark Anthony did not Harness a Set of Lions till after he had put to Death the Father of Eloquence.

Romanum postquam eloquium, Cicerone perempto
Perdiderat patria pestis acerba sua,
Insc endit currus victor, junxitque leones,
Compulit & collum colla subire jugum;
Magnanimos ostans sui Antonius armis
Ambage hac cupiens significare duces (k).

This Falsity (l) is the more inexcusable, as the Author has founded on it an Elogy on Cicero, and some moral Reflections.

(D) Cytheris's Train was not inferiour.] Plutarch's making the two Equipages equal, extreamly weakens Cicero's Ideas, (m) Rejecta mater amicam impuri filii tanquam parem sequebatur. These are the Ideas Cicero gives us; and the following are Plutarch's (n): Ὅτι ἡ τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ἀπουσία τὴν γυναῖκα τοῦ ἀνδρὸς ἐποίησε θεραπαινίδος ἀνθρώπου καὶ πόρνης ἀνεξέλεγκτον. Hanc ubes peregrans circumducebat lectica; lecticam ejus non minor comitatus quam matris ipsius sequebatur. Neither he nor Cicero speaks of Mark Anthony's Wife, which is a sign he was not then Married. See the Article Fulvia.

(E) The time when this Curtezan followed Mark Anthony.] We know she followed him beyond the Alps.

Galle (o) quid insanis? inquit: tua cura Lycoris
Perque nives alium, perque horrida castra secuta est.
. . . . . .
Nunc (p) insanus amor duri me Martis in armis
Tela inter media atque adversos detinet hostes.
Tu procul à patria (nec sit mihi credere) tantum,
Alpinas ah dura nives & frigora Rheni
Me sine sola vides: ah te ne frigora ladant:
Ah tibi ne teneras glacies secet aspera plantas.

But did she follow Mark Anthony, when he went to serve in (q) Gaul under Julius Cæsar, or when he retired thither after he was beaten at Modena? I should choose the latter Opinion, otherwise Virgil applied a Plaister to an old Wound; he comforted the Man ten years after Lycoris had Jilted him. Virgil's Bucolicks were written after the Death of Julius Cæsar; and consequently if Lycoris had forsaken Gallus to go into Gaul with Mark Anthony, whilst Cæsar was making War there, Virgil must have exercis'd his Muse on a superannuated Intrigue of Infidelity. But supposing the other part of the Alternative, Gallus's Wound must have been fresh, and Virgil's Verses rightly turn'd. According to this last Supposition, Mark Anthony appears not to have been a Man of his Word. He had promised Fulvia (r) in the year 709. to part for ever with his dear Comedian. He quitted her probably for a time, and in that Interval Gallus took Possession of Cytheris. If he had not time for the writing his four Books of Verses before the War of Modena had Debauch'd her away, he employ'd the following years; for it is not necessary to suppose, that these were not a great many sharp Reproaches of her Perfidiousness in such a Number of Verses. I have observ'd above that the Letter, in which Cicero excuses his being at an Entertainment with Cytheris, is supposed to have been written in the year 703. This is an Objection against those, who say, that Cytheris went into Gaul with Mark Anthony, before the Rupture between Cæsar and Pompey. See the Marginal Note. I confess, I see nothing to induce me to believe, that the Date of this Letter is rightly fixed. However, the Opinion I follow, has been Established by Servius (s) himself, tho' with less Exactness than I could wish. Add these Words to those in the Margin

(k) Alciat. Emblem. 29.

(l) It has been remarked by the Commentators on Emblems by Pere Abram ubi supra.

(m) Philipp. 2. p. 736.

(n) In Antonio, p. 920. A.

(o) Virgil. Eclog. 10. v. 22.

(p) Ibid. v. 44.

(q) He went thither twice. 1. after his return from Egypt where he had served in 698. under Gabinius: 2. after he had been made Quæstor. See Cicero Phil. 2. p. 734. was Quæstor in Gaul under Cæsar An. 703. as we are inform'd by Hirtius.

(r) See the Article Fulvia.

(s) On these words of Virgil, Perque nives alium, perque horrida castra secuta est, he says, Horrida semper, nunc propter bella civilia, & subtiliter hic tangit Antonium, ut supra dictum est. This shews that Lycoris went a Progress into Gaul with Mark Anthony during the Civil War which was kindled between Octavius and him under the Consulat of Hirtius and Pansa.

gins

followed Mark Anthony to the Army. I don't think (F) ſhe followed him into Aſia after the Battle of Philippi. When Ovid obſerves [a] that the name of Lycoris was famous from Eaſt to Weſt, I don't doubt, but he had in view Gallus's Verſes on this Courtezan. Cicero mentions a piece of Raillery, in which Fulvia perhaps was leſs concerned (G) than Lycoris.

[a] Veſper & Eoæ novere Lycorida terræ. Ovid. l. 3. de arte amandi.

LYCURGUS the Legiſlator of Lacedæmon lived I know not when. The diverſity [β] of Opinions is too great and too perplex'd upon this Head, to fix any thing certain. He gave extraordinary Proofs of his Generoſity, by the care he took to ſecure the Crown to the Perſon who had the rightful Title to it, when he might have eaſily ſeized it himſelf, had he taken advantage of the Occaſions offered him [γ]. You'll find this in Morery's Dictionary, with many other Facts, which I avoid repeating. I ſhall inſiſt upon one thing, which this Author has not touched. Lycurgus's Regulations againſt Luxury, are moſt admirable. He wiſely judged, that the way to prevent the Degeneracy of the Lacedæmonian Courage, was to keep 'em from Pleaſure; and that to this end, he ought to baniſh from among 'em all thoughts of growing Rich, and deprive 'em of all opportunities of it. His method of training up their Children, was very proper gin. (a) Hic Gallus amavit Cytheridem meretricem libertam Volumnii, quæ, eo ſpreto, eumtem Antonium ad Gallias eſt ſecuta: propter quod dolorem Galli nunc videtur conſolari Virgilius. Nec nos debet movere, quod cum mutaverit partem quarti Georgicorum, eclogam ſic reliquit. Nam licet conſoletur in ea Gallum tamen altiùs intuenti vituperatio eſt. Nam & in Gallo impatientia turpis amoris oſtenditur & aperte hic Antonius carpitur inimicus Auguſti, quem contra Romanum morem Cytheris eſt in caſtra comitata. We'll end with this Remark of the ſame Commentator: There were three famous Ladies of Pleaſure at the ſame time, Cytheris, Origo, and Arbuſcula. The two latter are found in Horace's Verſes (b) under the notion of Comedians; they therefore all three belonged to the Playhouſe.

[β] See Scaliger Animadverſi in Euſebium, n. 1132. p. 63.

(a) Servius in Eclog. 10. init.

(b) Sat. 2. & ultima lib. 1.

(F) I don't think ſhe followed him into Aſia.] And yet a Modern Wit is of this Opinion. (c) Mark Anthony was bewitched to the Comedian Cytheris ('tis the Anſwer he ſuppoſes Fulvia gave Helena, to the Queſtion, whether ſhe inſtigated Mark Anthony to make War with Auguſtus) and to be reveng'd on him, I would fain have had Auguſtus fall in Love with me, but Auguſtus was nice in his Miſtreſſes. He neither thought me young nor handſome enough; and tho' I let him underſtand, that he was like to be involved in a Civil War for want of ſome regard for me, yet I never could drag him to one Act of Complaiſance. I'll repeat you too, if you pleaſe, ſome Verſes (d) he made upon that Evaſion, and which are not the moſt to my Honour. They are theſe.

(c) The new Dialogues of the Dead 2. part. p. m. 28.

(d) You'll find the Latin Lines in Martial l. 11. Epigr. 21.

Parce qu' Antoine eſt charmé de Glaphire (e)
Fulvie à ſes beaux yeux me veut aſſujettir.
Antoine eſt infidele. Hé bien donc? eſt-ce à dire
Que des fautes d' Antoine on me fera patir?
Qui? moi? que je ſerve Fulvie?
Suffit-il qu'elle en ait envie?
A ce compte on verroit ſe retirer vers moi,
Mille épouſes mal ſatisfaites.
Aime moi, me dit-elle, ou combatons. Mais quoi?
Elle eſt bien laide! Allons ſonnez trompettes.

(e) Thus ibis Auctor calls Cytheris.

Take notice that theſe Verſes relate to the year after the Battle of Philippi, in which Brutus and Caſſius fell. Auguſtus was then in Italy, and Mark Anthony in Aſia. We have ſeen in the Article of Glaphyra, that ſhe was a Lady of the Town who had gained the Affections of Mark Anthony, and it does not appear that Cytheris was with him at that time. I believe then, the Name in Auguſtus's Epigram is not diſguiſed. It was not on account of Cytheris, but of Glaphyra, that Fulvia deſir'd Auguſtus to Revenge her. Beſides her Menaces were, not, that ſhe would in caſe of refuſal excite Mark Anthony to make War on Auguſtus, but that ſhe would take up Arms her ſelf; and we have ſeen in her Article, that ſhe actually did ſo, and that without the Concurrence of her Husband, ſhe put all Italy in Combuſtion; for which Mark Anthony chid her ſeverely the next time he ſaw her.

(G) Fulvia perhaps was leſs concerned than Lycoris.] Mark Anthony is upbraided in the 2. Philippick with a trick he ſerved his Wife. He rode into Town by Night, as a Courier diſpatch'd by Mark Anthony, and (f) gave Fulvia a Letter, in which her Husband ſaid the tendreſt things to her in the World. He had diſguis'd his Face, that he might not be known in preſenting Fulvia the Letter; but whilſt ſhe read it, he diſcover'd himſelf and threw himſelf on her Neck. He was ask'd, why he would take ſuch a method, which Alarm'd the whole City; he Anſwer'd, he was come about an Affair of his own. This gave occaſion to a Jeſt on him. Let us cite Cicero's Words. (g) O hominem nequam!——Ergo ut te catamitum nec opinato cum oſtendiſſes, præter ſpem mulier adſpiceret, idcirco urbem terrore nocturno, Italiam multorum dierum metu perturbaſti? Et domi quidem cauſſam amoris habuit, foris etiam turpiorem, ne L. Plautus prædes ſuos venderet. Productus in concionem à Trib. Pleb. cum reſpondiſſes, te rei tuæ cauſſa veniſſe, populum etiam dicacem in te reddidiſti. Manutius hath made a Note upon this, which is more inſeterminate than that of Mr. de Valois the younger. Ex ambiguo ſenſu, ſays Manutius, illorum verborum, rei tuæ cauſſa: quod referri etiam ad concubitum poteſt. But ſee the other Note: 'tis in the Valeſiana (k).

(f) See the Article of Fulvia.

(g) Cicero Philipp. 2. p. m. 744.

(i), lectica, Ciniſtones, Paraſita,
Ad talos ſtola demiſſa, & circumdata palla
Plurima, quæ invideant pure apparere tibi rem.

Id eſt cunnum. Quod noto primus, ut apud Ciceronem Philippica 2.——O hominem nequam! [e]o ut te catamitum (k) &c. cum reſpondiſſes te rei tuæ cauſſa veniſſe populum in te dicacem etiam reddidiſti. Scil. populus luſit in nomine rei, & quod Antonius dixerat ſe rei ſuæ, id eſt rerum ſuarum cauſſa in urbem veniſſe, populus, ut eſt dicax, eum cunnum uxoris cauſſa veniſſe dixit, & dicacitatis materiam invenit in eo verbo. You will find this in the 7th. page of the 11th. Book. Plotavi alibi ex Ciceronis in Philippica 2. de Marco Antonio, qui rei ſuæ cauſſâ ſe veniſſe dicebat, populumque his verbis dicacem reddidit; & ex Horatio, plurima quæ impudenter pure apparere tibi rem, & ex aliis, rem aliquando cunnum ſignificare. Sic Martialis:

(i) Horat. Sat. 2. 1. ..

Parce tuis igitur dare maſcula nomina rebus.

Id eſt, podici tuo & cunno, ô uxor. Mr. de Valois (l) indirectly cenſures Scaliger, qui in Præfatione ex Arnobii neſcio quibus locis & ex verſione carminum Orphei ait mentulam rem vocari. I don't think Scaliger is miſtaken: The Word Res had doubtleſs as extenſive a ſignification among the Latins, as the Word Affaire among the French: Now 'tis certain, that the Word Affaire ſometimes ſignifies the Natural Parts of either Sex. This is ſo true, that even they, who know but little of the French Tongue are acquainted with this Signification. I have heard ſome young Dutch Gentlemen make a great many Jeſts on the Sermon of a Monk who Preach'd at Spa. His Subject was the Importance of Salvation, he ſhew'd 'em that it was the Affaire of Man, the Affaire by way of Excellence; and reckoning up all the ways of Sin, he ſhew'd, that they ruin'd their Affaire. Gentlemen and Ladies, ſaid he, take heed to your ſelves, if you do this or that you will ſpoil your Affair. The too frequent Repetition led ſeveral of his Hearers into the groſs and burleſque Senſe of the word Affaire; ſo that it became the ſub-

(k) Valeſiana p. 121.

proper to make 'em good Soldiers; but he carried it too far, since he would have the young Girls (A) perform the same Exercises as the Boys, and dance naked before 'em, discountenancing or praising 'em, according as they acquitted themselves. Note, that the Boys danced Naked before them. Was not this the Way to make both Sexes impudent? And is it any wonder after this, that the Lacedæmonian Girls (B) had so scandalous a Character. I question whether he judged right in saying, that these Practises would subject of a Jest for a long time. We read in the Chevræana, (a) 'that a Gentleman coming to wait 'on a Prince to thank him for his Kindness in re- 'commending his Interests to a Lady of great Ver- 'tue, expressing himself, That 'twas happy for him, 'that his Highness had got his Affair to pass through 'the Channel of Madam—The whole Company burst out a laughing. I have another Remark to make on Mr. de Valois. In Horace's Verses, quoted by him, the Word Res ought to signifie in general, Merchandise: The Poet does not confine himself to that part which Mr. de Valois names in Latin; but extends to all the rest, which the Clothes cover. The preceding and following Words manifest this Sense.

(a) Chevræana, 1. part. pag. 57. édit. de Holl.

Altera nil obstat: Cois tibi pæne videre est
Ut nudam: ne crure malo, ne fit pede turpi:
Mettiri possis oculo latus: an tibi mavis
Insidias fieri pretiumque avellier, ante
Quam MERCEM ostendi?

I believe then, that they who gave Mark Anthony's Words such a smutty Turn, had at least as much regard to Scaliger's Sense, as to Mr. Valois's; And as it is the Nature of Scandal to rub the sorest Part; I don't doubt but it was meant by Mark Anthony with respect to his Mistress the Comedian [redacted] Cytheris, rather than his Wife; for since he pro[redacted] ses in his Letter, to part with his Comedian, 'sign that the Roman People were still perswaded he saw her. Thus you have the whole Commentary belonging to this Note.

(A) Perform the same Exercises——and dance naked.] I shall cite (b) Plutarch's Words. 'He (c) looked upon the Education of Children, as 'the greatest and most important Affair of a Legi- 'slator, and therefore made an early Provision for 'it, by regulating whatever concerned Marriages 'and Births; for we must not believe what Aristotle says, that having endeavoured to govern and 'reform the Women, he gave it over, finding it 'impossible to restrain their unbridled Licentious- 'ness, and the too great Ascendant they had got 'over their Husbands, who by reason of their 'frequent warlike Expeditions, were obliged to 'leave 'em to their own Conduct, and to prevent 'their abusing this Liberty, were forced to flatter 'em, and sooth 'em, by calling 'em their Ladies 'and Mistresses. On the contrary, he took all the 'care of 'em that was possible. In effect, whilst 'they were Maids, he harden'd their Bodies, by ex- 'ercising them at Running, Wrestling, Pitching 'the Coit, and darting the Javeling, that the 'Fruit, they should afterwards conceive, finding a 'strong and vigorous Body, might take stronger 'Root in it, and that they themselves, made Ro- 'bust by these Exercises, might with greater 'Strength and Courage, undergo the Pains of Child- 'birth. To retrench all kind of Delicacy, and 'Softness, he accustomed 'em to appear stark-naked 'in Publick, and dance in that Posture at solemn 'Feasts, singing witty Songs, in which they seaso- 'nably intermixt some Touches of Raillery on those 'who had done amiss, and Praise to such as had 'acquitted themselves worthily. By this means, 'they fired the Youth with the Love of Glory and 'Vertue, and kindled in 'em a noble Emulation. 'For he whose brave Actions were so much extoll'd, 'and who saw his Name celebrated by these young 'Lasses, returned proud of the Praises he had re- 'ceived, whilst their Scoffs and Railleries touch- 'ed the undeserving more sensibly, than the seve- 'rest Remonstrances and harshest Corrections; the 'more, as all this pass'd in the Presence of the whole 'Body of the People, Citizens, Senate, and even the 'Kings themselves.

(b) In Lycurgo.
(c) C'est à dire Lycurgue.

(B) The Lacedæmonian Lasses had so scandalous a Character.] They were called Bare Buttocks, and furious for a Male; Reproaches, which by Plutarch's own Confession, were founded on the too great Liberty Lycurgus allow'd 'em. I mention Plutarch, because he has made an Apology for this great Legislator on this He[redacted] ἐν γύμνοις, says he (d) τῶν παρθένων οὐδὲν αἰσχρὸν [redacted] μὲν καὶ σώσης, ἀφροσύνη δὲ ἀνούσης ἀλλ' οὐδεμίαν [redacted] ζῆλον τοῦ ἄρρενος ἐμποιοῦσαν, ἢ φρονήματος τὸ ὅλον [redacted] ἀγεννοῦς, ἂν μηδὲν ἐπὶν αὐτῇ ἀρετῆς ἢ φιλοτιμίας μέτεστιν ἔνεστι. That is, And as to those Lasses who shewed themselves stark-naked, there was nothing [redacted] in it, Sparta being the Throne of [redacted] Dissoluteness not so much as known [redacted] only accustom 'em to a Simplicity of Manners, gave 'em a wonderful Emulation, who should have the strongest and robustest Constitution of Body, and at the same time raised their Courage, by letting 'em understand, that they ought to participate in Glory, with the Men, and aspire to the same Principles of Honour and Virtue. Plutarch forgetting this Apology, Thirty Pages after, confesses, that Numa Pompilius acted much wiser, in restraining Maids [redacted] the Decency of their Sex, and that the Liber[redacted] Lycurgus allowed, exposed 'em to Poetical Satyr[redacted] (e) Ἔτι δὲ μᾶλλον ἐπὶ περὶ τὰς παρθένους φυλακὴ κατέστησε τῷ Νόμῳ περὶ τὸ ὄλον ἢ κόσμον. ἐπὶ δὲ τῷ Λυκούργῳ, παιδαγωγῷ ἀναπεπλάσθαι ἢ ὄλος οὗτος, πῶς; παῖδας λέγων παίζοντας. Φανερώτερόν τι γὰρ αὐτὰς ἀναπαδᾶσιν, ὡς Ἴβυκος· ἢ ἀνδρομανεῖς λοιδορῶν ὡς Εὐριπίδης. Præterea curam puellarum restituit ad pudorem muliebrem & verecundiam Numa, arctius: Lycurgi soluta prorsus [redacted] fluxa in [redacted] incurrit poëtarum. φαινομηρίδας [redacted] vocant velut Ibycus, quòd incessu coxas retegerent: [redacted] ἀνδρομανεῖς, quasi viroſas & in viros insano ardentes amore, ut Euripides. The two Verses of Euripides, cited by Plutarch, do not sufficiently prove my Assertion. I shall therefore set down that Passage of this Poet at length, by which we shall see, that the appearing naked, and exercising Promiscuously with the Boys, was reckoned the true Cause of the Immodesty of the Lacedæmonian Wenches.

(f) Οὐδ' ἂν, εἰ βάλλοι τις,
Σπάρτου γένοιτο Χαριτοστόμου κόμη,
Ἃ ξὺν νέοισιν ἐξεμυξώσας δόμους,
Γυμνῆσι μηροῖς, ἢ πέπλοις ἀνειμέναις,
Δρόμους παλαίστρας τ' οὐκ ἀνασχέτους ἐμοὶ,
Κοινὰς ἔχουσι κἀπὶ θαυμάζειν χρεών,
Εἰ μὴ γυναῖκας σώφρονας παιδεύσομεν.

Neque si velit aliq[redacted]
Puella Spartana, possit esse casta:
Quæ relinquentes domos, cum juvenibus
Nudis femoribus, & tunicis laxatis,
Cursus, & palæstras non tolerandas mihi,
Communes habent, deinde an mirari oportet,
Si non educatis mulieres castas.

The Readers won't be displeased to find here the T[redacted] slation of this place of Plutarch. 'The Carriage of 'Maids who were married according to the Ordi- 'nance of Numa, was stricter and more becoming 'the Honour of the Sex; that of Lycurgus 'being two free and licentious, occasioned Satyrs 'upon 'em, and scandalous Nick-Names. Ibycus 'calls them Phenomeridas, that is to say, Bare 'Buttocks, and Andromanes, that is to say, mad 'for Man, and Euripides says also of 'em,

Where wanton Girls with roaring Boys,
Fill all their Father's House with Noi[redacted]
Clothes loosely flowing with a Slit [redacted]
For what we hide, they would have

'(g) And indeed the Skirts of their Petticoats were 'not tack'd at bottom, so that as they walked, they 'shew[redacted] their naked Thighs, which Sophocles 'we[redacted]inly hints at in these Verse:

[redacted]m tuck'd up her Smock on high.
Not being asham'd to shew her brawny Thigh.

(d) In Lycurgo, pag. 48.
(e) Plut. in parall. Lycurgi & Numa Pompilii, pag. 76.
(f) Euripides in Andromacha, v. 595. p. m. 519.
(g) Τῷ γὰρ ὄντι τῶν παρθενικῶν χαλῶσι αἱ πλήκτρας τὰ ἱμάτια ἀνίεσθαι, ἀλλ' ἀνεπτύσσοντο ἢ ἦν τὰ γύμνα ὅλον ἐν τῷ βαδίζειν τὸν μηρὸν, ἢ σωφρονοῦντα τὰ γυναικεῖα εἶναι Σοφοκλῆς ἐν τῷ Κυβ[redacted] ἄζετ' ἀνὰ λαὸν χιτὼ Θυμάζειν ἀμφὶ μηρὸν, αἰσχύ[redacted] ἐν ἀνδράσι.

Sane virginum tunicæ imæ non habe[redacted] pim[redacted] confutas, sed expli cabantur & totum [redacted] riſſime hiſce ver ſibus o ſtendit Sophocle Stoia car tunicam inducens Herwion Dilabida retegit fi mur ju venecula. Unde pr caciores dicuntur fuiſſe, primum adverſus ſplos vir les virtu Plutarch ubi ſupr pag. 77.

Homerus

would excite the young Folks (C) to marry. The great Desire he had to have strong bodied Spartans, induced him to make some Regulations about Marriage, which deserve to be condemned. He would have the Husbands not approach their Wives (D) but by Stealth, and rise from Table with an Appetite. Let that pass. But as for old Men (E)

(a) Plut. in Apoth. Lacon. p. 232.

(b) Epigr. 55. lib. 4.

(c) Cum querelis uxorum post tam longam viduitatem revocarentur. Justin. lib. 3. c. 4.

(d) Id. ib.

(e) Theodor. de Grac. affect. serm. 10. p. 630.

(f) Ἡ γυμνὴ ἐν ταῖς παρθενικαῖς ὀρχήσεως ἐπὶ τὸ ἀφροδισιαστικὸν ἐπιτήδειον ἐποίησε. Ἐπὶ τοῦτο γὰρ καὶ τὰς παρθένους ἐγύμνωσεν, ἵνα τὰς ἀπὸ τέχνης, ἢ τὰς ἀπὸ ἕξεως, ἢ τὰς ἀπὸ φύσεως ἐν ἴσῳ τῶν νέων, ἀγωνιζομένας θεωρῶμεν. Plutarch. in Lycurgo. pag. 48.

(g) To Venus with the lovely Buttocks. Καλλιπύγῳ Ἀφροδίτῃ. Cæsar has related this Passage, with several Variations, as will all shew perhaps in some Articles of other.

'Sans rien cacher à l'entour de la cuisse,
'Qui fort [redacted] toute nue, se plisse.

'However, [redacted] they were daring, masculine, and 'stout, even [redacted] their Husbands themselves in the first 'Place. We need not wonder at Euripides's saying, that 'twas impossible for the Women of Lacedæmon to be honest with such an Education. Maids thus dress't who went abroad with the young Fellows, had their Ears accustomed betimes to all kind of obscene Language. Such Conversation must needs have been a School of Impudence; I appeal to you, whether young Fellows, who left they should be thought stupid, imagine, they must do more than Custom permits, ever let their Hands or Tongues rest in the Company of such Maids. Besides that, they were allowed to shew their Nakedness, only in order to find a Man; for when once they were married, they covered their natural Parts. This we learn [redacted] Plutarch. (a) Πυνθανομένου δέ τινος διὰ τί τὰς παρθένους ἀναλύδους, τὰς δὲ γυναῖκας ἐγκεκαλυμμένας ἀγωνίζει, Ὅτι (ἔφη) τὰς μὲν ἀνδρας, ἐσομένας τὰς δὲ γυναῖκας, ἐσομένας τὰς ἐχούσας. Quærenti cur Spartani virgines detectas, mulieres velatas in publicum emitterent; Quia, inquit, virginibus quærendi sunt viri, mulieribus opera danda ut servent maritos. I pass over this Touch of Martial (b) aut libidinosa Ledæas Lacedæmonis palæstras. [redacted] a Fact to alledge, more flagrant than th[redacted]y of the Poets. The Lacedæmonians be[redacted]oy'd for Ten Years in a Siege, [redacted] teazed by the Messages and Murmurs of their Wives, who could not bear so long a Widowhood (c) sent back to Lacedæmon some Companies of the lustiest young Soldiers, and gave 'em leave to lie indifferently, with as many of their Wives as they pleased. These Youths were very well received; an evident Sign, that the Women of Lacedæmon had no Vertue. The Children that sprung from these Embraces, founded a Colony at Tarentum. Not one of 'em knew who was his Father. Itaque legunt juvenes ex eo genere militum, qui post jusjurandum in supplementum venerant, quibus Spartam remissis promiscuos omnium feminarum concubitus permisere; maturiorem futuram conceptionem rati, si eam singulæ per plures viros experirentur. Ex his nati, ob notam materni pudoris, Parthenia vocati. Qui cum ad annos suos pervenissent, metu inopiæ (nulli enim pater existebat [redacted] &c. I don't take notice of the lascivious Im[redacted]se these Girls might have contracted, by seein[redacted] Boys naked, because I am so speak of it in the following Remark.

A Father of the Church, amongst other Enormities, reproaches the Oracle of Apollo, with its praising the Lacedæmonian Women; Women, adds he, who satisfied Nature with whatever Man they liked. [redacted] Οὗτος ἡ τὰς Λακεδαιμονίας ἐπαινεῖ γυναῖκας ἀδίκως τὰς ἡδονὰς μεγυμένας. Hic idem & Lacænas mulieres laudat, licenter se cum quibuslibet viris commiscentes.

(C) Would excite the young Folks to marry.] We learn from Plutarch (f) that Lycurgus prescribed this kind of Education, and ordered the Maids to appear Naked, that they might excite Love in the young Men. It was moreover, says he, an attractive to Marriage; I speak of those Dances and Wrestlings in which the young Maids, thus naked, exercised themselves before the young Men, who were drawn, as Plato says, not by a Geometrical Necessity, but by one much more stronger, and which proceeds from the Force of Love. Lycurgus considered perhaps, [redacted] the Number of Beautiful Women, being gene[redacted]y small, in Comparison of those who are [redacted]wise; and they who are not handsome, very often receiving from Nature a notable Recompence in the Parts conceal'd, it was thought necessary to give the Damosels an Opportunity of displaying all their Charms. Probably he believed they who could not kindle Love by a handsome Face, might happen to discover Charms [redacted]here to touch the Heart of some young Man [redacted] in Athenæus, the good Fortune of two Country-women, who caused a Temple to be built (h), On the other hand, the young Fellows, who were most accomplished, and against whom the Maids let fly their Scornful Railleries, might by this help of their Nakedness, prevail and subdue the Heart of a Lass, without the Assistance of any higher Star, by Juvenal's Favour (i). Thus they found out a Counterballance to Deformity, and ordered it so, that no one should escape the Darts of Love, or complain of being prejudiced in his Market, by not having the Liberty of exposing all their Ware. But was not this to introduce into common Life, where Modesty ought to reign, the pretended Advantage of Stews, so much celebrated by Horace?

(b) Fatum est & partibus illis Quas sinus abscondit, nam si tibi sidera cessent Nil faciet, &c. Juven. Sat. 9. v. 32.

(i) Horat. Sat. 2. l. 1. v. 85.

Regibus (i) hic mos est, ubi equos mercantur, apertos
Inspiciunt: ne, si facies (ut sæpè) decora
Molli fulta pede est, emptorem inducat hiantem,
Quod pulchra clunes, breve quod caput, ardua cervix.
Hoc illi rectè, ne corporis optima Lynceis
Contemplêre oculis: Hypsæâ cæcior, illa,
Quæ mala sunt, spectes: ô crus, ô brachia, verùm
Depygis, nasuta, brevi latere, ac pede longo est.
Matrona præter facies nil cernere possis,
Cætera, ni Cacia est, demissâ veste tegentis.
Si interdicta petes, vallo circumdata (nam te Hoc facit insanum) multa tibi tum officient res:
Custodes, lectica, Cinisiones, parasita,
Ad talos stola demissa, & circumdata palla,
Plurima, quæ invideant purè apparere tibi rem.
Altera nil obstat: Cois tibi penè videre est
Ut nudam: ne crure malo, ne sit pede turpi:
[redacted]etiri possis oculo latus; an tibi mavis
[redacted]as fieri, pretiumque avellier antè,
[redacted]m mercem ostendit———?

Was it not begetting in these Girls the Impudence of the Eye, which is worse than that of the Ear? 'Twas a Means, say they, of blunting the Edge of a Curiosity, which is very keen. But this pretended Reason has not hindred civiliz'd Nations to instill into the Sex a Horror for Nudities even in a Picture; and here's a Legislator of Lacedæmon, who permits young Girls to view 'em in the Original. He should be sent to the School of the Romans (k). The Curiosity I speak of, has been delicately touched by Mr. de la Bruyer. (l) 'Every one knows 'that long Bank, which bounds and shuts in the 'Channel of the Seine, on that side where it enters Paris along with the Maine, which it has but 'newly received. Men bathe themselves here during the Dog-Days, People see 'em at a good Distance, throw themselves into the Water, and 'see 'em come out again; it's an Amusement; 'before this Season's come, the Women of the City 'never walk out that way; and when it is past, 'they quit that Walk. Dionysius Halicarnassius praises the Romans for having constantly made the Champions wear Girdles: Ancient Greece did the same: he proves it from some Passages of Homer, and says, that the Lacedæmonians were the first who abolished this modest Custom; and names the Lacedæmonians, who first appeared naked at the Olympick Games, in the Fifteenth Olympiad (m). 'Tis a Remark which leaves a blot upon that Nation. We must add, that the Wrestlers appearing naked, was doubtless the cause of making Laws, which condemned all the Women (n) who had the Curiosity or Confidence to be Spectators at the Olympick Games, to be thrown headlong from the top of a Rock.

(k) Nil dictu fœdum visuque hæc limina tangat, Intra quæ puer est. Juvenal, Sat. 14. v. 44.

(l) La Bruyere, Caracteres ou mœurs de ce siecle, pag. 268. 269. de la 8. édition, à Paris, 1694.

(m) Dionys. Halic. lib. 7. cap. 66.

(n) Pausan. lib. 5. cap. 6.

(D) Not approach their Wives, but by Stealth.] Thus Plutarch speaks. 'When they had a mind to 'marry, their Courtship was a sort of Rape upon 'the Persons whom they had a fancy for, and those 'they chose were neither too little nor too young, but in 'the Flower of their Age, and full ripe for a Husband: After this, she who managed the Wedding, 'came and shaved close the Hair of the Bride, 'dressed her up compleatly in Man's Clothes, laid 'her upon a Matress; this done, in comes the 'Bridegroom, in his every Day Clothes, sober and 'composed, as having supped at his Ordinary, and 'steals in as privately as he could into the Room 'where the Bride lay, unties her Virgin Zone, and 'takes her into his Embraces; and so having stay'd 'some

(E) who had young Wives, he suffered them to communicate 'em to handsome young Men; and showed the latter to get Children for a Neighbour, upon Stipulation with the Husbands. This was all wrong, 'twas authorizing Adultery, and even making the Husbands Pimp to their Wives. From the same Policy came the Barbarous Law against Infants, who at their Birth did not promise a Robust Body and clean Shape. Lycurgus (F) would have 'em made away. Was not this a barbarous Iniquity? The impious Varius [a] would not have consented to it. Lycurgus's Laws are liable to Censure [b] in other Points. But one there is, in which he is more to be commended than

[a] See the Article Dejotarus.

[b] See the Remark of Mr. Dacier, in the Life of Lycurgus.

' some time together, he returns as secretly as he ' can to his Apartment with the rest of his Comrades, with whom he spends all the Day, and good ' part of the Night too, unless he steals a short ' Visit to his Bride, and that with a great ' deal of Circumspection and Fear of being discovered; nor was she wanting (as may be supposed) ' on her part, to use her Woman's Wit in watching ' the most favourable Opportunities for their meeting, and making Appointments when Company ' was most out of the way. In this manner they ' liv'd a long time, insomuch that they frequently ' had Children by their Wives, before ever they ' saw their Faces by Day-light. Their Interview ' being thus difficult and rare, serv'd not only for ' a continual Exercise of their Temperance, and furthered very much the Ends and Intention of Marriage; but besides, these short Abstences kept their ' Passion still alive, which flags, and decays, and ' dies at last by too easie Access and long continuance with the beloved Object; they always parted with Regret, contriving when they should ' come together again, and thought Minutes ' Hours till the next Meeting. Modern Authors have descanted upon this Order; and here's what Lewis Guyon says of it. (a) Lycurgus the Legislator of Lacedemon, willing and desiring that the married Couple should receive a perfect and lasting Measure and Satisfaction in Marriage, and beget robust Children; forbad the Husband and Wife to lie together; but if they met by Day in some secret Place; then to embrace; for a short Pleasure, and a little in a Time, is best relished; by this Means the Married Pair were kept in Heart, and even rendred more brisk and gay; whereas their lying constantly together, makes the Wife slighted, and other Women desired, and which is commonly seen, makes the Woman desirous of another Man: so that intermitting their Matrimonial Conversation, served to reinvigorate their Love. And for this Cause, the Boys and Girls begot in these Marriages, were strong and lusty; whereas they (b), who abuse the Female Commerce, often beget maimed or weak Children. In the mean time, he ordered, that Children, who disobeyed their Fathers and Mothers, should be put into a Sack, and cast into the Sea (c).

[a] Louis Guyon, diverses lessons, to. 3. p. 551.

[b] Compare what Joubert says above, at the Article Herilus, Remark H.

[c] I don't remember I have ever read this Law of Lycurgus.

(E) As for old Men, who had young Wives, he suffered them to communicate 'em.] Plutarch continues his Relation thus. (d) ' Having thus set ' Modesty as a Sentinel over the Marriage Bed, ' he next bethought himself of a Remedy for that ' Wild and Womanish Passion, Jealousie: And ' this he thought the best Expedient, to allow Men ' the Freedom of imparting the use of their Wives ' to those whom they should think fit, that so ' they might have Children by them; and this he ' would needs make a very commendable piece of ' Liberality, and laughed at those who think the ' Violation of their Bed such an insupportable Affront, that they revenge it by Murthers often, and ' sometimes by cruel Wars. Lycurgus thought a ' Man not to be blamed, who being advanc'd in Years, ' and having a young Wife, should recommend ' some virtuous handsome young Man, that she ' might have a Child by him, who might inherit ' the good Qualities of such a Father; and this ' Child the good Man loved as tenderly as if he was ' of his own begetting: On the other side, an honest Man who had a love for a married Woman upon the account of her Modesty, and the well-favouredness of her Children, might without ' Formality beg of her Husband a Night's Lodging, that he might have a Slip of so goodly a ' Tree, which he might transplant into his own ' Garden. And indeed, Lycurgus was of a Persuasion that Children were not so much the Property of their Parents, as of the whole Common-' wealth, and therefore he would not have 'em begot by the first Comers, but by the best Man that ' could be found: The Laws of other Nations ' seemed to him very defective and incongruous, ' who were very solicitous for the breed of their ' Dogs and Horses, and sent a great way, and were ' at no small Charges to get the best Sealions; and ' yet kept their Wives under Lock and Key for fear ' of other Men, whereas themselves were crazy, ' old, or infirm, and more fit to propagate Diseases ' than their Species; if they had made the least ' Reflection in the World, they would have taken ' notice, that the Honour and Dishonour of Children (who generally derive their good or ill Qualities from those that Beget 'em) doth chiefly redound to those who have the charge of their Education; and if they prove ill, they first feel the ' smart of it.

The banishing Jealousie from a Married State, is doubtless delivering it from a great Plague; yet Lycurgus was much to blame in healing it by a Remedy worse than the Disease. It is at bottom but a Physical Evil, which has its uses in the World (e); for it contributes more than is imagined, to the Preservation of Modesty, and the preventing infinite Scandals, whereas Bawdery and Adultery are Moral Evils. Now, according to good Morality, a Physical Evil ought never to be remedied by a Crime. Mr. Dacier justly blames Lycurgus (f) for Sacrificing all sort of Honour and Decorum, to Chimerical Notions of the publick Utility, as if what was shameful could ever be useful. It may even be said, that this great Legislator banished all sort of good Breeding, by permitting the Women to grow impudent; for 'tis certain, if the fair Sex preserved not the Modesty and Honour which is kept up in civiliz'd Nations, Mankind would universally sink into a filthy and brutal Lewdness.

(c) See the new Letters against Malebranche's Calvinism, pag. 557. and the following.

(f) Remarques sur la vie de Lycurgue, pag. 489.

For the rest, Plutarch pretends, that Numa Pompilius, in some measure imitated Lycurgus. By the Community of Women and Children, says he (g), they both designed to banish from Marriage all kind of Jealousie, but they did not pursue the same Methods; for the Roman Husband who had Children enough, and desired no more, gave his Wife to him that had none, and who desired her of him, and he was at Liberty, either to leave her with this Second Husband, or resume. Whereas the Lacedæmonians, when any one desired his Wife to have Children by her, lent her without quitting her, and his Marriage still continued undissolved; and very often, as we have said, if he saw an handsome Man, from whom he might expect a good and generous Race, he intreated him to get him Children, and conducted him to his Wife. Mr. Dacier's Marginal Notes deserves to be related. This is true of Lycurgus, says he, but it no where appears, that Numa had the same Design; and 'twere easie to prove, that this Community of Women began not at Rome, under Numa, but much later, and that is was not general. To be satisfied of this, we need no other Witness than Plutarch himself. See the Discourse he puts into Hortensius's Mouth. I have mentioned it (h) elsewhere. Bodin, whom I have (i) confuted, is ignorant of what Plutarch imputes to Numa; if he had known it, his Criticisms would not have so much deserved to be criticised. It's hard for an Author, who has written so many Books as Plutarch, not to contradict himself frequently.

(g) In parall. Lycurgi & Numæ.

(h) In the Article Hortensius.

(i) Plut. in Lycurgo, p. 49. Mr. Dacier, in his Remarks on this Place, produces a Passage from the 8th. Book of Aristotle's Politicks, in which that detestable Law of Lycurgus is approved.

(F) Lycurgus would have 'em made away.] Nor was it in the Power of the Father to dispose of the Children he thought fit, but he was obliged to bring it before the (a) Tryers, (who were some of the greatest Men of the Tribe to which the Child belonged) their Business was carefully to view the Infants, and if they found it lusty and well-favoured, they gave order for its Education, and than Numa Pompilius, 'tis, that of not permitting Maids to Marry (G) too young. Ari-

'and allotted it one of the nine thousand shares of 'Land abovementioned for its maintenance, but if 'they found it deform'd, and of an ill Complexion, 'they ordered it to be cast into a deep (a) Cavern in 'the Earth, near the Mountain Taygetus, as think-'ing it neither for the good of the Child it self, nor 'for the publick Interest, that it should be brought 'up, since Nature had denied it the means of happi-'ness in its own particular, by not giving it Health 'nor Strength sufficient to make it serviceable to 'the Publick: Upon the same account the Women 'did not bathe the new-born Children with Water, 'as is the custom in all other Countries, but with 'Wine, to prove the Temper and Complexion of their 'Bodies; for a Conceit they had, that weakly 'Children fall into Fits of the Convulsion, or immo-'diately faint upon their being thus bath'd; on the 'contrary, those who were of a strong and vigorous 'Habit, would acquire a greater degree of firmness 'by it, and get a temper in Proportion, like Steel in the 'quenching.

(G) To Marry too young.] Let's hear Plutarch. 'Now the Laws which Lycurgus ordained, either in 'relation to Virgins or married Women, were dif-'ferent: for he esteeming Procreation of Children to 'be the principal end of Marriage, would fix no set 'term of Age, when Men or Women should be 'esteemed capable of giving their consents to each 'other in Marriage; for he thought that Nature be-'ing the principal guide in that matter, should not 'be restrained with violence, which produces hatred 'and fear; but rather being gently indulged, when 'Youth, and Love, and Kindness move; the Coi-'tion might be more satisfactory, and consequently the 'Children become more robust, strong and healthful. 'But the Romans designing in the first place to 'deliver the Bodies of their Daughters pure and un-'defiled into the Embraces and Possession of the Hus-'band, made it lawful for Fathers to Marry their 'Daughters at twelve years of Age, or under: 'Which first way of Lycurgus seems more agreeable 'to the desires of Nature, which only respects the 'Procreation of Children; but the other is better 'adapted to make a conjugal Life comfortable, and 'calculated for the rules of moral Living.

The Distinction Plutarch here makes between the two Legislators does not seem just, nor obliging to the Sex. This Author discovers in Lycurgus's Laws a Physical, and in those of Numa a Moral Good. Is not this insinuating (b) that after the Age of twelve a Man has reason to suspect in his Consort the want of purity both in Mind and in Body? Is not this a Satyr on the fair Sex? He should have given all the advantage to the Laws of Lacedæmon; for those of the Romans were on one Hand, very apt to spoil good Manners, and on the other, pre-judicial to the Strength of the Children, and the Lives of the Mothers. Aristotle gives, upon this Topick, some well argued Precepts. He would not (c) have Maids Marry till eighteen, nor Men till thirty seven. He observes that the Inhabitants of all the Towns where Marriages are contracted too early, are infirm and small of Stature, and that precocious Marriages make the Child-bed, the Death-bed of several Women. He mentions a famous oracular Answer (d) given to the Trezenians, the meaning whereof was, that they Died because the, Eat their Fruits too Green, and which was interpreted, as if the Oracle had said, that they Died because they Married too young, and not because they gather'd their Fruits before they were Ripe. Aristotle observes that Children who are not much younger than those who gave them Being, have but little respect for them, from whence arise innumerable Domestick Jars. This is one moral Inconvenience; he touches on another of the same Class, which concerns Chastity. "Ετι δὲ ἡ πρὸς ἀφροδίσια συμμιγὴς τοῖς ἐκ τούτων γιγνομένοις ἀσθενεστέροις, ἀκαταστατωτέρα γὰρ εἶναι δοκεῖ τὴν χρησάμενον τῇ συνουσίᾳ. Præterea vero & ad temperantiam adjuvat elocare paulo ætate grandiores, videntur enim esse intemperantiores ac libidinosiores ea quæ valde puellæ rebus venereis usa sunt. Let Physicians reason upon these Words: But without going so far, and departing out of the road of Conversation, every Body may affirm, that a Precocious Marriage does not suffer Modesty to take Root deep enough. The respect we have for the Sex, and the care we take, not to use too frank Discourses before 'em, is not half so reserved to those who either have, or have had an Husband. We look upon them as Initiated Persons, from whom the Mysteries are not to be conceal'd; so that the Maids who are Married very young have not time to use themselves to a grave Exterior, which has greater Influence than is imagin'd upon the Interiour. The Romans were so persuaded of the ill Effects of loose Discourses, that they would not suffer (e) the young Maids to be present at Feasts. They suppos'd their Ears were stopp'd, against Obscenity, till little Boys came and unstopp'd them on their Wedding Day. Pueri obscœnis verbis novæ nuptæ aures returant (f). Horace's Councel ought to be a Law every where as well as in Lacedæmon. 'Tis this.

Nondum (g) subacta ferre jugum valet
Cervice; nondum munia comparis
Æquare, nec tauri ruentis
In venerem tolerare pondus.
. . . . . .
. . . . . Tolle cupidinem
Immitis uvæ: jam tibi lividos
Distinguet autumnus racemos
Purpureo varius colore.

Reasons of State oblige Princes to dispense with this Law: Witness the conduct of Charles V. towards Margaret his natural Daughter. (h) She was but ten years of Age when he promis'd her to Alexander de Medicis, in order to draw off Pope Clement VII. from the interest of France; and the Marriage was Consummated before she was twelve. By the way I shall add, that this Emperour did violence to Nature in a quite contrary manner in Margaret's second Marriage. '(i) The young Widow was not Re-married for a 'long time, because Charles, who had gain'd his 'Point by her first Marriage, sought a new Ad-'vantage by her second. She desir'd to be given to 'Cosmo de Medicis Alexander's Successor, who 'sought her the more importunately, because 'thereby he'd neither have Dowry to pay, nor Por-'tion to restore. The Match was agreeable: But 'Charles pretended to purchase by his Daughter's 'second Marriage the Friendship of Pope Paul III. 'as he had by the first, that of Clement VII. And 'in effect, bestow'd her on Octavian Farnese who 'was but twelve years of Age, which gave occasion 'to a Poet (i) of Anjou to make one of the finest 'Epigrams which has been seen in this last Cen-'tury. There needs no great change in the Epi-gram of the Menagiana, to make us believe it the same that Mr. Varillas meant. '(k) I know not 'whose the following Epigram is; but it's very 'neat, and the Subject finely Treated.

'Impubes nupsi valido, nunc firmior annis,
'Exsucco & molli sum fatiata viro.
'Ille fatigavit teneram, hic ætate valentem
'Intactam tota nocte jacere finit.
'Dum licuit, nolui; nunc dum volo non licet uti.
'O Hymen! aut annos, aut mihi redde virum.

Mr. Menage might have read in St. Marthe, (l) that James Bouju President in the Parliament of Bretagne, and Native of Chateauneuf in Anjou is Author of this Epigram; but he ought to have Corrected the Satiata in the second Verse, and put it fociata, and have read in the fifth verse, dum nollem, licuit. Mr. Varillas is mistaken in saying du Bois was the Author. This is not the only Supplement I have to give to the Note G of this Article in the second Edition. Here's another somewhat larger, and which refers to the Observation I have made upon the ill effects of free Discourse.

Muretus observes that the Ancient Greeks very prudently forbad Women to be present at Feasts, for the Men being us'd to talk too freely there, 'twas hard for 'em to forbear now and then a smutty Jest. They must therefore have offended the chast Ears of the Sex, or by being more reserv'd, have lost a great part of the Mirth that belongs to such Entertainments. For these reasons they introduc'd this Custom. If any Woman appear'd at a publick Feast she was reckon'd thorough-pac'd, and declar'd thereby, that she was not only content to hear whatever was said,

(a) That is Lycurgus and Numa.

(b) Τὸ μὲν Λυκοῦργον ἐπιτιθέναι τῷ ὄγκῳ τὰς παιδοποιίας τῷ ἀκμαιοτάτῳ, ὀρθῶς ἐστὶ τοῖς ἐμφύτοις ἐοικὸς τῆς φύσεως, κ.τ.λ. Lycurgus maturas & viri appetentes elocat, quo consociatio impellente jam natura, benevolentiæ & amoris potius quàm odii & timoris contra naturam coactarum esset ingressio, corporaque firmiora essent ad uterum ferendum atque enitendum, velut ad nihil aliud nuberent, quàm pariendum. Plutarch. in Numa, p. 77. C.

(c) Οὔτε γὰρ δὴ μείζους ἢ τὰ εἴδη, ἢ τὸ ἦθος ἀνδρώδης ἀνὴρ ἐν τῇ γαμετῇ γενήσεται. Ita potissimum corpus & mores puros illibatosque in manum viri censentes perventuros. Plut. ib.

(d) Aristotel. l. 7. de Republica, c. 16.

(e) Virgo de convivio abdicatur ideo quod majores nostri virginis acerbæ aures venereis vocabulis imbui noluerunt. Varro in Agathone, apud Nonium Marcellum voce acerbum, p. m. 247.

(f) Varro ibid. apud eumdem, voce returare, p. 107.

(g) Horat. Od. 5. 2.

(h) Varillas, Hist. de François I. liv. p. m. 387.

(i) Id. ib.

(k) Suite du Menagiana, p. 197. Edit. de Holl.

(l) Sammarth. Elog. l. 3. p. 10. Edit. 1696. he calls him Bugius.

Ariſtotle deſcants largely on this Head, and 'tis eaſy to judge that his Remarks are judicious, and are not very different from the Motives which induc'd the Greeks not to let their Women be preſent at Aſſemblies, where the Converſation was too free. I have ſomething to obſerve againſt the Author of (H) Old and New Lacedæmon. He is too much a Gentleman to be diſturb'd at it.

LYCURGUS, an Athenian Orator, Son of Lycophron, and Grandſon to another Lycurgus, whom the thirty Tyrants put to Death, flouriſhed at the ſame time with Demoſthenes. He firſt Studied Philoſophy under Plato, [illegible] betook himſelf

(a) Muretus variar. lect. l. 7. c. 2. p. m. 990.

(b) Terent. Eunuch. Act. 4. Sc. 1.

(c) Cicero in Verrem l. 1. p. 473. tom. 1. Edit. Grav.

(d) Call'd Rhetor.

(e) Juſtin. l. 7. c. 3. p. m. 172. 173.

(f) Seneca Epiſt. 95. p. m. 394.

(g) Mr. Bernier a Native of Blois.

(h) It's Intitled Reflexions penſées & bons mots anecdotes par le Sieur Pepincourt. conſult it at p. 83.

ſaid, but alſo to ſuffer what they pleaſed. (a) Neque ulla in virorum ſympoſiis accumbebat mulier, niſi quæ quidvis non audire modo, verum etiam perpeti poſſet. Muretus cites two or three Paſſages. He alledges the anſwer Thais makes in Terence to the Spark (b) who deſired that young Pamphila might be at the Feaſt. He alledges what Cicero relates of Rubrius's Impudence whom Verres had lodg'd at Philodamus's a Burgher of Lampſacus, for a Lewd deſign. The Burgher one of the chief Men of the place, would never ſuffer his Daughter to come into the Feaſt-Room, as Rubrius deſir'd. (c) Poſteaquam ſatis calere res Rubrio viſa eſt: Quæſo, inquit, Philodame, cur ad nos filiam tuam non intro vocari jubes? homo, qui & ſumma gravitate, & jam id ætatis, & parens eſſet, obſtupuit hominis improbi dicto, inſtare Rubrius, tum ille, ut aliquid reſponderet, negavit moris eſſe Græcorum, ut in convivio virorum accumberent muliares. You ſee Philodamus alledges for his Reaſon, its being contrary to the Grecian Cuſtom. Some learned Men believe that this was an invented Excuſe. But Muretus oppoſes the Teſtimony of a great (d) Orator, and he might have confirm'd it by the Words of Cornelius Nepos, which are to be found above, and by thoſe in the [illegible] Chapter of the ſixth Book of Vitruvius. He might have urged, that even at the Court of Macedon, the Princeſſes were not admitted to the Feaſts given to Strangers, and that the Complaiſance ſhewn to the King of Perſia's Embaſſadors had Conſequences which prov'd that the refuſal of their requeſt had been more prudent; for when at their intreaty the Ladies were introduc'd, they took ſuch Liberties, as it was neceſſary to put a ſtop to with the Sword's Point. (e) Legati benigne excepti, inter epulas ebrietate creſcente, regani Amyntam, ut apparatui epularum adjiciat jus familiaritatis, adhibitis in convivium ſuis ac filii uxoribus, id apud Perſas haberi pignus ac fœdus hoſpitii. Qua ut venerunt, petulantius Perſis eas contrectantibus, filius Amyntæ Alexander rogat patrem, reſpectu ætatis ac gravitatis ſua abiret convivio, pollicitus ſe hoſpitum temperaturum jocos, &c. Laſtly, Muretus obſerves that the Romans contented themſelves with forbidding Maids the liberty of going to Feaſts. I have in another place related with what ſeverity they Prohibited Women the uſe of Wine; but in Seneca's time that cuſtom was out of Date: Their manners were ſo Corrupted, that they got Drunk as publickly as the Men. Non mutata fœminarum natura, ſays he, (f) ſed vita eſt, Non cum virorum licentiam æquaverint, corporum quoque virilium vitia æquaverunt. Non minus pervigilant, non minus potant, & olea & mero viros provocant: aquæ invitis ingeſta viſceribus per os reddunt, & vinum omne vomitu remetiuntur: aquâ vinum rodunt, ſolatium ſtomachi æſtuantis. The change is as great in France if we may believe Travellers. They had no Laws prohibiting Women the uſe of Wine, and yet in the Days of our Fathers they drank hardly any thing but Water, but we are told that for ſome time paſt, they have carrous'd in the beſt Wines and ſtrongeſt Liquors, and 'tis to be fear'd they'll fall by degrees, or even all at once into the exceſſes of the Païs conquis. Read theſe Words. 'Who would have thought that the Women——would have added Tobacco, and 'Brandy to ſo many other Vices as they have glo-'ried in for above thirty years paſt? They carry 'as yet but Ruſkets of Brandy at their ſide; who 'knows but that in time they'll carry Barrels? This is what a Paris (g) Phyſician has Publiſh'd in Book (h) Printed in 1696. If Ovid, the eaſieſt of Caſuiſts, be the Director, theſe Tiplers have made choice of, they ought, at leaſt, to keep within the bounds he has preſcrib'd; he would indeed have Women Drink, but not to excels. He diſcourages them by the threats of a Puniſhment which muſt be worſe than a bare diſgrace, otherwiſe the Perſons he ſpeaks to, would not have regarded the evil denounced as very [illegible]ible.

Aptius (i) [illegible]is potare puellas,
Cum Venus e [illegible] puero [illegible]ale, Bacche, fuit.
Hoc quoque, quæ patiens caput eſt: animuſque pedeſque,
Conſtent: nec, quæ ſint ſingula, bina vide.
Turpe jacens mulier multo madefacta Lyæo:
Digna eſt concubitus quoſlibet illa pati.
Nec ſomnis poſitâ tutum ſuccumbere menſâ:
Per ſomnos fieri multa pudenda ſolent.

(i) Ovid. de arte amator. l. 3. ſub. fin. p. m. 218. 211.

I have loſt ſight of my S[illegible]t I ſhall come up with it again by the [illegible] Citation, proving what I have ſaid con[illegible] the Diminution of reſpect to Married Women. The Chevalier d' Her——writing to one of his Kinſwomen, who made a ſcruple of marrying Clandeſtinely, dilates upon the Advantages ſhe may find in the condition of a Wife, whilſt ſhe paſſes for a Maid. You'll be, (k) Madam de la F——ſays he, [illegible] you'll be [illegible] Mademoiſelle d' Her——ſtill be [illegible] of the charming Tribe of young Ladies, who'll ſeem to be all like you, and perhaps really are. You may pretend not to underſtand ſome things which indiſcreet People may ſay, and you'll be allow'd to bluſh at 'em, whereas if your Marriage be once declar'd, you muſt aſſume an Air ſomewhat leſs Innocent, and more Paſſive; in fine you'll have a right to all over all the little Primmings of a meer Maid; and can any thing be prettier: for naturally Modeſty loves theſe little Affectations; and why not? Since 'tis believed ſhe commonly owes her All to 'em. You may Practice 'em upon Monſieur de la F——himſelf, you'll be a Demi-virgin even to him; and as long as you don't bear his Name, you'll have a right to be ſomewhat more coy, and more reſerved in your Carriage to him. Note, that he Rallies her thus, becauſe ſhe would have (l) the Banns thrice openly and audibly Publiſhed, the contract made in Form, and a Wedding afterwards, where all the Relations might come (m) and talk over their Fooler[illegible]

(k) Lettres [illegible] 2. part. lettr. 42. p. 215. Edit. de Holl.

(l) Id. [illegible] p. 21[illegible]

(m) Cæ[illegible] qua ſupra p. 1415. lettre e.

(H) Againſt the Auth[illegible] and New Lacedæmon.] I have only three things to object to him.

In the firſt place I could wiſh he had not attempted to Apologize for the Nakedneſs of the Lacedæmonian Maids. Mr. Dacier had a much better Taſte: He has openly declared for the ſide of decency; he ſaw, that Lycurgus had ſacrificed the inſtincts of Civil Life, and the impreſſions of Modeſty to a falſe notion of Politicks.

In the ſecond Place, I don't think the Apology founded on tolerable Reaſons. This I am now to examine, Mr. Guillet's Words are theſe. (n) The Spartan Maids Danc'd ſtark-naked in Publick; and few People are perſwaded, that this was a modeſt ſight. Yet I can't but think, that the Lacedæmonians had their Reaſons for it, and that the thing being very common made no dangerous or ſinful impreſſions on their Minds. There grows a Familiarity betwixt the Eye and the Object, which diſpoſes to inſenſibility, and expells the foul deſires of Imagination. [illegible]motion proceeds only from the Novelty of the [illegible]d perpetual Cuſtom cloys the Eye more than Attempts; and if you conſider the Integrity of th[illegible]tions Morals, you'll acknowledge the truth of this Sentence. The Maids of Sparta were not Naked, the publick Virtue was a covering to 'em. I don't ſay, that generally ſpeaking, their excuſe would be any excuſe [illegible] But there are ſeveral Countries in South [illegible] this time, where the Women always appear in the dreſs of theſe Spartan Dancers, and yet our Travellers affirm, that they are abſolutely exempt from Crime. But tho' I ſhould be ten whole years in himself to Oratory under Isocrates, and advanced to publick Employs. He was a very severe pleading the Cause of the Maids of Sparta; I foresee I should never give you a good Opinion of their Modesty. You'll rather believe the biting Satyre of the Athenians, and even of Aristotle himself, who as much a Macedonian as he was, had lived too long at Athens, to be not tainted with that general Hate, which reigned there against the Spartans. Observe what he has said of the Lacedæmonians in the 2d. Book of his Politicks. When Lycurgus undertook to introduce Constancy and Patience into Sparta, 'tis evident, that as to the Men he did succeed; but he was more remiss as to the Women, who lived there in an unrestrain'd Softness. He adds, that Lycurgus vainly endeavoured to reform 'em; in which he is contradicted by Plutarch. What we are told of this Familiarity between the Eye and the Object, which disposes to Insensibility, is good and solid, generally speaking, and is one of Balzac's Reflections against the famous Sonnet of Job. The Author (a) of the Sonnet was charged with contradicting himself (b); and thus they endeavoured to convict him; (c) He is afraid his Lady won't be moved by a Object worthy of Compassion; and immediately after desires she would accustom her self to his Object. Consequently he desires what he fears. The Custom of seeing tending to Cure his Lady of all Emotion, it's plain, he desires what he has declared he should be sorry were the Case. Let him, if he pleases, reconcile this, and remember this old Maxim, with which the Universities ring: ab assuetis non fit passio. The Soul receiving the Emotion only by the Intervention of the Eyes, when once these are accustom'd, all Surprize ceases. When the Eyes have once contracted an Acquaintance and Familiarity with the strangest Objects, these, how terrible soever at first, grow tractable by Degrees, and entring the Soul as Friends, raise no longer any Disturbance, nor cause the least Motion. The Custom of seeing Monsters makes 'em cease to be such in the Eyes which are used to 'em. Even the Sight of Spectres and Furies armed with their Torches and Serpents would lose its Force and Horrour, in our Imaginations, by a long Acquaintance with 'em. By a stronger Reason, &c. But as solid as this Doctrine may be, I question whether it can be applied in our Case, since the Maids of Lacedæmon appeared naked only on certain solemn Days, and at other Times, wore a Habit, which only shewed their Thighs. This was a sure way of irritating Concupiscence, and not disposing to Insensibility, by a perpetual Custom. Besides, there's a great Difference betwixt Europeans, and those Savage Nations. These have ever gone naked, but Lycurgus introduced the Custom into a Town, where it had not been known before, and whilst all the Neighbouring Nations observed the Rules of Decency. He can't therefore be excused. Lastly, the virtue of Americans, if what Travellers say be true, is a Justification of this Legislator; for the Event has shewn, that Lacedæmon was not a Place where such Novelties could innocently be introduced. In vain Aristotle's Testimony is attempted to be invalidated. Nothing is more grave and rational, than the Book in which this Philosopher speaks so ill (d) of the Lacedæmonian Women. The Spirit of Partiality does not appear in this Work; so that instead of saying, that the Slanders of Poets made an Impression on this Philosopher, we must on the contrary say, that his Authority justifies their Reproaches. Besides, it is not true, that Plutarch hath contradicted Aristotle in the matter in Question. 'Tis plain, if we consider it, that this Philosopher spoke only of a Custom, to let the Lacedæmonian Wives, of governing their Husbands. Lycurgus would reform this Abuse, and retrench their Empire; but seeing no Likelihood of Success, he desisted from his (e) Enterprize, without omitting, however, the making many Orders relating to the Sex, which qualified 'em for producing strong Children. 'Tis in behalf of these Orders, that Plutarch has contradicted Aristotle; but he falls into the Fallacy which the Logicians call ignoratio elenchi; he knew not the Point in Question. Lycurgus, says he (f), at first regulated all that related to Marriages and Baths; for we must not believe, what Aristotle says, that having attempted to regulate and reform the Women, he gave it over, not being able to put a stop to their unbridled Licentiousness, and the too great Authority they had taken over their Husbands. 'Tis plain, that Plutarch reasons ill; a Legislator, who gives over the Attempt of bringing the Wives in Subjection to their Husbands, does not thereby intermit all Care relating to the Education of Maids, to their Marriages, &c. and yet Plutarch here, to shew that Aristotle had no reason to say, that Lycurgus renounced the Design of restraining the Power of the Women, alledges the Regulations of Lycurgus, which tended only to the provoking to Marriage, and begetting lusty Children. Thousands of such Fallacies might be found in Plutarch, if we took the Pains to trace 'em. He relates in the following Page, an Answer, which manifestly supposes this Truth of Fact, that the Lacedæmonian Husbands were master'd by their Wives. A sign that Lycurgus did not reform this Abuse: Note, that Aristotle acknowledges in the same Place, that Lycurgus made Laws relating to the multiplying of Children (g).

(n) Lacedæmone ancienne & nouvelle, p. 167. Edit. de Holl.

My IIId. Remark concerns these Words of Mr. Guillet. I venture not, says he (h), to describe the Habits of the Maids of ancient Lacedæmon. Sophocles will acquaint you with it, if you observe how he has described that of Hermione, in a Fragment cited by Plutarch; it was so short, that the Poet Ibycus laughing at them, called them Phœnomeridæ. 'Tis certain, 1. That we don't find in this Fragment of Sophocles, the Description of an Habit; for this Poet only says, that Hermione's Tunick was slit from her Hips downwards, and shewed her Thighs. 2. Ibycus's calling the Lacedæmonian Maids Phœnomerides, was not from their wearing a very short Habit, but from their Habits being slit of each side, and shewing their Thighs. Plutarch most clearly gives us this Reason of Ibycus's Raillery. I wonder Cragius could commit the following Fault. Ea (mulieres) instituto veteri vestes supra genua decurtatas ferebant. Unde [illegible] dictæ sunt ab Ibyco Poëta, ut refutatur Plutarchus, tanquam quæ femora nuda ostenderint (b). Can a Habit, which reaches only to the Knees, leave the Thighs naked? Don't the Breeches, which Men have worn for so many Ages, prove the contrary in all the Variations the Fashion passes through? 3. It is not true, generally speaking, that the Lacedæmonian Habit was short. The Authority of Clemens Alexandrinus is ill alledged. Cragius has not taken it by a right Handle, [illegible] says this Father (i) [illegible] That is, 'Tis not handsome to wear such Garments as reach only to the Knees, as is said of those of the Lacedæmonian Maids; for Decency suffers not a Woman to shew any part of her Body naked. First, we see Clemens Alexandrinus does not pretend, that the Lacedæmonian Habit exposed the Thighs, he only blames 'em for shewing their Feet and Legs. Cragius ought to have stopt there. I add, that all the necessary Truth may be preserved to this Passage, without supposing, that Clemens Alexandrinus pretended, the Lacedæmonian Maids went always thus habited; it suffices that they were in this Dress, when they went a Hunting, or to Wrestle, or performed any other Exercise. Now this does not prove, that their Habit was over-short; but only that they tucked 'em up above the Knee, that they might not be hampered in 'em. This must necessarily be supposed, unless we accuse Virgil of gross Ignorance; for he has given the Maids of Lacedæmon a long and flowing Habit, but tied up above the Knee, when they hunted:

Cui (k) mater media sese tulit obvia silva
Virginis os habitumque gerens, & virginis arma
SPARTANÆ . . . . .
. . . . .
Mangus humeris de more habilem suspenderat arcum
Venatrix, dederatque comam diffundere ventis
NUDA GENU, NODOQUE SINUS COLLECTA FLUENTES.

(f) Plutarch. in Lycurgo, pag. 47. (g) [illegible] Nam cum vellet latior legis quam plurimos esse Spartiatas, invitavit atque allexit civeis ad quam plurimos liberos procreandos. Aristot. ubi supra, pag. 247. G.

(g) Ubi supra, p. 172.

(b) Cragius, de Republ. Lacedæm. lib. 3. c. 9. p. m. 153.

(i) Clem. Alexandr. in Pædagogo, lib. 2. cap. 10. pag. 204.

(k) Virgil. Æneid. lib. 1. v. 314.

The

(a) [illegible]

(b) [illegible]

(c) [illegible]

(d) [illegible]

(e) [illegible] Id. ibid. pag. 247.

severe Judge, and fit to be paired (Y) with the Prætor Cassius. He is spoke of pretty fully in Moreri's Supplement, but not without some (Z) Mistakes. He is sometimes [a] confounded with Lycurgus the Lacedæmonian Legislator.

LYDIAT (Thomas) an Englishman, published some Writings in the beginning of the XVIth. Century, in which he attacked the Opinions (D) of Scaliger, and those of Aristotle, &c. Scaliger was very angry with him, and confuted him with a deal of Haughtiness.

[a] Lindenbroch in Ammian. Marcellin. lib. 22. cap. 9. & Corradus in Cicer. ad Atticum, l. 1. Epist. 13. Mistake Lycurgus, an Athenian Orator, for Lycurgus of Lacedæmon.

(a) Ἐκαλεῖτο δὲ ἡ τῶν παρθένων οὕτω χιτωνίσκος. οὐ παρελύσαντες ἄχρι τινὸς τὰς πλευρὰς, ἐν τῷ κάτω μέρει στενοῦσθαι τοὺς μηροὺς. μάλιστα αἱ Σπαρτιάτιδες, δι' ἃς καὶ τοῦτο παρονομάσθαι νόμιζον. Ita autem dicebatur etiam virginum tunicula. cujus postquam aliquo usque pinnas solvissent, à malleolo inferiore pedis femora ostendebant, maxime Spartanæ, quas idcirco phænomeridas appellabant. Jul. Pollux, apud Miscell. Laconic. lib. 1. c. 19. pag. 85.

(b) Martial. Epigram. 93. lib. 1.

(c) John, of the House of Luxembourg.

(d) Dubravius, Histor. Bohem. lib. 20. apud Valesiana, p. m. 61.

The Description Pollux has left us of this Habit, leaves no room to doubt, that it was long; for he says, that when they unlaced themselves to a certain Point, they shewed from their Feet upwards to their Thighs. This is his way of expressing it (a). We may take it for granted then, as to the Fact that Cragius, and those who follow him, are mistaken; but something may be said in their Favour, as to their reasoning, founded upon the Fact. An Habit might be so short, as to leave the Thighs naked. See these Words of Martial (b) Dimidiasque nates Gallica palla tegit; and what Dubravius observes of the Modes, which a King (c) of Bohemia brought from France. He let his Hair grow very long, he wore round-toed Shoes, and dressed himself in a short Cloak, which reached only to his Hips. Inerat ei peregrinus habitus in nutriendis comis, in calceandis pedibus rostratis calceis, in vestiendo corpore palliolis vix dimidias nates tegentibus (d). But still I maintain the Nakedness of the Thighs, which the Lacedæmonian Women were reproached with, proceeded not from the Shortness of their Petticoats; for if they had resembled our Seamen's Breeches, or the Habits mentioned by Martial and Dubravius, it would not have been enough to have called 'em Phænomerides. There is no Body but easily understands, that if their Petticoats, which were slit up on both Sides, without being sewed at the bottom, came but little lower than their Breech, they had done much worse than shew their Thighs in Walking; so that the Poets, who took a greater Liberty than they do at present, and expressed themselves more grossly, would have given 'em a much stronger Epithet than that of Phænomerides, or Naked Thighs. I need not explain this Thought more at large.

By the way, the Fashion of short Habits was carried to a great Excess in the Court of France, if what we read in an Italian Author, who lived towards the end of the XVth. Century, be true. He supposes, that an Italian scorned to travel into France, as well because the French were ignorant, as because their very King wore a Habit so short, as not to cover the Nameless Parts. (e) Cur obsecro trans Alpes non profectus? Quod scirem Gallos maximè stolidos esse, corpusque curare magis quam animum colere: regemque eorum quamvis splendidissimum tam brevi tamen vestitu incedere, ut pudenda non velet, ac si Cynicorum sectator sit institutorum.

(Y) A severe Judge, and fit to be paired with the Prætor Cassius.] This is evident from these Words of Ammianus Marcellinus. (f) Verum ille, he speaks of the Emperor Julian, judicibus Cassiis tristior & Lycurgis causarum momenta æquo jure perpendens, suum cuique tribuebat, nusquam à vero abductus, acerius in calumniatores exsurgens quos oderat multorum hujusmodi pestulantem sæpe dementiam adusque discrimen expertus, dum esset adhuc humilis & privatus. Plutarch observes, that it was said of this Lycurgus, that he dipt his Pen in Death, a Thought which well enough agrees with the Reproach made to Draco, that he writ his Laws not with Ink, but in Blood. (g) Ἔοικε δὲ ἡ τῶν δικῶν τὴν φυλακὴν, ἡ τῶν παιδίων τὴν σύλληψιν, ὡς ἐξέλαμεν ἀνωτέρω, εἰς ἡ τῶν σώφρων ἴσως λέγειν, Λυκοῦργος ὁ μέλανι ἀλλὰ θανάτῳ χρίσας τὸν κάλαμον καὶ τῶν νομῶν, ἵνα εὐγνῶμον. Urbis etiam custodia ei mandata fuit, & maleficiorum comprehensio. Quos quidem omnes expulit: adeò ut sophistarum quidem dicerent, Lycurgum ita contra malos scribere, ut qui calamum non atramento sed morte imbueret. Diodorus Siculus represents him as (b) a violent Delator. Add to this, these Words of Cicero (k) Nosmetipsi qui Lycurgi à pr[illegible]pio fuissemus, quotidie demitigamur. See the following Remark, at the Place concerning Ibis.

(k) Cicero ad. Attic. Epist. 13. lib. 1.

(Z) Not without some mistakes.] I. He should have said in general, that he banished all (l) Malefactors, and not simply all Loyterers and Vagabonds. II. I don't find he excelled in Exercises, or was commonly Victor in the publick Games. III. He should not have said, that when he made himself be carried to the Senate, there publickly to give an account of all his Actions, he was applauded by all the People: he should not have said this, without observing, that (m) an Accuser appeared against him, whose Calumnies he confuted; nor should he have passed over in Silence, that he was (n) several Times accused. IV. The Athenians, if we may credit the Supplement, regarding him as a Person, who had something Divine in him, consecrated after his Death an Ibis to him (an Egyptian Bird, much like a Stork) as the Owl had been consecrated to Xenophon. This is misunderstanding Plutarch's Words, Amiot translated 'em thus: Lycurgus was firnamed Ibis, which is a black Stork, and 'twas commonly said to Lycurgus the Ibis, to Xenophon the Owl. This Passage of Plutarch (o) is much corrupted; but 'tis easie to see, that it does not signifie what is pretended in the Supplement. The Learned Henry Valois will help us to understand it. Unde, says he, etiam Ibis cognominatus esse videtur, quòd scilicet ut Ibis angues, sic ipse noxios cives & peregrinos expelleret. Aristophanes in Avibus:

Γῦπες Λυκοῦργε, χαιρόφωτε νυκτερὶς.

Quanquam scio Scholiastem ejus cognominis aliam afferre causam, quòd scilicet Ægypto oriundus, aut quòd longis cruribus esset Lycurgus. Sed nostram sententiam confirmare videtur Plutarchus in Lycurgi Rhetoris vita: ubi & versum illum Aristophanis adducit, sed mendosum (p). A small Doubt comes into my Head. This Comedy of Aristophanes was play'd (q) in the 2d. Year of the 91st. Olympiad, but he was one of the famous Orators (r), whom the Athenians refused to deliver up to Alexander. Of what an Age then must he have been when he died, if he be the same that Aristophanes spoke of in this Comedy? Did this Poet mention Persons of obscure Condition? When 'tis said, that upon Demosthenes's Testimony, Lycurgus's Sons were presently set at Liberty, it's plainly intimated, that Demosthenes asserted their Innocence; but this is false. Demosthenes was then in Exile, and he wrote to the Athenians (s) that they were blamed for the Treatment they gave Lycurgus's Sons. Hereupon they were released. VI. He ought not to have cited Herodotus, who being dead before Lycurgus was born, could say nothing of him. The citing Pausanias is more pardonable, though he has said (t) but a small part of what is ascribed to him, but the not citing Plutarch, is an unpardonable Omission.

(l) Plutarch ubi supra, uses the Word κάκουργον, maleficus.

(m) Plut. ibid. pag. 842. E.

(n) Id. ib.

(o) Ibid. p. 843. D.

(p) That is, because he prosecuted Offenders with Edgeness and Rashness.

(q) Henric. Valesius in Ammian. Marcellin. lib. 22. cap. 9. pag. m. 321.

(r) Vide Sam. Petiti Miscellanea, lib. 1. cap. 10.

(s) Diod. Sicul. lib. 17. c. 15. (t) Plut. ubi supra, p. 842. D.

(v) Pausan. lib. 1, pag. 29.

(D) Published some Writings——in which he attacked the Opinions of Scaliger, and those of Aristotle.] He published at London in 1605, a Tract De variis amorum formis, in which he confutes Clavius, and the Mathematicians of the College of Rome, and Joseph Scaliger. See here a Passage of the Scaligerana, which charges him with not understanding what he Censures in Clavius; Lydiat est il melancholicus, Æquinoctium mirum statuit 36. diebus post solitum, & dicit à veteribus sic observatum. Reprehendit Clavium, & illum non capit (v). Mr. Konig makes mention of this Work of Lydiat, and of that De annis ministerii Christi, printed in the Year 1613, but he does not speak of this other Work of his, Prælectio astronomica de natura cæli & conditionibus elementorum: tum autem de causis præcipuarum motuum cæli & stellarum. Item disquisitio physiologica de origine fontium perennium frigidorum & calidorum: eaque occasione de ortu & causis plerorumque omnium subterraneorum, atque etiam

(x) Scaligerana, voce Lydiat.

(e) Jovian. Pontanus in dialogo Antonius, p. m. 1251. (f) Amm. Marcellin. lib. 22. c. 19. pag. m. 321. (g) Δημάδης δ' οὐχὶ τὸν αἱμάσσοντα, οὐκοῦν ὅτι δι' αἱμάτων τοὺς νόμους ὁ Δράκων ἔγραψεν. Postmodum lepide ait Demades sanguine Draconem non atramento scripsisse leges. Plutarch. in Solone, pag. 87. E. (b) Plut. in vitis decem Rhetorum, pag. 841. (i) Ὃν ἡ πανήγυρις ὅτε τὸν λέγειν ἀδύνατον. Diodor. Siculus, lib. 16. See also Dionysius Halicarnassæus in Censura vet. scriptor, p. m. 198. 123.

Haughtiness. See the Prolegomena to his Chronological Canons. He has inserted a Greek Epigram in it, which is very injurious to Lydiat. He wrote afresh (E) against Scaliger, and took in some other Matters, and died, the 3d. of April, 1646, at Seventy Four Years of Age.

[a] Vossius found the Latin Version of it in Scaliger's Cyclometrica, and published it.

LYDIUS (Martin) Minister of the Gospel, having quitted the Palatinate on account of the Persecution, retired into the Low-Countries, in 1576, and was made Professor of Divinity at Franeker. He was a Native of Lubeck, and had been Principal of the College of Sapience, at Heidelberg, in Conjunction with Zachary Ursin. He left two Sons, who were Ministers. Balthasar Lydius, the eldest, began the Exercise of his Profession at Dort, towards the Year 1603, and died [b] in 1629. He composed (A) some Books, and had four Sons, who were all Ministers. The eldest was called Isaac, and died Minister at Dort, leaving a Son named Matthew, who died a Minister about the Year 1685, and who had a good Library. James Lydius, Balthasar's Second Son, was Minister of Dort, and writ [c] several Books. The other Son of Martin Lydius, was called John. He exercised his Ministry at Oudwater in Holland, and published (C) several Books. His Two Sons were Ministers. No one Family perhaps has furnished more Ministers than this.

[b] Witte in Diar. Biograph.

[c] Taken from the Life of David Parœus, p. m. 15.

LIEBAUT (John) a Native of Dijon, practised Physick at Paris with some Success. He there married Nicole Stephens (A) a Learned Woman, and Daughter to Charles Stephens. He published several (B) Books, some of which were translated into [d] Henn. Witte, Diar. Biograph. paret. 2. pag. 36.

æstus & salsedinis maris, nec non diluvii universalis. Quibus duabus commentationculis adumbratur constitutio universi: ita ut receptæ à multis hodiè Philosophorum Peripateticorum opiniones de quinta cœli essentiâ immutabili, & de elementorum proportionibus situque refutentur; naturalis autem historia sacrarum literarum de aquâ supercalefactâ atque igne subtus posito juxtâ genuinam antiquitùs receptam earum sententiam explicetur. Auctore THOMA LYDIAT. It was printed at London in 1605, in Octavo. The Author in his Advertisement to the Reader, declares he could not bear, that Aristotle's Authority should cram People into the belief of a pretended Difference betwixt the Celestial and Elementary Matter, or that this Paltry Reason should be alledged, that there are Things true in Philosophy, which are false in Divinity. He maintains, that this is making Divinity the Sport of Atheists. Haudquaquam ratus oportere me contentum esse eo quod vulgo solitum esset responderi ad hujusmodi dogmata Aristotelicæ sententiæ sacrorum bibliorum contraria, scilicet verum esse Physicè non Theologicè; quandoquidem hoc videretur nihil aliud quam Theologiam exponere ludibrio hominum atheorum——— Igitur his duabus exercitationibus Philosophicis——— conatus sum, refutatis præsertim Aristotelis Opinionibus de naturâ cœli & elementorum, reddere rationes Physicæ illius constitutionis universi——— quæ sacris scripturis——— videretur esse tradita——— id præcipuè operum Dei ut demonstrarem idem esse verum Physicè ac Theologicè. Note, that he ascribes the Original of Fountains, and abundance of other Things, to Subterraneous Fires.

(A) He wrote afresh against Scaliger, and took in some other Matters.] This will appear by the Catalogue I am going to give; and of which no Footstep is to be seen in the Sieur Konig's Bibliotheque. Defensio tractatus de variis annorum formis, contra Jos. Scaligerum, una cum examine Canonum Chronologiæ Isagogicorum, at London, 1607. in Octavo. Emendatio temporum ab orbe condito hucusque contra Scaligerum & alios, at the same Place 1609, in Octavo. Solis & Lunæ periodus, seu annus magnus, at the same Place 1620. in Octavo. Epistola astronomica de anni solaris mensura, at the same Place, 1621, in Octavo. De numero aureo. De altaribus in Ecclesiis Christianis excludendis, &c.

(a) Balthasar Lydius, composed some Books.] He published two Volumes, in Octavo, intituled Waldensis, id est, vera servatio nostræ Ecclesiæ demonstrata ex confessionibus Waldensium & Bohemorum. The 1st. Tome was printed at Rotterdam, in 1616, and the other [illegible] the Year following. This Author's other Works are, (a) Fasciculus historiæ Waldensium. Miseriæ orbis seu navigationes primæ in Austrium.

(a) Witte, Diar. Biograph. parte 2. pag. 36.

(B) James Lydius writ several Books.] I mention not many Books he published in Flanders, nor his Roomsche Wapenspiegel (b) printed at Dort, 1614, in Octavo, but those are two other Books, which shew he was versed in all Liberal Arts. Sapientiæ Christianæ libri tres, quibus universum Christianum mores ac ritus in uxore ineundâ, sponsalibus contrahendis, nuptiisque faciendis ac perficiendis enarrantur. They were printed at Dort, in 1643. in Quarto, and afterwards in Twelves. II. Agonistica sacra. III. Florum sparsio ad historiam passionis Jesu Christi. He writ a Book also, intituled Belgium Gloriosum, and a Dialogue De cœna Domini.

(b) That's to say, the Absurdity of the Papists.

His Heirs have some Works of his in their Hands which he did not publish. Mr. Van Til, Minister, and Professor at Dort, having seen the Manuscript, of the Syntagma Sacrum de re militari, and that of the Dissertation De Juramento, judged them worthy to be published, and advised the Bookseller to do it. This Advice was followed, as appeared by the Volume printed at Dort, in Quarto, 1698, and called, Jacobi Lydii Syntagma sacrum de re militari: nec non de jure jurando dissertatio Philologica: Opus Posthumum & multa eruditione commendatum, cum figuris æneis elegantissimè incisis, quod nunc primum ex tenebris eruit ustisque illustravit Salomon Van Til Theologus Dordracenus. See the Journal (c) of Utrecht, and that of (d) Leipsic.

(c) Mense Octob. 1697. pag. 488. & seq.

(d) Mense Junio, 1698. pag. 249.

(C) John Lydius published several Books.] He published at Leyden, in 1620, a Book of Pratcolus, intituled, Concilia Ecclesiæ Christianæ, with his Criticisms on it. Five Years after he published the Lives of the Popes, written by Robert Barns, and John Bale, and continued it to his own Time. He was Author of that Continuation. He had given an Edition of Nicolas de Clemangis, in 1613, with Notes, and a Glossary.

(e) Bibliotheque Françoise. pag. 358.

(A) Nicole Stephens, a Learned Woman.] La Croix du Maine (e) makes mention of Three Books she had written, but which were not printed. I. An Answer to the Stanzas on Marriage, written by (f) Ph. des P. II. The Contempt of Love. III. An Apology for Women, against those who undervalue 'em. James Grevin (g) was in Love with her, and courted her; and as he was a Poet, he writ Verses in abundance upon his Amours, and in the Praise of his Nicole, whom he called Olympia. The Volume of his Love-Verses, was for this Reason called Olympia. This we learn from la Croix du Main (h). Another ran away with the Prey, for she was married to our John Liebaut.

(f) Probably Philippe des Portes.

(g) Physician to the Duchess of Ferrara.

(h) Ubi supra, pag. 187.

(B) He published several Books.] The Bibliotheque of Physicians, augmented by Manget, makes mention but of three Books of John Liebaut. Thesaurus secretis paratu facilis, at Paris by James du Puy 1577. De præcavendis curandisque venenis Commentaria in lib. viii. Scholia in Jacobi Hollerii commentaria in lib. vii. aphorismorum Hippocratis. The most curious of his Books have been forgotten, which are those which treat of the Distempers of Women, and of their Ornaments and Beauties. He writ 'em in Latin. They were afterwards rendred into French, but the Translator found himself sometimes obliged to skip some Passages in the Original to avoid describing things offensive to Modesty. We shall see below, that Liebaut can't be said to be only the Translator of an Italian Physician. He was no more indeed with regard to a German Physician; called Gaspar Wolfius, whose four Books (i) of the Secrets of Physick and Chymistry he Translated into French. He had a good share in a Book of Agriculture, which was much esteemed,

(i) For Example, in the 11th. Chap. of the 2d. Book, p. 243. where he speaks of some Precautions in giving Conjugal Benevolence necessary for persecuting Barrenness.

(k) This Work of Wolfius is in Latin.

into ſeveral Languages, and often Re-printed. He quitted Paris, I know not why, and returned (c) into his Native Country, where he died I know not when.

LIGARIUS (Quintus) Lieutenant to Caius Conſidius, who Commanded in Africa in quality of Proconſul, acquitted himſelf ſo well in this Poſt, that the People paſſionately deſired they might have him for their Governour whenever Conſidius was recal'd. They obtained their Deſire, and continued very well ſatisfyed with the Conduct of Ligarius. They would have made him their Commander in Chief when they took Arms at the beginning of the Civil War betwixt Cæſar and Pompey, [redacted] he had a mind to return to Rome, he refus'd their Offer. He lay by for [redacted] after Publius Accius Varus had accepted that Command [a]. This is what [redacted] ſets forth in his Plea for Ligarius. He paſſes over other things in ſilence, and only confeſſes in general, that his Party had embraced the Intereſts of Pompey. 'Tis probable that Ligarius had ſhewed himſelf very averſe to Julius Cæſar's [redacted] who nevertheleſs gave him [b] his Life after the Defeat of Scipio and the other [redacted] had renew'd the War in Africa in Favour of that Cauſe which Pompey had defended. This Act of Grace did not prevent Ligarius's living concealed out of Italy. His Brother and Friends, and particularly Cicero [c] omitted nothing to obtain Cæſar's leave for his return to Rome, and they had hopes of accompliſhing it; when Tubero in the midſt of theſe Tranſactions formally declared himſelf Ligarius's Accuſer. Then it was that Cicero made that admirable Oration for the accuſed (D), which in a very ſingular manner changed the Intentions of Cæſar. Ligarius was abſolutely acquitted. He was no Slave to Notions of

(a) Taken from Cicero in oratione pro Q. Ligario.

(b) Hirtius de bello Africano p. m. 467.

(c) Cicero, Epiſt. 14. lib. 6. ad familiar.

(a) See that which I make uſe of is of Roan by David Berthelin in 1666. in 4.

(b) See the Advice to the Reader F. Anth. Languier Theologal de Riés is the Author of it.

(c) It's the 44*th of the* 3*d Book.*

(d) He has been always commended for uſing a very handſome turn to expreſs that of the whole race See the Apology of Grace, p. 101.

(e) Patin lett. 296. p. 572 of the 2*d. Tome.*

(f) This is the 2*d. Edition, the firſt is in the year* —— is Publiſhed in the Catalogue of Oxford. Trattato di totte Pinfirmita delle donne, come curarſi debbono que' mali che poſſono ſciogliere il legame del matrimonio.

(g) See for Example the 79 p. where he gives ſome Advice to a Husband who has no Children, but would fain have one.

eſteemed, and of which there are many Editions (a). This Book is called The Country-Houſe, Charles Stephens was the firſt Author of it. Liebaut his Son-in-law Corrected and Enlarged it conſiderably. It was Tranſlated (b) into Engliſh, Flemiſh, and High-Dutch. Note, that the French Tranſlations of the above-mention'd two Books, have ſeveral Editions. I make uſe of the firſt, which is that of Paris, 1582. [redacted] Octavo. And I have an Edition in Twelves of three Books of The imbelliſhment and Ornaments of the Humane Body. It is of Lyons, 1594. There are abundance of particulars in this work, whether relating to the Characters of the Beauty of each part of the Body, or to the means of rectifying diſagreeable Accidents. You there find (c) a Chapter concerning the Stink of Excrements, and firſt of Ordures. The Author maintains that this is a matter of importance; therefore, adds he, To render a Damſel amiable, and in all reſpects agreeable, and to crown her Beauty with all the Perfections that can be deſired in a handſome Body, we ſhall enquire into the means of Correcting the Stink of her Excrements, if exceſſive. 'Twere ridiculous to complain, that delicate Ears are offended at ſuch Diſcourſes: But Phyſicians would be ſtill more ridiculous, if they had regard to ſuch Complaints. They are obliged to write in this manner; 'tis their Profeſſion; P. Coton's Reſerves (d) are no Rule to them.

(C) Returned into his Native Country.] Here's a Paſſage of Patin. ' (e) As for John Liebaut, he ' was a Burgundian Phyſician, who never made his ' Fortune here. He was Son-in-law to Charles Ste- ' phens, who died in the Chatelet laden with Debts. ' After his Death, Liebaut went to Dijon to lay his ' bones in his Native Country. His Wife was called Ni- ' cole Stephens, ſhe was Niece to the great Robert Ste- ' phens, who left Paris after the Death of Francis I. ' and finding himſelf deprived of his good Maſter, ' and perſecuted by the Sorbonniſts, retired to Gene- ' va. Liebaut's Book of the Diſtempers of Women ' is only a Tranſlation of Marinellus, who had ' written it in Italian under the Title of the Coma- ' re. I know not how to reconcile this with la Croix du Main's words. Liebaut flouriſhed at Paris this Year 1584, for if he lived then at Paris, he did not quit it a little after Charles Stephen's Death, which yet Guy Patin's words ſeem to import. Note that Charles Stephens died in 1566. 'Tis not true that Liebaut's Book upon the Diſtempers of Women is only a Tranſlation of Marinellus. I have not the firſt Edition of this Italian's Book, but only that of Venice Appreſſo Giouanno Valgriſe, 1574, in 8vo. 'Tis an (f) Edition, augmented and corrected, tho' not entituled la Comare, but le Medecine partenenti alle infermita delle donne. I have compared it with John Liebaut's Book, and found it very different. 'Tis true the French Author ſays ſeveral things that were ſaid by the Italian, but after all, he can't be reputed a meer Tranſlator. Marinello had not the ſame ſcruples, as he who Tranſlated John Liebaut's Book: He explained a hundred things in the vulgar Tongue (g) which he had better have ſuppreſſed or have written in Latin. [redacted] Mercklinus did not know this Work of John Marinello, nor that degli ornamenti delle donne, publiſhed a ſecond time by the ſame Author in 1574.

(b) Cicero Epiſt. 12. ad Atticum lib. 13.

(c) Id. epiſt. 16. [redacted]

(d) [redacted] ponius de orig. juri. lib. 3. cap 12. pag. [redacted] Rupert in Pompon. ibid.

(D) That admirable Oration . . . Which chang'd the Intentions of Cæſar.] Nothing can be [redacted] than this Oration. Pomponius Atticus (b) [redacted] with (i) Cornelius Balbus and Oppius [redacted] in raptures and got a Copy of it for Julius Cæſar. We can't eaſily comprehend why the Lawyer Pomponius ſhou'd praiſe it ſo coldly; Exat Ciceronis oratio, ſays he (k), Satis pulcherrima qua inſcribitur pro Q. Ligario. Budæus thinks the word ſatis ill placed before a Superlative. It's anſwer'd (l) that the Poſitive is often put inſtead of the Superlative on ſuch occaſions. Beſides, Pomponius's meaning then will be, that Cicero's Oration for Ligarius is well enough. But this is a diſproportionate Encomium, and too dry. Cicero out did himſelf both in the Compoſition and in the Action, and perhaps the ſucceſs of his Eloquence was never more remarkable. Cæſar had not a thought of acquitting Ligarius, and yet he did it, unable to withſtand the emotions and workings in his Soul, whilſt Cicero was ſpeaking. The accuſer was ſo troubled at the Iſſue of his Cauſe, that he renounced the Bar (m) and [redacted] himſelf to the Profeſſion of the Civil [redacted] examine a Paſſage in the Work of [redacted] upon the Compariſon of Demoſthenes [redacted] Cicero. Conſult alſo (n) the Chevræana.

(m) [redacted] pon.

(n) At the [redacted] 75 P. par. 1. of the Holland [redacted] par. de Demoſthene & de Ciceron, chap. 16. pag. 63. edit. de Holl.

(o) Cicero . . . . undertook the defence of Q. Ligarius, his Friend, accus'd of having born Arms again Cæſar, tho' he had been obliged upon ſeveral Accounts to continue in his Intereſts. Cæſar, had already condemn'd him in his Heart, [redacted] however a Curioſity to hear Cicero, whom he [redacted] ' not heard of a long time, by reaſon of his abſence ' and Engagments in the Wars, which he had now ' finiſhed, ſaid to one of his Friends who would ' have diſſwaded him, (t) What ſignifies it? let's ' e'en hear him, my Reſolution is taken, and nothing that ' can be ſaid for him ſhall alter it one way or other. ' But this Orator ſpoke ſo forcibly in his Friends ' Defence, that he moved Cæſar's Heart in ſpight of ' all the oppoſition and the Reſolutions he had taken ' not to ſuffer himſelf to be intreated: And Cicero ' ſaying ſomething of what paſſed at the Battle of ' Pharſalia in Cæſar's praiſe, this Prince [redacted] an extraordinary emotion through his [redacted] ne; and ' as if he had been perfectly in [redacted] Cicero's ' Diſcourſe, he let fall the Paper [redacted] his Hands. ' In fine, he was not able to reſiſt the Charm, nor ' that fine and delicate manner (u) in which he com- ' mended him; but whatever Reſolution he had taken ' to defend himſelf againſt the Rhetorick of ſo pow- ' [redacted] Orator, he was forced to pardon Ligarius. [redacted] ching of a like Grace, which Cicero ob- [redacted] for King Dejotarus, and for his Friend Mar- [redacted] from this ſame Emperor, who was ſuch a [redacted] after his Reſolutions, and ſo hard to be perſwaded.

(t) Nihil ſoles obliviſci, nil injurias. pro Lig.

of Gratitude, for he became one of the Accomplices (E) of Brutus and Caſſius. I ſhall have two Faults [a] to charge upon Father Rapin.

LIMEUIL (Iſabella de la Tour de Turenne Demoiſelle de) Maid of Honour to Katherine de Medicis, verified by her Conduct a good ſaying in the Menagiana; [b] that the Function of Maid of Honour to a Queen is a very difficult part. She ſunk under the Weight of it, in the Face of the whole Court; for ſhe Lay-in at the Queen's-Palace without being a Wife. The Prince of Condé was the Father of this Child. A Chronological Diſpute has happen'd (A) hereupon. And beſides, Writers are divided

[a] See the Remark A. towards the End.

[b] Varillas, Hiſtoire de Charles IX. liv. 5. pag. 000. edit. de Paris, in 12. 1685.

Father R[redacted] in this place by no means guilty of the Fau[redacted] incident to the Sieur Varillas, an Hiſtorian who never related an Adventure, as he found it in his Authors, but flouri[redacted]d and furbelowed it after his own way[redacted]ain Plutarch expreſſed himſelf no[redacted] this Jeſuit, as we may judge fr[redacted]owing Words: (a) 'It is reported, tha[redacted] Quintus Ligarius was 'proſecuted for having been one in Arms againſt 'Caſar, and Cicero. had undertaken his Defence, 'Cæſar ſaid to his Friends, What hinders, but that after ſo long a time we ſhould hear Cicero ſpeak? It 'being long ſince concluded, that Ligarius is an ill 'Man, and our Enemy. But when Cicero began to 'ſpeak, he wonderfully moved him, and proceeded 'in his Speech with [redacted] variety of Pathos, and 'that admirable Grac[redacted] the Colour of Caſar's 'Countenance oft[redacted]; and it was very evi-'dent, that all th[redacted]ns of his Soul were in com-'motion. At le[redacted] the Orator touching upon 'the Pharſalian Battel, he was ſo tranſported, 'that his Body trembled, and ſome of the Papers 'he held drop[redacted] out of his Hands; and thus being 'over-pow[redacted] he acquitted Ligarius. Let's note two [redacted] of Father Rapin. He ſuppoſes that Caſar [redacted] not heard Cicero of a long time; he is miſtaken, for a few Months before, Cicero had ſpoken the Oration pro Marcello before him. Here's the proof of it: (b) Fac igitur, quod de homine nobiliſſimo & clariſſimo, M. Marcello feciſti NUPER in curia, nunc idem in foro de optimis, & huic omni frequentia probatiſſimis fratribus. Ut conceſſiſti illum Senatui, ſic hunc populo. It's ſome excuſe to this Jeſuit that he followed Plutarch's Narration, but after all, it's no intire Juſtification, ſince he has followed him in a falſe Fact. I add, that it is not certain that this Greek Author imputes to Caſar, what the Latin and other Tranſlators pretend he does: The Latin Verſion printed with Plutarch's Original runs thus: Quid obſtat quin Ciceronem tanto intervallo audiamus dicentem? This Latin anſwering to this Greek: [redacted] The Queſtion is, whether [redacted] in this place ſignifies after a long time, or whether it ought not to be better rendered a little time, as the learned Fabricius has done. (c) Quid eſt cauſæ, h[redacted]s it, cur Ciceronem orantem aliquamdiu no[redacted]us? It may be objected perhaps that this Senſe is ſomewhat abſurd, ſince Caſar did not mean to hear a part of Cicero's Oration, and go out of the Aſſembly before he had made an end. I anſwer that [redacted] might be a way of ſpeaking amongſt the Greeks, much like our Engliſh Expreſſion a little. Now when a Body ſays, Let's go a little to ſee ſuch a thing; Let's go hear this Preacher a little; What hinders, but we may go and hear ſuch a ones Funeral Sermon a little? he does not mean to ſee or hear by halves, nor has he any deſign to go out of the Church before the end of the Sermon. This methinks is the moſt natural Idea we can fix to Caſar's words. The other Error of Father Rapin is his ſuppoſing that Cicero obtained the ſame Grace for King Dejotarus and Ligarius as for Ligarius. Nothing's falſer; for in the firſt place he did not procure Dejotarus's Diſcharge (d), and in the ſecond place, it was not he, but the Senate that got Marcellus's pardon. The Oration for Marcellus was only the thanks of the [redacted] a Favour, which Caſar had granted at the [redacted] the whole Senate. See what Cicero declar[redacted]ſelf in a (e) Letter to Sulpitius.

(a) Plutarch. in the Life of Cicero, pag. 350.

[redacted] Plutarch's meaning. See below.

[redacted] pag. 321. edit. Grav. 1698.

(c) [redacted] D. and D△, of the Article Dejotarus.

(d) [redacted] Book ad familiares.

(e) Tu[redacted] Book ad familiares.

(f) Fr. Fabricius in peroratione orationis pro Q. Ligario pag. 233. edit. Grav.

(g) Plutarch in Bruto, pag. 594. Plutarch's giving him the Name of Caius, is only a Slip of Memory.

(E) He was one of the Accomplices (f) of Brutus and Caſſius.] Plutarch won't permit us to doubt of this. (g) 'Among thoſe of Pompey's Faction there 'was one Caius Ligarius, whom Caſar had par-'don'd, tho' accus'd for having been in [redacted] 'gainſt him. This Man, not being ſo than[redacted] 'having been forgiven, as ſtomaching [redacted] 'which made him need a Pardon, hated Caſar, but 'was one of Brutus his moſt intimate Friends. Him 'Brutus viſited, and finding him ſick, O Ligarius, 'ſays he, what a time have you found out to be ſick 'in? At which Words Ligarius raiſing himſelf, and 'leaning on his Elbow, took Brutus by the Hand, 'and ſaid, But, O Brutus, if you are on any Deſign 'worthy of your ſelf, I am well. Appian (h) reckons Quintus Ligarius amongſt thoſe whom Brutus and Caſſius engaged in their Conſpiracy, and relates (i) the manner how the two Brothers, both called Ligarius, periſhed under the Proſcription of the Triumviri.

(h) Appian. de bell. civil. lib. 4. p. 342. 343.

(i) Id ibid.

(A) A Chronological Diſpute has happened hereupon.] What doubtleſs the two Lovers never expected; they little imagined that their Careſſes ſhould afford matter of diſpute between Authors a hundred years after: the Fact was this. We'll begin with theſe words of the general Criticiſm of the Hiſtory of Caivinism. '(k) The Prince of Conde falling in 'in Love with one of the Queen's Maids, called 'Mademoiſelle de Limeuil, had ſo many moving 'things to her, that they ſoon came to what we 'call the concluſion of the Romance. She had a Son 'by him, of whom ſhe Lay-in, in the Reign of 'Charles IX. the 25th of May, 1561, in the very 'Palace of the Louvre; but the Queen, who at 'that time had occaſion for the Prince to Ballance 'the overgrown Power of the Houſe of Guiſe, had 'paſſion on humane Frailty. Thus one of our [redacted] ſpeaks of this Adventure in a kind of Ro-'mance, intituled, The Prince of Conde, where we 'find ſeveral other very curious Strokes of Hiſtory, 'and very faithfully related. Another of the 'Queen's Maids had juſt ſuch another Diſaſter about 'two or three years after; Katherine de Medicis per-'ceiving that the Prince lov'd this young Lady, re-'ſolv'd to lay hold of this occaſion for penetrating 'into his Deſigns; and therefore adviſed her, who 'probably had no need of Incitements, nor to over-'act the part of a Prude. M. de Mezerai will tell 'you this Story much better than I. (l) The Queen 'endeavoured to captivate the Prince of Conde by the 'Charms of Pleaſure, and by the Lure of one of her 'Maids of Honour, who ſparing nothing to ſerve her 'Miſtreſs, found her ſelf indiſpoſed for nine Months, 'and was for ſometime after the whole Diſcourſe of the 'Court, where ſuch ſort of Accidents give more Diverſion than Scandal. The Prince had another Intrigue of 'Note with the Widow of the Mareſchal de S. André, and had Married her, if the Admiral had 'not warded off the Blow by propoſing another 'Match. - - - - (l) He made him ſuch remonſtrances (2) as obliged him to break off by the Conjugal Bond all his pernicious Engagements with the 'Mareſchalle de S. André, who endeavouring to enamour the Prince, fell ſo in Love with him, as to 'purchaſe her Satisfaction at the price of her Eſtate 'of Valery, which ſhe made him a Preſent of'.

(k) Critique generale, tome 3. pag. 45. de la 3. edition.

(l) Mezer. Abreg. Chron. ad ann. 1563. Mr. de Thou, l. 35.

(l) Critique generale, ibid. pag. 47.

(2) Mezerai ubi ſupra.

Some have found two remarkable Falſities in this Account; for it is not true, that Mademoiſelle de Limeuil Lay-in in the Year 1561, and that another of the Queen's Maids made the ſame Slip with the Prince of Condé ſome Years after. Yet ſome Opiniators maintain, that the Date in the Romance, cited by Mr. Maimbourg's Critick, is juſt; and conſequently, that the Prince of Conde debauched two of Catherine de Medicis's Maids of Honour, one after another, in a ſhort time. This Conſequence is moſt certain, if the Author of the Romance be not miſtaken; for it can't be denied, that one of this Queen's Maids of Honour Lay-in in 1564, ſoon after her Familiarity with the Prince; but once more, the Author of the Romance tells an Untruth. It's neither a Fault of the Preſs, nor a Poetical Fiction; but an Hiſtorical Falſity. The whole Series of the Book manifeſtly ſhews, that the Author ſpeaks of an Intrigue which preceded the Impriſonment of the Prince, and the Sentence of Death paſs'd upon him in November 1560. The Author therefore alone is anſwerable for the Number 1560, and not the Printer. It can't be ſaid, that he antedated it deſignedly ded about the (B) Consequences of this Adventure. Some pretend that (C) the young Lady was expell'd the Court, and others, that she lost not (D) ingenuously, from a Liberty allowed in an Epick Poem, or Romance; for as his Book is all along furnished with as exact Dates, as those of Mezerai, whether concerning the Death of Francis II. and of the King of Navarre, or concerning the Prince's Pardon, &c. We must suppose, that he designed to give the true Date of the young Lady's Delivery. The Circumstances of the Day and Month, and Place, which he has carefully collected, confirm this Opinion, since they signify nothing to the Œconomy of the Piece; he only touches upon 'em by the by, to quicken the Attention of his Reader, by a Particularity seldom found in such sort of Books. To what end should he antedate this big Belly two Years! The Romance gains nothing by it: The Intrigue might have been carried on, as well by laying the Scene of it Two Years after. The Tenor of the Book manifestly shews this. Our Author therefore must have been deceived by his Memoirs, in which 1561 had been put instead of 1564. I know those, who after some Reflections on this matter, have imagined, that the Demoiselle de Limeuil had two Encounters with the Prince, and that the Author of the Romance speaks of the first Big-Belly, and Mr. Mezerai of the Second. I cannot think 'em in the right: For though the Court of France was at that time very dissolute, it can't be conceived, that a Maid of Honour should Lie-in at the Louvre in 1561, and make the same false Step three Years after in the same Quality of Maid of Honour. Some Measures were still observed; and some Regard had to the Publick. Brantome, who speaks of this Court, from his own certain knowledge expressly affirms it (a). The most natural signification of his words is, that the Maids of Catherine de Medicis had never a better time on't than while they lived with her, because they had full liberty to taste of all the Joys of Marriage, or abstain, provided they had the Art and Industry to prevent a big Belly. There was therefore some Disgrace to be feared, when they wanted this point of Skill, for that Queen acted almost like the Lacedæmonians, who did not punish the Theft, but the want of cunning to conceal it. We shall presently see that Limeuil was disgraced. They who require Proofs of it, form a horrible Idea of Catherine de Medicis.

(a) See the Article Garnache.

(B) About the Consequences of this Adventure.] The best Historians agree that the Queen-Mother lent an hand to the Amours of the Prince, and de la Limeuil. See in the preceding Note, a Passage of Mezerai: It's taken from his Chronological Abridgment: Here is another from his Great History. (b) The Queen having gain'd nothing by this (c) Method - - - - bethought her of another more subtle, which was to gain the Prince by the Lure of Love and Pleasures, by which the haughtiest Souls are captivated without a struggle. She treated him with all the Demonstrations of a cordial Friendship, and entire Confidence; she gave him the Government of Picardy, the first subject of his discontent, and had all the respects paid him that are due to the first Prince of the Blood. Besides this, she had people suborn'd to amuse him with all kind of Diversions; and the Charms of the fair Limeuil, one of her Maids, were so serviceable to her design, that for some time he had laid aside all thoughts of any thing but her, which his Wife Eleanor de Roye, a Woman of severe Chastity, discovering, dy'd of Discontent, an Accident that gave the Queen a deal of Joy, because this Lady being of an imperious Temper, and very zealous for the Huguenot Religion, was the sharpest spur to quicken the Courage of the Prince. But on the other hand, the Royal Palace, and her self suffered great Scandal from these Love-Intrigues; for Limeuil giving way to the Prince's Passion, more than became a Maid of her Quality, was so imprudent, and so ill conceived her Measures, as to Lye-in in her Wardrobe, in the Face of all the World; for which Reason she discharged her with Disgrace, tho' she could not hinder her speaking somewhat too plainly of the Occasion of her Misfortune. Mr. Varillas has not forgot this Intrigue. Let's see what he says of it.

(b) Mezerai, Hist. de France, tom. 2. pag. 133. ad ann. 1564.

(c) That is, by endeavouring to sow Dissentions between the Prince of Condé and the Admiral de Chatillon.

'(d) Love entred into the cause, and seconded the 'Artifices of the Queen. Mademoiselle de la Limeuil was the handsomest of her Maids of Honour, and the Prince grew so fond of her, that the Princess his Wife perceiving it, died of Jealousy. The Queen attentive to the least occasions of strengthning her Power, took'd upon this Conjuncture as the favourablest that could ever present. She fancied that as the Chatillons had engaged the Prince in Heresy, by Marrying him to their Neece, so she might reduce him to the Communion of the Church, by giving him a young Lady to Wife, who had the Honour to be her Relation, whose Charms might fix his Inconstancy, and get out of him all the Secret Designs of Calvinism. In this thought she ordered de la Limeuil to omit nothing that might contribute to the holding the Prince in Chains. But 'twas exposing a moderate Virtue to too great a risk, to make it grapple with a Lover who took the least Advantages in Love, as well as in War, to push things to an extremity. The Lady feigning a kindness for the Prince, began to be in Love with him in good earnest, and for her misfortune, was not the only Person at Court whose Heart was insensibly engag'd. He afterwards relates the Amours of the Mareschal le de St. André, with this Prince, and her extraordinary Liberalities to him: and then adds: '(e) Madamoiselle de Limeuil made Reflexions very wide of the truth, on so uncommon an Advantage; she supposed the Prince less Amorous, or more Interested than he really was, and imagined that since he had accepted the Estate of St. Valeri, he design'd in good earnest, to Marry the Mareschalle; her Jealousy work'd to such a pitch, that not having Fortune enough to equal the Liberality of her Rival, she resolved to out-do her in granting the Prince what was dearest to her in the World, the Big-Belly which soon followed, made her Shame publick, and she was ignominiously discarded the Court.

(d) Varillas, Hist. de Charles IX. liv. 5. pag. 346. édit. de Holl. ad ann. 1563.

(e) Id. ib. pag. 348, 349.

(C) Some pretend, that the young Lady was expelled the Court.] Mezerai and Varillas affirm it, and there's hardly any room to doubt the Truth of this. A certain Satyrical Author is of the same Opinion, in a Writing that's very affrontive to the Queen-Mother: He owns, that the young Lady was thrust into a Convent. (f) Mr. le Laboureur cites a Fragment of this Satyr, which will stand properly enough in this Place. I shall join to it Mr. le Laboureur's Preamble, because it assigns another Cause of this Prince's Intrigues, and fixes the time when the Lady was brought to Bed. " (g) 'Amongst the other News, there was a Talk of the 'fair de L———'s lying in, one of the Maids of 'Honour; upon which occasion it mayn't be amiss 'to observe, that after the Peace of Orleans, the 'Prince of Condé continuing at Court, thought he 'could not better remove all Suspicions, than by 'plunging himself into the Pleasures of the Times, 'and getting a Mistress. The Queen, who thought 'it the surest Chain, to bind him, was not 'displeased that this Maid, of one of the first Fa'milies of the Kingdom, hearkened to his Vows 'and Offers of Service, not thinking perhaps that 'this Friendship would ever pass the Bounds of 'Gallantry. But whether the Maid could not resist 'his Quality, and Reasons of State conspired toge'ther; or rather the esteem of the Prince; or that 'she hoped one Day to marry him, as 'tis 'said he had promised her, in case Eleonora de de Roy his Wife, whose Life was despaired of, 'should die, as it happened the same Year, she 'could not long hold out against Ambition and 'Love, and all was revealed by the Birth of this 'Son, during the Progress of Lyons. Thus speaks this Libel (h).

(f) The Marginal Notes of Varillas's History of Charles IX. the Paris Edition in 12. 1684. pag. 604. import, that the Queen had her conducted by one of her Valets, call'd Chatillon to the Convent of the Cordeliers, in the Town of Auxonne. I believe Mr. D'Hosier, made those Notes.

(g) Le Laboureur, Addit. aux Memoires de Castelnau, tom. 2. pag. 371.

(h) Le Laboureur ib. p. 369.

'Puella illa nobilis
'Quæ erat tam amabilis,
'Commisit adulterium
'Et nuper fecit filium.
'Sed dicunt matrem Reginam
'Illi fuisse. . . .
'Et quod hoc patiebatur
'Ut Principem lucraretur.
'At multi dicunt quod pater
'Non est Princeps, sed ejus alter,
'Qui Regi est à Secretis
'Ostendens ei notas satis.
'Contra hanc tamen Regina
'Se offendit tantum plena
'Cholera, ac si insaniret

(D) the Queen's good Graces. In a word, there are great (E) variations on this Head. Be that how it will, she was Daughter to [a] Giles de la Tour, Lord of Limeuil; and afterwards Married (EΔ) Scipio Sardini, Baron of Chaumont upon the Loire, &c. a noble Lucchese[b]. She one Day (F) snub'd the Constable of Montmorency at a strange rate, the most terrible Man in the World. I shall relate a Passage of (G) Brantome, which is curious enough. Her

[a] La Laboureur, Additions aux Memoires de Castelnau, tom. 1 pag. 327. compared with tom. 2. pag. 371.

[b] Id. ib. See also Varillas ubi supra.

'Hoc quod Puella fecisset,
'Et dedit illi custodes
'Superbos nimis & rudes,
'Missum in Monasterium
'Quærere refrigerium.
'Sed certè pro tam levi re
'Sic non debebat tractare,
'At excusare modicum,
'Tempus, personam & locum.
'Aliis non sit talister
'Qua faciunt similiter.
'Pridie venit nuncium
'Puellum esse mortuum,
'Et fuit magna jactura
'De tam pulchra creatura,
'Qua nunc est cum cœlicibus
'Rogans Deum pro patribus,
'Et ut Patri sit melius.

'The Queen was the more offended at this Dis-'grace happening in her Family, as it was too pub-'lick to be concealed; but time wore it off, and 'the Lady was married sometime after. The Court came to Lyons, towards the middle of June 1564. So that since the Lady lay-in during the time of this Progress, it may reasonably be supposed, that her Child was born the 25th. of May the same Year. Therefore the Author of the Romance might have guess'd right at the Day, tho' not at the Year.

(D) That she lost not the Queen's good Grace.] This is the Opinion of the fore-mention'd Author of the Romance. The Queen (says he) (a) who at that time stood in need of the Prince of Condé to ballance the over-grown Power of the House of Guise, had Compassion on human Frailty. He supposes, that Madamoiselle continued her Place as Maid of Honour to the Queen, and that she tried to diffuade the Prince from taking Arms. Madamoiselle de Limeuil, says he, (b) Companion of Mademoiselle du Rouet, (c) and Maid of Honour, as well as she with whom the Prince of Condé had formerly lived, even to a Familiarity, which for some time incommoded her, did all that was possible to change his Passion for War into a Passion of another Kind, in which the Comfort and Knowledge had some thing much more agreeable. She knew his Inclination, and valiant as he was, she doubted not but he was as sensible to Love as Glory. She writ to him, and desired him to consider, that he was going to make War with a Person with whom he had some time been upon better Terms, since her Religion plac'd her in the number of his Enemies. This Author's mistaken; for it's certain, the Queen put her in a Convent, and ordered her to be close confined. (d) This ought not to be suppress'd in the Discours merveilleux de la vie de Catherine de Medicis. Let us see what the Author of this Satyr observes concerning la Limeuil. He says (e) that the Prince of Condé began to be in Love with her during his Confinement, and that his young Lady was one of the Maids the Queen-Mother had set to debauch him, every thing being lawful to Ambition, provided it can compass its Designs. Having mentioned the Peace concluded the 18th. of March 1563, he says (f) that the Queen, to destroy the Prince of Condé's Reputation with his Party, constantly treated him at the Expence of the Honour of Limeuil, who grew big with Child. And the Queen, to put the best face upon it that she could, pretending to storm at Limeuil, this young Lady had the Boldness to tell her, that she only followed the Example of her Mistress, and observed her Commands. This is all he says, Fair Dealing required that he should have owned, that Limeuil was banished and cloyster'd.

(a) Pag. 70. édit. de Hollande, 1681.

(b) Pag. 132.

(c) Mistress to the King of Navarre.

(d) See the Latin Rhymes of the preceding Remark.

(e) Discours merveilleux de la vie de Cather. de Medicis p. m. 42.

(f) Ibid. pag. 46.

(E) There is much Variation in it.] In the Discours Merveilleux, it's said, that the Prince loved la Limeuil, from the Time of his Imprisonment, after the Battle of Dreux, but Mr. Mezerai and Mr. Varillas affirm, that his Love commenc'd not till after the first Peace. Varillas says, that the Queen proposed to marry her to the Prince, and that the young Lady flattering her self with the Hopes of this Honour, stuck at no means for attaining it; but the other Historian attributes the Hopes of Wiving to the Marechalle de St. Andre alone. Varillas says, that the Prince was loved by both these Ladies at the same time, and that they rivalled each other, the one bestowing on him her Estate, the other her Maidenhead. Mezerai says nothing of this Contest; he (g) supposes, that the Prince was a Widower, when the Queen projected a Match between him and the Marechalle; if so, what becomes of the Rivalship mentioned by Varillas; that Rivalship which made these two Ladies strive (which should be the most Prodigal of their Favours to the Prince? This is only a Chimera, according to Mezerai's System; for Eleonora de Roye (g) was still alive, when Limeuil lay-in, and thus before the Prince was a Widower, this Lady had left the Court in Disgrace, and retired to a Monastery. She did not therefore dispute the Point with Madam the Marechalle, nor oppose the Present of her Maidenhead to the Grant of the Estate of Valeri in Gatenois.

(EΔ) And afterwards married Scipio Sardini.] I trust much more to the Authors I have cited, than to the Publisher of the Gallantries of the Kings of France. Mademoiselle de Limeuil, says he (h), having lain-in, indeavoured to Comfort her self for the loss of the great Hopes she had conceived, by marrying Jeoffrey de Caulac, Lord of Fremon, who had loved her a long time, and whom she had neglected, ever since her Intrigue with the Prince of Condé. Scipio Sardini had been one of the Italian Farmers of the Revenues, who made their Fortunes in France, under Catherine de Medicis. I have read (i) a Contract past between the Clergy of France and him, the 4th of March 1588, for the Offices of alternate Recievers, and two Comptrollers of the Hereditary Tenths in each Dioceses of this Kingdom, and of other Subsidies and Duties. He is there called the Noble Scipio Sardini, a Lucchese Gentleman living in the City of Paris, in the Parish of St. Severinus. 'Tis doubtless the same Scipio Sardini who took Baudius (k) into his House, and allow'd him a Pension, the same also whom Bassompierre sometimes mention in his Memoirs, of whom I find this particular at the 21st Page of the Thuana. 'The Life of Castruccio Castracani de gli 'Interminelli, written by Aldo Manucci, is very 'fine, and quite different from that written by Machiave,——This Life is very well worth the look-'ing after: I never saw but one Copy of it, and that 'was in the Hands of the Lord Scipio Sardini: he had 'it from one Interminelli the same who had prevail'd on 'Manucci to write this Life. I believe it is printed at Lucca in 4to. in Italian. It's a fine piece".

(g) Mezerai, Hist. de France, tome 2. pag. 133.

(h) She died the 23*d. of* July 1564. La Limeuil lay-in during the Progress of Lyons. The Court arrived at Lyons about the middle of June, 1564.

(i) Galanter. des Rois de France, tom. 1. 1. pag. m. 255.

(k) It's inserted in the 2*d. Book of the Collections of Edicts, Orders, Agreements, and other Matters relating to the Clergy of* France. fol. 120. and the following Edit.

(F) She rebuffed the Constable of Montmorency.] I'll tell the Story just as I find it in Brantome. (l) One 'Day at the Siege of Roan (m), as the Queen went 'to the Fort of S. Katherine de Rouen, attended 'with her Maids of Honour, the Constable having 'said a word to her, and taken his leave, overtook 'Mademoiselle de Limeuil, one of the handsomest 'spriteliest Maids of the Court, and who had Wit 'at Will, and he came upon Horseback to salute her, 'intending to have some Discourse with her, and 'always called her his Mistress, and would ride 'close by her side; for the good Man was no Enemy 'to Beauty or Love, either in Words or Deeds; for 'he had play'd some pranks in his Youth, which I 'will not mention. Mademoiselle de Limeuil, who 'was not in her best Humour that Day, took little 'notice of him; for she could be proud enough when 'she pleas'd, and began to huffe him strangely, and bid 'him be gone about his Business, who said to her, Truly 'my Mistress, I am going; you snub me severely. 'Tis 'but fit, answered she, that you should meet with 'some body to snub you, since you make it your busi-'ness to snub all Mankind. Adieu then, said he, 'my Mistress, I'll leave you, for you have given 'me my own.

(l) Brantome, in the Eloge of this Constable, 2d. Tom. of his Memoires, p. m. 71, 72.

(m) Roan was besieged in Autumne, 1562.

(G) A passage of Brantome concerning her.] I don't fear that the judicious will declare against my Conjecture, when they have well examined the Circumstances of the following Story. It's difficult not to find in it Mademoiselle de La Limeuil and the Prince of Conde.

Her eldeſt Siſter, Maid of Honour to Katherine de Medicis, died at Court. Brantome (H) ſpeaks of her.

LINAGER (Thomas) an Engliſh Phyſician, and one of the Learnedeſt (A) Perſons of the XVIth Century, Studied at Florence under Demetrius Chalcondylus and Politian, and ſo remarkably diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his Modeſty and genteel Behaviour, that Lorenzo de Medicis made him the Companion of his Childrens Studies. He lived afterwards at Rome, and was in great eſteem with Hermolaus Barbarus. Being returned to England, he was appointed Præceptor to Prince Arthur, eldeſt Son to Henry VII. and Dedicated to him the Latin Verſion (B) of Proclus's Sphere. He was pitched upon with two other * Engliſhmen for the Tranſlating of Ariſtotle; but this Deſi[gn] abandoned by his Companions. He Tranſlated ſome Tracts of Galen into Lat[in] and publiſhed a learned (C) Work de emendata Latini ſermonis ſtructura. He was Phyſician to the King of England, and the Princeſs Mary, and bequeathed a Houſe (D) to the College of

* Latimer & Crocinius.

(a) Brantome, Memoires des Dames galantes, tome 2. pag. 392.

(a) I have known another Prince, but not ſo great (b), who during his firſt Marriage, and his Widowhood (c), fell in Love with a very handſome young Lady, to whom he made, during his Amours and Careſſes, noble Preſents of Carkanets, Rings, Jewels, and Abundance of other fine Things, and amongſt them, a very fine and rich Looking-Glaſs, in which was his Picture. Now the Prince hapned to marry an incomparably handſome and virtuous Princeſs, who made him Diſreliſh his firſt Love, though they were equally beautiful. This Princeſs intreated and teazed Monſieur her Husband to that degree, that he ſent to demand of his firſt Miſtreſs, all the fine Preſents he had made her. This was a heart-breaking for the Lady; however, ſhe had a Heart ſo great and noble, though ſhe was not a Princeſs but of one of the beſt Houſes in France, that ſhe ſent him back all his Preſents, and amongſt t[he] the reſt, a Looking-Glaſs with his P[ic]ture; but firſt, to grace it the more, ſhe took a [pen] Ink, and fixed a Pair of Horns to the Tem[ples] of his Forehead, and delivering all to the Gentleman, ſaid to him: Here Friend, carry this to your Maſter, which I ſend him juſt as I received it, having for my part, naither added nor diminiſhed, though ſomething has grown to it ſince of its own accord; and tell that fine Princeſs his Wife, who has ſo much importuned him to demand what he had given me, that if a certain Lord in the World (naming him, as I could do, if I pleaſed) had ſerved her Mother ſo, and re-demanded and reſumed, what he had given for lying with her, and giving him Kiſſes and Dips of Love, ſhe would be as poor in Trinkets and Jewels, as any Lady at Court; and her Head, which is ſo loaded with 'em at the coſt of ſuch a Lord, and heretofore of her Mother, would be only decked, with Flowers out of the Garden, inſtead of theſe Stones; but let her make her beſt uſe of 'em, I ſcorn to keep 'em. They who knew this Lady, would eaſily judge ſhe gave this Anſwer; and ſhe told it me her ſelf, for ſhe was very free of Diſcourſe; however, ſhe had like to have come by the worſt, as well from the Husband as the Wife, who were equally affronted; but they ought to blame themſelves; for why would they thus provoke and enrage this poor Lady, who 'twas ſaid had earned theſe Preſents dearly enough with the Sweat of her Brow. This young Lady being one of the fineſt and moſt agreeable Perſons of her Time, notwithſtanding the uſe this Prince had made of her Body, light on a very rich Match, though not of an equal Family; ſo that happening to upbraid one another with the Honour which each had done the other, ſhe who was ſo great in marrying him; he anſwered her, I have done more for you, than you for me; for I have diſhonoured my ſelf to retrieve your Honour, meaning, that as ſhe had loſt it when a Maid, he had repaired it, by making her his Wife.

(b) He had been juſt ſpeaking of the Adventure of a certain very great Foreigner.

(H) Brantome ſpeaks of her.] In theſe Words, (c) The Elder Limueil, at her firſt coming to Court, happened to make a Lampoon: (for ſhe ſpoke and wrote well) upon all the Court, which however was rather diverting than ſcandalous; but aſſure your ſelf ſhe (d) had her ſoundly jerk'd with two of her Companions, who were privy to it; and but that ſhe had the Honour to be related to her by the Houſe of Tourain, allied to that of Bouillon, ſhe had been ignominiouſly chaſtiſed, by the expreſs Command of the King (e) who deteſted ſuch Writings. In his Elogy of Catherine de Medicis he obſerves that this young Lady died at Court. He tells us in another place a remarkable thing [of] her. During her ſickneſs, ſays he, (f) of which ſhe died, ſhe never left off Diſcourſing; for ſhe was a great talker, and of a Satirical Wit, which ſhe exerciſed very ſeaſonably and well, and was very handſome withal; when ſhe came to her dying Hour, ſhe called her Valet (for each of the Maids of Honour had one) whoſe name was Julian, and who play'd very well on the Violin. Julian, ſaid ſhe, take the Violin and play till you ſee me dead (for I am a going) The [Dance] of the Swiſſe, the beſt you can. And when [you come] to the Word All's Loſt, play it four or [five times] over in the dolefulleſt Notes you can; which he did, and ſhe aſſiſted him with her Voice, and when they came to All's Loſt, ſhe repeated it twice, then turning her ſelf to the other ſide of the Bed, ſhe ſaid to her Companions, All's Loſt this Inſtant in good earneſt, and ſo expired. 'Twas a merry pleaſant Death: I had [the] Story from two of her Companions who [were] by at it, and who ſaw the Scene. They [who] wou'd give a Catalogue of Perſons who have d[ied] toying, muſt not forget this young Lady.

(c) Brantome, Dames galantes, tome 2. pag. 366.

(d) That's to ſay, Catherine de Medicis.

(e) That's to ſay, of Henry II.

(f) Ibid. pag. 341.

(A) One of the learneſt Perſons of the XVIth. Century.] Conſult Mr. Baillet and Pope Blount who have collected the Praiſes that had been given him, the former in the 4th Tome (g) of the Judgments of the Learned; the latter at the 376, and 377 Pages of his Cenſura celebriorum authorum.

(g) Pag. [illegible] 3[illegible]

(B) Dedicated to Prince Arthur the Latin Verſion of Proclus's Sphere.] (h) Paulus Jovius and (i) George Lilius affirm it; and yet Eraſmus tells us, this Book was Dedicated to Henry VII. who made no Account of it, becauſe ſome invidious Perſon had told him that it was not the firſt Tranſlation of Proclus (k) Thoma Linacro peſſimè ceſſit quid Proculum à ſe denuò verſum Regi hujus parti dicârat. Andreas quidam Tolaſates (l) præceptor Arthuri principis & in regnum paternum ſuc[ceſſor] niſi mors antevertiſſet, cæcus adulator, ne[c] [au]ctor tantum, ſed & delator peſſimus, Regem [ce]pit hoc libelli jam olim fuiſſe verſum à neſcio [quo] & erat, ſed miſere. Hanc ob cauſam Rex & minus aſpernatus eſt, & in Linacrum velut in impoſtorem inexpiabile concepit odium. Eraſmus tells us on this occaſion a mad Freak of Henry VII.

(h) Jovius in Elog. doct. viro. p. m. 1467.

(i) Georg. Lilius in Elog. quorund. Anglorum, pag. 93.

(k) Eraſm. Epiſt. 14. lib. 26. pag. 1424.

(C) Publiſhed a learned Work de emendata [Latini] ſermonis ſtructura.] It was often printed. I [have] only the Venice Edition apud Aldum 1557. [in] The Preface is wanting. It had been dedicated to the Princeſs Mary, as we are aſſured in the following words: (m) Sed & de emendata Latini ſermonis ſtructura, ex præſtantiſſimorum authorum obſervationes compoſitum volumen paulo antea, quam vita excederet, publicavit, adſcripta prefatiuncula Mariæ Henrici Octavi ex Catharina Hiſpana conjugis filiæ, laudatiſſima indolis & admirabili virtutum omnium concentu ad omnem gratiam promerendam nate Principi, cui renovato prudentiſſimi patris exemplo Henricus Rex Linacrum à tuenda ſanitate præfectum adhibuit. Mr. Baillet (n) citing the Page from whence I take this Latin, ſays that the Author relates that Eraſmus and Budeus prailed Linacer for having written this Treatiſe. I don't find this in my Edition.

(l) Georgius Lilius ubi ſupra, pag. 93.

(m) Baillet Jugem. des Sav. tome 4. pag. 85.

(n) Georg. Lilius ubi ſupra, pag. 94.

(D) He bequeathed a Houſe to the College of Phyſicians.] Theſe words are a Tranſlation of thoſe of Gregorius Lilius, Londini obiit, bonaſq. domo in ea [Me]dicorum Collegio ex teſtamento reliſt (o). Paulus Jovius expreſſes himſelf thus: Honeſtum domicilium Londini Medicorum Collegio dedicavit. Neither of them have been exact; for it ſhou'd have been that Linacer built the College of Phyſicians at London, and was firſt Preſident of it. This is what is affirmed in his Epitaph (p) 'Tis ſaid alſo that he Founds

(o) Jovius ubi ſupra, pag. 146.

(p) Apud Pope Blount ubi infra.

of Physicians. He died at the Age of 64 (E) and was buried at London in S. Paul's Church. He had a Benefice given him in 1515, and went into [a] Priests Orders. Erasmus commends him highly, but makes him guilty of the same Fault (F) as Paulus Emilius; that is, of being too hard to be satisfied with his own Works, and reviewing and touching 'em over too often.

[a] Taken from Paulus Jovius in Elog. viror. doctor. cap. 63. See also Lilius ad calcem Jovii Britannia descript. pag. 92. & seq.

LIN-

Founded three publick Lectures in Physick, two at Oxford, and one at Cambridge.

(E) He [illegible] the Age of 64.] I should have said in Febr[illegible]25, had I followed the Account of an [illegible] Author, which has been printed with Paulus Jovius; for these are his Words, (a) Londini obiit .... sepultus est in divi Pauli templo maximo, Septentrionalis portæ ingressum, eo fere tempore, quo Franciscus Gallorum Rex ad Ticinum in Cisalpinis pugnans, à Cæsarea[illegible]us est. But 'tis better to say with M[illegible] Thomas Linacer died the 20th of October, 1524. Mr Pope Blunt (b) says so too, and yet he mentions this Physician's Epitaph, in which the Day of his Death is fixed to the 7th of October 1524.

(a) Georgius Lilius in elogiis quorundam Anglorum, p. 94.

(b) Pope Blount censor. Author. pag. 377.

(F) Erasmus highly commends him, but makes him guilty of the same Fault as Paulus Emilius.] I pass over the Encomiums he has given him. They are to be found in his Ciceron[illegible]nus, and in several places in his Letters. I shall confine my self to his blaming him for h[illegible]too nice a Judgment (c) Nec multum a[illegible]ab hoc vitio, says he, where he describes the Humour of the Historian Paulus Emilius. He wrote a Letter to him in 1521. in which he intreats him not to make the publick Languish, and deprive it so long of the Works which were impatiently expected from his [illegible]. He[illegible]him, that 'tis to be feared his Con[illegible]will rather thought a cruelty, than a [illegible] because [illegible] (f) As tu si mihi permittis, ut [illegible] secum agam, sine sine premis tuas omnium eruditissimè[illegible]lucubrationes, ut periculum sit, ne pro cauta modestoque crudelis habearis, qui studia hujus seculi tam lenta tot quasi expectatione tuorum voluminum. Forsasse terret te nostrum exemplum, sed etiam atque etiam vide, dum studiosius vitas nostram culpam, in diversum defectus. The Fault our Linacer is blam'd for is not very common with Authors, and yet in some respects it may be thought too frequent; for the generality 'tis not the bad or midling Authors that are guilty of it; but the most excellent Pens. It were to be wished, that they who published so many ill Pieces, and ill digested Books, which are hardly of any use to the Republick of Learning, would overstrain the Maxim, That one ought to let a writing lie by in his Closet for (g) nine years. 'Twere well if such would run into an excess of Delicacy, and never think they had finished a Composition. It rarely happens that they have a th[illegible] of this kind, tho' if they frequently had, [illegible] be sorry for it. But 'tis a misfortune that a [illegible] Ingenious Man should be like that famous Painter, who never knew when his Pictures were finished, and whose failing Apelles knew to well: Cum Protogenis opus immensi laboris ac curæ supra modum anxiæ miraretur (Apelles) dixit [illegible] omnia sibi cum illo paria esse aut illi meliora: sed uno se præstare, quod manum willi deducere tabula non sciret tollere: memorabili præcepto, nocere sæpe nimiam diligentiam. These words of Pliny are excellent they contain a Proverb which Erasmus applies to the Learned, of Linacer's difficult Taste, and teach us, that a too forc'd and obstinate exactness often Marrs the whole Work. I'll give you Erasmus's Application of it (h) Peculiariter autem convenisse (proverbium, manum de tabula) in quosdam scriptores plus satis accuratos, & morosæ cujusdam diligentiæ, qui sine fine premunt suas lucubrationes, semper aliquid addentes, adimentes, immutantes, & hoc ipso maxime peccantes, quia nihil peccare conantur. But what comes of this over-scrupulous exactness? Why much Loss to the Publick, and much Prejudice to the Authors who aim at it. The publick is too long deprived of the good it might reap from the compositions of great Authors, even tho' they should fall short of the Perfection which they might have given 'em; nay, it's often deprived of 'em for ever; because they die, before they have disposed them in a method, from whence their Friends or Executors might draw any Advantage. [illegible] compose with too difficult a Judgment, [illegible] their Productions with extream severity [illegible] at last discouraged by the Labour, and afraid of touching their own Work. They look on it as a Rack, and painful Business, and delay as much as possible the setting their Hand to it; the remembrance of the fatigue they have been at in altering one Page, makes 'em dread the event; so they suffer whole Months to pass without returning to the painful Task; and thus while we imagine that their Book is far advanced, because we know it has been in hand for ten or twelve Years, nothing is found except perhaps some rough Draughts, and disjointed Pieces; and it often happens, that they die before the Work has recieved its Form. Hereby they deprive themselves of the Glory they might aspire to; some are more happy; they are indefatigable, and by assiduous filing and polishing their Compositions, without any intermission, they at last find 'em worthy of publick notice; but the pains they are at to please themselves, very often Marrs all, for there's a certain degree of Correctness beyond which nothing can be done, but what instead of perfecting the Work, and giving it more Nerves and Strength, weakens and dispirits it. (i) Perfectum opus absolutumque est, nec jam splendescit limâ, sed attenuatur. Pliny the younger, who uses these words in one of his Letters, makes use of the same thought in another place, to shew his Friend the Mischief of an over-correctness. (k) Diligentiam tuam in retractandis operibus valde probo. Est tamen aliquis modus, primum, quod nimia cura exegit magis, quam emendat; deinde, quod nos a rebus revocat, simulque nec absolvit priora, & futuris posteriora non patitur. Vale. Quintilian, another great Master, lays down the same Principle, and explains it admirably and declares that a writing by continual mending and new molding, looses its natural Force. The sound Parts, says he, are cut off, the Blood drained, and it looks like a Body all over in Scars: How fine is his Expression! (l) Et ipsa emendatio finem habet. Sunt enim qui ad omnia scripta tanquam vitiosa redeant; & quasi nihil fas sit rectum esse quod primum est, melius existiment quid est aliud, idque faciant quoties librum in manus resumpserint, similes medicis etiam integra secantibus. Accidit itaque ut cicatricosa sint, & exanguia, & cura pejora. Sit igitur aliquando quod placeat, aut certè quod sufficiat; ut opus poliat lima, non exterat. The Orator Calvus was an instance of this. He set up too severe a Court of Inquisition against his own Writings, and by disciplining 'em over rigorously, and to a degree of Superstition, broke the Constitution, and even the Heart of 'em. (m) Accuratius quoddam dicendi & exquisitius afferebat genus: quod quanquam scienter eleganterque tractabat, nimium tamen inquirens in se, atque ipse sese observans, metuensque ne vitiosum colligeret, etiam verum sanguinem deperdebat. Itaque ejus oratio, nimia religione attenuata, &c. Quintilian (n) calls it Self-Calumny. Here's a Metaphor which a modern Author has made use of on this occasion. (o) 'There are some 'barren Wits, says he, who having made an Effay once 'in their Life, never leave combing it till they have 'plucked the very Hairs off, and after all it proves 'an Abortion'. We may reckon Sannazar, in the number of the Moderns, who have been troubled with Calvus the Orator's Distemper. We can't forbear (p) blaming this Poet's making his Poem groan and cry under the File for so long together, and his having too much worn, and wasted it, under pretence of polishing it more and more.

(c) Erasm. apophthegm. lib. 6. pag. m. 524.

(d) Erasmus ibid. to vouz 3. n. 19. pag. m. 165.

(e) Plinius Epist. 11. lib. 5.

(f) Id. 35. lib. 9.

(g) Nonumque prematur in annum. Horat. de arte poet. p. m. 170.

(h) Erasmus ibid. to vouz 3. n. 19. pag. m. 165.

(i) Plinius Epist. 11. lib. 5.

(k) Id. 35. lib. 9.

(l) Quintil. lib. 10 cap. 4. p. m. 488.

(m) Cicero in Bruto p. m. 410.

(n) Invenî qui Ciceroni crederent cum (Calvum) nimia contra se calumnia verum sanguinem perdidisse. Quintil. lib. 10. c. 1 p. 475.

(o) Garasse Apolog. pag. 313.

(p) Baillet Jugem. sur les poetes tom. 3. pag. 142.

(q) See Mr. de Vigneul Marville at the 224. pag. of his Melanges, Edit. of Rouan 1699.

The Remarks I have made on this occasion, will not be thought Foreign by those who consider what I had to prove. I was to shew, that the Pains Linacer took to satisfie himself in his Compositions was a Fault. This seeming a Paradox, it was necessary to reason upon it, and to produce Authorities. But I desire it may be remembred, that this does not universally respect all those, who vigorously apply themselves to refine and reform their Writings. They do well, and are very commendable, provided they run not into Excess (q). The only thing that can with any Colour of Reason be blamed, is the Intemperance in this Point. Non amo nimium

LINGELSHEIM (George Michael) Præceptor [a] and afterwards Counſellor to the Elector Palatine, flouriſhed in the beginning of XVIIth Century. He was born at Strasburg [β]. He has been reckon'd (A) the Author of a Book intituled Idolum Hallenſe, in which Lipſius is ſeverely handled. He kept a Correſpondence by Letters with Bongars; but 'tis a miſtake to affirm (B) that he was his Secretary, and that he publiſhed the Letters they wrote to one another. I have elſewhere ſaid [γ], that he was the Depoſitary of Mr. de Thou's Manuſcript.

LIN.

[a] Scaligerana, pag. m. 141.
[β] Ibid. pag. 162.
[γ] In the Article of Camden, pag. 782. col. 2.

nimium diligentes, ſaid a Noble Perſon (a) among the ancient Romans. I have two things to ſay before I conclude. There are ſome Authors who are a hundred Times harder to be pleaſed in the beginning, than in the Sequel of their Work; Raſures, Blots, Alterations, and other Symptoms of a diſſatisfied Judgment, appear chiefly in the firſt Lines of the Original. This has been obſerved in the Manuſcript of a Tract (b) of Plato, and of that of Petrarch. Here's a Paſſage of Muretius, where Ariſto is tax'd with the ſame Nicety. (c) Audivi à maximis viris, quique id facillime noſſe poterant, Ludovicum Arioſtum, nobiliſſimum nobiliſſimæ domus præconem, in duobus primis grandioris illius poematis ſui verſibus plus quam credi poteſt laboraſſe, neque ſibi prius animum expiere potuiſſe, quam cum illos in omnem partem diu multumque verſaſſet. Idem accidit & nobiliſſimo Etruſcorum poetarum Franciſco Petrarchæ: cujus ex autographo, quod habuit vir præſtantiſſimus Petrus Bembus, facile cernitur, eum in limando ſecundo item poematum ſuorum verſu ſæpe ſudaſſe. Mr. de Vigneul Marville ſays, 'There are Writers, who 'are infinitely at a Loſs how to begin, but run it off 'apace, when once the way is opened. The firſt 'Lines of Thuanus's Hiſtory coſt him more 'Pains than all the reſt, but when once he had con-'quered that Difficulty, he made great Speed. The other thing I have to ſay, is, that there are Authors, who reviſing a Work they deſign to reprint, are at greater Pains, than at the firſt Compoſition. They apply themſelves with more Pleaſure and Scrupulouſneſs, to correct a printed Copy, than a Manuſcript. But for the moſt part 'tis loſt Labour, for there are few who compare Editions, and unleſs they be patiently and skilfully compared, the Importance of the Corrections is not perceived. Such a Place of a Second Edition (d), which contains no more Lines than the firſt, or even not ſo many, is changed from Lead to Gold, but where are thoſe who perceive this? I have ſpoke elſewhere of thoſe who write with Difficulty, or without it, and I ſhall ſpeak of 'em again (e) elſewhere.

[b] That de Republica. See Dionyſius Hallicarnaſſeus de collocat. verbor. cap. 93. p. m. 69.
[c] Muret variar. lect. lib. 18. cap. 8. p.m. 1207.
[d] Confer quæ ſupra, pag. 466. col. 2.
[e] In the Remark G of the Article Malherbe.
[f] See Scaligerana, voce Lingelſhemius, and the Letters of Lingelſheim, pag. 194.
[†] Scaligerana, ib.
[g] See his Letters, lib. 4. Epiſt 315.
[h] Scaligerana, voce Denaiſius.
[i] Placcius de anonymis, n. 51. pag. 18.
[k] In vitis Juriſconſult. pag. 447.
[l] In the Key to the Letters, pag. 153. & 185. opuſculorum edit. Ultraj. 1669.
[m] Baudius, Epiſt. 10. centur. 2. pag. m. 267.

(A) He has been reckoned the Author of a Book ——— in which Lipſius is ſeverely handled.] He ſent Copies of it (f) to his Friends, and demanded their Opinion of it with an Importunity, that beſpoke him the Author. It was therefore excuſeable to judge him the Author of the Idolum Hallenſe. Scaliger, that great Critick, went upon other Reaſons, which he thought diſcovered Lingelſheim's Genius in this Work. Autor de idolo Hallenſi eſt Lingelſheim, ſaid he (†), be it was that ſent me a Copy——— I diſcover in the Idolum Hallenſe, the Turns of Lingelſheim's Wit; I know him very well; he ſent me the Book, and deſired me to write him my Judgment of it. This was what he ſaid in Converſation; he confirmed it in a Letter (g) he wrote to Lingelſheim, concerning the Idolum Hallenſe, in which he aſcribed this Work to him, and commended him much for it; but he was afterwards informed, that Denaiſius was the Author of it. Lingelſheim, ſaid he (h) wrote to me, that Denaiſius, Aſſeſſor of the Imperial Chamber is the Author of the Idolum Hallenſe; and becauſe he lived among the Jeſuits, he deſired not to be named. Mr. Placcius has very well obſerv'd, that the Judgment of this Top-Critick was not always well-founded. (i) Hac ſane vice erravit, & infeliciter criſin ſuam quam ipſemet tantopere prædicare ſolebat, exercuit Heros ille Criticorum Hypercriticus. He cites Melchior Adam (k), who has aſcrib'd this Work to its true Author Peter Denaiſius; he obſerves, that Colomies was ignorant of the Truth of this Affair, having ſaid in two Places (l) that Lingelſheim was the Author of this Book. Baudius judg'd like Scaliger, affirming, that the publick Voice was agreeable to his Conjecture; ſo true it is, that the ſkilfulleſt are ſubject to err, in conjectures of this kind (m), Viro gravi & ſapienti Johanni Lingelsbemio officioſam ſalutem nunciari cupio. Conſentiens fama eſt eum eſſe auctorem libelli de Idolo Hallenſi adverſus Lipſium; & id ipſe conjeceram eum primum in manus meas venit. Non eſt quod patrem pudeat ſuæ prolis, cum non puduerit tantum virum tales nugas effutire in dedecus anteparta fama. Mr. Teiſſier (n) has followed the Crowd. In all appearance, Lingelſheim told Bongars, that Denaiſius was Author of this Idol of Hall; See his 157th Letter. This Book was printed in 1605, in 4to, with this Title, Diſſertatio de Idolo Hallenſi Juſti Lipſii mangonio & phaleris exornato atque producto. I have read in a Letter (o) of Lingelſheim, that Goldaſt was thought the Author of this Book; and that the Amphitheatrum honoris aſcribes it to Scaliger. Another Letter of Lingelſheim informs us, that Goldaſt had the care of the Impreſſion, and that this created him many Enemies; for this Book exaſperated the Jeſuits beyond Meaſure. (p) Quam gaudeo probari tibi ſcriptum de Idolo, certe omnium bonorum cum magno applauſu acceptus eſt, ſed facetiæ illæ ſcholaſticæ commoverunt noſtros Academicos, adeo ut Rector diſtractionem libelli edicto inhibuerit, & jam vindictam ſpirant magiſtri, eo quod nimis contumelioſus ſit interpres in totum ordinem, & quia Goldaſtum editorem hujus ludi ex typographo cognoverunt, & ſtilis & telis in illum inſurgunt, atque etiam aulicos in partes trahunt, quæ nimis ruſticatim ille petigerit. In another Letter he obſerves, that the Carmelite (q), who anſwered for Juſtus Lipſius, vomited a Thouſand Reproaches againſt Bongars, and looked on him as Author of the Idol. Lingelſheim would have had Bongars demand Juſtice againſt him from the French Embaſſador. a (r) Indignatus ſum quum repeti anagramma ſuæ obnigræ, ubi monaſtico acumine ſuſpicionem ſuam prodit quaſi tu autor eſſes. Cogitavi, anne per Oratorem Regium qui Bruxella eſt, ſi eſt tibi amicus, negotium poſſit illi creari poſſet ob atroces injurias quas in te effundit, cùm tamen author libri non ſis, & quam voluptatem in maledicendo cepit, eandem in lite moleſta & infamia quæ condemnatos injuriarum manet, perdat. Lipſius anſwered nothing, 'twas the beſt thing he could do; his Friends turn this Silence to his Honour; they ſaid he generouſly deſpiſed his Adverſary, and like a Maſtiff who keeps on his way, without turning aſide to worry a little Cur that barks at him, he would not leſſen himſelf by a Conteſt with this Anonymous Author. This is the general way of ſpeaking, when People know not what to anſwer. Exinde maledicta acerbiora neſcio quis terræ filius, Idoli Hallenſis (ô Lucianæam blaſphemiam igne Tartareo expiandam!) titulo mentito, ſparſit in vulgus. Sed prudentioribus amicis ſuadentibus, LIPSIUS fluit, & judicio contemſit, atque adeo contentu ſolo novum iſtum Porphyrium vincendum eſſe cenſuit. Sic fere generoſior moloſſus importunum catulum ſtolide adlatrantem præterit, nec dente aut pugna dignatur (s).

(B) 'Tis a Miſtake to affirm, that he was his Secretary, and that he.] I lay this againſt the Learned Mr. Morhof, whoſe Words are theſe: (t) Bongarſii & Lingelſhemii epiſtolæ editæ ſunt Argentor. (w) an. 1660. in 12. Erat Bongarſius vir ſuo tempore magni nominis ſub Henrico IV. negotiis publicis ſæpe admotus——Lingelſheimius itidem vir in publica dignitate conſtitutus & ad Helvetios legatus, olim Bongarſio ab epiſtolis literas Bongarſianas una cum ſuis publicavit: fuit enim inter illos commercium literarum mutuum. Compare this with the Bookſellers Preface, and you'll wonder how ingenious Men ſhould be impoſed upon in ſo egregious a manner. The Fate of Authors is deplorable; for even when they fancy they apply their ſtrongeſt Attention, they miſtake the Sence of a moſt eaſie Paſſage: I much fear, this has often been my own Misfortune. Here's what the Bookſeller of Strasburg declares before his Edition. Legi hic Bongarſii & Lingelſhemii Epiſtolas multa eruditione & variis prudentiæ documentis plenas, honoficio nobiliſſimi Amplifſimique dignitatis viri qui Inclytæ Reip. ad Helvetios, legatus à clariſſimo viro Dn. Franciſco Veyranio eas ut lucem

[n] Addit. aux elogem. t. 2. pag. 383.
[o] It's in the Collection of Letters written to Goldaſt, printed in 1688. pag. 167.
[p] Lingelſheim, Epiſt. 67. ad Bongarſium.
[q] He was call'd Anaſtaſius Cichleticus. His Book is intituled Palæſtra honoris D. Virginis Halenſis pro Juſto Lipſio contra Exercitationem nentiti Idoli Halenſis 1607.
[r] Lingelſheim, Ep. 76. ad Bongarſium, pag. 228.
[s] Auber. Miraus in vita Lipſii, ad ann. 1605. p.m. 24.
[t] Morhofius, Polyhiſt. lib. 1. cap. 24. p. 396.
[w] See the Article Bongars, Remark H.

LINGENDES (Claude de) one of the moſt famous Preachers of the XVIIth. Century, was born at Moulins in 1591, and became a Jeſuit at Lions in 1607. He taught Rhetorick and the Liberal Arts for ſome time; but as he had a wonderful Talent for the Pulpit, he applied himſelf moſtly to preaching, and got ſuch Reputation, that few Preachers were thought to equal, but none to excel him. He was Rector of the College of Moulins for Eleven Years, and afterwards Provincial of the Province of France. He was thrice deputed to Rome, to the general Aſſemblies of the Society, and died at Paris, Superior of the Profeſs'd Houſe, the 12th of April 1660 [a]. Not in the Year 1666, as Moreri aſſures us. His Sermons were publiſhed after his Death. I ſhall ſay (Y) ſomething of them that's remarkable enough. He publiſhed (Z) but [illegible] Books.

LIN[illegible]NDES (John de) Native of Moulines, and Couſin to the former, was a celebrated Preacher, and roſe by this way to the Biſhoprick of Sarlat, and afterwards to that of Mirepoix. He made the Funeral Oration of Lewis XIII. at S. Denis. It was [illegible]ted a [illegible]e after [b]. He was Preceptor to the Count (A) de Moret, Natural Son [illegible] IV. in 1619. The Poet (B) de Lingendes was his Couſin. This (C) Family is ſtill in being.

LIPPOMAN (Aloiſius) a Native (A) of Venice, was one of the Learnedeſt Prelates of the XVIth Century. He diſcharged ſeveral Nunciatures with the Reputation of an able Miniſter. The firſt was, as I take it, that of Portugal. He was Biſhop of Modon, and Coadjutor of Verona, when he was ſent from Boulogne to Rome, together with ſome other Prelates [c] to plead in the Cauſe (B) about Tranſlating the Council in 1548. He gave his Opinion peremptorily in this Aſſembly againſt the Plurality of Benefices. Father Paul obſerves [d], who, beſides, gives him the commendation

[a] Ea hominis celebritate per Galliam annis 36. ut qui eum illo in munere ſuperarit inventus ſit noſtra ætate nemo, & vix ullus qui æquaverit. Natan. Sotuel Bibliot h. Script. Societat. pag. 153.

[b] Taken from Natanael Sotuel, ib.

[c] See Abbé de Marolles, in the Catalogue of the Authors who had given him their Book.

[d] Palavic. Hiſt. Concil. Trid. lib. 10. c. 15. n. 2.

Iucem vidiſſent, acceſſit. Hac venerandus hic ſenex quin contubernio illuſtris Bongarſii duodecim annos, eidem ab epiſtolis vixerat, deſcripſit integras. The Bookſeller ſpeaks here of two Perſons; of the firſt without [illegible] him, and of the ſecond under the [illegible]ame of Franciſcus Veirac. The latter wrote his Letters for [illegible]ther, who had been ſent on a Deputation from the Town of Strasbourg to the Swiſs Cantons. It's doubtleſs of Veirac that we muſt underſtand what the Bookſeller declares in the laſt part of the Paſſage before mentioned, 'tis he was Secretary to Bongars twelve years; 'tis he copied the Letters, which this Bookſeller publiſhed. Lingelſheim had been long dead, when they ſaw the light. Thus Mr. Morhof is miſtaken ſeveral (a) ways.

(Y) I ſhall ſay ſomething of his Sermons that's remarkable.] I ſhall only ſet down what Mr. Gallois has ſaid, ſpeaking of the Sermons upon all the Lent Goſpels, by the R. P. de Lingendes, printed at Paris in 2 Volumes in 8vo. in 1666. ' (b) It's very ' ſurprizing that Father Lingendes, whoſe Eloquence ' all France admired, ſhould never Study his Expreſſions, but was ſo unconcerned in this point that ' he compoſe'd in Latin the Sermons he was to ' preach in French. The truth is, this great Man ' conſider'd only [illegible] of Reaſoning, the vehemency of the [illegible]ons, and the Nobleneſs of his ' Figures; he was [illegible] the Opinion of that Antient, ' who look'd upon a Diſcourſe as made, when he ' had nothing to provide, but the Words. After the ' Death of this Father, ſeveral of his Sermons were ' [illegible]liſhed, which were found written with his own ' [illegible]d, and there are already (c) two Editions of ' [illegible]. But that Language not being underſtood by ' every body, a great many wiſh'd they might ſee 'em ' in French. The thing ſeem'd to be the eaſier, ' as there would not be ſo much as the trouble ' of Tranſlating 'em. For his Sermons, having been copied by ſeveral Tranſcribers, as he preached 'em, 'twas thought there was no more to do ' but collect and publiſh 'em juſt as they found 'em. ' Nevertheleſs, the diverſity which appeared between ' the different Copies of the ſame Sermons, ſhew'd ' that t[illegible] were not faithfully taken; 'twas therefore t[illegible]t proper to Tranſlate theſe Sermons ' from t[illegible] original Latin, yet, without neglecting ' theſe [illegible] Manuſcripts, the Expreſſions whereof have been retain'd as near as poſſible. The ' Tranſitions have alſo been added, the poliſhing and ' ſome few Ornaments, which the heat of Diſcourſe ' furniſhed him, and which are found in all the ' Manuſcripts of the Writers, though not in the ' Latin Text; ſo that the French Edition is not a ' bare Tranſlation of the Latin. But the di[illegible] ' betwixt 'em is, that the Latin gives [illegible] ' ſame juſt as the Author writ 'em: The French ' as they were delivered from the Pulpit: The firſt ' [illegible] the Analyſis of the Diſcourſe, the ſecond ' the Parts joined together; the one is more uſeful ' to thoſe who would make Sermons, the other proper for thoſe who would only read them. The ' Latin Edition is alſo much larger than the French. ' For of all the Sermons in the former, only the ' moſt excellent have been cull'd out, and juſt as ' many as are to make a Courſe for Lent.

(b) Journal des Savans du 4. d'Avril, 1667. pag. m. 154.

1661. in Quarto. Two Years after they publiſhed Ten Sermons of this Jeſuit on the Holy Law ancient, which were ſo much eſteemed, printed in French.

(Z) He publiſhed but Two Books.] One in Latin, and the other in French. Votivum monumentum ab urbe Molinenſi Delphino oblatum anno, 1639, in Quarto. Counſels for the Conduct of Life.

(A) Preceptor to the Count de Moret.] ' (d) He did not ſtay long with him the firſt time, for ' by I know not what underhand Management, againſt the Intention even of Madam the Counteſs ' of Moret, and her Brothers the Chevalier de Beuil, and de la Riviere, Croſilles was ſubſtituted in ' his Place, who had formerly been the moſt agreeable Perſon in the World to 'em. The Count ſuffered this Change, though he loved de Lingendes; ' but he did not hate Croſilles, and thought it beſt ' to obey the King cheerfully. Afterwards de Lingendes was reſtored.

(d) Memoires de l'Abbé de Marolles, p. 42, 43. ad. ann. 1619.

(B) The Poet de Lingendes.] Here's what the ſame Abbot de Marolles ſays of him. ' (e) He ' wrote with Reputation in 1607, and 1608. and ' we have a Poem of his upon the Birth of Monſieur the Duke of Retelois, and that ſo famous one ' upon the Baniſhment of Ovid, which is prefixed ' to Nicolas Renouard's Tranſlation of the Metamorphoſis. By meerly imitating Politian, if we believe Colletet (f), he became at laſt more Polite in ſome of his Pieces, than Politian himſelf.

(e) De nombrement des Auteurs.

(f) Art poetique, Diſcours de l'eloquence, pag. 33. à la fin du vol. apud Baillet, Jugement ſur les Poëtes, n. 1448. pag. 134.

(C) That Family's ſtill in being.] Nicolas de Lingendes, Brother to the Biſhop of Sarlat, was Under-Steward of the King's Houſhold. He was ſent into Spain to negotiate the Marriage of Lewis XIII. with Anne of Auſtria. His firſt Wife was Mary d'Abra de Raconis, Aunt to Charles de Raconis, Biſhop of Lavaur, and he had by her Charles de Lingendes, Steward to the King, Sub-Dean of the Knights of St. Michael, and Father to John Auguſtine de Lingendes, Captain of Horſe (g).

(g) Taken from the Mercure Galant for the Month of June 1689.

(A) A Native of Venice.] Some ſay he was of a very noble (h) Family: others, that it never was known who was his Father. See the Remark D.

(h) Hic ſane illuſtri proſapia ortus, Patricius erat Venetus. Sauſſaius in continuat. Bellarm. de Scriptor. Eccleſ. n. 47.

(B) To plead in the Cauſe about the Tranſlating.] The Legates of the Pope being unwilling to continue the Council of Trent, would have it removed to Bologna, and ſome Biſhops not approving of that Adjournment, remained at Trent. Hereupon the Legates deputed a certain Number of Biſhops to the Pope, to give an Account of their Conduct, Lippoman was one of thoſe Deputies (i).

(i) Palav. Hiſt. Con-

(C) He

tion of having lived Exemplarily. [a]. After the Interruption of the Council [b]. He was ſent Nuncio into Germany in 1548, from whence Pope Julius III. recall'd him two Years after [c]. The Year following he made him one of the Three Preſidents of the Council [d]. Paul IV. ſent him into Poland in 1556, to ſtop the Progreſs of the Proteſtants [e]. He preferred him to the Biſhoprick of Bergamo in 1558, and made him his Secretary [f]. Lippoman died the 15th. of Auguſt 1559 [g]. He publiſhed ſeveral (C) Books. 'Tis ſaid, that he exerciſed great Cruelty (D) againſt the Sectaries, during his Nunciature in Poland.

LIPSIUS (Juſtus) was one of the learneſt Criticks that flouriſhed in the XVIth. Century. I could relate a great many curious Things concerning him; but as others [h] have already collected 'em, and have not even forgot, what relates to his Education, and early [i] Attainments, I think myſelf obliged to ſpeak only of their Omiſſions. One of the greateſt Faults Lipſius is reproached with, is his Inconſtancy (AA) in Point of Religion. For being born a Catholick, he embraced Lutheraniſm, whilſt he was Profeſſor [k] at Jena. Afterwards being returned into Brabant, he lived there as a Catholick, and then having accepted an Imploy in the Univerſity of Leiden, made Profeſſion of Calviniſm. At laſt he quitted Leiden, and returned into the Spaniſh Netherlands, where he not only lived in the Roman Communion, but even

[a] Id. l. 3. ſub fin. p. 292. ad ann. 1551.
[b] Palavic. ibid. l. 11. c. 2. n. 6.
[c] Id. ib. c. 8. n. 6.
[d] Id. ib. c. 13. n. 1.
[e] Id. ib. 13. c. 13. n. 2.
[f] Id. lib. 14. c. 7. n. 4.
[g] Id. ib. c. 9. n. 4.
[h] Mr. Teiſſier, Addit. aux Eloges de Thoeanus tom. 2. p. 381. & 432. Bullart, Academie des Sciences, tom. 2. pag. 193.
[i] Baillet, enfans celebres, pag. 184.
(a) Chevillier, Origine de l'Imprimerie de Paris, pag. 140. 150.
(b) Le Lexicon Grec de Jaques Tuſanus.
(c) Staniſlaus Lubieniecius, Hiſt. reformationis Polonicæ, pag. 76.

[k] This Profeſſion laſted a little more than a year Lipſius, Epiſt. 87. cent. 3. miſcell. p. m. 313. He quitted Jena the 1ſt. of March. 1574. Id. Epiſt. 68. centur. ad German. & Gabos, pag. 702.

(d) Idem Lubieniecius ibid. pag. 78.
(e) This was the Governor of the Flag.

(C) He publiſhed ſeveral Books.] The moſt conſiderable, if I miſtake not, are Catena Sanctorum Patrum in Geneſim & in Exodum. The Catena in Geneſim he had printed at Paris, in Folio, (a) by Charlotte Guillard, in the Year 1546. 'Tis a very good Impreſſion. He came himſelf to Paris to ſpeak with the Widow, and prevailed with her to poſtpone a great Work (b) which the Univerſity impatiently expected, to go on with the Impreſſion of the Second Volume, Catena in Exodum, which was finiſhed in 1555. 'Tis printed in the ſame Character, and with the ſame Beauty as the former. Theſe Editions are intermix'd with Greek, Hebrew, and all ſorts of good Characters. I know not how to reconcile this, with many good Catalogues, which ſay, that the Catena in Exodum was printed at Paris in the Year 1550. Lippoman's other Works are, Catena in aliquos Pſalmos. A Compilation of Lives of the Saints in Eight Volumes. Confirmatione di tutti gli dogmi Catholici, con la ſubverſione di tutti i fondamenti delli moderni heretici, at Venice 1553. Eſpoſitioni volgari ſopra il ſimbolo apoſtolico, il pater noſtro, &c.

(D) Great Cruelty againſt the Sectaries ——— in Poland.] According to the Author whom I am about to cite, Lippoman was the firſt Apoſtolick Nuncio, that was ſeen in this Country. He puniſhed ſome Jews to terrify the Hereticks. He ſuborned and bribed certain Accuſers, who made Oath, that a Woman had ſold an Hoſt to ſome Jews, and that theſe Miſcreants had with the Prickings of Needles drawn a Vial of Blood from it to heal the Wound of Circumciſion. The King's Order was ſurreptitiouſly got for burning 'em. They inſiſted on their Innocence at the Stake. The King being informed how the matter was carried, conceived a great Indignation againſt Lippoman. Nevertheleſs, a Narrative of the whole Affair was drawn up in the King's Name, and ſent to Rome, to ſwell the Catalogue of Miracles in the Archives. I ſhall ſet down the Words of a Poliſh Writer, who tells us this. He begins by reproaching Lippoman with his baſe Extraction. (c) Primus id officii apud nos geſſit Aloyſius Lipomanus Venetus, homo ut facta teſtantur, pervicax & crudelis. Quod tanto minus mirandum, quanto Aſperius nihil eſt humili, cum ſurgit in altum. Dicebatur enim eum incerto patre fuiſſe natum. Hunc quamprimum Nuncii Terrarum in Comitio viderunt, extemplo eum compellarunt: Salve progenies viperarum. Talem ſe reipſa fuiſſe Lipomanus probavit. Videns enim dogma eorum de Sanctiſſimo, ut vocant, Sacramento in magno verſari diſcrimine, coacto Lovicium Pontificum omnis generis conventu, ere ſua judicarunt exemplum ſeveritatis, vel potius feritatis, ad incutiendum populo ſibi parenti metum, & diſſentientibus horrorem in aliquo ex infima, vulgi fece ideoque impunius ſtatui ——— Hinc impetu in Judæos quàm odio publico laborantes, tam innocentiæ præſidiis defectos, facto, tres è grege eorum & feminam quandam Dorotheam Laxiciam in vincula conjecerunt. Capita accuſationis hæc fuerunt: Laxiciam cum de more ſolenni ante Paſchatos feſtum ad Sacram communionem accederet, occultatam in ore hoſtiam Judæis vendidiſſe: hos acubus eam confixiſſe: inde ampullam ſanguinis, quo ad ſanandum infantium circumciſorum vulnus opus habeant, collegiſſe ———

(d) Mandata nomine Regio ad (e) Borum per diſpoſitos equites miſere, ut Judæos ex mente Legati Apoſtolici & Spiritus S. (ſcilicet) concilium Lovicenſe regentis ad rogum damnaret. Lata in Judæos ſententia. 'Hi ad rogum deducti palam liberè dicere: 'Nunquam nos hoſtiam eminus vel acubus confiximus: Nos enim nequaquam credimus hoſtiæ ineſſe Dei corpus: Imò ſcimus Deo nullum corpus, ſanguinemve eſſe: & more Majorum credimus, Meſſiam non futurum fuiſſe ipſum Deum, ſed ejus unum & Legatum: Compertum quoque habemus fæ. rina nihil ineſſe ſanguinis. Teſtamur ad ultrimum nos nullo ſanguine opus habere. His auditis crudelitatis Lipomaniæ & Pontificiæ adminiſtri picem ardentem ori miſerorum infuderunt. Tam horrendum omni ex parte facinus monumentis Romanis inſertum & pro miraculo vulgatum, Regis nomine, ad conciliandam rei fictæ fidem, adpoſito. Id ſcripti à Moſcovio traditum Regi, indignationem & iram ejus excivit, animumque à Liponiano avertit. Huic Rex in os dicere non erubuit: ſe facinus illud immane deteſtari: & nequaquam adeo mente captum eſſe, ut hoſtiæ iſti ſanguinem ineſſe credat. Du Suaſi (f) takes notice, that Lippoman was ſo hated by the Sectaries, that he had like to have loſt his Life ſeveral Times by Aſſaſſination. Mr. de Sponde (g) pretends, that the Miracle manifeſted at that time on the Hoſt in the Hands of theſe wretched Jews, was founded on three Reaſons: The laſt was, that the Nuncio Lippoman vilify'd by the Libels of the Hereticks, and running the Risk of his Life, ſtood in need of ſuch a Providence to procure him a greater Authority. Staniſlaus Hoſius Biſhop of Warmia, expreſſes a deal of Indignation at Peter Paul Vergier's Dedicating a Book to the King of Poland, and challenging Lippoman the Apoſtolick Nuncio to a publick Diſpute, whereof the King ſhould be Judge (b).

(d) Idem Lubieniecius ibid. pag. 78.
(e) This was the Governor of the Flag.
(f) Tantum in odium ſectariorum incurrit, ut ab eis de vita ſit peſticitatus frequenter, ſed Deo protegente incolumis reverſus. Sauſſaius ubi ſupra.
(g) Ad ann. 1566 n. 7. pag. m. 564.
(h) See the Epiſtle Dedicatory of Hoſius's Work againſt the Proteſtemena of Brentius.
(i) Conradus Schluſſelb. in reſponſum ad calumnioſum ſcriptum Chriſtoph Pelargi apud Cranium animadv. phil. & hiſtor. parte 7. pag. 54. 55.

(AA) His Inconſtancy in Point of Religion.] Doctor Schluſſelburgius's Relation will not ſtand amiſs in this Page, which teaches us, that Lipſius reckoned it the ſame thing to be Lutheran, or Calviniſt, or Papiſt. (i) Talis ambiguæ Pelargicæ fidei erat Luciani ſimilis, cothurno verſatilior & Epicureus Philoſophus, Juſtus Lipſius, olim Collega meus & Profeſſor Oratoriæ facultatis in Univerſitate Jenenſi, in Thuringia, ubi magnum amatorem Lutheranæ religionis agebat, & jurejurando confirmabat, ſe doctrinam Lutheri ut unam, æternam & divinam veritatem agnoſcere, Romanique antichriſti idololatriam & blaſphemiam damnare. At Lugdunum Batav. veniens, fiebat Apoſtata, ut Pelargus, abnegabatque agnitam & adprobatam veritatem; quamvis hoc diſſiteretur, dicens ſe Chriſtianum eſſe, nec Chriſtum deſeruiſſe, nec abnegaſſe. Id de hoc viro verè dicere & teſtari poſſum. Nam cùm ad ipſum anno Chriſti M. D. LXXXII. æſtivo tempore in reditu meo ex Antverpia, in Academia Leidenſi, ubi Profeſſor erat, inviſerem, ut veterem amicum, & ex illo quærerem, qui rationem reddere poſſet, defectionis ſuæ à vera Religione, quam Jenæ anno M. D. LXXII. confeſſus eſſet, à Chriſto, quem abnegaſſet & deſeruiſſet; reſpondebat mihi in domo ſua & in præſentia M. Henrici Latomi Eccleſiaſtæ olim Antverpienſis: Mi Schluſſelbur- even fell into a Womanish Bigotry; which he (A) discovered in his printed Books. The strangest thing of all in his Conduct; and what can never be pardoned him, was his living at Leiden in the external Profession of the Reformed Religion, and yet publickly approving the Principles of Persecution, at that time exercised all Europe over, against this very Religion. He was strangely confounded (B) when he was shewn the Consequences of his Doctrine, and this was doubtless one of the Reasons which obliged him to quit Holland. He was offered a Professorship at Pisa, with the Promise

Schlusselburgi, vetus amice & Collega. Ego Christum non abnegavi, nec deserui, licèt hîc Lutheranam doctrinam non profitear, cum Calvinianis conversor. Mani omnis Religio & nulla Religio sunt mihi unum & idem. Et apud me Lutherana & Calviniſtarum doctrina pari passu ambulant. Cohorrescens ad hæc, dicebam: mi Lipsi, si ea in opinione manseris, malè tecum agetur, facilèque credo, eum hæc Religio æque tibi probetur ac ista, te tandem Pontificium futurum, qualissimicio fuisti. Ad quæ respondebat, sibi perinde esse. Sicutit & evenit, teste illius libro de invocanda Hallensi Maria. Observe by the way, in these Words, the extravagant Zeal of a rigid Lutheran. Schlusselburgius calls the Change from a Lutheran to a Calvinist, Apostacy, and the Denying of JESUS CHRIST. I might cite a great many Writers, who upon the Chapter of Religion, look upon Lipsius as a Weather-Cock; but let it suffice to produce the Judgment of Boeclerus, and the Advice he gives young Students. Non fuerit operæ pretium, says he (a), singula examinare cum potius universim monendi sint Juvenes studiosi, ne tales quæstiones Lipsio velint magistro discere, qui ubique sibi similis est, id est, in Re Theologica aut quocunque modo ad Religionem pertinente lubricus, anceps, vagus, in omnes formas mutabilis: qui modo aliquid largiri, modo adimere rursum cupiat, id quod necesse est accidere homini veræ religione serio nunquam imbuto, Sacrarumque litterarum penitus experti.

(A) He discovered his Biggotry, in his printed Books.] One of these Books is intituled, Justi Lipsii Diva Virgo Hallensis: beneficia ejus & miracula fide atque ordine descripta (b). Another, intituled, Justi Lipsii Diva Sichemiensis sive Aspricolis: nova ejus beneficia & admiranda (c). He picks up the least Stories, and the most uncertain Traditions that can possibly be found upon this Subject. Some of his Friends dissuaded him from this Attempt, alledging the Incertainty of these Traditions, and the Injury he would do himself; but all their Counsels could not divert him from his Enterprize: (d) At mali aut morosi quidam & pravè sapientes non occultè deterrent aut improbant, tanquam à narrationibus parum certis, ut ajunt, & opinione sæpe nixis. Non debere talibus obsolefieri auctoritatem nostram si quam habemus, dissentio. The Verses he made, when he consecrated his Silver Pen to our Lady of Hall, are strangely singular, as well on Account of the Praises he gives himself, as the excessive Homage he pays to the Holy Virgin. (e) Ipse pennam argenteam (nec potuit pretiosius quidpiam) in templo ante aram Virginis suspendit, & pios hosce versus subscripsit:

Hanc, DIVA, PENNAM interpretem mentis meæ,
Per alta spatiisque volavit ætheris,
Per ima quæ volavit & terræ, & maris:
Scientiæ, Prudentiæ, Sapientiæ
Operata semper, ausa quæ CONSTANTIAM
Describere, & vulgare; quæ CIVILIA,
Quæ MILITARIA, atque POLIORCETICA:
Quæ ROMA MAGNITUDINEM adstruxit tuam:
Variaque luce scripta prisci sæculi.
Affecit, & perfudit: hanc PENNAM tibi
Nunc DIVA, meritò consecravi LIPSIUS.
Nam numine istuc inchoata sunt tuo,
Et munine istuc absoluta sunt tuo.
Possis benignitatis aura perpetim
Hanc spirare! & famæ fugacis in vicem,
Quam PENNA peperit, tu perenne gaudium
Vitamque DIVA, LIPSIO pares tuo.

He left (f) by his Will, his Furr'd Gown to the same Saint; which gave Occasion to say, that he made her this Present, because the Miracles he had so much celebrated, were ready to die of Cold. Some Protestants writ with great force against him; he let 'em talk on, and only answered one of 'em in a few Words: See his Rejectiuncula, at the End of his Virgo Aspricollis. He was desired to defend himself against (g) the Author of the Treatise De idolo Hallensi, and against Thomson (h) who confuted him in other Matters about the Virgo Sichemiensis; but he (i) refused to ingage in these Disputes, and acted wisely. See in the Remark D, what Baudius said of this Critick's Books of Devotion.

It must not be forgot, that Lipsius was said to have composed such Books only to convince the World, that he was not lukewarm and indifferent in Religion, as many suspected (k) he was. 'Twas also believed, that these Works were pure Injunctions, and that the Jesuits extorted 'em from him. (l) Ejusmodi Lejolita precibus, quæ vim imperii apud Lipsium habent, hanc operam ab eo vel extorserunt, vel eblanditi sunt; vel utrumque. Nam ut ipsi hominem dotum possident, ita ipse illis denegare nihil negare potest. If this was his Case, he might be compared to hired Mourners, who cry more bitterly than the Relations of the Dead. The Poet Lucilius takes notice of these.

Mercede quæ
Conducta flent alieno in funere præficæ
Multo & capillos scindunt, & clamant magis.

And Horace says little less:

Ut (l) qui conducti plorant in funere, dicunt
Et faciunt propè plura dolentibus ex animo: sic
Derisor vero plus laudatore movetur.

(B) He was strangely confounded when he was shewn the Consequences.] See what is found hereupon in the Philosophical Commentary upon, Confess ain 'em to come in †. 'I have seen another Perplexity, 'which has Relation to these Matters, in a Treatise 'of Justus Lipsius. This Man having been ruined 'by the Wars of the Netherlands, found a very 'honourable Retreat at Leiden, where he was ap'pointed Professor; making no scruple of outwardly 'abjuring his Popish Religion. During that time he 'printed some Books of Politicks, where he ad'vanced, among other Maxims, that only one Reli'gion ought to be suffered in a State, and no Clemen'cy used towards those who disturbed the Church, 'but that they should be prosecuted with Fire and 'Sword, that one Member may perish, rather than the 'whole Body. Clementiæ non hic locus. Ure, seca, (1) ut membrorum potius aliquod quam totum corpus intereat. This was base, for a Man, enter'tained, as he was, by a Protestant Republick, 'which had newly Reform'd its Religion; for this was 'openly approving all the Rigours of Philip II. and 'the Duke D'Alva. It was besides a horrible 'Impudence, and execrable Impiety, since on one 'hand, it might be concluded from his Book, that 'only the Protestant Religion was to be suffered in 'Holland, and on the other, that the Heathens 'were to be commended for hanging the Preachers 'of the Gospel. He was taken up upon this 'Head by Theodore Coenbert (m), and driven to 'a Nonplus, for he was obliged to answer by tack'ing about, and declaring, that these Words, Ure, 'seca, were only a Phrase borrowed from Physick, 'to signifie not literally, Fire and Sword, but a ve'ry strong Remedy. All these Tergiversations are 'to be seen in his Tract De una Religione. 'Tis 'the most paltry Book he ever writ, except the im'pertinent Histories and silly Poems, he made in 'his old Days, upon some Chappels of the Virgin. 'His Wit beginning to be moap'd like that of Peri'cles, when he suffered his Neck and Arms to be 'tricked out with Amulets, and Womens Charms, 'being wholly infatuated by the Jesuits, into whose 'Arms he threw himself when he saw, that 'this little mischievous Book was looked upon 'asquint in Holland; this made him escape 'away by stealth from Leiden. To return to this 'little Book, 'tis a wretched Rhapsody of Passages,

(a) Boeclerus dissertat. de politicis Lipsii, cap. 5. pag. 54. 55.
(b) He composed it in 1603.
(c) He composed it in 1604.
(d) Lipsius, Epist. 59. centur. 3. miscellan.
(e) Auber Miræus in vita Lipsii, p. m. 23.
(f) Cui Virgini Hallensi moriens lacernam suam pelliceam testamento legavit: in quo, non potuit quin cæterorum hominum urbanitatem incurreret; qui quidem ridicule, sed non admodum religiose, idto. lacernam pelliceam Virgini illi relictam ajebant, quod ejus miracula, quæ tantopere in cælum laudibus efferebat, confirmarent ad populum. Nicius Erythræus, Pinacoth. 3. pag. 6.
(g) Mr. Teissier, Elog. tome 2. pag. 588. calls him Lingelmius; he should have said Lingelshemius, who yet is not the Author. See the Article Lingelsheim Remark A.
(h) Mr. Teissier, ib. calls him Thomasson.
(i) Miræus ubi supra, pag. 24. 25.
(k) See Crenius ubi supra, pag. 55. who does not forget the Passage of Scaliger, part of which is seen in the following Citation.
(l) Scalig. Epist. 106. See also the 37. Letter of Guy Patin. Horat. de arte poet. circa fin.
† Comment. Philos. 2. part. pag. 215. & seq.
(1) Civil. Doctr. l. 4. c. 3.
(m) See the Remark C of the Article Koornhert.

Promiſe (C) of enjoying his Liberty of Conſcience; but he refuſed that Employ. He ſetled at Louvain, where he taught the Liberal Arts in a way that was glori[ous] enough to him; and died there the 23*d*. of March, 1606, in his Fifty Ninth Ye[ar]. There

(a) See concern-theſe ſtri-ſturæ, the Remark E. of the Article Puteanus.

(b) Prodi-it etiam repentiſſi-mè dum hæc ſcribo calumnia eadem de Societate noſtra in libello quem Au-ctor in-ſcribit, Stricturas politicas, & in quo imprimis acerbiſſi-me inve-hitur in Juſtum Lipſium. Petra Sancta, not. in Epiſt. ol. Molinæ ad Balza-cum, pag. 96. Petra Sancta's Book was prin-ted in the Year 1634.

(c) Rivet. Caſtigat. notarum in Epiſt. ad Balza-cum, cap. 12. n. 14. Operum Tom. 3. pag. 535.

(d) Rivet a little before had ſaid, Vide ſi placet, Expoſtu-lationem Richardi Montacu-tii cum tuo Roſ-weido, in Antidia-tribis: ibi Lipſii ha-bebis lati-nitatem & eruditi-onem expenſam, & de ea ju-dicium, quod tibi non arri-debit.

(e) Lipſius, in rejectiun-cula, ad calcem Virginis Aſpricol-lis.

(f) Eam-que profeſſionem ſacræ cœnæ ibidem aſu-& communicatione publice obſignavit: Diſſert. de Idolo Hallenſi, pag. 17. (g) Diſſer-tat. de Idol. Hall. pag. 16. (h) Ibid. pag. 22. & ſeqq. (i) Ibid. p. 17. 18.

'which authoriſe all the Heathen Impieties on 'which was founded the horrible Perſecution of 'the firſt Chriſtians, and of other Paſſages which 'ſay the quite contrary. And as the Author durſt 'not avow the force of theſe two Words, Ure, ſeca, 'he uſed ſome pitiful Diſtinctions, which came to 'this, that Heretick's ought to be put to Death, but 'rarely and ſecretly; but as for Fines, Baniſhments, 'Marks of Infamy, and Degradations, they ought 'not to be ſpared. All this falls to the Ground, by the Reflections made hereupon in the Addition to the Remark B. We ſhall relate more at large, what concerns the Diſpute between Koornhert and Juſtus Lipſius.

Koornhert's not the only Perſon who treated him roughly on this Subject. For the Jeſuit Petra Sancta having made Complaints againſt (a) the Author of the Strictura Politica (b), the Anſwer returned him was this (c), Conquereris de autore notarum ſive ſtricturarum in proditoriam Juſti Lipſii epiſtolam qui quum in Belgio fœderato victiſſet, & Illuſtriſſimorum Ordinum ſtipendiarius fuiſſet, poſtquam inſalutatis hoſpitibus bene meritis abiiſſet, ſtylum in eos converſit, & adverſus Rempublicam eorum, conſilia ſubminiſtravit. Quis fuerit autor ſtricturarum illarum, ſeu notarum fateor me ignorare: ſed quiſquis ille fuerit, patriæ fuit amantiſſimus, & Lipſii fraudium callentiſſimus ——— Neſcio an cui Lipſiana tantoperè placent, & qui verſibus delectari videris, libenter lecturus ſis eos quos anno, 1579. præfixit ad Zelandos libro adverſus tenebriorem quendam. Editi fuerunt tum Leydæ apud Andream Schoutenum, & quo animo fuerit, aut eſſe finxerit, indicant. Audi illum,

Duplicia Heſperii rupiſtis vincla tyranni,
Mattiaci: atque armis aſſeritis pa[tri]æ
Aſſeritiſque fidem, patriam ſed turbat [I]dem.
Ecce iterum, ecce fidem turbat hic ardelio:
Verum alii patriam: ſed tu Feugræe, tueri
Perge fidem, & fidei qui faciunt tenebras,
Scriptis illucere tuis: ſunt vera Miniſtri
Hæc munia, ingenio digna tuo & genio.

Vides quo loco rum fuerit apud Lilium Hiſpaniæ Rex, quo Romana fides & Religio: qui poſtea factus eſt Religionis transfuga, infide & conſtantium ἀλλοτριοεπιστάτης, ut loquitur Montacutus (d). Theſe Verſes of Lipſius diſhonour his Memory, when we compare 'em with his own Confeſſion, that he was only a Proteſtant in Appearance at Leyden, and that his Heart was Catholick. Theſe are his Words: 'Sed altera calumnia,' in religione mutavi. Nego, in fide veſtra, non in ſenſu fui, & ut in peregrinatione corporis non animi requiem illic elegi. In tempore, ut meum ingenium eſt, quiete modeſtequa me habui; in ſacra aut ritus veſtros tranſivi? nec impudentia hoc dicet (e). Let him have done and ſaid what he pleaſed; he and all his Apologiſts were unable to elude the Proofs alledged, to ſhew that this Style anſwered his external Profeſſion, as long as he paſſed for a Proteſtant. The Author of the Idolum Hallenſe proves, that Lipſius having proteſted at Jena, before Tilemannus Heſhuſius, who was then (f) Rector of the Univerſity, that he ſincerely embraced the Lutheran Religion, communicated (g) publickly, and in a Funeral Oration of his, which had been printed, declared, that God had given his Church the Houſe of Saxony to ruine the Peſt of the Papacy. De bello Smalcaldico locutus cauſa bonitatem à Saxone, fortunam & martem ab Imperatore ſtetiſſe dicit & ——— Saxonicam (h) generoſam ſtirpem ad Dei hoſtes extirpandos, errores evertendos, PESTEM PONTIFICIAM excindendam donatam divinitus & conceſſam ECCLESIÆ eſſe. It is confeſſed, that he never communicated while he was at Leyden; but 'tis proved (i) by many Extracts of his Letters, that whilſt he lived there, he looked on the cauſe of the Spaniards, as unjuſt, and wiſhed the Ruin of it, and that many Expreſſions fell from him which beſpoke him a Proteſtant.

Here are ſome farther Circumſtances of his Controverſie with Theodore Koornhert. When his Treatiſe of Politicks, wherein he approved Perſecution on the ſcore of Religion, came out in 1589. Koornhert, a great ſtickler for Toleration, writ him his Opinion of this Book, and replied to the A[nſwer] he receiv-ed, and at laſt publiſhed a Boo[k] Title of Proceſſus contra hereticidium & [per]ſecutionem conſcientiarum. He dedicated it to the Magiſtrates of Leiden, ſent Copies of it to the Magiſtrates of other Towns, and exhorted 'em to take great Care of this Writer's Opinions. The publiſhing of this Book nettled Lipſius; but as [an] Ornament to the Univerſity of [Leiden], [and] of the Magiſtrates, an Act of Complaiſance, which might reaſonably comfort him. They publiſhed at the Town-Houſe, that they did not accept of Koornhert's Epiſtle Dedicatory, and that this Author, by dedicating his Book to 'em, did 'em neither Service, nor Honour, nor Friendſhip; that they did not however prohibit his Book, but permitted the Inhabitants to read it, and at the ſame time adviſed 'em to read Lipſius's excellent Anſwer. They declared, they had a very particular Eſteem for this Profeſſor. This Act did not fully ſatisfie him, nor was he at all pleaſed at hearing, that Koornhert recovered from a long Diſtemper, was buſie about a Reply. 'Tis ſaid too, that by the Favour of ſome Towns, he endeavoured to get the States of Holland to forbid the anſwering his Political Writings; but that Gerbrand Lanac, Burgomaſter of Tergou, oppoſed it for this Reaſon. If what Lipſius has written be true, he can be but weakly aſſaulted, and we ſhall be confirmed in the Truth, by the very Weakneſs of the Writings that are publiſhed againſt him; but if [there be] one diſcovers in 'em, in what we don't now perceive, any Falſity prejudicial to the Country, what harm can it be to correct 'em? Lipſius quitted Holland ſoon after, under Pretence of taking a Turn to the Spaw-Waters, for the ſake of his Health. Nor did he ever come back thither more, but returned to Popery, and proteſted in a Letter which he writ (k) from Mayence, that he had always been of the antient Religion, though he had profeſs'd another when he was in Places, where the antient was not received. This made many believe him a Hypocrite. Some were of Opinion, that the Diſcontent which Koornhert gave him, and the Apprehenſion he had, that the Hollanders might be worſted in the War againſt Spain (†) made him change Sides. However it be, Koornhert detained in his Bed, and ſeized with a Diſtemper [of] which he ſoon after died, failed not to go [on] with his Reply, and to finiſh it. His Executors got it tranſlated out of Flemiſh into Latin, and publiſhed it (l).

We muſt note, that Lipſius had dropt ſome Words againſt the Spaniſh Inquiſition in the firſt Editions, but ſtruck 'em out of the following. Boeclerus had told him his own upon this, in the Chapter De nævis Lipſiani operis, which is the 5th. of his Treatiſe De politicis Juſti Lipſii. Read theſe Words: (m) Illud non omittendum eſt, quæ ſeipſum prodit damnatque Lipſius; æterno cum de decore fama, quam unam videtur in omni vita quæſiviſſe. Cum enim in prioribus Politicorum ſuorum editionibus, lib. 4. cap. 4. pro libertate religionis, adverſus Pontificiam crudelitatem & Hiſpanicam inquiſitionem (quam nemo bonus unquam probavit) quædam ſcripſiſſet: in poſterioribus editionibus, tanquam non à religione modo ſed à ſana ſimul mente defeciſſet, parcim omiſit ea (ſcilicet quæ in Freinſhemiana editione reponuntur, n. 7. 9. 12) partim ſimpliciter & ingemue dicta mutavit. Boeclerus mentio[ns] ſome other Variations in this Man's Expreſſions.

(C) With a Promiſe of enjoying his Liberty of Conſcience.] Acidalius relates (n) that Farnerius, the Negotiator of this Affair, told him, that the great Duke had offered Lipſius a Profeſſor's Chair in the Univerſity of Piſa, with the Privilege of believing what he pleaſed in Matters of Religion; and that this Prince had obtained for him a [Penſion] at Rome. At the ſame time Acidalius [ſays] that a Report was ſpread, that this Profeſſor had embraced the Roman Faith in Germany; and affirms, that Lipſius alledged no other Reaſon for refu-ſing

Jeſuits of Mayence. He diſ-[ſem]bled on might be con-cealed for a while. See Miræus in vita Lipſii, p. m. 17.

(†) See Grotius, hiſtor. l. 5. pap. m. 378.

(l) Taken from ſome Latin E[pi]ſtles to me from the Flemiſh Hiſtory of the Reformation written by Gerhard Brandt, pag. 705. & ſeq. ad ann. 1590.

(m) Boeclerus de politi. Juſti Lipſii, p. 56.

(n) In his 2*d. Letter, written from* Bologna in Janu-ry 1592.

There were those among the Protestants (D) who never would second the Passion of some of their Brethren, in defaming this Learned Man. He married a Widow at Cologne about the Year 1574, but had no Children by her. Some say, she was a (E) very ill Woman; but he affirms he lived quietly with her. I don't know whether I ought to take notice that he (F) wrote a very bad Hand; and that his Conversation and Aspect (G) answered

(a) The 1st of the Century ad Italos & Hispanos, and the 3d. of the 3d. Century ad Belgas. But this last he says, That the Pope exhorted him to come to Rome. Ipse Pontifex caput nostrum recenter mihi me Romam invitavit.
(b) Baudius, Epist. 56. centur. 2 pag. m. 241.
(c) Id. ib.
(d) Id. ib. pag. 242.
(e) See Patin the 278th Letter of the 3d. Vol. where he cites du Moulin & Keckerman.
(f) Baudius, ibid. pag. 241.
(g) Opus est sane non ineruditum, & quod arguat scriptorem multæ lectionis: nisi quod intra modum modestiæ efferveseit, quo nomine etiam seriò reprehensus est ab heroë Scaligero. Id. ibid. pag. 242.
(h) Ibid.
(i) Gruter apud Quirinum Reuterum Epist. 393 inter eas quæ ad Goldastum scriptæ prodierunt anno 1688
(k) See the other Collection of Letters, written to Goldast, published in 1688, pag. 301.

sing the Chair at Pisa, than the Infirmity of his Health, and the distance of the Place, vitæ longinquitatem, & valetudinis imbecilitatem. He was far from alledging his being a Protestant; for he was readily enough disposed to the publick Profession of the Romish Religion. Yet by this we see that he was looked on in Italy as a very good Calvinist, since his Liberty of Conscience was Negotiated at Rome. There are two Letters (a) of Lipsius, from which we may infer, that Acidalius was well informed of what he said; but they don't mention the Offer of a Liberty of Conscience.

(D) Some Protestants who never would second.] One Lydius, a Minister, designing to publish the Letters which his Father had received from Justus Lipsius, was earnestly intreated by Baudius not to do it; by Baudius, I say, who understanding, that Lydius persisted in his Design, prepared to write against him, in Favour of Lipsius. (b) Perstat in incepto, ut sermonem tuum audio. Sed quia sibi sumit eam licentiam ut faciat quæ sunt contra morem bonorum, contra fas gentium, contra jus humanitatis: faxo dicat se nactum, qui hac in parte causam amici & quondam doctoris indefensam esse non patiatur. Not that Baudius approv'd Lipsius's two Books upon the Miracles of the Holy Virgin; on the contrary, he spoke of 'em with the utmost Contempt; but he thought that Letters between Friends ought to be an inviolable Secret. (c) Non quod ejus Divas ullo colore defendi posse censeam, sed interim non est tollenda è vita vitæ societas, quod faciunt qui literas, hoc est amicorum colloquia absentium, foras eliminant . . . . . (d) Deest scilicet hostis, & seges ac materies merendæ gloriæ non suppetit, nisi ex labe & ruina celebratissimi in literis viri, & honorifice à bonis nominandi, tametsi famam suam misere decoxerit duplici illa publicatione Virginum, quibus sæpe incolumi authore (e) lumbifragium exoptavi. Tho' Lydius was a great Preacher, Baudius hoped to come off cheaply enough with him. (f) Etiamsi multum in concionibus valeat, vereor tamen ut hic stare possit. Pervida ingenia plerumque violentiam naturæ & profundam ambitionem velare solent præclaro febemare zeli, quod est everriculum & mantile multarum fraudum. Sed non desunt nobis rationes quibus fœrulo planum & perspicuum fiet, Quid solidum crepet & pietæ tectoria linguæ. In the same Letter (g) he informs us that Scaliger took it very ill, that Thonson should write so violent a Book against Lipsius. He says also, That he's a Stranger to the Laws of Humanity, and the Sacred Rights of Literature, who Fancies that the Learned ought to espouse State Wars, and Differences in Religion, one against another, and that for his part, he shall never follow such Maxims, as long as he has a Grain of good Sense left. (h) Non dissimulo, nec unquam dissimulabo, intercedere mihi cum Lipsio, extra causam religionis & libertatis, ob quam publice bello decertamus, omnia jura summæ necessitudinis, quæ cum ullo mortali esse possunt. Nunquam litarunt Gratiis, & ignorant quid humaniores literæ, quid humanitas ipsa flagitet, qui ob eam rem testatas inimicitias promiscue omnibus indicendas esse arbitrantur. In eo casu non erit Baudius, quamdiu sanam animi mentem obtinebit. Gruterus, who had some of Lipsius's Letters, would never communicate 'em to those who desired them, with a design to make 'em publick. He would not furnish Arms against the Honour of this Learned Man. (i) Lipsii epistolas amici multi à me petierunt, quibus semper negavi quod nollem quidquam ex iis deprompsi unde si aliquid inureretur infamiæ. But (k) Lingelsheim was not so nice, since after he had made his own use of Lipsius's Letters, which he had written to Camerarius from Jena, he offered 'em to Goldast, to (l) be printed. Goldast had already played Lipsius a Trick, which I have mentioned in another Place (m).

It must be owned, as Baudius says, that the Laws of Generosity don't permit us to take advantage of what a Man may have written as a secret to those he corresponded with; the Heathens themselves were not Ignorant of this Truth; observe how Mark Anthony suffered for reading before the Senate some Letters he had recieved from Cicero. (n) At etiam literas, quas me sibi missise diceret, recitavit: homo & humanitatis expers, & vitæ communis ignarus. Quis enim unquam qui paulum modo honorum consuetudinem nosset, literas ad se ab amico missas, offensione aliqua interposita in medium protulit, palamque recitavit? Quid est aliud tollere è vita vitæ societatem, tollere amicorum colloquia absentium? Quam multa joca solent esse in Epistolis, quæ prolata si sint inepta videantur? quam multa seria neque tamen ullo modo divulganda? Sit hoc inhumanitatis tuæ. Most People think that this Law may be dispensed with in Favour of Religion; that is, when 'tis in our power to decry a Man who has written against our Religion, or who by his Revolt may shake the Faith of the Simple; and thus they make no scruple of publishing his very Billets, if Copies of 'em fall into their Hands. They would perhaps be more scrupulous, if they were themselves the Persons who had received them; for 'tis not so contrary to the Law we speak of, to publish a Letter another has received, as one that is written to ones self. See the Advertisement to The General Considerations upon Mr. Bruey's Book, Printed at Roterdam in 1684. There a Secret is divulged, which Mr. Bruey had written to a Friend. See also the News (o) from the Republick of Learning, in an Extract of the Dialogues of Photinus and Irenæus, where a Letter of Mr. Ranchin is inserted. The Civilian, Baudouin (p) reproches Calvin with having printed several Letters he had written to him.

(E) A very ill Woman.] ' (q) The good Man Lipsius, who had a naughty Wife, has said some where in his Epistles, That there is a Fatality in Marriage". See here what Patin heard him speak, Uxorem duxi, says Lipsius (r), nec magis animi quam amicorum impulsu. Sed, ut ille (s) ait, τὸ μοιρίδιον τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης ζωῆς, à Diis fataliter hoc decretum, & concorditer sane vixi mus, fructus tamen matrimonii, id est liberorum exortes. 'Twas believed by some that Lipsius changed his Religion purely from a Principle of Ambition, or the importunity of his Wife, who was wonderful Superstitious. Mr. Teissier (t) asserts this upon Scaliger's Credit, citing his 120*th* Letter of the 2d. Book. I my self have spoken with those, who have told odd Stories of the cross-grain'd Humour of this Woman. They had 'em from old Blades who had seen Lipsius.

Some Merchants of the Low-Countries told Florimond de Remond, in 1600, that Lipsius was Married. He wished him Joy of it, but Lipsius answered him, that the thoughts of being Congratulated at this time of Day made him Laugh, and that he had been a long time in the Noose. (u) At de conjugio, quod tu à Mercurialibus nostris audieras, quàm risum mihi movit? Ego, vir optime, non recens in eam nassam veni, sed annos jam viginti sex custodia hæc me habet. Liberos tamen nullos genui, nec hunc conjugii fructum aut lenimentum Deus dedit.

(F) He wrote a very bad Hand.] He confesses it himself, and thereby confutes those who pretended to have printed from the Original the Oration de duplici concordia, from the Original, I say, very fairly written. Ego belle & mundule scribo? says he, (w) Vellem, sed totam Europam testem habeo, & querelas quod autographa mea agre vel non legant. This is confirmed by a Passage of Gabriel Naudé: ' (x) This worthy Scholar of our ' Muret M. Antoninus Boncianus de Perouse once ' complain'd, That he could read but two or three ' of the first Lines of the Letters Lipsius wrote to ' him; all the rest was so horribly scraul'd. Nan- ' celius, said as much of Ramus's Writing.

(G) His Conversation and Aspect answer'd not.] Here's Aubertle Mire's Testimony in this Point. (y) Ingestu, cultu, sermone modicus fuit: adeo ut pleri-

(l) Goldast published some other Letters of Lipsius, under the Title of Lipsii Epistolæ.
(m) At the Article Goldast, Remark I.
(n) Cicero Philipp. 2.
(o) Month of December 1685. pag. 1337.
(p) Balduin. responsi. 2. ad Jo. Calvin p. 56.
(q) Patin Lettre 204. p. 505. du 2. Tome.
(r) Epist. 87. centur. 2. mixtell. p. m. 313.
(s) Here's what Aubert le Mire says in the Life of Lipsius p. 12. Sed, ut ille ait, sic erat in fatis & fatalem viro fœminaque tarum esse Euripides olim monuit, Lipsius idem didicit.
(t) Addit. aux Eloges t. 2. p. 383.
(u) Lipsius Epist. 72. centur ad Germanos & Gallos p. m. 705.
(w) Lipsius Epist. 68. centur. ad Germanos & Gallos, p. m. 701.
(x) Dialog. de Mascurat, p. 303.
(y) In vita Lipsi, pag. 32.

answered not the Idea, the World had conceived of him. His Friends (H) did not abandon him after his Death to the Censures of his Adversaries; but it was difficult in many things to make his Apology. I don't reckon in this Class, what Father Garasse [a] thought himself obliged to Censure. Lipsius found himself accused more than once of Plagiarism (H△) but never would acknowledge, that he was justly Accused. A Fit of sickness he got (I) at a Feast, has been reckoned one of the greatest Dangers, he was ever expos'd to. It's strange that a Latin Style (K) so bad as his, should found a new Sect in the Republick of Letters. See in the Margin [b] a Fault of Mr. Teissier.

LYSERUS (Polycarp) a Famous Divine of the Augsbourg Confession, was born at Winenden, in the Country of Wirtemberg, the 18th of March 1552. He was but two Years old when his Father died; however his Mother Marrying a second Husband, gave him a Father-in-Law, who took great care of his Education. The Progress he made in his Childhood, recommended him as worthy to be [illegible] College of Tubinge, at the charge of the Prince of Wirtemberg. He improved so well, that he was Ordained to the Ministry in 1573, and commenced Doctor of Divinity in 1576. His Reputation spread into all Parts, so that Augustus, Elector of Saxony, called him to be Minister of the Church of Wirtemberg in 1577. He had no sooner discovered his great Abilities in that Church, but he was added to the number of Divinity-Professors. He was one of the principal Directors for drawing up the Book of Concord, and vigorously

[a] See the Remark H.

[b] Lipsius after having lived to his 45th Year in the Protestant Religion, embraced the Catholick. Teissier addit. aux éloges, to. 2. pag. 385 edit. d'Utrecht 1696. He was 25 when he turned Protestant the first time.

[c] Pastor and Superintendent of Winenden.

que, quibus magnos viros per ambitionem æstimare mos est, viso aspectoque Lipsio quærerent famam, pauci interpretarentur (1). Constat certe exteros, quos ab ultimâ etiam Sarmatia, ejus videndi audiendique gratiâ (ut olim magni illius Livii) frequenter venisse scimus, cum Lipsium viderent, eumdem sæpè re quisivisse.

(H) His Friends did not abandon him . . . . to the Censures of his Adversaries.] The Jesuit Scribanius, as Lipsius (a) always expected, appeared in his Defence. See his Orthodoxa fidei controversa, his Defensio Lipsii postuma, &c. Claude Dausqueius, a Canon of Tournay, published in 1616, a Book, intituled, D. Mariæ Aspricollis ΘΑΥΜΑΤΟΡΓΟΥ scutum — alterum item J. Lipsii scutum: utrumque adversus Agricolæ Thracii satyricas petitiones. He means, that he answered a Book which George Thomson, a Scot, published at London in 1606, with this Title, Vindex veritatis adversus Justum Lipsium libri duo. Prior insanam ejus religionem politicam, fatuam nefariamque de Fato, scelerati ssimam de fraude doctrinam refellit. Posterior Ludovicum Sichemiensis, id est Idoli Aspricollis, & Deæ ligneæ miracula convellit. Utrumque Lipsium ab orco Gentilismum revocasse docet. See the Remark A, of the Article Lingelsheim. I speak not of those who have attacked or defended him upon the Subject of Learning. Vincent Contarini, Successor to Sigonius in the Chair of Padua, Criticiz'd him (b) Learnedly enough in 1609. circa frumentariam Romanorum largitionem & militare Romanorum stipendium.

Garasse who gave him two Bites, was sturdily repulsed. He pretended (c) that Lipsius's Doctrine about Fate is a meer Chimera without the least Foundation, and blamed him (d) for having erected Mausolean Monuments to his three little Dogs, the first whereof was called Mopsus, the second Sapphirus, the third Mopsulus, as is seen in the Book intituled Delitiæ Christiani orbis. I can't, continues he, approve all these Ridiculous and Prophane Inventions, and must declare so much in plain French, Tho' the Intention of Authors may be very different. Unus interitus est hominis & jumentorum, & æqua est utriusque conditio. The Censor of this Jesuit's Doctrine strenuously maintains (e) that the Destiny taught by Lipsius, is conformable to Thomas Aquinas's Notion. 'He re' lates, (f) That Aubert le Mire . . . . did not forget
' the Love that Lipsius had for Dogs, and even the ' Names of the three, which he cherished above
' the rest. . . . , He had caused 'em to be painted in a ' piece, with the Names, Age, Colour and Shag of ' each, with some Verses underneath, where he ' had no less ingeniously, than pleasantly hit upon
' Verses and Inscriptions, mentioned in the Book ' called Selectæ Christiani orbis delicia. Here's what
' Garasse takes for a Mausoleum and an Epitaph; so
' so that whoever has his Parrot painted, his Dog,
' his Cat, his Wife, &c. with an Inscription or
' Verse, erects a Mausoleum and Inscriptions to 'em.
' ——As for the Epitaph of Sapphirus alone,
' which is found in the said Book, Selectæ delicia,
' &c. 'Tis a Supposititious Piece, which even the ' Compiler, F. Swertius durst not place with the ' three Inscriptions, which are found under the ' Title Lovanensia, and which doubtless some one ' might easily have composed by Lipsius's Inscription
' on his Dog Sapphirus, to exercise his Wit, as plain-
' ly appears from the [illegible] Reading'. The Censor adds, that the pretended Prophaneness which Garasse finds in it, is a Chimera; he's pretty large upon this and shews the impertinence of the Reasonings [illegible] ded on the unus est interitus, &c. Mr. des Maizeaux, who thought this Criticiser of Garasse to be [illegible] Doctor of the Sorbonne, is mistaken; [illegible] given him the Name of Charlemagnier, and [illegible] the Title of Sorboniста.

[a] Samuel Garasse

(H△) Of Plagiarism, but never would acknowledge.] Muret and Peter Faber were his principal Accusers. The parts of this Process have been diligently collected by Mr. Thomasius, in his Treatise de plagio literario; and by Mr. Crenius in the 7th Part of his Animadversiones philologicæ & historicæ.

[b] Pinsonius.

(I) A Fit of sickness he got at a Feast.] Here's what Nicius Erythræus says: (b) Sapius in vita manifestum vitæ discrimen adiit; ter in puerili ætate — deinde lethali morbo pene sublatus est Dolæ, quæ Sequanorum est Academia, ubi quum luculenta oratione Victorem Geselinum, inter medicos allectum, laudasset ac statim deinde, opiparo convivio exceptus esset, in quo, ut mos est illarum regionum, convivæ invitare se plusculum solent, & in ipse largius merum invergare, repente, insolito horrore correptus, cum febri domum rediit. Lipsius having spoken an Oration at the Promotion of this Physician, [illegible] doubtless considered as one of the principal [illegible] of the Feast; they made him drink the [illegible] and had like to have killed him, the matter would not have been so strange had he been an Italian or Spaniard; for 'tis certain, that an Academical Banquet, or Treat upon taking a Degree in the Northern Universities, might be as dangerous to Men of those Countries, as a set Battle to a Colonel. But Lipsius was a Fleming; no matter for that, he was worsted; he was conquered in a Turnament of Bacchus by those of the Franche Comté. It had like to have cost him his Life. The most general Rules have their Exception.

(K) That a Latin Style as bad as his should found a new Sect.] (i) 'Lipsius has put Cicero out of Fashion.
' When he was in Request there were greater Masters
' in Eloquence, than there are at present'. 'Tis Scaliger says this; an evident proof, that the Sect of the Lipsians was very much increas'd. But here we ought to cry out, (k) O imitatores servum pecus, ut mihi sæpe Bilem, sæpe jocum vestrimovere tumultus! People must [illegible] upon ill models when they can prefer Lipsius [illegible] before that of Paulus Manutius, or Muretus. Style which proceeds by starts and bounds, and [illegible] of Points and Ellipses, before a Style smooth and flowing, and which unfolds every Thought. Lipsius is the less excuseable, because he changed from a good Taste to an ill one. He wrote well in his Youth; as appears by a Book (l) he Dedicated to Cardinal de [illegible], and by a Funeral Oration of the Duke of Sa[illegible]. He degenerated as he grew Old, His third Century of Epistles, said Scaliger (m), is good for nothing in the World, he has forgot to speak, I know not what Latin it is. A great Man in Human

[c] Censure de la doctrine curieuse p. m. 159.

[d] Ibid. pag. 162.

[e] Garasse doctr. curieuse pag. 343.

[f] Id. ib. pag. 904.

(i) Scaligerana voce Lipsius, p. m. 143.

(k) Horat. Epist. 19. lib. 1.

(l) His Variæ lectiones l. an. 1566.

(m) In Scaligeranis ubi supra

[illegible] vigorously exercised (A) the Charge of a Missionary, to get it Signed by all who were in Imploys. He assisted at all the Assemblies which were held about this Book, or about the Re-union of the Calvinists and Lutherans, Negotiated by the Agents of the King of [illegible] Christian, Elector of Saxony, who succeeded to the Dignity of his Father, but not [illegible] rigid Lutheranism, was over-joy'd at Lyserus's (B) Communicating to him some [illegible] ntagious Conditions offered him at Brunswick. He dismissed him with all his [illegible] t, but to the great Regret of his Subjects. Lyserus was at first only Coadjutor a[illegible]nswick, but was afterwards Intendant. He was recalled to Wittemberg, a[illegible]ch [illegible]th of Christian; and was made Minister at the Court of Dresden in 1594. [illegible]ay'd there all the rest of his Life, and imploy'd his time not only in Functions [illegible] the Ministry, but also in the Education of the young Princes, and in writing (C) of Books. He died the 22d. of February 1601, a Father of (D) thirteen Children, and Grand-Father to three Grandsons and one Grandaughter. His Will was an Evidence of his [illegible]ity to the Poor, and to (E) necessitous Students. He had had man Literature thought he did his Father, who was a Famous Divine, some Honour, by shewing he expressed a Contempt for the Style which Lipsius had brought in Fashion, (a) Imprimis vero fatid ebat scribendi illam novam formam quam magnus cæteroquin vir Justus Lipsius sæculo nostro obstruxit, quamque servum pecus imitatores plurimi arripuerunt, quamvis impari felicitate. He rel[illegible] Judgment which James Pontanus and Ma[illegible]rus made of the same Style, (b) Nos Justi Li[illegible]ellens ingenium, summamque doctrinam suspe[illegible]us, & prædicamus, nec de studiis nostris quemquam melius meritum statuimus. Ab ejus autem idiotismo, & excogitata hæresi in [illegible]ndo, pluribus, & opinor justis de causis refu[illegible] & horremus. Maveum Velserum ipsi Lipsio [illegible]m præsentem meis auribus audivi: malle [illegible]en[illegible]retum, quam Lipsium posse e[illegible]. A[illegible]rujus probabat ingenium, & [illegible]m summopere, ejus novitiam, & plus æquo quæsitam & affectatam dictionem non probabat. He afterwards shews how Scaliger being ready to give up the Ghost, declared his abhorrence of that affectedness in Style. He must needs take it much to Heart, since in that Condition, in which his Attention ought to have been fixed on Objects infinitely more important, he would let the Company know how much it troubled him. (c) 'Jam in agone mortis 'constitutus (ut refert Clarissimus Daniel Heynsius, '(in Epistola ad Isaacum Casaubonum) hoc exanimis novi 'stili admodum execratus est. Sic enim de eo scribit 'Heynsius: Justi Lipsii affectionem in stilo vehementer fastidire solebat: in iis præsertim, quæ senex scripsisset, & nonnunquam literas ejus cum indignatione legebat, eodem modo te quoque judicare, certo scio'. Henry Stephens published a Book of 560 Pages (d) against Lipsius's Latin; but this Book is so full of Digressions [illegible] the Author seldom comes to his Point. How[illegible] gives us to understand, That he extremely [illegible]ved Lipsius's Style. See in a Book (e) of Ba[illegible] the Viri magni judicium de imitatione Lipsiana latinitatis: As also the Words of Grotius (f). There's no fear that such an Affectation in French would ever make a Sect, tho' the [illegible]ident de Nevion (g) should return into the [illegible]ld.

[illegible] Famous Divine.

(A) He vigorously exercis'd the charge of a Missionary.] I make use of this Term on account of the Progresses he was obliged to take from Town to Town, to exact Subscriptions, and degrade the Nonconformists. See the Remark C of the Article Hunnius, and consider these words of a German Divine: (b) Inciderant Ministerii ipsius Wittebergensis primitiæ in illud ipsum tempus, quo ingenti cura maximisque impensis Electoris Saxon. AUGUSTI Liber Christiana Concordiæ Collectus, conscriptus & plurimarum Ecclesiarum calculo approbatus fuerat. In hoc ergo opere feliciter promovendo partes minimè postremas sustinuit [illegible]carpus, dum de mandato ac voluntate Ele[illegible]a cum reliquis ad hanc rem deputatis Nob[illegible] & Theologis, non Witteberga modo, sed & Torg[illegible] Lipsia, Misena & alibi subscriptiones ab illis exposcere necesse habuit, qui publicis docendi muneribus vel in Ecclesiis vel in Scholis tum erant præfecti. Tanto autem tamque arduo labore superato, &c.

(B) Lyserus's communicating to him the [illegible] gious Condition.] The accepting 'em was the least of his Thoughts, but he believed that the Proposal might gain him the Advantage of being retained with useful Testimonies of the high Esteem that was had for him. How astonished must Lyserus be when he heard the Elector's Answer; for there was no way left of handsomely refusing the Gentlemen of Brunswick: He was under a necessity of accepting their Offer. This was a Thunder-Stroak to the Zealots; then Remonstrances to the Court were all in vain. See here the words of Melchior Adam: (i) Cum aliud agens Lyserus, conditionis opima occasionem apud Brunsuicenses sibi obtingere, datis ad aulam literis, ostendisset: responsum planè [illegible] tulit: ut frueretur, quam sibi oblatam putaret, felicitate: ecclesiæ Wittembergensi de alio pastore prospectum iri [illegible]e responso ordines consternari non literis modo, sed legatis ad aulam Electoralem missis, causas planè [illegible]nas, exposuerunt, ob quas de retinendo Lysero [illegible] sollicita: verum irrito plane conatu.

(C) And in writing of Books.] The chief of 'em are, Historia passionis Dominicæ secundum IV. Evangelia, at Leipsic 1605. in Quarto. Historia resurrectionis & adscensionis Dominicæ, & missionis Spiritus sancti homiliis aliquot explicata, at Leipsic 1610. in Quarto. Schola Babylonica ex cap. I. Danielis, quam subsequuntur Colossus Babylonicus, Fornax Babylonica, Cedrus Babylonica, Epulum Babylonicum & [illegible]ula Persica. Commentariorum in Genesim tomi VI. the 1st upon Adam; the 2d upon Noah; the 3d upon Abraham; the 4th upon Isaac; the 5th upon Jacob; the 6th upon Joseph. Harmoniæ Evangelicæ, a Martino Chemnitio inchoatæ, continuatio, seu vitæ Jesu Christi secundum quatuor Evangelistas expositæ libri tres. I have elsewhere observed (k) that he published a Book of Hisenmullerus. This occasioned a Dispute betwixt him and the Jesuit James Gretser, which he broke off after the second reply (l); he saw no end of it, if he would have gone on with his Answers; he therefore chose to sound a Retreat. But as to the Battle between him and a Swisse Minister, (m) who taught that God had elected all Men to eternal Life, 'twas much more obstinate; for it lasted 17 Years. Cum isto, inquam, totis annis septendecim pugnavit (n). I pass over several Books which our Lyserus published in High-Dutch (o).

(D) A Father of thirteen Children.] Amongst others a Polycarp and a William, who lived to enjoy several Ecclesiastical, and Academical Imploys, and published many Books. Polycarp Lyserus, born at Wittemberg the 20th of November 1586. was Minister and Professor at Leipsic, &c. He died the 15th of January 1633, leaving several Children. You'll find the Catalogue of his Books in the 452, and 453, Pages of Paul Freher's Theatre. William Lyserus his Brother, was born at Dresden the 26th of October 1592. He was Professor of Divinity at Wittemberg, &c. and died the 8th of February 1649, leaving several Children of both Sexes. In the 542, and 543, Pages of of the same Theater, you'll find the Catalogue of his Books. Note that his Systema Theatico-Exegeticum was not printed till 1699. In the Leipsic Journal of October, the same Year, at the 473, and 474, Page, you'll find the Names and Qualities of some Persons of this Family.

(E) His Charity to the poor and to necessitous Students.] These are Melchior Adam's Words: (p) Testamento cavit, ut quotannis in die Polycarpi & Elisabethæ,

(a) Philippus Pareus in vita Davidis Parei, p. m. 18.

(b) Jacob. Pontanus è Soc. Jesu Variarum rerum quæst. 31. apud Philippum Pareum ib. p. 19.

(c) Philip. Pareus, ibid.

(d) De Lipsii latinitate (ut ipsimet Antiquarii Antiquarium Lipsi[illegible] [illegible]ution [illegible]. m. 228.

(f) Sua quadam [illegible] [illegible]fficiens (Lipsius) nam cum floridum ipsiæ profluens natura haud abnegaret, alterum [illegible]uit di[illegible] ge[illegible], concisum quidem nec sine festivitate sed vere [illegible] quod cum imitarentur quibus ingenii judicioque non idem fuit ad corruptissima quæque devenitum est. Grot. hist. l. 5. p. m. 378.

(g) His Style was Laconick, Sententious and unconnected.

(b) Spizelius in Templo honoris reserato, pag. 12.

(i) Melch. Adam. in vitis Theolog. p. See also Spizelius ubi supra pag. 13.

(k) In the Article Jarrige.

(l) Cum [illegible]sura Ingolstadiensi Jacobo Gretsero, ob publicatam historiam Hasenmullerianam, publicum ei intercessit certamen: in quo post unam atque alteram velitationem illud Poëtæ usurpandum sibi statui: Cede repugnanti: cedendo victor abibis. Melch. Adam. ubi supra, pag. 802.

(m) Samuel Huberus. See the Article Hunnius, Remark D

(n) Melch. Adam. ib.

(o) Spizelius gives the list of 'em. p. 16.

(p) Melch. Adam ubi supra, p. 802.

had a great many Quarrels (F) to maintain *.

LYSERUS (John) Author of several Writings about Polygamy. See the News from the Republick of Learning β, and add to it what follows. He had an elder Brother, Superintendent of the Church of Magdeburg. He was reduced to extream Poverty at Amsterdam, when he printed his last Book γ, for which the Bookseller gave him but Twenty Ducatoons; and in his last Sickness was lodged in a Garret δ just joyning to the Roof. This I have from one of his Friends, who frequently visited him.

LIZET (Peter) first President in the Parliament of Paris. I mention him, only to illustrate some Things which Mr. Moreri has not sufficiently enlarged upon. They relate to (A) Peter Lizet's Disgrace, and to his Books (B) of Controversie. He died the 7th. of June 1554, at Seventy Two Years of Age. Consult this Epitaph at

* Taken from his Life, composed by Melch. Adam, who has taken it almost all out of his Funeral Oration, spoken by Leo Hutter.

β In April 1685. art. 1. p. 370. and the following. See also the Article Lamech, Remark A.

γ 'Twas printed in 1682. under the Title of Polygamia triumphatrix, in 4to.

δ Quem tegula sola tuetur
A pluvia, molles ubi reddunt ova columbæ. Juvenal. Sat. 3. v. 201.

(a) He had just said, Cum singulari quodam amoris affectu Wittembergam & tenioris cum primis fortunæ studiosos, quales plerumque esse solent studiis Theologicis qui se mancipârunt, prosequeretur; testamento cavit, &c.

(b) In the Remark C.

(c) Spizelius ubi supra, pag. 12.

(d) Neque vero in hac quantumvis splendida Martini exultantis, fallacium fratrum venenatos morsus effugere potuit. Id. pag. 14.

bethæ, certa quædam pecuniæ summa impenderentur, in lautiorem victum eorum, qui communi mensa uterentur. This Author tells us a thing here (a), which perhaps needs some Reformation. The Ministers would be more respected in Germany than they are, if the Students in Divinity were not generally of such a Condition as he speaks of.

(F) He had had a great many Quarrels to maintain.] Refer hither what I have said above (b) and add to it another thing not mentioned by Melchior Adam. There was a Poet called John Major, who wrote Verses against the Methods taken on occasion of signing the Formulary, and which particularly libelled the Divines of Wittemberg. Lyserus took this John Major to task with so much Vigor, that he never let him rest till he got him expelled the University. He made himself many Enemies by this Victory; and in his Turn fell under their Assaults, losing all the Preferments he had at Wittemberg. So true it is, that on some Occasions, it's better be contented with a moderate Advantage over an Adversary, than drive Things to Extremities. But where are those who can moderate themselves, when they have so prosperous a Gale, and the Governing Faction permits 'em to revenge themselves? (c) Sub initium anni 86, supra sesquimillesimum turbas Collegio Theologico Wittebergensi dare cæpi Joannes Major Poeta, homo desperatæ levitatis, qui editis in publicum carminibus, Religionis sinceritatem, & bonorum Virorum Theologorum cum primis famam vellicare haud dubitaverat, cujus improbis conatibus, cum Polycarpus tum publicè tum privatim magno spiritu se opposuisset, tandemque effecisset, ut Poeta Wittebergensi Academiis sit proscriptus; dicinon potest quos quantosque crabrones tunc excitaveris tam in Aula quam in Academia, quantamque invidiam sibi apud multos attraxerit; qua postea non sine gravi Ecclesiæ scandalo in nervum ita erupit, ut Polycarpus tota Ecclesia & Academia reclamante functione suo exciderit. His Retirement (d) did not secure him from Calumny. If we had a full Account of this matter, we should find perhaps that our Lyserus was partly in the wrong.

(A) Peter Lizet's Disgrace.] It's spoken of in Moreri's Dictionary, in such a manner, as make some think, that the Dutchess de Valentinois, and the Cardinal de Lorrain were the Promoters of it as two different Causes. This is misleading the Reader: for the Cardinal and Dutchess ought to be considered in this Point, but as one sole Cause. The Cardinal (e) interested the Ambition and Avarice of this Lady, in the Design he had formed of discharging those from Places who did not please him; and afterwards picked a sham Quarrel with Peter Lizet, the Consequences of which were, that this first President quitted his Place. The Guises were mad at him, because he opposed the giving them the Title of Prince in Parliament (f); and besides, the Cardinal of Lorrain would have a Man in that Post, who should refuse him nothing. The Quarrel he picked with Lizet was this, he accused him of having spoken insolently in his Majesty's Council; the Foundation of the Accusation was, that Lizet would not give his Vote standing, and uncovered in a Council where the Cardinal presided. He boldly declared, that he saw no Person present who deserved such a Submission from him. But he did not maintain the first Resolution; he quitted his Post, like a Poltron, and even wanting there himself at the Cardinal's Feet, seeking forth his Poverty, and supplicating his Compassion. That Poverty was to his Glory, and if he had not tarnished it by so mean a Submission, he might be looked on as one of those noble Patriots, who appeared at the Head of the first Parliament of Paris. He was not Master of a Foot of Land; after he had been Twenty Years first President; The very House where he lived was not his own. A meer Compassion for his Poverty, procured him the Abbey of St. Victor, by the Cession (h) of Lewis de Lorrain, Cardinal de Guise. Father du Breul citing Thuanus, relates the thing, as if all this were Transacted the same Day, and at the same sitting; but Thuanus says no such thing, but intimates the contrary. However let's see down Father du Breul's Words. Monsieur, 'the President James de Thou ——— elegantly 'describes the Cause of this Judge's quitting his 'Place of first President, and accepting the Abbey 'of St. Victor, whether he asked it, or whether 'it was offered him (for he could not see displaced, 'except for a Crime punishable with Death.) He, 'says he, being called to the Privy-Council '(where the Cardinal de Lorrain presided with an 'Authority equal to that of a Viceroy) and being 'required to speak his Opinion frankly, answered, 'I see no Body by in this Place, before whom I ought to give my Opinion standing, and uncovered. 'At which the said Cardinal finding himself touch'ed, proceeded to ill Language, calling him arro'gant, and threatning him with the King's Dis'pleasure. Which so shook this good old Man of 'Sixty Eight Years of Age, and naturally very 'timorous, that he did not persevere in his resolute 'Answer, but on the contrary, threw himself at 'the Cardinal's Feet, and beg'd his Pardon, Ex viro congressu primo, mulier posteriore factus. He 'did not however fail to assert his Integrity and 'Innocence, and to protest, that in the Three Years 'he had been Counsellor in Parliament, Twelve 'Years Advocate to the King, and Twenty Years 'first President, he had not acquired as much Land 'as his Feet stood upon; and that he rented his 'very House of the Abbot of St. John des Vignes 'de Soissons, situate at Paris, in St. James's-Street, 'near St. Yves's Church. Which House retained 'the Name of the said Abbey, till the time of the 'Alienations of the Estates of the Church, when 'Monsieur James Legier, Treasurer to Monseigneur 'Cardinal Charles de Bourbon the Elder, purchased 'it (i). Here are several Things, which are not to be found in Thuanus, some of which are undoubtedly true; for 'tis certain that Lizet was Counsellor in the Parliament of Paris Three Years, &c. His Epitaph declares it. (k) Qui olim ob heroicas animi sui dotes, vir singulari memoria, & summa juris prudentia in supremum Parisiensis centuriæ Senatum à Rege Ludovico XII. adscitus, Senatoris munere triennio functus est. Deinde Triumviratu Regii Advocati munus XII. annis Duce Francisco I. feliciter obivit. Ac demum ab sua vita integritatem, in summum Curiæ Magistratum evectus, Justitiæ habenas XX. annorum curriculo ita moderatus est, ut qui Religiosæ domus Abbas, volente Henrico secundo, fieret, dignus omnium calculo videretur, By this Epitaph, Ms. Moreri is convicted of Two Falsehoods, contained in these Words, He was made one of the King's Council in (l) 1515. and Two Years after was honoured with the Employ of the King's Attorney-General.

(B) His Books of Controversie.] Mr. Moreri's Indulgence could not stand it out any longer against the decisive Sentence of Thuanus; he has acknowledged, that these Books were unworthy of Peter Lizet's

(g) Lizetus qui se initio virum præbuerat, in constantiæ minime perseverasvir, verum se ad Lotaringi pedes humiliter abjecit, & iguavo metu perculsus ... Thuan. ib. ... Breul, Antiquitez de Paris, pag. 323. of the Edition 1639. in 4to.

(i) Ll. ib. pag. 322.

(k) Id. ib.

(l) Louis XII. died the 1st. of January 1514. computing the Years from the Month of January.

(e) Thuanus, Hist. lib. 6. pag. 122. ad ann. 1550. (f) See the Article Guise.

at the 322d. Page of the Antiquities of Paris. He took [a] Prieſt's Orders in the Year 1553. I have ſpoken of him in the Remark E, of the Article Beda, on Occaſion of the Divorce of the Queen of England. Conſult the Notes upon Sanci's Catholick Confeſſion, at the 424th. Page of the Edition of 1699, and the 185th. and 507th. Pages of Henry Stephens's Apology for Herodotus, where he ſpeaks very ill of this Preſident's Morals.

LYSIMACHUS, Tutor to Alexander. I ſhould have ſaid nothing of this Perſon, if Amiot (Z) had faithfully Tranſlated Plutarch's Account of him.

LISMANINUS (Francis) a Native of Corſica, Doctor of Divinity, and a famous Controverſer, entered into the Proteſtant Church, but did not ſtop where he ought to have done, for he drove on to Arianiſm. This was done by Degrees. He was Confeſſor

[a] Du Breul Antiq. de Paris, pag. m. 322. In the Edition of Antwerp. 1608.

[b] Biblioth. Antitrinitariorum, pag. 34.

(a) Thuanus ubi ſupra.

(b) Du Breul ubi ſupra, pag. 323.

(c) He ſhould have ſaid, Præceptionibus.

(d) You find in the Bibliotheque of Du Verdier Vau-Privas, pag. 1018. Petri Lizetii [illegible] in ſupremo regio Francorum Conſi[illegible] mendatarii S. Victoris, adverſus Pſeudo-evangelicam hæreſim libri ſeu commentarii [illegible] duo, excuſi voluminibus. Lutetiæ 4. apud Pon[illegible]

(e) This is copied from the Supplementum Epitomes Bibliothecæ Geſnerianæ, autore Antonio Verderio, pag. 44.

(f) Arnauld, preface de la l'Ecriture Sainte. This is his 3d. Tome of his new Defences of Mons.

Lizet's Reputation. Let's ſee what Thuanus ſays of 'em, (a) In quo (Sanct[illegible] cœnobio) reliquum ætatis exegit Petrus Lizetius, homo minime priori vitæ & famæ reſpondente. Cum litterarum ſacrarum homo rudis, Theologicis libris in illo otio ſcriptis ſe deridendum propinavit; quibus contrario ſcripto artificioſe ridiculo ſub Benedicti Paſſavantii nomine à Theodoro Beza, ut creditur, reſponſum eſt. Father du Breul pretends, that Peter Lizet wrote part of theſe Books of Controverſie before his Retreat to St. Victor's. The ſaid Lizet, ſays he (b) being ſtill the King's Attorney, writ a Book, in which he demonſtrates, that the Bible ought not to be tranſlated into French. And while he was Preſident, he writ Six Books, De Mobilibus Eccleſiæ perceptionibus (c). Afterwards he compoſed Three Books: the 1ſt. concerning Auricular Confeſſion, the 2d. that a Monaſtick Life is not repugnant to the Liberty of the Goſpel. The 3d. is intituled: concerning the Blindneſs of our Age. If Father du Breul be not miſtaken, Thuanus is guilty of a conſiderable Fault. 'Tis certain, that all theſe Five Books which the Author gives the Titles of, were publiſhed together in two Volumes, after Lizet had retired to the Abbey of St. Victor; for there was an Edition of 'em at Paris, in 1551, and another at Lyons, in 1552. The Oxford Catalogue makes mention of the latter in theſe Words, De S. Scripturis in linguas vulgares non vertendis per modum dialogi. De auriculari confeſſione. De monaſtico inſtituto. De hujus ſæculi cæcitatione & circumventione. De mobilibus Eccleſiæ præceptionibus. What I am going to Copy, will increaſe the Difficulties. (e) Petri Lizetii Juriſconſulti, dum ſequentem componeret librum in ſupremo Francorum conſiſtorio regii Advocati, & poſtea Abbatis commendatarii Sancti Victoris, ſummique Senatus Pariſienſis Protopræſidis, de mobilibus Eccleſiæ præceptionibus tractatus ſex libros continens. Ejuſdem de ſacris utriuſque inſtrumenti libris in vulgare eloquium minime vertendis, rudique plebi haudquaquam invulgandis, Dialogus inter Pantarchum & Neoterum. Ejuſdem de auriculari confeſſione, lib. 1. De monaſtico inſtituto, lib. 1. De hujuſce ſæculi cæcitate ac circumventione dialogus inter ſpiritualem & mundanum. Quæ omnia excudit Lugduni, in 4. Sebaſtianus Gryphius, 1552. Soon after theſe Books came out, Beza, who was then a young Man, took a Fancy to turn 'em into ridicule, by a very humourous Book, in which he ſuppoſes, that Magiſter Benedictus Paſſavantius, being ſent to Geneva, by Peter Lizet, to learn what was ſaid of his Books, gives an account of his Commiſſion. This Piece ought to be placed amongſt the Juvenilia Theodori Bezæ. See the new Letters againſt Mr. Maimbourg's Calviniſm, pag. 144. and the Notes upon Sanci's Catholick Confeſſion, pag. 424. of the Edition of the Year 1699.

I hope it will not be thought amiſs to produce here Mr. Arnauld's Judgment upon Peter Lizet's Work concerning the Tranſlating the Scripture into the Vulgar Tongue. There is but one Point, ſays he (f), [illegible] they can, it may be, with any Foundation [illegible], that I have unjuſtly treated Mr. Mallet [illegible] which is, that I may have mentioned him in ſome Places, as if he was the firſt Author of a great many Impertinencies, which I have ſince diſcovered he might have taken from a pitiful Book, which I had not then ſeen. But I was willing to give 'em an Example of what a Man ought to do when he has committed a Fault. I therefore acknowledge, that I was [illegible] to look upon Mr. Mallet as the firſt Author of [illegible] the Extravagancies, his Book is full of. [illegible] But I deed are his own, and theſe are the groſſeſt. But I have diſcovered by the Book I juſt now hinted at, that he often has only blindly followed Five or Six Authors of the laſt Age, whoſe Works it's the ſcandal of ours to preſerve, ſo unworthy are they of the Care that has been taken to reſcue 'em from Oblivion, in which ſome of our Anceſtors, wiſer than we, had ſuffered 'em to be buried. Mr. Arnauld there ſpeaks of a certain Collection of ſeveral Tracts, the firſt whereof is Peter Lizet's. He explains this in another Book, in which he tells us (g) that the Aſſembly of the Clergy of France, made an Order in the Year 1650, at the Requeſt of Mr. d'Attichi, Biſhop of Autun——to print at the Expence of the Clergy, a Collection of Authors of the laſt Age, who have condemned the Verſions into the vulgar Tongue, both of the Scripture and Divine Offices. And in effect, adds he, this Book was printed with this ſcandalous Title. Collectio quorundam gravium authorum, qui ex profeſſo, vel ex occaſione ſacræ Scripturæ, aut divinor officiorum, in vulgarem linguam translationes damnarunt. And with this running Title, Collectio autorum verſiones vulgares damnantium. It's a Medley of the moſt impertinent Authors, that have written upon this Subject, mingled with ſome good Ones, but who ſay nothing of what the Title of this Collection imports, or who ſay quite the contrary. 'Tis a Book of Preſident Lizet's which wholly turns upon this fooliſh Notion, that when the Bible was tranſlated into Latin, in the beginning of the Church, there were two ſorts of Latin, one conformable to the Rules of Grammar, which was only underſtood by the learned, and the other not tied to thoſe Rules, which was the only one the People underſtood, and that the Latin Verſion of Scripture having been made in this firſt ſort of Latin, was not properly a Verſion into the vulgar Tongue; which this Preſident become an Abbot, extends to all other Languages. Mr. Simon had nothing to ſay (h) in Defence of this bad Writer.

The Epitomy of Geſner makes mention of two other Books of Peter Lizet: one De autoritate Eccleſiæ, & poteſtate Papæ; the other De Hæreticis, & eorum pœnis. After his Death (i) was printed his Treatiſe of the Method of proceeding, both in the Inſtitution and Deciſion of Criminal and Civil Cauſes, together with the Form and manner of taking Informations in the ſaid Civil and Criminal Cauſes. La Croix du Maine, who tells me this, did not know that Lizet died in 1554. He makes him Flouriſh in 1557.

(Z) If Amiot had well tranſlated.] Theſe are his Words: 'Now there were about Alexander, 'as we may ſuppoſe, ſeveral Perſons appointed to 'inſtruct and educate him, as Governours, Cham-'berlains, Maſters, and Tutors. Leonidas was 'the Perſon who had the Superintendence of all the 'reſt, a Man of an auſtere Temper, and related to 'Queen Olympias; but as for his part, he hated 'the Name of Maſter, or Præceptor; although it 'be a fine and honourable Employ, for which Rea-'ſon they called him Alexander's Governour and 'Conductor, out of regard to the Dignity of his 'Perſon, and his Relation to the Prince; but he 'that had the Place and Title of Maſter, was one 'Lyſimachus, a Native of the Country of Acarnia '(d), who had nothing Good or Genteel in him, 'yet becauſe he was call'd Phœnix; and Alexander, 'Achilles; and Philip, Peleus, he held the Second 'Place after the Governour. The Fault of this Verſion conſiſts in this: Amiot declares, that Lyſimachus held the ſecond Place, becauſe he was called Achilles, and Alexander was called Achilles, and Phœnix, and called Peleus. This is abſurd; Plutarch had too much Senſe to aſſign ſuch Reaſons. But his meaning is this; he ſays, that Lyſimachus, a Man otherwiſe void of Politeneſs, made himſelf agreeable

(g) Idem Defenſe des verſions, contre la ſentence de l'Official de Paris du 10. Avril, 1688. pag. 160.

(h) See his new Obſervations of the New Teſtament. (i) At Lyons in 1567. by the Name of Loys le Clerc, a Parisian. La Croix du Maine, Pag. 403. Du Verdier Vau-Privas does not ſpeak of this Edition, but of that of Paris 1555. The Catalogue of Tuanus, 1. part. p. 248. mentions the Edition of Lyons, 1577. in 12. The Catalogue of Oxford takes Notice only of the Edition of Paris, 1584. in 8 and aſcribes this Book to M. P. Liſlet, as to an Author different from Petrus Lizetius. This is a Fault.

Confessor [a] to Bonna Sforza, Queen of Poland, and her Preacher in the Italian Tongue, (A), &c. When John Tricesius, a Man of Learning and Quality, Clandestinely sow'd the Seeds of the Reformation at Cracow. Lismanin much shaken by the reading of a Book, the Queen had given him [γ], was confirmed in his Mistrusts of the Church of Rome [δ] by some Conferences with John Tricesius, who besides lent him the Reformers Books. He soon became suspected of Heresy; but managed it so Artfully, that the Bishop of Cracow could never convict him of having Luther's and Calvin's Books. He avoided the Snares, which this Prelate laid for him at Rome. Lismanin [ε] went thither in 1550 to Congratulate the new Pope Julius III. from Queen Bonna. The Bishop wrote to Rome that he was a conceal'd Heretick, and that he ought to be cast into Prison, and hindered from ever returning into Poland. This advice came a little too late; Lismanin was already returned to the Queen his Mistress. When he was arrived at Warsaw, where she resided, he received Letters from Sigismond Augustus, King of Poland, her Son, charging him to indeavour to pacify her, for she was much provok'd at this Prince's Marrying (B) Barba Radzivil. He made three Journeys to bring about a (C) Peace between the two Queens; the King was so satisfied with him, that he promised him the first Bishoprick that shou'd be vacant. During these Transactions Lelius Socinus, who came into Poland in 1551, [ζ] advised Lismanin to throw off his Monks Habit, and retire into the Reformed Countries, and particularly into Switzerland. Lismanin would have followed this Advice, but that he found in the King's Mind, a strong disposition to a Reformation. He cultivated these Dispositions, and received a Commission (D) from him to Travel [η] in order to acquire (e) Literas à Rege . . . accepit, quibus ei mandavit ut Reginæ consorti suæ conciliaret favorem matris suæ Reginæ Bonnæ, cui . . . nuptiis illis filii Regis erat ingratus, & animum exasperarant satis naturâ malignum Nannonem, temere in eam quispiam lusit: Qui tibi cunque Bonnæ sacris dum tingeris undis Imposuit nomen, omnibus imposuit. Id. ibid. pag. 36.

(f) Id. ib. pag. 37.

(g) Hilar. de Coste, Eloges des Dames illustres, Tome I. pag. 201.

(h) Hilar. de Coste ib. p. 204.

[a] Ibid.
[β] Historia Reformat. Polonicæ pag. 18.
[γ] Ibid. pag. 23.
[δ] Ex lectione concionum Bernardini Ochini Itali . . . à Regina Bonnæ sibi oblatarum, totam religionem Romanam in suspicionem traxerat.
[ε] Ibid.
[ζ] Ibid. pag. 21.
[η] Ibid. pag. 24.
[θ] Historia Reformat. Polonicæ pag. 40.
[ι] Ibid. Pag. 41.

agreeable by the new Names with which he adorned his Imploy, and which he borrowed from Homer. The King, said he, is Peleus, the Prince his Son is Achilles, and I am Phœnix. This was likely enough to tickle Alexander, and pleased King Philip: This was awakening in him great and sublime Ideas. This Invention made him be loved, and gave him the first place after Leonidus in the young Princes Family. I have in another place (a) touched upon the Distinction of a Governour, and Tutour; you'll find it plainly enough in Plutarch's words, which I must Copy, that my Readers may perceive Amiot's Error. (b) Ἀνανίδης . . . . . μὲν ἦν τοῦτον τὸ τῆς παιδαγωγίας ὄνομα, καλὸν ἔργον ἐχόντως ἡ λαμπρὸν, ὑπὸ δὲ τῶν ἄλλων, διὰ τὸ ἀξίωμα τῆς τῶν οἰκετῶν τροφῆς Ἀλεξάνδρῳ τῷ παιδαγωγῷ τῆς τροπηγίας ὑπονοεῖσθαι· ἦν Λυσίμαχος, τῷ γένει Ἀκαρνὰν, ἄλλο μὲν οὐδὲν ἔχων ἄξιον, ὅτι δ' ἐαυτὸν μὲν παιδαγωγὸν Φοίνικα, τὸν δὲ Ἀλέξανδρον, Ἀχιλλέα, ὀνομάζειν ἐβούλετο, τῷ δυντέρᾳ τῆς χάριν, Leonidas . . . padagogi nomen cum honesto & speciosо conjunctum officio repudiabat, atque ab aliis dignitatis & necessitudinis causa nutritius Alexandri & rector vocabatur: ille qui speciem padagogi & vocabulum sumebat Lysimachus, natione Acarnan, urbanitate nulla præditus erat alia, sed, quòd Phœnicen nominaret se, Alexandrum, Achillem, & Philippum Peleа, ideo gratus erat, & secundum locum tenebat.

(A) And her Preacher in the Italian Tongue, &c.] To explain this Etcetera, I shall set down the List of all Lismanin's Titles: (c) Theologiæ Doctor, monachus Franciscanus. Circiter anno 1546. jam erat Bonæ Reginæ (matri Sigismundi Augusti Regis) a concionibus Italicis & confessionibus sacris: nec non Franciscanorum seu Minoritarum in Polonia Provincialis, & omnium cœnobiorum monialium regulæ Claræ Ephorus, qui vulgò Commissarius dicitur: atque Parochius Choviensis.

(B) Provoked at this Princes Marrying Barba Radzivil.] The Author I cite, observes, That they who began the Work of Reformation in Poland, made a strange false step; they opposed this Marriage of Sigismond, whilst the Bishops, their greatest Persecutors, gave their Consent to it. By opposing the Princes Inclinations, and his darling Passion, they gave him a dislike of the Reformation, while they who applauded his Marriage won his Heart, and qualify'd themselves for obtaining of him an Absolute Liberty of persecuting the Lutherans: (d) Impediebat veritatis in Regio corde progressum industria & vigilantia astutiaque Pontificum Romanorum, latera Regia semper claudentium, aures ejus occupantium, insignia Regni & cor Regis, custodiam legum tenentium, oracula Regia edentium . . . . & quod tum ferè maxime tempori & rebus eorum accommodum erat, matrimonium Regium cum Barbara Radzivilia, Stanislai Gaofoldi Palatini Trocensis relicta vidua, femina ad invidiam pulcherrimâ initum, approbantium & defendentium. Nam cum multi etiam ex illis qui veritati & reformationi favere cœperant, connubium illud, utpote cum privata & privatim, inconsulto Senatu, contractum destruerent, è contra Maciejovius ille, tum Andreæ Lebridovius . . . Episcopi, aliique Primores Pontificii illud adstruerent, factum est, ut Rex aversum ab illis animum ac favorem in hos converterit . . . Itaque boni illi Viri, Veritatis fautores graviter in eo, quod in hoc negotio Regi tanto conatu se opposuerint, erraverant: ofores verò ejus & adversarii eorum contraria parti se applicantes Regis gratiam in se derivarunt. Adeò & hic verum apparuit illud Christi oraculum: filios tenebrarum prudentiores esse in generatione suâ quàm filios lucis. If it was not so Advantagious, 'twas at least more glorious to the Reformers of Poland to have been so Unpolitick.

(C) He made three Journeys to bring about a Peace between the two Queens.] His Negotiation was more Honourable than Successful, for if it pleased the King, it highly displeased the Queen Mother, who was nothing less than what her Name (e) signified. Quo officio postquam suscepto anno 1551. m. Januar. Febr. & Martio Cracoviam tribus itineribus majori cum Regis quam Reginæ Bonæ gratia (publicè enim in templo arcis, & in magna Aula frequentia, imprudens tamen, Rege scil. id procurante, Legationem conciliationis Reginarum socrûs & nurûs peregit) perfunctus est, Rex ab eo tempore cum earum sibi habuit (f). 'A Panegyrist of Bonna Sforza ob 'serves that She (g) entered into the Interests of 'the Lords and Palatines of Poland, who had not 'approved this Marriage, refusing to see either the 'King her Son, or his Wife, who wore the Polish 'Crown but a little while, dying suddenly at Cra'cow, not without Suspicion of Poyson ... By the 'Death of Queen Barba, the Dissentions and 'Troubles of the Kingdom of Poland were pacifi'ed, and the King and Queen Bonna, his Mother, 'reconciled'; but the hard Words she gave him upon that unequal Match, returned by Language of the same kind, quickly broke the Peace. 'The 'Queen (h) after their first Reconcilement, often 'reproaching the King her Son, that he had Mar'ried a second time one that was no more than a 'Gentlewoman, Widow to a private Gentleman, 'who was not of so good a Family as that of Rad'zivil, from which this Lady descended; Sigismond 'Augustus reply'd too warmly, That he had not so 'much dishonoured the Royal Family of the Jagel'lons, and the Crown of Poland, by Marrying this 'Beautiful Widow publickly, and in the Face of 'the Church, in whom the Graces of Body and 'Mind did recompance over and above what was wan'ting in her Birth, or rather in the birth of her first 'Husband Gastold, as she who Married Clandestine'ly after the Death of King Sigismond the Great of 'Sacred and Glorious Memory, a Man of mean 'Condition, called Puppacoda'.

(D) A Commission to Travel, in order to acquire all the necessary knowledge.] Don't imagine that his Credential Letters imported that he had Orders to furnish himself with the best Methods for Reforming Religion. He had received only a Verbal Order on this Point, and the King was not pleased, that any

(a) In the Article Achilles pag. 57. col. 2.
(b) Plutarch. in Alex. p. 667. B.
(c) Bibliot. Antitrinitar. p. 34.
(d) Stanislaus Lubieniecius, Historia Reformat. Polonicæ, pag. 26.

acquire all the neceſſary Knowledge for Eſtabliſhing a better Eccleſiaſtical Government. He ſaw Italy, Switzerland, Geneva, Paris, and faithfully diſcharged his Commiſſion; but being returned to Geneva, he there Married a Wife, by the Advice of John Calvin and Socinus, and in ſpite of the moſt Judicious (E) Remonſtrances of Budzinius, his Secretary. The King of Poland [a] was ſo ſcandaliz'd at this Action of his, that he gave over his Project of Reformation, tho' Liſmanin had ſent him the Letters of ſeveral Miniſters upon this Affair. The firſt Synod, which [b] was held in Poland by the Reformed, writ Liſmanin, who was then in Switzerland, a very obliging Letter, deſiring him to return. He left Switzerland in 1556, and came back to Poland, where he concealed himſelf ſome time; for he was not Ignorant that there was a Sentence of Proſcription againſt him. Several great Lords interceded for him, ſo that he was ſuffered to ſhew himſelf. He did not at firſt declare for either of the two innovating Parties, one of which [c] maintained that Jeſus Chriſt was not Mediator, according to the Divine Nature; the [d] other maintained the Preheminence of God the Father. But after ſome Conferences (F) with Blandrata in 1558, he began to [e] doubt of the Myſtery

[a] Ibid. pag. 43.
[b] At Pintzovie in 1555. Id. Hiſt. Reformat. Polon. p. 56.
[c] Ibid. pag. 57.
[d] Ibid. pag. 65.
[d] He was called Francis Stancarus.
[e] He was called Paul Goneſius.

(a) Libros juſſu & impenſis regiis coemtos, biennio poſtquam duxerat uxorem ad eum ſubinde miſit. Lubieniecius ubi ſupra, p. 43, 44.
(b) Id. ib. pag. 41.
(c) Ibid. pag. 42.
(d) Nec non literas quas cele- Helvetia viri ad cum ſeri- ſere: quarum autographa 30 annis à morte Regis in manus Budzinii pervenerunt, ita ut ejus induſtriæ conſervationem illorum debeamus. Horum apographa hic omitto cum hæc jam dudum lucem viderint. Id ib. p. 44.
(e) Ibid. pag. 55.
(f) That's to ſay the ſame which the Synod of Pintzovia writ to Liſmanin.
(g) Lubieniecius ib. pag. 48.
(h) Ibid. pag. 44.
(i) Impreſſum exemplar cuncta iſta quæ videbis de Liſmanino omiſerit. Ibid.
(k) Ib. p. 45. This Letter of Calvin is dated the 24. of Decem. 1555 any Accounts ſhould ſhould be given him [of that Matter in Writing, but only by word of Mouth. Notwithſtanding Liſmanin writ to him about it. The Pretence of his Voyage was to buy ſeveral good Books for the King's Library. Nor was this only a Pretence, for he was actually Commiſſioned to buy Books, and bought a great many which he ſent (a) to Poland (b). De negotio religionis amplius colloquentes, decreverunt, ut Liſmaninus, Miniſtri Regii (factorem vulgo vocamus) nomine. Bibliothecam Regiam ſumptibus ejus omni librorum genere inſtrueret, nec non viros doctos & pios adiret, Eccleſias varias, earum inſtituta & ritus ac regendi formas perluſtraret, deque omnibus his à reditu ſuo Regem certiorem faceret. . . . (c) Liſmaninus Regi per Literas poſtea totum negotium, expoſuit, contra ejus tamen mentem, qui reditum ejus & narrationem vivæ vocis, non literas mutam narrationem, expectabat. Liſmanin ſhew'd but little Diſcretion and Conduct in the Execution of a Deſign ſo important as this was. It muſt not be objected, that Sigiſmond Auguſtus never gave him ſuch a Commiſſion; for 'tis eaſy to prove the contrary. The Original Letters which ſeveral Miniſters had enclos'd to Liſmanin, and which he conveyed to the King of Poland, fell into the Hands of Liſmanin's Secretary, 30 Years after the Death of this Prince, and were made publick (d). It's certain that Geſner, Bullinger, and Calvin writ to this Monarch, and that their Letters, with many others, written to the Poliſh Lords about the Affair of the Reformation, ran about the Kingdom, and extreamly diſguſted the good Catholicks. Urebat malevolos Liſmanini exemplum, ſed & miſſa virorum Præſtantium Conradi Geſneri, Henrici Bullingeri, tum Joan. Calvini ad Regem littera, quæ & ad Proceres Regni ac Equites veritatis Evangelicæ ſectatores ſcripta per ora & manus plurium ferebantur. (e). It's alſo certain that his Poliſh Majeſty anſwered the Letters of the three Doctors I have named (f). Literæ ille ad Liſmaninum per Budzinium Miniſtrum ejus miſſæ fuere, qui & litteras Regias quibus Geſnero, Calvino & Bullingero reſpondit, ad eos pertulit (g). My Author complains of the Perſon who publiſhed John Calvin's Letters. He accuſes him of having ſuppreſs'd the Praiſes which Calvin gave Liſmanin in his Letters to the King of Poland. (h) Moneo amantes veri ex officio viri Chriſtiani & fidelis ſcriptoris, ut qua ratione in legendis celebrium Auctorum ſcriptis, circumſpectos eos eſſe oporteat, videant, non bona fide in edendis illis Epiſtolarum gravium apographis ab infeſtis veritati hominibus actum eſſe. Nam ne quid diſſimulem: Epiſtola, quam ad Regem Auguſtum Calvinus Nonis Decembr. CIↃ IↃL IV. dederat, ſatis cordate contra Pontificiam arrogantiam ſcripta, extat quidem inter Epiſtolas Calvini, pag. 139. ſed Liſmanini nomen initio Epiſtolæ parum candide agens editor ejus omiſit. He produces a Letter of Calvin according to the Tenor of the Original: If you compare it with that which was printed, you'll find many Omiſſions in the latter; wherein all (i) this Paſſage is left out; (k) Equidem optimo viro & fideli ſervo Chriſti Franc. Liſmanino, quum à me conſilium peteret, auctor eſſe non dubitavi, ut iſthuc ſtatim concederet, ſi quis forte opera ejus uſus iſthuc fuerit, ſaltem pio ejus deſiderio libenter ſubſcripſi: nec veritus ſum ne ejus profectio quaſi intempeſtiva Majeſtati Veſtræ diſpliceat, cujus præſentiam multis modis utilem experientia ipſa oſtendet. Quod ſi palam à Rege ipſum proferri non à primo ingreſſu nondum commodum videbitur, mihi tamen ver ſacrum Chriſti nomen roganda ſuppliciter & obteſtanda eſt V. M. ut recte currenti ſaltem aliunde patefactam viam curet. This is a convincing Proof of the Miſſion, or rather Commiſſion, which the King his Maſter gave Liſmanin to get Intelligence among the Reformers, and inſtruct himſelf in the beſt means for Reforming Poland. At the ſame time here's a deplorable Inſtance of the Impoſtures made uſe of in the Printing of Poſthumous Books. All that was diſguſtful, was retrenched. Who will maintain there were no Additions and Alterations made?

(E) In ſpite of the moſt judicious Remonſtrances of his (l) Secretary.] I grant that our Gentleman was ſtrongly perſwaded of the Nullity of his Vows, and that his Spirit, no leſs than his Fleſh, felt a repugnance to the Law of Celibacy. Yet 'twas but fit, he ſhould put off his Marriage, till he had given an Account of his Commiſſion to the King of Poland. All that is Lawful is not Expedient: The great Matter is to time a thing well. Budzinius repreſented this Maxim to his Maſter, with great Judgment, but found him Inflexible, and could not prevail with him to defer his Marriage. The Socinian, I am going to cite, judiciouſly Cenſures this Precipitation, and is Angry that Calvin and Socinus's Counſels had the better of thoſe of Budzinus. (m) Quod tamen (mandatum Regis) paulò poſt neglexit, poſtquàm Genevam reverſus, ne cum horrido cucullo in Poloniam rediret, uxorem duxiſſet, auctore Calvino & Lælio Socino (qui paulò poſtquam Cracovia ſementem veritatis jeciſſet, Genevam eodem anno redierat, quâ tamen mox, Calvini ingenium vel non ferens vel metuens, relictâ, Tiguri ſedem fixerat) ſed contradicente Budzinio, miniſtro ſuo, & ob oculos ponente Regis indignationem, qui eum ſumtibus ſuis in exteras regiones ad omnia perluſtranda & exploranda ablegarit, & tantorum conatuum alium eventum quàm Ablegati fui, ejuſque Monachi, nuptias expectet ſi ſe etiam promiſſi ſibi data, tum & ſucceſſum ejuſmodi matrimonii, quod magis ædificata ſubruere, quam aliquid ædificare poſſit, infauſtum; quod etiam reipſa eveniſſe ſuo loco videbimus. Sed ſurdo cecinit. Namque monachus calibatum, & ſpiritu & carne meritò illum damnante, perofus, & ad caſtas, intempeſtivas tamen, nuptias properans, quod inſtituit, effectum dedit, & accepta uxore, Geneva manſit. Quod ejus factum Rex moleſtè ferens ab incepto de explorandâ religione reſiluit. Correct a Fault that is found in John Latus's Univerſal Hiſtory. He ſays, That Liſmanin (n) left the Cloiſter of Cracow, with ſome other Monks, to turn Proteſtant. Who would not think that this Man, and ſome others of his Fraternity, Abjured their Religion in Poland? whereas the thing was otherwiſe: The Cordeliers of Cracow, who turned Proteſtants (o) preceded Liſmanin. The latter aſſembled and threw not off the Mask, till he was at Geneva, in his Travels, under pretence of purchaſing Books for his Majeſty's Library. His Marriage occaſioned Florimond de Remond to ſay, That Francis Liſmanin an Apoſtate Monk, who afterwards came near to the Alcoran, back'd theſe Novelties more from a Love for a Woman he doated on, than for the ſake of the Goſpel (p).

(F) After ſome Conferences with Blandrata.] I can't ſay, whether Liſmanin had been a Patron to Blandrata before his Travels, and had Introduc'd him to the Queen of Poland as a good Phyſician; but this is certain, That he Introduc'd him to a great

(l) This Title is given Budzinius in the Bibliotheque of the Anti-trinitarians, p. 55.

(m) Lubieniecius ubi ſupra p. 42, 43.
(n) Quibus adjunxit ſe Franciſcus Lyſmannus Corcyræus qui paulo ante relictis Franciſcanis Cracoviæ, eductis ſecum aliquot Monachis in ſocietatem Evangelii tranſiverat. Jo. Lætus, compend. Hiſtor. univerſalis, p. m. 390.
(o) Lubieniecius ubi ſupra, p. 23

(p) Florim. de Remond Hiſt. of Hereſy, Book 4 ch. 8. pag. m. 453.

ſtery of the Trinity; and became ſo ſuſpected of Arianiſm, that he was accuſed before the Conſiſtory of Cracow. He defended himſelf but ill, and as Blandrata had his Favourers, and other Diſputes had already divided Mens Minds, nothing but Confuſion enſued in the Synods. Liſmanin offer'd a Medium for reconciling the Parties; which was, that they ſhould ſtick to the Authority [a] of four Fathers of the Church, and for this end Collected a Rhapſody of ſeveral Paſſages from theſe Fathers, which might ſerve for a Sanctuary to various Interpretations. The Project was rejected; Whereupon Liſmanin retired to Koningsberg in Pruſſia, where he died (G) miſerably about the Year 1568. Moſt of thoſe who ſpeak of him do not know his Name (H). He writ nothing worth (I) ſpeaking of.

[a] Ibid. pag. 118. [b] St. Ambroſe, St. Jerome, St. Auguſtine, St. Chryſoſtom. Ibid pag. 168. [c] See the Remark [c] Ibid. pag. 170.

LISOLA (Francis de) became Famous by his Embaſſies to ſeveral Courts of Europe. He was a Native of Besançon, and entred into the Emperor's Service about the Year [d] 1639. From that time to his Death he moſt Zealouſly ſtuck to the Intereſts of the Imperial Court, and imploy'd all the Talents of his Pen, and all the Vigilance of an Able Stateſman to the Advantage of the Houſe of Auſtria. He [e] was not above 30 Years old when he was Reſident in England from the Emperor Ferdinand III. He diſcharged this Employ ſo well, that he was continued in it above four Years. He was Envoy Extraordinary at the Court of Spain, at the time of (AA) Philip IV's Death in 1665. The Book which he intitled (A) The Buckler of the State and Juſtice, is a very good one. Here he ſolidly Anſwers what France had publiſhed about the Rights of the Queen to ſeveral Eſtates of the Spaniſh Monarchy in the Year 1667. I don't doubt but he is the Author of ſeveral Pamphlets againſt France, which are commonly aſcribed to him; but I believe too, that ſeveral others are Fathered upon him which he knew nothing of; the common Artifice of Bookſellers to find Sale for a pitiful Piece. He made himſelf Odious to France by this way of Writing; and ſome Frenchmen have abuſed him in their Pamphlets. They complain of his Paſſionate Satyrical Humour, which ſpared not the Perſon of the Moſt Chriſtian King. He defended [d] In the Preface to the Denouement des Intrigues du tems, printed in 1672. It's obſerved that he had ſerved for 33 Years without Reproach under two Emperors. [e] Richard, Deſcription de la Franche-Comte, in the Atlas Blaeuw.

Prince after his return. (a) Ita fors tulit ut Blandrata . . . cap. 20 inſerui. Brevis explicatio . . . Dei ac ſanctiſſima Trinitate, quam Stancarus . . . aliis quibuſdam oppoſuit, præmiſſa ad Regem . . . ſecundum Auguſtum Epiſtola apologetica Kal. Junii 1563. Cracoviæ ſcripta. Subſcripſerunt ei cum ipſo, Felix Cruciger Superintendens Eccleſiarum in minori Polonia aliique circiter triginta Seniores & Miniſtri: inter quos erat, Gregorius Pauli Senior in ditione Cracovienſi. Apologia hæc excuſa eſt typis, anno 1565. The Rhapſody mentioned in the Body of this Article, was printed; but Lubieniecius had not ſeen it I ſhall, for the ſingularity of the Matter, relate the Words that declare Liſmanin's Deſign of terminating the Differences of the Miniſters by the Authority of the Fathers. Liſmaninus tamen ſtudia reditegranda concordiæ vel ſtabilienda rei refumere: media ad hanc rem obtinendam idonea quærere: ad ultimum quatuor illorum Eccleſiæ quarti Seculi Doctorum, Ambroſii, Hieronymi, Auguſtini, & Chryſoſtomi auctoritatem quaſi partientibus concilliandis commodum medium propo . . . hinc centonem ex illis conſuere. Id ſcripti, lic . . . videvit, videre mihi non contigit (k).

(k) Lubieniecius ubi ſupra pag. 168.

(AA) At the Court of Spain, at the time of Philip the fourth's Death.] The Count de Chavagnac obſerves (l) that the Baron de Liſola had put a ſtop to the concluſion of the Marriage of the Infanta with the Emperor, 'and had obliged the King before his 'Death, by an expreſs Article to keep up an Army 'in the Hereditary Countries, to Succour Flanders, 'the Milanese, and the Emperor: Count Marſin 'was to be General of it'. The Count de Chavagnac was to Command under Marſin: He adds, that the Baron (m) received Orders to go over into England, and went on Board a Pink at Barcelona, in order to go to Final, that he cro'ſs'd Piedmont, (n) and came to Franche Comte with his Wife and Daughter, (o) who is one of the Worthieſt Perſons in the World.

(l) Memoires du . . . Edit. de Holl. (m) Ibid. pag. 251. (n) Ibid. pag. 253. (o) Ibid. pag. 247.

(a) Beza Epiſt. 81.

(b) Hiſtoire de l'Ariani ſme liv. 12 pag. 351, 332, du 3. tome Edit. de Hollande. Anachroniſme in the Article Blandrata, pag. 695. col. 2.

(c) He ſhouldhave ſaid Gonesius.

(d) Lubieniecius ubi ſup. p. 111

(e) Bibl. Antitrinit pag. 35.

(f) Hoornbeek, Append. p. 31.

(g) Spondanus ad ann. 1561. n. 33.

(h) Bibl. Antitrinit pag. 35.

(i) This Letter is printed in the Hiſtoria Reformationis Poloniæ pag. 112. & ſeq.

(A) The Book he intituled, the Buckler of the State and Juſtice, is a very good one.] Here's what Mr. Lyonne writ of it to the King his Maſter: 'I had 'forgotten to ſay concerning a Book that . . . wards 'have publiſhed, intituled, The Buckler of State 'and Juſtice (which muſt be of . . . compoſi- 'tion) in anſwer to the Tract concer . . . the Right 'of the Queen; that it's Van Buninger's Opinion 'That this Book has fully and convincingly deſtroy'd 'all the Kings Preſumſions to the Franche Comte, 'Brabant, Limbourg, Hainaut, Artois, &c. ſo as 'no Reply can be made on our part; inſomuch 'that the King has only remaining his Pretenſion to 'Burgundy, by Right of Devolution; from whence 'he concludes, that he ought only to Demand a 'Satiſhimself (B) very seriously upon this Head. I don't think any one has written against him in a more ingenious and smart manner (C) than Mr. Verjus *: it was to retort gross Injuries. Let us not forget that Mr. de Lisola was honoured with the Title of Baron. He died before the opening of the Conferences of Nimeguen. He would doubtless have been Plenipotentiary to his Imperial Majesty, and possibly would have been more successful than his Successors, in retarding the Treaty of Peace. It's said he was fitter (D) to get a War continued, than to conclude it; and he had such a Faculty of alarming Mens Minds, that he animated to a Confederacy those, who had the greatest Inclination to stand Neuters. I am far from affirming, what many have said, that he made no scruple of dispersing in several Courts, as from intercepted

* At present he's call'd Count de Crecy, and has been one of the Plenipotentiaries of France, at the Treaty of R[illegible] in 16[illegible].

(a) Memoires of Mr. de Lyonne, intercepted by the Garrison of Lisle, the Sieur Heron, Courier of the Cabinet, carrying 'em from the Army to Paris, in 1667. pag. 18 of the Impression of Holland in 1668. Paris Letter 4to. pag. [illegible] of the 2d. tome, speaks of this intercepting.

(b) Denouement des intrigues du tems, pag. 16.

(c) Ibid. pag. 12.

(d) Compare with this, these Words of the 234*th. Page.* He shews he is but a bad Judge of Style, when he attributes the Letter of the States-General to the Baron de l'Isola. Good Judges won't agree with him, and I shan't wonder hereafter, if the ignorant ascribe so many false Pieces to him, as they have hitherto done.

(e) Ibid. pag. 9.

(f) Ibid. pag. 11.

'Satisfaction answerable to that Pretension, and 'that having promised it should be moderated, he now draws this Consequence, that 'Franche Comté, and some other Places, ought to 'satisfie his Majesty (a). The Postscript Mr. le Tellier underwrit to this Place of Mr. de Lyonne's Dispatch, by the King's Order, has these Words. There's Ground to hope, that Van Beuningen's Opinion concerning this Book, will not be followed.

(B) He defended himself very seriously upon this Head.] His Words are these; speaking of himself in the third Person. (b) He discovers in all his Actions a very particular Esteem for the French Nation; he acknowledges it to be one of the Nurses of Arts and Sciences, polite in its Discourse and Writings, agreeable in Conversation, fruitful of great Men, abounding in good Soldiers, industrious, brave and Laborious. His Sentiments of his Most Christian Majesty proceed even to Admiration; he speaks of him on all Occasions, with as much respect as his own Subjects can do; he praises with all possible Commendation the glorious Regulations he has made in his Kingdom, and if he could see him apply his great Genius and Power to less dangerous and more distant Conquests, his most ardent Wishes should attend his Designs. Let's see how he justifies himself upon the Subject of Libels. '(c) This Writer accuses 'him of an unreasonable Affectation to appear in 'Publick by his Writings, and I can say with all those 'who know him, that it's one of his greatest Aversions: though in the whole Course of his Life, 'he has imploy'd his Leisure-Hours in composing 'many Works, from which he might have expected as great Approbation, as from those he was obliged to make publick; yet the Sollicitations of 'his Friends could never conquer the Reluctance he 'ever had to the appearing in print, and except the 'Bouclier d'Etat, which he was obliged to publish, with a Dispatch, which did not permit him 'to polish it as he could wish, no other Piece of his 'Writing has come out with his Privity and Consent. 'Tis true, the Avarice of the Booksellers has 'put 'em on collecting some undigested Fragments 'of two or three other of his Works, which they 'sent to the Press with so many Faults, that the Author himself could hardly know 'em; but he has 'Reason to complain, that the Malice of some, and 'the Ignorance of others, frequently Father on him 'Off-springs, which he (d) never produced, and 'which have Characters so contrary to his, that 'if the World would do him Justice, they would 'readily own, that they are supposititious.

That I may not resume it another time, let me here relate his Answer to the Reproaches of Avarice and Violence. '(e) He attacks him in his 'greatest Strength, when he taxes him in covert 'Expressions, with being gained by the States, and 'acting through a Principle of Interest and Ambition; this is misunderstanding both his Genius, 'and that of the United Provinces. He is as little of a Humour to receive, as they are to give; 'tis not the way of popular Republicks to make 'such Profusions——(f) Indeed, every one knows the Baron de l'Isola's little Application to his Patrimone, and that he is daily Subject to the Reproaches of his most intimate Friends, for the extreme Negligence he shews in his own Concerns. The present Condition he is in, after the 'fair Opportunities he has had to enrich himself, 'evidently proves, that he has hitherto laboured 'more for the Publick than for himself. Some Ministers of France could give an authentick Testimony of his way of receiving Offers of that Nature; all the Imperial Court will depose in his behalf, that for above Three Years he has been 'ardently soliciting his Master to grant him a little 'Retreat, as the Price of all his Services, in 'which he might spend the rest of his Days at 'Ease, free from the hurry of Affairs. If the Offices of his Enemies could procure him that Happiness with his Master, to which he only aspires, 'they might rid themselves of him more soundly, and with a better Conscience, than by 'that cowardly and unworthy way of Injuries 'and Calumnies; I know, he would think himself 'obliged to their Hatred, and would heartily say, 'Salutem ex inimicis. This is what concerns the Accusation of Avarice; let's proceed to the 2d. Head. (g) 'As to his Conduct in publick Affairs 'all the Ministers of the Emperor can bear him 'faithful Testimony, that he never proposed any 'thing violent or unjust, and always promoted Union and Moderation, while France went upon the 'antient Maxim, Divide & Impera. In all the 'Controversies that have come before him, he has 'employed his utmost Pains and Study, in seeking 'Ways of Accommodation; he has reconciled the Elector of Brandenburg and the K. of Poland, and found no Obstacle to his Negotiation, but what the Ministers of France were the Authors of. All the 'World knows how much he facilitated the Treaty 'of Oliva, with what Earnestness he laboured for 'those of Portugal and Aix la Chapelle, and the 'Pains he took to strengthen them, by a solid 'Guaranty. He has frequently sollicited Defensive 'Leagues, which are the Foundations of the Peace 'and Security of States: he has always dissuaded 'the offensive, as much as possible, which may 'raise Jealousies, and create new Troubles; nay, he 'grants, that he wishes the Preservation and Welfare of the United Provinces, because he looks 'upon 'em, as the Bulwark of the Empire, the 'strongest support of the Netherlands, and the Mediators and Guarantees of Peace.

(g) Ibid. pag. 14.

(C) In a more ingenious——manner than Mr. Verjus.] They ascribe to the Baron de Lisola a little Book intituled, la Sauce au Verjus (h), a Piece extremely cutting against the Person, whose Name is alluded to. This Allusion, and the whole Title of this Libel, have highly displeased Father Bouhours: I shall relate somewhat at large, what he has said upon it; in which we shall find the Proof of what I advance, that this Writing was fathered on Mr. de Lisola. '(i) A Punster will not scruple to play 'upon a Name in abusive Writings. He'll intitle 'a Libel, la Sauce au Verjus, and afterwards say, 'that Grapes which can never ripen, are good 'to make Verjuice. France approves these 'Designs by her Minister at the Court of Brandenburgh, and the Sauce is like to be none of the best, since they have put in it too much Verjuice. 'A Man must have a very bad Taste, to be pleased 'with such Kitching-Stuff. Nothing disgusts more, 'than those insipid Allusions, which have neither 'Wit nor Beauty in 'em; and I don't know, whether I should not relish the Impertinence of that 'famous Preacher, altogether as well, who preaching before a great Prince, and taking for his Text, 'Omnis caro fœnum, began thus, Monsieur, † foin de Omnis caro fœnum, foin de mois, foin de tous les hommes, omnis caro fœnum. But to speak seriously, the Foolery of the Minister of Vienna, and the Preacher of Paris, are much alike: the one offends the Majesty of the Empire, 'by a foolish and ridiculous Pun, while he pretends 'to support it; the other dishonours the Sacred 'Word of God, by a vile and buffoon Expression. 'Both affront the Dignity of our Language, which 'will not suffer absurd and gross Jesting.

(h) Printed in 1674.

(i) Bouhours, Remarques sur la langue Françoise, pag. m. 428.

† 'Tis a French Pun, which can hardly be expressed in English.

(D) To get a War continued, than to conclude it.] It was therefore a most disagreeable Employment, which the Emperor put him upon, during the War ted Letters, I know not how many Schemes, and Projects of Alliances, and Instructions to Ambassadors, which shewed, that France designed to swallow up all Europe, which Pieces, as they say, were forged in his own Study. I would require strong Proofs of this, before I gave Credit to it. Besides, though these Frauds [illegible] well enough upon the People, ad populum phaleras; would Princes [illegible] themselves to be caught by 'em? He had the Misfortune [illegible] disgust (E) the King of Poland, as I shall say below, citing Mr. de Wicquefort. [illegible] was believed to be the first Author, and principal Director of the Design which [illegible] executed in Cologne (F) on the Person of Prince William de Furstemberg, during [illegible] Conferences of the Peace of the 14th. of February 1674.

LOGES (Mary Bruneau[a], Lady Des) was one of the most [illegible] Women of the XVIIth. Century. She was married in 1599. to Charles de Rechignevoisin, Esq. Seigneur Des Loges, who Four Years after was made Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber to the King. She died the 7th. of June 1641, and was buried in a [illegible] she [illegible] chosen her self.

[a] And not Blaineau, as Hilarion de Coste says in his Eloge des Dames tome 2. pag. 669.

of Charles Gustavus, King of Sweden, against Poland, for here's what Mr. de Wicquefort tells us. (k) 'In the Year 1655, during the Rupture betwixt 'the Crowns of Poland and Sweden, the Emperor 'sent to offer his Mediation to the latter, by Count 'de Pottinguen, Vice-Chancellor of Bohemia. They 'had already began to treat without a Mediator: 'the Swedes were persuaded, that the Emperor's Intention was rather to aggravate Things, than reconcile 'em. They knew, that if the Negotiation 'must be carry'd on by Mediators, those could not 'be declined, who had already been imployed at 'Lubeck; that the Emperor had endeavoured to oblige the Muscovites to declare War against Sweden, 'and that Lesinski, whom the King of Poland had sent to Vienna, had obtained some Assurance of Succours. The Count arrived at Thorn 'in September; but the King being in perpetual Motion, he could not speak with him till the 5th. of April the Year following, and saw him no more after that time; and coming with Lisola into the Army of Poland, he himself renounced the Title of Mediator.

(a) Wicquefort, Traite de l'Ambassadeur, tome 2. pag. 239.

(E) He had the Misfortune to disgust the King of Poland.] M. de Wicquefort tells us this, in a way which gives us some Touches of our Baron's Character (a). 'I'll add to the Example (b) of Appelbroom, that of Francis Baron de Lisola, the 'Emperor's Embassador at Warsaw. This Minister, who was a Man of Parts, had made himself 'at first very acceptable to the King and Queen of 'Poland, and had done them important Services, 'till seeing in the Year 1661, that the Queen took 'upon her to elect a Successor in the King's Lifetime, and laboured to get a French Prince elected, 'he openly enough opposed the Intrigues that were 'carrying on, in order to it, amongst the Senators. 'The Queen, who could not be ignorant of it, and 'who was at least as fit to reign as the King, got 'the Bishop of Warmia, and the Palatine of 'Pomerania to tell Lisola, that the Cabals he made 'in the Kingdom, hindered their Majesties from admitting him any more to Audience. Lisola, to 'sound their Intention, and to know whether there 'was any thing in it more than Personal, and 'whether the Prohibition extended to the Negotiation he was imploy'd in by the Emperor his 'Master, demanded to see the King, who ordered 'him to be answered, that if he had any Proposition to make, he might do it in Writing. Lisola refused it, and gave Advice of the whole 'Matter to the Court of Vienna, from whence an 'Answer was returned, That the Emperor was 'astonished at the Proceeding of the King of Poland, and that before he had taken a Method so contrary to the good Understanding which ought to be betwixt Neighbouring Princes, and so near Relations, and even to the Law of Nations, he should have made his Complaints. The King of Poland wrote afterwards to the Emperor upon this 'Subject, and his Resident Vespasian Lanscoronski, 'seconded by his Offices the Reasons of the King 'his Master; but the Emperor, whose Interest it 'was to hinder the Election of a French Prince, approved the Conduct of his Embassador. However, 'considering that he could do him no more Service 'in a Court to which he was become unacceptable, 'he recalled him at his own Instance, and under another Pretence. Lisola departed without taking 'Leave of the King and Queen, and the Emperor 'has ever since imploy'd him in Negotiations of 'the greatest Importance, to which he applied himself with great Ability, though frequently with 'little Success. The Author of the Curious Treatise (c) upon the Seizing the Prince of Furstemberg, confesses, that Lisola was unfortunate; yet he gives him great Encomiums, and as all that he says is serviceable to the History of this Baron, I shall relate a long Fragment of it. (d) Lisola believed these Things [illegible] we have (e) our Evasions: 'tis true, [illegible] was feared, whilst 'alive, we are contented [illegible] attack him after his 'Death; which is neither generous nor honest, 'and shews our Weakness or our Fear——I 'could give a hundred Instances of it (f), if necessary, to shew, that this Man was falsly accused by those who durst not look him [illegible] he were alive (g). Mr. d'Ambr[illegible] lastly, and all he objects to h[illegible] that he calls him an Author, known by his inconsiderate Writings against France, yet without censuring 'em; 'so strong was his Genius, and so admired by all 'who judged soundly of Things. He had an inconceivable Force of Wit, a great Presence of 'Mind, a vast Penetration, a vast reach of Understanding, dextrously assaulted or defended himself, was a Master of Politicks, acquainted with 'all its Springs, a Man of Zeal, wrote excellently 'and easily, and in short, published curious Pieces, 'when no body believed he had so much as begun 'em.... (h) but with these essential Qualities, Lisola was unfortunate, and died perpetually thwarted, when the Emperor, moved by his Services, 'and to make him a just Recompence, recalled him 'to Vienna, feeding him with many fair Hopes. 'He shone being near his end, like the Glare 'of a Star that vanishes [illegible] after having inlightned all the Earth.

(b) Wicquefort, ib. tome 1. pag. 301. 302.

(c) Resident of Sweden at the Hague, whom his Master would not recall, tho' the States in 1657, had declared they would not treat with him any longer.

(F) Which was executed upon the Person of Prince William de Furstemberg.] The French always supposed, as an unquestioned Fact, that the Baron de Lisola was the Promoter of this Design. He is thought to be the Author of a Book, which justifies that Action. Deckherus thus speaks of it. (i) Gulielmi Principis Furstenbergii detentio, ad Cæsaris authoritatem, tranquilitatem Imperii, Pacis promotionem, justa, perutilis, necessaria: authore Chrisophoro WOLTFANGO, Anno MDCLXXIV. publicata, illustri stylo, experientia profunda, consummata eruditione prorsus excellens, ab orbe erudito adscribi meruit Præ-Illustri Antonio PERIANDRO, Rhæto; qui susceptam modestam nominis detectionem gratiose interpretari non dedignabitur: Causa enim ibi pro honore Imperatoris & Salute Imperii magnifice defensa; neque stoli Mars Venusque FORTNERUM serio dissimulare visi; quamvis hodie Illustrem Dom. Franciscum Baronem DE ISOLA, negotiatoribus irrita pacis immixtum, authorem videre eligere maluerint. I shall occasionally say, that [illegible] ibes to the same Author an Anonymous [illegible] ainst France, printed about the Year 1673. [illegible] Words are these: (k) Eodem tempore prodiit Consilium status secretius Regis Gallicarum, Gallice & Germanice manifestatum: die Französische Rathstube; non sine veri conjectura, suaque rei, imo spe, hinc [illegible] Germanis arreptum, à Gallis eum indignationi [illegible] um: ut an libello nuper in contrarium edito [illegible] laim Franciscum Baronem de ISOLA authorem inscio, curioso nostræ Reipublicæ Viatici patefecit.

(d) Printed in 1676.

(e) Traite curieux, pag. 13.

(f) That's to say of Embassadors punished.

(g) He speaks of Mr. [illegible] Book [illegible] bout the Title of the King to the Succession of [illegible] cited by him are in the Preface. He looked on L'Isola as the Author of a Pamphlet [illegible] printed at Liege in 1674. in 12. titled L'Or[illegible] Fra[illegible] It is a Refutation of the Harangue which this Prelate had made to the King at Metz, the 30th. of July 1673.

(h) Traité curieux, pag. 16.

(i) Deckherus, de scriptis adespotis pag. 260 Edit. 1686.

(k) Id. ib. pag. 134.

at Two hundred Paces distance from le Plessis, a House in Limousin. Her Zeal for the Protestant Religion, which she made a constant Profession of all her Life, [illegible] Piety, and Greatness of Soul, appeared with a new Lustre, towards the end of [illegible] life; the last Years whereof, and some others, had been exercised by several [illegible] Domestick Troubles. This doubtless occasioned her making just Reflections on th[illegible]nity of Creatures. She had (B) Nine Children, and a Sister that was married (C) to [illegible] de Beringhen. The Remarks will inform us, what Esteem she was in, not only [illegible] the greatest Wits, such as Malherbe (D) and Balzac, but also (E) with [illegible] gr[illegible] Princes. We shall relate a curious Story (F), which Mr. Menage ha[illegible]ed[illegible]r. de Wicquefort observes, that « Madam des Loges had a great Asc[illegible]r the [illegible] of Orleans, for which Reason, the Assemblies were forbid, which were [illegible] to be hel[illegible]r House.

LOG-

(A) Several Dom[illegible] Troubles.] 'Tis the common Fate of Persons [illegible] her Sex, who distinguish themselves by a great Genius, improved by Study, if they engage in Conjugal Bonds. They ought not to do it, there are others enough besides them, who would take care the Race should not fail. 'Tis much if their Country does not do 'em the same Injustice, which Seneca speaks of with regard to Cato, of not knowing the value of the Treasure it possesses. That which [illegible] Country does not always do, a Husband d[illegible]ch seldomer.

(B) She had Nine C[illegible]n.] There were but Five of 'em alive, Three S[illegible] and Two Daughters, when she died. One of th[illegible]as bore Arms in Holland (b), and married a Gentlewoman there, of the Family of Vander Myle. There are only some Daughters from that Marriage.

(C) That [illegible]as married to Mr. de Beringhen.] The Marquis [illegible]eringhen proceeded from this Ma[illegible]ge, who [illegible]at Eighty nine Years of Age, [illegible] March [illegible] after having been for a long time [illegible] first Quer[illegible] to the King. This Alliance gave very illustrious Grand-Nieces to our Madam des Loges, by the Marquis de Beringhen's Sisters. The Author of several Books lately published, with the Title of Voyage d'Espagne, &c. is one of them. There are two others (c), who out of Zeal to the Protestant Religion, have quitted all the Advantages of their Country, and who by their Piety, give a Lustre to all the other excellent Qualities that they are enriched with.

(D) Esteem——with Malherbe and Balzac.] To have a just Idea of the Ingenuity and Wit of Madam des Loges, we need only consider, that Malherbe (d) was one of her most assiduous Courtiers, and constantly visited her every other Day. Mentioning Malherbe, is mentioning a Man, who never praised, nor hardly esteemed any Body, and who is one of the first and greatest Masters that has formed the Taste and [illegible]ment of our Nation, with reference to ingeni[illegible]formances. Balzac was at least equal to Malherbe, [illegible] has perhaps more contributed than he to that Politeness, which is spread over the Kingdom; however, he was equally an Admirer of the Lady we speak of. The Letters he writ to her, are a publick Testimony of it; and his Esteem for her is as well known, from what he said of her to his Friends, as from what he wrote to her himself. He confesses, in one Place of his Works, that if he was grown more sparing of his Praises, he was chiefly obliged for it to the good Advice she gave him. 'The good Madam des Loges, says he (e), 'gave me some terrible Reprimands upon this Subject 'some time before her Death. She upbraided me, 'that I was the Cully of all Reigns, (they are her 'very Words) that I lavished my Praises upon all 'those who made a shew of any worth; that I was 'too credulous with respect to others, upon the first 'Glimpse [illegible] Goodness, the bare Appearance of 'Vertues [illegible] so forth. In another Place, where (f) he t[illegible]s against Burlesk, which was grown too m[illegible]n Fashion, to the great Grief of th[illegible] who had acquired Glory by a grave Style, he does not think he has sufficiently fulminated that Fundamental Heresie in his Empire, unless he condemns it by a Decree of this Lady. This sort of Raillery, says he, savours more of Comedy than Conversation, and more of Farce than Co[illegible]. This is not rallying like a Gentleman. [illegible]s Loges used to say, that she'd as liv[illegible]e, she Drunken Man, or Bravado acted. [illegible]e, she said, she looked upon such Jargon, as she would upon a wooden Sword by a Man's Side, and Meal upon his Face. Mr. de Bautru, (g) who was not naturally a great Admirer, doubtless admired this Lady, since to shew a Man's want of Address, who could not profit by the Conversation of the Wits, by putting 'em upon things worthy of 'em, he makes (h) use of these four Examples.

Il mene aux Allobroges
Balzac, Boissac, Conac, & Madame Des-Loges.

I don't believe, that they who are skill'd in Proofs can doubt of the extraordinary Merit of this Lady, after making Reflection upon what I have said.

(E) With the greatest Princes.] Balzac shall be my Witness. If you don't know, says he (i), Urania, the Nymph I have so much praised, and whom I do bitterly mourn, I must tell you, it's my good Deceased Friend, Madam des Loges, who in her Life-time has been called more than once, and by more than one Academist, the Celestial, the Tenth Muse, [illegible] who has been esteemed within and without the [illegible]dom by Crowned Heads, by the Demi-Gods of our Age, by the Duke of Orleans, the King of Sweden, the Duke of Weimar, &c. I am of Opinion, that the Verses which celebrate her Memory (I speak of the Eloquent Urania) are full as good as those, which one Antipater a Sidonian, made upon the Death of the learned Sappho.

(F) A curious Story, which Mr. Menage has re-[illegible]fy'd.] 'Tis an Adventure, which has been publish'd two several Ways. Mr. de Balzac tells it thus in his 37th. Dialogue.

'Malherbe was one of the most assiduous in making his Court to Madam des Loges, and visited 'her constantly every other Day. One of those 'Days finding upon the Table in her Closet (k), 'Du Molin the Minister's great Book against Cardinal du Perron, and being seized with a Poetical 'Enthusiasm upon the bare reading of the Title, 'he called for Pen, Ink, and Paper, and wrote 'down these Ten Lines:

'Quoy que l'Auteur de ce gros livre
'Semble n'avoir rien ignoré,
'Le meilleur est toûjours de suivre
'Le Prime de nôtre Curé.
'Toutes ces doctrines nouvelles
'Ne plaisent qu'aux folles cervelles;
'Pour moi comme une humble brebis,
'Sous la houlette je me range:
'Il n'est permis d'aimer le change,
'Que des femmes & des habits.

'Madam des Loges reading Malherbe's Verses, and 'fired by Honour and Zeal, took the same Pen, and 'on the other side of the Paper wrote these other 'Verses:

'C'est vous dont l'audace nouvelle
'A rejetté l'antiquité,
'Et du Moulin ne vous rapelle
'Qu'à ce que vous avez quitté:
'Vous aimez mieux croire à la mode,
'C'est bien la foy la plus commode,
'Pour ceux que le monde a charmez:
'Les femmes y sont vos idoles:
'Mais à grand tort vous les aimez,
'Vous qui n'avez que des paroles.

'The Conclusion of these two Epigrams, will 'doubtless please the Profane, and those who set up 'for Gallants. For my part, I hold, that in Mat-'ters of Religion, the Comical Style is always to be 'avoided « Wicquefort, memoires pour chant les Ambassadeurs, pag. 552. Hague, 1677.

(g) Costar, Let. vol. 1. p. 137.

(h) Id. ibid. pag. 125.

(i) In the 13*th. Letter of the* 2*d. Book of the* Lettres choisies: he writes it to Mr. Menage, sending him at the same time the Verses he had made on the Death of Madam Des Loges. They are printed among his Latin Poems. Here's a [illegible]ne or two of 'em.

Vidi ego progeniem Regum, capita ardua mundi
Uranies hausti obstupuisse sonis
Borboniumque genus & cognata è stirpe Navarræ
Reliquias; & cui Mantua sceptra dedit.
Hanc coluit, lectæ captus dulcedine chartæ
Ille tui victor magnus, Ibere, Getes,
Et dudum, patria dum præparat arma suburbi,
Miserat huic cultus nuncia signa sui.
Hujus & Ambrosios avida bibat aure lepores
Wyma- which is Sedan, in 38. 39.

rius, magno non minor ipse Gete. (k) That, entitled, Nouveauté du Papisme, printed 1st. at fol. in 1627. See the Bibl. Choisie of Colomés p.

(a) Quamdiu Catonem civitas ignoravit? respuit nec intellexit nisi cum perdidit. Seneca, Epist. 79. These Words are commonly quoted, as if Seneca had said, Catonem suum saculum parum intellexit. See Coastar's Letters, Vol. 1. pag. 621.

(b) 'Tis he of whom Mr. Le Labou-reur [illegible] in his Voy[illegible] de la [illegible] de P[illegible] logue, when he says, p. 68. that [illegible] Gentlemen employed in the Army of the States, who accompanied Prince William, [illegible] only [illegible] of [illegible]derick Henry Prince of Orange, when he had Audience of this Queen at Amsterdam, were the Sieurs de Beringhen, Brother to the first Querry of our Most Christian King, and a Colonel of Horse. See also, pag. 74.

(c) Their Name is de la Lu-Luzerne: they are Refugees in Holland. (d) Entretien 37. of Balzac. (e) Dissertation [illegible] of the Socrate Chrestien, p. 176. (f) Entret. 38.

LOGNAC, or Loignac, or Longnac, or rather (A) Laugnac, made himself extremely conſiderable in the Reign of Henry III. and had a great ſhare in that Prince's Favour. He was Brave, and in this Point had firmly eſtabliſhed his Reputation by ſeveral (B) Duels, and by ſome Quarrels which the Houſe of Guiſe had brought upon him, and in which he came off Honourably. He was Captain (C) of a Troop of 45 Gentle-'avoided. The firſt is not grave enough for a Man, 'who ſpeaks in earneſt, and the other is too light 'for a Woman, that ſpeaks to a Man.

Mr. Menage thinking, that the matter thus happened, printed this Story in his Obſervations upon Malherbe's Poems, juſt as Mr. de Balzac had told it. But mind what he has put at the end of his Book.

'Since this Note was written and printed, I have 'been informed by Mr. de Racan, that it was he, 'who made theſe Verſes, which M. de Balzac aſcribes 'to Madam des Loges, and that the thing happen-'ed in this manner. Madam des Loges, who was 'of the pretended Reformed Religion, had lent Mr. 'de Racan, du Moulin the Miniſter's Book, called 'The Shield of Faith, and had obliged him to read 'it. Mr. de Racan having read it, made this Epi-'gram upon it, which Mr. de Balzac has altered in 'many Places.

'Bienque Du Moulin en ſon livre
'Semble n'avoir rien ignoré;
'Le meilleur eſt toujours de ſuivre
'Le Prône de noſtre Curé.
'Toutes ces doctrines nouvelles
'Ne plaiſent qu'aux folles cervelles:
'Pour moi, comme une humble brebis
'Je vais où mon Paſteur me range.
'Ec n'ay jamais aimé le change
'Que des femmes & des habits.

'Having communicated it to Malherbe, who came 'to ſee him at that time, Malherbe wrote it with 'his own Hand in Du Moulin's Book, which he re-'turned at the ſame time to Madam Des-Loges, as 'from Mr. de Racan. Madam Des-Loges ſeeing 'theſe Verſes written with Malherbe's Hand, believed 'them to be his; and as ſhe was extraordinary 'Zealous for her Religion, would not ſuffer 'em to 'remain unanſwered. She therefore deſired M. de 'Gombaud, who was of the ſame Religion, and of 'equal Zeal, to anſwer 'em. M. deGombaud (I know 'it from himſelf) who believed as Madam Des-'Loges, that Malherbe was the Author of thoſe 'Verſes, anſwered 'em by the Epigram, which M. 'de Balzac attributes to Madam Des-Loges, and 'which he thinks too Light for a Woman who 'ſpeaks to a Man. This is not the firſt time that 'M. de Balzac has aſcribed to this Lady Verſes ſhe 'had no Hand in; for in one of his Letters he 'makes her the Author of the Song of the dying 'Lover, the Burthen whereof is,

'Ah c'en eſt fait! je cede à la rigueur du ſort,
'Je vais mourir; je me meurs; je ſuis mort;

'which was written by the deceaſed Mr. Habert Cerif, 'one of the fineſt Wits of our Age.

A ſhort REFLECTION on the preceding Paſſage

Who ſees not in all this an Inſtance of Hiſtorical Uncertainty? M. de Balzac thought, he had communicated to his Friend a moſt certain Fact, an incomparable Piece of Secret Hiſtory, and infinitely valuable to all the Lovers of what we call Perſonalities. He had perſuaded all his Readers of it: Mr. Menage having inſerted it in one of his Books, was juſt upon diſperſing it far and wide, when by chance Meſſieurs de Racan and de Gombaud, being ſtill alive, diſabuſed Mr. Menage, before his Obſervations upon Malherbe were ſold off; and thus the Publick came to be undeceived. If theſe two Gentlemen had been dead, without ſpeaking of this to Mr. Menage, or if they had ſpoke of it at another time, the firſt Narration would perhaps ſtill have had an intire Credit. How many other Facts are there, and much more important, which paſs from Age to Age, and from Generation to Generation, no body diſcovering their falſehood, for want of Fortuitous occaſions, like the Converſation of Mr. Menage, with Racan and Gombaud? However, Madam Des-Loges is clear'd of compoſing Verſes in too light a Strain. It cannot be denied, that Balzac was in the right, to think the end of the Epigram too little Conſiſtent with the Modeſty and Purity which ought to Reign in all the Writings of the Fair-Sex. Not that we muſt Eſpouſe the haſty and too rigid Maxim of thoſe who pretend, That a Woman, who ſhould tax a Man with having nothing but words, would as good as declare that ſhe was concerned ſhe had not got, or did not daily get from him ſomething more real. This Maxime is Extravagant and Falſe; but who would not wonder at Mr. de Racan, if it were true that he (a) was the Author of Malherbe's Life, printed with ſome little Tracts in 1672; who would not wonder, I ſay, that he ſhould tell Mr. Menage of Balzac's Miſtake, and yet inſert all Balzac's Story in Malherbe's Life, without rectifying a tittle of it?

(a) Mr. Menage in his Obſervations on Malherbe cites this Life often, as written by Mr. de Racan, Moreri knew nothing of it; he only ſays in his Article of Malherbe that this Life was attributed to Balzac.

(A) Or rather Laugnac.] It will appear by the following Remarks that theſe four ways of writing this Gentleman's Name, are found in our Hiſtorians. The laſt is, I think, the beſt, as being that which Du-Pleix, who was of the ſame Country, has uſed; and 'tis known that the Diphthong au, is very common in the proper Names of that Country. This Diphthong is pronounced like an o at Paris, and in the Neighbouring Provinces, and hence the Authors put an o, and not an au in the firſt Syllable of the Name of this Favourite of Henry III. I ſhall obſerve by the way, that one muſt be very attentive, who would underſtand the Latin Tongne, ſpoken by the Pariſians, for they pronounce in the ſame manner aurum and horum, auris and oris, and thus of ſeveral other Words.

(B) By ſeveral Duels and by ſome Quarels which the Houſe of Guiſe had brought upon him.] The Baron de Biron (b) had a Quarrel in 1585, 'with the 'Sieur de Carency, eldeſt Son to Count de la Vauguy-'on.... for the Heireſs of the Houſe of Cau-'mont, whom both pretended to. This Quarrel ended 'by a Duel of three againſt three; Biron, Loignac 'and Fanifſac, on one ſide, kill'd Carency, d'Eſſiſſac 'and la Baſtie (c)'. The Author I have this from, relates in another Hiſtory, '(d) That after the 'Duke of Eſpernon was retired to Angouleme, 'the King having given the Place of Firſt Gentle-'man of his Chamber to the Sieur de Loignac, this 'Gentleman was as a Mark, at which, by the Inſti-'gation of the Duke of Guiſe, all the Princes of 'the League diſcharged their Envy. The Chevalier d'Aumalle, a little before the Death of the 'Duke of Guiſe, returned to Paris, and before he 'came there, had contrived a Quarrel with the ſaid 'Sieur de Loignac, upon the Subject of ſome 'Amorous Affair, which commonly happens amongſt 'young Gentlemen. Loignac was brave, a Man well 'ſkill'd in Arms, and who had come off in many 'Duels; his Quality of firſt Gentleman of the Bed-'Chamber gave him a right to fight Duels 'with Strangers of the greateſt Quality, and de-'cline 'em with ſuch as were not of his own Qua-'lity. This grudge therefore, and the picking a 'Quarrel on a Love Affair, made Loignac conclude, 'That the Duke of Guiſe, and the Princes of the 'League were reſolved he ſhould not long Enjoy the 'Advantages the King's Favour gave him.' We find in D'Audiguier (e) more Circumſtances than in Cayet, of Biron's and Carenci's Duel.

(b) He who was Beheaded in 1602.

(c) Taken from Cayet, Hiſtoire de la paix fol. 319. verſo.

(d) Cayet, Chronologie Novenaire tom. 1. fol 109.

(e) D'Audiguier, uſage des duels chap 33. p. 436 & ſeq.

(C) Captain of a Troop of 45 Gentlemen.] Let's cite Mezerai, who tells the Reaſon of Raiſing this new Troop. '(f) Eſpernon raiſed to the higheſt 'Degree of Favour, in which Joyeuſe began to de-'cline, ceaſed not to ſpur on the King to the Ruine 'of the Guiſes; and they, in Revenge, having 'ſworn his Deſtruction, formed ſeveral Conſpira-'cies to compleat it. He had the Policy to per-'ſuade the King, that they were all intended a-'gainſt his Sacred Perſon; and by this means in-'duced him to Guard himſelf with the famous Band 'of 45 which he choſe himſelf, perhaps with a 'Deſign which the Event will diſcover. They 'were all Gaſcons, whom the hopes of puſhing their

(f) Mezerai, abregé Chronol. tom. 5. p. m. 301.

'For-

Gentleman, Chamberlain, and Governor [redacted] Security of Henry III's Person. He was also Master of the Wardrobe, and Gentleman of the Chamber to this Prince. 'Tis generally agreed, That he encouraged him to rid himself of the Duke (D) of Guise, [redacted] was present at the Execution; but about the manner (E) of his being an Accomplice in it, it is not so generally agreed, nor are the Historians any better agreed about his Disgrace: for some say, he was turn'd off because he asked (F) a Government; and others, That the [redacted] a Government given him on purpose to remove him from Court; adding, that by the treachery of du Gaste, he left his Government, and was forced to retire [redacted] Native Country. He was there killed some time after. [redacted] seem to say, that he was with the King, when the Monk, James Clement

Remark F. See the Remark [redacted]

See the Remark F.

' Fortune made [redacted] of everything. Lognac ' was their Captain

(D) He encourag[redacted] to rid himself of the Duke of Guise.] (a) At [redacted] time the Duke of Nevers, ' and Lognac, Captain of the 45, were continually ' exasperating him; the Duke of Nevers, because he ' irreconcileably hated the Duke of Guise, and Lognac, because, having in some sort succeeded to Espernon's Favour, as a second to Bellegarde, Cousin German to this Duke, he knew that the House of Guise, ' a constant Enemy to Favourites, would not long ' suffer him in this P[redacted]

(E) The manner of [redacted] being an Accomplice in the Murther of the D[redacted] Guise is not agreed on.] Some Authors say, [redacted] the Duke '(b) leaving the ' Council had not yet met, was passing to the King's ' Chamber, and crossing the Gallery which led to ' it, and entring into his Majesty's Chamber, he ' saw the Sieur de Lognac sitting upon a Trunk, ' his Arms across without stirring. He had long ' suspected [redacted] that the Sieur de Lognac had under- ' taken [redacted], and thinking that he was [redacted] ' there to attend him; he resolved impetuously to ' fall upon him, and laying his Hand to his Sword, ' drew it half out; but the Sieur de Lognac, and ' some others seeing him make such an Attempt at ' the King's Chamber-Door, prevented him, and ' immediately threw him down and dispatched him ' with their Swords, without giving him time to ' speak a Word. This is the Opinion of those who ' have written the History (c) of these Matters, ' as printed at Geneva, but the Opinion of the League ' is quite contrary'. The Relation I have mentioned above, imports, That (d) Lognac staid with his Sword drawn in the Chamber, where the Execution was to be perform'd, and where the King had placed eight of the 45. These eight had each a Dagger. The Duke of Guise entering into the Chamber, saluted those that were there, (e) who rose up, Saluted him at the same time, and followed him as out of Respect; but when he was within two steps of the Door of the old Cabinet, he was seized by the Arm by the Sieur [redacted]ny, Senior —— who stab'd him with [redacted] Hand in the Breast, saying, Ha! Traytor, thou [redacted]x die. At the same instant the Sieur Des Effrenates started up, and the Sieur de St. Malins gave him another Stab with his Dagger in the Breast, and the Sieur de Lognac run him into the Reins. ' Others (f) Relations say, That Nine of ' the Forty five came from behind the Tapestry ' where they were concealed; and that the Duke of ' Guise seeing near the Chimney, Lognac, whom ' he knew to be his mortal Enemy made some steps ' backward to draw his Sword; that he had first got ' rid of the Assassins; and that Lognac perceiving ' that he came directly to him, gave him a Thrust in ' the Belly, of which he fell, and died some Mo- ' ments after'; Davila supposes, that Lognac did not wound him at all, and that he only pushed him back, seeing him come forwards to him; that after this Repulse, the Duke, who had received several Wounds, fell down and died. (g) Dopo molte ferite [redacted] per ogni parte del corpo ornate finalmente [redacted]gnac, al quale s'era impetuosamente mosso [redacted] innanzi all'impensa della guardarobba, & in [redacted] fece proferir parole fuori gli ultimi sospiri della [redacted] vita. Thuanus affirms, That Lognac seeing him come up to him in a menacing Posture, opposed him with his Sword (h), in the Scabbard, and knocked him down. He was only Spectator of the Tragedy, if we depend on Thuanus, [redacted] on. He was leaning on a Coffer, when [redacted] disengaged himself from the Assassins, and came to him with a Design to fall upon him, says he. (i) Hinc in Monpesatum Loniacum, qui cum Rogerigo Bellegardio Termo in cubiculo adstat, arcâ genu altero innixum protensis brachiis & contractis pugnis tendere videretur, quasi ipsum petiturus. Duplcix is more positive; he makes the Eight alone do all the Execution. (k) Lognac being none of those that the King had chosen, did not strike him, tho' he was particularly his Enemy: However he had offered his Majesty to attack him in a single Combat. But the King thought there would be as much Hazard as Courage in that, and would not suffer him. I have read this last Circumstance in no other Historian. The Offer made to Henry III. of taking off the Duke of Guise by a Duel, being constantly ascribed to Grillon. Davila relates, that Grillon making this Offer upon refusing the Commission to kill the Duke, left the King in an extreme Perplexity, which lasted till Lognac had promised him to see the Execution done. I relate the Words of this Historian, because they contribute to the History of our Language. (l) Lasciò il Rè grandemente dubbioso di quello dovesse operare, e stette in questa perplessità fino al giorno vigesimo primo, nel quale confidato il negotio a Lognac uno de' suoi huomini della camera sua, il quale già dal Duca di Guisa era stato introdotto alla Corte; e per la gratia, per le maniere, e per la gentilezza de' costumi già cominciava ad avanzarsi al luogo de' Alignoni, egli senza molto riguardo promise con alcuni delli guarantacinque, che dependevano strettamente da lui di eseguire prontamente questo fatto.

(F) He was turn'd off because he ask'd a Government, and others say, That a Government was given him on purpose to remove him.] '(m) The Sieur de Loignac, a great Favourite of the King —— importuned him to give him a Government, and a Place ' of secure Retirement, because of the Enmity the ' House of Guise bore him: His Majesty asking ' him, If he had no other Reason than that to ask ' him a place of Retreat; Loignac answered, ' no, and that the Enmity of the House of Guise ' was Reason enough. Get you gone immediately ' out of my Court, said the King to him, and let ' me never see you more, since you desire any other ' Security than being near my Person; I have not ' been mistaken in my Opinion of you, I much ' suspect that you are tainted with Ingratitude, and ' have forgotten the Obligations you are under, for ' the Benefits I have conferr'd on you. Loignac receiving an Answer from the King so contrary to his Expectation, immediately left Blois, and passing ' through Amboise, retired into Guienne, where he ' was killed soon after by a Pistol-Shot, as he came ' out of his Castle, to go a Hunting, by a Gentleman his Neighbour, with whom he had a Quarrel'. This is Peter Victor Cayet's Relation, which at once shews what I have elsewhere promised (n) and is also an Instance that Henry III. on some occasions, knew how to shew Resolution and Greatness of Mind. The following Relation is very different.

' (o) The King, at the beginning of the Year ' 1588, had made two Masters of his Wardrobe, ' the Lords de Bellegarde and de Lognac; the former from a natural Affection he had for him; the ' latter at the pressing Instance of the Duke of Esperion: ' But as that Affection which springs from our own ' Nature, strikes deeper Root than the Liking either ' induced upon the Recommendations of others; so ' he began to be weary of Lognac, especially after ' the Death of the Duke of Guise, and the more because he had been the first who induced the King to ' consent to this Murther, which succeeded so unfortunately to them: From hence forward he began to ' look on him with an ill Eye. I can assure you of ' one thing, that three Weeks before he left the ' Court, an experienced Courtier said to me: Obser-

(a) Mezeray, ibid. pag. 324.
(b) Cayet Chronol. Novenaire to. 1. fol. 105. verso.
(c) That's to say, the Memoires of the League, and the History of the five Kings.
(d) See Mar[redacted] his[redacted] Fr[redacted] to. [redacted] pag. 631. 632.
(f) Varillas Hist. of [redacted] III. [redacted] pag. 194. 195. Edit. of Holland.
(g) Davila lib. 9. pag. m. 535.
(h) Loniacus en[redacted] porrum, ut [redacted] vagi- [redacted] ictus, [redacted] nemi obicit, cujus primo impari- su jam viribus animi & corporis linquentibus in tapetem subjectum toto corpore concidit. Thuan. lib. 93. pag. 246.
(i) Id. ib.
(k) Du[redacted] plcix, hist. of Henry III. pag. m. 181.
(l) Davila ubi supra, pag. 533.
(m) Cayet ubi supra fol. 133. verso.
(n) At the End of the Remark H. of the Article of Henry III.
(o) Inquier lettres liv. 13. p. 65. and the following of the 2*d. Tom.*

Clement, assassinated him. I don't know whether the Lognacs, who were killed in a Duel (G) in the Reign of Lewis XIII. descended from him.

LOYER (Peter le) Counsellor in the Presidial Court at Angers, was born in the Village of Huillé in Anjou, the 24th of November 1540. He was one of the Learnedest a Menage, Remarques sur la vie d' Ayral, pag. 168.

b serve this Gentleman, as good a Face as he sets upon the matter, he is totally routed. For entering publickly into the King's Cabinet, to keep up his good Opinion with the People, he immediately comes out by the Back-Door, and retires to his Chamber quitting the Field to Monsieur de Bellegard. The King who would not intirely discontent Longnac, had formerly given him the Government of Anjou and Touraine; and he had often told him, that he ought to retire thither; but he forseeing, that if he left his Place, he should only be a Governour in Parchment; and that they who had the Governments of the Towns wou'dhave all the Power, remain'd still at Court with the King; who at last, not able to bear the sight of him any longer, told him, That he had frequently enough declar'd how little Satisfaction he received from his Presence; so that he might take his Choice either to go off immediately, or never appear before him more but on Fridays, a Day he set apart to do Penance. Longnac seeing himself totally cashier'd from his Master's Favour, and no hopes of any longer respite, began to act the part of a desperate Man, who meditated nothing but Revenge: A Counsel, however, which he did not execute, but has since been very well managed by another Hand. He posted away one fine Night, and retired to Amboise'. This was a Town of his Government, and where du Guast, whom he looked on as his Creature (a) commanded. He was very well received, and proposed to du Guast the Design of making an Advantage of having the Prisoners (b) of Henry III. in their Power. The Court suspected this Conspiracy, and entered into a kind of Negotiation to prevent the Consequences: (c) Longnac protested, that he would most faithfully preserve the Town, the Castle, and the Prisoners for the King. But to say truth, he reckoned without his Host, for he had put a thought into du Guast's Head, who knew very well how to make his Advantage of it. (d) There were in the Castle two Companies; that of du Guast, and another——Du Guast by a bold stroke of Policy, gives a false Alarm, and makes Longnac believe, that there were People ravaging on the other side of the Bridge, who attempted to make themselves Masters of it, and that it wou'd not be amiss to play 'em a prank. Longnac, whose Hands itched to be doing something, and who did not at all mistrust du Guast, took it on him to clear the Coast; he marches out of the Castle, followed by the other Company, and soon finds there was nothing at all in it. But at his return, thinking to enter at the place where he marched out, he found the Gates shut against him, and all his Company. You may judge what a confusion he was in, to find himself first thrust out of his Master's Favour, and next out of the only place where he proposed himself some Consolation in his Disgrace. Seeing himself thus trick'd, he was forced to resume the old Road to his House in Gascony; and his Company of Soldiers, that of Blois. DuGuast excuses himself (as I have learnt from his own Mouth) by alledging he had certain Advice, That Longnac came to Amboise, with a Design to kill him, and make himself absolute Master of the Place, And that to avoid this Danger, he was willing to prevent him'. We shall make a Reflection below upon this Excuse of du Guast.

(a) Id. ib. pag. 66.
(b) The Friends and Relations of the Duke of Guise.
(c) Id. ib. pag. 67.
(d) Id. ib.

Were I to choose, between Victor Cayet's and Stephen Pasquier's Accounts, I should not imitate Mr. Varillas, who gives the preference to the former, without saying one word of what is contained in the latter. He relates (e) the Agreement made by du Guast with the League for delivering the Prisoners, and the Conditions upon which Henry III. made that Compact miscarry, by granting du Guast considerable Advantages, and then adds, That the Counter Blow of these two Compacts rebounded upon Longnac——The King was insensibly grown cold to him; and tho' his Majesty had hitherto held the Ballance even betwixt Bellegarde and him, as he had formerly done betwixt the Dukes of Joyeuse and Epernon; he now on a sudden inclined wholly on Bellegard's side by refusing Longnac the Post of Master of the Horse, to give it the other. The discontent this gave Longnac made him desire his Majesty, too plainly, that for his lost Favour he wou'd be pleased to give him a Place of Security for his Retreat. Mr. Varillas afterwards relates the Answer which Cayet supposes the King made. This is all his Account. How many essential Circumstances are here wanting; and what did he think of, in connecting Longnac's Disgrace with the base Dealing of du Guast? To what purpose is this? The Omission of Facts, which might serve as a Connexion to these things, and furnish a reasonable Transition to an Historian is not the least of his Faults. Nothing is more worthy of a Critick's Attention, than such over-sights; and nothing more proper to mend the Taste and Judgement of an Author, than to be admonished of this kind of Mistakes.

(e) Varillas ubi supra, pag. 205.

Note, these words of Thuanus, (f) Tum, that is when James Clement stabbed Henry III. with a Knife, Mompesacus, Loniacus, & Joannes Levinz Mirapiceusis, qui aderant, hominem ictu regis attonitum superduri ira prensum humi sternunt, statim innumeris vulneribus confossum interficiunt. Davila says (g) that Mompensat, Longnac, and the Marquis de Mirepoix, Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, threw James Clement's Body out at the Window. I believe that in both these Historians, the Comma betwixt the two first Names, is a Fault; for Mompesat was one of our Lognac's Names; but if they mean by their Loniacus, and Lognac, him that I Treat of in this Article, they are in an Error; he was not then at Court.

(f) Thuan, lib. 96. pag. 300.
(g) Davila lib. 10. pag. 586.

By the way, du Guast deserved no credit, when he alledged the Excuse, which Pasquier relates. The Action he would excuse, look'd so black, so infamous, so perfidious, that there's no Lie, but he must have invented to cover it. And 'tis the common Custom of those who are guilty of such Crimes, to maintain that without that they had been ruined, and that they had most certain Advice of Designs formed against their Life. They don't always lie, but most commonly they do, and this is sufficient to render all Apologies of this kind suspected of Imposture, unless they are built upon undoubted Evidence. It was not impossible that Longnac should take Measures to supplant the other; for there were few honest Men at that time, either at Court, or in the League; but the Presumption is wholly against du Guast; he was a dishonest Man, (h) an arrant Villain, and shewed it soon after, since notwithstanding all his Obligations to Henry III. who had loaded him with Favours, he Treated with the League for the surrendering the Prisoners whom that Prince had given him the Charge of; and he had actually delivered 'em, if the King had not prevented him by advantagious Offers. Unfortunate Prince! who was obliged to recompence the most infamous Treasons of his Subjects. Miserable Age! in which Assassination, Perjury, Disloyalty, were the ordinary ways to Greatness; an Age worse than the Iron one, and of which every one might say, (h) See the Memoires of Queen Margaret.

Nunc (i) aetas agitur, pejoraque secula ferri
Temporibus; quorum sceleri non invenit ipsa
Nomen, & a nullo posuit natura metallo.

(i) Juvenal. Sat. 13. v. 28.

(G) Whether the Lognacs, who were killed——descended from him.] D'Audiguier affirms it. He had heard (k) say, that one of those who fought for the Baron de Biron, was the last in conquering, but having at length got his Enemy under, he gave him several Stabs, without being able to kill him, so that he was forced to quit him alive, seeing his Companions go off. He fled on Horseback for some time, on purpose to save his life. If this was Longnac, he was punished for it in his Successors, [illegible] Father and Son were both killed

(k) D'Audiguier, ubi supra pag. 439.

Lawyer (a) Man of his Age, and at the same time one of the greatest Visionaries that ever lived. He quickly understood the Oriental Tongues, but was so infatuated (B) with Hebrew Etymologies, that he made himself ridiculous. He also pretended to find in (C) Homer, whatever he had a mind to. He found in him the Village of his Birth, and his own Name, and for fear he should be taxed with boasting of an extraordinary Knowledge, he declared it was the Grace of God, that wrought in his Mind all those wonderful Effects. We see in his Book of Spectres, a prodigious Reading; but as learned as he was, and that with so great a Mixture of Madness, he was entirely unknown to Vossius (D) and Colomiès. The latter has left him out of his Gallia Orientalis. Peter le Loyer died at Angers, in 1634, in the 84th. Year of his Age.

Gabriel Naudé doing him Justice, as to his Reading and Knowledge, openly laughs at his Notion about Orpheus, the greatest Sorcerer that ever lived, said he, and the greatest Necromancer, whose Writings were only stuffed with the Praises of Devils, as particularly Jupiter Alastor, the revenging and exterminating Devil. See the Ninth Chapter of the Apology of great Men, accused of Magick. See also the Chevræana, page 30. of the 2d. Part.

LOY-killed in Duels within these 4 or 5 Years. One in Rouergne, by the Baron de Mayrlas, and the other not far from Bissetre, by the Baron de (a) Rabat. Two brave Barons, who are no less discreet and courteous than brave, and who put an end to two brave Men. I did not know the Son; but the Blood he drew by several Wounds from him that killed him, testifies what he was. As for the Father, I have sometimes seen him in Company with Baron de Roquefusil (another of the bravest Men in the World) and at the deceased Queen Margaret's, where he held extraordinary Disputes in Philosophy, and greatly manifested his Knowledge of good Letters.

(a) This Duel was fought in 1615. The President de Gramond speaks of it, lib. 1. histor. Gallim, p. m. 71.

(A) He was one of the Learnedst Men of his Age.] This is what Mr. Menage says of him. (b) Erat quidem Loyrius Græcè & Latinè, Hebraicè, Arabicè, & Chaldaicè doctissimus, sed Turris in quo versabatur, planè ignarus. There are abundance of People of this Character: they are ignorant of nothing, but of what they ought to know best. A Barrister, as he was, ought to have understood the Law, and had nothing to do with Hebrew, or Arabick; and yet he was ignorant in the Law, and deeply learned in the Oriental Tongues. Let's go on with the Praises Mr. Menage has given him. (c) Excepting these Visions, Peter le Loyer, was a great Man. He was one of the best read Men in the World, as his Works declare, his Colonies, his Spectres, his Paraphrase on the Magnificat. He likewise had a Taste for the Belles Lettres. He wrote Greek, Latin, and French Verses: when he studyed the Law at Toulouse, he carried the Eglantine Garland in the Plays of Flora. He made a Comedy in French Verse, called the Nephelococugy, upon which Ronsard made this Stanza.

(b) Menage, ubi supra, p. 167.

(c) Remarques sur la vie de Pierre Ayrault, pag. 168. † This happened in the Year 1572, according to la Croix du Maine, pag. 403.

LOYER, tu dois Muse n'erre
De bastir une Ville en l'air,
Où les Cocus puissent voler:
Pour eux trop petite est la terre.

See La Croix du Maine, and du Verdier Vau-Privas, in their French Bibliotheques.

(B) He was infatuated to Hebrew Etymologies.] (d) In his Books (e) of the Idumean Colonies ——he derives from the Hebrew, or Chaldee Tongues, not only the Names of the Cities of France, but even those of the Villages of Anjou; of the Hamlets, Houses, Bordages, Fields and Meadows. I shall therefore say, these are his Words, at pag. 217. that the Village of Huillé (his Birth-Place) is derived from Ahalé, or Oholé of Ezekiel, which is Ada, or Gada, the Wife of Esau, and Mother of Eliphaz. Near Huillé, about half a Mile on the River Loire, there is on one side a little Hamlet, called Basletas, which I derive from Bassemath, and Bassemtis, another Wife of Esau, and Mother of Raguel, Grandmother to Jetreth, and Great Grandmother to Job. Mr. Menage having given Three or Four other Instances of the same Force, adds, (f) All the Book is filled with such Observations; which makes me boldly say, that we have had no great Loss, in the Loss of Ten or Twelve Volumes of other Books of Colonies of the same Author. I suspect, that Mr. Bochart wished the Loss had been more general.

(d) Menage, ibid. pag. 166. 167.

(e) Printed at Paris in 1620. in 8.

(f) Menage, ibid. pag. 167.

(C) To find in Homer whatever he had a Mind to.] (g) This Peter le Loyer found every thing in Homer. He found in one single Verse his own Christian Name, the Name of his Family, the Name of the Village where he was born, the Name of the Province in which this Village lay, and the Name of the Kingdom that contained this Province. In a thing so incredible as this I speak of, I am obliged to give here his own Words in his Idumæa Colonies. After this great Prophecy; which is wholly owing to me. Homer comes to speak this Verse (i) addressing himself to Ulysses:

(g) Menage, ubi supra, p. 167.

(i) Verse 183. of the Odyssey.

Τλῆθι δ' ἔτι καὶ ἐμεῖο κακὸν μῦθον, ὅς τις ἄκουσε.

And no Body, says Anticlea's Shade to his Son Ulysses, has yet thy (Loyer) reward in all Respects happily repaired; and what follows, which bears another meaning. In all this long Verse you'll exactly find Πέτρος Λοΐερ, Ἀνδεγαυός, Γαλλοβρίτων. Theta.

That is to say, Peter Loyer, Angevin, Gaulois d'Huillé. There is neither more nor less in it; let who will make the Trial. This I offer to defend to all that read me; and why should not I defend what is notoriously my own in Homer? There's no Satisfaction in a Thing which is not ones own, or doubted to be ones own. Now Homer attributes this Verse to me, and by so doing he makes it mine, and not another's. And whatever way we turn this Verse in Homer, it will still be mine; and I can claim it for my own. There are three Letters, which remain in this whole Verse, which perhaps may be said to be superfluous, but they are not so. These are the Numeral Greek Letters, ΘΧΥ, which denote the time when the Name should be revealed, which is contained in this Verse of Homer, to wit, the Year of Christ 1620. And what is there less superfluous? Now this is sufficient, as to what concerns my self; which I don't value for the Glory I hope from it; but rather because I cannot and ought not to be silent of what has been revealed to Homer concerning me. This will serve moreover to strengthen my Work concerning the Originals, Migrations, and Colonies of People, which had been long reserved for me. Homer in vain concealed the Origin of many Nations, under the covering of Fables; since there was one, to write in future Ages, who should discover what he had attempted to conceal. I don't boast, for all this, to know more than other Men. But who will withstand the Grace of God, co-operating in me? This is what Homer discovered, even to the naming the little Villages where I should receive my Birth, that I might not glory in my Weakness and Meanness, but rather in God, who makes me what I am, and renders me so potent and vigorous, in that he comforts me (k). Nothing could be left out of this long Passage, where every thing shews so learned and singular a Madness.

(k) C'est Id 530.

(D) Unknown to Vossius.] I have read in one of his Letters (l) a Conjecture which fully discovers

(b) Compare with this, what Montagne in the 3d. Book and 10th. Chapter of his Essays, says of a Lawyer of his Acquaintance. His Words have been applied in the Nouvelles de la Republique des Lettres, Novemb. 1686. pag. 1286. See also Gonsalez de Salas duplici viventium terra.

(l) Pag. m. 439.

LOYOLA (Ignatius). Founder of the Jesuits, was born in 1491, in the Province of Guipuscoa, in Spain. He was educated at the Court of Ferdinand and Isabella; and when his Age permitted him to bear Arms, he sought Occasions of signalizing himself. He gave sufficient Proofs of his Courage, at the Siege * of Pampelona, and was there wounded by a Cannon Shot, which broke his Right Leg. While he was in cure of this Wound, he formed the Resolution of Renouncing the World, of going to Jerusalem, and afterwards leading a very particular sort of Life. As soon as he was cured, he took his Way towards Notre Dame, of Montserrat β; and being arrived there, he hung up his Arms over the Altar of the Holy Virgin, and consecrated himself to her Service, the Night [illegible] of March, 1522. He proceeded as near as possible, by all the Rules (A) of Chivalry γ, in listing himself under the Standards of this Spiritual [illegible]. He parted before Day, dressed himself like a Pilgrim, and bent his Course towards Manresa, where he sojourned about a Year amongst the Poor of the Hospital, in the Practice of all kinds of Mortification. There it was that he writ the Book (B) of Spiritual Exercises. Having embark'd at Barcelona, for his Voyage to Jerusalem, he arrived at Cajeta in Five Days, and being unwilling to continue his Enterprize, without receiving the Pope's Benediction, he came to Rome δ, from whence, after he had paid his Respects to Hadrian VI. he took his way to Venice. Here he imbarked the 14th. of July 1523, and arrived at Joppa the last of August, and at Jerusalem the 4th. of September the same Year. Having satisfied in this Country, his devout Curiosity, he returned to Venice, from whence he parted, to go on board at Genoa, in his return to Barcelona, where he fixed his Abode for some time, as a most convenient Place

* This was the Siege which the French laid to it in 1521. and which was followed by the Surrender of the Place.

β In Catalonia, about a Days Journey from Barcelona.

γ Cum autem in Profanis libris legisset virum quo novi milites olim inaugurabantur, ut ejus ritus imaginem quamdam spiritualiter in se repræsentaret, novis contra diabolum armis accinctus, &c. Ribadeneira in vita Ignatii, lib. 1. c. 4. pag. m. 32.

δ He arrived there on Easter-Day, 1523 vers his Ignorance in this Point. He believes that Loerius de Spectris had been said instead of Lavaterus.

(A) He imitated as near as possible, the Laws of antient Chivalry.] One of the learnedest Men of this Age, has jested upon this, in a manner worth the relating. 'The first thing to be observed in 'him (a), says he (b), is, that he was conve[illegible] 'by reading the Legends of the Saints. [illegible] 'Quixot was to Knight-Errantry, by th[illegible] 'of old Romances——His Countryme[illegible] was 'never more touched with the Adventures of the 'first Knights, than Ignatius with the Histories of 'St. Dominick and St. Francis (2). For these 'were they which affected him most; and 'before he wou'd take a fixt Resolution of running 'through the World, as a Religious Knight-Errant, he represented to himself the difficult Adventures of these two illustrious Heroes, and 'found he had Courage enough to undergo the like. 'Thus in a Fit (3) of Zeal, he leapt one Night 'out of Bed, and fell on his Knees before the Image of the Blessed Virgin, and in that Posture 'vowed himself her Knight; which is so considerable a Circumstance, that I wonder Maffe has omitted it, together with the strange Noise which 'was heard in the House, the rocking of the Chamber, and the clattering of all the Glass-Windows, 'which happened at that time, a sure Sign, says 'Orlandin, that the Devil bid him then farewel. 'After this the Virgin appeared to him, with great 'Glory, holding her Son in her Bosom, which so 'incouraged him in his first Design, that a little 'after he took his Journey to Monserrat, a Place 'of great Devotion to the Virgin. In his Journey 'thither, he had like to have begun his first Adventure by fighting with a Moor, who confessing, 'that the Blessed Virgin remained a Virgin, till 'her Child-Birth, denied, that she continued so 'afterwards. For St. Ignatius reflecting whose 'Knight he was, grew so enraged, that he thought 'himself absolutely obliged to revenge upon the 'Moor, the Affront he had done his Mistress, but considering a little what was best to be done, and the 'Moor taking another Road, he left the Affair to the Judgment of his Mule: and throwing the 'Bridle upon her Neck, resolved to be the Death of the 'Offender, if at the first cross-way she took the Road 'which he had taken. The good Mule knowing 'full well her Master's Intention, turn'd out of the 'great Road, and took that of Monserrat, where 'as soon as he was arrived, he performed a remarkable Ceremony, which was this. Ignatius, as Orlandin (4) and Maffe expressly say, having 'read in Books of Chivalry, that the antient 'Knights taking upon 'em that honourable Imploy, 'were wont to watch all Night in their Arms; 'thought himself obliged to begin in the same 'manner: He hung up his Sword and Bagonet before the Altar of the Virgin, put on his 'Accoutrements, and instead of glittering 'Armour, took a long Vest, of very course Cloth, 'girding it about him with a thick Cord, to 'which he fastened a Water Bottle; instead 'of a Lance, he took a Plain Staff, walking '[illegible]with a wooden Shoe on one Foot, [illegible] the other 'naked, without making use of a [illegible]iece, that 'he might be exposed to the Injuries of the Weather. Before he entered the Town, he fastened 'all his Vestments, which he had procured by the 'way, to the Pummel of his Saddle, says Maffee (5) for fear the People should think him out of 'his right Senses, and did not put 'em on, till he 'came to the Place, where, by the Laws of 'Chivalry he was to watch, thus accoutred. 'Being come to the appointed Place, he put 'em 'on, and watched, say they, sometimes standing, 'and sometimes on his Knees, thus consecrating 'himself with all his Might, to the Service of the 'Blessed Virgin. This done, he departed early in 'the Morning, which is a necessary Circumstance 'to Knight-Errants, and came to Menresa, where 'he lodg'd, in the Hospital of the Town, letting 'his Hair and Nails grow, begging from Door to 'Door, fasting always six Days a Week, disciplining himself thrice a Day, [illegible]ing seven Hours a 'Day in vocal Prayers, [illegible]eeping on the bare 'Ground, the better to prepare himself for all Adventures in his Expedition to Jerusalem.

(B) His Book of Spiritual Exercises.] He composed it in Spain, in 1522, and published it at Rome in 1548, translated into Latin by Andrew Frusius, and Licensed by the Approbation of Paul III. They who wonder how he could read the Lives of the Saints, during the Cure of his broken Leg, forasmuch as (c) he had scarce learned his A. B. C. may with much more Reason wonder, how he could compose the Book of Exercises, in the Time of his Ignorance, did they not know what Lewis de Pont affirms, that God revealed these Exercises to St. Ignatius, and that the Holy Virgin helped him to compose them. '(d) Refert Ludovicus de Ponte, vir omni exceptione Major, in vita P. Balthasaris 'Alvarez, c. 43. fidâ Traditione inde usque à P. Jacobo Lainio altero. Societatis Jesu Præposito Generali, acceptum haberi. Deum hæc exercitia 'Sancto Patri Nostro revelasse: imò per [illegible]abrielem 'Archangelum non nemini fuisse à Dei [illegible]irgine 'significatum, se patronam errum, [illegible]ricem, 'atque adjutricem fuisse, decuisseque [illegible]um, ut 'ea sic conciperet; quo nomine se huic [illegible]i dedisse 'initium.' About an Age after an Indictement of Theft was publickly brought against (e) the Founder of the Jesuits on occasion of this Work; 'twas maintained, that he was not the Author of it. His Accuser was a Benedictin. This was an Affront to Paul III. and to the Congregation of Rites, for the Pope formally assures the contrary into his Approbation of the Book, and when the Cardinal Francis

(a) That is to say, Ignatius Loyola.

(b) Stillingfleet, of the Fanaticism of the Church of Rome.

(2) Ribadeneir, vit. Ignat. c. 1.

(3) Ribadeneir. c. 1. Orlandin. Hist. l. 1. n. 12.

(4) Orlandin. Hist. l. 1. n. 18. Maffæus, l. 1. 4.

(c) [illegible]. [illegible]et, ibid. pag. 289. ex Maffeio in vita Ignat. lib. 1. c. 1.

(d) Alegambe, Biblioth. Societatis Jesu, p. 11.

(e) See Alegambe & Sotuel Bibl. Soc. Jesu. init.

Place, for the Deſign he had of ſtudying the Latin Tongue. I ſay nothing of the miraculous (C) Adventures of his Voyage; I ſhould never have done, ſhould I copy his Hiſtorian on this Head. He began the Rudiments of Grammar in 1524, and finding, that the Reading (D) a Book of Eraſmus cooled his Devotion, he would no longer hear that Writer mentioned; but betook himſelf to Thomas à Kempis. At Two Years end, he was thought to have made a ſufficient Progreſs, to be admitted to Lectures of Philoſophy; accordingly he parted for Compiutum in 1526. His Mendicant Life, his Equipage, and that of his Four Companions, who had already eſpouſed his Fortune, together with the Inſtructions he gave the People, who crouded about

Francis Maria del Monte reported before Gregory XV. the Proceedings of this Congregation, with reſpect to the Canonization of St. Ignatius, he declared, that the Book of Spiritual Exerciſes was the Work of him whom they were about to Canonize. The (a) Benedictins of the Congregation of Mount Caſſini, condemned in a General Aſſembly (b) the Book, in which St. Ignatius was accuſed of Plagiariſm. Innocent X. put the matter out of doubt, as Father Sotuel pretends: for this Pope inſerted in the Roman Breviary, a preciſe Teſtimony, that Ignatius was Author of the Exerciſes. (c) Nunc extra omnem Controverſiam Catholicis certa eſſe debet (ea res) poſtquam in Breviarium Romanum eſt relata atque in lectionibus toti Eccleſiæ propoſitis auctoritate Innocentii X. Pont. Max. in feſto S. Ignatii diſerte tradita his verbis, quo tempore homo literarum plane rudis admirabilem illum compoſuit Exercitiorum librum S. Apoſtolicæ ſedis judicio & omnium utilitate comprobatum. Alexander VII. confirmed the ſame thing by a Brief of the 12th. of October, 1657, where he grants a Plenary Indulgence (d) to all who ſhall make uſe of St. Ignatius's Spiritual Exerciſes.

The Two Bibliothecarians of the Society, have not done the Benedictin the Honour to name him, but we know from other Hands, that he was called Conſtantinus. He pretended, that a Benedictine, called Garcias Ciſneros, was the true Author of the Spiritual Exerciſes, which have gone about in the Founder of the Jeſuit. Name, and that Three Monks of Mount Caſſini, gave the ſame St. Ignatius the Book of Conſtitutions of the Society of Jeſus, when he took a turn among them, whilſt he was meditating the Deſign of a new Order. This Benedictine who thus brings St. Ignatius into the Number of Plagiaries, backs his Proof with the Teſtimony of a famous Jeſuit, whoſe Sence he has miſtaken: for this Jeſuit only ſays, that the Founder of the Benedictins aſſiſted St. Ignatius with his Divine Illuminations, for the forming the Conſtitutions of the Society. The meaning of which is, that three Monks of St. Benedict, dictated theſe Conſtitutions to Ignatius, as to a Tranſcriber. (e) Dixi Societatem JESU videri charam S. Benedicto, in cujus ſinu Lutetiæ primùm delineata ſit; & poſtmodùm Caſſini ſancto fundatori illuc digreſſo, Sanctiſſimus Patriarcha illius loci præſes, multa lumina & cæleſtes afflatus exoraſſe viſus eſt. Hoc Cætanus ad exceptas inibi per S. Ignatium à tribus Monachis Conſtitutiones Societatis JESU traxit; quaſi quod dixi, S. Benedictum, (ut prum eſt arbitrari,) cæleſtem lucem, hærenti in æde ſua S. Ignatio eſſe apprecatum, idem ſonet, quod tres Monachos, nigros, dictaſſe S. Ignatio velut amanuenſi, ſuas Conſtitutiones. Note by the way (f) that the ſame Benedictin maintains, that the Jeſuit he cites, committed a Mortal Sin in putting any other Name than his own in the Title Page of his Books (g). A Jeſuit called John Rowe, has treated this Accuſer of Ignatius very roughly. It remains that I ſay ſomething concerning the Book of Exerciſes. They tried to get it condemned in Spain, in 1553. Melchior Canus was very active in it, and the Archbiſhop of Toledo would not have been ſorry that it had ſucceeded; but the Doctor he conſulted, was of another Opinion. This is what the Jeſuits ſay, but who knows when they ſpeak Truth? (h) Inventi ſunt qui——anno 1553. eum librum non allatrarent modò, ſed & morderent, Thomas quidam Iedrovius, alienæ ea in re voluntatis adminiſter, & Melchior Canus, cujus ſuggillationes, & obelos, cum Paſchali Mantio Ord. Prædicatorum, Complutenſi Theologo primario, exhibuiſſet Joannes Siliceus Præſul Toletanus, qui librum illum cupiebat ab eo improbari, reſponſum retulit, nihil eſſe in ſic diſpuncto libro damnatione dignum, præter Cani diſpunctiones, & ſuggillationes, ut ad illum annum recitat Orlandinus, addito pergravi Bartholomæi Torres, poſtea Canarienſis Præſulis, elogio eorumdem exercitiorum.

Some other Works are attributed to the ſame Author, a Letter de religioſa obedientia ad Luſitanos ſocios ac filios, written from Rome the 26th. of March, 1553, has been inſerted in the Bibliotheque des Peres. A Letter de religioſa perfectione ad Hiſpaniæ ſocios, written the 4th. of March 1547. was printed in Latin, in the Collection of the Letters of the Generals of the Jeſuits. There is another Latin Verſion of 'em (i) printed at Cracow, in 1607. in the Collection intituled, Theſaurus ſpiritualium rerum ad Societatem Jeſu pertinentium. A Letter to Claudius King of Æthiopia, dated the 22d. of February, 1555. 'Tis found in the Hiſtory of the Jeſuits, written by Orlandin and elſewhere. He had written a Book upon the Trinity, before he began to Study. 'Tis not known how this Book came to be loſt. No Body doubts but he is the Author of a Book, called Conſtitutiones Societatis Jeſu decem in partes diſtributæ. But ſome believe, that James Lainez is the Author of the Declarations that are joined to it. Father Sotuel confutes this (k) Opinion. This Book of Conſtitutions &c. was printed firſt at Rome, by the Jeſuits, in 1558, in 8. It has ſince been publiſhed in the ſame Place, in Latin, and in Spaniſh, in Folio, in 1606. The Latin Verſion was made by John Polancus, Secretary to the Author (l).

(C) The Miraculous Adventures of his Voyage.] The bare Recital of his Extatick Viſions would make a very long Remark, did I trouble my ſelf to relate all that are found in his Hiſtory. See Dr. Stillingfleet (m) who draws from thence a good Proof, that the Inſtitution of the Jeſuits, as well as other Monks, is founded on Phanatiſm. He cites Melchior Canus, who ſays, that Loyola fled from Spain for fear the Inquiſition, which ſuſpected him of the Hereſie of the Illuminate, ſhould impriſon him. (n) Melchior Canus adds, that Loiola told him a Thouſand impertinent Things concerning his Vertues, and his Revelations, and ſpoke of one of his Comrades as a great Saint. This pretended Saint being interrogated by Melchior Canus, vented ſeveral Hereſies through meer Ignorance. Loiola, to excuſe him, alledged, that he was not a Heretick, but a Lunatick, who had his lucid Intervals, and who at that time, by Reaſon of the New-Moon, was not a good Catholick: (o) Cum aliquando Romæ eſſem, Innicum illum videre mihi libuit: qui in ſermone ſine ulla occaſione cepit ſuam commemorare juſtitiam, & perſecutionem, quam paſſus eſſet in Hiſpania nullo ſuo merito. Multa etiam & magna prædicabat de revelationibus, quæ divinitus habuiſſet, idque nulla ejus rei neceſſitate: qua fuit occaſio, cur eum pro homine ſano haberem, nec de revelationibus ſuis quicquam ei crederem——— (p) Quendam ſociorum pro laudo prædicare cepit, qui cum accitus veniſſet, vix hominis non ſatis incolumi capite mihi ſuſpitionem movit: cumque de rebus divinis eum percunctatus eſſem, multa hæretica reſpondit, quippe qui idiota, planeque rudis & indoctus eſſet. Innicus ejus conſul confuſus, iſte, inquit, non eſt hæreticus, ſed fatuus, credoque eum lucida habere intervalla, eamque adeo propter conjunctionem Lunæ non eſſe uſquequaque Catholicum.

(D) That the reading of a Book of Eraſmus cooled his Devotion.] This Book is his Enchiridion militis Chriſtiani. 'Tis univerſally looked upon as a Piece, in which the Purity of Style is join'd with the ſobereſt Rules of Chriſtian Morality. However, Loyola did not reliſh it; 'twas an Ice that damp'd his Fire of Divine Love; he took an Averſion to it, and would never read this Author's Writing, nor was he willing his Diſciples ſhould

(a) Sotuel, ib. pag. 1. col. 2.
(b) Held at Ravenna, in 1644.
(c) Sotuel, ibid.
(d) Conceſſa indulgentia peccatorum plenaria omnibus Chriſti fidelibus, exercitia ſpiritualia à S. Ignatio inſtituta peragentibus octidui ſpatio in domibus Societatis. Sotuel, ib.
(e) Theophilus Raynaudus, Hoploth. ſect. 2. ſerie 2. cap. 12. p. m. 256.
(f) Ibid.
(g) This is the Treatiſe De æquivocatione, againſt John Barnes.
(h) Theophil. Raynaud. de malis & bonis libris, n. 514. p. m. 293.
(i) Inſtituted, De fervore ſpiritus excitando.
(k) This is that of Theophilus Raynaudus, tomo 18. tractatu contra Clementem Scotum.
(l) Taken from the ſame Sotuel, pag. 1. & 2.
(m) Ubi ſupra, from the 280th. page, to the 303.
(n) Melchior Canus in judicio ac Societate Ignat. Loyolæ, anno 1548. Litteris conſignato. Scripſus ſe cite Infam. Famiani Strada, lib. 12. Alphonſo de Vargas cites him alſo, Relat. c. 1. See the Caſe of the Relations of Ludenus, pag. 327. of the 8th. Tome de la Morale pratique.
(o) Melch. Canus, apud Scriptum, ibid.
(p) Idem apud eumdem, p. 293.

about him, obliged the Inquisition to examine what he was. (E) The matter went so far, that he was cast into Prison, from whence he was not released but upon condition that he « would forbear venting his Opinions for four years. This Injunction was no way suitable to his design; not willing therefore to submit to it, he retired to Salamanca, where he continued to Discourse upon matters of Devotion. He was prison'd afresh, and set at liberty again on the same conditions, as at Compluta. Then he determin'd to go to Paris. He arrived there in the beginning of February 1528. with a firm Resolution to Study hard; but the misery he was reduc'd to, having oblig'd him to beg his Bread in the Streets, and put him into St. James's Hospital, extreamly cross'd his Design. He tried several Expedients to remove all these Obstacles, but as fast as he got clear of one unlucky difficulty, he was involv'd in others; for 'twas observed, that the Zeal with which he exhorted young People to Spirituality, made 'em betake themselves to a very ill way of Life. He was accus'd before the Inquisitor of the Faith; and narrowly escaped a Lashing (F) in the College of St. Barba. All these Difficulties did not discourage him; he went thro' his Course of Philosophy, and Divinity, and gain'd over a certain Number of Companions, who engag'd themselves by Vow to a new Life. This they did in the Church of Montmatre the fifteenth of August 1534. and they renewed their Engagement twice successively in the same Place, and on the same Day, and with the same Ceremonies. At first there were only seven, reckoning in Loyola himself among 'em; afterwards they came to be ten. 'Twas determined among 'em, that Ignatius should return into Spain, to regulate some Affairs there, that afterwards he should go to Venice; and that they should leave Paris the twenty fifth of January 1537, to go and rejoyn him. He came into Spain in 1535, where he Preach'd Repentance, and was Followed by prodigious Crowds of Hearers. He remembered the Affairs his Companions had recommended to him, and in due time passed by Sea to Genoa, and from thence Travell'd to Venice, where they all met him « on the eighth of January 1537. Du-a Ribadeneira ubi supra, c. 14 p. 73.

β They parted from Paris the fifth of November 1536. and did not wait till the time which they had agreed upon.

(a) Ribadeneira, in vita Ignatii, l. 1. c. 13. p. 69.

(b) Among others Teresa de Cardenas & Eleonor Mascarena, who was afterwards Governante to Philippe II. Ribaden. ubi supra, c. 14. p. 73.

(c) Nihil certe minus: immo hoc tibi affirmo percursationes ejusmodi in universum illis displicuisse me, ne filia ea aetate ac forma in cujusquam petulantiam incurreret. Id. ib. p. 74.

(d) Ex Ribadeneira, l. 1. c. 14.

(e) Id. ib. c. 15.

(f) Furius, apolog. pour la Reformation, 1. part, c. 1. p. 50.

(g) Ibid. p. 51. 52.

read 'em. Ribadeneira will tell us the Story [illegible]; one, that Ignatius not only de[illegible] Master (a) In hoc studiorum palaestra versanti, pii quidam [illegible]hip him, but that he was actually whipt; the ac docti viri consilium dederunt, ut Erasmi Ro[illegible]ther, that this pass'd at Paris, in Montaigu Col*mi, qui eo tempore bona latini tatis auctor habebatur, libellum de milite Christiano legeret, ut sermonis scitiret elegantiam cum pietate conjungeret. Cujus consilii Confessarius etiam ad reliquos auctor accessit. Quod cum Ignatius simpliciter feciss[illegible], observavit illius libelli lectione refrigescere in se spiritum Dei, & devotionis sensim ardorem restingui. Qua re animadversa, librum de manibus omnino abjecit, & ita est aversatus, ut nec ipse amplius legerit illius auctoris libros, & passim in Societate nostro legi veterit.*

(E) The matter went so far, that he was cast into Prison.] Before it came to this, Inquiry had been about his Life and Doctrine, and he had only been made enjoined to wear Shoes and Stockings, and not oblige his Companions to go barefoot. But when it was observed that a Widow and her Daughter had undertaken a Pilgrimage begging, and on Foot, Ignatius, who had been their Cassuist, was much exclaimed against. Hereupon he was imprisoned. I don't wonder the Alarm was taken, when People reflected on the great Ascendent this Man had gained over the fair Sex. People continued to flock about him in his Prison to hear him Discourse; and there were a great many Persons of Quality of both Sexes (b), who offered him their good Offices, but he thankfully refused 'em. Being asked whether he was the Author of the Widow's Pilgrimage, he answered, that on the contrary, he had dissuaded her from it, fearing that the young Damsel, who was very handsome, might be exposed during these Travels, to some Temptations (c). The Sentence was pronounced the 42d. Day of his Imprisonment, and he was discharged (d). He was used worse at Salamanca (e).

(F) He narrowly escaped a Lashing in the College of St. Barba.] Mind this Account of Mr. Furieu. ' (f) He came to Paris in 1528, and being conscious of his Ignorance, he entered himself in Montaigu College; he there began again his Studies, put himself into the Sixth Classe, to learn his Grammar a second Time, and desired his Master to set him a Task, and whip him as he did the other Scholars, when he wanted his Lesson. He was then Thirty seven Years old, a pretty Sight, to see this venerable Saint's Shirt taken up amongst a Company of Boys, who were Spectators of the Comedy——(g) We have already seen, how after this, at Thirty seven Years of Age, he caused himself to be whipt in Montaigu College, before the little Boys. Here are two Things affirdently

(1) Mass. l. 1. c. 16.

(2) Orlandin. Hist. l. 1. n. 47.

(k) He was called James Govea.

(l) See Ribadeneira, lib. 2. c. 3.

(m) Quid multa? prehensa manu Govenus, ad orationem Ignatium adducit, hic repente se, omnibus inspectantibus, illi ad pedes [illegible]: [illegible] ninis credulum, illum virum sanctum clam[illegible] ne[illegible] te[illegible] cruciatus terrore, sed Dei tantum honore tangatur. Ribaden. ib. p. 98.

(n) Lutetiae primum Montis Acuti Gymnasio se bonis Lasi[illegible]tis [illegible] cap[illegible] bus [illegible] manda[illegible] tradidit, in eoque studio biennium fere consumpsit. Id. ib. c. 1. p. 87.

(o) Mass. in vita Ignatii, l. 1. c. 18.

(p) Pasquier, Catechisme des Jesuites, liv. 1. c. 11.

(q) See Cicero de offic. l. 1. c. 23.

During the time that he waited for 'em, he was not Idle: He gained Souls, and yet got acquainted with (H) John Peter Caraffa, who was afterwards Pope. Being engaged by Vow to make a Voyage to Jeruſalem, they prepared themſelves for that Expedition; but they were deſirous before all things to ſalute the Pope, and obtain his Benediction and Permiſſion. They went therefore to Rome, and obtained their deſire. But returned to Venice with a deſign to go on Board, they found no opportunity: The War with the Port had put an intire ſtop to the Tranſportation of Pilgrims. Hereupon rather than be Idle, they reſolved to diſperſe themſelves in the Towns under the Venetians Juriſdiction. They preached in the Streets, and afterwards went into the Univerſities to gain Scholars, and at laſt returned to Rome. There it was that Ignatius formed the Plan of a new Society, which Pope Paul III. confirmed in the year 1540, without Limitations. He was created General of this new Order in 1541, and fixed his Head Quarters at [illegible], whilſt his Companions diſperſed themſelves throughout the Earth. Here he applied himſelf to ſeveral good Works, as either the Converſion (I) of the Jews, the Converſion of Women, of (K) a bad Life, or the Overſeeing and Education of Orphans. He found himſelf ſoon expoſed to the moſt outrageous

(g) Imo vero Judæorum liberis ad Chriſtum contra parentum voluntatem invecientibus, bonis spoliatis, omnibus integra manere, etc. Ribadeneira lib. 3. c. 9. p. 213.

(i) Taken from Ribadeneira ibid.

(k) Magna Roma misericordiæ opus eam vilebatur meretricum, quæ ex prostitutæ publicum facientes (major enim per id tempus, morum in urbe licentia, quæ tantæ christianorum Pontificum vigilantiæ, severis postea legibus compescenda erit) & urbis ipsa meretricius sordibus obsoleſcebat. Id. ib.

(l) Id. ib. p. 214.

(m) That's to say, the Convent of the Magdelonnetes.

(n) Rabad. ib. p. 215.

(a) Ribadeneira, ib. c. 5. p. 105.

(b) Idem lib. 2. c. 6. p. 109.

(c) Morale pratique des Jeſuites, tom. 3. p. 279.

(d) Joannes Rho. Mr. Arnaud [illegible] mig[illegible] ha[illegible] ded[illegible] Franciſcus Sacchinus, who has joyn'd [illegible] ſtory of the Jeſuits, compoſed by Orlandin, a Preface and a Treatiſe, cujus lit auctoritatis quod in B. Cajetani Thienæi vita de S. Ig[illegible] tr[illegible] à [illegible] B[illegible] Ca[illegible]o, inſtitutiſſe ipſum ut in Theatinorum Ordinem admitteretur. Sotuel in Biblioth. p. 251.

(e) Spondanus ad ann. 1555. n. 8. He cites Sleidan l. 26.

(f) Ribadeneira, ib. p. 109.

dently aſſumed the Dreſs of Married Women, and behav'd themſelves to them as if they had been their Lawful Husbands. Ignatius got very ſevere Laws made againſt this Corruption. (a) Quibus quidem operibus & vitæ exemplo, prudentiaque tantum apud illos homines profecit, ut errores multos corrigeret; vitia, quæ in ſacerdotes etiam mores irrepſerant, & longa jam conſuetudine honeſtatis nomen obſederant, emendare non deſitit: multaque conſtituit, quæ ad hominum mores conformandos, pietatemque augendam pertinerent. In his ſeveræ leges fuerunt ejus operâ latæ à magiſtratibus, de aleâ, de concubinatu ſacerdotum. Nam cum patrio more Virgines, quæ [illegible] tradcrentur, capite aperto eſſent, peſſimo [illegible] multi, cum apud clericos ſacerdotes viverent, perinde caput obnubebant, ac ſi legitimo eis matrimonio junctæ fuiſſent: quibus ſi idem, quaſi maritis, proſtabant. Quod nefarium inſtitutum, ac ſacrilegum, funditus tollendum curavit.

(H) Got acquainted with John Peter Caraffa.] Who was Pope under the Name of Paul IV. and who had then joyn'd himſelf (b) with ſome other Votaries, to form the Congregation called the Theatin's. Theſe in this laſt Age have had a great Quarrel with the Jeſuits. See the uſe Mr. Arnaud makes of it. One may judge, ſays he, (c) ſpeaking to the Jeſuits how little touchy you are by that ſharp and harſh way, wherewith your Writers (d) have Treated the Theatin's, for having ſaid in the Life of the Bleſſed Cajetan, That St. Ignatius four or five years before the Eſtabliſhment of your Society living with the Theatins at Venice, when he came [illegible] from Spain, in the year 1536, had Leave [illegible], and Admitted with the Sanctity of his [illegible] that he deſired to be received amongſt them. But that the Bleſſed Cajetan would not grant his requeſt, becauſe God had acquainted him that he would found another Order, more given to action. Be this true or falſe, could it be a juſt ground for flying into ſuch a Paſſion, and continuing a flagrant War for near thirty years together; were it true that you are ſo little ſenſible, as you ſay, of what only affects the Reputation of your Society? Mr. de Sponde (e) obſerves, that John Sleidan, and ſome others after him, have falſly ſaid, that the Jeſuits were founded by this John Peter Caraffa. The truth, adds he, is, that as the Jeſuits came into the World a little after the Theatins, and almoſt in the ſame Habit, they went by the ſame Name which they ſtill retain in Spain and Italy. If in requital, the name of the Jeſuits was given the Theatins, we might leſs wonder at Sleidan's Aſſertion. The Author I have ſo often cited, acknowledges, that theſe two Orders of Regular Clergy came ſo cloſe upon one another's Heels and were alike in ſo many things, that the Name of Theatins was often given to the Jeſuits. (f) A quibus vulgi errore falſo Theatinorum in nos uſi appellatio, cognomenque transfuſum. Nam cum ordo uterque, noſter & illorum, clericorum Regularium ſine, eodemque fermè tempore nati, neque habitu valdè diſſimiles, populus rudis externa ſpecie deceptus, alienum nomen noſtris impoſuit, Roma primùm; unde in alias deinde urbes influxit, & in remotas etiam provincias penetravit.

(I) Either to the Converſion of the Jews.] He entertained in the Jeſuits Houſe ſome Jews, who had been Baptiz'd, and by his earneſt Solicitations, obtain'd, that all Jews, who embrac'd the true Faith, ſhould be entertained in a certain Houſe appointed for that purpoſe. At his requeſt Pope Paul III. decreed that they ſhould preſerve all their Goods, and that if they were Children (g), who were Converted without their Fathers and Mothers conſent, they ſhould have the whole Patrimony. And as to Goods acquired by Uſury, the true Owner of which was not known, it was order'd, that they ſhould be given to the Converted Jews. Julius III. and Paul IV. added a new Order, which was that all the Synagogues of Italy ſhould be taxed every year in a certain Sum to be applied to the Maintenance of theſe Proſelytes (h). The French Converters have imitated part of theſe Injunctions in our Days.

(K) The converſion of Women of a bad Life.] At that time (i) their number was prodigious: They who would quit this infamous way of Life, were received into the Convent of the Magdalene, provided they obliged themſelves to a perpetual Cloiſter, and to the Vows of the Order. This Condition, which was ſomewhat hard, retarded the Fruits, that might be expected from the inſtitution of this Convent: it excluded all Married Women, and all Maids and Widows, who would willingly have quitted their wicked courſe of Life, but could not ſubmit to the Laws of a long Penance. There were therefore two ſorts of Debauch'd Women, which his pains were Employed about. Thoſe who feared the Reſentment of their Husbands, had need of a place of Retreat, where they might be in ſafety, till they had made their Peace with 'em. They who would quit Criminal, without renouncing honeſt Pleaſures, had need alſo of ſome Place, beſides a Convent, where they might have a Subſiſtence when they gave over the Trade of a Curtezan. For which reaſon Ignatius cauſed Appartments to be built in the Church of St. Martha, in which a new (k) Society was founded for this kind of Penitents. (l) Permultæ ex iis reperiuntur, quæ hoc perfugio excluduntur: quibus tamen locus aliquis dandus eſt, quo ſe recipiant, dum maritis reconciliantur, ut à vitæ honeſtate, quam petunt, abſit periculum. Porro aliæ emergere quidem ex facibus illis vellent, ſed non continuò ſe diuturnæ pœnitentiæ dedere: neque ſi ut peſſimæ fugiant paratæ ſunt, ſeſtari idcirco optima concupiſcunt: quibus receptum ad tempus dari (m) Cœnobii illius leges non ſinunt. Ignatius igitur, ut omnium ſaluti conſuleret: & ne qua eſſet, quæ victus quærendi difficultate ſuæ turpitudini prætexeret, locum peropportunum inſtruendum curavit, quod omnium eſſet commune perfugium. He was the firſt bountiful Contributer to this Building: His Example was followed by ſeveral, and eſpecially by Leonora Oſoria, Wife to John Vega, Embaſſador of Charles V. 'Twas a very Edifying ſight, to ſee the General of the Jeſuits, at the Head of a band of Whores, leading 'em either to St. Martha's Church, or to Women of Qualities Houſes, who undertook to have 'em inſtructed and taken care of. (n) In hoc autem divæ Marthæ Cœnobium, mulierculas à turpi quæſtu abductas ipſemet ſæpenumero, ne perirent, vel in matronæ alicujus honeſtæ domum, inſtituendas ad virtutis ſtudium, id

gious(L)Calumnies, which did not however hinder his pursuing whatever might contribute to the Glory and Establishment of his Order. There were those (M) of the other Sex, who were willing to submit to his Discipline; but the Trouble which the Direction of only three Women had given him, obliged him to deliver his Society for ever from this Incumbrance. Having gotten his Order confirmed by Pope Julius III. 1550, he had a Mind to lay down his Generalship, but the Jesuits would by no means Consent to it. So he kept that Post to his Death, which happned on the last of July 1556[a]. The Author whom I cite, having honestly owned, That his St. Ignatius had not the Gift of Miracles, and having even prevented the Objections which were to be feared on this Head, had undoubtedly a hint given him, That he had gone too far, and that it was not prudent to make such Confessions in the Face of the World. However it be, he Retracted it in a New Book, and mentioned

[a] Taken from the Life of Ignatius Loyola, written by Ribadeneira.

id ætatis vir, & Generalis Præpositus deducebat. When he was told that the pains he took to Convert these Prostitutes, was lost Labour, since they were harden'd in Sin, and would quickly return to their Vomit, he answer'd that he should think all the Labour of his Life well Employ'd, if he could cause these Creatures to abstain only one Night from offending God; and though he was persuaded, that the next Day they would fall again into their infamous Practices, yet he would not cease to labour with all his might to save that small space of time. (a) Cum autem Ignatio objiceretur, in curandis hujusmodi mulierculis malè operam poni, quippe quæ in vitiis jam occalluissent, facileque reverterentur ad vomitum: Minimè sanè, inquit Ignatius: sed si omnibus meæ vitæ curis, atque laboribus id possim efficere, ut vel unam noctem, peccato vacuam præterire istarum aliqua velit; omnes ego quidem nervos contendam, ut vel illo tam exiguo tempore Deus ac Dominus noster non offendatur: etiam si sciam illam statim ad ingenium redituram (b). As he was careful to remedy the past, he did not forget to prevent the evil to come. He knew, that the honour of many Maids is in danger, either because they are Poor, or because their Mothers take not sufficient care, or even turn Procuresses for 'em: He therefore got a Convent built, whether the young Women should be remov'd, who were in this Danger. (c) Illud etiam excogitavit, in lubrico versanti virginum pudicitiæ qua ratione succurreret: ne videlicet puellaris castitas, aut matrum turpitudine incuriave defloresceret, aut paupertate. Quamobrem præclarum, omnique laude dignum Cœnobium constructum est, Sanctæ Catherinæ, ut vulgo vocant, de funariis: in quod, tanquam in asylum arcemque transferuntur adolescentulæ, quæ in periculo pudicitiæ versantur.

(a) Ribad. ubi supra. pag. 215.

(b) In Vere de la Mainferme, in Clypeo nascent. Fontebrald. Ordinis dissert. 4. pag. 219. has made use of this Example to justify Robert d'Arbissel's great care of the Common Women. See the Remark D. of the Article Fontevraud.

(L) He found himself expos'd to the utmost Calumnies.] Ribadeneira does not enter into particulars, and I don't think there is any Book extant in which these Calumnies are particularly related. I shall only say, with this Historian, That Ignatius having caused a Married Woman to be put into St. Martha's, who had suffered herself to be carried off by her Gallant, exposed himself to the Indignation of this Ravisher, who being a very Passionate Man, was not content to throw Stones all Night at the House, where his Mistress was shut up, but moreover Defamed the Jesuits all the City over, and dispersed a hundred Pasquils against 'em. He accused 'em of all sorts of Disorders, and of the most Impious and filthy Crimes. He so prejudiced the City of Rome against 'em, that they durst hardly shew themselves, for they every where met with those who insulted and curs'd 'em. I shall set down Ribadeneira's Words, that I may not be thought to amplify. (d) Ut erat vir acer, ac ferox, & in ipsum Sanctæ Marthæ Cœnobium furere nocturnis lapidationibus cœpit, & in nostros iniquis criminationibus debacchari: multaque in vulgus spargere, quæ non solùm falsa essent, sed dictu etiam turpissima. Eoque processit (gratia fortasse, qua valebat plurimum, & autoritate fretus) ut Ignatii nomen publicè infectaretur, & lacesseret: & ea nostris per se, & suos coram objiceret, quæ honestè audire non possent. Famosos præterea libellos confecit, & vulgo jactavit, quibus multa nefaria, & impura, multa impia, & scelerata continebantur: ut nostris viæ in publicum prodire, viæ cum hominibus de ipsorum salute agere liceret: ita aut convitiis ab improbissimo quoque, aut maledictis excipiebantur. Ignatius Petitioned the Pope to Name Commissioners for Examining these Accusations. They were examined by the Governour and Vicar of Rome, who in their Sentence given the 10th of August 1543, declared, That they were all Calumnies. There was a Priest at Rome, who terribly blacken'd the Reputation of the Jesuits. He accused 'em of Heresy, and of Revealing the Secrets of Confessions, and of committing things not fit to be named, which made Ignatius deserve the Fire. See in the Margin Ribadeneira's Words (e), who observes that this Priest was suspended, and deprived of his Benefices, and condemned to perpetual Imprisonment, for Crimes, which time at last reveal'd. As for his Accusations, the Jesuits did not complain of 'em, but suffer'd them to drop unanswered.

(c) Ribaden. ibid. pag. 216.

(d) Idem lib. 3. cap. 13. p. 228.

(M) There were some of the other Sex.] You'll hardly find any Order of Monks, but what has Convents for Maids; and I question, whether you can Name a Founder, who in his Life time had not Female Votaries, who constantly attended him. Ignatius had his, but he did not consent to the forming Nunneries, which should embrace his Rules. Isabella (f) Rosella, his Benefactress, was so desirous to see him again, that she came from Spain to Rome to put her self under his Discipline: She, and some others, obtained leave of the Pope to make the same Vows as the Jesuits. Ignatius did not oppose it, till he had experienced the prodigious trouble they gave him. Perceiving then that this would only incommode his Society, he represented his Reasons so urgently to the Pope, as to get a Discharge from this Burden. (g) Mirum est trium mulierecularum gubernatio, quantum illi molestiæ & occupationis paucis diebus attulerit. Ergo Pontificem Maximum docet, quanto ea res impedimento Societati sit futura: orat, obsecratque Pontificem, ut se præsenti molestia, Societatem metu perpetuo liberet: neque permittat nostros homines, aliis in rebus magnis, utilibus, necessariis occupatos, hac mulierum cura minus necessaria implicari. Quod utique Pontifex, rationes Ignatii probans, Societati dedit: literasque Apostolicas scribi jussit, quibus nostri in perpetuum ab onere Monialium eximuntur, & quarumcunque mulierum cura sub obedientia nostrorum in communi, vel alias vivere volentium, anno 1549. ab eodem Paulo III. impetravit, ne curam Monialium, seu Religiosarum quarumlibet personarum recipere teneamur, per literas Apostolicas impetratas, vel in posterum impetrandas: nisi de indulto illo, & ordine nostro, expressam facientes mentionem.

However, it was not by way of precaution, in point of Chastity, that he was willing to be rid of this Sex; for if we believe Historians, the Holy Virgin granted him the Gift of Continence in such a degree, that from the time he became her Knight, to his Death, he felt not the least Symptom of an immodest Temptation. He might therefore safely frequent the Women, and preserve himself as untouched in the midst of all these Flames, as the three Jews in the Babylonian Furnace. His greatest Intimacies with the Sex would not have been a matter that could justify one's telling him, (h) Periculosæ plenum opus aleæ tractus, & incedis per ignes suppositos cineri doloso. In that respect, he had the Gift of the Hippa (i). What is said of some Enchanted Soldiers, that they are in no danger, tho' expos'd to a furious Storm of Musket-Shot, is an Image of Loyola's Continence: The most lascivious Oglings, the most tender Caresses, and in general, all the Artillery Woman could

(e) Invidiæ stimulis incitatus ita exarsit, ut falsis illum odiosisque criminationibus in invidiam vocare nostrosque infamiæ labe aspergere conaretur. Nam & hæresis calumniam, & auditarum confessionum sacratissima jura violata, & alia, quæ honeste dici non potuit, non est verecundatus objicere & Ignatium ipsum vivum flammis cremandum jactata. Ribaden. ib. p. 229.

(f) Id. ib. cap. 14. pag. 239.

(g) Id. ib. pag. 231.

(h) Horat. Ode 1. lib. 2.

(i) See the Remarks of the Article Hippia.

mentions (N) I know not how many Miracles wrought by the Founder of his Order. He goes so far as to pretend, that the Words of Virgil, had in his Mouth the employ against his Virtue, would have found [illegible] etrable: Always provided that we refer [illegible] to (a) Maffei's Words. I have read a Parallel (b) of Luther and Loyola, in which 'tis observed, that Luther, without any extraordinary Grace, [illegible] a chaft Celibacy to 42 Years of Age, and being afterwards Married, neither blemished his Mod[illegible] Piety: and that after all, Loyola's Chaf[illegible] erved no Commendation (c), since there's no [illegible]tue, but what proceeds from a Victory, disputed with the Passions.

(N) He retracted it [illegible] and mentions I know not how many Mir[illegible] chapter of the 5th Book of S Ign[illegible] n by the Jesuit Ribadeneira is very remarkable; he begins with this Objection, (d) If all you have been saying be true, whence comes it that Loyola's Sanctity was not confirmed by Miracles, like those of so many other Saints? The Author answers, Who has known the Mind of the Lord, or who has been his Counsellor? God alone works wonderful Things, and as 'tis he alone performs 'em, he alone knows the proper time and place in which Miracles ought to be wrought, and by whose Prayers. Ut solus ille hac potest efficere, ita ille solus [illegible] quo loco, quo tempore miracula & quorum precibus facienda sunt. He adds, that all Saints have not had the gift of Miracles, and that those who have been most Eminent for the Greatness, or number of their Miracles, have not for all that excelled the others in Holiness of Life. For it is not by Miraculous, but Charitable Actions that we are to judge of a Person's Sanctity. [illegible]e proves from the Authority of St. Gre[illegible] Reasons drawn from Scrip[illegible] and from Example (f) Neque omnes sancti viri miraculis excelluerunt: neque qui illorum aut magnitudine præstiterunt, aut copia, idcirco reliquos sanctitate superarunt. Non enim sanctitas cujusque signis, sed charitate æstimanda est. He makes it appear by Scripture that the Gift of Miracles is granted sometimes to false Teachers, and in a very few words exposes to view the Strength of whatever the Protestants can urge against those who upbraid 'em; because Luther and Calvin had not this Gift. I say not this, adds he, to extenuate this Vertue, but to let the prudent Reader understand, that all this must be refered to the good Providence of God, who distributes his Gifts according to his own good Pleasure. He afterwards assigns some Reasons, for which God might think fit, and that even in Favour of the Jesuits, to deny their Founders this Gift of Miracles. We must hear himself. (g) Hac dixerim non ut [illegible] illorum vim elevem sed ut prudens lector intelli[illegible] iem totum Deo committendam: qui dona sua [illegible] distribuit, prout vult. Potuit ille, pro sua occulta sapientia, nostra hoc imbecillitati dare, ne miracula unquam jactare possemus. Potuit utilitati, ut autbore instituti nostri minus illustri, à Jesu potius, quàm ab illo, nomen traheremus: & nostra nos appellatis sacra moneret, ne ab illo oculos unquam dimoveremus: quem non solum, ut communem humani generis liberatorem ac Principem, sed etiam, ut præcipuum Ducem colere, atque imitari debemus, minimam hanc Societatem sui nominis glorioso titulo decorantem. Potuit hoc etiam tribuere temporibus, quibus hac miracula necessaria non sunt. Lastly, he says (h) that the manner of the Institution of the Society of the Jesuits, its prodigious growth, and the Miracles wrought by some of its Members, are a convincing Proof, that it is the Work of God, and is a sufficient Ground for ascribing the Glory of Miracles to the Life of its Founder. Thus the Ancient Fathers have observed that the speedy Propagation of the Gospel throughout the [illegible], tho' the Instruments God made use of h[illegible] g considerable in 'em, according to the [illegible], and tho' it met with the violentest opposition, is so bright a Miracle, as would alone be sufficient to prove the Divine Original of Christianity. The Protestants alledge the same thing, when they are asked what Miracles Luther and Calvin wrought to support their Mission. Let us once more cite Ribadeneira. Quid admirabilis, says he, (i) quam militarem hominem, ferro & castris assuetum, à spiritu Dei alienum, ita immutatum, ut non solum ipse Christo militaret, sed sacræ militiæ antesignanus esset, & princeps? Quid insuetatius, quam tot homines ingenio, studio, ætate florentes, ab Ignatio egeno ac despicato, nulla magnæ vel literarum scientia, sermonis elegantia & copia, huc adduci potuisse, institutum ut vitæ cursum abrumperent, spes suas projicerent, paupertatis, dedecoris, atque ignominiæ sese telis objicerent, & tot laborum periculorumque offerent incursibus? He has forgot one Circumstance, which in some Respects does exceedingly heighten the wonder, to wit, that there appear'd in Loyola's Life from his Travels to Monserrat, till the time of his fixing at Rome, so many Marks of Extravagance, and so many Symptoms of a Mind disordered, stupify'd, overwhelmed by Fanaticism, that 'tis strange Men of solid Sense, such as Lainez, and Salmaron, should have adhered to him, and that his Order should so soon have rop'd over all the rest. But if we turn the Prospective, we perceive, that this very thing lessens the Wonder; for nothing is so likely to deceive, as that which appears Supernatural in Madness, Extravagancy and Foolery. However it be, we have here a Famous Jesuit (k) his Cotemporary, who plainly confesses that his Founder wrought no Miracles, tho' he did not die in the Confession of this Faith: For he changed his Note, in (l) another Book. 'Tis true most of the Miracles he relates, were wrought by Ignatius after his Death: Thus he speaks. (m) Quia vero postremo quinti libri capite de miraculis breviter egimus quasi nulla fecisset, aut ad demonstrandam ejus sanctitatem necessaria non essent, statui nunc ea paullo fusius exponere, non omnia quidem (res enim nimis in longum excurreret) sed partem duntaxat eorum quæ Deus efficere per servum suum dignatus est. Quamvis enim cum anno 1572. primum vitam ejus latine scriberem alia nonnulla miracula ab eo facta noviſſem, tamen adeo mihi certa & explorata non erant ut in vulgus edenda mihi persuaderem; postea vero quæstionibus de ejus in divos relatione publice habitis gravibus & idoneis testibus fuerunt comprobata. Enimvero Deus ut servum suum extollat in terris tam frequentibus eum in dies miraculis dignatur, ut mearum partium esse duxerim litteris hic mandare nonulla è publicis actionibus sumta. Note, that he speaks only of the first Edition, which was of the Year 1572, and says nothing of the second, which was of the Year 1587. and which was much enlarged by him. He added several particulars, which he had learnt afterwards either from the Testimony of some Persons of great Authority, Intimate Friends of Ignatius, or the certainty whereof he had discovered by a severe Examination, tho' he had looked upon 'em as doubtfull before. (n) Multa mihi necessario addenda judicavi. Primùm nova quædam, quæ post libellum excusum, gravissimi viri, & Ignatio valde familiares, & ante Societatem conditam intimi necessarii, quæ testes oculati de ipso Ignatio nobis retulerunt. Tum alia, quæ dubia antea mihi erant, & diligenti postea inquisitione investigata, certa esse comperi. Hence we conclude that St. Ignatius's Miracles were things which his Friends had not informed Ribadeneira of, during the 15 Years which passed betwixt the two Editions, nor what the Author could clear from uncertainty, in that Interval of time. Nevertheless he assures us that in the Year 1572, he was informed of some Miracles wrought by this Founder, but not with all the necessary certainty to publish 'em. Amongst the things, of which he was not at that time perfectly assured, there was undoubtedly none, the certainty whereof he sought after more diligently, than that of the Miracles of his Apostle; since therefore he continued to say in the Edition of 1587, that the blessed Ignatius worked no Miracles, it necessarily follows, that his strictest search had afforded him nothing certain upon that head; for if it had afforded him any certainty, he would in his second Edition have added this grand Article with more concern, than those other things which ab il[illegible]

usque [illegible] ultimum vitæ omnis libidi-nis sensu caruerit.
Seckendorf. Hist. Lutheran. lib. 3. p. 315. ex Maffeio in vita Ignat. Loyolæ.

(b) Apud Seckendorf. ibid.

(c) Hac quidem assertione castitatis laus destruitur, quæ non est virtus quando cupiditatibus non exercetur quas vincat. Id. ib. Sanctæ Arti[illegible] Jus[illegible] mo[illegible] pag. 1685.

(d) Sed dicat aliquis, si hæc vera [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the Power (N△) of dismaying Devils, and forcing 'em to cry out for Quarter. You'll find in Morery, that Pope Paul V. beatify'd Ignatius in the Year [a] 1609, and that Gregory XV. inserted him in the Catalogue of Saints in the Year 1622. Innocent X. and Clement IX. increased (O) the Honours of this new Saint. But do what they will for him, nothing is so wonderful in History as the prodigious growth of his Order in so few Years, both in the old World and in the New, in spite of the violentest Opposition of its Adversaries. I believe never any Society had so many Enemies within and without it as the Jesuits have had, and still have; and yet their Authority, which is so suddenly grown to a very high Pitch, seems rather to Increase daily than Decline. The Books that have been published against 'em, would make a large Library of themselves. They may plead that a great many (P) condemn 'em out of meer Prejudice; nor do they fail to make the most of this Plea, without being at the Pains of Answering particularly to all the which he did add, only because of uncertainty as they had been before; they were now become certain by the exact Care he took to be informed about 'em. Farther, would a Jesuit, who had known in the Year 1572, that his Founder had worked Miracles, and who only forbore inserting 'em in a publick Work, because his Intelligence in that Point was not so sure as it ought to be; would he have plainly own'd, I say, that his Founder work'd no Miracles? Would he have argued with so much Concern upon it? Would he have answered Objections against it so Elaborately? His Duty doubtless had been to be silent, 'till he were fully informed, and there is great probability that Ribadeneira would have taken that Method, and that all he has said by an After-Game, is insincere and full of Shifts; nor shou'd it be omitted, that nothing was so capable of being set in a full Light during the Interval of time between those two Editions, than Loyola's Miracles; surprizing Facts, which make a deeper Impression than any others, and spread from Place to Place with greater Noise. Would the Intimate Friends, the Inseparable Companions of Ignatius have said nothing of 'em to Ribadeneira, they who told him so many other things, of which he was not inform'd in the Year 1572, and which he added to his Book in 1587? This, to say no worse of it, makes all the Miracles suspected which have been published, and pretended to have been wrought by Ignatius, before the second Edition of Ribadeneira. The other Miracles of the same Saint are very Numerous, if we take the Word of his good Friends.

[a] And not 1605. as Sotuel affirms Biblioth. Societ. Jesu, pag. 2.

[a] Joannes Christianus Frommann. de fascinat. lib. 3. parte 9 cap. 4, n. 15. pag. m. 949.

[b] Sotuel in Biblioth Societ. Jesu, pag. 2.

[c] Amplius quinquaginta templa in variis orbis regionibus modo numerantur in illius honorem dedicata. Id. ibid.

[d] Refert centum ex authenticis desumpta documentis noster Daniel Bartolus de vita S. Ignatii lib. 5. & permulta recenset noster Alphonsus de Andrada, opere de miraculis patratis Munebregæ in Aragonia, ubi pie colitur Imago admirabilis Sancti Ignatii. Id. Ib.

(N△) The Words of Virgil had the power of dismaying Devils.] The Story goes that Ignatius Loyola had no sooner repeated the place in Virgil, where it is said that Æneas and Dido entered into a Cave, but the possest Woman, who prayed him to succour her, was thrown upon the Ground, the Devil leaving her, and begging the favour not to be shut up in the Eternal Cave. He obtained leave to Ramble where he pleased, provided he never won'd possess any Man or Woman more. (a) Hasenmüllerusenim in Histor. Jesuit. cap. 8. pag. 296. ex Turriano refert, quod aliquando Roma famina quædam à Diabolo obsessa Ignatium Lojolam cecuta sit, & clamavit: Tu solus me liberare & juvare potes. Tunc Lojolam recitasse versum Virgilii: Speluncam Dido, Dux & Trojanus eandem. Qua voce audita Damonem mulierem prostraviss ac egredientem clamasse: O fili Lojola, tu ceu Leo me ad speluncam inferni abire cogis, sed rogo te, ne me æterna spelunca injicias. Postea Ignatium illi dimisse. Vade quocunque volueris, modò nullum amplius hominem obsideas; ac statim Damonium magno cum strepitu egressum esse.

(O) Increased the Honours of this new Saint.] I shall make use of the Words of Father Nathaniel Sotuel. (b) Eundem (Ignatium) Officio Ecclesiastico ubique terrarum coli justit Innocentius X. P. M. sub ritu semiduplici die 29. Octobris anno 1644. Auxit cultum Clemens IX. P. M. & ad ritum duplicem evexit die 11. Octobris 1667. This Author adds, (c) That Ignatius had already more than 50 Churches Consecrated to him in several Parts of the World, that the Miracles performed by this Saint, during his Life, and after his Death, are so numerous and so eminent, that they might fill a Volume; for besides those of which he has spoken in his Life, and in the Bull of Canonization; Father Bartoli relates a hundred (d) that are well attested. Alphonsus de Andrada mentions several others, which were wrought at Munebrega in Arragon, where they Worship a Miraculous Image of St. Ignatius. A Paper Image of the same Saint has bled very lately at one of the Fingers in a Town of Sicily. We have a Book upon it, printed at Palermo in 1668. (e) His consimilia narrantur contigisse in Sicilia Regalbuti Diœcesi. Catanensis, ubi Imago papyracea S. Ignatii anno Dom. 1666. è digito fudit prodigiose sanguinem, & hæc omnia examinata accurate, atque ab Episcopo loci illustrissimo D. Fr. Michaele Angelo Bonadies, olim Generali Seraph Ordinis S. Francisci de observantia approbata, & mandata typis Panormi 1668. See the Remark where I shall speak of three Sermons.

(c) Idem pag. 2, & 3.

(P) They may plead that a great many condemn them out of meer Prejudice.] 'Tis certain that whatsoever is published against 'em, is almost equally believed by their Enemies, both Catholicks and Protestants. 'Tis also true that the Accusations are renewed against 'em as often as occasion offers in any new Book. In the mean time they who examine with any sort of equity the innumerable Apologies published by the Jesuits, find as to some Facts, sufficient Justifications to make a reasonable Enemy drop the Charge. I'll give an Instance of this.

In 1610 there came out (f) a Scurrilous Book against the Jesuits, in which it was affirmed (g) that the Abbot of Bois had maintained, and would prove it to Father Coton's Face, That Sentence had been given against him at Avignon, for getting a Nun with Child. Father Coton answering this Libel, produc'd (h) the following Letter. I, whose Name is underwritten, do certify, That I was in Avignon all the time the R. Father Coton, of the Society of Jesus, *lived there, and that I never heard any one say, that he had committed any thing contrary to the Dignity and Quality of his Profession, and in particular, as to what the Anti-*Coton *charges him: In which Anti-*Coton, since I am made the Author of a manifest Calumny, wherewith the R. F. Coton is charged: I frankly own, that I know nothing of it, and that I have always looked upon the said R. F. Coton as a Venerable and Worthy Ecclesiastick. In Testimony whereof, I have Written and Signed this present Deposition. From Paris, in my Study, the Eve of St. Denys the Martyr, 1610. OLIVIER ABBOT OF BOIS. And I have Sealed it with my Seal. Besides this, he produc'd four Certificates (i). Seen and acknowledged for Authentick, true and legal by the Royal Notaries of the City of Paris. The first was signed Lewis Beau, Protonotary of the Holy Apostolick See, and Sealed with his Seal, and with those of two subsequent Archbishops in the Metropolitan City of Avignon, whose Vicar-General he had been all the time of Father Coton's sojourning in Avignon. The second was signed by 15 Persons, who composed and represented all the Clergy of Avignon. The third was signed by the two Consuls of Avignon, and their Assessor, and Sealed with the Seal of the Consular House. The fourth was given by the Bishop of Orange. These Four Attestations concur not only in contradicting the Author of the Anti-Coton, as an Infamous Calumniator; but also in extolling Father Coton's good and pious Conduct. (k) Besides these Certificates, the Magistrates of Avignon writ to this Jesuit in these Terms. 'If these Testimonies 'of Prelates and Consuls are not sufficient, we 'can produce the Certificates of the greatest part 'of the Gentlemen, Doctors, Citizens, Merchants, 'and

(f) Intitled Anti-coton.

(g) Anti-coton, pag. m. 63.

(h) Reponse à Apologetique d'Anticoton, p. 199.

(i) Reponse à l'Anticoton, pag. 200.

(k) Ibid. pag. 206.

the Charges of their Enemies; they may be furnished with one general (2)

(l) Scilicet nostris nullos qui ita existimarent, juventutem quæ domum Catilinæ frequentabat parum honeste pudicitiam habuisse: sed ex aliis rebus magis, quam quod cuiquam id compertum foret, hæc fama valebat. Sallust. in bello Catilin. pag. m. 33.
(m) Religion des Jesuites, pag. 77. édit. de la Haie, 1689.
(n) Ibid. pag. 79.
(o) Ibid. pag. 80.
(q) The same whom the Author quotes of in these Terms, pag. 79. A Gentleman who is perfectly a Man of Honour, who 'bin the Service of a great Prince of Germany, returned from Vienna nine Months ago, and gives us a thing true and unconcerned, the Accounts which follows: to wit, that there was a Design to poison the Emperor in the Sacrament.
(b) Ibid. pag. 81.
(c) Ibid. pag. 82.
(d) Ibid. pag. 83.

and others of the Town'. I know not what can be produc'd of greater Force to justify the Author. And yet there are a great many who still believed the Nun was got with Child, and that Sentence had been passed upon Father Coton. They gave more Credit to the Anti-Coton, who brought no Proof, nor any authentick Evidence, than to Father Coton, who produced all, that the most exact judicial Proceedings could demand. This could be nothing but the effect of an extravagant Prejudice.

The Fate of the Jesuits, and that of Catiline, is much the same. Several Accusations were given in against Catiline, without any Proof; but they flew with Credit upon this general Argument, since he has done such a thing, he is very capable of having done this or that, and 'tis probable he has. The Historian Sallust (l) has judiciously observed this Illusion, which is not a Sophism of the Schools, but of the Town. There was published at the Hague, about Eleven Years ago, a Book intituled, the Religion of the Jesuits. The Author confesses, that the Prejudice against those Gentlemen is so general, that whatever Attestations of Innocence they fortify themselves with, 'tis impossible to disabuse the World. We must know, says he (m), that nothing so horrible can be said against the Jesuits, though ever so doubtful, but what becomes probable from their Character, and the Consideration of what they are capable of. He gives Two Examples of this: One is, the Report spread, not only at Heidelberg, but through all Europe, that they had suborned a false Spirit from the other World, who cried every Night in the Ears of the old Duke, that there was no Salvation for him, unless he would banish Heresy and Heretics out of his new Dominions, according to the Counsel of the Fathers Jesuits: The Duke, tired with these Visions, resolved to speak of 'em to some Body, He declared himself to one of his Officers, who engaged to conjure the Spirit most effectually, without either Prayers or Holy Water. The Officer bid himself under the Prince's Bed, and when the Spirit came, he so hacked and hewed him with his Hanger, that 'tis said he died of his Wounds. The Officer who had done the Exploit, had the Indiscretion to tell his Wife of it, against the Duke's express Commands. The Wife was no more retentive than the Husband. And thus the Thing was divulged. The Jesuits have tried all manner of Ways to clear themselves. The Duke has issued rigorous Injunctions in his Estates, against speaking of it. The Jesuits have procured Certificates under the Hands of the Protestants themselves, concerning the Falsity of the Story. But all to no purpose. They'll never destroy the Suspicions which these Stories, whether true or false, have imprinted in the People's Minds, because they are known to be capable of this Juggle by others of the same Stamp. He reports some of 'em in general, I mean without Circumstances of Time, and Place and Persons: And after having advised us to reject their Certificates from the Palatinate, he concludes thus: (n) However, be this little Story true, or be it false, we know what they can do, and that's enough to make the thing probable. The other Example is, that the Jesuits had (o) plotted to Poyson the Emperor in the Sacrament. This Prince was cautioned of it, and would not communicate the next Day but forced the Jesuit to take the poisoned Host, of which he died. The Emperor and Court of Vienna, according to its Devotion, ordered under terrible Penalties, the few Persons that were privy to it, to keep the thing a Secret. It was not however well kept; or at least it spread a little, and a Gentleman (q) of Honour swore, that the thing happened for certain in Vienna——— (b) We don't give this for a Truth, pursues the Author, and, indeed to say all, we are not much inclined to believe it; but be it ever so false, the Jesuits will never be able to destroy the Suspicion of it, because of the Character of the Society, which is known all the World over. He adds several Reflections tending to perswade his Readers, that this Story of Vienna is certain; and then proceeds: (c) the thing after all, may be false, but it will ever be thought probable, considering the ordinary Conduct of these good Fathers———(d) They who believe the Story of Vienna false, will however believe it probable. If it be false, it will at least serve to justify what is daily said, that the hatred for the Society is extream even in the Church of Rome. See the Margin (e).

(e) We shall see in the Remar Z, that there has been another false Report spread since that time, of a Jesuitical Conspiracy against the Emperor.

Without so many Repetitions, we might easily have taken his Thought. He means, that a Man need only confidently publish whatever he pleases against the Jesuits, to be assured, that abundance of People will believe it. I believe him in the right, at least, that in this he will prove a good Prophet. 'Twas doubtless on this Presumption that he published the Story of Vienna, though he believed it false. But if other Authors have taken the same Method, what will become of all the Facts, which the Enemies of the Jesuits have published? Should we not have reason to believe, that they have divulged many which they knew to be false, or doubtful, and which nevertheless would in their Reckoning appear as certain, and be received of the Publick, as undoubted Truths? I don't think the Rules of Morality will allow the making so ill a Use of publick Prejudice: They command us to be equitable towards all, and never to represent People worse than they are. I own to this Author, that the readiness wherewith the Publick swallows all that's said against the Jesuits; is (f) a Sign of an excessive Aversion to the Society; and I deny not but this Aversion affords most reasonable Consequences, which blasts their Reputation (g). He has reason to add (h), that the good Fathers would not do amiss to explain to us this Riddle; how it comes to pass, that being so good, so officious, and so amiable, they are notwithstanding so terribly hated, whilst the (i) Jansenists and Jacobins are looked on kindly enough. But we might perhaps confound him, should we require of him the Explication of another Riddle: How it comes to pass, that there are Ministers accomplished in all Kinds of Vertues, as they pretend, who are hated as a Pest in all the different Communions from their own, and who have innumerable Enemies in their own, and of whom nothing could be published, but what would appear probable, whilst Mr. Daille and Mr. Claude, are every where in good Reputation? Be it how it will, I question whether this Writer had all the Prudence of a Nice Disputant, when he insisted so much upon this great Disposition of the Publick to believe whatever is printed against the Jesuits. This is more proper than he imagines, to keep their own Friends fast to 'em, who will easily believe, that this Prejudice has been made too much Advantage of, to publish the most ill-grounded Stories. And as at the bottom it's a great Fault, to be ready to believe whatever is said to the Disadvantage of our Enemies, true or false, doubtful or certain, so there is more Discretion than Sincerity in revealing this Prepossession. Would a cunning Enemy discover this weak Place? But in point of Indiscretion, this Author has not his Fellow. Does not he say in the same Book, that the Esprit de Mr. Arnauld, was suppressed in Holland, only because (k) of the FEAR the Country was in at what time, of quarrelling with the English? Does not he tell the Publick (l), that this Prohibition hindred not the Book's being sold quietly, and without any other Precaution, than that of not exposing it in a Bookseller's Shop? The Fine, adds he (m) imposed on the Printer, was neither demanded nor paid; 'twas only a Formality to stop the Mouth of the Court of England; and they themselves who had forbidden it, would have been very sorry if it had not been sold. Nor did this Prohibition hinder its being re-printed in this Country. He that was reckoned the Author of the Book, was not a Jot the worse received for it at Court, and every where else. Is not this speaking with the utmost Contempt of his Sovereign's; representing Holland so very much afraid of England. Tho' this pretended Fear were true, would not a good Subject have concealed it? Would he have revealed it to the Publick? Would he confess, that the Edicts of the State against a Book, were only a vain Formality, which the Booksellers laughed at? I omit what may be said more, it is an Abyss which Prudence advises to stop at the Brink of; my Indiscretion would be a hundred Times more blameable than that of this Author, if I did not draw a Veil over what he has had the Rashness to boast of, and cry out, Procul hinc, pro-

(f) Relig. des Jesuites, p. 84.
(g) See the Dissertation of Fortunius Gallindus Cantaber de causis publici erga Jesuitas odii. It's inserted in a Collection of Pieces published at Geneva in 1630, under the Title of Arcana Societatis Jesu.
(h) Relig. des Jesuit. pag. 84.
(i) Ibid. pag. 76.
(k) Ibid. pag. 44.
(l) Ibid. pag. 46.
(m) Ibid.

(Q) Common-place to invalidate the Accusations. But 'tis certain, there are those who, without appearing Prejudiced, maintain, that several Things have justly rendered this Society odious. They have not acquired so great a Power, say they, [illegible] preserved it so long, without the Assistance of the most refined humane Policy. [illegible] does not this take in the whole Compass of ill Morals, as to Spiritual Sin[illegible] sides, the Jesuits are the Men who have carried farthest, and with the gr[illegible] sion, the Consequences of Several Doctrines which were hatched before t[illegible] me, and (R) which expose Sovereigns to continual Revolutions; Protestants to butchery

(a) In the 72d. Page of the Religion of the Jesuits, you'll find these Words: To Judge equitably, say they, of the Spirit of Mr. Arnaud, such as the Satyrical Authors paint him, and of the Spirit of this Author, such as he has discovered himself in his Books, it must be owned, that no two things are more like than these two Spirits, and that one may, without being deceived, take the Picture of one, for that of the other. Mr. Arnaud's Apologetick Letter is cited.

(b) Defense des nouveaux Chrestiens 1. partie, pag. 27. printed at Paris in 1687. I have already cited a part of this Passage in the Article of Bellarmin, pag. 539. See also the Remark E, of the Article Bertelier.

(c) Ibid. p. 28.

cul este profani. He has sacrificed to a Paternal Affection, the Things he ought to have most Respect to; for no Body doubts that the Author of the Esprit de Mr. Arnaud, and the Author of the Religion of the Jesuits, is one and the same Person. Nothing's easier discovered; for the Elogies he bestows on the first of these Books in the latter, can proceed only from the Affection of a Father who idolizes his own Brat, struck with a singular Fondness for the Esprit de Mr. Arnaud, the Child of his own Brain, on a two-fold Account, 1st. as it is made according to his own Image and Similitude; next, as it contains his own true Character (a).

(Q) They may be furnished with one general Common-place.] Heretofore they used to answer all the Books that were written against 'em; at last they are weary of it. The reason they alledge for their Silence is, that they are no more obliged to confute the Satires of their Enemies, than the King of France is to answer the Gazetts of Amsterdam. Why shou'd not he allow, 'tis Father Tellier (b) who speaks the Jesuits to neglect answering Libels, which in their Opinion are no less fabulous and contemptible, than the Gazetts of Amsterdam, or the Historical and Prophetical Systems of Mr. Jurieu? Or they to be more tender in Point of Reputation, than the Powers whom God has placed over us? Or they not, or at least, may they not be permitted, after these great Examples, to despise what only touches their particular Honour. Here are more Reasons of theirs, taken from the Insignificancy of their Answers, and the Disposition of one part of the Publick, to take for Truth, whatever is said against 'em. (c) 'We no sooner answer one of their Satyrs, but they have half a Dozen more ready to 'be published. They keep Magazines full of them: 'they have 'em remitted from all Parts of the 'World. Those that were refuted a hundred Years 'ago, or which the World laughed at, though 'they were not refuted, they trump up again at 'this Day with the same Confidence, as if they 'were new Pieces, or had remained unanswered. 'And the Generation that shall come after them 'Forty or Fifty Years hence, will do the same with 'those Satyrs invented in our Days, as despicable 'and contemptible as they are. What use will it 'be, for Instance, to the Jesuits of China, to 'have been the first, and almost the only Men 'who submitted without the least Resistance to the 'Apostolical Vicars, in 1684, when this has not 'hindered their Enemies from publishing the last 'Summer by the Pen of their Secretary, the Holland Gazeteer, that the Holy Father was extreamly provoked against the Jesuits, because they 'would not acknowledge the Bishops, he had sent 'to China. Can it be doubted, that some Years 'hence, this Lye will come again upon the Stage, 'In like manner, what Advantage will it be to 'the Jesuits of Germany to have had an Attestation signed by Four of the Principal Counsellors 'of the Elector Palatine, all Protestants, in which 'they declare, that the Story of a Jesuit counterfeiting a Voice from Heaven to deceive this 'Prince, and to excite him to the Destruction of 'Heresie, is a pure Fable? Will this Act hereafter 'hinder any good Protestant, who shall continue 'the History of the Jesuits, from making a Chapter of this Chimerical Adventure, upon the Credit of the Holland Gazeteer? Why should we not 'expect this, when we see the greatest Authors of 'the Party seriously tell us the Story of the Banterers of Amiens, with all the Circumstances that 'are capable of making a Story ridiculous——— '(d) After this, let not the Holland Gazetteer repent his publishing, for Example, that it was the 'Jesuits, who by their Avarice and wicked Councils, engaged the Emperor in the last Hungarian 'War; that the People of Vienna, enraged against 'em on this Account, massacred several of 'em 'when they could have escaped upon the Approach 'of the Ottoman Army: that it was they burnt 'Stockholm the last Year (a little before it was four 'disguised Turks that did it) &c. Let him not 'repent his publishing these Follies, and an hundred more of the same Nature, nor let him change 'his Style for the future. If they are at present 'despised, at least he may assure himself, that the 'time will come when they shall be very good Memoirs for him who shall make the Twentieth, or 'the Thirtieth Tome of Practical Morality. You see with how much Ap[illegible] they make use of the Prejudice of their Ene[illegible] and how they verify the Maxim, Misfortune good for something. They turn the hatred of the World against 'em to their Advantage, Fruuntur Diis irati. 'Tis certain their Enemies would hurt 'em more, if they laid 'em on with some kind of Measure in their Hand; for whilst they promiscuously heap on ill-grounded Accusations, with those that are [illegible], they favour the accused; they give him [illegible] for rending those suspected which are really true. A Man must be very Blind not to see, that several Libels (e) which daily appear against the Society, put Weapons into their Hands. Did they pay the Authors for publishing such Stories, they might be said to employ their Money well. See the Remark (f) I have made upon the Art of Slandering. Note, that the Jansenists (g) Politickly boast they are not so credulous with regard to the Jesuits, as the Protestants are.

(d) Defense des nouveaux Chrestiens, 1. partie, pag. 31. See on this, the Answers of Mr. Arnaud, in the 3d. Volume de la Morale. pratique, chap. 11. & 12.

(R) Of several Doctrines which were hatched before their time, and which expose.] The Opinion that the Authority of Kings is inferiour to that of the People, and that they may be punish'd by the People in certain Cases has been taught and practis'd in all Countries, in all Ages, and in all Christian Communions that have made any Figure in the World. History affords us Instances every where of Kings Depos'd [illegible] Instigation, or with the Approbation of th[illegible]. The Opinion that Sovereigns have receiv[illegible] the Sword from God to punish Hereticks is yet more Universal than the former, and has been reduced to practice among Christians from the Days of Constantine to ours, in all the Christian Communions that have had the Power in their Hands; and a Man dares scarce write in Holland against such an Opinion. These two Doctrines therefore were not invented by the Jesuits, but they have drawn the most odious Consequences from 'em, and such as are most prejudicial to publick Peace: For from the conjunction of these two Principles they have concluded, and that as they think, by consequential Reasoning, that an Heretical Prince ought to be Depos'd, and Heresy Extirpated by Fire and Sword, if it cannot be done any other way. If Sovereigns have received the Sword to punish Hereticks, 'tis evident that the People, the true Sovereign of Monarchs, according to the first Principle, ought to punish them when they persist in Heresy. But the gentlest Punishment that can be inflicted on a Heretic [illegible] doubtless Imprisonment, Banishment, [illegible]tion of Goods; and consequently an Here[illegible]ing ought at least to be Dethron'd by the People his Sovereign, and Committee-Man, if I may be allowed to use a Rump Expression: Since according to the first Principle, Monarchs are only Delegates to whom, th[illegible] not being able to Exercise its Sove[illegible] in Person, recommend the Functions and [illegible] of it, with Restrictions, and an inalienable Right of Resuming 'em, when they acquit themselves

(e) For Example, that entituled Les Jesuites de [illegible] son[illegible] fesse de Paris en belle humeur, printed in 1695. Compare what has been said in the Article Annat, Remark B.

(f) In the Remark [illegible] of the Article Arnaud, and in the Remark E, of the Article Bellarmin. See also the Article Gregory VII. Remark P. towards the end.

(g) Arnaud, Morale pratique, tom. 3. pag. derniere.

ry and Christian Morality to the most deplorable (S) Relaxation that can be imagined. To return to Loyola, I ought to mention that the House in which he was Born, that present called Santa Casa, and that the Queen Dowger of Spain has made a Grant of selves ill. Now there is no case in which they ought more reasonably to be divested of 'em, than that, when they deserve the Punishment which the Soveraign, according to the second Principle, Ordered by God to inflict on Hereticks. But as it is not ordinarily possible by judicial Processes to take from 'em the Goods, which they have fairly forfeited by Virtue of the Laws which God will have Established against Heresy: As, I say, they have most commonly power enough in their Hands to maintain themselves in the Exercise of Royalty, an Exercise which is nothing but Usurpation as long as they are Heretieks, it follows that Recourse must be had to Artifice, in order to bring 'em to the Punishments which they have rightfully incurr'd, that's to say, Conspiracies may be form'd against their Persons, since otherwise God would have given the Sword to the People, as a true Soveraign for the Punishment of Hereticks, in vain. On the other Hand, if Soveraigns have received the Sword to punish the Breakers of the two Tables of the Decalogue, it follows that they ought to proceed with greater severity against Hereticks, who violate the first Table, than against Murderers and Thieves, who only violate the second; for the Infractions of the first are immediate Treason against the Divine Majesty, and affront God directly: Whereas the Infractions of the second, result to his Dishonour only in an indirect manner. 'Tis therefore the duty of Ecclesiasticks to excite Soveraigns to the Punishment of Hereticks, Violators of the first Table of the Commandments; and if Princes are Negligent in this Part, that Negligence deserves more to be exclaimed against, than a Neglect in punishing Murderers and Robbers. It ought also to be represented, that if the inevitable danger of ruining the State, obliges them to grant Hereticks a Toleration, they are bound to keep their Word no longer than the Danger lasts; and this danger ceasing, they ought to resume the Sword for the Extirpation of Heresy, just as they would resume it against Robbers and Murderers, when the danger which forced 'em to make a Truce with these, is once over. In a word, if God has given the Sword into the Soveraigns Hand for the Punishment of Heresy, the granting it Impuninity will render 'em as Criminal before God, as the granting impunity to Theft, Adultery, and Murther; and the only thing that can excuse 'em, would be that for the avoiding a greater Evil, the infallible Ruin of the Church and State, they were forced to promise the suspension of the Penal Laws, whence it follows that they are obliged to their first Engagement as soon as that danger is past; for every Oath that engages to the Disobedience of the Laws of God, is essentially Null. Thus you see upon what Foundations the Jesuits have built a System, which hath rendered 'em so odious, and which has given so just a Horrour to the Maxims that many among 'em have vented. They have built upon a Foundation which they found ready to their Hands; they have raised Consequence upon Consequence quite out of sight, without being Astonish'd at the Hideousness of the Objects; they have believed on one Hand, that this would turn to the Advantage of the Church; and on the other, that they did nothing against the art of right Reasoning. I shall not examine, whether Logick could effectually lead 'em through all these Consequences; the matter would be too Odious. I content my self with saying, that France having seen two of her Kings successively Murthered under the pernicious pretence, that they were Favourers of Hereticks, thought she could not better Ruine this wretched Gradation of Consequences, than by overturning the first Principle it depends upon. For this Reason (a) the third Estate of the Kingdom resolved to Condemn as Pernicious all Doctrines which make the Authority of Monarchs depend on any thing besides God. I add to this an Observation of Mr. Jurieu: He can't be suspected of Partiality to the Jesuits, and yet it's certain he praised the Reasoning, Princes may put Hereticks to Death; and Laughed at a Man, who neither blamed those who did put 'em to Death, nor those who would not put 'em to Death. Let us see Mr. Jurieu's Words (b).

' I explain (c) my self, and say, that I am for ' those who don't put Hereticks to Death; and 'tis ' my Opinion, that their Example ought to be fol- ' lowed. But as I believe on the other Hand, that ' it is Lawful to punish Hereticks Capitally, I Con- ' demn not those who do it: both do well in my ' Judgment. Mr. Ferrand adds this last Period to ' explain his Thought, as he says. It had not ' been amiss if he had added two or three more to ' explain it farther. For they who have any Pene- ' tration, will be hard put to it, to unfold this Au- ' thor's Notion. They'll think he has hit on a ' very odd Medium. He's of Opinion that 'tis ' lawful, and consequently very just to burn the ' Calvinists; but whilst the best way is not to do it, ' some troublesome Disputant will urge thus: It is ' never permitted to put any to Death, but those ' who deserve it. If it be permitted to put the ' Calvinists to Death, they certainly deserve it. ' But how can Reason, Justice and Equity permit ' us to suffer those to live in publick Society who ' deserve Death! I know very well that a Sove- ' reign may without any Iniquity give a Mur- ' therer his Life, a Robber, a Rebel, who deserved ' Death: But 'tis supposed that the Party repents; ' and that having once fallen into a Crime, he now ' forsakes it, and resolves never to return to it ' more; there is Mercy for every Sin. But there ' is nothing like this, in the case of letting Here- ' ticks live, who deserve Death on the Score of ' their Heresy, and who persevere however, and ' declare their Resolution to persevere in it. I ' should chuse in the same manner to say that it ' is just to put Robbers, Murtherers, and Sorcerers ' to Death, who protest they will Rob, Kill, and ' Poyson all they can, as long as they are suffered ' to live.

Mr. Jurieu Reasons as well in this Passage, as he Reasons ill in all other Books (d), where he maintains that Magistrates are obliged to punish Idolaters, but yet do's not blame the Impunity which the States of Holland suffer 'em to enjoy for whole Ages together. Note that in saying he Reasons well, I have supplied by my imagination, a Clause that is most Essential to his Discourse, and which he has omitted. The last Period is Absurd, unless this be added to it, or something Equivalent, and nevertheless, I am for those who do not put them to Death, and 'tis my Opinion to follow their Example.

(S) To the most deplorable Relaxation.] 'I was not the Jesuits invented the mental Reservations, nor the other Opinions that Mr. Lafcal (e) has charged upon 'em; nor even the (f) Philolophical Sin. They found all this in other Authors, either Expresly, or in such a manner, as a Doctrine is in the Principle, that produces it by Consequences. But as we have seen in their Society a greater number of Patrons, of like Opinions, than in other Communities, and that in their Hands, the loose Maxims grew daily more Fruitful by the Earnestness with which they disputed on these Points, they have been formally and expresly impleaded. Wretched fruits of Disputation; their method of Studying has had at least as great a share in it, as the corruption of the Heart. Before they come to read Moral Divinity, they have dictated one or more Courses of Philosophy; they have accustomed themselves to Cavil upon every thing; they have wrangled a thousand times upon the ens rationis; they have heard as often the Questions maintained Pro and Con about Universals, and many other things of the same Nature; their Heads are so turn'd to Objection and Distinction, that when they come to handle matters of Morality, they find themselves wholly dispos'd to perplex 'em. Distinctions offer to 'em in shoals, Arguments ad hominem, oblige 'em to retrench on every Hand, and to abate one thing to Day, another thing to Morrow. All this is very dangerous. Dispute as long as you please upon Logical Questions; but in Morality be content with good Sense, and with

(b) Vrai, Système de l'Eglise, p. 638.

(c) The Words of this Passage Printed in Italick are taken out of a Book of Mr. Ferrand Intitled Reponse à l'Apologie pour la Reformation.

(d) In the Letter of the Tableau du Socinianisme.

(e) In the lettres Provinciales. This Doctrine is an almost unavoidable consequence of the Definition of Liberty by which it's asserted that to the end any Action be free, the Agent must have a Power of determining himself to the right or left without being necessitated by any Foreign Cause. Now this Definition is that which is most commonly received in the Church of Rome.

of it (T) to the Jesuits; that three Sermons were preach'd (V) upon his Beatification which were highly Censured by the Sorbon, and which doub that Light which the reading of the Gospel sheds on your Mind. If you go about to dispute after a Scholastick manner, you'll not readily find a Clew to the Labyrinth. 'Twas a very good Saying of one, that (a) the Books of Casuists are nothing but the Art of Cavilling with God. These Advocates in the Court of Conscience, find out more Distinctions and Subtelties than the Lawyers in the Civil Courts. They make the Tribunal of Conscience, a sort of Moral Laboratory, in which the most solid Truths dwindle into Smoak, Volatile Salts, and Vapour. What Cicero said (b) of the Subtelties of Logick, admirably agrees with those of the Casuists: A Man is caught in Webs of his own Spinning; he is lost, and knows not how to turn himself; nor has he any way to disengage, but by slackening in almost every Article. They who have read Father Pirot's Book (c), will own that its easier to censure it, and perceive that it contains dangerous Doctrines, than answer the Objections.

On the whole, tho' the Jesuits are not the Authors of the remiss Opinions, and tho' they are daily maintain'd by others, yet they ought not to think it hard that they are charg'd with 'em: Whilst we go upon a Principle, which they themselves approve, with regard to the Version of Mons (d).

(T) The Queen——of Spain has made a Grant to the Jesuits of the House in which Ignatius was Born.] The Particulars of this Affair, are to be found in a Book Printed at Salamanca in 1689. It's intituled (e) Averiguaciones de las de Cantabria. The Author calls himself Gabriel de Henao, a Name that has appeared in the Title Page of several Books in Folio, and among others of a Book call'd a Curious Relation of Paradice. Gabriel de Henao is a Jesuit, Professor in Divinity of the Royal College of the Society at Salamanca. He has endeavoured to the Antiquities of Catabria, only because 'twas the Country in which Ignatius was Born. He says, that at present, this Province takes in Guipuscoa, Biscay, and the Country of Alava. These two last Countries produc'd Ignatius's Ancestors. The first gave him Birth in the Territory of Azpeytia; for Loyola's Castle is situate in this Territory. The Fonts of the Church of St. Sebastian d' Azpeytia, in which Ignatius was Baptiz'd, are a continual Object of Devotion. Big-Bellied Women flock thither, and passionately desire their Children may be Christen'd at 'em, and take the name of Ignatius or Ignatia as an Omen of good Fortune. The Castle of Loyola, where this Saint was Born is standing to this Day and is called Santa Casa. Lewis Henry de Cabrera, and Teresa Henrietta Velasca de Loyola, Marquess and Marchioness of Alcanizas, and Oropesa, last the Proprietor of this Castle, made a Solemn Grant of it in the Year 1681. to Marianna of Austria, Mother to the late King of Spain (f). This Princess gave it the Year following to the Jesuits, for the Founding a College for their Society, and only reserv'd the Right of Patronage to her self, during her Life; and after her Death to her Son the King, and the succeeding Kings of Spain. But she impos'd upon the Donataries the same Condition that was annexed to the Cession made to herself of it; which was (g) that they should not be permitted to demolish any part of the Castle Wall, but content themselves with building by it.

Should I only mention a curious Book of Gabriel Henao, without giving any Account of it, I might be complain'd of for having impertinently provok'd the Readers Curiosity. I shall say then that this Jesuite publish'd a Volume in Folio, in the Year 1652, entituled Empyreologia, seu Philosophia Christiana de Empyreo cælo, in which he so particularly describes the Blessedness of Paradice, as to say (h) there will be Musick in Heaven with material Instruments as on Earth. But his Account, if I mistake not, is not comparable to that of Lewis Henricus, his Brother Jesuite, who affirms; (i) That there will be a Sovereign Pleasure in Kissing and Embracing the Bodies of the Blessed [illegible] shall bath in the sight of one another: [illegible] which there shall be most delicious Baths; that they shall Swim in them like Fishes; and sing as harmonious as Larks or Nightingales. That the Angels shall be dress'd like Women, and shall appear [illegible] the Saints in the Habits of Ladies, their Hair [illegible] their Petty-coats Farding al'd, and in the [illegible] men. That Men and Women shall divert them [illegible] with Masquerades, Feasts, and Balls. That the Women shall sing more agreeably [illegible] the Men; to make the Pleasure greater, they shall rise again with longer Hair, and shall be [illegible] with Ribands and Ruffles, as they are in this World. That married People shall Kiss one another as in this Life, and their pritty sweet Children which will be no small Pleasure.

(V) Three Sermons upon his Beatification, &c.] Paul V. having Beatified Ignatius in the Year 1609, the Jesuits, (k) kept a Solem Feast in all their Colleges, Houses, and Noviciates, where they made choice of and desired some of the greatest Divines who were not of their Order, to make his Panegyrick. Valderrama, Prior of the Augustines of Sevil [illegible] made the Sermon the 31st of July 1610. Peter Doza, [illegible] ican of Valentia, made another the 26th of Jan [illegible] 610. James Rebulloſa, Dominican of Barcelona, [illegible] each'd a third the 4th Sunday of Advent 1609. A Limosin Jesuit call'd Francis Solier, Translated these three Sermons out of Spanish into French, and publish'd 'em at Poitiers in 1611. In these Sermons were found four Articles which the Faculty of Divinity at Paris, assembled in the Sorbonne the 1st. of October 1611. [illegible] dered a [illegible] in a terrible manner.

(k) Mercure François, to. 2. p. m. 264. ad ann. 1611.

(l) The first is in the first Sermon of Brother P. de Valderama, pag. 54, and 55. 'We know indeed that Moses carrying his Rod in his Hand, did very great Miracles in the Air, in the Earth, in the Water, in the Stones, and in every thing he pleased, so far as to drown Pharaoh and his Army in the Red-Sea; but 'twas the ineffable Name of God, which as the Learned Tostat, Bishop of Avilla, says, was Engraven on this Wand or Rod, which work'd these Wonders. It was not so great a matter that the Creatures seeing the Commands of God their Sovereign King and Lord, subscrib'd with his own Name, should pay him their Homage and Obedience. Nor was it any great Wonder that the Apostles should Work Miracles, since it was in the Name of God, by the Virtue and Power which he had given them; signing it with his Signet, In nomine meo dæmonia ejicient [illegible] quis loquentur novis, &c. But that Ig [illegible] with his own Name written in Paper, should [illegible] more Miracles than Moses, and as many as the Apostles; that his Signet should have so much Authority over the Creatures, as that they should immediately obey him; this is what renders him exceedingly admirable. The Second is in Page 91. of the same Sermon; as long as Ignatius lived, his Life and Morals were so Grave, so Holy, and Exact, even in the Opinion of Heaven; that there were only some Popes, as St. Peter; some Empereſſes as the Mother of God; some Sovereign Monarchs, as God the Father and his holy Son, who had the Happiness to see it (m). The third is in Brother Peter Doza's Sermon, pag. 111, 112. Doubtless the other Founders of Religious Orders were sent in Favour of the Church, &c. Novissime diebus istis loquutus est nobis in filio suo Ignatio, quem constituit hæredem universorum, to which there is no other Article of Praise wanting than per quem fecit Sæcula. The fourth is in Brother James Rebulloſa's Sermon, pag. [illegible] Martyr Ignatius bore a most particular [illegible] ion to the Holy Father and Pope of Rome [illegible] the lawful Successor of Jesus Christ, and his Vicar on Earth'.

(l) Mercure François ibid. pag. 265. See also the 1st. Tom [illegible] the [illegible] le [illegible] que pag. 22.

(m) Hospinian [illegible] the 11 [illegible] Page [illegible] his [illegible] ria Je [illegible] tica, gives these Words a turn altogether Ridiculous; he Translates 'em thus; Denique Monarchæ supremo, Deo Patri, ejusque sanctissimo Filio, eos intueri & videre tanquam ex singulari gratia fuerit concessum.

The Faculty (n) voted and resolved on the first Article [illegible] that Form of Speech, by which the Name [illegible] Creature is equall'd with the Name of Almi [illegible] ed, and those Miracles which were not as yet [illegible] tain, are prefer'd before those which we are o [illegible] believe with a Catholick Faith undoubted; is scandalous, Erroneous, Blasphemous and impious. As to the second, that Assertion which pretends that God received any good from the Vision of the Creature, is of it [illegible] self detestable, false, a [illegible]

(n) Mercure François ibid. pag. 256.

(a) See the Journal des Savans of the 30 of March 1665. pag. m. 249 that which Mr. Bernier Abregé de Gassendi to. 7. l. 2. ch. 8. pag. m. 529. relates of the first President de Lamoignon.

(b) Dialectici ad extremum ipsi se compungunt suis acuminibus, & multa quærendo reperiunt non modo ea quæ jam non possint ipsi dissolvere, sed etiam quibus ante exorsa & potius detexta prope retexantur. Cicero de Orators l. 2. c. 38.

(c) Intituled l'Apologie des Casuistes.

(d) See the Observations of P. le Tellier on the Defence of the French Version of the New Testament printed at Mons, p. 377, and the following.

(e) See the Journal of Leipsic in the Supplement, Tome 1. Sect. 10. p. 528, 526.

(f) This is writ the 23*d. of* November 1695.

(g) Ne scilicet ullum pro futuri collegii fabrica parietem demoliri fas esset, sed antiquis hujusce domus muris ob vetustatis venerationem illibatis, contigua modo ædificia adjungere & excitare liceret. Act. Eruditor. Lips. ubi supra, pag. 527. Rash Conjectures on the Happiness of Paradice.

(h) See the 1st. Volume of the Morale pratique, p. 273.

(i) In his Book intituled Occupation des Saints dans le ciel. See the Morale pratique, ib. Pag. 274.

leſs were a freſh Acceſſion to (V△) Stephen Paſquier's Diſcontent. Some Differences aroſe

[redacted] Hereſy. As to the third, which appro- [redacted] the Text of St. Paul, Noviſſime autem, &c. to any other than Jeſus Chriſt, it is execrable, and blaſphemous, and impious. As to the laſt Article, it has [redacted] contrary Parts, one of which diſtroys t [redacted] ſet: The laſt indeed is Catholick, and appr [redacted] namely, that the Pope is the Vicar of Jeſus Ch [redacted] Earth; but the firſt, viz. That the Pope is the [redacted] ful Succeſſor of Jeſus Chriſt, is a Propoſition manifeſtly falſe, and altogether Heretical. Signed C. Petit, Jan. Curate of [redacted] eter's.

(a) The Writers of the Bibliotheques of the Jeſuits don't ſpeak of this, nor yet of the Tranſlation of theſe three Sermons.

(b) Mercure François ibid. pag. 267.

(c) Ibid. pag. 271.

(d) Among others, that of the Proverbs, chap. 8. v. 31. Delitiæ meæ eſſe cum filiis hominum.

(e) Id. ibid. pag. 268.

(f) Merc. [redacted] Dun is the Perſon who makes uſe of this Thought, p. 151.

(g) See the Hiſtoire des Ouvrages des Savans, for the Month of Auguſt 1695. p. 555.

Father Solier publiſhed a (a) [redacted] ld and threatning Apology for 'em, in which [redacted] amongſt other things, that it ought to be remem [redacted] that one ſpeaks after a popular manner (b) in Sermons & Declamations, and chiefly in that Stile which they call Demonſtrative and Encomiaſtick, which more eaſily admits Amplifications than the Deliberative and Judicial kind, and that 'tis eaſy to diſcover when the Preacher advances (c) a Conception rather to delight the Ear than ſeriouſly to inſtruct the Auditors. He ſhews that Lewis de Grenade, St. Antoninus, and St. Bernard have made as bold Applications of Scripture, [redacted] en bolder than thoſe complain'd of. He c [redacted] any Scripture (d) Paſſages to juſtify this [redacted] ught of Valderamma. (e) 'As long as Ignatius lived, his Life and his Man-'ners were not univerſally known, none but God 'the Father, and his Son, having the Happineſs 'to ſee it; but as ſoon as he was dead, all the 'Courtiers [redacted] the King Eternal ran to ſee him. He asks [redacted] f) when the Spirit ſays in [redacted] 'Cantic [redacted] a choſen Soul, oſtende mihi faci [redacted] tuam, vox tua in auribus meis, vox enim tua [redacted] dulcis & facies tua decora; it would be ill Tranſlating it or Blaſpheming in Paraphraſing this 'Paſſage, to ſay, My Love, let me ſee thy Face and hear thy Voice, foraſmuch as thy Voice is ſweet and thy Countenance Beautiful. He Anſwers nothing concerning the fourth Propoſition which was Cenſured, and ſeems to be Ignorant that it was Condemned. Not but he undertook to juſtify the four Articles; but he ſuppoſes that the fourth was this, (g) that only the Order of St. Francis works Miracles in matter of voluntary Poverty. 'For a 'Lay-Brother of his Order, ſays he, with the 'Cord, which ſerves him for a Girdle, in his 'Hand, works more Miracles than ever the Rod 'of Moſes did; becauſe the latter only drew Water from a Rock; but this extracts Bread, Wine, 'Fleſh, and whatever he has need off, from Hearts 'harder than Flint'. He excuſes this two ways; Firſt, by ſaying [redacted] of thoſe Notions a Preacher advances, [redacted] ſerious Doctrine, but to tickle the Ears of [redacted] Auditors: Secondly, by maintaining that even literally, the Propoſition is true; But, ſays he, though we ſhould take it in Strict ſpeaking, and with all the rigours of the School, is it not true that it is a greater Work to mollify an Heart Steel'd by ſinful Habits, and harden'd in Iniquity, than to make living Water Spring out of a Rock. Has not St. Bernard ſaid in this Senſe, that Jeſus Chriſt work'd a greater Miracle in the Converſion of Mary Magdalen, than in raiſing her Brother Lazarus from the Dead? He had better have confined himſelf to the firſt Reaſon which was only to repreſent that there's an Indulgence due to the Sallies of an Orator, and the Eloquence of the Pulpit, eſpecially amongſt Monks; and that the Day of the Panegyrick is in Poſſeſſion of almoſt an unlimited Licenſe. But this hinders not that ſometimes the Enthuſiaſm of this Licenſe ought to be cenſured; as [redacted] Archbiſhop of Rheims has lately done [redacted] forget not that Scioppius (i) has been [redacted] ry upon a Place of this Peter Dezn's Sermo [redacted] 'Tis that where the Preacher exhibits as a great Miracle the Happineſs the Jeſuits have had in obtaining whatever they deſired in an Age ſo Covetous, ſo hard-hearted, and void of Charity.

(f) Dun is the Perſon who makes uſe of this Thought, p. 151.

(g) See the Hiſtoire des Ouvrages des Savans, for the Month of Auguſt 1695. p. 555.

(i) Scioppius, infam. Famæ ſtudæ pag. 159.

(i) Fraus ſuboluit tandem & deprehenſum eſt tres has conciones à Jeſuitis conſcriptas; habitas & publicatas fuiſſe. Hoſpinian Hiſtoria Jeſuitica, lib. 1. pag 11. Edit. 1681.

Hoſpinian ſpeaking of this matter, has [redacted] a thing, which no doubt he has perſwaded [redacted] many of, and which notwithſtanding ſeems [redacted] very falſe. He ſays that the Jeſuits [redacted] ves compoſed theſe three Sermons; but that for the greater Honour of their Ignatius, they gave out that the Spaniſh Dominicans had preach'd 'em. He adds, (k) that this Fraud was diſcovered. Common Senſe Revolts againſt this Accuſation; for ſuppoſe the Jeſuits as wicked as you pleaſe; it will not do; you muſt farther ſuppoſe 'em without Brains, and as ſilly as Children; ſince none but Blockheads could poſſibly imagine but that in two Months at fartheſt, they ſhould be expoſed in the Face of the World, if they ventured to Print, that ſuch and ſuch Monks, diſtinguiſhed by their Place of Reſidence, their Dignities and Names, had preach'd ſuch and ſuch things, ſuch a Day in ſuch a Town. Such Falſehoods can't fail of being preſently confuted by a Publick and Judicial Contradiction, which renders the Lyar the eternal Subject of his Enemies Deriſion. If none but Fools could foreſee this imminent Mortification, nothing but a brutal Stupidity would upon ſuch a foreſight have expoſ'd it ſelf to the hazard; ſo that there's all kind of probability to make us believe that the Jeſuits who are very Jealous of the Honour of their Order, and very tender of their Intereſts, and narrowly obſerved by vigilant Enemies, have not falſely Fathered the 3 Sermons which Francis Solier printed at Poictiers; and ſince the Janſeniſts (l) attribute only the French Tranſlation to the Jeſuits, 'tis an evident Proof that Hoſpinian is deceiv'd. This brings to my mind a Charge of Forgery which proved unfortunate to the Capuchins of Paris. They pretended that the Approbation of one of their Fathers prefix'd to a Book of Amadius Guimenius, was Fictitious. We declare, ſaid they, That not one of us approv'd that Book, and farther, that neither has been, nor is in our Congregation any Provincial Monk, who is called Luiſius of Valentia, who has been twice Provincial Miniſter of the Order of the French Minors of S. Francis Capuchins, of the Province of the Blood of Jeſus Chriſt, in the Kingdoms of Valencia and Murcia, Maſter of Arts, firſt Profeſſor, and Jubilate Reader of Sacred Divinity, and Counſellor Qualificator of the Inquiſition of both Kingdoms; and that we have not in Spain any Province ſo call'd. We proteſt alſo that thoſe pompous Titles wherewith the Author of this forg'd Approbation is adorn'd, are very remote from the Simplicity we profeſs. We declare theſe things upon the Teſtimony of our moſt Reverend Father General, who having underſtood that this Book was publiſhed with this Approbation, has teſtified what we have ſaid. This Declaration of Forgery was confuted in all its Parts (m) by authentick Acts, and cloak'd with all the Formalities, that the moſt Judicial Proceedure could require. What did the good Capuchins of Paris think of? Could they imagine that practis'd Forgers would ſpecify ſo many Characters, proper Names, Titles of Dignity, Places of Reſidence, if they had a falſe Approbation to produce? Would not this be pointing out the Track to their Enemies, to take the Hare in its Form? Would not this be leading by the Hand to the diſcovery of the Impoſture? The Janſeniſts have publickly acknowledged that the Certificate of the Capuchin of Paris is a falſe Allegation (n).

(k) In the 1ſt. Tom. of the Morale pratique des Jeſuites, p. 22.

(l) See the Book intituled Mala fides & calumniæ auctoris anonymi &c. per Danielem Campfordum, printed at Cologn in 1682.

(m) See the Hiſtory of the Works of the Learned for the Month of January 1688. pag. 140.

(n) He demanded a Cenſure of 4 Articles extracted out of three Sermons.

Note, by the way, that the proper Names are wretchedly diſguis'd in this Relation of Hoſpinian. probably by the negligence of the Correctors. You find Valderanna, and Vualderanna, inſtead of Valderrama; Doza inſtead of Deza; Toſtatus inſtead of Toſtatus; Tileſas inſtead of (o) Fileſac; Ducal inſtead of (p) Duval.

(o) He oppoſed the Cenſure and there was no regard had to his Remonſtrances.

(p) See his Catechiſms of the Jeſuits printed in 1602. chap. 18. and the following of the 1ſt. Book.

(V△) Doubtleſs were a freſh Acceſſion to Stephen Paſquier's Diſcontent.] The News of Ignatius's Beatification could not but be disagreable to this Writer, a great Enemy to the Jeſuits; he had but lately ridiculed their Founder in a (q) publick Work ſo as to preſage in ſome meaſure that the Artifices made uſe of at Rome to get him Canoniz'd, would come to nothing; we may therefore believe that his diſpleaſure increaſed in proportion to the noiſe the Pomp of this Beatification made all over Europe: I can't conceive a ſharper Mortification than one's ſeeing a Perſon beatified of whom he had ſpoken very ill. If he had been a Proteſtant he would have Laughed at the Judgment of the Court of Rome; but he profeſs'd himſelf aroſe in France (X) about the Day of his Feaſt after Pope Urban VIII. had Publiſh'd the Bull of his Canonization.

(q) See the ſame Catechiſme, ch. 15. of the 1ſt. Book, pag 137, and the following.

His Life has been written by near twenty Authors: one of 'em calls himſelf Father Euſebius of Nieremberg: His Work was ſeverely cenſured (Y), if we believe Father Baron. I need not add that the Jeſuit Bouhours is one of his Patriarch's Hiſtorians; it being a thing Notorious enough. What Grotius has ſaid of Loyola and the Jeſuits, is not the leaſt beautiful part of his Hiſtory. [a] His Expreſſions are well choſen, Grave and Noble. There's nothing in it that ſavours of Invective: But all beſpeaks a Soul ſedately poſſeſſing it ſelf, and able to hold the ballance in Equilibrio. But the more he ſhews himſelf exempt from Paſſion and Partiality, the more capable he is of perſuading a thing, which to ſay no worſe of it, has no certainty. He maintains that the Profeſſion of a Jeſuit does not exclude (Z) Marriage; that a Man when he is of the Society may live where he pleaſes, and Cohabit with his Wife. Paſquier had ſaid the ſame thing, and was publickly charged with a Lye. I have not found, that he Anſwered the Adverſary, who treated him as an errant Slanderer. Grotius was to be pitied, if he had no other Warrant than his.

LOL-

[a] Grotius Hiſtor. l. 3. p. m. 273. & ſeq.

himſelf a Catholick: He could not therefore deny but that his Calumnies had been confuted in the moſt Authentick manner poſſible, and himſelf Condemned by all the Church of Rome, acquieſcing in the Pope's Decree. It was a miſerable Come-off to ſay, what his Children did in their Anſwer to Caraffe, that he did not believe the Founder of the Jeſuits would one day be Beatified. 'Tis an unlucky Inconvenience in the Roman Communion that a Man runs the risk of ſeeing himſelf forc'd to keep the Feaſts of thoſe Perſons devoutly, and invoke them, whom he formerly Satyriz'd. This ſhould make Critical Authors more Circumſpect. I attack a Man, they ought to ſay to themſelves, who perhaps may get into the Litanies before I Die: Let us be cautious of every thing; and conſider that ſtrange things may come to paſs. 'Tis true that Lewis XII. did not think a King of France obliged to revenge the Injuries offered to a Duke of Orleans; But how do we know whether the Beatified are of this Humour? Don't the Country Curates ſay a thouſand and a thouſand times over, that the Saints ſend Plagues and Famines, &c. to puniſh the neglect of their Chappels and Images? If the Fault of theſe indevout People is Chaſtis'd by a publick Diſaſter, which (a) falls even on the Innocent; has not this particular Cenſor, Author of the Jeſuits Catechiſm, reaſon to fear St. Ignatius's Reſentment? The Poets adviſe us to be ſparing of our Encomiums.

Qualem commendes etiam atque etiam aſpice, ne mox
Incutiant aliena tibi peccata pudorem (b).

And it ſeems that to follow their Counſel exactly, we ſhould ſuſpend our Praiſes of any Perſon till Death had ſecured him from the danger of Inconſtancy. Have you praiſed a Man who dextrouſly hid his Faults? He loſes his Art, is Univerſally cried down, and you are cenſured for your Incence. Perhaps too he becomes your Enemy, and your furious Perſecutor; this has opened your Eyes; you have ſeen the inſide of him, and have turned your Encomiums into Satyr; for which you are expoſed as at Variance with your ſelf. Theſe inconveniencies would not have happened, if you had not been overhaſty in dealing away your Praiſes. Beſides Men of Merit, have not always the gift of Perſeverance, they loſe themſelves in Proſperity, or in other Conjunctures which the general courſe of Affairs produces. You are aſhamed to have been the Herald of their Praiſes; your Ears being ſtunn'd with ungrateful Reproaches on that Account. We might avoid all this, would we wait as long before we pronounced a Man praiſe-worthy, as Solon (c) did to pronounce him happy. But as to Cenſure, and Criticiſm, you are not ſecure, though you wait till the Perſon is Dead: There ſhall ariſe, it may be, a Pope who'll inrol among the Saints the Man you have treated ill, and bid you, adora quod incendiſti, recommend your ſelf to the interceſſion of him whom you have offended. I don't know but the French who have abus'd Innocent XI. both in his Life time, and ſince his Death (d) may experience this unlucky Fate. It reſembles thoſe Decrees of Court which force a Man to Marry the Woman he has diſhonoured.

(X) Some differences aroſe in France about the Day of his Feaſt.] Mr. Heidegger relates that the Pope having aſſigned for St. Ignatius's Feaſt the ſame Day which (e) by antient Preſcription had belonged to St. Germain, the Jeſuits raſed the Name of St. Germain out of the Calander, to put their Founder's Name in its place. The French took offence at this by reaſon of their great Veneration by St. Germain. The Prince of Condé a Patron of the Jeſuits affirmed that St. Ignatius appeared to him, the Day he was Celebrating his Feaſt at Rome. The Cauſe being brought to Rome was determined in the following manner. The Pope Decreed that the Feaſt of St. Germain, and St. Ignatius ſhould be kept the ſame Day; but if they could not agree together, Ignatius as being the Junior ſhould be obliged to ſtay till Leap-year, when he ſhould have the Intercalated Day wholly to himſelf. (f) Lis ad Pontificem delata ridicule ita deciſa eſt, ut eodem die ſimul Germanus & Ignatius celebretur: quòd ſi ſimul ſtare nolle viderentur, expectaret Ignatius, ceu recentior, annum biſſextilem, & diem, qui tum intercalatur, ſibi eximium haberet. I wiſh Mr. Heidegger had cited ſome good Author, for I don't find all this in the Letter to a Councellor of Parliament upon the writing of Father Annat. We find this Letter in the firſt Tome of the Collection of Pieces concerning the New-Teſtament of Mons, and this is what we read at the 593 Page; Who knows not that as ſoon as St. Ignatius was Canonized, 'the Jeſuiſts ſubſtituted 'him in the place of St. Germain Biſhop of Auxerre, whom they inſolently raz'd out of the 'Kalendar? Where we ſhould have no more ſeen 'this great Name ſo venerable to all France, had 'it not been reſtored by a Decree of the Parliament of Paris, paſſed upon an excellent Diſcourſe 'of the Advocate General. Mr. Heidegger might have cited John Latus (g), or rather James Ravius (h) but what good would this have done.

(Y) His Work was ſeverely cenſured if we believe Father Baron.] This Dominican aſſures us that the Cenſor, who was Commiſſioned to examine this Life, found it ſo full of Faults, that it deſerved to be expunged from beginning to end. (i) Adeo mendoſum librum ut eſſet inemendabilis, & à capite ad calcem ſpongia delendus; nonnulla etiam notavit quæ ſtomachum & indignationem audientibus moverunt. Father Papebroch (k) anſwering a Carmelite, who alledged this Paſſage, has obſerved, that Vincent Baron is not to be credited upon this Subject, and that the Condemnation of the Book of Nieremberg concerns only (l) the ſecond Edition, and is found moderated by a donec corrigatur. He adds that the third Edition inlarged with the Life of Francis Xavier, went off without any oppoſition.

(Z) Grotius maintains that a Jeſuit's Vow does not exclude Marriage.] His Words are theſe: (m) Tranſgreſſi in morem non una habitant omnes. Auguſtum videbatur Societatis incrementa parietibus includere: DANT NOMINA ET CONJUGES. Paſquier pleading againſt the Jeſuits in the year 1564 affirmed (n) that their Society was compoſed of two ſorts Men, the firſt whereof, ſay they, are as it were of the great Obſervance, and the others of the leſſer. Thoſe of the great Obſervance are obliged to four Vows; for beſides the three ordinary

(a) Sæpe Dieſpiter Neglectus inceſto addidit integrum. Horat. od. 2. l. 3.

(b) Horat. Epiſt. 18. l. 3.

(c) Dicique beatus Ante obitum nemo, ſupremaque funera debet. Ovidius Metam. l. 3. v. 136. This is the Subſtance of the Anſwer Solon makes Cræſus in Herodotus. l. 1. c. 32. p. m. 13.

(d) See the Remark G. of the Article Innocent XI.

(e) To wit the 31ſt. of July.

(f) Eo impudentiæ ... provecti ſunt, ut ex faſtis & Calendario ipſo Romano, eraſo nomine S. Germani qui eum ſibi diem hactenus vindicaverat, Ignatium ſuum ſubſtituerent. Heidegg. Hiſt. Papatus, p. 357.

(g) Id. ib.

(h) In Compendio Hiſtoriæ univerſalis, p. m. 524.

(i) In Hiſtoria Pontificum Romanor. p. m. 313.

(k) Vincentius Baronius apud Sebaſtianum à Sancto Paulo Carmelitam in libello ſupplici.

(l) Daniel Papebroch. reſponſ. ad exhibitionem errorum, p. 286.

(m) 'Tis that of Madrid, 1631.

(n) Grotius Hiſtor. l. 3. p. m. 274.

(o) Paſquier recherch. de la France, liv. 3. c. 43. p. m. 323.

LOLLIUS (Marcus) Conſul of Rome in 733. The Emperor Auguſtus gave him great marks of his Eſteem; for he not only honoured him with the Government of a noble Province « in the year 719. but made him alſo Governour to [redacted]ius Cæſar his Grandſon, when he ſent this young Prince into the Eaſt, to ſettle [redacted] affairs of the Empire on that ſide. Lollius's Conduct in this Voyage betray'd the [redacted]ities, which he had all along politickly concealed under the falſe appearance of Ver[redacted]. His diſſimulation was ſo well acted, that tho' Avarice was his reigning Paſſion, he was ever thought (A) impregnable to Money. The exceſſive Free-Gifts

« That which was made by annexing Galatia, Lycaonia, Pamphylia, and Piſidia, after the Death of King Amintas. See Father Noris, Cenot. Pilat.

ordinary on[redacted] Obedience, Poverty and Chaſtity, they make o[redacted] particularly in favour of the Pope ——Thoſe who are of the little Obſervance are obliged to no more than two Vow[redacted]one reſpecting the Fidelity they promiſe to the Po[redacted]nd the other Obedience towards their Superiours [redacted] Miniſters. Theſe latter don't Vow Poverty; bu[redacted] Lawful for them to hold Benefices without Diſpenſation, to ſucceed their Fathers and Mothers, to acquire Lands and Poſſeſſions, as if they were not obliged to any Religious Vow—— (a) This ſame Ordinance makes it poſſible for all People to be of this Order. For as in this little Obſervance there are no Vows made, either of Virginity or Poverty, ſo it indifferently takes in Prieſts and Laymen, Married or Unmarried, ſince they are not obliged to reſide, with the great Obſervancers. But they may Inhabit with the reſt of the People, [redacted] that on certain and prefixed Days, they app[redacted] the Houſe common to 'em all, to participate in their Grimaces. But let us ſee what was Anſwered him by the Jeſuit Richeome: (b) The fifth Lie ‘ is in the ſame Pleading, where having diſcourſed like a Dotard upon ‘ the Rule of the Jeſuits, and told a great many ‘ pitiful and [redacted] Lies, at laſt he adds one of ‘ larger [redacted]ded with many others, ſaying, ‘ This ſ[redacted]dinance makes it poſſible for all ‘ People, &c.——And after having fooled ‘ ſufficiently, he faſtens the Tail to his Chimera, ‘ and concludes. So that following this Law and ‘ Rule, it is no Abſurdity to ſee a whole Town of ‘ Jeſuits. This Lie ought not to be reckoned a ‘ ſingle one; for it contains as many as there are ‘ Words. I have been a Member of this Society ‘ above twenty years, and have carefully read its ‘ Conſtitutions but never heard of the little or ‘ great Obſervance among the Jeſuits; nor have I ‘ ever read one word of it, either in their Books, ‘ or in their Bulls expedited by the Pope's for their ‘ Eſtabliſhment. And to one and all the Vows ‘ of Chaſtity, Poverty and Obedience are ſo expreſs, that no Body can doubt of 'em; beſides ‘ who ever ſaw a Married Jeſuit among 'em? ‘ Or rather who ever [redacted] any one ſpeak of it ‘ beſides Paſquier?

(a) Paſquier ubi ſupra, p. 324.

(b) Reſponce de Reé de la Fon pour les Religieux de la Compagnie de Jeſus, ch. 42. p. m. 202. Alegambe p. 318. [redacted] Richeome diſguiſed himſelf under the Title of Boné de la Fon.

Perhaps Grotius m[redacted] found himſelf upon the bare Teſtimony [redacted]quier, looking on it as inconteſtable, ſince [redacted] not probable that a Man would venture to utter a falſity of this Nature, in full Parliament, and in ſo Solemn a Cauſe; but the ſureſt way is to miſtruſt Appearances, and never to judge upon the report of one of the Parties. Audi & alteram partem, keep one Ear for the Accuſed, inform your ſelf of the Anſwer of each Party, is a Rule that ought never to be forgotten. The Lie that was given to this Advocate, is found in a Work Printed in 1599. Paſquier two or three years after Publiſhed his Catechiſm of the Jeſuits, in which he called over again many of the things he had advanced before, and maintained them againſt the Apologiſts for the Society. He (c) inſiſted chiefly on an Examination of the ſimple Vows, which the Jeſuits are obliged to make; but does not reply one word about the two kinds of Jeſuits, which he had informed the World of one Married, the other Unmarried. This makes me believe that he diſcovered his Error. The Janſeniſt, who in 1681. Publiſhed an Ap[redacted]or the Cenſures of Louvain and Douay, ſuppo[redacted] that there are concealed Jeſuiſts, who without [redacted]earing the Habit, are yet of the Society, and are [redacted]ſt in the World for its Intereſts; but he does not ſay, that they are permitted to Marry. In vain ſhall we indeavour to excuſe Grotius by the Teſtimony of an Anonymous Writer, who Printed a little Book in 1682 intituled, The Emperor [redacted]pire betray'd, how and by whom. This [redacted]or advances the ſame thing as Paſquier, an[redacted]ſts even the Emperor to be a Jeſuit of the ſecond Claſs. My Jealouſy, ſays he (e), of his Imperial Majeſty, encreaſes the more, becauſe it's Notorious, that there are ſeveral ſorts of Religious among the Jeſuits; ſome who are diſpenſed with not only as to the Habit, but who are even allowed to Marry, and to, be inveſted with all ſorts of Imploys and Dignities; that if his Imperial Majeſty, through too great a Zeal for his Religion, was in his younger years unfortunately Engaged in this Order, under the aforeſaid Diſpenſations, we need no longer wonder at any part of his Behaviour to the Proteſtants; for tho' he were only of the leſſer Order, in which it is permitted to Marry, and to poſſeſs all ſorts of Imploys and Dignities, it is however true, that in every thing elſe, and particularly in matters of Religion, he would be under the Obedience of the General of the Jeſuits, and conſequently obliged to make Peace and War, juſt as the General of the Society ſhould think fit for the Intereſts of the Papal Church, and the Society. The War he perpetually makes againſt the Proteſtants of the Upper Hungary. ——his immenſe Preſents to the Society—— with the ſcandalous and diſgraceful Signing of the laſt Peace (f)—— all this ſmells ſtrong of an [redacted], which knows no other Duty, nor Rule [redacted] and Piety, than the abſolute command of his Superior: And I ſee nothing in the Conduct of this Prince, whether in his way of Living, and his perpetual Applications to Jeſuitical Comedies, Muſick, or Pilgrimages, ſometimes to one Relick ſometimes to another, together with whatever may diſcover his natural or habitual Inclinations, that contradicts this Opinion. Yet once more it would be impertinent in favour of Grotius, to Alledge ſuch a Libeller, who dares ſo inſolently and diſreſpectfully ſpeak of his Imperial Majeſty. Theſe Writers would be too obligingly treated ſhould we ſay to 'em (g), I expect Proof, and you bring me vulgar Stories. For they moſt commonly vent, not only what they have heard themſelves, but what they have forged in the Mint of their own Brain. He whom I have cited, and Mr. Jurieu would afford matter of Laughter to all the World; the one maintains that the Jeſuits betray'd the Houſe of Auſtria in favour of France, and the other, that they would be always diſpoſed to betray France in favour of the Houſe of Auſtria (h). That which is certain is, that the Imperial Court has taken ſuch a Conduct for above (i) theſe dozen years paſt, as is an invincible Proof, either that the Jeſuits have no credit there; or that their Counſels are adapted to the Temporal Intereſt of the Emperor, preferable to the Advantages of the Catholick Religion in General, and if the Author of the Libel had underſtood Politicks, he might eaſily have ſeen, that the ſigning of the Peace of Nimegen was the beſt, and nobleſt Reſolution the Houſe of Auſtria could take, conſidering the Poſture of Affairs after the particular Peace of France with the United Provinces. But this Author did not conſider it ſo cloſely; and if he had been alive in 1697. I doubt not but he had been the Promoter of News, not unlike what we have ſeen above (k). The Hiſtorical Letters of October that year have this in them. (l) ‘ It has been for ſome time reported, that the Jeſuits had formed a Conſpiracy ‘ againſt the Emperor and the King of the Romans, ‘ and that one of 'em had already been Executed. ‘ They write from Vienna, that this is a meer Calumny, ſo that the Emperor to Diſabuſe the Publick, has order'd his Council of Regency to Publiſh an Act in Germany upon this Subject. The Author of the Hiſtorical Letters gives this Imperial Act in French.

(d) Apologie hiſtorique des deux cenſures de Louvain & de Douai ſur la matiere de la grace p. 155.

(e) Pag. 198. & ſuiv.

(f) Celle de Nimegue en 1671.

(g) Rumoribus meum pugnas: ego autem à te rationes requiro. Cicero de nat. Deor. l. 3. p. 601. Voet. Cicidenius, p. 1775 lettre a.

(h) See Mr. Arnaud in his 9. ch. of the 1. part of his Apology for the Catholicks.

(i) This is writ in 1700.

(k) In the Remark P.

(l) Lettres hiſtoriques d' Octobre 1697. p. 461.

(A) Impregnable to Money.] Amongſt other Praiſes Horace gives him this:

(a) Non

Gifts * which he extorted in his Expedition with the young Cæsar loſt him that falſe Reputation. He diſcovered ſome other of his Faults in the ſame Employ; for in order to make himſelf more neceſſary, he fomented (B) the Quarrel betwixt Tiberius and Caius Cæſar; and was ſuſpected of being a Spy of the King of Parthia, to retard the Concluſion of the Peace. Caius diſcovered (C) his Treachery, when he came to diſcourſe with this Monarch in an Iſle † of Euphrates; which made him conceive ſuch an Averſion for this Governour, as drove him to Deſpair; for he killed (D) himſelf. He had vanquiſhed the Beſſi in the ‡ Year 738, and carrying the War immediately into Germany, received an Affront (E) there; but he had his Revenge, and obliged the Germans to make Peace. Marcus Lollius (F) his Son

* See the Remark D and G.

† Paterculus, lib. 2. c. 101.

‡ Dio, lib. 54. p. m. 612.

(a) Horat. Ode 9. lib. 4.

(a) Non ego te meis
Chartis inornatum ſileri,
Totve tuas patiar labores
Impune, Lolli, carpere lividas
Obliviones, eſt animus tibi
Rerumque prudens, & ſecundis
Temporibus dubiiſque rectus,
Vndem avara fraudis, & ABSTINENS
DUCENTIS AD SE CUNCTA PECUNIÆ,
Conſulque non unius anni,
Sed quoties bonus atque fidus
Judex honeſtum prætulit utili, ET REJECTI ALTO DONA NOCENTIUM
VULTU: & per obſtantes catervas
Explicuit ſua victor arma.

Though a Court Poet makes little Conſcience of beſtowing Elogies on Men that are thought unworthy of 'em, yet we muſt believe, that Horace here governs himſelf by Appearances, that is, that he proportions his Praiſes to the eſteem the Perſon praiſed was then in; for we learn from a famous Hiſtorian, that (b) this Lollius concealed his evil ties to a Wonder.

(b) Sub Legato M. Lollio homine in omnia pecuniæ quam rectè faciendi cupidiore. & inter ſummam vitiorum diſſimulationem vitioſiſſimo. Paterculus, l. 2. c. 97.

(B) He fomented the Quarrel betwixt Tiberius.] This we may infer from theſe Words of Suetonius: (c) Nemque privignum Cajum orienti præpoſitum, cum viſendi gratia trajeciſſet Samum (Tiberius) alienioremſibi ſenſit ex criminationibus, M. Lollii conſilio & rectoris ejus. This appears ſtill more plain, by the Teſtimony which Tiberius gave Quirinus, Governour of Caius Cæſar. (d) Datuſque rector C. Cæſari Armeniam obtinenti Tiberium quoque Rhodi agentem coluerat, quod tunc patefecit in Senatu, laudatis in ſe officiis, & incuſato M. Lollio quem autorem C. Cæſari pravitatis & diſcordiarum arguebat.

(c) Sueton. in Tiberio, c. 12.

(d) Tacit. Annal. lib. 3. cap. 48.

(C) Caius diſcovered his Treachery.] Conſider theſe Words of Paterculus. Quo tempore M. Lollii quem veluti moderatorem juventæ filii ſui Auguſtus eſſe voluerat, perfidia & plena ſubdoli ac verſati animi conſilia per Parthum indicata Cæſari fama vulgavit.

(D) Lollius killed himſelf.] This we learn from Pliny (e) M. Lollius infamatus regum muneribus in toto Oriente interdicta amicitia à C. Cæſare Auguſti filio venenum biberat. Solinus (f) ſays the ſame thing; Paterculus, who was nearer that time, doubts of it: (g) Cujus mors intra paucos dies fortuita an voluntaria fuerit ignoro; but he ſays, that Lollius lived but a ſhort while after the Interview of Caius Cæſar, and the King of Parthia. Suetonius ſeems to make Lollius live ſome time after his Diſgrace; for he ſays, that Caius Cæſar being angry with Lollius, was reconciled to Tiberius, and conſented that he ſhould be recalled to Rome. (h) Is (Caius Cæſar) forte tunc M. Lollio offenſior, facilio exorabiliſque in vitrum fuit.

(e) Plin. l. 9. c. 35.

(f) Solin. cap. 53. p. m. 85.

(g) Paterculus, lib. 2. c. 102.

(h) Sueton. in Tiberio, c. 13.

(i) Loſtianam (eladem) majoris infamiæ, quam detrimenti. Id. in Auguſto, c. 22.

(k) Paterculus, lib. 2. cap. 97.

(l) Scalig. Animadv. in Euſeb. p. m. 171.

(m) Dio ubi ſupra.

(E) He received an Affront there, but had his Revenge.] The Shame was greater than the Loſs (i) in our Marcus Lollius's Misfortune. The Eagle of the 5th. Legion (k) was loſt in it. Euſebius not mentioning any Diſgrace of Lollius, affirms, that the Germans were beaten in the Fourth Year of the 190th. Olympiad. Scaliger (l) pretends, that Euſebius is miſtaken, both as to the Fact, and as to the Year; but ſince Dio (m) affirms, that the Germans being informed of Lollius's Warlike Preparations, and the Emperor Auguſtus was making with an Army into Gaul, retired into their Country, made Peace, and gave Hoſtages, it's probable they had been beaten in ſome Encounter, as Euſebius ſuppoſes.

(F) His Son was Conſul (n). We know not in what Year, and left a Daughter——Wife to Caligula.] There are ſeveral Authors who ſay that Lollius, Governour to Caius Cæſar, was Father to this young Lady; but it's falſe; Cæcilia Paulina, was Grand-Daughter to this Lollius. This we find in Pliny (p) in expreſs Terms, and we may moreover ſolidly infer it, from her Competition with Agrippina, when the Queſtion was about remarrying the Emperor Claudius. All the Ladies (q) that were eminent for their Birth, their Beauty, and their Riches, entered the Liſts on this occaſion; at laſt the Diſpute was reduced to this, whether Agrippina was to be preferred to Paulina, or Ælia Petina. Judge then whether this can agree with a Woman about Fifty Years of Age. Paulina could not be much younger, if ſhe was Daughter to our Marcus Lollius, who departed from Rome with his Pupil, about the Year 751, and died Two Years after; but the Diſpute I ſpeak of was in the 801ſt. Year of Rome. It is not eaſie to decide, whether he to whom Horace addreſſes the 2d. and 18th. Epiſtle of the 1ſt. Book, is the ſame to whom he addreſſes the 9th. Ode of the 4th. Book. Mr. Dacier, who affirms it, muſt ſuppoſe, that theſe three Pieces are addreſſed to Marcus Lollius, Governour to Cajus Cæſar. He believes alſo, that Lollius had this Charge, when Horace writ the 18th. Epiſtle to him, which he ſuppoſes (r) we may date from the 742d. Year of Rome. There are two things to be obſerved againſt this. 1. No Hiſtorian makes mention of Lollius's having this Charge before this young Prince was ſent into the Eaſt. 2. 'Tis no way probable, that if Horace had written an Epiſtle to the Governour of Caius Cæſar, he would have hinted at nothing that related to this Honour. Now it's certain, there is nothing in this Epiſtle, to ſhew us, that Lollius was judged worthy of having the Education of the Emperor's Grandſon committed to him. Where's the Poet, who would preſume to give Advice to the Governour of the preſumptive Heir of a great Empire, without inſinuating at leaſt, that he ſpeaks to a Man moſt qualified to give Leſſons to others upon (ſ) civil Virtue, and who actually was made Tutor to a young Prince, by the Choice of a great Monarch? For the ſame Reaſon I am perſuaded, that Lollius was not Governour to the young Cæſar (t), when Horace addreſſed the 9th. Ode of the 4th. Book to him. Could the Poet omit the Compliments due to him on that Head? Beſides Horace addreſſes himſelf to a Man, who had been Armin his Youth in Auguſtus's Expedition againſt the Cantabrians. (v) Militiam puer, & Cantabrica bella ſubiſti, ſub duce, qui templis Parthorum ſigna refixit, Et nunc, ſiquid abeſt, Italis adjudicat armis. This People was ſubdued in the Year 729, when our Lollius was Governour of Galatia. Hence P. Noris (w) makes it appear that Horace wrote not the aforementioned Letter to Lollius, Caius's Governour. It won't avail (x) Mr. Dacier to ſay, that Auguſtus undertook his firſt Expedition againſt the Cantabrians in the 726th. Year of Rome, and that it laſted Four Years, and that Puer often ſignified a grown Man; and that Lollius's Age was diſpenſed with, when he was made Conſul in the Year 730; all this doth not weaken Father Noris's Proof. Let us ſay then with this Learned Author, that Horace did not write the 2d. and 18th. Epiſtle of his firſt Book to Lollius, Caius Cæſar's Governour, as Glendon has pretended, at the 747th. Page of his Quæneſtean, but to this Lollius's Son.

(G) As

(n) Tacitus ſays, Annal. l. 12. c. 1. that Lollia Paulina was the Daughter of M. Lollii Conſularis.

(o) Solin ubi ſupra le dit.

(p) Lib. 9. cap. 35. p. m. 335.

(q) See Tacitus, cited in the following Remark.

(r) Mr. Dacier on Horace, tom. 2. p. 428. Edit. of Holland.

(ſ) 'Tis on this that the Epiſtle of the 1ſt. Book of Horace turns. See the Notes of Mr. Dacier, ibid. tom. 9. pag. 146.

(t) Mr. Dacier on Horace, tom. 4. pag. m. 242. believes that Lollius had already been poſſeſſed of this place.

(v) Horat. Epiſt. 18. l. 1. v. 55.

(w) Noris, Cenotaph. Piſan. pag. 355.

(x) Remarks on Horace, tome 9. pag. 177.

son was Conſul, we know not in what Year, and left a Daughter, who was Wife to Caligula, as I obſerve (G) in the Remark.

LONGOMONTANUS (Chriſtian[a]) a great Aſtronomer, Profeſſor of Mathematicks at Copenhagen in the XVII. Century, and Canon of Lunden, was born in 1562, in a[β] Village of Denmark. In the beginning of his Studies, he run through all the Inconveniencies, which generally attend Scholars, who are, as he was, (A) the Son of a Poor Labourer. He lived ſometimes at his Father's, ſometimes at an Aunt's, ſometimes at an Uncle's, always grappling with Ill Fortune, and conſtrained to divide himſelf betwixt the Labours of Tillage, and the Leſſons which the Miniſter of the Place gave him. At laſt, when he had attained to Fifteen Years of Age, he ſtole from his Father's Houſe, and went to Viburg, where there was a College. There he ſpent Eleven Years, and though he was forced (B) to earn his Bread by his Labour, he followed his Studies with extreme Application, and [a] Ames not Chriſtopher, as in Moreri, after Voſſius, and in the Catalogue of Oxford, and in the Diarium of de Witte.

[β] Ab obſcura Cimbriæ Parœcia Longomontanus cognominatus fuit. Gaſſendus in vita Tychon. Brah. lib. 3. ſub fin. p. m. 430.

(G) As I obſerve in the Remarks.] Here I ſhall give the Article of Lollia Paullina, Grand-daughter to our Marcus Lollius. Her firſt Husband's Name was Caius Memmius Regulus, who was Conſul when Sejanus was put to Death. Sometime after, being at (a) the Head of an Army, he received Orders to bring his Wife to Rome, to be married to the Emperor Caligula, I ſay, to be married to him: for this Prince having heard, that Lollia Paullina's Grandmother had been a prodigious Beauty, immediately commanded Memmius to come to Rome to give him his Wife in Marriage, and behave himſelf in the Ceremony, as a Father who Marries his Daughter. Lollium Paullinam C. Memmio Conſulari exercitus regenti nuptam facta mentione aviæ ejus, ut quondam pulcherrimæ, ſubito ex provincia evocavit ac perductam à marito conjunxit ſibi. This is what Suetonius ſays in the 25th Chapter of Caligula's Life, and here's what Euſebius ſays in his Chronicle: (b) Cajus Memmii Reguli uxorem duxit, impellens eum ut uxoris ſuæ patrem eſſe ſe ſcriberet. If you deſire to ſee a Note of Caſaubon upon this place of Suetonius, read what follows, and remember, that what he relates from Dion, is in the 59th Book, pag. 745. Ait Euſebius, ſcriberet, nempe in dotali inſtrumento, nam ut omnia acta legitime viderentur, omnia ſolennia ſunt ſervata. Maritus igitur propatre fuit, qui eam Cajo deſponſavit, dotem dixit, & ad novum maritum perduxit. Auctor Dio. Hinc intelligimus Suetonii ſequentia verba, perductam à marito conjunxit ſibi. This happened in the 791. Year of Rome; Caligula quickly diſguſted with Paullina, divorced her under pretence of Barrenneſs (c), and commanded her never more to have to do with any Man. (d) Miſſam fecit inderſicto cujuſquam in perpetuum coitu. Nine Years after this Divorce, Paullina diſplay'd all her Charms, to ſupplant her Rivals with the Emperor Claudius, whom ſhe'd fain have Married, but her Faction was not ſo ſtrong as Agrippina's. Cade Meſſallina convulſa principis domus orto apud liberos certamine quis deligeret uxorem Claudio calibis vitæ intoleranti, & conjugum imperiis obnoxio. Nec minore ambitu femina exarſerant, ſuam quaque nobilitatem, formam, opes contendere, ac digna tanto matrimonio oſtentare. Sed maxime ambigebatur inter Lollium Paullinam, M. Lollii conſularis filiam, & Juliam Agrippinam Germanico genitam: hujus Pallas, illi Calliſtus, fautores aderant: at Ælia Petina è familia Tuberonum, Narciſſo fovebatur. Thus Tacitus ſpeaks in the 1ſt. Chapter of the 12th Book of his Annals. The Favourite that introduced Paullina, alleged, that as ſhe had no Children, ſhe would be a very good Step-Mother to Claudius's Children; Calliſtus, continues the ſame Tacitus, —— longe rectius Lolliam induci quando nullos liberos genuiſſet, vacuam annuitatione, & privignis parentis loco futuram. But the Favourite who acted for Agrippina, alledged a better Reaſon; ſo that Claudius declared for her. This Triumph ought to have aſſwag'd the Hatred, which Paullina's Competition had begot in Agrippina's Breaſt; yet the happy Rival left no Stone unturn'd to deſtroy the unfortunate; ſhe had her accuſed of conſulting the Augurs, and the Oracle of Apollo, about the Emperor's Marriage: The Trial ended in a Decree, which condemned Lollia Paullina to Baniſhment, and the Confiſcation of the beſt part of her Eſtate. They left her but about 130 thouſand Crowns. Tacitus's Words, which I am going to cite, will tell us ſomething of Paullina's Parentage.

(a) According to Dion, l. 58. pag. 731. he was Governor of Myſia and Macedonia.

(b) Euſeb. numero 2056.

(c) Τὸν δὲ ἐκβαλόντα τὴν Παυλλίνην πρόφασιν μὲ πλάσαντα, ὡς δ' ἔλεγε διὰ τὸ ἄτεκνος αὐτὸν γεγονέναι.

Ad præſens vero exturbata Paulina ut ſterili, ſed revera quia ſatietas ejus ipſum ceperat. Dio l. 59. p. 757. ad ann. 792.

(d) Sueton. in Calig. c. 25.

(e) Atrox odii Agrippina, ac Lolliæ infenſa, quod ſecum de matrimonio principis certaviſſet: molitur crimina, & accuſatorem, qui objiceret Chaldæos, magos, interrogatumque Apollinis Clarii ſimulachrum ſuper nuptiis Imperatoris. Exin Claudius inaudita rea, multa de claritudine ejus apud ſenatum præfatus, ſororem L. Voluſii genitam, majorem ex patruum Corn. in Meſſallinum eſſe, Memmio quondam Regulo nuptam (nam de C. Cæſaris nuptiis cum Lollia Paullina ante edidi) patricio & matrona [illegible] Pium pulcherrimum, ſedente lictore [illegible] tium ex opibus immenſis exuli relictum. Agrippinæ Hatred being ſuch as was not to be ſatisfy'd without the Death of her Rival, cauſed her (f) to be murthered in her Exile, and to be well aſſured that it was Paullina's Head that was brought her, which ſhe could not eaſily diſtinguiſh; ſhe opened her Mouth, knowing this Lady had ſomething remarkable in her Teeth (g). Ἡδὴ δέ τινες ἐξ ἐκείνου γνωσθῆναι ζηλώσασαι ἐφύλαξαν, ἐξ ὧν τὴν τε Παυλλίαν τὴν Λολλίαν, ὅτε ἐκείνῃ τινὰ εἰς τὴν τοῦ Κλαυδίου συνοικησιν ἐφθόνησεν, ἀνῃρέθη. τὴν τε κεφαλὴν αὐτῆς κομισθεῖσαν αὐτῇ μὴ γνῶναι, τό τε στόμα αὐτῆς ἀνοιξαι ἐπῆλθε, ἐξ ὧν ἐδόκει ἐκείνη ἐκπρεπὲς τι ἔχειν. Multas illuſtres & nobiles feminas nonnulla invidia perdidit: in quarum numero fuit Lollia Paulina: quæ ab ea propterea necata eſt, quod ſe Claudio nuptuvam aliquando ſperaverat: cujus caput ad ſe perlatum quum non agnoſceret, os ejus manu ſua aperuit, ut dentes inſpiceret, quos illa non perinde ut cætera ſolent habuerat. By the Sum that Paullina had left, we may judge ſhe was extremely Rich, but we ſhall know this better, if we conſider the prodigious Coſtlineſs of her Clothes. Pliny, who had ſeen her, ſays, That even on occaſions, which were not the moſt Pompous, ſhe wore in her Dreſs, and on her Head, Jewels, to the value of Four Millions of Crowns. (b) Lolliam Paulinam, quæ fuit Caji principis matrona, neſcio quidem ac ſolennes cerimoniarum alioquo apparatu, ſed mediocrium etiam ſponſalium cœna, vidi ſmaragdis margaritiſque opertam, alterno textu fulgentibus, toto capite, crinibus, ſpiris, auribus, collo, manibus, digitiſque: quæ ſumma quadringenties H-S. colligebat: ipſa confeſtim parata mancupationem tabulis probare. Nec dona prodigi principis fuerant, ſed avita opes, provinciarum ſcilicet ſpoliis partæ. Hic eſt rapinarum exitus: hoc fuit quare M. Lollius infamatus regum muneribus in toto Oriente, interdicta amicitia à Cajo Cæſare Auguſti filio venenum biberet, ut neptis ejus quadringenties H-S. operta ſpectaretur ad lucernas. I have ſaid in another place (i) that Archbiſhop Uſher is miſtaken, in ſaying that this Woman was Married to Caius Cæſar, Grandſon to Auguſtus.

(e) Tacit. Annal. l. 12. c. 22 ad ann. 802.

(f) In Lolliam mittitur tribunus, à quo ad mortem adigeretur Id. ib.

(g) Xiphil. in Claudio p. m. 153.

(b) Plinius, l. 9. c. 35. p. m. 335.

(i) In the Article of Caligula, p. 764 P. Noris Cenotaph. Piſan. pag. 189. has mark'd this miſtake of Uſher.

(A) The Son of a poor Labourer.] This mean condition did not hinder his Immortalizing his Father's Name in the Title Page of his Books, for he writes himſelf Chriſtianus Longomontanus Severini filius. This is rarely practiſed by the learned, but when the Father has been a great Man in the Republick of Learning. An Adverſary who would have pretended that Longomontanus was not Famous, might have told him, you explain a thing Obſcure by another more Obſcure, obſcurum per obſcurius, imo per obſcuriſſimum.

(B) Tho' he was obliged to earn his Bread by his Labour he followed.] Here's what Gaſſendus ſays: (k) Moratus illeic xi. annos partim induſtria victum parans, partim indefeſſo labore literis invigilans. He forgot that Longomontanus taught (l) in this

(k) Gaſſend. in vita Tychon. lib. 3. ſub fin. pag. m. 430.

(l) Viburgi Scholæ Rector. Witte in Diario biographico ad ann. 1647.

and amongſt other Sciences, made a great Progreſs in Mathematicks After this he viſited the Univerſity of Copenhagen, and in a Years time got the Eſteem of the Profeſſors to ſuch a Degree, that they earneſtly recommended him to the Illuſtrious Tycho Brahe. This Recommendation had a good effect. Longomontanus was well received by this Famous Aſtronomer, who then lived in the Iſle of Hu[redacted] ſpeak of the Year 1589. He lived with him Eight Years, and was very uſeful to him, either in obſerving the Stars, or in making Calculations, and approved himſelf ſo exact, ſo able an Aſtronomer, and ſo laborious, that Tycho Brahe conceived a moſt particular Eſteem and Affection for him [a], and having [redacted] his own Country to ſettle in Germany, paſſionately [b] deſired to have him alo[redacted] him. This appears by the Letters he wrote to him [c] in 1598, and 1599. Longomontanus comply'd with this Deſire of Tycho Brahe, and met him [d] in the Caſtle of Benach, near Prague. He was a great help to him in all his Aſtronomical Labours; but being deſirous of a Profeſſor's Chair in Denmark, Tycho Brahe [redacted]ted to deprive himſelf of the Company and Services of this Diſciple, and gave [redacted]m a Diſcharge fill'd with ſuch Marks of Eſteem as turn'd mightily to his Glory. Nor did he forget to furniſh him with large Supplies for the Expences of his Journey. Longomontanus returning into Denmark, fetch'd [e] a great Compaſs to ſee the Places from which Copernicus had Contemplated the Stars. He met with a kind Patron in the [f] Chancellor, and after having for ſome time enjoy'd a genteel Employ in his Family [g] he was promoted to the Profeſſorſhip of Mathematicks, in the Univerſity of Copenhagen, in the Year 1605. He diſcharged it honourably to his dying Day, which was [h] th[redacted]th of October 1647. He had loſt his Wife 10 Years before, who was Siſter to Ga[redacted]rtholinus [i]. The Books he left behind him diſcover (C) his great Capacity. He amuſed himſelf with finding out the Squaring of the Circle, and fancied (D) he had found it; he was roundly taken to task on that Head by an Engliſh Mathematician. He altered ſomething

[a] Ex eodem Gaſſendo ib.
[b] Gaſſend. ibid. lib. 5. p. 452.
[c] Id. ibid.
[d] Id. ibid. pag. 456.
[e] It's dated from Prague, Auguſt the 4th. 1600. See Gaſſendi ibid. pag. 459.
[f] In Poloniam per Sileſiam divertere ac inter redeundum inviſere loca in quibus obſervaſſet Copernicus. Id. ib.
[g] He was called Chriſtien Friis de Borreby.
[h] Longomontan. Epiſt. dedicator. Aſtronomiæ Danicæ.
[i] Gaſſend. ubi ſupra. lib. 6. pag. 473.
[k] Moller. hypomn. ad Alb. Bartbol. de ſcriptis Danor. pag. 185.

School of Vibourg. Here's a Man that may be compared to the Philoſopher Cleanthes.

(C) The Books he left behind him ſhew his Capacity.] Here's the Catalogue of them: (A[redacted] ſtematis Mathematici pars I. ſive Arithmetica, Hafn. 1611. in 8vo. Cyclometria è Lunulis reciprocè demonſtrata, Hafn. 1612. Hamb. 1627. Paris 1664, in 4to. Aſtronomia Danica, Amſtel. 1622 in 4to. 1640. 1663, in Folio. Inventio Quadraturæ Circuli, Hafn. 1634. in 4to. Coronis Problematica ex Myſteriis trium numerorum, &c. ibid. 1637. in 4to. Problemata duo Geometrica, ibid. 1638. in 4to. Problema contra Paulum Guldinum de circuli menſura, ibid. 1638. in 4to. Rotundi in Plano, ſeu Circuli abſoluta Menſura, Amſtel. 1644. in 4to. Regula Proportionis ſeſquitertiæ, Hafn. 1644. in 4to. Controverſia cum Pellio de vera circuli Menſura, ibid. 1645. in 4to. Admiranda Operatio Trium numerorum, 6, 7, 8. ad Circ. menſurandum, ibid, 1645. in 4to. Caput Sextium Libri Primi de abſoluta menſura Rotundi Plani, unà cum Elenebo. Cyclometriæ J. Scaligeri & Appendice de defectu Canonis, &c. ibid. 1646. in 4to. Geometria Quæſita XIII. de Cyclometria rationali & vera, ibid. 1531. in 4to. Introductio in Theatrum Aſtronomicum, ibid. 1639. in 4to. Diſp. de Mathefeos Indole, ibid. in 4to. 1636. Diſputationes Aſtronomicæ ſex. ibid. in 4to. 1622. De Chronolabio Hiſtorico, ſeu Tempore, Diſputationes tres, ibid. 1627. in 4to. This is the Liſt we find in the Sieur Albert Bartholin's Treatiſe de ſcriptis Danorum. It is not compleat. There are many Philoſophical, Aſtronomical and Chronological Diſſertations wanting, which Longomontanus had opened in Diſputations in his Auditory at ſeveral times. You'll find the Catalogue of 'em in a Book (b) which Mr. Mollerus has intituled, ad librum Alberti Bartholini de ſcriptis Danorum poſthumum hypomnemata hiſtorico-critica paucula è plurimis ſelecta. You'll alſo find there (c) that the Sieur Witte (d) had no Reaſon to aſcribe to George Lewis Frobenius, Longomontanus's Cyclometry, printed at Hambourgh, without the Name of the Author, in 1627. The Manuſcript of Longomontanus's Apology, which he made for Tycho Brahe againſt Cragius a Scotch Phyſician, was depoſited (e) in the Hands of George Frommius, who ſucceeded him in the Chair of Copenhagen. I don't think it was ever printed. Tycho Brahe preſſed him (f) to haſten the Concluſion of it, that it might ſerve 'as an Appendix to his Treatiſe upon Comets; for it was upon that Subject (g) that Cragius attack'd him in the Year 1592, intituled, Capnuraniæ refutatio, ſeu cometarum in æthereum ſublimationis refutatio.

[a] Albert. Bartholinus de ſcriptis Danorum, according to the Edition of Mollerus, 1699. p. 25, 26.
[b] Printed in 1699. See in it pag. 188, 189.
[c] At p. 187.
[d] In diario biographico ad ann. 1645.
[e] Gaſſend. ubi ſupra lib. 6. pag. 473.
[f] Id. ib. lib. 4. pag. 452.
[g] Id. ib. lib. 4. pag. 442. ad ann. 1595

(D) He pretended to have found out the Quadrature of the Circle, and was attack'd.] [redacted]aillet has [redacted]d this Diſpute. Mr. Deſc[redacted] (l) ſays was drawn into an Engagement among the chief Mathematicians of Europe, partaking in the Famous Diſpute, which aroſe that Year betwixt Longomontanus and Pellius, about the Squaring of the Circle. Longomontanus——had undertaken to Demonſtrate the Quadrature of the Circle, that Shelve on which the greateſt Genius's have Foundered; nor was he happyer in his Attempt than others before him, notwithſtanding the good Opinion he had entertained of his Labour. Mr. John Pell, an Engliſh Profeſſor of Mathematicks in (i) the College of Amſterdam, immediately diſcovered a great deal of falſe Reaſoning in it, and (k) ſeeing that the Point of the difficulty conſiſted in the Proof of one ſingle Theorem, he firſt made the Demonſtration of it by himſelf, and reſolved to propoſe the thing to all the ableſt Mathematicians of his Acquaintance, and deſired their Opinion of it. Thoſe who examined it (l) and ſent him their Demonſtrations, were M. de Roberval, M. le Pailleur, A[redacted]cavi, M. Mydorgius, and Father Merſennus, who was returned from his Travels into Italy, about the beginning of July. My Lord Candiche, or Cavendiſh, and Mr. Hobbs of England, John Adolphus Taſſius, a Mathematician of Hamborough, John Lewis Wolzogen, a Free Baron of Auſtria, Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber to the King of Poland, a Carteſian in Philoſophy, and a Socinian in Religion; Father Bonaventure Cavalier, an Italian, Profeſſor of Mathematicks at Bologna; M. Golius, Profeſſor at Leiden, and ſome other Dutch Mathematicians. M. Deſcartes ſent alſo M. Pell, a ſhort Demonſtration upon the ſame Subject, which ſerved much to Authorize what he had advanced againſt Longomontanus. M. Mollerus (k) Reports 1ſt, That Longomontanus boaſted, even in his Epitaph, that he had found out the Quadrature of the Circle, and that Gaſpar Bartholinus made a Poem to Congratulate him upon it, but that Thomas Bartholinus, Gaſpar's Son, was of a different Judgment, and found Longomontanus's Enterprize, more Ingenuity [redacted]abour, than good Succeſs. 2d. That Claude [redacted] Couſſellor in the Chatelet in Paris, refuted Longomontanus's (l) Paralogiſms. 3d. That John [redacted]ell, this Daniſh Mathematician's chief Antagoniſt, inſerted in his Book what the moſt excellent Mathematicians of [redacted]ge had Communicated to him. (m) Quorum [redacted] ac Demonſtrationes Theorematis, in cujus [redacted] totius Controv. Cardo vertebatur, dubii, in Pelliana, in Joh. Pellii Controverſiæ de vera Circuli Menſura, inter Longomontanum ac ſe An. 1644. exortæ, Parte I. Amſtelod, An. 1647.

(b) Baillet vie de Deſcartes tom. 2. pag. 274. ad ann. 1645
(i) He was ſo afterwards at Breda.
(k) Vit. Hobbian. auctar. p. 15. & 16.
(l) Lipſiorp. ſpecim. Philoſ. Carteſ. p. 14.
(k) Jo. Mollerus hypomn. pag. 187.
(l) In his Elenchus Cyclometriæ Longomontan. printed at Paris in 4to. without the Author's Name.
(m) Id. ib. pag. 188.

thing in (E) Tycho Brahe's Syſtem. The Reflection of a Modern Author upon the Inconveniencies and Motives of this kind of Reform, to me, ſeems worth the relating.

« Jacoba Lonviana in Mr. Thuanus.

LONGVIC (« Jaqueline de) Dutcheſs of Montpenſier, was a Lady (A) of great Merit and Intereſt towards (B) the middle of the XVI. Century. She was in 4to. excuſa, occurrunt. Mr. Mollerus had before obſerved, that Longomontanus's Friends confuted his Antagoniſts upon other Points. Peter Bartholinus, his Diſciple (a) in 1632. anſwered the Objections of Martin Hortenſius, inſerted in the Preface of Peter Lansbergius's Commentary de motu terræ diurno & annuo. George Fromius in his Tract de mediis ad Aſtronomiam reſtituendam neceſſariis, publiſhed in the Year 1642. made the Apology to the Introductio in theatrum aſtronomicum, a work that Longomontanus had publiſhed againſt John Baptiſta Morin in 1639. But as to the Quadrature of the Circle, they could not juſtify him. His Labours were not ſo happy. (b) Haud æque felices fuerunt Longomontani Conatus Cyclometrici, circa veram Circuli Quadraturam, Scopulum tot Ingeniorum Subtilium Naufragiis infamem.

(a) In his Apology pro obſervationibus & hypotheſibus Tych. Brahei.

(b) Id. ib. pag. 187.

(E) He altered ſomething in Tycho Brahe's Syſtem. The Reflection of a Modern Author——ſo me ſeems worth relating.] ' (c) There was a ' fourth Syſtem, which Longomontanus, one of ' Tycho Brahe's chief Diſciples deſign'd to bring ' into Vogue, by taking ſomething from all the ' reſt, and endeavouring to avoid the ſtrongeſt ' Objections againſt 'em. He ſaw, that in that ' of Tycho, the Inconceivable Rapidity of the fixed ' Stars, and in that of Copernicus, the immenſe ' Space he put betwixt the Heaven of Saturn and ' the fixed Stars, was ſcarce ſufferable; to Reme- ' dy both theſe Inconveniencies, he made a ſmall ' Change in Tycho's Syſtem, by giving the Earth a ' Diurnal Revolution about its own Axis, by which ' means the Planets, the Sun and fixed Stars did not ' move round the Earth in 24 Hours, but each Pla- ' net made its Revolution gently from Weſt to Eaſt; ' and the fixed Stars had their ſlow Motion round ' their Orbit in 25000 Years, as the Moon per- ' forms hers in 27 Days, the Sun in a Year, and ' others in Proportion to their Diſtance, and the ' greatneſs of their Circle. But tho' this Syſtem, ' which was only a ſmall Reformation of Tycho ' Brahe's, without diſconcerting any of its Parts, ' might be defended by very good Reaſons; yet ' becauſe of the little Credit of its Author, and ' the great Reputation of thoſe that preceded him, ' very few applauded it; ſome holding, that ' if the Earth be in the Center, it muſt be im- ' moveable, but if it does move, that it's Motion ' muſt be like that of the other Planets. In a ' word, it was believed, that he who form'd this ' Syſtem upon the other two, which at that time ' divided all the Learned, only did it through ' the natural Inclination Men have to be always ' refining upon others, tho' theſe Reformations ge- ' nerally end in ſpoiling the whole; they who en- ' deavor to Reconcile two oppoſite Opinions, tak- ' ing a leſs reaſonable Method, for the moſt part, ' than that which they refuſe to ſubmit to'.

(c) Mr. le Noble, Baron de S. George in the 2d. Tome d' Uranie ou des tableaux des Philoſophes, c. 10. pag. 71. and the following.

Theſe laſt words are capable of a large and fine Comment, which might be filled up with many Reaſons and Examples.

(A) Of great Merit.] Thuanus makes a very Honourable mention of her. (d) *Sub id tempus Jacoba Lonviana Montpenſerii uxor V. Kal. Sept. ex tabe deceſſit, virili animo & prudentia ſupra ſexum inſigni, qua ſemper publica tranquillitati ſeorum inſignis, qua ſemper publica tranquillitati ſeorum inſignis, qua ſemper publica tranquillitati ſeorum inſignis a Le P. Anſelme Hiſt. de la Maiſon Roiale. pag. 300. See the Remark A.

b Le P. Anſelme ibid.

was (C) youngeſt Daughter a to John de Longvic, Seigneur de Givry, and was Married in 1538. to Lewis de Bourbon II. of the Name, Duke de Montpenſier. She was firſt Favourite to Katherine de Medicis; and had b ſhe been alive at the time when this Queen gave into Intrigues which had like to have ruined the Kingdom, would perhaps have made her take better Reſolutions. It's poſſible too that her Counſels and good Addreſs might have had no effect on a Soul of ſuch a Temper as hers. Ambition was like a devouring Fire. Be it how it will, ſhe died juſt [redacted] the breaking out of the great Troubles on the ſcore of Religion, the 28th of Auguſt 1561. She openly made appear, during a tedious Sickneſs, what her [redacted] had long ſuſpected of her; to wit, That ſhe was (D) a Proteſtant; [redacted] otleſs it was her private Inſtructions, which ſowed in the Soul of ſome of [redacted] Daughters the Seeds of Reformation, which fructified ſome time after: For Frances de Bourbon, her eldeſt Daughter, who was Married in 1558 to Henry Robert de la Marc, Duke de Bouillon, openly profeſſed the Proteſtant Religion, [redacted] the incredible Pains her Father took (E) to reclaim her, could produce no effect. Charlotte, this Duke's fourth Daughter, had been put into a Convent, (F) againſt her Mother's Advice, who had a mind to Marry her to the Duke de Longueville. She was Abbeſs of Jouare; but as that kind of Life did not comport with the Inſtructions ſhe had received from her Mother, nor perhaps with her own Inclinations, ſhe eſcaped into Germany in 1572, where ſhe abjured Popery, and was Married two Years after to the Prince of Orange. Of the three other Daughters of Jaqueline de Longvic, and the Duke de Montpenſier, two perſevered in a Monaſtick Life, to which they had been made Victims; and one Married [redacted] the Duke [redacted] of Nevers's Son. She

(a) Mandatorum ſumma hæc erat ut ipſa fidei datæ recordaretur, quamprimum bona mariti ex Caroli avunculi hereditate à rege poſſeſſa recuperaſſet, daturam operam ut Guiſianorum conatus impedirentur, tempus veniſſe Belloiocenſibus ac Dumbaribus receptis quo fidem liberaret. Thuanus l. 26. init. La Place fol. 100. dit la même choſe.

(b) In the Argument to the 23d Book of the Hiſtory of Herefy.

(c) Varillas, l. 23. of the Hiſt. of the Hereſie, p. m. 134.

(d) P. Anſelme hiſt. des Offic. pag. 313.

(e) La Place ubi ſupra, fol. 215. verſo.

(f) This Author did not know that they had had five Daughters

(g) Lib. 28 p. m. 562.

(h) Hiſt. de Charles IX. to. 1. pag. 61. See the Remarks of the Article Soubiſe.

de Marillac writ to the Dutcheſs (a) in 1650, that the time was come in which ſhe was obliged to Act againſt the Houſe of Guiſe, ſince it had recovered the Country of Beaujolois and Dombes, and that ſhe had promiſed to Act, provided right was done her Husband as to the Inheritance of the Conſtable. It had been Abſurd to talk to her in this manner, if the Reſtitution had been made in Francis [redacted] time. I know not how we are to believe what Varillas ſays (b) that the Dutcheſs fixed her Huſband in the Intereſt of the Guiſes, who did not miſtruſt this Duke, but ſuffered him to live at Court, when they Baniſh'd thence the other Princes of the Blood, both becauſe they knew, he perfectly hated the Calviniſts, as alſo becauſe (c) all the World knew, that Jaqueline de Longvic his Wife abſolutely Governed him, and that this Princeſs was ſo intimate with the Queen-Mother, that ſhe would never do any thing, but what her Majeſty pleaſed. This was the place for this Author to Publiſh what he has done in the Life of Charles IX. concerning this Dutcheſs's Huguenotiſm; but a Man does not always know when he makes one Book; what he knows when he compoſes another, and hence comes ſo many different Hypotheſes of Mr. Varillas.

(C) She was youngeſt Daughter. Francis de Longvic her Elder Siſter, was Wife to Admiral Chabot, and (d) left ſome Children. Father Anſelm therefore has very improperly ſaid, that Jaqueline was Heireſs to John de Longvic. He gives the ſame Title to Frances. The Expreſſion would not be juſt, tho' their Father's Eſtate had been divided betwixt 'em.

(D) She was a Proteſtant.] Let's ſee what the Preſident de la Place ſays of it. (e) 'She deſired that 'the Duke de Longueville might Marry (f) her third 'Daughter, deſigned by her Father for a Nun at 'Frontevault, to the great Regret of the ſaid Lady, as ſhe gave her Husband to underſtand in her 'laſt Diſcourſes, diſcovering to him what he had 'before ſuſpected, that ſhe was a Proteſtant, which 'ſhe had ſufficiently diſcovered during her ſaid Illneſs, which was long, being at Fontainbleau, 'and the King at Rheims, in order to his Coronation, where ſhe deſired a Miniſter of the ſaid 'Religion to confer with her about Points of Conſcience. Malo being ſent to her, refuſed to Adminiſter the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper to 'her, which ſhe deſired, foraſmuch as ſhe was 'alone, and had no body to Communicate with 'her; arguing that this Sacrament was not Inſtituted to be particularly Adminiſtered, like Baptiſm, but rather to be Communicated to many of 'the Faithful at once; with which, however, 'ſhe could not be contented, deſiring by any means 'to make Declaration of the Religion, in which 'ſhe reſolved to Die'. Thuanus (g) relates the ſame thing in Subſtance. Mr. Varillas has purely and ſimply (h) cenſured it: An evident Sign that he did not believe it was a Huguenot Story; for if he had, he would have made a long Parentheſis to tell us ſo.

(E) To Reclaim her.] Amongſt other things, he cauſed two Doctors of the Sorbonne, and two Miniſters to Diſpute before her, in [redacted] Auguſt [redacted]. This Conference could not be held at Montargis Houſe, becauſe this Prince would oblige the Miniſters not to Pray to God before the Action, which they would not conſent to. The Conference therefore was broke of; but it was again agreed upon ſome time after, and executed at the Duke of Nevers's. I ſpeak of it in another Place (i). The two Doctors were Simon Vigor and Claude de Sainctes, the two Miniſters were Spina and Surreau. They ſpent a great many words in Replies, Rejoinders, &c. and afterwards in Prints, in which each Party aſcribed the Victory to it ſelf; but the Succeſs of the Miniſters was, that the Dutcheſs continued theirs, which was the Prize of the Conteſt. The contrary happened in the Diſpute between the Biſhop of Meaux, and Mr. Claude: Mademoiſelle de Duras adjudged the Victory to the Catholick Champion.

(i) Under the word Roſiers.

(F) Againſt her Mother's Advice.] This gives me an occaſion to touch upon a Contradiction of Thuanus. He ſays in his [redacted] Book, that Jaqueline de Longvic was (k) diſſuaded at the Cloiſtering of her Charlotte, for two reaſons; one, that ſhe was deſigned for the Duke de Longueville; the other, that ſhe had already ſhewn her Repugnance to a Religious Life. In the 51ſt Book, he ſays, that ſhe bred her in the Proteſtant Religion, but ſecretly, through fear of her Husband; and that afterwards this Charlotte being ſcarce a Year old, was put into the Convent of Jouare; Vim annicula in Jovarienſe Monaſterium conjecta. If ſhe was but one Year old, all that he ſaid of her Inſtruction, and the Marks of her Repugnance is falſe and impoſſible. Doubtleſs this Hiſtorian muſt have had ſome Diſtraction of Thought, which was not common to him, or what's more probable, he muſt have underſtood by annicula an Age more advanced than one Year. But does he find good Authorities for this Senſe of the Word?

(k) Frementeque Carlottam Longavillano duci uxorem deſtinaverat, & jam tum animadvertere ſibi videbatur ægre filiam in monaſticam vitam conſentire.

(G) The Duke of Nevers's Son.] He was called the Count d'Eu. I don't find at what [redacted] he Married; but I diſtruſt Father Anſelm [redacted] who ſays, (l) 'That Anne de Bourbon, was Married by Con-'tract the 6th of September, 1561, with Francis '(m) de Cleves IV. of the Name Duke of Nevers, 'and that ſhe died without Children in 1572'. For what appearance is there, that this Princeſs was Married eight or nine Years after her Mothers Death? I inſiſt not on what the (n) Preſident de la Place ſays, that the Duke de Nivernois died a little after the Marriage of Henry de Cleves, his Son, with Anne de Bourbon; from whence we muſt conclude

(l) Ubi ſupra.

(m) The Preſident de la Place and Thuanus call him Henry.

(n) Ubi ſupra.

She had followed Queen Elizabeth into Spain, who (H) loved her entirely. If Jaqueline had converted her Husband, she had saved a great deal of Proteſtant Blood, and a great deal of Miſery to ſome of her own Sex; for he uſed 'em with the utmoſt Severity, as we may read in Brantome. Their Son, who was a good Catholick, did not follow the Leaguers. Though this Lady had only procured to France (I), a Chancellor of ſo much Merit, as Michael de l'Hoſpital, her Memory ought to be bleſſed for it; for it was not poſſible to make Choice of a better Subject than he, and no Body could have ſo well ſupported the Monarchy in ſo dangerous a Conjuncture. The Wiſdom and Conſtancy of his Counſels, would have been the Arm of Hector [a], to have maintained the publick Repoſe, if the Deſtinies, more powerful than all the Induſtry of Man, had not permitted a froward Generation to baffle all his Deſigns, and oblige him at laſt to retire.

LONGUS, a Greek Sophiſt, Author of a Book intituled Ποιμενικα, that's to ſay, Paſtorales, (A) a Romance upon the Amours of Daphnis and Chloe. Mr. Huet, Biſhop of Avranches, who was a great Judge in moſt Things, has ſpoken well enough of this Book; but he obſerves ſeveral Faults in it, the greateſt of which doubtleſs

[a] Thuanus lib. 28. La Place Etat de la Relig. & Republ. liv. 6. Diſcours du Duc de Montpenſier, au tome 3. de ſes Memoires. See the Article Baluſe, Remark C.

[b] Si Pergama dextra Defendi poſſent, etiam hac defenſa fuiſſent. Virg. Æn. lib. 2. v. 291.

[c] De l'origine des Romans, pag. 65. 66. Edit. Latina.

(a) Mr. le Labourer is of this Number, Tome 2. pag. 106. des Additions à Caſtelnau. But Theodore Beza, l. 5. pag. 749. expreſly Remarks, that this Duke [redacted] of February, 1562. computing the Year from January.

(b) Apud le Labourer, ibid.

(c) En 1561. Id. ib. p. 107.

(d) Tome 1. pag. 237.

(e) Hiſt. Eccl. l. 6. pag. 241.

(f) Lib. 5. pag. 748. 749.

(g) Brantome, Diſcours de Catherine de Medicis, dans le tome des Dames illuſtres.

(b) Dames Galantes, tome 2. pag. 396.

conclude, that this Marriage preceded the Death of the Dutcheſs of Montpenſier, if we did not take notice, that they who fix the Duke of Nevers's Death to the Thirteenth of February 1561, (a) followed the Cuſtom, which was not quite abolished at that time, of beginning the Year at Eaſter. Now upon that Ground is plain, the Duke died after Jaqueline de Longvic, and ſo the Preſident de la Place does not contradict Father Anſelm. I had rather depend upon Brantome, who ſays, that the Count d'Eu went into Spain to marry the Princeſs Anne. He was, ſays he (b), in my Opinion, the fineſt Prince ever ſaw, and the moſt affable and amiable; and reckoned him ſo amongſt us, and when he went into Spain to marry (c) Madam his Daughter to the Duke of Montpenſier, he was there alſo as much admired and eſteemed, both by the Court, and all the Country. Whom ſhall we believe, Brantome, who ſays the Princeſs was married in Spain, or Thuanus, and the Preſident de la Place, who ſay, the former that after her return from Spain, ſhe married Henry de Cleves; the latter, that the Dutcheſs her Mother recalled her from Spain to marry her to him? Thuanus, who obſerves, that ſhe died a little after her Marriage, might have ſaid as much of her Husband, who was killed at the Battle of Dreux by the going off of a Piſtol of the Duke of Guiſe's Cornet. This is what Brantome ſays of it, but d'Aubigne (d) tells it otherwiſe, and gives us to underſtand, that this young Duke of Nevers had the Knowledge of the Truth. 'Tis probably for that reaſon, that Jaqueline de Longvic was willing he ſhould marry her Daughter. Beza ſpeaks of the Death and Religion of this Duke, ſomewhat at large (e): and obſerving (f) that the Marquis of Iſles his Brother, and the Marchioneſs his Wife, aſſiſted at the Exerciſes of Piety with him, and received the Sacrament all together on Eaſter-day the 29th of March 1562: Obſerving this, I ſay, without ſaying a Word of the Dutcheſs, we might conclude, that ſhe died a little after her Marriage, as Thuanus has advanced, did we not ſee two Authors againſt him; one is Father Anſelm, affirming that this Lady deceaſed in 1572, the other is Brantome, who ſpeaks of her (g) as the Widow of the Count d'Eu, afterwards Duke of Nevers, where he gives the Liſt of the Ladies of Catherine de Medicis's Court.

(H) Queen Elizabeth——who loved her entirely.] Brantome informs me (b), that this Daughter to the Duke de Montpenſier, a moſt prudent, moſt vertuous and fine Princeſs, and reckoned for ſuch in France and Spain; had been bred ſome time in Spain with Queen Elizabeth of France, and had the Place of her Cup-bearer, the Queen being ſerved by her Ladies and Maids of Honour, and each having a Place. The Queen gave her a Diamond worth between 1500 and 2000 Crowns. A Miſtreſs of Count d'Eu, declaring a great Deſire to have that Ring, as ſhe ſaw it on the Count's Finger, eaſily obtained it, and wore it always for his ſake. The Counteſs, whom her Husband had made believe he had loſt or pawned his Diamond, ſaw it in the Hands of this Gentlewoman, whom he uſed to be her Husband's Miſtreſs, turned her Head aſide, and never ſaid a Word of it to either of 'em. Brantome has Reaſon to praiſe her for it; but what an Inſtance of Corruption is here! This Count lived but a ſhort while after his Marriage, and yet was unfaithful to his Wife.

(I) Procured to France a Chancellor.] Thuanus (i) acquaints us with this particular, after this manner: Id autem factum Jacobæ Lonvianæ Montpenſerii uxoris commendatione quæ in Catherinæ amicitia præcipuè florebat, excelſo ingenio mulier, & quæ creſcentem Guiſianorum potentiam ſuſpectam habebat. Illa Catharinam Guiſianorum violentiam jam expertam proprio metu incendebat, & ad imperium anhelanti certiſſimam viam oſtendebat, ſi aliquem deligeret cujus ſalutaribus monitis eorum pernicioſa conſilia revinceret. See an ample Paraphraſe of this Latin in Varillas's (k) Life of Francis II. where we find alſo how this Dutcheſs of Montpenſier (l) contributed to ſave the Prince of Condé's Life in the ſame Reign. This Hiſtorian is not ſo favourable to her in Charles the IX's Life. He makes her the Cauſe of the King of Navarre's renouncing the Regency in favour of the Queen-Mother. The Perſuaſions, ſays he (m), of the Dutcheſs of Montpenſier, who was called the Siren, carried it above the Remonſtrances of the Montmorenci's, the Chatillon's, the Calviniſts, and the moſt zealous Catholicks——The Eaſineſs of this Prince was the Cauſe or Occaſion of all the Miſeries that France ſo long groaned under. But ſince he confeſſes, that the Conſtable and the Admiral, inſtead of diſſuading him from ſo ſcandalous an Acquieſcence, confirmed him in it by this ſole Reaſon (n), that his Inconſtancy would too much perplex 'em, and that they could more eaſily manage the Queen, after having obliged her by a Benefit ſo conſiderable, as that was of inducing the firſt Prince of the Blood to give up the Regency to her, there is not ſo much Reaſon to exclaim againſt the Negotiation of this Dutcheſs. Thuanus (o) does not blame her.

(A) Paſtorales, a Romance.] The Word Paſtoralia, which Mr. Moreri read in Voſſius, made him think this Book was in Verſe; Longus, ſays he, left four Books of Paſtoral Verſe, or Eclogues, which Godfrey Jungerman has tranſlated into Latin, with his Notes upon them, and has dedicated this Work to his Couſin Lewis Camerarius. Longus's Paſtorals are in Proſe: The Latin Tranſlator's Name is Godfrey Jungerman; and it was uſeleſs to obſerve, he dedicated this Book to Lewis Camerarius his Couſin. Voſſius, from whom Moreri has taken this Particular, had Reaſons for this Clauſe, in his Book taken from the Time and Place in which he writ; for this Mr. Camerarius was well known in Holland, where he had been Ambaſſador from the King of Sweden: which Voſſius alſo notify'd (p). Moreri, who had not the ſame Reaſons, ought to have omitted the Concluſion, or at leaſt have ſaid, all that Voſſius did. Thus he would have given Occaſion to his Readers to Form ſome Idea of the Perſon to whom the Tranſlation of Longus was dedicated. Greater Men than Moreri have thought, that the Paſtorals I ſpeak of were in Verſe. Malincrotius was under (q) this Miſtake, as Mr. Konig obſerves (r), who for his own part was ignorant

[d] Thuanus, lib. 28. Hiſtoriarum ſui temporis, pag. 1000. Edit. Genevæ.

[e] Tome 1. pag. 9. ad ann. 1560. He cites the Negotiation of the Dutcheſs of Montpenſier with the King of Navarre.

(n) Stol'n from Theod. Beza, Hiſt. Eccleſ. lib. 4. pag. 406.

(o) Lib. 25. pag. 525.

(p) Operam ſuam dedicavit conſobrino ſuo Ludovico Camerario tum Electori Palatino à Conſiliis, poſtea ſereniſſimi Sueciæ Regis Legatio ad Fœderatos Belgas. Voſſius de Hiſtoricis Græcis, pag. 517. (q) Longus Sophiſta ſcripſit Heroico carmine de amoribus Daphnidis & Chloes libris quatuor. Mallinerr. Parallipomen. de Hiſt. Græc. pag. 39. (r) Bibliothec. pag. 486. before doubtleſs conſiſt in the Obſcenities (B) that are found in it. This is ſtill more remote from the Politeneſs of our Romances, than the Conduct of Longus's Shepherdeſs; ſhe loves too haſtily, and grants (C) her Kiſſes too ſoon. Longus is thought to have been the Promoter of that ſilly Idea of Gallantry, which reigns moſt in Romances. The Shepherdeſs fills out Drink, drinks a little firſt, and afterwards preſents the [illegible] before Jungerman's Edition, (he calls him Jugerman) that the Paſtoral had ever been in Latin.

(B) In the Obſcenities that are found in it.] I believe it was on this Account that Mr. Huet did not finiſh the Latin Tranſlation; for he tells us, that he began it in his Youth, before he perfectly knew the Character of the Book, how much the Reading it might corrupt young Men, and how unfit it was for old. (a) Quum puer eſſem, hunc autorem Latine interpretandum ſuſcepi, cum nondum ſatis haberem exploratum, quid in eo laudabile eſſet, quid vitioſum; & quantum ejus lectio pueritiæ damnoſa ſit, quam parum etiam ætati provectiori decora This reaſon hindred not a Profeſſor of Franeker from tranſlating this Romance, and publiſhing it with learned Notes in 1660. He was apprehenſive of the Cenſure of ſome, whoſe Auſtere and Moroſe Humour can't bear the Example. Obſerve how he is before-hand with them. His Words deſerve relating, becauſe there are ſeveral Authors, whoſe Vertue and Prudence might be conteſted, did we not oppoſe this Buckler of Longus's Tranſlator, to the Surly and Malignant Criticiſm of theſe pretended Cato's. Dicam hic quod ſentio, ſays he (b), Non feram judices noſtra in cauſa, Caperata fronte Catones, qui ſine dubio me altum ſtertere, aut cucurbitas pingere mallent, quàm tanto conatu, tam immanes nugas agere, vitioque fortaſſe mihi vertent, quod logos hoſce amatorios (quid enim quaſo eſſe quod non vellicare malignitas poſſit?) haud tamen illepidos, nec inficetos, latine converſos, grandior ætate, & γεγονὼς μὲν ἀλικίας ἤδη πρέσβυς, in lucem edere fategerim. O formidabilem cenſorum ſeveritatem! Quorum cenſura actum erit de Homero, homine ab ipſis gratiis ficto, venereos amores, adulteria, inceſta, ſcelera prolixè deſcribente: quem tamen Alexander tanti fecit, ut ſuo pulvillo noctibus ſingulis ſubdiderit: Actum de Ariſtophane, quem nihilominus Johannes ille Antiochenus, ſummorum Theologorum lumen, qui propter aureum eloquentiæ flumen, Chryſoſtomi cognomen obtinuit, nocturna diurnaque verſaſſe manu, à viris fide dignis memoriæ proditum eſt. Nullum equidem poſtarum invenias, quin multa multorum ſcelera nefaria narret, non quidem ad bonos labefactandos, corrumpendoſque mores; ſed potius ad eoſdem emendandos, atque flagitia illa deteſtanda, abominanda. Multo minus vitilitigatores, (quorum leges in hoc ſeculo denſa eſt) homines, ut Plinius ait, ad venena natos, qui nullum aliud abominati ſpiritus præmium novere, quam odiſſe omnia: At potius rerum humanarum æquos mihi æſtimatores exopto. This Commentator ſaw himſelf indiſpenſably obliged to touch upon Longus's Impurities, but he did it with ſhewing his Averſion to 'em. What could he do more? Opus alioqui tam obſcenum eſt, (as Mr. Huet ſays (c), ut qui ſine rubore legat tum Cynicum eſſe neceſſe ſit. This alioqui refers to a great Fault he had before obſerved; viz. that Longus begins his Book with the Birth of his Shepherd and Shepherdeſs, and continues it to their Marriage, their Children, and old Age (d), which is tranſgreſſing againſt the Rules of this Kind of Writings. They ought to wind up on the Wedding-Day, and ſay nothing of the Conſequences of Marriage. The Heroine of a Romance, with a Big-Belly, or Lying-in, is a ſtrange Image.

(C) Grants her Kiſſes too ſoon.] You don't read above five or ſix Pages, before you find Daphnis raviſhed with the Pleaſure of a Kiſs from his Shepherdeſs. (e) Τὸ φίλημα κατέσχε, ſays he, ἐκπνεῦσά μου τὸ πνεῦμα, ἐξέλιπέ με καρδία, πέπτωκε ἡ ψυχὴ, ἡ δίκην πόλεως ἐπολέμει δίκαι. Hocce oſculum admirabile eſt, quippe ſpiritus meus extat, cor exilit, anima liqueſcit: attamen iterum ſuaviari cupio. A Chaſm in the ſame Page, does not hinder our underſtanding the Circumſtances of this Kiſs. A little after we find him handling his Shepherdeſs's Breaſts (f), without any Coyneſs of her ſide. This poor Damſel, ſeeing him ſtark naked, melts with Deſire, ſhe ſaw nothing but what was amiable in him; ſhe was ſo little ſtartled at this Object, that ſhe boldly approached it, and having kiſs'd her Shepherd, helped him on with his Cloaths. (g) Ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἐφίλει μὲν ἐρῶσα ἀφρόν, ἐκπνεῖν ἐδόκει τὸ πάλλον, ἐξ ἐκόπτετο, μικρὸν αὐτῷ μέρος μέμφασθαι δυνάμενον——. (h) ἐπεὶ δὲ, τὴν ἐσθῆτα αὐτῷ λαβοῦσα ἐξ ἐναμπισχόνην ἐνέδυσε, καὶ τῶν ἐξ αὐτῆς φιλήσασα. Illa enim nudum conſpicata Daphnidem, effloreſcentem in ejus pulchritudinem incidit, atque conſtabuit, cum nullam ejus partem vilipendere poſſet——At illa viciſſim, dato oſculo, veſtem illius, jam loti atque denudati, induebat. Theſe Things would be monſtrous in the Romances of our Times. People won't forgive the Marquis d'Urfe, the little Favours he makes Celadon obtain. The Pleaſure he promiſes him of ſeeing Aſtrea naked, is charged on him as an unpardonable Crime. Here are the Words of the Acculation, in which Aſtrea ſpeaks. 'Tis you, ſays ſhe (i), caſting her Eyes upon d'Urfe, 'tis you that are the Author of the Injury I complain of; your raſh Pen has made Blots in my Story, which wound me in the tendereſt part. I don't pretend to be more nice than others, continues ſhe; I excuſe amourous Tranſports, when proceeding from a pure Paſſion; a Kiſs genteely ſnatched, never ſhocked my Modeſty, and I know there are little Privacies, which Love inſpires, and Reaſon does not condemn. But when I conſider, that I am one of the three Shepherdeſſes, which you preſent ſtark-naked before Celadon, with what Face can I behold an Adventure ſo injurious to my Honour? And ought I not to believe, that you have an ill Opinion of my Vertue, or elſe took me for a Slave, which you meant to ſell to this Shepherd? I believe, without Flattery to my Beauty, that my Face alone was ſufficient to make a Conqueſt; there was Fire enough in my Eyes to melt a ſtubborn Heart, and I can without Vanity ſay, that my Nakedneſs was not eſſentially neceſſary to my Victory. This is is too common a Fault in the Greek Romances (k): The Women make the firſt advances, and the Men are too reſerved. Mr. Huet acknowledges, that this Conduct of the Man is commendable, according to the Rules of Morality; but juſtly maintains, that it's abſurd according to Laws of Romance. Prior amat Hyſmina, ſays he (l), ſpeaking of Euſtathius's Book, where the Hero anſwers nothing to a Declaration of Love made by his Heroine: prior amorem & fatetur & offert ſine modeſtiâ, ſine pudore, ſine arte: Atque his blanditiis neque monetur Hyſminias, neque reſpondet. Laudabile id quidem eſt, ſi ad leges Moralis Philoſophiæ; ineptum ſi ad Romanenſia præcepta exigatur. See above (m) Theagines rallied for giving Caricles a Box on the Ear, becauſe ſhe would kiſs him. We may ſay, that Mademoiſelle de Scudery is the firſt who delivered Romance from an Oeconomy injurious to her Sex, and to Decorum in general. She fear'd ſhe might be taxed of innovating, in giving her Heroines a deal of Modeſty, and her Heroes the ſofteſt Paſſions; and therefore thought her ſelf obliged to give the Reaſons of her Conduct, in the Preface to her Ibrahim, which is the firſt of her Romances; theſe are her Words: (n) 'You'll ſee here, Reader, if 'I miſtake not, the Decorum of Things and Conditions exactly enough obſerved; for I have put 'nothing in my Book, but what the Ladies may 'read, without looking down and bluſhing. If 'you don't find my Heroe perſecuted by Women, 'diſtractedly in Love with him, 'tis not that he is 'leſs aimable or unworthy of their Love, but 'tis 'that I might not treſpaſs againſt Decency in the 'Character of the Ladies, and againſt Probability 'in that of the Gentlemen, who rarely act the cruel 'part, and cannot act it with a good Grace. In 'fine, whether things ought to be thus, or whether I have judged of my Heroe, by my own 'Weakneſs; I was not willing to put his Fidelity 'to this dangerous Tryal, and have contented my 'ſelf not to make him an Hylas, without making 'him an Hippolitus.

(a) Petrus Daniel Huetius, de origine fabularum Romanenſium, interprete Gulielmo Pyrrhone, pag. 67.

(b) Petrus Moll, Sueeanus, J. U. D. & Gr. linguæ Profeſſor ordinarius in Acad. Franekerana, Epiſtola dedicator. Longi Paſtoralium.

(c) Huet, ubi ſupra.

(d) Pejus etiam vitium eſt perverſa & præpoſtera operis œconomia. A paſtorum cunabulis ineptè orditur, & vix in eorum nuptiis deſinit: ad eorum uſque liberos, imo & ſenectutem ſua narratione progreditur. Id. ibid.

(e) Longus, lib. 1. pag. 12. Edit. Franeker. in 4.

(f) Κατῆλθεν αὐτῆς εἰς τὰ στέρνα καὶ ἐψηλάφησε τοῦ μαστοῦ. Manu ſua pectori illius admota. Ib. pag. 21.

(g) Ibid. pag. 18.

(h) Ibid. pag. 19.

(i) Parnaſſe reformé, pag. 136. Edit. de Hollande. See the ſame pag. 187. Article 18. of the Edict of Apollo.

(k) Compare what has been ſaid in the Remark C. of the Article Hypſipyle

(l) Huet. ubi ſupra, pag. 62.

(m) In the Article Heliodorus, Remark C.

(n) Preface to Ibrahim Baſſa, fol. iiii. Note, that is not ſo, but Mr. de Scudari her Brother, who ſpeaks.

(D)

Glaſs to the Shepherd, in ſuch a manner, that he muſt apply his Lips (D) preciſely to the Part where ſhe had applied hers. None of the Antients mention Longus, which is the Reaſon why we cannot tell when he lived. We have ſeveral Editions and a great many Tranſlations of his Work.

RME (Philibert de) one of the beſt Architects of France, in the XVIth. Century, was a Native of Lions. He was Almoner in ordinary to Henry II. and to Charles IX. [a], and Abbot of St. Eloi of [b] Noiomne; and of the Saints Sergius and Bacchus [illegible] Angers. Thus his Abbies are intitled [c], by Antony Mizauld, in the Epiſtle [illegible] catory of the Nova & mira artificia comparandorum fructuum, dated at Paris the [illegible] of November 1567. He is called Abbot of Livry in Ronſard's Life, and 'tis added, that he had a Quarrel (A) with this great Poet, in which Catherine de Medicis ſaid he was to blame. He publiſhed ſeveral Books of Architecture, the Titles whereof you may ſee in La Croix du Maine.

LORME (N. de) one of the moſt famous Phyſicians of France, towards the end of the XVIth. Century, and the beginning of the XVIIth. was of Moulins in Bourbonois. He was firſt Phyſician to Queen Mary de Medicis, and after he had long followed the Court, retired to Moulins on Account (A) of his old Age, and there quietly enjoyed the Glory he had acquired. I don't know the Time of his Death, and

[a] Du Verdier Vau-Privas Biblioth. Franc. pag. 949

[b] And not pres de Noion, as is ſaid in Moreri, after la Croix du Maine.

[c] Ornatiſſimo viro ac Domino, D Philiberto ab Ulmo, & Eligii Noviom. & SS Sergii & Bacchi Andegav. Abbati.

(a) Huet ubi ſupra pag. 64.

(b) Vide Longi Paſtoralia, lib. 3. pag. 75. Edit. Franeker.

(c) Lucianus in Dialogo Deorum, p. m. 129. tom. 1.

(d) Fac primus ego illius tacta labellis Pocula, quaque bibit parte puella bibas. Ovid. de arte amat. lib. 1. pag. m. 170.

(e) Hieronym. Epiſt. 2. ad Nepotian. pag. m. 213.

(f) Idem Epiſt. 47.

(†) Et quodcunque cibi digitis [illegible] quinque petes, ſit tibi tacta manus, Ovidius ubi ſupra.

(g) Voſſius de Hiſtor. Gracis, pag. 517.

(h) I ſay this on the Credit of the Oxford Ca[illegible] at the end of the 307th. pag. & Gr. Lat. Heid. 1601. 8.

(i) In the Remark H.

(k) This is writ in 1694.

(l) Thuanus, lib. 84. p. 76.

(m) Obſtat Ingenium tenue, & jam feſſo in corpore vires, Ob longam metuam invalida.

(D) Apply his Lips preciſely to the Place, where the Shepherdeſs.] Mr. Huet's Tranſlator explains it after this manner. (a) Ab hoc (Longo) (b) Euſtathius ſumſiſſe videtur hoc elegans urbanitatis genus, quâ Hyſminam [illegible] miniſtrantem induxit, & qua parte poculi labra delibans labris ſuis ipſa tetigerat, eadem Hyſminia bibituro tangenda leniter offerentem. Euſtathius might have taken this fine Gallantry higher, for we find it in Lucian. This Scoffer introduces Juno, reproaching Jupiter with drinking [illegible]ede's Snuffs, and applying his Mouth preciſely to the part which Ganymede touched with his. (c) [illegible] Interdum autem ubi ſolum deguſtaſti, porrigis ipſi: deinde ipſo bibente calicem arripis, & quantum in ipſo reſtat, ebibis, qua parte ipſe bibit, & ubi labia applicuit, ut & bibas ſimul, & oſculeris. In Ovid's time, the Ladies did not preſent the Glaſs out of which they had drank, but the Gallant endeavoured to take it from 'em, and applied his Lips to the ſame Place, where they had applied theirs. 'Tis a Precept of Ovid (d). I believe this is ſtill the Faſhion in ſome Countries.

St. Hierome deſcribing the Impertinencies of Lovers, ſays nothing of this, but he comes pretty near it, for he ſpeaks of Eatables, which were preſented after they had been taſted (e); Crebra munuſcula & ſudariola, & faſciolas, & veſtes ori applicitas, & oblatos [illegible]DEGUSATOS cibos, blandaſque & de[illegible]ſerulas ſanctus amor non habet. Mel meum, [illegible] meum, meum deſiderium, omnes delicias, & lepores, & riſu dignas urbanitates, & cæteras ineptias amatorum in comœdiis erubeſcimus. He ſays in another Place, (f) ſpectabis aliena oſcula & PRÆGUSTATOS cibos. See the Precept of Ovid †.

(E) Several Editions, and a great many Tranſlations.] This Romance tranſlated into French by Amiot, was printed at Paris in 1559. Laurence Gambara made a Verſion of it, or rather a Paraphraſe in Latin Verſe, which is much blamed (g) by Voſſius. He obſerves, that Gambara not only changes, adds and retrenches ſeveral Things, but alſo frequently miſtakes Longus's meaning. Godfrey Jungerman's Verſion in Proſe, is incomparably better. It was printed at Hanaw with the Greek Text, and Notes, in 1605. There had been before this a Verſion of it (h) at Heidelberg, in 1601. and before that, the Work had been printed only in Greek at Florence, by Philip Juncta, in 1598, by the Manuſcript of [illegible] aldmanni's Library with Raphael Columbi[illegible]ces. There is mentioned an 8vo Edition of it [illegible] Greek and Latin, by Commelin in 1606. I have ſaid ſomething (i) above, of the Franeker Edition. I cannot comprehend, what induced Voſſius to ſay, that Gambara had tranſlated Longus 170 Years ago, for 'twould from thence follow, that 'twas (k) of above Two hundred Years ſtanding now, and yet Thuanus (l) Gambara's Death, in the Year 1586. [illegible]ntius, he makes him Ninety Years of Age, [illegible] ſo much the more impoſſible to adjuſt Voſſius's reckoning by this, as it is certain that Gambara ſet about this Work in his old Age (m), and whilſt Cardinal de Granvel, to whom he had dedicated it, was Viceroy of Naples. Mr. Teiſſier does not mention Longus's Tranſlation in the Catalogue of Gambara's Works.

(A) He had a Quarrel with Ronſard.] This Poet made a Satyr, 'called la Truelle croſſée, in 'which he blamed the King for giving Benefices 'to Maſons, and other vile Perſons, in which he 'particularly taxes one de Lorme, Architect of the 'Tuilleries, who had obtained the Abby of Livry, 'and of whom we have a tolerable Book of Architecture. And it will not be unſeaſonable to obſerve here the Malevolence of this Abbot, who 'to revenge himſelf, one Day cauſed the Gate of 'the Tuilleries to be ſhut againſt Ronſard, who 'followed the Queen-Mother; but Ronſard, who 'was Satyrical and biting when he pleaſed, 'immediately wrote with a Pencil upon the Door, 'which the Sieur de Sarlan cauſed preſently to be 'opened, theſe Words in Capital Letters, FORT. 'REVERENT. HABE. The Queen returning and ſeeing this Writing in the Company 'of learned Men, and of the Abbot de Livri himſelf, would know what was the meaning of 'it. Ronſard, after de Lorme had complained, 'that this Inſcription reflected on him, gave the 'Interpretation; He owned, that by a harmleſs Iro'ny, he had made that Inſcription for him, reading 'it in French, but that it agreed better to him 'reading it in Latin, cautioning him by it (the firſt 'Words cut off from a Latin Epigram of Auſonius,) which begins Fortunam reverenter habe, to 'look back to his firſt and vile Fortune, and not 'ſhut the Door againſt the Muſes. The Queen aſſiſted Ronſard in his Revenge; for ſhe ſharply reprimanded the Abbot de Livri, after ſome Laughter, ſaying aloud, that the Tuilleries were dedica'ted to the Muſes. Du Peyrat relates this Story, and adds a Preamble to it, much to the Prejudice of our de Lorme, and which perhaps is not well-grounded; for the Author of Ronſard's Life has not made the like Reflection, though it might have ſerved as a farther Juſtification to Ronſard. However, theſe are du Peirat's Words: (p) 'As the 'Modeſty of this Chaplain to William the Con'queror, King of England, procured him the Ho'nour of the Biſhoprick of Mans, and the Praiſe 'of every Body; the Inſolence on the contrary, 'and the Pride of an Eccleſiaſtick of the Chappel 'of the Queen-Mother, Catherine de Medicis, ex'poſed him to the Laughter of the Court, and of 'this great Princeſs; he was called Philibert de 'Lorme, who having by his Miſtreſſes Favour ob'tained the Abbey of Livri, utterly forgot his for'mer Condition; and his Arrogance occaſioned the 'great Ronſard, the French Homer, to write a Sa'tyr againſt him, called la Truelle croſſée. He gives the two Verſes of Auſonius, whereof we have only the three firſt Words in Ronſard's Life. See the Margin (q).

(A) Retired to Moulins on Account of his Age.] The Letter which the Sieur Bachot writ to him, and publiſhed before his Book of vulgar Errors, hits this in it. 'If you——like it, thoſe muſt 'be very nice, who will not like it——; ſince 'our Kings, Queens, Princes and Princeſſes of 'France

(n) Eloges tirez de Thuanus. tom. 2. pag. 45.

(o) Binet, Life of Ronſard, pag. m. 144.

(p) Du Peyrat, Antiquitez de la Chapelle du Roi, pag. 204.

(q) Fortunam reverenter habe, quicunque repente Dives, ab exili progrediere loco. Auſon.

and I might have made this Article longer, if Mr. Patin had (B) publiſhed the Book he deſigned to publiſh. Our de Lorme left a Son, whoſe Reputation did not fall ſhort of his Father's, in the Profeſſion of Phyſick. He practiſed (C) in Paris with great Succeſs, and beſides did great Honour to his Art by his own long Life. Being loaden with Years, he ſtill found himſelf vigorous enough to (D) be willing to Marry again: This we find in Guy Patin's Letters. I have heard ſay, that he actually did Marry, and choſe a very young and pretty Woman, and it was thought that this wou'd ſerve to haſten his Death; but on the contrary it only occaſioned the Death of his young Wife. She got a Phthiſick (E) by her good old Man's ſide, and never cou'd be cured of it. This Mr. de Lorme was a Man (F) of admirable Converſation. He had been Phyſician to Gaſton, of France, Duke of Orleans, but did not keep that Imploy long.

[a] Patin lettre 415. pag. 235. du 3. tom.

'France and Lorrain have for ſo long time had, 'and ſtill have ſuch an Eſteem for you and your 'Merit, that nothing had been able to withdraw 'you from their ordinary Service, but an Inability 'to follow the Court, which your great and 'happy old Age, ſtill more loaden with Honours 'than Years, has brought you to. When you re-'tired ſatisfied, and as it were ſatiated with ſo 'many Favours to your own Houſe, and Native 'Country, every one ſaw the Honour which our 'moſt Auguſt King Lewis the Juſt did you, in his 'Victorious return from Languedoc in December '1622. together with the Queen his Mother, 'by taking their Lodgings with you in the begin-'ning of the Year 1623, as a Teſtimony of their 'Benevolence'.

(B) If Mr. Patin had publiſhed the Book he deſigned.] He would have inſerted in it the Elogy of the Phyſician, who is the Subject of this Article. (a) 'I formerly collected ſeveral Memoirs for compo-'ſing the Latin Elogies of the French, who have 'been Famous in the Reſpective Sciences, in Imitati-'on of Mr. Scevola de St. Marthe, upon which I 'deſigned to work next Winter Evenings; 'but my numerous Diſtempers make me apprehen-'ſive, for which reaſon I dare not give an abſo-'lute Promiſe. You'd oblige me if you wou'd de-'ſire Mr. de Lorme, that he would pleaſe to ſend 'me ſome Memoirs concerning his Father, 'whom I know to have been a great Man, and of 'whom I have ſomething Material, which I will 'boldly inſert, concerning the Diſtemper of Mary 'de Medicis, in which Mr. du Laurence diſappro-'ved Bleeding, being deceived by a Paſſage of Hip-'pocrates, who ſays, that we are not to Bleed in a 'Flux, fluente alvo venam non ſecabis, and on the 'contrary, Mr. de Lorme maintined, and preſſed 'Phlebotomy. Patin adds, that three Phyſicians of Paris were conſulted, and confirmed M. de Lorme's Advice (b). 'The Queen Mother was 'let blood and recovered——I deſign, ſays he, to 'make my Characters finer, and more Curious and 'Hiſtorical, than thoſe of Mr. de St. Marthe, nor 'ſhall they be Inferiour to his, except in Expreſ-'ſion'. 'Tis a Misfortune that he did not execute 'this good Deſign.

[b] Id. ib. pag. 87.

(C) He practiſed in Paris with great Succeſs.] Bachot in the Letter above cited, expreſſes himſelf thus, ſpeaking to M. de Lorme, the Father. 'I 'give you an Account of the Subject of this Work, 'which you have encouraged by your Advice, if 'you pleaſe to look favourably on it; as alſo to 'your Son, one of the ſoundeſt and fineſt Wits of 'his Age, and of this Century, in our Profeſſion, 'as he is acknowledged by all the Court, and by 'this Populous City of Paris'. Bachot writ this in 1626. He prefixed to his Work a Letter, which de Lorme, the Son, his Relation, Counſellor to the King, and his Phyſician in Ordinary, had written to him, ſending him a ſhort Poem (c) of his mak-ing. Note, that he ingaged Mr. Gaulmyn, his Couſin, to write Latin Verſes in the Praiſe of this Tract of Bachot. They are printed before the Book.

[c] This is an Acroſtick: It's to be ſeen before the Sieur Bachot's Book, with another Song of Mr. de Lorme the Father.

(D) To be willing to Marry again.] We ſhall cite a Paſſage upon this, with all its Circumſtan-ces. I take it from a Letter of Guy Patin dated the 18th of June 1666. '(d) When you told 'M. de Lorme, That M. Blondel would prove that 'Antimony was Poyſon, you ſay he made a great 'Leap. 'Tis very well, if at his Age he can 'Leap ſo, and God be praiſed, that he ſtill is able 'to Leap, but Antimony has made thoſe ſtill, who 'will never get up again nor Leap more. God 'preſerve him, and bring him from Bourbon in 'good Health; and ſince he has a mind to Marry 'again, I wiſh him ſuch a Wife, as he would 'chuſe. There's nothing like dying of a fine 'Sword. He muſt enter with Honour into the Ho-'ly Synagogue'. In a Letter of the 20th of Octo-ber, the ſame Year he ſpeaks thus: (e) I hear that Mr. de Lorme is gone from Lyons, and is returning to Bourbon or Moulins, where he has a deſign to Marry again. He does well, if it be for the Health of his Soul, for as for his Body, I believe he has hardly any need of this piece of Furniture. This Deſign was neither executed nor quitted, when the ſame Patin writ the Letter, in which are theſe words. '(f) I ſaw very lately Mr. de Lorme, 'who was a little indiſpoſed but with the ſame 'vigour of Mind, as when in perfect Health. So 'very old as he is, 'tis ſaid, he has a mind to 'Marry again, and that ſome body Incourages 'him in this Folly, to bring him to the Trium-'virate, which will be a dangerous Yoke to him, 'and perhaps fatal; I wiſh it may be for the 'good of his Soul, and for the warmth of his Feet'. He afterwards mentions the Epigram of Stephen Paſquier, which we have ſeen above. This Letter is dated from Paris the 14th of January 1670. It proves that Mr. de Lorme lived then in that City, and that he had been twice Married.

[d] Patin lettre 407. pag. 207. du 3. tome.

[e] Idem lettre 422. pag. 251.

[f] Idem lettre 506. pag. 490.

(E) She got a Phthiſick by her good old Man.] Tho' upon the hopes of a large Jointure ſhe reſol-ved upon the Condition of the Shunamite, yet ſhe had Reaſon enough to afflict her ſelf upon ſee-ing the ill Effects of this Application, and how contagious an old Man's Bed is to a young Wo-man; ſeveral Phyſicians maintain, that 'tis good for a decrepit Man to lie with a fat and plump Child, but that 'tis dangerous to the Child to have ſuch a Bed-fellow. Nevertheleſs, the Fate of our de Lorme's Wife, is what very ſeldom happens, ſo true it is, that old (g) Age is a Cuſtom-Houſe, which admits no Abſolute Exemption! There are many Reaſons to be urged Pro and Con upon the Queſtion, whether ſuch Marriages, as Mr. de Lor-me's, are worſe than thoſe of a Publicius and a Septicia, two very old Perſons. Valerius Maximus tells us, that Auguſtus annulled Septicia's Will, by which ſhe left all her Goods to Publicius in Pre-judice of her Children by a former Husband. And the ſame Author extolls the Juſtice of this De-cree to the Skies. (h) Si ipſa æquitas hæc de re co-gnoſceret, poſſetne juſtius aut gravius pronuntiare? Spernis quos genuiſti: nubis effœta, teſtamenti ordi-nem violento animo confundis: neque erubeſcis ei totum patrimonium addicere, cujus pollincto jam corpori marcidam ſenectutem tuam ſubjeciſti. We ought perhaps amongſt Chriſtians to break off more commonly than we do thoſe Matches, which join together either two extreams of the ſame Cha-racter, or two oppoſite ones, two Autumns of Age, or the naked Stalk and Flower of Age.

[g] See the following Remark.

[h] Valer. Maximus lib. 7. cap. 7. n. 4. p. m. 645.

(F) Mr. de Lorme was a Man of admirable Converſation.] Two Paſſages of Guy Patin ſhall ſerve for the preſent Comment. '(i) Yeſterday 'viſited (k) Mr. de Lorme at his Houſe, he recei-'ved me very kindly, and we diſcourſed together 'a good Hour, we were neither of us Mute, he is 'admirable in his Converſation, as well as in 'every thing elſe, he has a wonderful Memory for 'his Age of 85, I think he will die as he lived, 'with his Antimony in his Heart and Head, and 'yet what Comforts me, is, that I hope he will never take any, having ſo little need of it.' Some Weeks after, he paid him another Viſit (l) I yeſterday ſaw Mr. de Lorme, whoſe Underſtanding is ſtill clear, and Memory prodigious; theſe two Fa-culties he poſſeſſes in great Perfection, they Savour

[i] Patin lettre 501. pag. 459.

[k] That's to ſay, the 6th of November 1669.

[l] Idem. lettre 503. pag. 476. it's dated it be 13th of December 1669.

but a little while. He was much longer Physician at the Waters of Bourbon. We shall see in the Remark (G) that he died in 1678.

LORRAIN (Charles de) Cardinal and Archbishop of Rheims, Son to Claudius, first Duke of Guise, was born in February [a] 1525. He was a Person (A) of very great Abilities; but abused 'em to the great Prejudice of France, and to the gratifying an Insatiate Thirst of Riches and Preferments. He stept into a very ample Succession (B) of Beneficies in 1550. by the Death of Cardinal John de Lorrain, his Uncle, whose Debts he never (C) paid, tho' he had promised the Creditors he wou'd. At the same time he insinuated himself by sordid Condescensions into the Favour [b] of the Dutchess of Valentinois, and obtained so Exorbitant an Authority, as to raise to the noblest Offices of the Kingdom, Persons who were at his Devotion. He did not always stay, till Places were vacant, knowing very well how to dispossess the Owners. The first President of the Parliament of Paris [c] sadly experienced it. This Cardinal, who in Henry II's Reign had an almost boundless Power, found himself still greater under Francis II. when he and the Duke of Guise, his Brother, governed the whole Kingdom at their Pleasure, under Pretence that they were Uncles to the young Queen Mary Stuart. He made a great Figure at the Conference of Poissi, by his Eloquence and Learning, and 'tis very probable that he (D) consented to the holding that Assembly, only to have an Opportunity of shewing his Eloquence and Wit. He made a great shew likewise in the Council of Trent; but did not maintain the Liberties of the Gallican Church, with so [a] Counting the Year from January. Moreri who makes him be born 1519 is mistaken in his Epitaph, shews that he died vii Kal. Jan. 1574. and that he liv'd annos 49. menses 10. dies 8. horas quatuor. See the Nomenclator Cardinalium pag. 141.

[b] See the Remark C.

[c] See the Article Lizet, Remark A.

nothing of Age, but I won't Answer for the rest. Maximus est aretalogus. I'm told he has no good Hand at Practice, notwithstanding his pretended and Mystical Polypharmacy; he is of a powerful Conversation, he knows a great many things, and expresses them wonderfully well; and which is more, he is very reserved, when the Question is about the Merits of some learned Men, that have lived in France for this hundred Years past; he happily mixes his Judgment with his Charity, nemini facit injuriam, nulli quidquam detrahit debitæ laudis: Take him altogether, he is a great Man, who for his Perfections is greatly indebted to God and Nature: I only wish he were not so great a Romancer, when the Point is to praise some, who don't altogether so well deserve it; but I believe he does this on purpose that he may not be thought vain-glorious or slighting, and this in some Respects is commendable. From the first of these Passages we may infer, that he was born in 1584.

(G) That he died in the Year 1678.] My Proof shall be taken from a Passage of the Mercure Galant. 'We have lost a Physician, as old as he 'was famous; it's Mr. de Lorme, who always did 'that which is passed into a Proverb against the 'Physicians, and which never fails of being ob-'jected to 'em, Physician Cure thy self. He brought 'into Fashion a Tisan, which was called the Bou-'illon-rouge, by which thousands have found Be-'nefit. The great Summs he spent in Experiments 'are Tokens of the Care he took not to be Igno-'rant in any part of his Profession; he died at the 'House of the Marshal Crequy, where he lived, 'and was above an Hundred Years old; he was very 'lively, and I have seen some very handsome 'Verses of his, which I am assured he made with-'in these Fifteen Days'. I Don't think he was above an Hundred, and I rather adhere to Mr. Patin's Calculation, according to which he died in the 94th Year of his Age.

[a] Mercure Galant for July, 1678 pag. 142, 143. Dutch Edition.

(A) A Person of very great Abilities, but abused 'em.] Here's the Character M. de Mezerai gives of him (b): 'The Cardinal was a Man made all of 'Fire, always in Action, and continually form-'ing Intrigues and Factions for the raising his Fa-'mily; as capable of a quick Invention of 'em, 'as his elder Brother was of a prudent Execution. 'extreamly bent upon heaping up Wealth, lofty in 'Words, and Vindictive; nevertheless Covert, 'Timorous, and Dissembling, except in the Re-'sentment of Injuries: as for the rest, a Man 'who by the help of the Learning he had acqui-'red, and by the Charms of Eloquence, which were 'natural to him, had that Advantage of making 'himself heard'. If you would have a Copy of this Picture, read only what follows. This (c) Prince, whose Name is so famous in History, and who had a mind extreamly lively and penetrating, a Temper Ardent, Impetuous, Violent, a rare natural Eloquence, much more Learning than could be expected in a Person of his Quality, and whom his Eloquence made appear much greater still than he really was, the boldest Man of the Cabinet, in Imagining and Enterprizing great things and vast Designs; but the most timorous and dispirited, when he came to the Execution, which he saw to be full of Danger; he had all his Life an unbounded Passion for the Greatness of his Family. These Words of Mr. Maimbourg precede the Passage in which he relates, how this Cardinal formed in the Council of Trent the first Plan of the League.

[b] Mezerai, Hist. de France, tome 3. pag. 2.

[c] Maimbourg, Hist. de la Ligue liv. 1. pag. 12. Edit. de Holland.

(B) A very ample Succession of Beneficies.] Cardinal John de Lorrain (d) had sought his Establishment in France, and had made it in contempt of the sacred Canons, and the most Ancient Laws of the Church. He was at the same time Archbishop of Lions, Reims and Narbonne, Bishop of Mets, Toul, Verdun, Terou, Lucon-Abby, and Valence, and Abbot of Gorze, Fecamp, Cluny, and Marmouter. His Nephew did not succeed him in all these Preferments, but he did in the greatest part (e). The Bishoprick of Mets was given to Robert de Lenoncourt, who not long after contributed mainly to the Reducing this City under the Power of France (f).

[d] Varillas, Hist. de François I. li. 7. p. 264. ad ann. 1536

[e] See the following Remark, the Words of Thuanus.

[f] Thuanus, lib. 6. pag. 122. ad ann. 1550.

Cardinal John de Lorrain, experienced, that his Successor would not wait till his Death, to enjoy his Spoils Read what follows. (g) 'Oh base and 'detestable Ingratitude, having not patience, till 'the deceased Cardinal de Lorrain, his Uncle, by 'whose Favour he came from the College of Na-'varre, to Court; a Man, as to Ambition, of a 'quite different Temper from his Nephews, should 'enrich him with his Spoils by his Decease; he '(b) ceased not to draw every thing that was pos-'sible for him under his Wing, by an Importuni-'ty next a-kin to Violence, and found a way of 'making him desire to remove from Court, fur-'nished him with such Servants as he thought 'fit, and deprived him of others that were most 'faithful to him, under any pretence he pleased, 'and so managed matters, that it was not his 'Fault that he was not stripped to his Shirt, when 'at last a sudden Death carried him off in his re-'turn from the Election of Pope Julius III'. This is taken from a Remonstrance addressed to the Princes of the Blood, and inserted by Lewis de Reiner, Sieur de la Planche in his History of Francis II.

[g] La Planche Hist. de Francois II. pag. 433, 434.

[b] That's to say, Cardinal Charles of Lorrain.

(C) Whose Debts he never paid.] We must hear Thuanus. (i) At Carolus Guisianus, qui demum Lotaringus dici cepit, cum patruo mortuo opulentissimorum sacerdotiorum possessionem adeptus esset, nequaquam grande as alienum exsolvit sicuti receperat, quo ille mersus plerosque creditores secum una mersit. Is in arctiorem Pictaviensis familiaritatem, qua totum regii animum occupaverat, turpibus obsequiis cum se insinuavisset, auctor illi fuit quo regni negotiorum administrationem penes se haberet, ut, &c.

[i] Thuan. ubi supra.

(D) He consented to the holding that Assembly, only that he might have an Opportunity of shewing his Eloquence. Davila confesses, that this Cardinal desired it, (k) out of the too

[k] Varillas, Hist. of Charles IX tom. I. pag. 212.

so much vigour (E) as the Court of Rome apprehended. He found it more [redacted] to the Intereſt of his Family to deal civilly with the Pope. His Credit, [redacted] ſuffered a ſhort Eclipſe by the Death of the Duke of Guiſe his Brother, [redacted] again (F) ſome time after. He was looked on as the Author of the War [redacted] which the Duke of Guiſe had ruined his whole Reputation. I ſhall cite upon this Occaſion a Paſſage (G) of Brantome, that deſerves to be conſidered. I ſhall cite another

(a) Maimbourg hiſt. du Calvin. pag. 212.
(b) Varillas ibid. pag. 52.
(c) This Edict of the 28. of Jan. 1561. muſt not be confounded with that which was iſſued in Jan. 1562. revoking the Edict of July.
(d) See Fra-Paolo tranſlated by Amelot. li. 8. pag. 789. See alſo Mezerai. Abregé Chronolog. tom. 3. p. 83.
(e) In the ſame Hiſtory of Fra-Paolo pag. 794. among the things that this Cardinal was blamed, for in France you'll find this, That he might very well have diſpenſed with compoſing the Acclamations, and much more with thundering 'em out. And thus it often falls out, ſays the ſame Hiſtorian, that the vain-glorious, inſtead of the little Honour which they hope to gain, loſe all at once that which they had acquired. The 16. of the 1ſt. Book.

good Opinion he had of his own Eloquence, and a deſire of diſputing with thoſe who had employ'd all their time in the ſtudy of Controverſy. Mr. Maimbourg maintains, that (a) this is one of thoſe malignant Conjectures, which have been ſo commonly made to the Diſadvantage of this great Prelate, whom they would on this occaſion tax with Vanity. If he had had as much power, adds he, as he had in the preceding Reign, he would doubtleſs have hinder'd the holding this Colloquy. I believe ſo too, for in the preceding Reign, he would never have ſuffer'd, that the Calviniſts ſhould have liberty to complain; but whatever change there was in his Intereſt, he had ſtill Credit enough to have broken off the Conference, if it had diſpleaſed him. Had not he been the cauſe (b) by the Remonſtances he made to their Majeſties at the Head of the Clergy; why they durſt not maintain the firſt (c) Edict of January, that was favourable to the Huguenots, and why they went in Perſon, and ſat in the Parliament of Paris to find out new Expedients? Had not he been the cauſe, that the Reſolutions which were taken in this Aſſembly produced the Edict of July, ſo terrible and ruinous to the P[redacted] teſtants? Had he not thereby triumphed ov[redacted] Queen Regent, ſupported by the Prince of [redacted] the Admiral de Coligni, and Chancellor de [redacted] ſpital? When a Man could do all this, it could not be very difficult methinks, to hinder the Conference of Poiſſi. 'Tis therefore probable, that the Cardinal de Lorrain, proud of ſo fine an occaſion of ſetting forth his Learning and Eloquence, contributed much to the holding this Conference. Beſides his being aſſured, that the Doctrine of the Calviniſts would be there condemn'd by the Biſhops, which would adminiſter new Arms to the zealous and perſecuting Catholicks.

They who know this Cardinal's Vanity by the Symptoms he diſcover'd of it in the Council of Trent, will doubtleſs blame Mr. Maimbourg. At the concluding of the Council, they were willing to imitate the cuſtom practiced in the Eaſtern Church of Acclamation and Prayer, and the Cardinal (d) of Lorrain not only took the pains of compoſing theſe Acclamations, but alſo of pronouncing them, which made him univerſally cenſured (e) of Vanity, that Function which had been fit for a Deacon (and which heretofore had been always perform'd by Deacons) ſeeming but little becoming a Cardinal Prince. A Man that was capable of falling into ſo childiſh an Oſtentation, in all probability deſired to enter the Liſts with the Miniſters in preſence of all the Court, in order to ſhew his Wit and Eloquence. He was ſo addicted to the Government of the State, and Intrigues of Policy, that he had reaſon to apprehend, he was thought a bad Divine. Indeed he might believe, that the World would excuſe him for having forgot the Notions he had learn'd at the Schools; but the more probable it was, that his profound skill in Politicks made the World believe, that he was not well vers'd in controverſial Matters, the more he was perſwaded that it would be to his Glory, to ſhew he underſtood 'em thoroughly, and that he could diſcourſe eloquently and learnedly upon 'em. Here then is the Rock that his Vanity ſplit upon, and we may ſay that one Vanity cured another; for if he had not had the Ambition to have it ſaid, that he excell'd even in things the moſt remote from his continual Occupations, he would but too much have deſpiſed the Rank and Birth of the Miniſters to have vouchſafed to enter into a regular Diſpute with 'em. I wiſh Montagne had ſpoken of him in that Chapter of his (f) Eſſays, in which he obſerves, that it is moſt frequently happens, that every one chuſes rather to diſcourſe on Another's Profeſſion than his own, looking upon that as ſo much new acquired Reputation, ——— I obſerve how Cæſar expatiates, in deſcribing to us his Inventions of building Bridges an[redacted]nes, and how reſerved he is in compariſon, [redacted] he ſpeaks of the Offices of his own Profeſſion, [redacted] his Valour and Conduct as a General. His Exploits prove him to be a very [redacted]nt General, and he would make himſelf ap[redacted] excellent Engineer, an Accompliſhment ſo [redacted]ut foreign. Divinity, you'll tell me, is a Cardinal's Profeſſion: I anſwer, this admits too many Exceptions, and if he be a Cardinal Prince, or a firſt Miniſter of State. Divinity is no more his Profeſſion than that of the General of an Army.

(E) With ſo much vigour as the Court of Rome apprehended.] ' (g) The Cardinal of Lorrain arrived at Trent, attended by a great Number of ' Biſhops, and took upon [redacted]him ſuch Authority ' that the Pope grow[redacted]ous of him, called ' him amongſt his Fri[redacted] little Pope beyond ' the Mountains. He [redacted]w that he came with ' an Intention to act in concert with the Impe-' rialiſts, to procure ſome ſatisfaction to the Lu-' theranz, (whom he deſired to draw off from the ' Huguenots, he and his Brother having to that ' purpoſe diſcourſed with the Duke [redacted]irtemberg, ' and other Princes of this Faith [redacted]verne) for ' which reaſon he had taken care [redacted]ortify him-' ſelf againſt him, by a great Nu[redacted] of Italian ' Biſhops, whom from all Parts he ſent to Trent, ' before this Cardinal arrived there. Some ' Months after his arrival, Two great pieces of ' News came to the Council; one concerning the ' Death of the King of Navarre, the other, at ' ſome Months diſtance, of the winning the Bat-' tel of Dreux; both which made the Cardinal ' believe, that his Brother would become Maſter ' of France; and this Conſideration much ' heightned his Power in the Council, and by ' conſequence that of the Embaſſadors, with ' whom he had been well united from the Begin-' ning. They propoſed therefore, according to ' the Commiſſion they had recieved, Thirty-four ' Articles of Reformation. ——— The Cardinal ' of Lorrain had doubtleſs ſtrongly ſupported ' 'em, if the Death of the Duke of Guiſe had ' not happen'd; but as [redacted] good fortune of this ' Brother had elevated [redacted]ourage, the loſs of ' him infinitely caſt [redacted]own; he thought of ' nothing now but of [redacted]compromizing things with ' the Pope, and abating of his great Deſigns; he ' obliged all the Biſhops of his Faction to abate ' too. Thus the Legates, and other Creatures of ' the Court of Rome, remained Maſters of the ' Council, and got a great many things to paſs ' according to their Intentions.

(g) Mezerai, Abregé Chronologique, to 6. p. 420. This is the Diſcourſe of the Church of the XVI. Century, ad ann. 1562, 1563. See alſo page 67. of the 5. tome.

(F) His credit——ſoon out again ſometime after.] Here is one Sign of it. (b) The Guards deſign'd for the Security of the Cardinal of Lorrain, had Orders not only to attend him into the Louvre; but alſo not to leave him at the Altar. Thus to mingle the ſmell of Gun-powder and Match with the Odours and Incenſe, and other ſacred Perfumes. It was Charles IX. who granted him this Favour, as Mr. Auberi (i) obſerves, ſpeaking of a Privilege much like that granted to Cardinal de Richelieu.

[redacted] hiſtoire du Cardinal de Richelieu, liv. 2. pag. 87. du 1. tome. édit. de Hollande 1666.
(i) Ibid.

(G) I ſhall cite a Paſſage of Brant[redacted]on the War of Italy.] ' (k) Theſe Two [redacted] hap-' pen'd by the means of People, wh[redacted] handle ' Arms whilſt they knew nothing [redacted]e Pro-' feſſion. And for this reaſon this great Duke of ' Guiſe, after he had been wretchedly baulk'd in ' his Italian Expedition, frequently ſaid, I love ' indeed the Church of God; but I'll never un-[redacted]make any Conqueſts upon the Word and Faith ' [redacted] Prieſt. Deſigning hereby to reproach Pope ' [redacted], called Paul IV. who had not made good ' [redacted] he had promiſed, by great and ſolemn ' Aſſeverations; or elſe the Cardinal his Brother, ' who was gone to get Reconciliation, and to found ' Matters, as far as Rome, and afterwards had (k) Brantôme, Dames galantes, to. 2. pag. 68.

very another Paſſage from him, which ſhows the Vanity of this Cardinal, that is to ſay, the Haughtineſs with which he ſpoke to the Dutcheſs (H) of Savoy, kiſſing her by main force. Note, that the Kiſs he ſtrugled for, was a Kiſs of Ceremony; he loved [illegible] (I) other Kiſſes, as Brantome informs us. I have elſewhere ſpoken * of the Regard to the Proteſtant Religion, and the Satyrical Writings he was expoſed to on this account. I might alſo have obſerved, that he was compared to Seneca (K) in one of theſe Satyrs. He was turn'd into ridicule for ſome time, on his having a cutting

* In the Remarks of the Article Guiſe (Francis).

'very raſhly puniſh'd his Brother upon it. It may 'be ſuppoſed that my Lord of Guiſe meant it of 'both, for as I have heard ſay, the Duke fre-'quently repeated ſuch Sayings before the Car-'dinal, who thinking it was a Stone taken out of 'his Garden, was enraged at it, and could hardly 'curb his Paſſion. The Two Faults Brantome 'ſpeaks of, are thoſe of Lewis King of Hungary, 'and Don Sebaſtian King of Portugal. Lewis

(a) Id. ib. pag. 87. '(a) died in a Battle which he fought againſt the 'Turks, not ſo much out of any reaſon, as through the Perſwaſion and Opinionativeneſs of the Cardinal, who ſtrangely governed him, alledging, that he ought not to diſtruſt the power of God and his juſt Cauſe; that tho' he ſhould have, as we may ſay, but Ten Thouſand Hungarians, being ſo good Chriſtians, and fighting in God's Cauſe, he might expect to defeat a Hundred Thouſand Turks, and he ſo drove and hurried him to this Engagement, that he loſt the Battle; and being willing to retire, he fell into a Bog and was ſmother'd. The ſame happened to the laſt King of Portugal, Sebaſtian, who miſerably loſt his Life, when being too weak in Force, he hazarded a Battle with the Mores, who were three times ſtronger than he, and this upon the perſwaſion, the Preachments, and Opinionativeneſs of the Jeſuits, who laid before him the Power of God, who by his look alone was able confound all the World, tho' they ſhould be armed againſt him, as doubtleſs it is a moſt true Maxim; however we ought not to tempt nor abuſe his Goodneſs; for he has Secrets that we are ignorant of. Some have ſaid that theſe Jeſuits did this, and ſaid it with a good Intention, as it may be believed; others, that they had been ſuborned and bribed by the King of Spain, thus to deſtroy this young and courageous King, all full of fire, that he might the more eaſily ſeize his Dominions, as he afterwards did. For One Reader who will blame me for having drawn out this Remark to ſuch a length, more than a Hundred will thank me heartily: 'Tis to oblige ſuch, that I ſometimes give a greater Extent to my Remarks than the Text requires; they experience with pleaſure, that they light upon more things by the way, than ever they expected to find. ●

(H) The Dutcheſs of Savoy kiſſing her.] He had naturally a great reſpect for (b) the Ladies. (b) Brantome ibid. pag. 364. 'But he forgot this reſpect, and not without rea-'ſon, towards Madam the Dutcheſs of Savoy, 'Donna Beatrix of Portugal. Paſſing once 'through Piedmont, in his Journey to Rome, for 'the Service of the King his Maſter, he viſited 'the Duke and Dutcheſs; after having diſ-'courſed ſome time with Monſieur the Duke, he 'waited on Madam the Dutcheſs in her Chamber, 'intending to ſalute her, and as he approached, 'ſhe, who was Arrogance it ſelf, offered him her 'Hand to kiſs. Monſieur the Cardinal reſenting 'this Affront, advanced to kiſs her Lips, and ſhe 'continued to run back, when looſing all Pa-'tience, and coming up cloſer to her he took her 'by the Head, and in ſpight of her, kiſſed her 'Two or Three times, and tho' ſhe ſcream'd and 'cry'd out in Spaniſh and Portugueſe, ſhe was 'forced to ſubmit. How comes it, ſays he, 'Madam, that you uſe this Behaviour to me? 'Shan't I, who kiſs the Queen my Miſtreſs, the 'greateſt Queen in the World, kiſs you, who 'are but a little dirty Dutcheſs? And I would 'have you know, that I have lain with as fine 'Ladies, and of as good Families as your ſelf. 'Poſſibly he might ſay true. This Princeſs was 'to blame in carrying it ſo high towards a Prince 'of ſo great a Houſe, or even to a Cardinal, con-'ſidering the high Rank they bear in the Church, 'which is eſteem'd on a level with the greateſt 'Princes in Chriſtendom. The Cardinal was to blame, in taking ſo harſh a Revenge; but 'tis grievous to a noble and generous Heart, of what-ever Profeſſion, to receive an Affront.

(I) He loved alſo other Kiſſes.] The following Paſſage is a piece of a Comedy, which the People of the World play: By the People of the World, I mean ſome Princes of the Church, as well as the moſt worldly Laymen. Let's hear Brantome ſpeak, he will tell us that the Cardinal de Lorrain was no leſs liberal in point of Charity than Gallantry: 'Moſt liberal, ſays he, (c) I may (c) Ibid. pag. 361. & ſuiv. 'call him, ſince he had not his Equal in his time; 'his Expences, his Gifts, and Bounties, have 'teſtify'd it, eſpecially his Charity towards the 'Poor; he generally carried a great Purſe, which 'his Valet de Chamber, who kept his Money 'for his little Pleaſures, failed not to fill every 'Morning with Three or Four Hundred Crowns; 'and as often as he met with any Poor body, he 'put his Hand in the Purſe, and what he took 'out at adventure he gave, without putting a 'Farthing back again. It was of him, that a 'poor blind Man ſaid, (when paſſing through 'Rome, and being asked an Alms, he, according 'to his cuſtom, threw the Beggar a Handful of 'Gold,) crying out aloud, O tu ſei Chriſto, O veramente el Cardinal di Lorrenna: That is, 'Either thou are Chriſt, or undoubtedly the Car-'de Lorrain. If he was an Alms-giver, and 'charitable that way, he was alſo very liberal to 'other Perſons, and eſpecially towards the Ladies, 'whom he eaſily caught with his Bait; for Money 'was not ſo plenty in thoſe times, as it is at pre-'ſent; and for their part, they were more fond 'of Junketing and fine Cloaths. I have heard 'ſay, that when any new Maid came to Court, 'or Lady that was Handſome, he preſently came 'and accoſted her, telling her he would have the 'managing of her with his own Hand; What 'managing did he mean? I believe the Trouble 'was not near ſo great, as managing a wild 'Filly; for at that time it was ſaid, there was 'hardly a Lady or Maid of any ſtanding at Court, 'or newly arrived, that was not kiſſed and caught 'by the Magnificence of the Cardinal; and few 'or none left this Court, either Women or Maids 'of unſpotted Honour. Their Coffers and large 'Wardrobes, were then to be ſeen ſtuff't with more 'Gowns, Petticoats, Gold and Silver, and Silk, 'than thoſe of the Queens and Princeſſes of this 'time. I ſpeak from my own knowledge, of 'Two or Three who had gained all this by their 'Bodies, their Fathers, Mothers and Husbands 'having never bin able to furniſh 'em with ſuch 'Store. The ſame Brantome affirms (d) that the (d) In his Diſcourſe on Admiral Coligni, page 174. of the 3. tome of his Memoires. Baſtard Daughter of this Cardinal, called Arne, follow'd the Princeſs Elizabeth, Daughter to Henry II. and Wife to Philip II. and was Married to Beſme, he who aſſaſſinated the Admiral.

(K) He was compared to Seneca.] We need not wonder at it, when we know that the Author of the Parallel took this Philoſopher for a wicked Man. Let's cite Montagn's Words, they are worthy of his good taſte: Amongſt thoſe Thouſands of little Books, ſays he, (e) diſperſed by thoſe of the pretended Reformed Religion, in defence of their Cauſe, which now and then came from a good Hand, and which 'tis great Pity were not employ'd on a better Subject, I have formerly ſeen one, which to lengthen and fill up the Similitude, he pretends to find betwixt the Government of our poor deceaſed King Charles IX. and that of Nero, he makes a Parallel between the deceaſed Cardinal of Lorrain and Seneca, compares their Fortunes of having been both the firſt in the Government of their Prince, their Morals, Conditions and Deportments. In my Opinion he does great Honour to the Cardinal; for tho' I am one of thoſe who greatly eſteem'd his Wit, his Eloquence, his Zeal (e) Montagne Eſſays, liv. 2 ch. 32. pag. m. 702. 703.

ting Affront also put upon him in Paris, by the Mareschal (L) de Montmorenci [illegible] He died the 26th. of December 1574. You'll find very curious Things concerning his Death, in the Journal of Henry III. The Queen of Scotland his Niece was [illegible] lucky enough to elude the Design he had (M) of keeping her Jewels for her. [illegible] got to observe, that he was the principal Promoter of an Edict, which [illegible] Parliament of Paris of half a Year's (N) Continuance. This lasted [illegible] ng. We are told, that the Prediction of an Astrologer gave him frequent Fears, and contributed much to the Pains he took to get the wearing of Arms prohibited, in the Reign of Francis II. The Passage I shall alledge on this Occasion, [illegible] inform us

(O) for Religion, and the Service of his King, and his good Fortune of having been born in an Age, in which it was so new a thing, so rare, and withal so necessary to the publick Good, to have an Ecclesiastical Person of such Extraction and Dignity capable of, and sufficient for his Post; yet to confess the Truth, I reckon his Capacity nothing near so great, nor his Virtue so clean and entire, nor so unshaken, as that of Seneca. Now this Book I speak of to obtain its end, gives a very injurious Description of Seneca, borrowing these Reproaches from Dion the Historian, on whose Testimony I in no wise depend.

(L) On his having a cutting Affront put upon him by the Mareschal de Montmorenci.] Though Charles IX. had forbid the wearing of Arms; yet the Cardinal de Lorrain came to Paris with a great Retinue of armed Men, and pretended to enter the City with this Guard.' (a) 'He had a Permission 'sealed with the great Seal, for riding with a 'Guard. The Mareschal de Montmorenci knew it 'very well; but expected, that the Cardinal should 'have made him a Compliment; and he sent to 'him an Order, by the Provost of the Mareschals, 'to command his People to lay down their Ar[illegible] 'The Cardinal neglecting it, still rode on. [illegible] 'Mareschal, well attended, gave him the mee[illegible] 'and charged him in St. Denis's-Street——— 'The Cardinal's Attendants straggled here and 'there, and he himself escaped into a Shop with 'his (b) Nephew. In the Evening, they all came 'together to Clugny-House, which was the Cardi'nal's Lodging. The next Day the Mareschal passed 'backwards and forwards in a kind of Bravado before 'his Gates——The Provost of the Merchants, in 'behalf of the Parliament, accommodated this Af'fair: He obtained of the Cardinal, that he wou'd 'quit the Town, and of the Mareschal, that he 'wou'd suffer this Prince to have armed Guards, 'according to the Permission of the King, of 'which he shewed him the Copy (c). The Reader will be better pleased with Mr. le Laboureur's Account of it. (d) 'He ordered him to be civilly 'told, that he would not recieve him in that war'like Equipage, and the Contempt shewn to the 'Message, obliged him the more to come to Ex'treams, which was to repel Force by Force, and 'do his Duty in putting his Guard to the Sword, un'less they disarmed; and consequently this was done 'without any other Loss, than that of one of the 'Cardinal's Retinue, who not being so valiant, tho' 'more violent than his Brothers, was so frighted at it 'that he ran and hid himself in a Shop in Iron-Street, 'near which the Skirmish happened. He was af'terwards conducted to his House, which was Chu'ny-Castle, where he remained some Days, with'out shewing himself, and at last retired by Night 'into his Archbishoprick of Rheims, to meditate 'more securely his Designs of Revenge, not pub'lick, as his Friends hoped, but secret, and closet'ed, such as are the Resentments of those of his 'Condition, when they can make their particular 'Quarrel an Affair of State. This Adventure was 'published throughout Europe, and the Huguenots 'forgot it not in their Libels and particularly in a 'Complaint they put in the Cardinal's Mouth, of 'the little Assistance that was lent him for the Exe'cution of his Designs, wherein he speaks thus:

'Mesmes Paris entier, duquel le Conperage
'Estoyt mon frere & moy obligeoit le courage,
'Me delaisse du tout. Je le puis voir ainsi
'Quand gros St. Innocent me fit Montmorency
'Destendre de visage, & gagner un porche,
'Magarde desarme, & met à pied; de force
'Qu'elle ainsi mise en blanc grand deshonneur en a
'Et

'Ah! que j'ay depit qu'en abaissant ma corne
'Il me fit en public recevoir tel escorne,
'Sans que de soi mouvoir nul homme fit semblant
'En toute la Cité, & que d'un cœur tremblant
'A luy le lendemain j'envoyay me soumettre,
'Le requerant vouloir octroyer & permettre,
'Me retirer armé, de crainte des Mutins.
'Ce que de luy encor tant brave je n'obtins;
'Ains m'en allay de nuit, emmenant un bon nombre
'Des miens; si qu'en fuyant avois peur de mon ombre.
'Oh! quel estois-je lors, ô combien different (bre.
'Estoit Charles nouveau, de ce Charles Parent,
'De l'espouse à Francois! Oh que cette nuit soye
'Differoit du plein jour auquel remply de joye,
'Je condamnay en [illegible]ique & déloyal,
'A la cruelle mort [illegible] Sang Royal.

At first there came out a Letter (e), which was presently confuted This Letter was designed to justify the Cardinal, and contained several Reproaches against the House of Montmorency and the Admiral de Coligni. The Answer was very smart; it proceeded from a better Pen than that of the Cardinal's Apologist. Thuanus [illegible] mentions of Pieces published pro and con on this Affair, and which had been multiplied infinitum, if the Parliament of Paris had not forbidden the Sale of such Books. This same Historian observes, that Louis Reynier, Sieur de la Planche, was reckoned the Author of the first Writing that appeared, which was a Relation of the Fact in favour of the Mareschal. He observes also, that this Mareschal had not acted like a good Politician, since he chose rather to provoke a most powerful Enemy, by a great, but not very prejudicial Affront, than ruin him intirely. Momorantii prudentiam plerique tunc requirebant, qui potentes inimicos levissimo damno læsitare, quàm perdere cum posset, maluerit. The Prince of Condé blamed him for this Conduct (f), and often said, that if Montmorenci only meant to divert himself, he did too much; and if he was in earnest, he did too little (g). Perhaps this Prince would not have been sorry, whilst he had no Hand in it, to have been rid [illegible] of so formidable a Family.

The same Year the Car[illegible] of Lorrain involved himself in a Controversy, which did not succeed with him. The Scene of this Quarrel was the Pais Messin, where Salsede, who was Bailiff of it, vigorously opposed the Enterprizes of the Cardinal. This was called the Cardinal's War, of which there was speedily printed a Relation.

(M) Of keeping his Jewels.] Mary Stuart, after the Death of Francis II. her Husband, went over to Scotland. The Cardinal of Lorrain her Uncle, was of Opinion, that it was her best way to deposite her Jewels with him, till Fortune had decided the Success of her Voyage; but she knowing very well his Intentions, answered him, that whilst she hazarded her self to all the Dangers of the Sea, she should be to blame, in being more concerned for her Jewels than her Person. You see in the Margin Thuanus's (h) Words.

(N) The Parliament of Paris, of half a Year's Continuance.] Thuanus speaks of it under the Year 1554, and observes, that John [illegible], Preceptor at that time to the King's Pa[illegible] Verses a little too bold, to flatter [illegible] Cardinal of Lorrain. He compared the [illegible]ment to Plato's Androgynus. (i) In eam rem Joan. Aurat[illegible], tunc eulcorum puerorum præceptor & meus professor regius, vir divini ingenii, carmen elegantiss[illegible]

[illegible] respondit, cum se mariæ periculo [illegible]ret [illegible] videre, cæ[illegible] mundo magis quam sibi Th[illegible]b. 29. circa init. p. m. 580. ad ann. 1561. [illegible] p. m. 278.

(a) Mezerai, Abrégé Chronolog. tom. 5. pag. 86.

(b) The Duke de Guise.

(c) This happened in January 1565. See Thuanus, lib. 36. pag. 743.

(d) Le Laboureur, Additions aux Memoires de Castelnau, tome 2. pag. 377.

a Journal d'Henri III. ad ann. 1574.

(e) Lettre d'un Seigneur du pays de Hainaut envoyée à un sien voisin & ami suivant la Cour d'Espagne.

(f) Certe Condæus — factum improbavit, subindeque dictitans Memorantium si quidem joco ageret plus quam debuerit, si serio minus quam oportuit feciſſe. Thuanus ubi supra, pag. 744.

(g) This was the Saying of a Turk upon the Tournaments. See the Nouvelles de la [illegible] publ[illegible] des lettres, Novembre 1685. art. 9. p. 957.

(h) Discedenti Reginæ consilium dederat Lotaringus Cardinalis, ut supplicetilem, mu[illegible] q[illegible] [illegible] ma[illegible] pretii, quem in Gallia lucrifecerat, velut in alium orbem transfiturus, apud se deponeret, donec de sui itineris eventu fortuna statuisset; verum illa quæ avunculi ingenium probe committe caveret.

(i) Id. lib.

(O) ... that the Insult he received in coming out of a Courtezan's House, obliged him to bring back the Court to St. Germain, in Contempt of an antient Custom. Let us not forget, that he preached on several Occasions; but good God! in a Strain how ... from the Spirit of the Gospel. He handled things according to the Tenor of ... oran, as a true Successor of Mahomet, and not of the Apostles; he preached up ... War, and the Effusion of Blood; but while he expressed this barbarous Zeal ag... e Protestants of France, he gave Pensions to the Protestants (Q) of Germany. ... Farce!

LOTI-

num, ... libertate, in gratiam Cardinalis Lotaringi, qui negotium illud ... at, conscripsit, quo ampliff. ordinem Androg... ce comparet. Note, that Pasquier observed ... that Things were reduced to their former Condition at Three Years end. Thuanus says the same.

(O) The Passage I shall alledge on this Occasion, will inform us, that the Insult he received.] (g) The Cardinal 'going very early out of the House of the 'handsome Romania, a renowned Courtezan in 'Henry's Time, who lodged in St. Catherine's 'Street, had like to have been handled very rough-'ly by Ruffians, who generally ply about such 'Quarters, in hopes to ... up the Gleanings. 'At which his Sanctity ... alarmed, and persua-'ding himself, and gi... t, that the Hereticks 'laid Ambushes for him, he led the Court to St. 'Germains, and caused the Queen-Mother, who 'would not on any Account leave the King her 'Son for ever so little a time, to break the Custom 'hitherto inviolable, which obliged the Queens, 'upon their ... nd's Decease, not to stir out of 'their C... for Forty Days, nor see the L... 'of the ... till he was buried. Presently ... 'when the Strangers were gone, he put out an E-'dict, forbidding the carrying any Arms, and es-'cially Pistols and Arquebusses, under great Penal-'ties, revoking all particular and preceding Per-'missions, to whomsoever granted, unless they 'were newly confirmed by the King, so that only 'the Guises, and their Friends had armed Atten-'dants. Besides, suspecting the Cloths that were 'then in Fashion, as long Cloaks (c) and large 'Breeches (and indeed they were too excessive; for 'the Cloak reached below the Calf of the Leg, 'and without Sleves, and the Breeches were an Ell 'and a half large (d) or Five Quarters) they in-'duced the Privy-Council to forbid the wearing 'em, forasmuch as Arms might be easily con-'cealed under 'em. And it was said, that the Car-'dinal took that matter more to Heart upon the 'account of a Necro... who had prognostica-'ted to him at Rome ... he should be killed by an 'Arquebus, out of ... ry, and through the Enmi-'ty occasioned in ... e, by his being exalted to 'the highest De... Honour, which kept him, 'as it were in Hell, and in a State of Torment (the 'true Wages of those, who go to Conjurers,) even 'while all things bowed and submitted to him. The 'Historian who supplies me with this Narrative, says, 'that the Guises did not appear at the magnificent 'Entrance of Francis II. at Orleans, the 18th. of 'October, 1550. (e) And it was said it was for fear of meeting with some desperate Fellow; because a Magician (as we have said) had foretold to the Cardinal at Rome, that his Brother and he should die a violent Death, and be killed by Arquebusses, so that to avoid this, they were afraid of such Assemblies, though they had forbidden the wearing any Arms, and especially Pistols and Arquebusses, upon pain of Death. Note, that the Magician's Prediction proved false, for the Cardinal did not die of a violent Death.

(P) He only preached up War and Effusion of Blood. ... Witness I produce, is neither a Libeller, ... a Huguenot, but the famous Stephen Pasquier. Because, says he (f), the Ministers 'prevailed upon the People before, by Sermons 'and Exhortations, so the Cardinal de Lorrain, 'thought to do the like amongst us. He first 'preached in the Church of Notre-Dame ... an 'incredible Affluence of Auditors, and ... s 'in the Church of St. Germain de l'Auxer... All 'the Holy-days and Octaves of Corpus Christi 'Day, every other Turn, he preaching one Day, 'and the Minime (g), of whom I have spoken 'above; another, admonishing the People above all 'things, to submit to Death, and the spilling the 'last drop of their Blood, rather than against the 'Honour of God and his Church, to suffer any o-'ther Religion to prevail in France, besides that 'which our Ancestors so strictly and religiously ob-'served. I thought it as great a Novelty to see a 'Cardinal preach, as a Minister a little before. 'He greatly animated the People to Arms. Not 'but that the Pens even of the Poets were dipt in 'the same Design. In short, there was nothing trum-'peted but Fire, War, Murther, and Desolation. If you would see what were the Fruits of these Sanguinary Sermons, consult the same Pasquier. (b) 'It would be impossible to tell you what barbarous 'Cruelties are committed on both Sides; where 'the Hugenots are Masters, they destroy all the I-'mages, (the antient Bulwark of the common Peo-'ples Devotion) demolish Sepulchres and Tombs, 'and even passing through Clery, have not spared 'that of Lewis XI. plunder all the Goods of consecra-'ted and devoted Churches. By way of Retalia-'tion the Catholicks kill, murther, drown all 'that they know to be of this Sect, and the Rivers 'overflow with 'em. Not but that amidst these O-'perations, some excute their private Revenges up-'on their Enemies, and put 'em to the Account of 'the publick Quarrel. And tho' the Heads pretend 'not to approve such Conduct, yet they let 'em pass 'by Connivance and Dissimulation. Peace is bet-'ter than War. Though at present the Readers 'see these things only at a Distance, they can't chuse 'but conceive some Indignation against this barbarous 'Sermon-Monger, and especially when they reflect 'upon his Condition. He was a great Cardinal, 'who run no Risk in kindling a Civil War in all the 'Corners of the Kingdom. He was secure of al-'ways following the Court, out of the reach of 'Danger and Trouble; and whilst the Provinces were 'a Theater of Bloodshed, he wallowed in Pleasures; 'his Luxury, his Pomp, his Feasting, his Love-In-'trigues, suffered no Interruption. This is a Subject 'of Scandal, which should prodigiously encrease the 'Horror, such an Incendiary Preacher gives all tru-'ly Christian Souls; a Trumpeter of War, of Pu-'nishment and Butchery; a Man who properly speak-'ing, is not of Jesus Christ's Religion, but of Sa-'tan's, and who indeed practises the same which the 'Priests of Carthage did antiently to the Honour of 'their false God. They sacrificed Men to him (i), 'and imagined, that their Religion required such 'Victims.

(Q) He gave Pensions to the Protestants of Germany.] The Names of 'em were found in the Book of Accounts of this Cardinal's Steward. A Writing of Zanchius confirms it. (k) Certum mihi est, quod jam dicam coram Deo; Audivi ex viro harum rerum perito, & fide digno, se in libro Thesaurarii illius Cardinalis Lotharingi, paucis ante annis vita defuncti, nonnullorum Germanorum Theologia-Doctorum & Pastorum nomina vidisse: quibus pensiones annuas, ex Archiepiscopatu praesertim Metensi assignabantur. In quem vero finem non fuisse scriptum. There's no doubt but the Cardinal proposed to himself the keeping up a Discord betwixt the Lutherans of Germany, and the Doctors of Geneva; but this was however but a poor Way of maintaining his own Religion. It was pure Machiavelism. Compare with this what I have said in another Place. I have spoken of some Sermons of this Cardinal; Languet's Letters inform us, that they were not disapproved by the Protestants, and that this Cardinal was suspected of Lutheranism. 'Twas in the Year 1561, that he preached them at Rheims, in the Lent Season. (l) Cardinalis Lotharingius a rigidioribus Pontificis accusatur Lutheranismi. Per hanc Quadragesimam Concionatus est Rhemis cum non parva laude virum nihil aliud unquam egisset, he had

(a) Pasquier recherch. liv. 2. ch. 4. pag. m. 65.

(b) Louis Reinier Sieur de la Blanche, hist. de Francois II. pag. 28. & 29.

(b) Id. ib. pag. 232. 233.

Stephens, at the 208th. page of his Dialogues, concerning the new French Language Italianized.

(d) This Mo... e...

(e) Louis Regnier ib. p. 618.

(f) Pasquier lett. liv. 4. pag. 231. de l. zome.

(g) This was Brother John de Hans, a Native of Saint Quentin. Pasquier speaks of him, ibid. pag. 203.

(i) See Lactantius, lib. 1. cap. 21.

(k) Hieron. Zanchius respons. ad Wilhelm. Holderum ann. 1566. pag. 20. Hoornb. summa controvers. p. m. 271.

(l) Languet, Epist. 44. lib. 2. pag. 112. See also Epist. 45. page 116.

LOTICHIUS (Peter) Abbot of the Convent of Solitaire, in the County of Hanau in Germany, was born in the Year 1501. He quitted the Schools of Leipſic at 16 Years of Age, in order to Conſecrate himſelf to a Monaſtick Life in the Convent of Solitaire. He received Prieſts Orders in 1523, and peaceably performed the Functions of it till 1525, that is, till the Peaſants War conſtrained him to take Sanctuary with his Abbot and Fraternity, under the Counts of Hanau. The Abbot bringing back his Society to the Monaſtery, after theſe furious Troubles were appeaſed, committed [a] the Care of his Church to Lotichius; who having read Luther and Melanchthon's Books, found himſelf capable of Preaching, and doing all the other Functions of his Place better than before. The Abbot died in 1534, and Lotichius who ſucceeded him, thinking in good Earneſt to Reform his Abby, opened a School in it, in which a great number of young People were inſtructed, ſeveral of whom became Miniſters of the Goſpel, after having purſued their Studies at Wittemberg and Marpurg. He openly eſtabliſhed the Proteſtant Religion in his Monaſtery, and in all the Places depending upon it, in 1543, and wrote a fine Latin Letter to the Abbot of Fulda, to juſtify his Conduct. He was the principal Cauſe of the couragious Reſolution, which the neighbouring Miniſters took to reject the Interim in 1549. The reſt of his Life anſwered his great Zeal in Acts of Piety and Charity. His Church, his School, and ſeveral learned Men Experienced the Effects of his Liberal Temper. He died at the Count of Hannaw's, the 23d. of June 1567. His Body was Buried two Days after, in his own Abbey [b].

